SOMETHING TO THINK OVER.

You are aware that you cannot go without food and still retain your strength; yet you do neglect the exercise and recreation necessary to perfect health and long life.

Why don't you buy a bicycle, ride it and add ten long years to your life? You can then, with clear brain and added energy, accomplish more than you do now, and in less time.

With an easy-running Stearns Bicycle you can save enough time to enable you to make delightful outings.

The Stearns is called the Yellow Fellow because of its orange finish; we have it in black if you prefer.

The Housing of the Poor.

The July number of the North American Review has an article by Lord Monkswell on "The Housing of the English Poor," which gives an excellent idea of the way the unfortunate poverty-stricken people in Great Britain and Ireland were lodged from about 1842 down to the present time, when there has been a great change for the better. The paper begins with a reference to the days, in 1851, when Lord Shaftesbury routed a strange coalition of out-and-out Radicals and Tories, and persuaded the Legislature to make life tolerable in factories, and then turned his attention to impressing upon Parliament the necessity of so ordering the home life of the poor that the maintenance of common decency would not be impossible. He introduced, while still in the House of Commons, under the title of Lord Ashley, a bill to promote the erection of lodging-houses for the poor.

Catholicity on the Yukon.

MONTREAL, July 20.—The Sisters of St. Anne, whose mother house is at Lachine, have had missions in Alaska for the past twelve or thirteen years, and they are about to establish a fourth station at St. Michael's. Here they will build a hospital, which will be a boon to the miners for miles around. The order is primarily a teaching one, but it is not expected that the ladies who are to be placed at the new station will have much of that to do, at least for some time to come, so that they will be entirely at liberty to devote themselves to nursing and administering spiritual consolation to those who may fall ill so far from home and friends. The founder of the St. Michael mission is Sister Mary Stephen, Superioress of the Order in the Yukon district, who went up there from Victoria, B. C., some nine years ago. She started a mission at Kooersek, a couple of hundred miles up the Yukon River, where there is now a flourishing Indian school. She came east in November last with one of the Sisters, whose health had broken down, and while here discussed with the Superioress General, Rev. Mother Marie De L'Ange Gardien, and her colleagues the desirability of providing some hospital accommodation for the hundreds who were seeking the gold fields. Sister Mary Stephen returned to her duties in May, and took out with her from the Lachine House five members of the order to strengthen the little band now working in Alaska and the Yukon district. Since her return, she has entered into occupation of the St. Michael mission, and is getting her hospital into shape. Two more Sisters left Lachine on Monday of last week en route for St. Michael's, although the fact was not known at the Archbishop's palace when inquiry was made yesterday. The two Sisters travelled via the G. P. R. to San Francisco, where they arrived today. Until the steamer sails they will be the guests of the convent of the Holy Family in that city. The two ladies are Sister Mary of the Cross, known in the world as Miss Peterson of Victoria, B. C., and Sister Mary Magdalen of the Sacred Heart, formerly Miss Goulet, of Holyoke, Mass. These will be the last members of the order to leave for this district for a considerable time. The ladies of St. Anne have been established on the Pacific slope for the greater part of half a century, and have been pioneers in the cause of education in British Columbia. About a dozen years ago they extended their operations into the frozen north and opened a mission at Juneau, in Alaska. Subsequently a hospital was built, and this has proved a great boon to the people for many hundred miles around. Sick and wounded people from far distant points are brought into the little hospital to be nursed back to health and strength, and the Sisters also do a deal of nursing among the families resident in the town. The second Alaska mission was founded at Kooersek, and a third at another Indian village near there. At both these places there are very few whites, and the teaching done is principally in the Indian schools. When the latest recruits get there the total number of Sisters in the Alaskan field will be nearly twenty. All the supplies come from San Francisco, leaving there by steamer in the month of June, and being transhipped to Yukon River boats. The charity of the ladies at the various missions leads them to those who are starving, and as a consequence they frequently have to go on pretty short rations in winter. A few years ago Sister Mary Stephen had to travel 500 miles with dog sleds to get provisions to keep her companions from starving. One of the Sisters who has been in the Yukon district describes it as bare and desolate. The cold is intense, and is rendered keener in some places by high winds. At one of the Jesuit missions on the coast the wind blows a gale at times, and the fathers have had to put up ropes to hold on by in crossing from their school to the chapel. There are comparatively few whites, and the Indians do not prove as tractable as might be wished. At Kooersek the Jesuits have a school, and have had a good deal of trouble with their Indian pupils.

Cardinal Jacobini's Letter.

The following letter has been addressed to the Catholic Bishops in all parts of the world: Most Illustrious and Most Reverend Sir: You have doubtless become aware of a project advanced by a number of men of great piety to get the faithful throughout the universe at the close of the present century to affirm in a solemn manifestation by a series of religious exercises their love and gratitude to the All-Powerful Redeemer of the human race. The design of these men in this initiative was to respond to the desire of our Holy Father, Pope Leo XIII., who wished to consecrate this epoch of transition from one century to another by an extraordinary invocation of the divine assistance of Jesus Christ as the happy presage of peace and concord. Now, the project of these personages having received the full approbation of His Holiness, and Catholic delegates from all nations have assembled in Congress at Rome to promote its realization, it has pleased the Sovereign Pontiff to select me, without any merit on my part as honorary president of the committee. Here, assuredly, is a noble task and I own that I am proud and happy to undertake it. For what could be more agreeable to my feelings than the occasion so favorably presented to me at the end of my days to employ all the strength that is still left me in promoting the glory of our Saviour, all the more, too, in these last days of a departing century? And what a century has been this of ours in which proud men, relying on a science unworthy of the name and displaying an activity which might be called feverish, have carried their audacious temerity to the extent of calling in question the origin of Christianity, or even presenting as a fiction, as a lying legend, faith in the Divine person of the Saviour! Wherefore we shall fervently strive to make reparation for the great injuries done to our Master, to appease God's anger by our prayers, to exalt in psalms of praise the holy name of Jesus Christ, who is the splendor of the glory and the perfect image of the substance of God. Such will be the task in which we shall put forth all our zeal at the dawn of the new century. Uniting, therefore as closely as possible under one head the efforts of all, by striking acts of piety and reparation, by the publication of desirable works, by the great voice of the best daily papers, and, finally, by public demonstrations of affection for the Roman Pontiff, we shall gladly succeed in celebrating these grand solemnities in the joy of our hearts, and in an imposing concert, as it were, of the voices of all nations. In this way we shall clearly show forth our close alliance of will, the wonderful unity of the Church, and the perfect union of the faithful with its head. Moreover, the triumph of the Holy Family in that city. The two ladies are Sister Mary of the Cross, known in the world as Miss Peterson of Victoria, B. C., and Sister Mary Magdalen of the Sacred Heart, formerly Miss Goulet, of Holyoke, Mass. These will be the last members of the order to leave for this district for a considerable time. An Old Manuscript.

A manuscript which, it is claimed, dates from the beginning of the third century, is among the late discoveries of the Egyptian Exploration Society at Oxyrhynchus. It is said to contain certain sayings of Jesus, which can be hardly accepted as genuine, though there is no reason to doubt that the manuscript belongs to the period named, for many writings of a similar kind were plenty in the early centuries of the Christian era. The reappearance of some of these forgeries is not surprising when we consider the thoroughness of modern researches, but they are merely remains of the counterfeit gospels and epistles which were once made with a view of deceiving the faithful. They are only literary curiosities like Ireland's forgeries of Shakespeare, or Chatterton's pretended transcripts of the poems of Thomas Bowley. The Oxyrhynchus manuscript appears to be a weak imitation of the received gospels, and some of the sayings contained in it are far from clear in expression or meaning, and are not at all elevating or inspiring. Take for instance the following passage, and compare it with the familiar passage from which it is evidently imitated: "Jesus saith, a prophet is not acceptable in his own country; neither doth a physician work cures upon them that know him." The London Spectator of July 17, in alluding to this subject, after saying that there is too much readiness in the press to accept these "Logia" as genuine utterances of Christ, continues as follows: "It is more probable, experts tell us, that all the sayings are from a page in one of the heretical gospels known to have been in circulation. These gospels were full of inventions mixed with sayings traditionally ascribed to Jesus, only the latter being in accord with the Sacred Canon. It is necessary to remember this, because otherwise the churches might be flooded with sayings found on very ancient papyrus, but, nevertheless, not authentic. It is safe for the present, at all events, to study them as literary curiosities only."—S. H. Review.

At the recent sale of the library of the Earl of Ashburnham, England, the famous Masarini Bible was purchased by Bernard Quaritch for $20,000. This precious volume was printed in 1456, and was the first book ever produced from movable metal types.

The indefatigable Pontiff is making all preparations for the Consistory in the autumn. Then will he give the hats to the three new Cardinals of France and create more Cardinals. It is probable that he will receive the monster pilgrimage from France, organized by Leon Harmel, which should arrive at the beginning of next month, in the palazzina.

Seven French Benedictine Sisters of the Calvary have opened a convent and an orphan asylum for young Greek girls in Jerusalem. The Mount of Olives has been chosen for the new convent. In authorizing this new foundation, the Holy Father said to the Mother Superior: "I bless your work, your congregation, and all those who will assist you."

The Holy Father has written a letter to Cardinal Vaughan urging the necessity of raising a fund for the aid of converted Anglican clergymen. The Pope calls attention to the fact that many of these men in making their submission to the Church, are obliged to undergo severe hardships in temporal matters, and that very often, after their conversion, they have no means of maintaining themselves or of providing for their families. In compliance with this wish of His Holiness the Converts' Aid Society has been formed in England, and a large sum of money has already been subscribed.
