The Heir to Beecham Park

CHAPTER V.

"He is good, indeed," replied the girl, a soft spot of color appearing in her cheeks. "Now, I will go; but first of all I will run into Mrs. Carter's and ask her to come and sit with you." She bent and kissed the transparent cheek, tied on her sunbonnet, took up her books, and, with a parting smile, went out of the doorway.

Her message delivered at Mrs. Carter's cottage, Margery went slowly up the hill, past the wall inclosing the wood, on past the gate leading to the Weald, Sir Hubert Coningham's country-house, on and on, till she reached the village. The rectory stood a little way beyond the school-house, close to the church, and, by the time she reached the side gate, Margery had learned her lesson by heart. The heat was quite as great as it was on the afternoon she walked to Farmer Bright's, now four days ago; and she looked round anxiously at the sky, dreading a cloud until Wednesday was gone and the picnic with Mr. Stuart a thing of the past.

Somewhat Margery found her lesson not so delightful to-day; her attention would wander, and Miss Lawson had to repeat a question three times in one of those moments before she got a response. The governess put down the girl's absence of mind, and, in a very kind manner, brought the lesson early to a close and dismissed her pupil.

Margery for the first time gave vent to a sigh of relief when she received permission to go home, and she sauntered through the village almost wearily. She was gazing on the ground, ignorant of what was going on about her, when the sound of ponies' hoofs and the noise of wheels behind her caused her to turn, and, looking up, she saw Mrs. Crosbie, seated in her small carriage close at hand.

"Good-afternoon, Margery," Mrs. Crosbie said, in her haughty, cold manner. "I am glad to have met you. How is your mother?"

"Good-afternoon, madame," replied the girl, calling Mrs. Crosbie by the name the village always used, and bending her head gracefully. "Thank you very much, but I am afraid mother is very bad to-day; I did not want to leave her, but she insisted. She grows very weak."

"Has Dr. Metcalf seen her to-day?" "Yes, madame, but he said nothing to me—he looked very grave."

"I was going to send her down some beef tea and jelly, but as I have met you it will save the servant a journey. Get in beside Thomas; I will drive you to the castle, and you can take the things to your mother."

Mrs. Crosbie pointed to a seat beside the groom. She was for some reason always annoyed when she came in contact with this girl. In the first place, Margery spoke and moved as her equal; she never dropped the customary courtesy, nor appeared to

Just Folks.
 By EDGAR GUEST.
 AN OLD STORY.

We'd known him for twenty years or more, a sort of a harmless lout, worthless, with no ambition, contented to drags about. And live by the slightest effort. A bed in a cheap hotel. At twenty cents for a long night's sleep was a good enough place to dwell. And a coat to wear and a bite to eat were all that he cared to earn. But the reason why he had slipped that way was not one of us tried to learn.

None of us knew when he came to town; the most that we ever knew was that now and then he would rake a yard or carry a grip or two. But strike him wrong and he wouldn't work, whatever his need might be. As independent a worthless man as ever I hope to see. And he'd been to college! I guessed that once, when he'd mentioned a book he'd read. But he changed the talk when I questioned him—and now the poor fellow's dead!

And why did he loaf and why did he sink and fritter his life away? The tale is as old as the hills, I guess and it all came out to-day. A woman he loved in the olden days, a woman he thought was fair. Went to another man, leaving him with nobody else to care. "You may think you'll work for yourself," he wrote, "but it's twenty to one you won't."

When your heart is crushed and nobody cares whether you do or don't."

"World Owes Him a Living"

American Exchange National Bank:—Justice James C. Crosey, of the Supreme Court of New York, attributes more than 80 per cent. of crime to persons under twenty-five years of age. In his opinion, the average youthful criminal operates on the theory that the world owes him a living. Justice Crosey, therefore, finds that moral, instead of mental, deficiencies account for most criminal cases. According to his observation, the criminal proclivities of the young are due to inadequate home training and to the decline of religious influences. Theorists are disposed to attribute crime to mental deficiencies, and they assert that criminal tendencies can be cured with proper treatment at the right time. It is evident that the youthful criminal derives the theory that the world owes him a living from his opinions concerning the nature of society and the purposes of its responsible leaders. Years of cries of "exploitation" made by the yellow press, demagogic politicians and preachers of revolution have contributed more than their share to the undermining of the moral foundations of the youth of the country. Justice Crosey says that the young criminal is led easily into radicalism, a fact which shows that his predisposition to crime is in part an outgrowth of his political and economic education.

"Ay, do, child," the cook answered; and she handed out a large stool. "Put this just in the doorway, and you'll catch a little draught."

With a smile Margery took the stool and, placing it in a shady corner, sat down and began to read. The courtyard stretched along a quadrangle leading to the stables, and, looking up now and then from her book, Margery caught glimpses of the castle horses lazily switching their tails in their comfortable boxes. The pony carriage was driven in while she waited, and she watched with much interest the small, sturdy ponies being unharnessed and led away. It was a quaint, picturesque spot—the low-roofed stables, the larger coach-house, a portion of the gray-stone castle jutting out in the distance, with a background of branches and faintly moving leaves. Margery shut her book and let her eyes wander to the clear blue sky seen in patches through the trees. She felt cool in her little nook, and enjoyed the rest. The groom had discarded his smart livery, and, in company with another lad, was busily employed in cleaning the pony carriage, the hissing sound with which he accompanied his movements not sounding unmusical from a distance; and Margery found herself smiling at his exertions and the confidence that had succeeded his bashfulness. Suddenly, while she was watching them, she saw the groom and his companion draw themselves up and salute some one; and then the next moment a figure came round the corner—a figure in white tennis costume, with a white silk shirt and large flapping hat. Margery felt her cheeks grow warm, then they as quickly colored. Another figure stood beside the tall one of the man, a dainty delicate, lovely form in a dress of ethereal blue, holding a large sunshade of the same color above her beautiful head.

Unconsciously Margery felt her heart sink. Never had she seen so fair a vision before; and the sight of those two figures, so well matched and so close together, brought a strange vague pain to her, the nature of which she could not guess. She dropped her eyes to her book again, and shrunk back into her corner, hoping to escape notice. She was too far away to hear what was said, and she began to breathe freely again after a few minutes, when the faint sound of a musical voice was borne on the air and the tones of a deep, clear voice she knew well came nearer and nearer. She pulled her sunbonnet well over her eyes and bent still lower over her book as the voices drew closer.

Mrs. Crosbie wronged her. Margery had not a spice of arrogance in her composition—she had the innate feeling that she was not of the village class, and, with the true delicacy and instinct of a lady, forbore even to express this.

There was plenty of room on the front seat, but Mrs. Crosbie would not have dreamed of bidding the girl to sit there—she relegated her to what she considered her proper place among the servants. Margery's face flushed a little.

"If you will allow me," she said, with her natural grace, "I will walk up to the castle, thank you very much."

"Do as I tell you," commanded Mrs. Crosbie, quietly. "Thomas, make room for Margery Daw."

Margery bit her lip and hesitated for a moment, then the memory of the poor sick woman at home came to her. If she offended madame, mother would have no more delicacies, so, without another word, she stepped in and

"I suffered Terribly With Sore, Aching Back"
 Mrs. Roland Ferguson, 194 Lake St., Peterboro, Ont., writes:
 "For over two years I suffered terribly with sore back. I was almost mad with the pain, and had doctored with it until I was discouraged. Then my father, who is a firm believer in Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, advised me to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I followed his advice, and am glad to say I was completely relieved of that torturing pain in my back. It is over a year since I used these pills, and I have had no return of the trouble, but always keep them in the house."

quickly find that all trace of the accident has disappeared.

Begin by removing the damaged part, leaving a clean-cut square or oblong hole, all four sides of which follow a thread if the cloth. If you have no spare scraps, find a piece from the back of the hem. The piece should be an inch larger all round, than the discarded damaged square, and if the design of the tweed is large, the centre of the new graft must exactly correspond with the old piece.

Continue unravelling the new graft on all four sides until there remains just two threads more on every side of the new fringed mat than on those of the original square.

Then tack the edges of the hole in the garment to a piece of tough brown paper, or, better still, tulle cloth, and pin the fringed patch into the centre and tack it in position, noting carefully that each thread corresponds with the one which it covers round the edge.

Get a short wool needle with a very large eye, and, supposing the first thread of the fringe to be white, find the corresponding white thread of the design in the garment, two rows from the edge, and insert the needle in the exact spot. But before drawing it through push the needle halfway into the thickness of the tweed, a little beyond, but not right through to the surface. Slip the white wool through the large eye and draw the needle out between the thread and the paper. Set the needle in position for the next thread, which will probably disappear between the alternate row to that of the first.

If great strain on the graft is expected, as in the seat of a boy's knickers, it is advisable to take two threads of the new graft.

darning stitches through the half-thickness of the tweed with alternate threads. And so the work continues until the repair is at a time.

When completed, remove the paper and face the repair on a ironing board, then well press with a hot iron over a damp cloth.

The Prompt Reply

Few women, I venture to say, can make a really successful speech at a public dinner, but Mrs. Hilton Phillips, M.P., who, of course, was formerly Mabel Russell, the actress, is one of them.

It was at a dinner a few evenings ago that I heard her tell some amusing stories. The best of the lot concerns an occasion when, as an actress, she was on tour, and had her initials "M.R." painted on her travelling trunks.

Arrived at her destination, the porter asked, "Is this yours, too, miss?" indicating the carriages and trucks of the train which bore the same letters, "M.R." (Midland Railway).

"Yes," she replied quickly, "and if you will bring up the one at the end with the tarpaulin cover, which is my jewel-case, you'll get an extra shilling."—T.R.B.H.

Overheard in the Square

Lady Tros related an amusing story at the annual meeting of the League of Mercy, at St. James's Palace, when the Prince of Wales presided.

While in Trafalgar Square she was looking at the Daily Express electric news bulletin, when she heard a girl say to her lover, "Prince please to visit Argentina? What's he going to see her for?"

The disdainful reply was, "It's not a she—that's the captain of the Blacks."

When the Prince heard the story he bent over the chairman's table and uncontrollable laughter, and when clasped before he patted his eyes with his handkerchief and was able to see the same his supervision of the meeting.

GENERAL INIQUITY, IS FRENCH VIEW.

PARIS, Jan. 21. —M. Marin, former Under Secretary of State and now an opposition deputy, expounding the French Parliament's viewpoint of the Inter-Allied conference in a five hour speech in the Chamber of Deputies to-day, declared that it would be a moral iniquity should the Allies be compelled to pay the enormous sums demanded of her by the United States. His words were received with unanimous applause. He declared the debts could not be considered solely as commercial obligations.

PREMIER PRAISES SPEECH.

PARIS, Jan. 1. —The cancellation of war debts and obligations owed by the Allies to the United States formed the subject of an address in the French Chamber to-day by M. Marin, former Secretary of State and now a member of the Opposition. M. Marin called for consideration of France on account of the fact that it was the French territory which the war was fought and which was devastated. He argued that the Allies owed France something bearing the brunt of the early years of the war, but Britain and the United States, who are responsible for the war's costs not included on Versailles Treaty, cannot now ask France to pay their own expenses, and that Britain especially entered the war to protect her own interests as would have been under direct and immediate menace had the Germans captured Dunkirk, Calais and Boulogne. He has heard much about a business settlement of war debts, M. Marin said. If we were forced to do so on that basis, we might ask that credit be allowed us for eleven million days of mobilization at five cents per day; we might ask what is the cash value represented by France's 715 kilometers of trenches during 1915; also what would be the cost of 1,425,000 lives lost. The debt becomes the king of the financial world and moral power as the United States does now. They cannot demand from a country bled unto death a policy of compensation. It must not come to pass that financial domination will be made the instrument of political domination. Premier Herriot, in complimenting M. Marin on his speech, said that France had the right to evoke the memory of her wounds in order to seek the good will of men throughout the entire world to assist her now.

CONCILIATION BOARD WILL FUNCTION.

OTTAWA, Jan. 21. —The Department of Labor will proceed with the functioning of the Conciliation Board recently established to deal with the dispute between Nova Scotia coal miners district No. 6 and the Dominion Coal Company, and the Acadia Coal Company, despite official interpretation from London to-day that yesterday's decision of the Privy Council allowing the appeal of the Toronto Hydro Electric Commission, renders the Lemieux Act invalid altogether as being ultra vires of the Dominion Parliament.

TURKISH REPRISALS AGAINST GREEKS.

LONDON, Jan. 21. —A News Agency despatch from Constantinople stated that the Government has instructed the authorities there to begin reprisals against the Greeks. It was reported that all estates of Greek subjects residing in Constantinople were to be seized.

THE OPIUM CRISIS.

GENEVA, Jan. 21. —The crisis in the International Opium Conference which is threatened through failure of British and United States delegates to agree on a proposition for elimination of opium smoking in the Far East seemed somewhat tempered at the conclusion of this morning's session as result of mediation by France. This took the form of a new proposal by Edouard Delailler, French Minister of the Colonies, that the various countries engage to abolish smoking within fifteen years after the Council of the League of Nations has officially recorded the fact that the growth of opium in producing countries had shown appreciable reduction. The French plan gives China two years to curb her production and provides for the League Council making an investigation the third year to determine whether the reduction was appreciable. The conference adjourned until 4 p.m., with the opinion prevailing that the French measure of conciliation had somewhat eased the situation.

OPIUM CONFERENCE ADJOURNED.

GENEVA, Jan. 21. —In an effort to save the International Opium Conference from possible breakdown, it was unanimously voted this afternoon to adjourn the meeting until Saturday.

CONFESSION TO FORGERY.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21. —Moe Turman, son of a Chicago Rabbi, President of this city and prominent in Brooklyn social circles, was reported by authorities to-day to have confessed to forgery totalling $1,300,000 in the business of the Equity Finance and Service Co., of which he was managing director.

ALBANIA A REPUBLIC.

ROME, Jan. 21. —The National Assembly of Albania has unanimously proclaimed that country a Republic, according to semi-official despatches received here this evening from Tirana.

McGILL TO HAVE LORD RECTOR.

MONTREAL, Jan. 21. —The establishment of the function of Lord Rector of the University is proposed in a suggestion presented to the Corporation and Governors of McGill University by the Council of Under Graduates. The matter has not yet been discussed by the authorities of the institution but there is a general disposition to favor such a post, and the probability is that the recommendation will have the consent of the Board.

FATHER DIES ALSO.

COCHRANE, Ont., Jan. 21. —Samuel Bedour, a settler, who barely escaped from his burning cottage in which his wife and children were cremated, died last night in hospital from burns and exposure. He had suffered serious burns and walked over a mile barefooted in deep snow and zero weather.

PRINCE TOASTS RUGBY TEAM.

LONDON, Jan. 21. —The Prince of Wales to-day made a public appearance in order to offer a toast of good health to the celebrated New Zealand rugby team, the All Blacks, at a testimonial luncheon given them as a farewell by English sportsmen, at the end of their triumphal English tour. The new Zealanders took on 28 teams in Great Britain during the winter and beat all of them. Then they went to France and continued their unbroken string of successes.

SPANISH WARSHIPS BOMBARD TRIBAL FORCES.

Schools of Future

Village Building as model for the World—Derbyshire's Striking Innovation.

North Wingfield, a village in Derbyshire, has acquired renown almost of a world-wide character, as the result of a striking innovation in school architecture. It boasts of an educational structure on which will be modelled schools of the future, and which has already influenced the design and lay-out of current construction undertaken by many education authorities throughout the country. Until just a few years before the war it was customary to erect solid brick buildings which were shut in and had what must be regarded as the minimum amount of ventilation. Only in the case of sickly and delicate children was a departure made. For them—the children reared in the slums under bad housing conditions—schools supplying the need of the maximum amount of fresh air were erected, and the purpose, of course, was purely curative. Acting on the assumption that prevention is far better than cure, the Derbyshire County Education Authority led the way in providing open-air schools for all children. The design was entrusted to Mr. George Widdows, F.R.I.B.A., the authority's architect, and the school at North Wingfield, opened just prior to the war, was the result. It is now recognized as the standard for the whole country. Deputations from authorities all over the British Isles have visited it, and the Governments of South Africa and Australia have sent their officials on Special Missions of Inspection. The village schoolhouse has even been a place of pilgrimage for educationalists from the United States, so that it is no idle claim that the ideas embodied in the building at North Wingfield will influence all future schools. In three special ways—lighting, heating and ventilation—the school is an entirely new departure. In lighting it is customary to use the vertical faces of a building for windows, but at North Wingfield natural illumination is obtained by a continuous skylight along the north side. The Derbyshire schools erected before the war had double the amount of lighting that was considered absolutely essential, but in this special case the standard has been multiplied by six. The light streaming down from the top has a wonderfully soothing and restful effect, and there is no eyestrain produced by direct glare. In the matter of ventilation, instead of utilizing the ordinary medium—windows—the doors are used. Two sides of each room are composed of doors glazed to the bottom, and will, of course, open to their full height. When open they are clipped together in pairs, thus enabling both sides of the room to be exposed fully to the fresh air, if so desired. Should, however, there be a moderately strong breeze from one side, the doors can be closed on that side, but the top half is hinged in such a manner that it will fall down. The children sit at their desks and their papers are thus Prevented from Being Blown about unnecessarily. If, again, the breeze is of great strength, further protection is obtained by reducing the aperture to an extent of four inches. Such arrangements make it possible to keep the school open to the air all the year round. The greatest novelty is the heating system, and Mr. Widdows derived his inspiration from the ancient Romans. Abandoning the ordinary method of plaster pipes and radiators in the 'class-rooms, the architect worked along the lines of the old Roman hypocaust or arched chamber, in which a fire was kindled to warm the rooms above. Instead of a fire, the North Wingfield School has low-pressure hot water pipes concealed in trenches beneath the floor. Only an inspection of the school can make one realize the difference between the two methods. There is a comfort which is unknown under other systems of heating. The temperature is the same, and yet the effect on the body is quite different. The floor has a surface temperature of not more than 70 degrees, which is sufficient to keep the feet warm. Thus the blood circulates and the cooler air has a very beneficial effect on the lungs and body. The skin is stimulated into action, and altogether there is a general toning up. It is possible for the children to work with one side of the school wide open and the other side partly open, with a temperature of 55 degrees or even less in the room, and be quite comfortable. Another feature in this and the new schools which are springing up in Derbyshire is that a certain proportion of the site is laid out with trees, shrubs, and grass plots, and inside every attention is given to colours with a view to making the class-rooms as bright as possible.

"Bobs" That Rob

A woman, once having set her feet along the "bobbed" or "shingled" way, will be finding in the very near future that it is going to cost her a good deal more to keep in the fashion than she at first supposed.

The hair-dressers are now beginning to feel just a little slump, consequent upon most of the women who intended to adopt the short hair mode having taken the plunge. But now the latest from Paris is the "Pointed Bob," which is expected to be all the rage for the smart woman of 1925. This "bob" ends in a point exactly in the centre of the back of the neck. In order to get the correct effect, say the gentlemen with the tongs and scissors, every other hair will have to be exactly in its place, necessitating much twisting and curling to just the right angle.

Hairs are to be covered up and the hair drawn well back off the forehead, so that we shall probably see the last of the fringe for a while. The hair-dressers of Paris say that, if they can succeed in launching this fashion successfully among smart Parisiennes, they will benefit to the tune of over $50,000.

'Jack Canuck' Will Not Appear Again

Editor Is In Jail and Property has Been Sequestered.

Toronto, Jan. 8.—"Jack Canuck," a local weekly which has issued since July 1911, will not appear again, it was announced to-day by W. R. Smyth, Counsel for J. H. Cooke, who on Friday last was given an order of sequestration of the property pending payment of a fine of $1,000 imposed by Mr. Justice Onda for contempt of court in the publication of an article referring to the Cooke Alimony trial. The office furnishings were removed under an arrangement between Mr. Smyth and Counsel representing the Jack Canuck Company.

David Campbell, Editor of the paper, who came here from Montreal a few weeks ago, was given six months' sentence in jail in connection with the same contempt case. The founder of the paper was J. R. Rogers, a printer, who went down with the Lusitania. The paper has since been carried on by the widow, Mrs. Rogers.

A Truce to Strikers

Sir Robert Hadfield, an eminent British industrialist and the managing director of a firm that employs some 7,000 men, makes a strong plea in the "World Today" for an industrial truce. The plan which he suggests in the first place is a conference composed of representatives of the Federation of British Industries and the Associated Chambers of Commerce on the one hand, and of the Trades Union Congress on the other, and that the power to arbitrate might be given to some impartial authority with the sanction and approval of both sides.

The writer, by way of emphasizing the need of such a truce, points to the army of unemployed in Great Britain, and the factories lying idle or working only part time, because of the cost of production. Contracts which are offering cannot be undertaken because no guarantee can be given that they will be fulfilled. The country is seeking in every direction for funds to carry on the public services and to meet its obligations, but in spite of the excessive taxes, the money is not forthcoming because the industries of the country have been tied up.

In referring to the effect of strikes during recent years, the writer states that since the beginning of the century £157,000,000 have been lost by the workmen in wages through strikes and lockouts. During the seven years period from 1900 to 1906, the average number of working days lost was 3,000,000 a year; in the following period of seven years, 12,500,000; during the war period, 4,500,000, and since 1919, 36,000,000.

This dislocation of trade and the consequent loss to the employers and employees is attributed by Sir Robert Hadfield, not to the workmen of whom he holds the highest opinion, but to the agitators, many of whom are disseminating doctrines learnt in a foreign school, who have managed to secure places of prominence in the Unions, and have succeeded in persuading them not to adopt arbitration or any such plan to settle disputes.

M. C. L. I. Debate

The M.C.L.I. held its 58th session to-night in the rooms of the M.G.C.A., Queen Street. The following is the subject for debate:

RESOLVED: That the direct participation by the Dominions in the formulation and control of Foreign Policy is a matter of immediate urgency.

Methodist College Directors

RESTORING ORDER OUT OF CHAOS.

At a meeting of the Executive of the Methodist College Board of Governors last night many matters were arising out of the situation caused by Monday night's fire were discussed. Chief among them were the arrangements necessary to enable the work of the College to be restarted at the earliest possible moment. The securing of the Normal School has to a great extent relieved the situation, particularly as under the last arrangement made accommodation will be available there for by far the greater number of the students. The Board appointed a committee to visit the rooms very generously offered for their use by the Star of the Sea Association, and if they are found suitable for the purpose it is expected that standard I and II will occupy them. The erection of a new building occupied the attention of the Board and, while it was decided that it was most necessary to commence operations at the earliest possible moment, no definite decision could be made either as to the site of the building or to the nature of the design. The money obtained by the insurance of the college will enable the management to commence operations, but as it will be by no means sufficient to meet the cost, it was decided to undertake a financial campaign at once. It goes without saying that such a movement will meet with a ready and hearty response.

The Executive meets again to-night and everywhere is evidence of interest in the work and sympathy with the Methodist community in the great problem which falls upon them. A further search through the ruins has led to the finding of the Inter-Collegiate football cup which the College won in 1908-10, but it is feared that all the others were destroyed. The books recovered are for the most part too badly damaged to be of much use, with the exception of Mr. Harrington's records, which are intact.

Passed a Bogus Cheque

At the Magistrate's Court yesterday afternoon, John O'Brien was sent to three months' imprisonment for obtaining money under false pretence. Mr. McCarthy, J.P., presided. The evidence showed that on Dec. 27th, the accused visited the store of Mr. Solomon Sheffman and selected goods to the value of $40.00 giving in payment a cheque for $72.00 made out to the accused and signed by J. W. Rogerson. Mr. Sheffman became suspicious that the cheque was not a valid one and sent for the police who arrested O'Brien. The detectives found that the Bank had no account for any such name as this. The accused, being sworn, stated the cheque had been given to him by a man who was going to the Humber and who wanted the goods and the money. O'Brien was making the purchases for his companion who since died. The store was not accepted by the Court. Patrick O'Brien, resident of the West End, charged with the larceny of a purse, belonging to Mrs. H. B. Chafe, was acquitted.

Magistrates Court

A 27 year old laborer, charged with breaking and entering the stable of John Harnish and stealing a horse, was arraigned but was not asked to plead. He was remanded to the Penitentiary to give the prosecution time to complete their case.

Const. Bishop had two men before court for acting in a loose and disorderly manner on the public street. The charge laid against them could not be substantiated, and ended in a dismissal with the paying of costs.

Four boys for sliding on the public streets paid costs.

"An Arizona Cowboy"

St. Mary's Amateur Dramatic Troupe have arranged a splendid programme in connection with their final staging of "An Arizona Cowboy" in the Synod Hall this evening. The troupe has won its way into the hearts of the public during recent years by the presentation of popular comedy dramas such as "Quarantine", "Lighthouse Nan" and their 1925 success "An Arizona Cowboy". Another capacity audience will undoubtedly greet them at this evening's performance.

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

Jan. 21st.—This day my wife goes to the dentist, and makes so much about it that I was hard put to it not to berate her heartily for her childishness. But Lord, I am wearied with talking to the whims with indifference in the future. Anon to Water Street, where meeting Jones, he tells me he is but newly come from Placentia Bay, and hears how the whaling station at Rose au Rue was mighty busy all the past fall, being that whales were plentiful and some of them of a large size. He do think that there are many branches of the fisheries that our people might prosecute with great benefit to themselves, and names among others, the halibut and the tom, that is commonly called horse mackerel. The last he do say is indeed a popular dish among the Americans who pay great prices for it in tin. This night, with my wife to the hockey game, which excites her so much that she becomes hysterical, and requires all my strength to keep her in her seat. But Lord, I could not find it in my heart to chide her, being mightily excited myself. The game indeed, a good one, and the Feildians lose by the closest possible margin, being that the Guards beat them by one goal. Anon home, where comes Povey to have discourse with me of certain shares which he would have me buy in company in which he is interested. But Lord, when I did give him freely of a choice liqueur which I did have by me, he was for giving me the shares for nothing, but I did tell him that I would have naught to do with them. So to read awhile and then to bed.

The Majestic scores again with Jacobson and Evans.—Jan 22.11

Notes on Votes

As early as 1647 Mistress Margaret Brent of Maryland, heir of Lord Calvert, demanded place and voice in the Legislature of Maryland, and her petition was seriously debated, from the point of view of the proper representation of the large property in her hands, and not from the point of view of justice to her sex. The demand for representation on the part of a woman for her sex was made by Mrs. Abigail Adams in 1776. The first definite impetus to the woman suffrage movement in the States, however, was directly due to the movement for the abolition of slavery. The question of allowing women the right to speak and vote in the meetings of the Anti-Slavery Association was so keenly opposed that it was only caused a division in the American movement, but greatly disturbed the World's Anti-Slavery Convention which was held in London in 1840. The Convention refused to recognize the women delegates, among whom were Lucretia Mott, Sarah Pugh, Abby Vimer, Elizabeth Neal, Mary Grew, Ann Green Phillips, Emily Winslow and Abby Southwick. William Lloyd Garrison, who arrived in London too late for the debate on the admission of the women, refused to take his seat and withdrew with the women to the galleries, thus, for the sake of the women, foregoing the opportunity of speaking on a subject so near his heart as the abolition of slavery.

It was out of this Anti-Slavery Convention of 1840 grew the design of holding a woman's rights convention in America. The convention was held at Seneca Falls, N.Y., July 19th, 1848, and was well attended. Although it had been planned that only women should be present, a number of men had been attracted, and this first woman's convention was presided over and officiated by women against their social and political subjection was drawn up at this meeting.

Railway Line Opened

The rotary plow which has been operating from Millertown Junction west since the storm abated on Monday morning, arrived at Port aux Basques noon to-day followed by Sunday's express. The east bound train composed of two engines and nine cars, with about 250 passengers on board is expected to reach the city by 3 o'clock. The main line is now open right through to Port aux Basques, and the train with the Kyle's mail and passengers which has been delayed at the western terminus since yesterday, was expected to get away from there work last night fighting the good snow drifts between St. George's and Port aux Basques. The snow which had remained on the rails for three days formed into a solid crust due to the intense frost, which made it all the more difficult for the rotary to force its way through. The weather is fine and decidedly milder along the line of railway to-day. The Bay de Verde branch line was cleared up this morning, and the freight train which has been on the road for five days, reached Grates Cove at 1 o'clock.

Portia Arrives From Northward.

NUMEROUS BEDLAMERS SEALS NORTH.—S. S. Portia, Capt. Wes. Kean arrived from the northward at 12.30 noon after a rough round trip passage of thirteen days. The ship made all points of call as far north as St. Anthony and despite the stormy weather which prevailed, all the freight was landed. Captain Kean reports that the harbors are now frozen and a solid jam of ice, and much loose ice extends all over the coast. Going north a succession of high winds, snow storms with intense frost was met with, and while the ship was proceeding from Coombs to St. Anthony the glass dropped to thirty below zero, and made things very uncomfortable for the officers and crew working about decks. Numerous bedlamer seals were seen coming south in the vicinity of the French shore, and the landmen who were out the day previous to the arrival of the ship at Conche reported that they had netted 300. These were taken on board and bought by Wm. Ashbourne of Twillingate when the ship arrived at Fortune Harbor the ice was too solid for the ship to penetrate and the freight was landed on the ice and taken on shore by the landmen. Capt. Kean speaking to one of the oldest inhabitants there stated the weather during the past month has been the coldest in his experience. While the Portia was on the run south a report was received from Belle Isle that a solid jam of ice was moving rapidly in the vicinity of Cape John. The Portia sighted the ice in the distance, rounding Cape Fogo, and if the ship had been delayed one day later it is quite likely that she would have become jammed. Despite the elements the Portia came through without suffering any damage, and the round trip of 13 days for this season of the year is most creditable to all concerned. The Portia brought 400 barrels of codfish and herring for this port, besides a few saloon passengers. The ship has completed her last trip for the season, and she will now lie up until navigation again opens. Four of the crew were landed at Wesleyville on the run south whilst the balance of the crew will be paid off to-day.

Proceeding With Big Law Suit

We understand that Mr. C. O'N. Conroy is leaving for England by S.S. Montrose in connection with the big law suit started last March by the Newfoundland Banking and Trust Corporation against the Reid Newfoundland Co., Mines Forests Co., Newfoundland, and the Newfoundland Power & Paper Co. Ltd. The claim runs into millions, the cash value being estimated at $300,000 and shares, royalties remuneration and roughly $2,000,000. The matter came up in Chambers at the Supreme Court in December last when Mr. L. E. Emerson and J. G. Higgins appeared for the plaintiffs. Mr. Emerson, it is understood, will leave shortly for the Old Country for the purpose of assembling evidence. Mr. Reid, K.C., who is looking after the Reid interests will also proceed on a similar mission. The law suit is probably one of the biggest that has ever come before a Newfoundland court.

Newfoundlander Gets Coveted Post

The last McGill Bulletin contains the announcement of the formal appointment of Dr. Martin Cashin, youngest son of Sir Michael and Lady Cashin to the position of resident doctor of the Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal. He assumes office and enters on his duties at the end of June next. Dr. Martin Cashin who is only 25 years of age is evidently following in the footsteps of his countryman the brilliant late Dr. Roderick of Harbor Grace who was one of the chief surgeons of the institution for over a quarter of a century. In order to secure the important appointment Dr. Cashin must evidently have the ability and qualifications as there were forty competitors for the honor. Painstaking and assiduous in his profession, Dr. Cashin finds time to promote social intercourse, and has made himself very popular with his co-workers and is a great favorite with Dr. Martin of McGill and Sir Henry Grey chief surgeon of Royal Victoria. We congratulate Sir Michael and Lady Cashin on the success of the clever young doctor who in attaining such a high position reflects honor on the land of his birth, and we hope he will long be spared to continue his noble profession.

Bay Rates and Meters

Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—We note in the issue of the Daily Globe of the 14th inst. a lengthy letter from the United Electric Company, per Mr. R. Murphy, in regard to their intention of substituting Meters on the Flat Rate system on their Light customers of Conception Bay. The United Towns Co. have given great assistance by the presence of St. John's during the past year, especially when they were asked for favours on their Seal Cove employment, under a plea of "cheap labour for the City of St. John's" and in their labour propaganda and advertisements when they wanted to sell Electric Stocks. They are trying to work the Meter business in the same way, and before it gets the people of Conception Bay we are asking to give us the same favours in the same way. The Daily Globe gave publicity to the United Towns Electric Co., Ltd.

The United Towns Electric Company obtained their Charter and began operations, the rates for lighting were 15c per 8 candle power lamps. Meters were used only for power purposes, and these rates were in force when the United Towns Electric absorbed the Charter of the Conception Bay Co. the only difference being that the lamps were rated in candle power instead of candle power—25 and 40 Watt. During this time the United Towns Co. were able to pay dividends to the Shareholders around 12% and have a nice surplus carry forward and subsequently were able to distribute a nice stock dividend to the Shareholders. They, at that time, and under the management, were able to give the people of the United Towns of Conception Bay, Carbonarc and Heart's a cheap and good light and power, pay good dividends to the Shareholders, build up a nice reserve, and under the Flat Rate system, and keeping with the spirit of the men who obtained this franchise was obtained. Since this period other people obtained control of this public utility, the main office of the company was transferred from the depot of operations to the City of St. John's, requiring bigger expense and far-off transmission lines were extended to the North Shore of Conception Bay, around Conception Bay, and now to Placentia Bay, including Argenta and Silver Cliff, and whilst this policy of extension of transmission lines was carried on, provision was not adequately made on the water sheds and at the power plant at Victoria until the machinery and water supply of this development is taxed to its limit, and the management in increasing the meter measurement at this time is asking the Electric Light Co. of Conception Bay to use LESS than we pay MORE for what you use. That we may get more power to sell to the people of far off Placentia. It is in regard to the minimum rate of $1.00 per month, Mr. Murphy has must be charged, how is it that the United Towns Electric Co. is in competition with another Electric Company the rate is down to 50 and 80c of house per month and a few miles away the minimum is $1.05? In these days surely it looks like "competition is the life of trade."

Ladies and gentlemen of Conception Bay do not be camouflaged over this issue and let yourself be "squeezed" all time. It would be in the interest of your home, self respect, and four pockets, to say all with one word "we can do without our money." You can safely rest this issue over, or ask the United Towns Electric Company to first begin installing meters in the outside settlements where they are in competition with the Electric Company to show that their purpose is other than "squeezing the poor."

Yours respectfully,
"NO METER."
Carbonarc, Jan. 20th, 1924.

S. Capitalists After Irish Fisheries

The latest sensation from Dublin that of the United States, through certain of her wealthy and enterprising capitalists, is planning to take control of the coast fisheries of Ireland and set the British Foreign Office in a tizzy. The Canadian press is also roused over the news, indicating as does what of a like nature may happen to the Canadian Maritime fisheries any day, especially in the months straining after Anglo-American cord.

It has been definitely announced that an American company has been formed with a capital of one million pounds sterling and a further five million pounds is in sight if required. The company will take over the entire fishing industry under an agreement with the Free State and will exercise all the functions now held by the Free State fishery department in making arrests.

The fishermen will be given an average pool wage and all the existing fishing and curing plants will be retained on the latest scientific lines. The proceeds for the fish will be London, Liverpool, Glasgow and Manches-

THE ALMOST LETTERS.

If for one year all the letters we almost wrote were really written, don't you think that Uncle Sam would have to at least double his postal force to handle them?

We meet an old friend and she gives us news of some other dear old time friend with whom we have lost touch because circumstance has whirled us far apart in the whirlpool called life. She tells us that grief has just come to that friend and we say to ourselves, "I must write her a letter maybe it will cheer her up a bit." And as we ride home on the trolley, phrases that are to go into that letter form in our minds. We extend our sympathy in graceful terms; we recall some mutual experience of the old days, and we reaffirm our friendship and our hope that some day we shall meet again. We will write it to-night, we promise ourselves.

I mean, those that are are just over the border, that are not demanded by the laws of etiquette or convention, but that would mean that much more to those who would receive them.

A Form of Social Service.

I know a woman who makes such letters her form of social work. She has neither the opportunity nor the money to do the social work outside her home she would like to do. She loves to help make people happy. And she has come to realize that one way in which she can add to the sum of human happiness is to write the almost letters that come into her mind. I have had two from her and I know how surely they bring sunshine and courage into people's hearts.

A Sea of Moving Glass

THE MIRACLE MACHINE THAT MAKES BOTTLES.

The roar and the heat of gigantic furnaces; the white-hot glare of great masses of molten, liquid glass; the clang of giant machines performing miracles of workmanship before one's eyes—such are a few of one's impressions of a visit to the most modern and up-to-date glass-bottle manufacturing plant in Europe.

Everywhere is the spirit of machinery, throbbing, pulsating; and in its midst man seems puny and insignificant. Yet, marvellous to relate, the most wonderful of these machines is the sole creation of one man only, whose story is an illustration of what romance one may find even in such a life of mechanism.

This machine is the invention of a man named Michael Owens. He began work as a boy, feeding coal into the furnace in a glass-works in America. At twenty-eight he became a glass-blower, working with the hollow blow-rod formerly used to make bottles at what was called the "glory-hole." Then he conceived the idea of using a piston-pump and gradually developed his wonderful machine. He began his experiments in 1892, and the first model cost $250,000.

Some four years ago a number of old-fashioned firms of glass-bottle manufacturers in this country, realizing that the old methods of mouth-blown bottle-manufacturing were out of date, combined together, called themselves the United Glass Bottle Manufacturers, Limited, bought a number of these wonder-working Owens machines, and set up the great plant in question at Charlton, near Woolwich. At the present time the factory is so busy that from one year's end to another they are at work almost continually—night and day.

The whole process of bottle manufacturing has been simplified at these works to such an extent that even a child could understand it. At the end of the works, which is situated on the Thames bank, white sand, brought from France, is unloaded from barges and is taken to large storage bins to be mixed, in course of time, with the other ingredients of which glass is composed, two of which are soda ash and cullet (broken glass). There are, of course, different chemicals required for different colours of glass.

The mixture is then converted by electric railway to the furnaces, where it is heated until it becomes molten; and this molten mass is fed into the Owens machines, which constitute the most marvellous part of the performance.

Half A Million Bottles A Day!
Each of these machines, weighing nearly fifty tons apiece and comprising 10,000 separate parts, has ten mouths and arms and pairs of hands. The whole machine revolves and each mouth dips into the molten glass, sucks up sufficient to make the exact size of the bottle required, shapes it in the form of a white-hot candle, then blows into it until the steel mould, the shape of the finished bottle, is filled. The bottle is then complete except for cooling (or annealing, as it is called). And each machine is capable of producing more than 140 bottles a minute!

About 500,000 bottles are produced in the twenty-four hours; and a million gross have been manufactured in one year and sent to all parts of the world, virtually creating a new British trade. And each bottle of its class is the same thickness throughout. The bottles have no "thin" parts in the glass—a fault of the old method of glass-blowing—and are thus not so liable to break.

After leaving the Owens machines the bottles, still red-hot, are put through the annealing chamber, moving at the rate of an inch a minute (so slow that the eye can hardly detect the motion) until they come out at the other end cool—and complete!

Complicated Will

More Problems For the Northcliffe Executors.

The lawyers are still busy in Lord Northcliffe's affairs. The uncertainties of his will caused endless complications. Legacies to the extent of no less than half a million pounds have already been distributed amongst employees of the firms with which he was connected, but certain claims are still outstanding, notably those of ex-Servicemen who were not demobilized and back at work three years before Lord Northcliffe's death in August, 1922. The question is whether the claimants are entitled to participate. Lord Northcliffe's munificent gifts to his staffs caused quite a run on the piano trade, large numbers of the fortunate legatees having treated themselves to these useful and decorative pianoforte makers is said to have canvassed the legatees and taken orders, payment being provisional upon payment of the legacies. The winding up of the estate is also delayed by heavy claims for additional duty, the point being, what value should be placed on Lord Northcliffe's large block of shares in Associated Newspapers, Limited, owners of the "Daily Mail," "Evening News," and "Weekly Dispatch." After the testator's death these shares were purchased by Lord Rothermere and later sold to the "Daily Mail" Trust. The claim for duty is stated to amount to more than half a million. Interesting legal questions are involved, and possibly these will have to be settled in the Law Courts. Another complication is caused by an action at law by one of the beneficiaries, who claims that adequate prices were not realized for some of the testator's assets. Meanwhile certain mediums allege that they have been in spiritualistic communication with Lord Northcliffe, but as yet he seems to have expressed no opinions regarding the problem facing his executors.—News of World.

JUST IMAGINE WHAT AN IMAGINATION JEFF HAS.

The Phrases Form and Fade.
Or we read an article or see a picture or hear someone talk over the radio and are so uplifted or stimulated or amused that we have just got to tell that person who helped us how much we appreciate his art. And again the phrases form in our minds. And again they fade out before the pressure of the work that must be done, the telephone that must be answered, the letters that have to be written. Of course I know people sometimes do write such letters. But if I am to judge by my own good intentions and poor performance, and by what I have heard others say, I suspect that a hundred such letters are thought for everyone that is written.

Then there is the letter we mean to write to the shut-in on his birthday, and the letter we plan to write to his employers when we have had extra fine service from some clerk; and the letter saying what a wonderful time we had that evening at a friend's house,—you know the kind of letters

LAST NIGHT'S GAME.

Felidians Defeated By Guards—Score From 5-1 To 5-4 In Few Minutes.

The hockey match between the Felidians and the Guards, played in the Rink last evening, drew an attendance of over 2,000 spectators to witness the most vigorous game of the series to date.

At the beginning of the game, the battle for the puck was ended in a victory for the Guards by an odd goal.

At the first half of the game the Guards were the aggressors and by the end of the first period they were commanding a 5-1 lead.

The second period showed a reversal of the situation. The Felidians, who had been the aggressors in the first period, now showed their superiority and gradually narrowed down the score.

The third period was a close contest. The Guards were again the aggressors and by the end of the game they had secured a 5-4 victory.

In the final session the shouts and plaudits of the fans were deafening. The Felidians supporters encouraged their team to greater efforts, as it was felt that they could make a much better showing than in the previous period.

The final game between the members of the White Division, for the captains' prizes was played at the Rink last night, and ended in a victory for the team of Mr. A. Donnelly.

The winning teams for each division will now play off for the prizes on the knockout system on dates to be decided on by the captains.

"Rangoon Speaking" While wireless is almost daily making giant strides, the older services are not lagging behind, and it will soon be possible for people in Britain to telephone to Castro, Calcutta, and Rangoon.

Such conversations as this have been made possible by the invention of the "repeater." The human voice can only be carried a few hundred miles on the wire; but the "repeater" picks it up at the end of each stage and transmits it or "relays" it again.

Makes a Big Difference Whose Ox is Being Gored NEW YORK.—The humor of the situation wherein the United States is protesting trade restrictions by Great Britain against American potatoes while at the same time maintaining tariff barriers against Canadian farm products is evidently appreciated by the New York Journal of Commerce, which says: Our Own Medicine. Washington dispatches are to the effect that the Department of State has lodged formal protest against the embargo which Great Britain has laid upon potatoes from this country.

The Child's Garden of Verses

The following delightfully childlike lines are taken from "When We Were Young," a charming book of verse recently written by A. A. Milne.

Once upon a time there were three little foxes
Who didn't wear stockings, and they didn't wear socks,
But they all had handkerchiefs in cardboard boxes,
And they kept their handkerchiefs in cardboard boxes.
They didn't go shopping in the High Street shops,
But caught what they wanted in the woods and copes;
They all went fishing, and they caught three worms,
They went out hunting, and they caught three wopses.

Pulpwood Exports

Around Christmas time much was heard about the slaughter of our forests to provide Christmas trees to ship to the United States for a few cents apiece.

Do Canadians realize that every day in the year nearly 100,000 "Christmas trees" are shipped out of Canada to the United States, to be used as the raw material of pulp and paper mills employing only American workmen? Canada plays Santa Claus to the United States 365 days in the year. The tragedy of it is that these trees are not young seedlings, as are the trees we send American youngsters at Christmas time, but trees full-grown to pulpwood size, most of them evergreens, but some of other species. All of them are trees that should in process of manufacture into paper provide jobs for Canadian workmen; trees that should be a reserve of forest resources for Canadians in generation to come.

Opponents of the suggested embargo on pulpwood exports argue that the shipments from Canada are small and unimportant. Let us see how "unimportant" these shipments are:
Piled like cordwood, four feet high and four feet wide, the wood would form a pile 2,000 miles long. It would make a pile "pore" than 80 times as large as the new Metropolitan Building in Toronto, which is the tallest structure in the British Empire and 55 times as large as the Insurance Exchange Building in the British Empire.

The trees cut down each year for shipment to the United States are responsible for the slaughter of over 2,000,000 acres of forest land which is enough to cover with trees the entire cities of Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Halifax, Victoria, Hamilton, Ottawa, St. John, Fredericton, Quebec, Saskatoon, Regina, Edmonton, Calgary and Moose Jaw and leaves enough to cover a ranch of upwards of 25,000 acres.

The area cut down each year would form a belt 290 yards wide from Halifax to Vancouver.

Although the shipments are "small and unimportant" they comprise over one-fifth of all the pulpwood used to feed the great pulp and paper industry of the United States which manufactures over 7,000,000 tons of paper annually. If the same amount of pulpwood as is exported to the United States were manufactured into pulp or paper in Canadian mills it would provide jobs for upwards of 12,500 Canadian workmen. When allowance is made for the families of these workmen, the total number of Canadians who would be supported is equal to one-half the total immigration into Canada in the year 1924 without allowing for workers in allied plants and the tradesmen that would be supported. Including these the industry would support a city about the size of Ottawa or Hamilton.—Financial Post.

Expect 1924 Fire Losses

Reports of fire losses throughout Canada during 1924 indicate a small reduction from those of the previous year, but the first week of the new year has been a bad one as a number of large fires almost at the turn of the year show that the fire menace continues unabated.

The report of the Ontario Fire Marshal for November gives losses for the month as $1,403,602, as compared with $934,890 the previous November. Of this $1,138,757 was insured. The losses for the year to November were 14,297,782, as compared with 16,829,680 the same period of 1923. The insured loss totalled $11,626,699. The character of the losses was as follows:

	No.	Loss
Barns	920	$1,924,458
Dwellings	5710	$2,650,771
Stores	991	$2,788,242
Factories	388	$4,849,047

H. H. McLellan, Fire Marshal of New Brunswick, estimates the losses for the year in that province as slightly under $2,000,000. The 1923 loss was $1,900,000 and that in 1922 $3,000,000.

Little Jack Rabbit

By DAVID CORY.

"I'd like to hitch myself to the sleigh," sighed the old Brown Horse with a whoney neigh.
"Such fun it was in the Long Ago To pull it swiftly over the snow; But the automobile has changed it all. And here I stand in my wooden stall."

"Cheer up," twittered a little voice at the window just in front of the old steed's head. There stood little Bobbie Redvest his crimson waistcoat shinning in the rays of Mr. Happy Sun.
"Cheer up!" exclaimed the Old Brown Horse, turning his head toward his small feathered visitor, "wish somebody would say 'Gid-up!' instead. I'd like to be between the shafts of the old sleigh trotting off to Rabbitville."

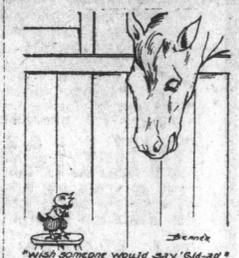

"Harness yourself to the sleigh," answered the little robin. "I'll help buckle on your collar and slip the traces on the whiffle tree."

And, would you believe it, Little Reader? That good old horse at once trotted over to the harness room and slipping his head into the big leather collar, gave a push and a pull, and a twist and a turn until, goodness only knows, he had the harness on as nicely as you please. Then, trotting out to the carriage house he backed in between the shafts of the old fashioned sleigh while the nimble little robin fastened the traces and buckled the collar.

"Where are you going?" asked Bobbie Redvest, as he perched on the seat and held up the reins.

"Down to the dear Old Bramble Patch," answered the Old Brown Horse with a whisk of his tail. "Going to take the rabbit family out for a sleigh ride. Hurrah! I feel as young as a colt. Don't the sleigh bells tinkle?" And away went the happy old steed, every now and then throwing off the cakes of snow which had formed in the hollow of his iron shoes. Like snowballs they whizzed past the head of the little robin as he sat on the seat, holding the reins to keep them from dragging over the snow. He didn't try to drive the old horse. No, indeed. He knew the old steed would keep to the road. The Old Brown Horse had trotted over it many and many a time in the good old days when buggies and sleighs were good enough for people who didn't wish to walk, or were too lazy to run!

By and by, after a while, and a wheeze and a smile—for the Old Brown Horse soon found out that he wasn't so young as he used to be, and

A mile-to-day seemed more than three — he stopped at the Old Rail Fence that bordered the Sunny Meadow.
"Fly over to the dear Old Bramble Patch and tell Lady Love and Little Jack Rabbit to come out for a drive," he panted. "There's no road over the Sunny Meadow. It would be hard pulling through the deep snow. The little bunnies can hop along the edge of the bramble where the snow is light."
And in the next story I'll tell you what happened after that.

THE WANDERER.

The wintry day had reached its close when at my door appeared a wanderer with frosted nose and snow wreaths in his beard; he said: "If I may warm my toes I shall be greatly cheered. I've wandered many a parasang along a frozen track; the north wind has a bitter tang; it snote me front and back, and I would like a white to hang around your cosy shack. I put aside my wooden lyre. I stilled its plaintive tones, and sat the stranger by the fire, and handed him some prunes; "Why walk," I asked, "until you tire? It gains no picaunes. You see me here with loads on loads of kraut and tripe and pies; here I compose the deathless odes that make men wipe their eyes; and you pursue the dreary roads beneath relentless skies. Man needs his own abiding place, a but or mansion vast, where he, untrifled, may chase the flies that flutter past, why should he roam and push his face against the wintry blast?" "I do not know," the stranger sighed, while thawing out his dome; "one man is born to dwell with pride inside a comfy home, and one must see the world so wide, and he can only roam. You gaze upon your garden patch in balmy summertime, and say: 'This place is hard to match, the onions are sublime, and who can show a better batch of beans in any climate. And I survey the distant hills and long to see beyond, behold the undiscovered rills, the spinney and the pond; and I am full of pleasant thrills I'd trade not for a bond.'"

All Star Attraction at the Nickel Theatre

BEVERLY BAYNE AND JUNE MARLOWE IN "THE TENTH WOMAN."

The feature at the Nickel Theatre to-night will be the screen version of Harriet T. Comstock's book, "The Tenth Woman."
James Flood who directed this picture assembled an all star cast including John Roche, Raymond McKee, Charles "Buddy" Post, Gilbert Holmes, Alec Francis, and Edith Yorke. June Marlowe and Beverly Bayne share the stellar honors. June Marlowe is Warner's newest screen star. Her first stellar role after she signed the Warner contract for an indefinite period was in "Find Your Man." By a strange coincidence this is also Beverly Bayne's second picture, second since her return to the screen. Her first was "Her Marriage Vow."

June Marlowe is a married flapper whose husband is not willing to keep up with her rapid pace. Always insistent on having her own way, always going the limit in every venture, she finally decides she can get along without her husband, but no sooner does she leave the house than she finds out how much she needs him. Beverly Bayne is a quiet, sympathetic person whose greatest pleasure is in pleasing the man she loves. There is a mix-up when Beverly believes the man she loves is in love with the other girl, but a splendid climax solves two problems and the picture is concluded to the satisfaction of every spectator.

Alone

YOU don't know this girl perhaps. But suppose you did and she came to you for advice! What would you say?

Till yesterday her husband, young and vigorous, had lovingly encouraged her small extravagances and boasted laughingly that his income was ample and growing. He worked with might and main to "gather the fruits of success for his fair trinity at home"—and was succeeding.

But death, swift and relentless, had without warning cut down his guard, and the three he loved more than his own life were now at bay to the world—alone.

If she had come to you for advice— that, briefly, would have been her story.

Her faith was strong. Her husband, she knew, would not leave her with the children to face a financial situation for which there was no solution. Yet when she attempted to calculate the income she would receive from the savings he had left, a panic of fear overcame her.

"The greatest and hardest of her duties now was the one she knew the least about."

Perhaps someone dependent and depending upon you, is destined some day to be left alone—at bay to the world. This is so serious, so appalling a situation that its very contemplation makes thinking men turn cold with apprehension.

That is why we have written "Her Way Out"—to make you realize how serious is the situation which may overtake those for whom you believe no sacrifice or effort is too great.

If, in addition—without the use of technical language or confusing terms—it provides a solution for the dilemma, surely that is another point in its favor, is it not?

We will be pleased to send you a copy of "Her Way Out," free. The coupon below is provided for your convenience. Fill it in and mail it to-day, or a note or postcard will do as well.

How Chrysler Sweeps All Tradition Aside

No one need fear that he will not be rewarded who gives to the world something distinctively superior to that which has preceded it. And nowhere is recognition so swift and reward so munificent as in America. Chrysler Six came into a seemingly crowded motor car market and almost immediately swept its way into unprecedented acceptance as a quality product. That which ordinarily takes years to achieve was won almost over-night. Why? Because the Chrysler brushed aside outworn traditions in engineering, in design, and in performance, and gave to the world advantages it could instantly see and feel and experience. It squarely confronted problems of height and weight and size, solving them according to the crying needs of the moment rather than the needs of five years ago. It brought to bear both scientific exactness and artistry—endeavoring to embody in the new car elements of grace and elegance no one else had attained. That is why the Chrysler has taken the country by storm—why it still stands and will long stand alone—why if you want what the Chrysler gives, the Chrysler alone can satisfy you.

Abandoned Vessel Near Belle Isle

Last night the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, Capt. William Winsor, received the following message from the Marconi operator on Belle Isle in the Straits:—

"Sighted to-day two miles East of the Island East End, an abandoned vessel approximately 80 tons lying on her side and apparently frozen in heavy sheet ice. She has two masts, no topmast, and the hull is painted black. Vessel will probably drift near the east side of the Island."
J. H. THOMAS.

Some people are inclined to believe that the derelict is the auxiliary schooner Roadia, which broke away from her moorings at Les Eboulements, Quebec, on Saturday, December 27th, and has since been drifting out the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The last report received from her here stated that she was then 282 miles down the river from Quebec, fast in the ice. The opinion is also expressed that the schooner may be the Lalf Erickson, in which William Nutting of New York and some companions set out from Norway last summer to follow the trail of the Vikings. The vessel since leaving Iceland has not been reported. The Erickson, however, is only a very small vessel. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries thinks it is not possible that the hull is that of the mystery vessel of the St. Lawrence. He has made enquiries concerning any local vessels that might be moored on the Southern Labrador and learns of only one 50 ton schooner that was left at Battle Harbour. The Marconi operator at Belle Isle has been asked to send further particulars of the wreck, but up to press hour the Minister had received no other information than that contained in the above message.

Recovered From Injuries

Miss Mary Summers, who was injured whilst coasting on Rennie's Hill, has recovered sufficiently to leave the General Hospital, where she has been since the accident nearly three weeks ago. Miss Summers had a marvellous recovery, as for three days after entering the institution her life hung in the balance. Yesterday she was driven home in a sleigh, and it will be only a matter of a very short while before she will be completely convalescent.

A Coolidge Story

The first salary check of Calvin Coolidge as President of the United States had just been brought to him. It was a great check—$6,250 for a single month. It had taken his father years to earn so large a sum. It was more than six times as much as he himself had received as Vice-President. Compared with what he had earned in his earlier career, it seemed little less than a fortune.
Mr. Coolidge looked at the check for a considerable period, but, as is his custom, he said nothing. He continued to be silent until the messenger had passed out and was about to close the door. It was then that the President's emotions overpowered him. He could no longer remain silent. With warmth and these words: "Come again."—Forbes Magazine, (N.Y.).

Meeting Death Half-Way

A Reader's Thrilling Adventure in a Coal-Mine Shift.

My friend Jepson was a mine manager (writes a correspondent). He had often tried to persuade me to visit the mine over which he had control—one of the deepest in our part of the country—but I was coy.

"I begin to think you are afraid," he said at the last attempt. That settled it. "Name your day," I replied, "and we shall see."

"Very well, then; to-morrow at eleven," said Jepson.
The following day my friend gave me a hoisterous greeting, and as we entered the cage, I noticed a gleam in his eye which I did not like. The cage began its descent, at first rather slowly, and then gathering speed until we seemed to be dropping at the rate of an express train.

"Scared?" asked Jepson. "Not a bit," I retorted, with all the bravado I could summon.

Jepson smiled, somewhat sardonically I thought, and I sat tight. I confess I did not like the situation. I thought there must be a bottom to the shaft somewhere, and I had my doubts whether the cage could be stopped in time considering the pace at which we were going. Suddenly we shot through a brilliant light, and as suddenly plunged into darkness which seemed as black as ink. But the momentary gleam of light enabled me to note the face of my guide, which, I am convinced, was smiling mockingly at me.

I remember pulling myself together and murmuring, "What the deuce is Jepson's game?"

I was holding on to the support bar like grim death, and thinking hard, when we shot, at lightning speed, through a second brilliant light. I suppose I was strung up at the time, but my eyes were quick enough to notice things while the flash lasted. I recollect to-day, as if it happened yesterday, that these were mine workings, that figures were flitting about in the light, and—I saw Jepson's face. It was not the face I had seen before. The blood had left it. It was ashen, terror-stricken. It seemed to tell me that all was over with us in this world. Perhaps it was the shock—I really don't know—but the sight had a remarkable effect upon me. I became quite calm and prepared for the end which I regarded as inevitable, and as we fled through space into the bowels of the earth, all I had read in my life about pit disasters flooded my mind and appeared as visions.

I had a wife and little ones at home, and as I thought of them I was conscious of something else. The momentum of the cage was perceptibly slower. Presently it stopped altogether. I spoke to Jepson, but there was no answer. As I spoke I felt an upward movement, and in less time than it would take me to describe the journey, we found ourselves at the pit mouth.

Saved by Seconds.

I stepped out of the cage and looked round for Jepson. He remained in the cage motionless, apparently lifeless. They dragged him out and applied artificial respiration. In a short time he opened his eyes, and I looked inquiringly at the deputy manager, who was superintending.
"A narrow shave," he said.
"How?" I asked, completely mystified.

He looked at me with something akin to pity. "Something went wrong with the brakes," he said. "If we had not got control when we did, all would have been over with you in less than sixty seconds. It's been too much for Mr. Jepson; but he knew what you were both in for; you didn't."

Jepson never asked me how I enjoyed my trip, and I never mentioned the subject to him. I have an idea that he is sensitive about it.

New Name for Norway's Capital

"The New Year brings us another capital with a strange name," says the Telegraph. "When the Storting of Norway decided that the capital of the country should be no more Christiania, but Oslo it was relieving the glories of the past. For the last three hundred years the city under the pine woods at the end of the fjord has been called Christiania. But it owed that name to a king who was King of Denmark, that Christian IV, who made a brief, inglorious appearance on the battlefields of the Thirty Years' War before a great Scandinavian, Gustavus Adolphus, became the general of the Protestant cause.

"The name Christiania, therefore, commemorates the period when Norway was treated as a province of Denmark by Danish kings. But the city is far older. The traveller to-day may find in it an ancient Romanesque church which was certainly there before 1150. The sagas say that in the year 1048 King Harold Haardrada founded at the head of what we call the Christiania Fjord the city of Oslo. It stood on the eastern bank of the little river which there falls into the sea. Long before 1048 a market and a little haven for trading ships were thereabouts.

But tradition of the foundation links the city with one of the great romantic heroes of Norway, Harold Haardrada had wandered to the Court of the Emperor of Byzantium and served in his Varangian guard. He had come to the shores of Sicily while there were still Saracens in it and harried them. There is hardly a more picturesque Viking in history of fact. Our English interest in him is apt to be prejudiced by the fact that he came to conquer us, and our own King Harold apportioned him land enough for a grave in the battle of Stamford, thus preserving us to be conquered by the Norman.

"But the memory of Harold Haardrada associates the city with notable deeds and a glorious age—not only the adventures of the king himself, but the national achievements when Norway was a great power in the Northern seas by dint of arms and trade. The period of Danish supremacy has no such glories. It is most natural that the Norwegian Parliament should prefer to the Danish style of Christiania the ancient name of Oslo. To Oslo of the twelfth century we wish all the vigor and prosperity of the happiest years of the past."

SHIPPING.—S. S. Fransiska, with a cargo liquor, arrived from Halifax this afternoon.

The goodest flare is particularly good for the snug-fitting, beltless frock. Almost no fur is used on the spring ensembles, in contrast to last spring.

The little girl's wardrobe may include a smart ensemble costume for spring.

The Danish Seine

The snurrevaad, or Danish placke seine, was first of all used for taking flatfish, and then, during the war and since, for haddock and cod. Swedish fishermen have gone a step further, and have made use of this net in the herring fishery and with good results. In one night a boat with a seine caught 80 hectolitres, which sold at 28 kroner per hectolitre, and on another night, 30 hectolitres. The advantages claimed for the Danish-seine over the purse-seine, hitherto used, are that (while it is admitted the catches are not so large) it is far cheaper, does not require more than one boat (instead of two), and not nearly so many men. It remains to be seen whether the Danish-seine will replace the formidable purse-seine, in the old country as has been suggested. It has not yet replaced the trawl, as many prophesied.

New York in the Air

Mr. Julian S. Huxley points out in the Spectator how the heart of New York is rapidly becoming a forest of skyscrapers:

"Their rapid multiplication in New York had led to new problems. The streets became intolerably dark and gloomy, overshadowed by preposterous walls. Eventually, some three or four years ago, a law was enacted making it obligatory, after a certain height, to recess or step back the building so that light and air could come down at an angle. So came into being the need for a new treatment of skyscraper design.

"Sometimes this has been met in the crudest way, and we get buildings which are nothing but the old parapetted or soap-box with a sort of giant staircase on one side. But often the restriction on the owner has been the architect's inspiration; and he has moulded the 'step-back' into a variety of beautiful and noble forms.

"Finally, there is the question of the limit of skyscraper growth. There is a mechanical limit to terrestrial and to aerial animals. The limiting factor is appearing as the relative proportion of elevator-space. The higher the building, the greater the percentage of space and service needed for its elevators; so that there comes a point beyond which additional storeys no longer pay. It seems that, with present systems at least, we are at or near the limit. It is not likely that buildings much over 50 storeys will be profitable; the most practicable height appears to be from 30 to 40.

"Since I was last in New York, ten years ago, a whole new forest of skyscrapers has blossomed uptown, near 42nd Street. Looking down from the top of one of these, I saw a great area of old-fashioned little houses spreading away northward between 5th and 7th Avenues. As soon as the 6th Ave. elevated railroad is pulled down, all this district will take unto itself stilts and rise up skywards too. In twenty years time, I think it safe to say that the heart of New York, from Central Park to the tip of the island, and from 4th to 7th Avenue—an area about five miles long and a mile wide—will have an average height of about 20 storeys."

"Punch" Humorist's Epigrams

"At the Bristol Rotary Club, Thos. Jay, of Punch fame, delivered what he described as a 'Short Discourse on the Alarming Spread of Spinal Curvature in Oysters,'" says the Post. "He explained that he had chosen that title because he wanted to look like a regular lecturer. Before proceeding with his main theme he 'explained' various things in a way which delighted his audience. Amongst his witticisms were the following:—

"Senator Marconi made wireless possible, and now amateur users are doing their best to make it impossible.

"Solomon said there was nothing new under the sun, but he didn't say it by radio.

"Wireless starts with a crystal and grows up into a four-valve set.

"Nowadays no man is a hero to his wallet.

"It might be possible to persuade women to wear their dresses longer, but not their hats."

"More sinners are made by Sunday practice on the saxophone than by Sunday golf.

"Some Scotchmen are such keen golfers that they imagine Sandy Hook is a Scottish professional.

"With historians telling the past and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle explaining the future, the only uncertain thing is the present.

"There being no time left, Mr. Jay apologized for having forgotten his subject, and said he would emulate the oyster by closing up."

Food and Cancer

IMMUNITY OF EATERS OF WHOLE-MEAL BREAD.

The relation of diet to cancer is discussed by Lt.-Col. H. Halliday from the experience of twenty-two years' medical service in India, largely among Indians, in his article "Intestinal Stasis (constipation) and Cancer" in the December number of the "Franco-British Medical Review."

He states that during two years' service with Indian troops he never saw a case of cancer in any shape or form, and:

During the whole of my time at Lyallpur, a populous district of over a million inhabitants, I never encountered or saw reported one case of appendicitis, nor one case of acute cholecystitis (inflammation of the gall-bladder), nor one single case of gall-stones or gastric or duodenal ulcer.

Col. Halliday emphasizes the place that "unleavened bread made of the coarsest and grittiest of wholemeal" occupies in the diet of primitive Indian peoples, "while millions never touch meat in any shape or form."

He adds as a "factor of great importance" the "enormous quantity of water" that the unsophisticated Indian drinks.

Half as Old as Time

How the Spade is Making History by Taking us Back 6,000 Years to Men with a High Order of Civilization who lived by the Tigris and the Euphrates.

The joint expedition of the British Museum and the University Museum of Philadelphia have unearthed at Tell-el-Obeld and the site of ancient Ur of the Chaldees dated objects which antedate all but the first few versions of the first book of the Bible and move back the known frontiers of ancient history more than 2,000 years, to a dynasty known in Babylonian tradition as the First Ur Dynasty, the third line of kings after the Flood, reigning about 4000-5000 B.C.

Oldest Royal Jewel. "Just as remarkable a find was a large scaraboid, fifteen millimetres long, engraved with the name of A-an-ni-pad-da, the king who before the discovery of this oldest royal jewel and the foundation tablet of his temple was wholly a mythical figure in Babylonian tradition.

Important Warning! There is only one "Congoleum" and you will know it by the Gold Seal pasted on every pattern. "Congoleum" is a registered trade name and the exclusive property of The Congoleum Company.

A Great Migration. "Possibly this race migrated to the Jat country near the Persian Gulf from the hilly country further north in prehistoric, pre-Biblical times. In all their cities they built stage towers, of which one of the largest was the Tower of Babel, 300 feet high, possibly because they had been accustomed to conduct their rites of worship on the hilltops.

The Site of Ur. "The site of Ur was identified and superficially excavated in about 1854 by G. E. Taylor, consul at Basra, under authority of the British Museum, but his finds then were overshadowed by striking discoveries in the Northern mounds. During the war this section of Mesopotamia came into the occupation of the British, and there was a renewal of interest in the archaeology of ancient Ur.

The Golden Image. "That Nebuchadnezzar should make a golden image was nothing new," writes Mr. Woolley in the Antiquaries Journal. "Every king had done something of the sort."

golden image, around which was played the drama of casting the three Jews into the fiery furnace; but it is certain that the temple at Ur was reconstructed so that the new form of worship might be introduced. Indeed, the Chaldeans possibly from Ur, played an important part in this drama, as related in Daniel's story.

New Light on the Bible. "The discoveries not only throw new light on the Bible by illustrating incidents and customs of the time, but they also have reclaimed a part of prehistoric times by showing that what was tradition, really is history.

The station was crowded with people, when suddenly a shot rang out, a young man fell, and a beautiful girl walked up to a policeman and handed him a revolver.
