THE SCOTT ACT SUSTAINED.

There can scarcely be two opinions as to the meaning of Thursday's vote upon the Scott Act in this county. It demon strates the fact that comparatively fev persons in York county wish to see th retailing of intoxicating liquors legalized and that if among those who do there are any prominent and influential men they are not disposed to make any very great effort to carry their point. Prob ably every person in the county, outside of Fredericton, who wished to see license again granted, voted yesterday, and it i evident that the great mass of electors are not in sympathy with them. The comparative smallness of the vote against the petition was due to several causes The manner in which the law has been administered has rendered many persons indifferent to it, who are really in favor of prohibition; there are many who would have voted against the petition if they of its being carried; and there are others who don't care a farthing whether the Scott Act or any other act is in force of not, so long as they can get along in their own quiet way. At the election to bring the Act in force, the vote stood: For the Act 1229, against it 214. The late vote place amid the ex citement of a temperance reform and that the success of the petition was so much of a forgone conclusion that those opposed to it practically let the battle go by default, we are of the opinion that the change in this respect signifies little The promoters of the last petition have had rather a convincing proof that is does not follow because an elector signs a petition that he is going to vote that way. Nearly a thousand of those who petitioned for the re-vote failed to com to time, or at least they failed to vote for victory is of very little real value to the cause of true reform if they do not supplement it with some good old-fash ioned Temperance work. There exist at present undoubted difficulties in the forcement of the Scott Act, but there are none in the way of the cultivation of a active, healthy, public sentiment, which will make the enforcement of the Ac not only possible but probable, when the legal difficulties have been removed. Le there be a revival of Divisions of the Sons of Temperance, of Lodges of Templars and of all other institutions calculated to cultivate the public mind up to a prope appreciation of the mischievous result liquors as a beverage. Let the work o promoting individual reform be renewed A man who goes to the dogs by the of whisky bought illegally is just as much an object for advice and assistance in shaking off his bad habits, his wife and family are just as much to be pitied, as though he bought the liquor which makes a shipwreck of himself and them, in ance work be renewed with vigor. Take our own city for example, there are scores of young men who are ruining themselves reformers, men who appreciate the evil of drinking habits to such a degree that they feel it to be their duty to prevent their neighbors from indulging in them, should remember that neither the Scott spending his nights in drinking. The ed pernicious habits and of training up the young of the country in the practice of total abstinence, is increased by the Victory at the polls.
