An officer of the school said Fredin's record had hitherto been good. Restitution was made, and Fredin, whose home is at Dreaney's Corners, was allowed to

THE FASHODA AFFAIR. London, Sept. 29 .- The newspapers of the country are clamorously demanding that the government take the public into its confidence in regard to the Fashoda affair, having been informed that Gen. Kitchener's report has reached the foreign office, and that it makes interesting developments. They appear to be deeply disappointed that diplomats are to have the settlement of the question. The foreign office has issued a formal refusal to make public any further details of the affair, some of which, however, are leaking out. The sirdar, according to these, after Major Marchand refused to furl the French flag, formally announced that he had come to raise the Egyptian flag, but before doing so desirerd to know whether Major Marchand wished to enter a protest. The Frenchman replied in the negative, and the sirdar then planted the Egyptian flag alonenot the Egyptian and British, as at first reported—500 metres from the French flagstaff. Negotiation relative to the matter were begun at Paris today, the British ambassador, Right Hon. Sir Edmund J. Monson, calling upon M. Delcasse, the French foreign minister. The Cairo correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says: It is stated on good authority that Gen. Kitchener intends to retire from the Egyptian service. He regards his work as completed, and will return to England in the middle of October. It is rumored that his eyesight is affected. Upon arriving at Fashoda the sirdar shook hands with Major Marchand, and they dined to-gether the same evening. Major Marchand lacked supplies. A story is current that he has left Fashoda. He received help from a local chief, who is London, Sept. 29 .- The morning papers publish long obituary notices, memorial articles and eulogistic articles in memory of the late Ex-Minister Bayard's career, especially in his work of promoting an Anglo-American entente, and recording the profound regret of the elite at the news of his death. The Times laments the gradual disappearance of the old generation of the old statesmen like the Bayards and the Adamses, "leaving the field more open to professional politicians or Tammany bosses." The Daily News says, referring to the Venezuelan dispute: 'Mr. Bayard's countrymen, though then disposed to resent his intervention, must now feel that their ambassador was a better prophet than they were themselves."

STORY OF PERRIER'S RESIGNA-TION.

London, Sept. 29.-The Daily News this morning adheres to the truth of its published story regarding the resignation of M. Cassimir Perrier of the presidency of France, and cites evidence similar to the statement made by M. Henri Rochefort in his paper, the Intransigeant, on Dec.13, 1897, in which, however, M. Cassimir Perrier's name was suppressed and that of M. Dupuy substituted. The Nord Deutsch Allgemeine Zeitung of Berlin declares that the story of the Daily News is mere fic-

QUEEN LOUISE

Death of Denmark's Queen-Surround ed by Her Family and Friends.

Copenhagen, Scpt. 29.-The Queen of Denmark died at 5:30 o'clock this The end of the Queen of Denmark was peaceful. At her bedside were the King of Denmark, the Dowager Empress of Russia, the King and Queen of Greece, the Princess of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of Cumberland, and the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Denmark, and all the other members of the royal family.

Queen Louise of Denmark was born Sept. 7, 1817. She was a daughter of Landgrave Wilhelm of Hesse-Cassel, and was married on May 26, 1842, to Christian fourth son of the late Duke Wilhelm of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glucksburg. Christian was appointed to the succession of the crown of Denmark by the treaty of London of May, 1852, and by the Danish law of succession of July 31, 1853. He succeeded to the throne of Christian IX. on the death of King Frederick VII. on Nov. 15, 1863. For the last 30 years of her life the queen has exercised such influence on the politics of Europe that she was sometimes called the mother-in-law of the continent. Another title sometimes given her was the "royal matchmaker." The children of King Christian and Queen Louise are Prince Frederick, the heir-apparent, born June 3, 1843, who married Louisa, daughter of King Carl VI. of Sweden and Norway; Princess Alexandria, born Dec. 1, 1844, who was married March 10, 1863, to the Prince of Wales; Prince Wilhelm, born Dec. 24, 1845, elected King of the Hellenes, under the title of George I., by the Greek National Assembly, in 1863, and who married Olga Constantinowna, Grand Duchess of Russia, in 1867; Princess Marie Dagmar (Emprese Maria Fedorowna), born Nov. 26, 1847; she was married No. 9, 1866, to Alexander III., the late Emperor of Russia; Princess Thyria, born, Sept. 29, 1853, who was married Dec. 21, 1878, to Prince Ernest August, Duke of Cumberland; and Prince Waldemar, born Oct. 27, 1858, who married in 1885 the Princess Marie D'Orleans, eldest daughter of the Duc de Chartres. The queen had been dangerously ill for several months, but an effort had been made to keep the condition of the royal sufferer from the public. Her daughter, the Princess of Wales, was summoned to Denmark in haste a few weeks ago.

London, Sept. 29 .- A dispatch to the Times from Copenhagen gives the following description of the death of the Queen of Denmark. "The Kings of Denmark and Greece and the Princess of Wales, alternately, during many hours, held the hand of the dying queen, who for a few moments recovered conscioueness, but could not speck. Her husband wept and the physicians requested him to retire to rest;

but he replied: 'I will stay at least while the queen is conscious.'" "Everywhere the flags are at half "The queen did not die of any special

Seventeen prospectors are known to have been drowned during the season at Hottom Inlet. Many others are missing. They are supposed to have lost their lives in trying to ascend the small rivers. Out of a party of 26 men that left San Francisco early in the year to go to Dawson via the Stikeen trail, Herman Long, of this city, is the only one that pushed through. Two out of the number were drowned, two are insane and the others are far in the interior, regaining their health, at trading points. In the swift Chesley River seven of their boats were dashed to pieces on the rocks, and the outfits were lost. In two or the wrecks Dr. Black and a man named Morgan, both from California, were drowned.

The steamer Danube reached Van-couver, B. C., from St. Michael's with 186 passengers, and, the purser says, $850,000 in treasure. Capt. John Irving sold his steamer Yukoner at St. Michael's to Pat Calvin for $50,000.

MICHIPICOTEN GOLD. Toronto, Ont., Sept. 29 .- The latest advices from Michipicoten are to the effect that there is a big rush of miners and prospectors to that region again this fall. Several big strikes have recently been made on the north shore of Lake Wa-Wa, adjoining the property of the Superior Gold and Copper Company. Mr. Trembley, of Toledo, who owns the claims adjoining the Rossland group, owned by the Superior Gold and Copper Company, in doing some development work, encountered a splendid showing of free gold in a big quartz lode which crosses the Rossland. A HIGH OPINION

Hon. David Mills Speaks of the Late Hon. M. C. Cameron.

The Late Lieutenant-Governor a Publicist of the First Rank-The North.

west Deprived of Great Services.

Hon. David Mills, minister of justice, was prevented by a severe cold from attending the funeral of the late Hon. M. C. Cameron yesterday. In conversation with an Advertiser reporter today Mr. Mills expressed the sorrow the honorable gentleman's death had occasioned him. "Mr. Cameron and I were the best of friends," said Mr. Mills. "We entered parliament together in 1867, and we always acted in very close concert. Politically, we were very much of one opinion." Asked how he ranked Mr. Cameron as a parliamentarian Mr. Mills said: "I regarded Mr. Cameron as a man of a very high order of ability. He was a clear thinker, exceedingly well-informed on public questions. He was industrious, and every subject that he took up in parliament, he thoroughly mastered. You were always cer-tain that he would deliver an instructive speech on whatever he undertook to discuss. Cameron was a very fearless man, and never sought to conciliate those who were politically opposed to him. He was courageous in uttering his convictions, and he contended for what he thought was right and in the public interests, wholly regardless of what his political adversaries might think of himself or of the opinions on public questions which he expressed.' "How would you place Mr. Cameron as a public man?" Mr. Mills

ed. "I would count him in the very front rank. In the past few years his health had been precarious, and he had not taken quite so active a part in political affairs as he did when he was more robust. There were few men in public life whose judgment could be more implicitly relied up, or whose knowledge of matters with which he dealt was more accurate. I think the country has sustained a great loss in the death of Mr. Cameron, and I lament his loss all the more because I think he took a deep interest in the important office to which he had recently been appointed. Had he lived he would, as lieutenant-governor, have conferred invaluable service upon the country. I think he could have greatly aided the government in the promotion of the settlement of the Northwest country. One of his clear perception in the position of lieutenant-governor in that country, being upon the ground, could have given to the government advice of the greatest value in the public interest. "Mr. Cameron, like other Liberals," Mr. Mills added, "had the misfortune of spending a large period of his political life in opposition, but his industry and his fearless courage in denouncing what he believed to be wrong has exercised a wholesome influence on public life. In every part of the Do-minion his death will be lamented by those who concurred in his opinions and who sympathized with him in the discharge of his duty as a public man.'

A musket ball may be fired through a pane of glass, making the hole the size of the ball, without cracking the glass; if the glass is suspended by a thread it will make no difference, and the thread will not even vibrate. LIFE SAVED .- Mr. James Bryson

Cameron writes: "I was confined to my bed with inflammation of the lungs and was given up by physicians. A neighbor advised me to try Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, stating that his wife had used it for a throat trouble with the best results. Acting on this advice, I procured the medicine, and less than half a bottle cured me; I certainly believe it saved my life. was with reluctance that I consented to a trial, as I was reduced to such a state that I doubted the power of any remedy to do me good.

EMERSON ON

The Old Court Room Filled With Deeply-Interested Spectators.

The Prisoner's Wife and Babe Among Those Present.

Preliminaries of the Examination-Names of the Jurors Chosen and Those Challenged - Opening Adcress for the Crown-The Evidence

MOORE VS. STREET RAILWAY CO. Judge Meredith delivered his charge to the jury when the court resumed after lunch. He reviewed the evidence, and gave the following questions to the jury to answer, in order to assist them in reaching a verdict:

1. Was the plaintiff's injury caused by neglect of defendants? 2. If so, what was the neglect? State

3. And if so, might the plaintiff, by the exercise of ordinary care, have avoided the injury? 4. Or was the cause a mere accident, for which neither plaintiff nor de-fendant is to blame? 5. Assessment of damages.

The jury retired at 3 o'clock, and at 6:30 returned and informed his lordship that they were unable to agree. The judge urged them to come to some conclusion, and pointed out that should they fail to agree there was no alternative but another trial, the cost of which would be considerable. He suggested that they retire until 8 o'clock, and should no agreement be reached at that hour they might disperse. To this the jury consented, and were locked up again. At 8 and the jury filed in, having agreed upon a verdict. The answers to the questions proposed were:

No. 1-Yes. No. 2-That there was not room enough for the teams to pass on either side of the railway track, and that the filling was not sufficient.
No. 3-No answer.

The judge then requested that the jury retire to his room for a few minutes and endeavor once more to answer the questions. When they had retired his lordship proposed as a settlement of the case, "that the $150 stand, with county court costs, and no set off of costs." This could not be arranged between the parties, and the jury was sent for. They could not agree either, and his lordship dismissed them, expressing his appreciation of their efforts. The fact that there was no agreement was evidence, he said, that the case had been wellconsidered.

TRUE BILL OF MURDER. The grand jury returned a true bill against W. D. Emerson for murder.

THURSDAY MORNING. W. D. Emerson, actor, who shot and killed James Tuttle, proprietor of the Wesley Stock Company, at the Music Hall, on April 1 last, was placed on trial this morning. Before 2 o'clock the court room was filled with spectators, among whom were many in the jury box, to the right of the erson spoke to him regarding Lench.

At 9:30 Judge Meredith took his seat, and a few moments after Emerson, the accused man, was led into the court and placed in the dock. He was dressed in a neat business suit, and took his place with a steady step.
Since incarceration Emerson has his appearance. His wife, with tearful eyes, carrying in her arms her baby girl, was seated a short distance the prisoner, and as their eyes met and their gaze fell on the little one, who is fortunately too young to comprehend the terrible position of her father, an expression of agony passed the countenances of both husband and wife that was not unheeded by those who watched the proceedings. When the clerk of the court read the voice, but quiet manner, advanced to the railing of the dock and said "Not guilty!"

The prisoner's demeanor throughout the proceedings was that of a man who suffered great mental strain, and he looked from judge to jurymen with unmistakable restlessness

SELECTING THE JURY. The selection of the jury was not accomplished without difficulty, and 24 were called before the necessary 12 took their seats to the left of the judge to consider the evidence which means so much to the prisoner.

The twelve selected are: Henry Thompson, farmer, Strathroy. Wm. Beeton, farmer, Adelaide.

Police Magistrate.

Ed Mason, farmer, McGillivray. John H. McCallum, builder, Ekfrid. R. Jackson, tinsmith, Parkhill. R. Ralph, farmer, London township. Sutherland, farmer, Caradoc. A. S. McDonald, yeoman, Ekfrid. James Campbell, farmer, Delaware. Robert Conkey, farmer, Adelaide. Albert Needham, farmer, London township. James Bogue, farmer, Adelaide. Those rejected by the crown prose-cutor, Louis F. Heyd, were: Walter Foster, merchant, London. John C. Evans, builder, London. James Dunn, saddler, London. James H. Ford, agent, London. John McCubbin, farmer, East Wil-

Charles Finchamp, clerk, London John Dawson, confectioner, London. Andrew Fisher, joiner, London. John G. Dodd, builder, London. Those challenged by Mr. F. Johnston, prisoner's counsel, were: Samuel Felker, farmer, Mosa.

G. W. Patrick, farmer, Westminster. John Armstrong farmer, Newbury. James Darling, farmer, McGillivray. OPENING OF THE TRIAL.

The jury being sworn, they were addressed by the crown counsel. Many of the women in the room sobbed as the address proceeded, for Mr. Heyd went over all the circumstances of the sad affair, and traced, step by step, the company, from its organization until April 1, when Emerson shot Tuttle, and just what led to the fatal deed. As Mr. Heyd went on his forceful eloquence increased. He appealed to the jury to divest their minds of all the influences of sympathy, newspaper talk or gossip. The crown must bring conviction to their minds, and if they were satisfied that the prisoner did the deed deliberately, and under such circumstances as to constitute the crime of murder, they must return a verdict of guilty.

THE EVIDENCE BEGUN. Wm. Newman, one of the property men, was the first witness called. He swore to the stage plan, and answered a series of questions regarding the personnel of the company and stage appliances. Witness described the "full" house, and how when the raising of the curo'clock sharp the judge took his seat, tain was delayed the audience became somewhat noisy and impatient and called "hurry up." Witness went into the details of what occurred between Emerson and Manager Wesley regarding the money Tuttle owed the prisoner. He had seen Wesley hand Emerson something, but did not know what it was. Emerson said "it would not The latter refused to go on and play until he got his money up to that night. There was more parleying, witness said, and Mr. Emerson walked up and down the stage, apparently going over his part. Mr. Tuttle was sent for, and when he came up he advanced towards Emerson and asked. "Do you want to see me?" Emerson said, "Yes," and then refused to go on with the play until he had got his money. Tuttle advanced towards Emerson and drew back his right hand. A blow followed, and both men staggered back a step, when there was a pistol shot and a flash coming from the direction of Emerson. Tuttle dropped to the floor and Emerson said, "I did this in self-defense." Witness could not remember who was on the stage at the

Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, prisoner's counsel, cross-examined the witness. Mr. Newman could not remember who was on the stage at the time. Q.-Did you see Tuttle when he came up? A.-Yes. Q.-What condition of mind was he in-did he appear angry? A.-I don't know; he seemed to be in a hurry. Mr. Johnston then read from witness' deposition before the coroner, wherein when he came on the stage. Witness admitted that he had not seen any blows struck; did not see where Emerson's hands were, and did not see where the flash came from. Witness then told of Tuttle's duty-that of selling tickets in the box office-and of how, a night or two before that of the murder. Tuttle, having found the box office locked, flew into a rage and smashed the door in, rather than wait for the keys to be brought. On another occasion he had heard Tuttle cursing the actors.

Harry O. Wesley, manager of the company which bore his professional name, was the next witness. Witness told of his engagement by, and of the organization of the company for, Mr. James Tuttle, the murdered man. Emerson took the leading role in the majority of the plays. While in London Emerson played in "The Octoroon," "Passion's Slave," "The Lightning Rod Agent," and "All the Comforts of a Home." Asked if revolvers were used in any of these plays witness said "there was a revolver used in 'The men, most of the latter occupied seats Octoroon,' but it was not fired." Emwages before the show, and said he would not go on until he got his money. Witness said he wanted him to go on, and said the money would be all right. Witness said that Tuttle, during the day, had spoken about a rumor in circulation that he (Tuttle) was going to skip out. Tuttle drew grown a beard, which somewhat alters from his pocket a large roll of bills, saying there was enough money for everybody. The witness (Wesley) continuing, corroborated the previous witness re garding the refusal of Emerson to play until he got his money to date, at the time he (Wesley) gave him money which Tuttle had sent on hearing of Witness said he Emerson's refusal. went out then to his dressing-room, and sent Jack Lee, the property man, to tell Tuttle. The next time witness indictment, Emerson, with a clear came on the stage Tuttle was lying on the stage. He washed the injured man's face and put a chair under his head. He heard Emerson say, "Send for an officer. I did this in self-defense." A doctor was asked for from the stage, and told that an accident had happened. The audience took the matter as a joke, it being the 1st of April. Coroner Flock was sent for. Witness said Emerson knew considerable about revolvers, as he was formerly a member of the United States navy. At one time Emerson had showed witness a trick, which consisted of turning a revolver and firing it while in the act of surrendering it to another person. It required very nimble fingers to do it. Cross-examined by Mr. Johnston.

witness said Emerson had asked Tuttie for the money owed him for play-ing at Tilsonburg. Tuttle had promised to pay on Sunday, and on Friday, night no money had been forthcoming. Emerson then refused to play until he was paid, and that was why the two days' money had been given. A day or two before this, witness heard Tuttle talking about being asked for money, and said he heard the deceased say, "I'll make him wait until I get good and ready." On Friday afternoon, when Tuttle showed the roll of bills and said he had the money, but would 'keep them guessing, just the same,' he knew that some of the others had demanded their money. Witness, while talking with Emerson, did not notice anything unusual. He did not appear angry, and was as cool and collected

Asked again regarding Tuttle, witness said that while in Brantford he had seen Tuttle fly into a rage, strike a man and knock him right across the barroom. After the shooting, Emerson's manner was that of a man who meant what he said, when he requested that someone send for an officer. He did not appear angry or in any way flustered.

Q.-Did you know Mr. Tuttle to be a man of violent temper? A .- Well, he was a man like other men-he had a temper.

Q.-Was he a man with a violent temper? A.-He was a man who would not allow himself to be sat upon.

Q.—A man with a strong, determined mind? A.—Yes, sir.
Witness, on being asked if Tuttle had ever had any trouble with a Mr. Seaman, who played at Brantford, admitted that Tuttle had had some words. Tuttle had a large bunch of keys in his hand, and witness interfered to stop any further trouble between the two men. Witness said the bunch of keys which Tuttle had would have been an ugly weapon to have used on anyone. Asked as to Emerson's appearance after the shooting, witness said the blood issued from a cut in his lips which had been inflicted by a blow.

Mr. Heyd re-examined the witness regarding two occasions when Tuttle displayed violence of temper. The first occasion was the dispute with Seaman at the door of the opera house in Brantford. Seaman had rented the opera house from Tuttle for a week, and agreed to pay the rent in advance, Seaman did not abide by the terms of the contract, and when the Wesley Company wanted to use the opera house for an afternoon rehearsal, Seaman objected, as he had rented the place. Tuttle, who was interested in the Wesley Company, then went to Seaman, and the rumpus that followed was over the fact that Tuttle threatened to deprive Seaman of the opera house altogether. On the second occasion, when he knocked the man across the bar-room, Tuttle and his antagonist were engaged in a dispute over game-cocks. The man called Tuttle a vile name, and then the latter struck him.

The court adjourned for lunch at 1:10 and the jury were conducted to their rooms, where they were supplied with lunch by the sheriff.

AN AFFECTING SCENE.

Soon after the trial began, the court room became packed to the doors, and when the court adjourned it was some minutes before the prisoner could be conducted to his cell. Much sympathy was expressed for him, as he passed along the crowded corridors, with the air of a man satisfied with what he had done, and fearless of the consequences. At the entrance to the jail, Emerson shook hands with the reporters, and in his clasp there was more than he could speak. His wife met him a moment later with a fond embrace. He kissed the face down which the irrepressible tears flowed, and encircling her with his right arm they walked through the barred gate and were lost to view.

Emerson says he feels well, considering all things, but his chief anxiety is for his wife and baby girl.

GLENCOE DEFEATS LONDON. The game of baseball between the St. John's Athletic Club of London and the Glencoe club was won by Glencoe with an inning to spare. BUFFALO TO BE IN THE WESTERN LEAGUE. Chicago, Sept. 28. - Buffalo would seem to be as good as in the Western League. Presidents Van Derbeck, Loftus and Comiskey and Connie Mack have been here with Ban Johnson, of late, and their talk would indicate that Buffalo will certainly be admitted in place of St. Joseph, at the Western League meeting, Oct. 12. It seems understood that there will be no hitch about thus invading Eastern League territory. Denver is not considered, while Toronto and Grand Rapids are discussed for the location of Loftus' ex-Columbus team, and Grand Rapids may get it.

THE CLUB DISBANDS. Chatham Banner: The Chatham baseball team disbanded yesterday, and the majority of the players left for their homes. A number of them will, however, be with the club next season, when it is hoped a winning team will represent the Maple City. FLYS.

Wheeling would like to take Toledo's place in the Interstate League, provided the latter joins the Western League. The latest story is that Ewing will manage the St. Louis team next season, and that Patsy Tebeau will go from Cleveland to Cincinnati in Ewing's place.

MCCOY KICKS CORBETT.

New York, Sept. 29 .- The pugilists, Kid McCoy and Jas. J. Corbett, whose match has been broken off, met in the Gilsey House yesterday afternoon, when McCoy knocked Corbett's hat off, and then, while Corbett was held by his friends, kicked Corbett in the groin. He then ran out of a side door, away from the crowd. Corbett was taken to his room, and a doctor summoned, and McCoy disappeared.

BLOWS.

Doc Payne, who was thought to have been seriously injured by Joe Butler at Philadelphia, has left the hospital fully recovered from the effects of the knockout blow.

Kid Lavigne, the recognized lightweight champion pugilist of the world, came near losing his title Wednesday night at the Greater New York Athletic Club, in a 20-round bout with Frank Erne, of Buffalo, before 7,000 spectators. Erne proved a Tartar for the Saginaw boxer. It was generally understood that a decision was to be given on points, and the statement at the end of the bout that both men had agreed to make it a draw in case the men were good and strong at the end was a source of keen disappointment to a host of Erne's friends. Erne deserves praise for his clever work, and 'had the bout been decided on points he certainly would have got the championship honors and the winner's slice of the $5.000 purse.

Sixty of These Structures To Be Built -Only 25,000 Troops Needed to Hold Cubs.

New York, Sept. 29.-Colonel Ames S. Kimball, the deputy quartermaster general, opened bids for 60 portable hospitals, some of which will be erect-ed at Fort Hamilton in this harbor. Many of these portable hospitals will be made ready to be sent to Porto Rico. The ones used here will have double floors lined in between with felt. Each hospital will accommodate 40 patients and the total number called for in the bid will accommodate 2,400.

Each building is to be 19 feet 3 inches wide and 121 feet long. These buildings are to be constructed of North Carolina pine, set on cedar posts 18 inches from the ground, and the roofs are to be covered with canvas properly painted.

Of the entire number of portable hospitals called for by the quartermaster's department five are to be delivered at Fort Hamilton, New York go to the quartermaster here properly crated, ready for shipment. This will increase Fort Hamilton's hospital accommodations 200 beds, leaving portable accommodations of 2,000 beds to be sent to Porto Rico or Cuba.

NO HURRY ABOUT EVACUATION. Washington, Sept. 28 .- Now that the Spanish officials in Cuba have allowed the Comal to land her relief supplies, the officials here do not see any great necessity for an immediate evacuation of the island. So long as the Cubans, starving and naked, were denied the relief that might come to them from the United States and the Red Cross, there was a powerful reason for insisting upon immediate evacuation in order that taking possession ourselves we might succor the distressed Cubans. Now, however, that our government is free to do this under existing conditions, there is not the same necessity for haste, and the war department will not be obliged to force American troops in numbers into Cuba in the very worst part of the season, so far as health conditions are concerned. The daily reports that come to the department from Santiago make it apparent that even among immune regiments much sickness prevails, and it is only a fair assumption that the ordinary troops would suffer more were they now sent into Cuba. Therefore, while the American and Spanish commissioners at Havana are still seeking to reach an agreement as to the time to be allowed for evacuating the island, it may be said that the president expects that the result will be a compromise between the dates mentioned on each side, and that the movement will begin towards the latter part of October, and be concluded soon after the new year. This will accord very ment, as it will enable it to avoid sending to Cuba any considerable number of soldiers until the healthy season is It is the present purpose to make the replacement of the Spanish forces in pedition, but establishing a garrison at one point after another, beginning probably at the western end of the is-

[ESTABLISHED BY JOHN CAMERON IN 1863.]

Managing Director John Cameron and Editor.

London, Thursday, Sept. 29, 1898.

The Indomitable Rhodes.

Just before the recent elections in South Africa, Cecil Rhodes made a rousing speech in which he elaborated the details of his stupendous imperial policy. Mr. Rhodes was appealing for the election of the two progressive candidates. He was on pretty safe ground as he had done great things for Port Elizabeth. He made it the southern terminus of his railway to the great north country by means of which the port had become the greatest entrepot on the eastern coast of the colony. It was natural that Mr. Rhodes should be enthusiastically welcomed, and that under such inspiring circumstances he should speak his mind freely and fervently. In view of Kitchener's victory since the speech was delivered the following extract is interesting:

"A great deal has been said as to my position, and I can tell you in a few words that I am not going away from the country to which I owe so much. (Loud cheers.) I am going to fight for the principles that your party has adopted, in whatever position I may be. (Loud and prolonged cheering.) I have a lot of work to do yet. If you only would think of it, we are getting on very nicely with our telegraph through the continent. (Loud cheering.) You may say, 'What has that to do with us?' I say everything. (Cheers.) Your cable rate will be reduced by half. (Cheers.) They have already been reduced owing to fear of the new line, and it is drawing on us. (Cheers.) As you know, Sir Herbert Kitchener (loud cheers) only started the other day, and we can fancy we see them marching tonight towards Khartoum. We are coming up from the south (cheers), and we are going to join him as sure as I am standing here. (Prolonged cheering.) That is not in the interests only of an imaginative idea; it is in the interests of this country (cheers), and, as Mr. Lawley very neatly put it at Buluwayo, what was attempted by Alexander, Cambyses and Napoleon, we practical people are going to finish. (Loud cheers.)
That is something better for me to do than to retire to a hermit's cell, the destination devoutly wished for me by the Independents of today. (Laughter.) And I am going to make the railway to Tanganyika, and that is going to benefit you. (Cheers.) You will send the goods and we will bring down the millions of laborers and distribute them among the mines.'

Lake Tanganyika, to which Mr. Rhodes refers, is the present objective point of the Mafeking-Buluwayo Railway. The lake is 480 miles in length, running northward. It is only 200 miles from Lake Tanganyika to Victoria Nyanza, which is the head of the Nile. When this gap is covered "the Cape and Cairo" will be coupled in fact as well as in fancy. In the course of his speech Mr. Rhodes reiterated his determination to have South African federation. He pointed to the great north country which had been opened to the British largely through his efforts. He dilated upon its immeasurable commercial value and the necessity of bringing it into a South African union by electing an Assembly in Cape Colony favorable to the federation project. In conclusion he said:

"Now I have put to you practically why I cannot retire from public life. My telegraph will go to the dogs, and my railway will not go to Tanganyika, and the efforts of my public life for the union of South Africa would be done with. I believe, therefore, in dealing with people whose confidence I think I possess-(loud cheers)-rather than to retire to the position of meditation which my dearest friends suggest for me. (Laughter and cheers.) Apart from chaff I think you can see with these objects before me why I should not retire. It would be paltry on my part, having the opportunity to forward them better perhaps than any other man in South Africa were I to propose to retire. (Cheers.) I hope you are with me in the ideas that I have sketched to you tonight (Loud and enthusiastic cheering), that you will see the whole thing as a picture-a picture that can be worked out; but it can only be worked out if you are thoroughly with me in that idea. (Cheers.) But do not spoil the whole thing, when one looks for co-operation by sending down an Independent. (Loud cries of 'No.') I am not saying this personally, but do not send down to parliament an Independent, whose whole mind is antagonistic to these thoughts. (Cheers.) Send down those who will loyally work with those thoughts. (Cheers, and loud cries of 'We will.') The north is asking from you nothing. It is my thought. Cooperation is my thought—(cheers)— federalism and the union of South

Port Elizabeth responded to this appeal by electing Mr. Rhodes' candidates by overwhelming majorities. We know that the Progressives failed to secure control of the Legislature, but the parties are so evenly balanced that the bye-elections may turn the scale in Cecil's favor.

A Bitter Tongue.

"Mire and filth!" "Monumental cheek!" "Colocal impudence!" "Penny whistles!" "Grit conspiracy!"

"Wicked falsehood." "(Hardy) tore his hair!" "Steeped to the lips in corruption!"

These are a few of the verbal brickbats tossed by Mr. Whitney Tuesday night at his opponents.

As an emitter of sound and fury, Mr. Whitney would carry a Populist convention on the first ballot. But vituperative tornadoes will not carry Canadian assemblies which want reaa great party.

A Question of Matrimony.

The Stratford Beacon, after noting that "The London Advertiser seems to be renewing its youth," quotes liberally from our recent article on the marriage-rate in Canada, and then proceeds to remarks

"It may be quite true, as The Advertiser suggests, that the young woman is partly to blame. There are some who wish to begin housekeeping where their parents left off. It must be remembered that the young woman is no longer taught that marriage is her sole aim in life. She has other avenues open to her now, avenues of employment which in many cases she is filling acceptably. She finds herself better off earning a few hundred dollars salary than married to a 'twodollar' man for whom she might have to work. There is this side of the question also to be considered. She is filling a position which in the former order of things the young man filled, a young man, who, if employed, might be her husband or some other girl's."

But the Beacon is not without its suggestion of remedy. Says our con-

"Again, there are more men and fewer women in the world than there were fifty years ago, so that there are not so many marriageable women. These and other causes may be enumerated, but the chief obstacle is, to our mind, the fact that the young man has not the openings for employment his forefathers had, that where he is employed, his salary at the first is not sufficient to keep him in comfortable circumstances, much less a wife. It is to be remembered we are speaking of the average young man and woman. Perhaps there would be more marriages if it came to be a recognized canon of society that the young wo-man was free to 'pop the question' if she desired. What does The Advertiser think of this as a remedy?" There may be some who go through the world wifeless because of lack of courage to pop the question. Such might adopt the plan of getting some friend to pop the question by proxy.

Pleasantry apart, The Advertiser adheres to its position that more moderate views as to the worldly style in which a young couple should be expected to start out-more examples of simplicity, also, on the part even of the married seniors who have the money with which to be extravagant if they wish-would do much towards a more frequent ringing of marriage

As to the relative extravagance of young women and young men, we are sure that so far as unnecessary personal expenditures are concerned, the average young man of the present day is much more extravagant than the young woman.

Mr. Thomas Martindale, of Philadelphia, our former fellow-citizen, has published a tidy little brochure, containing a racy narrative of the events of last July, as he imagines he would recall them many years hence. The Ogilvies are building a two-million bushel grain elevator at Montreal. They expect an increase in Montreal's grain export trade, as a result of the deepening of the St. Lawrence canals. The Ogilvies have a reputation for never coming out short in a grain deal, and their confidence in this case seems to be well founded.

Busch's memoirs show that Bismarck often spoke contemptuously of three emperors whom he served. He was sometimes very bitter on the present Kaiser's grandfather, William I. who had little or no political sagacity, the chancellor used to tell Busch. "A faithful servant of William I" are the words Bismarck ordered to be engraven on his own tomb. A faithful servant he undoubtedly was, but hardly an affectionate or admiring one. This is not to be wondered at, as Bismarck could not help realizing his native superiority over his royal master-or rather servant, as William submitted entirely to the man of blood and iron in all great questions of policy.

THE HEAVIEST SENTENCE

Provided Was Imposed on Railway Promoter Middleton for the Orime of Bigamy.

Woodstock, Sept. 29.-When R. L. Middleton, alias Alex. McDonald, was placed on trial yesterday before Judge Finkle on a charge of bigamy, preferred by H. R. Will, chief of police, Alice Munroe, of Toronto, testified that she was married to the prisoned under the name of Launcelot N. Middleton, on Dec. 27, 1892, by Rev. Mr. Jackson, in Toronto, under a license issued on the same day. Middleton was then 26 years old, and described himself as of Yorkshire, England. She lived with him two years. She was acquainted with him for seven months previous to the marriage. The marriage was unknown to her family at the time, and for three days afterwards. She lived with Middleton in Ottawa, Toronto and Buffalo, at boarding-houses, and separated from him in July, 1894, but did not know it was for good at the time. The prisoner was then convicted of forging at Niagara Falls, N. Y., and sentenced to two years at

At this stage Mr. Ball, counsel for prisoner, consented to a plea of guilty being entered on the charge. On the charge of false pretenses the crown counsel offered no evidence. Judge Finkle sentenced the prisoner to seven years in Kingston peniten-tiary, that being the heaviest possible

PETROLIA FAIR.

Petrolla, Ont., Sept. 29.—The Petro-lia and Enniskillen fair held here proved a success. The entries were greater than former years. The roots, vegetables and farm stock exhibits were excellent. The ladies' department was well represented. The attendance was not up to expectations.

GREAT SOUTHWESTERN. Essex, Ont., Sept. 29. - The Great Southwestern three days' fair scored a big success, both in the number of people and in gate receipts. The drawing card was the presence of Lieutenant-Governor Mowat. Among the invited guests were Mr. Morford, district superintendent of the M. C. R.; Prof. Robertson, of Ottawa experimental farm; H. Wallan, customs officer, of Windsor; M. K. Corvan, M.P., Windsor; John Auld, M.P.P., Amherstburg, and others. An excellent address was read to the lieutenant-governor, to which he made a happy response. The show in many respects was much better than ever before, especially in the ladies' work and the fruit, while the number of entries exceeded any previous year.

SOUTHWOLD AND DUNWICH. Shedden, Ont., Sept. 29 .- The Southwold and Dunwich fair was held on the farm of Deputy Sheriff Brown, just east of the village, and was an ideal country fair. Special attractions were an unknown quantity, the management running the show on strictly agricultural lines. The accommodations were of the crude order, but the stock shown was magnificent. The entries numbered 934, divided as follows: Horses 76, cattle 57, sheep 20, hogs 20 grain 47, dairy 24, home manufactures 50, poultry 16, horticultural 42, roots 74 fine arts 36, ladies' work 372. EXPENSES Ingersoil, Sept. 29 .- The annual fall fair of the Ingersoll and North and West Oxford Agricultural Societies, held here, was a success, and was a purely agricultural exhibition. The fair itself was above the average township show, as far as cattle, sheep, hogs and poultry were concerned, but was lamentably weak in the dairy, grain, fruit and ladies' departments. Only a half dozen cheese shown. Very little grain was entered. The fruit display was small, but it was good. Some excellent roots were exhibited. There was a lively competition for premiums offered for Dur-hams, Ayrshires, Jerseys and grade cattle, and the judges had their hands There was a splendid show of full. hogs, one man exhibiting eleven that won at Toronto. All the leading breeds were represented. It was the same with sheep. The directors charged an won at Toronto. All the leading breeds with sheep. THE BRITISH GUARD

Social Life in the Queen's Army-Offi cers Have a Good Time.

A Russian military paper not long ago informed its readers that the life of the officer in the British army was of the utmost ease and luxury; officer, even the humblest subaltern owned his yacht, his race-horses, and his box at the opera-when quartered that is to say, where such a luxury could be obtained (the yacht and the racing stud were everywhere)-while the more wealthy possessed their grouse-moors, their deer-forests, etc., the majority playing cards every night for enormous stakes, and spending large sums on presents to actresses and in other follies.

Such a description is more picturesque than accurate, for although in many corps the cost of living is high, yet foolish extravagance is the exception rather than the rule. In her Majesty's Household Brigade, for instance, which is the corps d'elite, although the officers are nearly wealthy men, yet the style of living does not approach the magnificence with which it is credited in the imagination of the foreign journalist and by the facile pens of some of the prominent lady novelists. Life in the Guards is very pleasant, according to the British officer who writes of "Social Life in the British Army," in Harper's Magazine for September, if the member is blessed with good private means; his mornings, and occasionally the greater part of his day, are taken up with the drills and routine duties of his profession, which are no great tax on his intelligence or on his physique, and his spare time is devoted to those amusements common to young men of his class and education. > there will be an exodus from the battalion of all the shooting men who can by hook or crook get leave for acotland or Yorkshire. In this matter of leave the guardsman is fortunate above his prethren in the cavalry; the subaltern of the Guards rarely finds any difficulty in getting away for four months out of the twelve, and his captain is even more fortunate, as he can generally count on six months' leave in the year. It naturally follows that the guards-men are great travelers; the "British officer" says, "that wherever the British pioneer has penetrated, some member of the brigade has ventured also at no considerable interval. The north pole itself appears to be the only

The guardsman receives the same pay as officers of corresponding rank in the, line, with the addition of £70 a guards' pay, so that it is possible for a coungster of an economical turn to live in the guards on an allowance of £300 a year in addition to his pay. A. B.-Is there a law prohibiting the speeding of horses on the Sabbath Day on a race track? If so, what is it, and how is it to be enforced? Ans.-Section 3 of chapter 246, Revised Statutes of Ontario, "An act to prevent the profanation of the Lord's Day," provides that it is not lawful for any person to run races on foot or on horseback, or in carriages or in vehicles of any sort. Any person offending may be fined from $1 to $40 on summary conviction before a justice of the peace.

Can A sell the goods if he gives notice to B that he will do so unless the sum owing him is paid within a certain time, say fourteen days? Ans.-No; his course is to get a judgment against B, and have the goods seized and sold under an execution by the bailiff. If he should sell them himself he is answerable to B for their full value, from which, however, he could deduct the debt due him.

CORSET STEELS.

With dealers the buying of corsets is largely a matter of confidence, at least as far as the true quality of the boning is concerned.

In order that rusting may be guarded against each bone or steel should be covered before being placed and sewn in position in the corset. In ordinary corsets this is rarely done. The best corsets are fully boned, the cheaper ones are only partly so.

Ordinary corsets are almost invariably boned with cheap, poor quality steel and its cheapness manifests itself in brittleness. In first-class corsets specially to appred tigh quality spring steel is used; the better the stori the lighter the corset, for ir quality is strength. THE PLEBISCITE

Everything Went Along Very Quietly.

A Small, Slow Vote Reported by the Officials-See the Advertiser Bulletins Tonight for Latest Returns.

The plebiscite has been taken. At the usual hour this morning the various polling places in the city were thrown open. Deputy returning officers and scrutineers were at their posts. Prohibition and anti-prohibition workers bent their energies to getting out their voters. Plenty of rigs were in use, mostly in the interests of the "antis." All the machin-ery was in motion, and it worked very quietly.

The interest and excitement which disturbs the even tenor of the business life of the city on the occasion of a Provincial or Dominion general elec-tion was not in evidence today. At several polling places visited only the officials were present. They reported a small, slow vote. Those who did come to mark their ballots lost no time at tht polls, and at all booths the absence of the usual election crowd of interested electors was striking. Several officials basing their judgment on the proportion of electors who voted durisg the morning, estimate that not more than one-third of the total vote in London will be cast. In fact, the general estimate of interested parties was that it would be from one-third to one-half the total vote. Indifference, the prohibition workers say, is the cause of the small Although in many respects the day is little like an election day, one of the old-time features cropped up. Plug-gers were at work. In the fourth ward a man was driven up to a booth and represented himself as Mr. S. B. Coon. Ex-Mayor Spencer was present and knew the man lied, so he didn't vote. Later the same indefatigable voter called at another booth and said he was Mr. Llewellyn Morrison. Mr. Spencer happened to be present this time also, and, needless to say, the would-be plugger was foiled again.

In No. 3 ward, a man demanded a ballot, saying he was R. S. Leigh. He did not get it, because the scrutineer knew that Mr. Leigh met his death in the city hall disaster. The Advertiser will bulletin the plebiscite results this evening as fast as they can be received from all parts of the Dominion by a special wire, which has been placed in the building for the purpose. The city returns will be given in subdivisions. Watch The Advertiser bulletin for prompt and accurate re-

DIAMONDS SAID TO BE ALIVE. A diamond is as much alive as a man. Thus declares Prof. Von Schroen, of the Naples University. According to him, the so-called inorganic bodies possess quite as much life as organic ones. He also claims to have photographs of the chief events in the life of a crystal, from its birth inward.One ance cause. The ladies showed much of the most curious of these is thus described: The crystal meets another one from a different mother. The two strike at each other; they fight, strive, and clasp with each other. It is war to the death. It is a case of the survival of the fittest. One must die. But no two crystals from the same mother ever fight, no matter when they meet. In which particular crystals seem to be superior to human beings.

Only Indication of Dynamite Cruiser's Guns,

But One Shot Killed 100 Men and Wounded More.

Chief Engineer Bartlett Tells of the Vesuvius' Work.

Chief Engineer Frank Bartlett, of the United States dynamite cruiser Vesuvius, is visiting at the home of Mrs. William A. Owen, 335 Larned street east, Detroit:

"'Dynamite cruiser' is hardly the term for the vessel," said Mr. Bartlett, "for, as everyone knows, she fires only gun cotton. While the vessel stands in relation to the rest of the navy as a freak, she had been in commission a year and a half chasing filibusters around the coast of Florida before she went to Santiago. Her crew were all regular naval officers, with the exception of one man-an Illinois naval reserve.

"The ship carries five ordinary guns besides her other armament. Wasn't there danger of the concussion from these exploding the stores of guncotton? I think not, but as we never had occasion to fire the smaller guns we couldn't find out from experience.

"The big guns of the Vesuvius are fired with compressed air, which is pumped into a large reservoir and then drawn off into small ones as needed. When these are full the amount of compressed air on board is three and one-half tons. A valve is opened behind one of the projectiles, and the pressure of the air forces the projectile out. There is no report-only a sudden exhaustive cough, as from some monster leviathan, while the vessel recoils a short distance. But on the shore the effect is awful. Huge chunks of fire burst forth and scatter along the shore for 200 or 300 feet, followed by a dull rumbling, as the missile gets in its deadly work. There is absolutely no warning of its approach, for the ship is dark as the night and not even a spark indicates that the missile is on its way.

"We fired 26 shots at Santiago. saw where only one of these struck. It was on a ridge 40 feet wide between Morro Castle and a lighthouse. It hit a barrack building 50 feet long and 25 feet wide. There wasn't a vestige of the building left, and a Spanish captain, whom we saw on board the Solace, told us that the shot killed 100 soldiers, besides wounding Gen. Toral. Half of the lighthouse 50 feet away was blown down also.

"I has been stated that many of our shots flew wide of the mark. The fact of the matter is, we purposely shot over the ridge I spoke of, on which the batteries were located, to drop some shells down into the forts on the other side, but we landed two on the ridge, and when the width of it is taken into consideration, I call that pretty good shooting.

"We always fired at night, because our projectiles were made to carry only at a distance of a mile to a mile and a half. Our cruiser was unarmored. Anything would have sunk her a mile from shore, so we had to wait for the cover of darkness to protect us. We usually crept up about a half mile from shore. Speaking of the concussion of the projectiles, one of our shots fell short one night, and struck the side of a cliff near shore. which came back over the distance of half a mile nearly knocked one down on deck.

"The boat hasn't many friends in the navy, and that's the reason it wasn't kept in commission.'

lord," said the earl's valet, "I given the necessary orders, and will be ready Countermand the orders, Delpierre,' errupted Gerard; "I have met some ends here, and shall not go tomor-

Delpierre obeyed, wondering at the brightness of his master's countenance and change of manner. What uncertain people these English milords were! Ah. haleyon days those were! sweet paradises-an Olympus, where all was nectar and ambrosia. Yet Gerard was not content. He felt happiness near his grasp; still, his fingers had not really clutched it.

Thus, one evening, while at Mentone, he resolved to learn his fate. They had been strolling on the shore, which the tiny waves lapped with musical kisses. The moon, just rising, though not seen, gave a silvery gleam to the twilight: while a land breeze wafted out to the little pleasure boats dotting the waters, some lazily in motion, others resting on the oars; exquisite the perfume of lemon and orange trees.

Finally, the party perceiving the lights taken in the drawing-room of Lord Santyre's villa, moved in that direction, when, calling her attention to some object in the bay, Gerard detained Lucille behind.

"It is very beautiful, especially on so splendid a night," remarked Lady Westbrook, in a low, murmuring voice, as in harmony with the scene; "I shall grieve to leave it.' 'And I-I," said Gerard, "must go tomorrow.'

"Tomorrow!" He felt her little hand tighten on his erm, as she lifted her eyes, surprised, to his. Then, commanding herself, she went on:

"This is sudden, my lord. I trust no bad news---'

"No-no," broke in Gerard, quickly, somewhat nervously. "The truth is that I find I must not, dare not, remain, Ladv Westbrook. For my happiness I dare not, unless-unless-

He paused, but Lucille made no sign to speak. Her head was bent. He regarded her with an eager longing, then, in thrilling, fervent passion, ejaculated: "Lucille, I go, because I love you! In you my future joy or misery is centered. Can you bid me depart?"

He felt she was trembling. What an agony of suspense were those brief seconds! Then the sweet, pure eyes were looking frankly into his, the coral lips murmuring words of life:

You must not go: I bid you remain. They were alone. A kind shadow had swept over the land. He clasped her to his breast. Gently her head rested against his shoulder. Stooping, he kissed her brow; then, as he gazed on her blushing, lovely face, he whispered, in accents of intense rapture, the words !

" 'Oh, thou art fairer than the evening Clad in the beauty of a thousand stars! Ah! my love-my darling!"

Who could portray the bliss of that stillness, broken only by the musical lap of the waves singing an io-peon? A week later the Morning Post announced the engagement of Lady Westbrook and Gerard, Earl of Lethrington. "I always told you so," commented Mrs. Grundy, wagging her head with much self-satisfaction.

. Everyone who was at all interested in the matter, either as an observer or actor, exclaimed: What a pity! What a different morning from the first Countess of Leth-rington's wedding day!"

Marriage! Yes, two months have rolled by and Madame Delacour's best hands, and Messrs. Cater & Rout's brisk young men, are exceedingly busy. Another household is in a state of fluttering excitement. But sunshine, warm and golden, had flooded the London streets on Esmer's bridal morn; rain. persistent and dismal, on Lucille's. "It's a bad omen," whispered the su perstitious portion of the guests.

"In that case," remarked the skeptical, "the sun that shone on the previous union should have been a good one; yet recollect the sad result." No such foreboding ideas visited Lady Westbrook; the happiness of her own heart was too intense to be affected by the vagaries of an English climate. She sighed once, though, as Mademoiselle Fantine placed the lace veil over her head, and she regarded her appearance in the mirror. The sigh, too, was one of regret. She grieved that Maria Saproni, for whom her affection had been augmented by admiration, was not there at that moment.

All the marquis' search for the Italian had proved in vain: neither had Lord Cecil been more successful. Uselessly had Mr. Noah Seacum sought, frequently creating delusive hopes, rather to keep the matter afloat, than from any tangible foundation. Maria had disappeared, apparently beyond finding.

For a year, Lord Cecil, hoping against hope-fighting against despair-had striven to trace her retreat. After that, seemingly, he had given up the matter; but his uncle, who watched him carefully, saw, with regret, that he made no matrimonial advances to any of the marriageable young ladies in his own sphere. As to Captain Lascelles, he found his patron's society neither as amusing or profitable; the young nobleman having grown serious, and taken an aversion to the extravagant luxuries and pleasures of youth upon which the officer

Whether Cecil had really renounced all hope of finding Maria, or his affection had wearied and changed, none could tell; the secret was buried in his own breast. Even the captain, after the other's marked reticence, dared not

Lord Carisford might possibly have made a confidante of his cousin; but her sudden and unaccountable indifference respecting the whereabouts of the Italian had offended as much as it had astonished him. About the end of the twelve months, however, a Lady Flora Desmond had appeared in society, a beautiful, lively, Irish girl of scarcely 18, with bright, pleasant manners, marked by a charming naivete. Her sparkling, merry blue eyes had speedily attracted around her a little circle of admirers, among whom soon was Cecil, evidently drawn by her magical influence.

Lord Santyre observed this with considerable delight, and he decided the old love was indeed dead, when, while her Irish ladyship was on a visit to Lucille, he came upon Lady Flora and Cecil en tete-a-tete.

She was seated on a low chair, winding silk, the skein of which was spanned by my lord's aristocratic hands, as he reclined on a large, silky rug at her feet, his eyes raised to hers in evident content and amusement.

"Hercules at the feet of Omphale!" smiled the marquis, retiring on tiptoe. "The course of the mountain torrent has been turned; I leave its direction to the magic of Lady Flora's 'witching

Thus, when Lord Santyre, forming his party to visit Italy, persuaded Lady Flora, with her aunt, to join it, he was not at all surprised that Cecil proposed to accompany them.

Abroad, they must of necessity be thrown much together, and what better to create lovers than that? Nevertheless, though Lady Flora and Cecil flirt-ed together to desperation, and quarreled merely for the pleasure of making it up again, almost like real lovers, Lord Carisford never whispered the first person, present tense, of the verb which forms the axis upon which human life turns, "I love," into Lady Flora's ear, and they returned to London with it yet unspoken.

"I positively thought Cecil would have proposed," remarked the earl, regretfully, to Lucille.

"It is not too late yet, my lord," she smiled. "Recollect, there is something, they say, contagious in weddings. Flora is to be my chief bridesmaid, and Cecil performs the part of Gerard's best man. Let us wait for the result. I feel sure he cares for her. He treats no one to such attention; while I found them whispering together most confidentially the other day. Certainly, she does not repulse him.'

'Repulse! on the contrary, her eyes brighten under his glance, her laugh is always merriest when he is by. Well. I hope it will turn out as we wish." "When it does, I shall advertise for Maria, my lord. I must! I will find her!" remarked Lady Westbrook, whose affection for the Italian had increased rather than decreased, and now, at this important period of her life, she wished for her friend to be there. Her toilet completed, and the hour arrived. Lucille descended, and soon was being driven, with Lord Santyre to the church.

That is the way with the dread enemy of mankind—consumption. It has a web—the web of trivial disorders neglected. When a man heedlessly stumbles into that web, con sumption first attacks his stomach, then his blood, then his lungs, then every organ in his body. Many doctors assert that when a man is once in this deadly web there is no escape. That is a mistake. Thousands have testified to their recovery from this disease by the use of the right remedy. Many of their letters, together with their names, addresses and photographs, appear in Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. The remedy that saved them was Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Facts on Which All Its Details Must Necessarily Be Based.

Seven Paragraphs Which Sum Up the Whole Matter-Noble Work Done for the Imprisoned French Captain by His Devoted Wife, Col. Picquart and the World-Known Novelist Zola.

Much has been said of late about the Dreyfus affair which is not only interest ing to Frenchmen but the world at large. No other subject of the day is perhap quite as fascinating, either. It iliustrates clearly the peculiar conditions existing in the French Republic and demonstrates that up to a few weeks ago the army and not the civil laws governed the people of France.

The facts to which all the details in this celebrated case must be fastened have thus been summarized from the original document:

"1. Capt. Albert Dreyfus of the French army was in 1894, by a secret courtmartial, convicted of treason to France He was condemned on a single document -a bordereau or memorandum of Franch military secrets of no importance or value, alleged by one of the subordinates of Col. Paty du Clam to have been found in the wastebasket of the German Ambassador.

2. This memorandum was, the army's experts contend, in a handwriting iden. tical in all essential points with the handwriting of Dreyfus. The opposition experts contend that it was in the handwriting of Major Esterhazy, a French military spy. "3. To influence the court-martial two secret documents were laid before them, but not shown to Dreyfus or his counsel. These were two letters written by the military attache of the Italian Embassy at Paris and referring to French secrets sold by a French spy, 'D.' The ermy now admits that one of these letters seferred to another person and not to Dreyfus, and both the Italian attache and the German attache, to whom he wrote, have pledged themselves convincingly that neither letter referred to Drey. fus, and that they had no dealings what ever with him.

"4. In 1896, two years after Dreyfus" condemnation and when the agitation for a retrial began in earnest, Col. Henry, who had just become the head of the Intelligence bureau, forged a letter purporting to be a third in the Italian attache's series. In this forged letter Dreyfus' name occurred in full. This forged letter was put forward as the conclusive proof that Dreyfus was guilty. Confronted recently with a charge of forgery, Col. Henry killed himself, and It is accepted that 'suicide is confession.'

"5. When Paty du Clam was promoted in 1894 for catching and convicting Drevfus. Col. Picquart became the head of the intelligence bureau. He was dismissed for collecting proofs that showed or tended to show that the bordereau was in the handwriting of the French spy Esterhazy, and that Esterhazy had sold French secrets to the Germans and the Italians both before and after Dreyfus was arrested and imprisoned.

"6. The explanation put forward by the army and the government for Esterhazy's published letters denouncing France and for his selling secrets is that he did it in the regular course of his business, the better to get hold of the secrets of other governments. The explanation of the resemblance of the handwriting of the bordereau to Esterhazy's handwriting is that Dreyfus, knowing Esterhazy's busines, imitated his handwriting the better to conceal himself.

'7. The army and the government have alleged from the first that there is other evidence against Dreyfus, which can in no circumstance be disclosed for 'grave reasons of State. They allege that these reasons are so grave that any act to suppress the Dreyfus agitation would be justifiable: On the other hand, the friends of Drevfus allege that these socalled 'grave reasons of State' are merely the cover for a clique of disreputable army officers and their dupes who have Leen conspiring, not against France directly, but first against the Hebrews in the army, and latterly to defend themselves from exposure and disgrace.

Col. Henry's suicide forced the Cabinet to take action, and a revision of the case was agreed upon. This led M. Cavaignac, the Minister of War, to hand in his resignation, this official being in his own mind firmly convinced of Dreyfus' guilt. President Faure then personally request ed Gen. Zurlinden, military governor of Paris, to accept the war portfolio, and succeeded in gaining his consent. He, too, has since resigned and given place to Gen. Chancine. This means that when Dreyfus returns from Devil's Island, off the coast of French Guiana, where he has been confined in an iron cage for more than three years, he will receive a fair trial, for the new Minister of War is in favor of revision. The latest development is that Col. Esterhazy has confessed that 600 of the 1,000 documents used against Dreyfus were forged.

Should Capt. Dreyfus eventually secure his freedom and be again invested with the uniform and sword of which, by order of the court-martial, a French sergeant divested him, he will have to thank his charming and beautiful wife, Lucie Eugenie, for the consummation.

Soon after his arrival at his place of exile he wrote to Mme. Dreyfus, "I rely upon you to solve this horrible mystery." Then this faithful wife, who had offered to share her husband's awful fate and was prevented doing so by the French Government, set to work to free the Captain, or at least to secure for him a new trial. She went to Berlin and flung herself at the feet of the Emperor. One word from him, she pleaded, would release her husband. "Say," she prayed, "that the German Embassy received no information from Capt. Dreyfus." The Emperor said the word she asked for, but it was of no avail. Next she visited the Emperor of Russia, who took a keen interest in the case and did what he could to help the pleading wife. Next the Pope was drawn into the affair, and also the Queen Regent of Spain. All of these eminent persons used their influence to secure a re-opening of the case, but with no success. Still the work which Mme. Dreyfus did was bearing good fruit. The newspapers continued to fight about

MME. LUCIE EUGENIE DREYFUS.

Dreyfus. Zola and Max Nordau took up their pens and wrote with gall about some of the big people in Paris. Count Esterhazy was tried on a charge similar to that on which Dreyfus was convicted, and although not found guilty, the fact was all in favor of Mme. Dreyfus' campaign. Then. Col. Picquart, a friend of the Dreyfuses, fought a duel with Col. Henry, and then came the last chapter of Henry's confession and suicide. Capt. Dreyfus did well to rely on his wife to solve the truly horrible mystery, and that she will certainly succeed in liberat ing her husband or vindicating his memory if he should die there can be no doubt whatever. Mme. Dreyfus makes this declaration: "I am convinced of my husband's absolute innocence and mean to prove it. Jehovah, Gcd or Providence will ere long crush his enemies and restore him to me." This prediction certainly seems about to be fulfilled. Mme. Dreyfus is still a beautiful woman notwithstanding the trying time she has passed through and the great grief she

Zola's interest in the case will go into history as one of its most interesting features. The great novelist, in an open letter, accused a number of army officers of having conspired to convict Dreyfus to shield themselves. He was arrested, tried and sentenced to a year in prison, and fled from France. The peroration of the speech which he delivered at his trial was thrillingly eloquent, especially when he

"If Dreyfus be not innocent, let my name perish. If he be not innocent, let my works perish. By all I have done for the literature of the country, by all I am to hope for, I swear that he is innocent.'

A Newspaper "Beat." Walter Russell contributes an article entitled "Incidents of the Cuban Blockade" to the Century. Mr. Russell says: My time while on the blockade, serving as a special artist, was about equally divided between the various warships and a small steam-yacht the duty of which was to divine intuitively when and where something was to occur, and be there to witness it. Our little crew of four constituted a strategy board in itself. We were, indeed, war prophets. More than once wisdom in our reasoning brought us our reward. More than once we were alone in our glory, the only despatch-boat on the spot. A sailor boy had asked me to bring him from Key West fifty boxes of cigarettes for some of the crew; and one merning I threw the bundle upon the deck of his ship. Tearing off the cover, he scrawled the words, "Thanks! Hope to meet you twenty-two miles to the east-ward at noon," and scaled the bit of pasteboard to me.

A correspondent who by common consent was chairman of our strategy board was on board the ship at that time, and obtained another slight clue. So we headed eastward from Havana, while the blockading fleet lay basking serenely in the sun. So also did many despatch boats. At noon my sailor friend and his ship were there. Shortly after noon there was an engagement-the first of the war-and there was no other despatch boat near. Next morning New Yorkers were informed that despatch boats were as numerous there as pickets in a fence. Every newspaper had a dozen. The incident was witnessed by only one artist beside the writer; yet I have since seen a double-page color supplement of that battle in a weekly periodical, where, under the artist's name, was printed the claim that it was sketched from our yacht.

The Medical Profession Recommend Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment.

Dr. C. M. Harlan, writing in the American Journal of Health, Feb. 10, says: "Among the proprietary medicines deserving recognition is Dr. Chase's Ointment, as a remedy for Piles, Eczematic skin eruptions of all kinds, for which it has been used with marked success and has effected remarkable cures in many obstinate cases which seem to baffle the skillful medical attendant."

-Brantford Expositor: The last gun in the present plebiscite campaign was fired by the prohibitionists in Wickliffe Hall Tuesday evening. The speaker of the evening, Rev. They have sent buyers all over the province, and expect to ship this fall many thousands of barrels. Mr. Stewart has consulted with several city builders, and will decide next week upon the size of the building to be erected. Yesterday afternoon he called at the collector's office to obtain information as to the taxes the firm would be obliged to pay. The building will be built of wood, with gravel and tar roof.

-In today's Free Press it is stated a poor woman was attempted to be bribed to go on the platform and reveal her private family troubles, growing out of intemperance—the implica-tion being that those connected with the prohibition party had made the said attempt to bribe to advance their cause. The article in our contemporary closed as follows: "The above is a true statement, and if necessary names can be given." Accordingly, this forenoon, a deputation consisting of Mrs. Gordon Wright, Mrs. Thornley and Rev. Dr. Saunders, waited on the editorial department of the Free Press, to request the names, as proffered. The deputation ask to have it made public that the names asked for were refused

Told Either to Move Their Tracks at the Corner of Adelaide and Dundas Streets, or the Dangerous Electric Light Pole-Where New Lights Are Wanted.

A brief session of the fire and light committee of the city council was held last night, Ald. Stevely presiding in the absence of Ald. Taylor. The other members present were Ald. Wilkey, Gerry, Jolly, Engineer Graydon and Secretary Bell.

A memo from the council about the electric light pole at the corner of Adelaide and Dundas streets was considered. The engineer thought it best to have the city solicitor's opinion before any action be taken, as certain suits against the street railway company for damages, based upon the dangerous position of the pole, were perding, and the committee should do nothing liable. The trouble was brought about, he said, because the tracks were not put down according to the specifica-

Ald. Jolly moved to instruct the street railway company to move the tracks to the position originally in-tended, or move the pole, the work in either case to be done under the supervision of the engineer. Carried.

their fellow-members about the placing of new lights: From Thos. B. Mungall and others, Marshall street. From H. B. White and others,

Our baby, when one month old, had a raw place on her neck which spread slowly over the whole face, the face and neck being all raw meat, sometimes dry and then wet, and omething awful to look at. The way the child suffered, mother and child never had any rest day or night as it constantly itched, and the blood used to flow down her cheeks. We had doctors and went to the dispensary without any result. By using part of a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, three boxes of CUTI-CURA (ointment), and CUTICURA SOAP, the child was entirely healed. Funeral of the Late Hon. M. C. Cameron at Goderich-Tributes to the Memory of the Departed - The Pall-Bearers.

Goderich, Ont., Sept. 29.—The funeral of the late Hon. M. C. Cameron, lieutenant-governor of the Northwest Ters ritories, took place here yesterday, and was one of the largest ever seen in the county. The grounds around the house were crowded with people, and hundreds lined the streets on the way to the cemetery. Almost every polling subdivision of the large riding was represented by a large number of delegates, all anxious to pay the last tribute of respect to the man who had so often led them, or so determinedly opposed them through the heat of a political campaign. Party feeling was forgotten, and from all sides were heard the expressions of regret that he had enjoyed his new honor for so short a

The bar of the county of Bruce was represented by Mr. H. P. O'Connor, Q.C., ex-M.P.P., Alex. Shaw, Q.C., and P. A.

Malcolmson The pall-bearers were: Messrs. J. T. Garrow, Q.C., M.P.P., Ira Lewis, W. Proudfoot, Philip Holt, C. A. Sager and Dr. Shannon.

from his Goderich friends. Services were conducted at the house and grave by Rev. Mr. Anderson, pastor of Knov Presbyterian Church, who at the grave paid an eloquent tribute to the personal worth and abilities of the departed, concluding by asking all to bury with the remains all political animosities, and to remember only the man as he was off the political platform-open-hearted, genial, wholesouled, and to whom the needy never appealed in vain. Among the outsiders noticed from a distance were: Hon. Wm. Paterson, Brantford; H. H. Cook, Toronto; H. P. O'Connor, Q.C., ex-M.P.P.; Alex. Shaw, Q.C., Walkerton; R. H. "HUMANITY" TOMORROW NIGHT. While it is said "Humanity" is sensational in spots like life, of which it is the reflex, it is not offensive sensationalism. SOL SMITH RUSSELL IN A NEW COMEDY.

"Depleting a lovable character; a worthy companion of the creations with which Mr. Russell has endowed the stage," are some of the nice things noted as being said about Mr. Russell's new play in which he is appearing this season. The name of the new comedy is "Uncle Dick," written especially for Mr. Russell by the same author who furnished him with "A Bachelor's Ro-whistle, but the man seemed not to mance," Martha Morton, and that she heed the warning, and continued his has succeeded admirably is evinced by the fine success of the play. role he has undertaken, it is said, has Mr. Russell appeared to better advantage than in "Uncle Dick." Russell is capitally supported by a company of unusual merit, all of whom are well supplied with good roles in the play. The sale of seats is to open tomorrow, and it is expected that the house will be sold out, as was the case upon Mr. Russell's last engagement

In placing themelves at the head of a theatrical organization of their own, Mr. Herbert Kelcey and Miss Effie Shannen have distinguished themselves, especially in getting together a company that, in point of ability, experience and harmony, compares favorably with the best stock companies. They ha also shown modesty and business cumen in not assuming to shine alone, and they have achieved a phenomenal success in their new play, Clyde Fitch's "The Moth and the Their company is the same Flame." as it was during the New York run of the piece. Particular reference to the two principals at this time is hardly required. Their association for many years in the best companies has given them an exceptional value. The company will appear intact at the Grand Opera House tonight.
