A Requiem

ON THE DEATH OF JOHN S. THOMPSON, ESQ. By his friend and former Pupil, MARY E. HERBERT.

I stood, to-day, beside the dead, The form from which the soul had fled; With tears that would not be suppress'd. I mourned thy entrance into rest : Ah, selfish grief, earth's galling chain, I would not have thee wear again ; Thought's lofty impress on thy face, Disease or death might not erase,-But every line of carking care. Seemed to have fled forever there Why should I mourn, since thou art blest, Hast sweetly entered into rest!

I weep, as memory calls to mind, The earnest teacher, faithful, kind; Knowledge, with thee no empty name, With winning speech thou didst proclaim Its labyrinthine maze make clear, And onward urge with words of cheer Thine, too, the pure, etherial fire, That well might kindred souls inspire,-The Poet's song, the Painter's art, Touched chords, responsive, in thy heart,-And oft, delighted, have I heard Some glowing strain thy spirit stirred. By thee, breathed forth, in tones so clear, It seemed an added charm to wear.

Active thy life; no laggard's part Was thine, for Duty nerved thy heart; Eager and zealous to fulfil, Through care and toil thy Master's will; Ready by every kindly deed, In friendship, precious word, how true How strong the bond thy spirit knew ! Faithful and firm, no fortune's change And they who prized that friendship well, Alone its priceless worth may tell

But thou hast passed away; no more Shell we hold converse as of vore -And they who loved thee, with their tears Shall keep thy memory green for years; Yet still rejoice to know that thou Shalt never more in sorrow bow; Oh, happy spirit, truly blest. We joy that thou hast gained thy rest! -Dartmouth, Oct. 24th.

" Which shall it be ? Which shall it be ?" I looked at John-John looked at me. (Dear patient John who loves me yet As well as though my locks were jet,) And when I found that I must speak, My voice seemed strangely low and weak ; " Tell me again what Robert said ?" And then I list'ning bent my head. " This is his letter :

" I will give A house and land while you shall live, If in return from out your seven. One child to me for aye is given.' I looked at John's old garments worn, I thought of all that John had borne Of poverty, and work, and care, Which I, though willing, could not spare ; I thought of seven mouths to feed. Of seven little children's need, And then of this.

"Come, John," said I, "We'll choose among them as they lie Asleep :" so walking hand in hand, Dear John and I surveyed our band First to the cradle lightly stepped, Where Liliau, the baby, slept, A glory, 'gainst the pillow white : Softly the father stooped to lay His rough hand down in loving way, When dream or whisper made her stir, And huskily he said. " Not her-not her.

We stooped beside the trundle-bed, And one long ray of lamplight shed Athwart the boyish faces there. In sleep so pitiful and fair : I saw on Jamie's rough, red cheek A tear undried. Ere John could speak. " He's but a baby too," said I, And kissed him as we hurried by.

Pale, patient Robert's angel face Still in his sleep bore suffering's trace. " No, not for a thousand crowns, not him." He whispered, while our eves were dim.

Poor Dick ! bad Dick ! our wayward son, Turbulent, reckless, idle one-Could he be spared? " Nay, He who gave, Bid us befriend him to the grave : Only a mother's heart could be Patient enough for such as he; "And so," said John, "I would not dare To send him from her bedside prayer."

Then stole we softly up above, And knelt by Mary, child of love " Perhaps for her 'twould better be,' I said to John. Quite silently He lifted up a curl that lay Across her cheek in willful wry. The while my heart best audibly.

Only one more, our eldest lad, Trusty and truthful, good and glad-So like his father. " No John, no-I cannot, will not, let him go."

And so we wrote in courteous was We could not drive one child away And afterwards toil lighter seemed, Thinking of that of which he dreamed . Happy, in truth, that not one face We missed from its accustomed place; Thankful to work for all the seven, Trusting the rest to One in heasen!
