POETRY.

Little Boy Blue.

Under the haystack Little Boy Blue, Sleeps with his head on his arm, While voices of men and voices of maid, Are calling him over the barn.
Sheep in the meadows are running wild, Where poisonous herbage grows, Leaving white tufts of downy fleece,
On the horns of the sweet wild rose.

Oh in the fields, where the golden corn Is ripening, and the golden pumpkins Where golden pumpkins ripen below, Trample the white-faced cows.
But no loud blast on the shining horn Calls back the straying sheep, And the shepherd wanders in hay and corn, While the keeper lies asleep.
His regular eyes are tightly shut, His dimples are all at rest,
The chubby hand tucked under his head,
By one tiny cockle is pressed.
Wake him? No! Let down the bars, And gather the treading sheep;
Open the barn yard and drive in the cows, But let the little boy sleep.
For year after year we can shear the fleece,
And soon can always be worn;
But the sleep that visits Little Boy Blue Will not come when the years have flown.

Help By the Way.

As the days pass swiftly onward,
One by one,
Leaving all you hoped and planned for,
Bibliotimonia?
As you see the shadow gather Think before your hurrying feet,
And the path grows very lonesome,
And the path grows very steep—Courage, friend, be not disheartened!
Lead a hand!
And the faltering brother near you Help to stand!
Just a little heavier maybe,
Than your own.
Is the load which he is bearing All alone.

Yes, the days are passing swiftly, But we ought Find a ray of light to cheer us
On our way.
As we journey up the hillside, Shadows come, but need not stay,
If we look for glimpses of sunshine.
When the clouds have passed away.

Ah, friends, life is not so dreary As we all Think the way we do our duties Makes them small,
Grand and glorious could the humblest Life work be,
If we only tried to do it Worthily.

Use your time, but do not waste it; Amuse your mind,
You will find a time for resting By and by.
While so many hearts are breaking, While so many homes are sad, Happy we should be, if only We can make one poor heart glad.

SELECT STORY.

Their Vacation.

"We must lay aside an extra five for repairs," said Burr Parker to his brother as the two were making preparation for a long anticipated vacation to the North woods.
"Only I hope we won't have to use a cent that way. We want some extra five," replied Jack.
"That makes me think; don't let us forget to ask father if he isn't going to give us our ammunition?"
"Fraid he won't. Fact is I don't like to ask. My gun—Jack turned from the gun he was polishing, with a perplexed look on his face. "Father seems worried. You know he told us early last fall that he couldn't afford to send us all off on a vacation this summer, but if we had spoken enough to earn our own money, we might go."
"Well, haven't you? You and I have made a good hundred dollars, counting in Uncle Ned's birthday gift of money."
"Yes; I expect it's going to crowd him to send mother and the babies down to the seashore, and they ought to go."
"And we oughtn't, you mean?" Burr looked up ruefully.
"No, I didn't say that. We've earned it, and of course we can go; but I don't want to ask for a cent from father."
"He'd look sort of peaked, that's so," mused Burr, after a minute of vigorous rubbing. "Say, when did he ever take a vacation?" he suddenly asked.
"Don't know, yes, I do, too," said Jack. "Do you remember when he took us all to Deerfield one summer when we were little shavers?"
"When? That's fully ten years ago!" exclaimed Burr, straightening himself up under the dignity of fifteen years. "I don't know how he stands it."

POETRY.

"Well, he don't—that's all there is about it. He's getting awfully worn, and it costs a heap for us all to go off so. We expect to spend our hundred, and it costs mother and the babies lots more than it does us. I've made up my mind never to stir another step on his earnings, and he sweating in business to keep us all going. Times are panicky, too," he said, and he has to economize. I heard him tell mother so."

"Look here, Jack Parker!" Burr thrust the gun into its case. "I feel awfully mean about going at all. Why not hang around here, and give our money to mother and the babies? We'll get up the river occasionally."
"That's a tremendous say, and a tremendous do!" exclaimed Jack, dropping the rods he was fixing. "But hang it all, Burr, I can't help thinking how peaked father looks. I say, you know Joe Stout's father died last summer while all were up in the mountains, and folks said—"

"I know what they said," broke in Burr. "They said, if he stopped work and rested up a little he might have lived. They say, too, his big family made such demands on him he couldn't, and Joe was up in the woods then. Well, we aren't going, so there! Make demands! Not much we aren't—and mother's got to go, and father too."

"I don't know as he can," said Jack, slowly.
"He's got to—some way. Here, get those traps out of the way, Jack! I don't want to see them."
"Well, you heat me," returned Jack.
"Do you know what his going means?"
"Yes, sir," Burr promptly returned, as he swept the old flies into a drawer. "It means for you and me to broil in that little mill office in dog-days, long after hands, small grease and tar, and walk home to get an outside whiff of fresh air, as he has been doing for ten years without stopping."

"That is just it, but—"
"No buts. We'd have to if there was no father, and I'm going to begin right now so that won't happen. We'll get rich, and then go to the woods. Clear out of here!"

The excited fellow pushed Jack out of the room, locked the door, and as he afterwards declared, threw away the key.
It took some time for their father to realize that the boys meant what they said when they informed him that they were not going on the trip, but were to send him instead. Then it took some time to gain his consent, but every objection was coolly overruled.

"Every ten years, a summer off, I guess, said Jack, while Burr declared two boys were equal to one man and a piece over.
They knew enough about the business to keep things going straight for a month at least, with the aid of the confidential clerk, and so they were just going to run things. Mrs Parker added her entreaties when she saw the boys had determined upon it, and finally he agreed to go.

"Then there was a little private talk which opened her eyes somewhat, and the result was that father, mother and babies decided to go to the old homestead, and see his old mother—a trip she found he had longed for.
"It will not cost more than a hundred for us all, and I shall not have to take out a cent from the business, thanks to you, boys; so I will do as you say and leave business behind," he announced to them in such a relieved tone that they exchanged glances, and Burr tossed up his cap in satisfaction.

The days were warm and dull, the work confining and trying, but the two kept at it—now in the office, now in the mill; "for there's no use of half doing it," Jack insisted; and it was so well done that the month extended into six weeks under the clerk's private report. Nobly but Mr and Mrs Parker knew just what a blessed vacation it had been, though the boys had guessed pretty closely; but as they took the car that night to the depot to meet them, they learned what might have been.

"So Parker took a vacation," said one gentleman by them to another at his side.
"Yes," returned the other, "and in the nick of time. Dr Max tells me he was on the point of breaking down. It was all that saved him."
"Tides through straight. His clerk tells me it hasn't cost him a cent, and these two boys of his—why, sir, do you know those two young fellows gave up their summer trip, sent him off, paid his way, and stayed at home to look after things in his place. They've done it, too, like men. Ah, sir, if there were more such thoughtful sons, there would be fewer failures," the gentleman concluded as the boys left the car unrecognized.

above the mournful spot, and the grand old ocean would forever mean and sob in its trefal despair. There, with a Cross above gleaming in the pale rays of the moonlight, or giving back at noon the brightness of the sun, we would repose in that sleep, where the "wicked cease from troubling" and where (greatest of all consolations) the "weary are at rest." But as if to show us that life's "still rest," that opportunity were still ours, and that until we were laid away beneath the turf, we should not, could not rest, the gay chiming announcing a joyous ceremony swelled upon the air, and brought us back from death to life. So leaving 'mid the gathering gloom, the mournful precincts of the departed, we gathered consolation from the lines of that Book, whose sacred pages ever offer relief to the sorrowful, when we read upon the very gate of this garden of the great Readers, those words of joy and hope—"I am the Resurrection and the Life: he that believeth in me, although he be dead, shall live!"

The Difference Between Boys and Men

There is a difference between boys and men, but it is a difference of self-knowledge chiefly. A boy wants to do everything because he does not know he cannot; a man wants to do something because he knows he cannot do everything; a boy always fails, and a man sometimes succeeds because the man knows and the boy does not know. A man is better than a boy because he knows better; he has learned by experience that what is a harm to others is a greater harm to himself and he would rather not do it. But a boy hardly knows what harm is, and does it mostly without realizing that it hurts. He can not invent anything, he can only imitate; and it is easier to imitate evil than good. You can imitate war, but how are you going to imitate peace? No a boy passes his leisure in contriving mischief. If you get another fellow to walk into a wasp's camp, you can see him jump and hear him howl, but if you do not, then nothing at all happens. If you set a dog to chase a cat up a tree, then something has been done; but if you do not set the dog on the cat, then the cat just lies in the sun and sleeps, and you lose your time. If a boy could find out some way of doing good, so that he could be active in it, very likely he would want to do good now and then; but as he cannot, he very seldom wants to do good.—William DeWitt Howells.

Canada's Ship Railway.

The St. Lawrence and Bay of Fundy Ship Railway is making speedy progress towards completion, and the day is not distant when this unique experiment will be presented to the world for practical example, and it is to be hoped in every way that it will prove a success, and not the least of the reasons for this desire is, that Canada should have the credit and fame of first trying in this application of modern engineering skill, since she is the first to risk money and credit in such an undertaking. The engineers are Sir John Fowler and Sir Benjamin Baker, the contractors who built that great work, Fifth of North bridge. The Marine Railway has a subsidy of $175,000 a year from the Dominion Government for 25 years, to meet to some extent, uncertainties that can better be borne by the whole people, than by a few persons who risk so many millions in any case. The Bankers' Monthly, commenting on this enterprise, laments that the American people were prevented from undertaking similar works by the necessity of providing $2,000,000 in pensions present and prospective, for American soldiers and their families, but it predicts that they will get it by and by, and "leave Canada behind." That may be, but for the present Canada is far in advance.—London Daily.

"It will not cost more than a hundred for us all, and I shall not have to take out a cent from the business, thanks to you, boys; so I will do as you say and leave business behind," he announced to them in such a relieved tone that they exchanged glances, and Burr tossed up his cap in satisfaction.

The days were warm and dull, the work confining and trying, but the two kept at it—now in the office, now in the mill; "for there's no use of half doing it," Jack insisted; and it was so well done that the month extended into six weeks under the clerk's private report. Nobly but Mr and Mrs Parker knew just what a blessed vacation it had been, though the boys had guessed pretty closely; but as they took the car that night to the depot to meet them, they learned what might have been.

"So Parker took a vacation," said one gentleman by them to another at his side.
"Yes," returned the other, "and in the nick of time. Dr Max tells me he was on the point of breaking down. It was all that saved him."
"Tides through straight. His clerk tells me it hasn't cost him a cent, and these two boys of his—why, sir, do you know those two young fellows gave up their summer trip, sent him off, paid his way, and stayed at home to look after things in his place. They've done it, too, like men. Ah, sir, if there were more such thoughtful sons, there would be fewer failures," the gentleman concluded as the boys left the car unrecognized.

THE ACADIAN

WOLFVILLE, N. S., AUG. 22, 1890.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mr Walton, of the Avonport brickyard, has just opened up for shipment a new kiln of brick containing nearly 450,000. The burn was an unusually good one, Mr Walton using for the first time quite an amount of coal with gratifying success. The bricks are thoroughly burnt, of a deep red color, and when laid are sure to make a handsome wall or chimney.

The pessimists with whom Canada is plagued are forever endeavoring to persuade the world that there is little if any progress in the settlement of our Western territories. An official report, which shows that there have been 400,000 acres broken and cropped within thirty miles of Calgary, gives no support to these detractors from the good repute of our country. Such an advance of settlement in a district so remote as to be almost under the shadow of the Rocky Mountains is not to be despised, especially as it has been accomplished against a mighty effort to divert settlers to the south of the international line.

The strike at Springhill has at last been settled, and the miners are again at work. It must be most gratifying to all that the company and the men have been able to come to terms. For eight long weeks all the business and industry of the thriving town of Springhill has been at a standstill. The loss to the miners, the merchants and the people generally has been heavy, while the company must have suffered heavily in having the works stopped for so long a time. Now that an understanding has been arrived at between the management and the men the prospect is that the work at the mines will go pleasantly forward and that peace and prosperity will again reign at Springhill.

Have we a board of health in Wolfville? If so it appears to us that they are somewhat neglectful of their duty.
There are a number of places in town that require attention from the board; and unless such attention is soon given the public health will undoubtedly suffer. Our town is naturally healthy and pleasant to live in; but as in all other towns there is need of a close watch being kept over the sanitary affairs of the community. We trust the health officers, whoever they are, will at once make a careful examination of the condition of the town, and that all places needing attention may be looked after, so that no further cause of complaint may exist. The people should in this matter give the officers every assistance possible, and let all by united effort assist in upholding the good name of our town.

A nine from the Wolfville Baseball Club intend starting on a trip next week during which they anticipate playing several good games. They expect to start on Wednesday morning and proceed to Middleton where they will play a game with the club at that place. On the completion of the game they will proceed by the N. S. Central railway to Bridgewater where two games have been arranged for. They will then probably leave the next day for Lunenburg and play with the Lunenburg club. Returning next day they will play a return match at Middleton on the way home. Through the kindness of the passenger superintendent, Mr P. Giffins, our team have been able to secure a very generous reduction in fares. The programme looks inviting and the boys feel assured of a good time. We wish the team abundant success and a right good time.

The Dominion Illustrated.
Since it came under the administration of the Sabiston Company, this fine and patriotic pictorial weekly has maintained its usual high standard of merit.
Attention seems to be especially devoted just now to summer sports, particularly yachting and canoeing. The illustrations of Toronto yachts, of the Camp of the Canoe Association at Ile Cadieux, the views of the Montreal Field Battery (Col.
A. A. Stevenson, commanding) on St.
Helen's Island, and other engravings in this issue are both seasons and excellent. We hope the Sabiston Company will receive encouragement and support in this new venture. The president, we learn, is Mr Richard White, Mr A. Sabiston being managing-director. The business office of the paper is in charge of Mr J. P. Edwards. Address, 73 St. James street, Montreal.

As Others See Us.

An American lady, a Mrs Davison, who has been stopping at the American House for a few weeks back, writes as below to the Franklin, Mass. Free Press:-
To the inhabitants of Norfolk county desirous of rest and recreation, I could recommend from personal experiences this outing. Leaving home with all its cares and duties behind, go to Boston and embark as I did on one of the I. S. S. Co.'s boats for Annapolis, and, as you sail on your way down the Boston harbor you begin to feel invigorated, but on, on you go, leaving behind you one and another familiar landmark, till at last you pass by Thatcher's Island, with its twin lights and are out to sea, and soon out of sight of land. Just then sounds the gong for dinner, and if not seasick, you wend your way to the dining saloon, where you find a well spread table and the most attentive waiters ready to serve you with an excellent dinner, which, after having disposed of you again repair to the deck.
No land is visible, but here and there a white robed ship; no other steamship seems to travel just that route so you soon, finally comes supper served in the same quiet nice way as dinner had been served after which you retire; the night is passed almost as quickly as at home, so perfectly is everything managed by the officers of the New Brunswick, and you awake in the morning once more in sight of land, known as Brier Island, you then pass on from the Bay of Fundy into the Annapolis Basin through the Digby Strait with a range of hills on either side and quiet, sleepy little hamlets lying at their base with always a church if there are a dozen houses. The first landing made by the boat is at Digby, a pretty, quiet place, where many flock down to see the steamer land, and the small boys sell pond lilies and fruits in their season, and visitors from the States ask eagerly for Boston papers, which, passengers having them, freely give them. The stop made there is short. We then go on twelve miles to Annapolis, which is the oldest European settlement in America north of Gulf of Mexico, it is a quiet, peaceful place. As that is as far as the boat takes us we disembark and find the train in waiting to take us through the Annapolis valley, which is a valley lying between the North and South mountain lines which guard the coast; we spun along for miles past vast orchards containing thousands of trees each, and acres of waving grain, truly this is the most fertile country my eyes ever rested upon, and so varied is the scenery one cannot weary while looking upon it.
About half way from Annapolis to Halifax is the town of Wolfville with its College; it is situated on the basin of Minas near the mouth of the Gaspareaux river; in it is the village of Grand Pre and the land of Evangeline, and the Acadians; truly it is a lovely spot, with its fertile meadows, protected from the sea by the dykes built by the French peasantry years ago, its Cape Blomidon rising up from the sea to a great height, standing a stern guardian of the basin of Minas below, and it is here in this midway town that the traveler on his way to Halifax stops for rest and a visit to the different scenes of interest in this historic land.
Landing from the train, he or she is supposed to wend his way to the American House, which is the best patronized hotel of the place, being centrally located, and a strictly temperance house, and one where you get good rooms, good board and polite service. Mr and Mrs Harris, the proprietors, are persons of intelligence and refinement, and do all in their power to make it homelike for their guests, and they are successful; their house always well filled with people from all the different states, from Maine to California. It is within easy walking distance of Grand Pre, where you are shown the ancient French willows, the site of the chapel in which the Acadians were called together to receive the order of transportation from their homes; also the site of the old blacksmith shop of Basil and many other things. It is a short ride to Blomidon, where some fine geological specimens are to be found; amethysts and other precious stones; and if one wishes only rest he need go no further, as this is truly a Haven of Rest, the scenery, the atmosphere, all are restful, and here there is no bustle, no hurry, everyone goes easily and quickly about their work or pleasure.
During a fortnight's stop here I have not yet seen even a boy quicken his pace to a run, so little haste is there for anything; one sees very few persons out only on Sabbath, when all go to church, and all can find a place to suit them, as there is here a Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Episcopal and Catholic church. No bells ring, but at the appointed hour all repair to their respective churches, and a more quiet, peaceful place in which to worship God could not well be found. There is a weekly paper printed here, and both dry goods, clothing and grocery stores are situated on the same street with the American House; so one need want for nothing. Fine horses are easily procured for a day's ride at a small price, and one can soon learn of all the places of historical interest for miles about, and there are many. Truly it is a grand place for a vacation for any tired mortal, as here one must rest, there is no excitement, no bustle, and yet it is near enough to large towns that a few hours' ride will bring you out into the busy world again from this Acadia of rest and peace.
Come and see all this, and prove that the half of the beauty and quiet rest-fulness of the place has never been told.

The St John Exhibition.

We draw the attention of our readers to the advertisement of this Exhibition, which appears in another column, and would particularly impress upon all who are likely to exhibit, the necessity of sending in their entries before the first of September. The Association is preparing to issue a complete catalogue of exhibits, and all entries must therefore positively close on the date mentioned.
The prospects for the Exhibition are most encouraging in every department.
A large number of entries have been made in nearly all sections. In the manufacturers section almost every branch of industry in the Dominion will be shown. The large amount of machinery in motion will illustrate some interesting process in manufacturing, for this purpose the Association are providing about 250 horse power.
Messrs Goldie & McCulloch, of Galt, O., are contributing a 60 horse power Wheelock Engine; Messrs E. Lennard & Son, of London, O., are furnishing 95 horse power, with one of their Ball Engines, and several other manufacturers are putting in additional steam and electric power.
The great Maritime butter competition, for which about $300 in prizes are offered, is drawing great interest, and should give a good stimulus to this important industry in the Provinces.
Among the many features of the Exhibition, outside of the ordinary competition, the following are worthy of special notice: The West India exhibit, which will consist of the products of the Islands, will be both large and varied. One of the Islands alone is spending $2,000 on their collection. The Canadian, West Indian & South American S. S. Co., are offering free transport of articles from there and this department cannot fail to be of interest to all classes of people as well as a unique feature in Canadian Exhibitions.
Arrangements have been made with Messrs James Pain, of London, Eng., and New York, (probably the largest manufacturers of fire works in the world) for several evenings of the most elaborate displays, in which they propose to introduce a number of attractive novelties. As this firm has had charge of displays at Exhibitions at South Kensington and Sydenham Palace, London, Eng., as well as the most important one at other points in England, and the United States, their name is sufficient guarantee of the success of this part of the entertainment.
As regards the musical programme, four or five of the leading bands have been engaged, and in addition to these a large organ of 750 pipes is being erected by Mr F. A. Peters, of St John, which will be utilized for organ recitals, by some of the leading organists. Arrangements are also being made for a Mammoth Concert to be held in the buildings, when this instrument with an orchestra, and several hundred voices will be utilized. Nearly all the leading musical instrument manufacturers through Canada and the United States, as well as some from Germany, are making exhibits, which will be placed at various points throughout the buildings and some of the best musical talent has been engaged by these people to display the tone and power of their instruments.
The Exhibition Association has already received intimation from a number of companies of Glass Blowers, Museum Manager, Phonograph Exhibition companies, etc., and have arranged for a considerable number of attractions of this class.
The exhibit to be made by the educational department of New Brunswick, will be of an interesting character, containing work by all grades in the various schools of the Provinces.
The Moosepath Driving Park Association are providing a large and attractive programme of horse racing covering four days, during the Exhibition, and the various base-ball and Athletic Associations are organizing for important field days during the Fair.
Don't Fill the Bill.
The New York Legislature has prohibited boys under sixteen from smoking in public places. This law, though in view of the dire results of juvenile smoking it is calculated to be most salutary, is utterly illogical. If its purpose is to protect the boys, it will do them quite as much harm in private as in public places, and if its purpose is to protect the public, men's smoking is quite as bad as boys' smoking. Laws do not usually busy themselves with protecting individuals against themselves, except in case of the laws against suicide, under which head the juvenile smoking habit might doubtless be classified. The public has, we think, a good right to protection against annoyance from the salubrious smokers who taint the air of public places for their personal gratification do so out of pure selfishness, and the time will come when such a gross trespass upon our refined taste will have to be repressed, unless, indeed, it disappears of itself like snuffing, which was once universal but is now looked upon as too nasty to be socially tolerated.

BAKERY!

MR EDITOR, -Allow me through the columns of the ACADIAN to inform my friends and the public in general that having purchased the Bakery business owned in this village by Mrs Roberts, and having moved the same into the west side of C. A. Patriquin's

Mr J. B. Morton, Eridgetown, N. S.: Dear Sir, -I hereby certify that I was troubled with Chronic Diarrhoea for five years, which was brought on by liver and stomach trouble. During that time I had treatment from five doctors and a month's medicine from Pierce's Institution, Buffalo, all of which did me little or no good. Last November I commenced taking Dr Norton's Duck Blood Purifier, at which time I was unable to work and all of my food went to water, dare not eat any meat of any kind and had given up to die. I only used two bottles of the medicine and am now well and strong, and would highly recommend it to all who are affected as I was.
Yours truly,

Is beautiful for situation—nesting as it does at the base of the mountain on the North—with its Grand Frolic meadow lands on the south, skirting the "Caribou." It is one of the finest fruit growing sections in the valley—in fact one of the best all purpose farming districts in Nova Scotia.

There has been an abundant harvest of hay. Oats will be up to the average; potatoes are looking well. Apples will be a short crop.

The cheese factory is doing well and an air of hopefulness pervades the place. The usual number of summer tourists have recently been visiting the place—among whom were the DeWitts, Carters, Skinners, Sanfords, from St. John; the Hormese family from Halifax; Mrs. Eaton and daughter, from Wolfville; The Shaw brothers, Rev. M. B., Harlan and Fred have also been making visits here.

The school is being efficiently taught this summer by Mr. William Halsey, of the Senior class at Acadia College.

The outlook indicates that the Berwick Camp Meetings should have been held earlier in the season.

We have not seen any news from our village for some time. There is not much but it may be interesting to a few.

The fine showers of Monday have revived the languishing crops, which were very dry from the long drought.

The potatoes in this part of the county are for the most part looking well, repeated applications of Paris green arresting the progress of "the beetle."

The late cold weather in the spring, aided by the caterpillar, injured the apple crop to a great extent, it is thought there will be about one half a crop.

Mr and Mrs Morgan returned to Mass. on Tuesday. They have been here on their vacation, Mrs Morgan's father, Mr Wood had had two other daughters some this summer, Miss Wood went back some time ago and Mr Wood is still at home.

Mr Fred Harris returned to Lynn on Tuesday. He has been here on his vacation, Mrs Harris is still visiting friends in our vicinity.

The vacation of Mr Leonard Newcombe and Miss Newcombe will soon be over and they will return to the States.

Charles Power, of Yarmouth, is on a visit to his parents in Canada.

Mrs D. E. Ellis is slowly recovering from a recent serious illness.

A party of a half a dozen young men from Church St. started Monday morning for the day at Long Beach, as they expected they were obliged to drive into a shed for shelter. After some time, seeing there was no cessation to the rain fall, they were invited to put their teams and repair to the house, where about two hours were spent, during which they partook of an abundant collation they had with them, they again tried to ascend the mountain, but the rain obliged them to desist and start for home.
