VICTORIA ROW.

ROME LETTER.

(From our own Correspondent).

Rome, May 25th, 1912.

The unsteady condition of diplomatic affairs in different countries of Europe naturally bring to mind how France has fared since she broke eight years ago, her long relationship with the Holy See after so many years of friendly dealing. Were this writer to draw a picture of what the French Republic has forfeited by the Separation Law, he might be suspected of exaggeration. For this reason let an anti-clerical paper be heard on the matter in the 'Nuovo Giornale' of Florence.

'One thing is evident,' says this enemy of the Holy See, 'the anti-clerical fever in France has decreased by several degrees. The Republic has seen that the struggle against the Church has been of little benefit to itself, and it has not felled the enemy. The unfortunate liquidation of ecclesiastical goods—which should have yielded a milliard, and which, instead, has produced nothing—was the first illusion. The emigration of French capital to other countries and the consequent fall in French revenue from 103 to 94 francs is the second. The lessening of French prestige in the Orient and Extreme Orient has been the third and heaviest blow that has struck the Republic.'

Such is always the case. When mites like the atheistical Government of France enter into a campaign with the Papacy their attacks always recoil on themselves, and serve to bring into still bolder relief the grandeur and the majesty of the Catholic Church.

Were you to ascend these days the Capitol Hill and peer into the cages of the gaunt wolves and golden eagles kept in memory of what the eagle and wolf meant to the old Romans, you would be confronted by a strange spectacle. For the fiery birds and the hungry animals have been amused of late. The fact is they saw an addition being made the other day to the collection in the Capitol Museum, and they are laughing, as you may have seen since I fifty years ago Pere Hyacinth Loysan paid the penalty of his heretical teaching by being excommunicated from the Church. Since that time until his wretched death as an apostate in Paris a few days ago, he joined several of the Protestant churches, one or two of the Schismatic churches, only to leave all and die with a minister of each of them surrounding his bed. For two generations the miserable man had been forgotten until his pitiable end recalled his name. But his son, Paul Loysan, a noted hater of Catholicity, has once more dug up the memory of his unworthy parent by presenting to the Capitol Museum the plaster cast taken of the dead apostate's face. In his letter to Signor Nathan, Mayor of Rome, and ex-Grand Master of Italian Masons, the apostate's son writes: 'I have the honor of placing in your hands the death mould of Hyacinth Loysan, as an offering to Rome. To this relic spontaneously (sic) and generously you open the sanctuary of the Capitol to place it fraternally with the busts of your heroes who opened the ways to liberty over the breach at the Porta Pia.' Needless to say the aged mason, another old reprobate, replies, declaring the 'precious souvenir' shall get a place of honor. But it is remarkable how even while mandating about 'civilization,' 'progress,' 'spiritual truth,' and other catch-words so affected by similar mountebanks, Nathan is cautious not to lay himself open to another whipping such as Pius X gave him on the occasion of his infamous speech at the Porta Pia two years ago, a whipping which the Mayor and Municipality of Montreal repeated. For Nathan has reason to observe sagaciously. After that he was forced to submit on paper his public utterances for a considerable time to the civil authorities whenever the presence of the Ring was expected, and to see the blue pencil poised, ready for use on his manuscript.

Among the more interesting of the busts or so of individuals whom the Holy Father received in audience this past week was the young American athlete, Hayes, who won the Marathon race in London a few years ago, and who is now on his way to Stockholm for the Olympiad in Sweden, which is to be held in July. This reminds one that South Africa will be represented at the great athletic meeting by 20 athletes and sportsmen, Germany by 183, Australia and New Zealand by 40, Austria by 128, Bohemia by 71, Belgium by 60, Canada by 54, Denmark by 159, United States, 136, France 144, England 267, Greece 24, Holland 46, Hungary 206, Italy 80, Japan 2, Norway 211, Portugal 3, Russia 244, Finland 162, Serbia 10, Switzerland

3, Turkey 4. The list induces one to ask why is the 'Island of athletes' that with Canada swept the fields of the Vatican sports held in Rome a few years ago in honor of the Pope's Jubilee conspicuous by its absence? Surely the prospect of Home Rule does not make it apathetic!

Chief among the events that will characterize the recurrence of the Centenary of the Peace of Constantinople will, it is expected, be an unusually large series of canonizations and beatifications, one other fact that will keep the attention of the world focused upon Rome in the spring and summer of 1913. It is likely the beatification of the Venerable Oliver Plunket, Primate of Ireland, who was hanged, drawn and quartered on Tyburn Hill in the 16th century, will form one item; while the canonization of Blessed Joan of Arc will probably form another. Though the French Bishops feel particularly anxious that the heroine of France should be raised as soon as possible to the honors of the altar, they are not more than His Holiness Pius X, as His Holiness is well aware of the moral influence the event would undoubtedly have in the country. Apropos of this the following wire reached Pius X recently from Orleans: 'The Cardinals of Rheims and of Paris, the Archbishops of Rouen and Bourges, the Bishops of Saint-Die, Amiens, Bourges, Blois, Meaux, Nevers, Verdun and Montils, gathered at Orleans to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of Blessed Joan of Arc, offer to the Pope the homage of their devotion and their gratitude for the elevation of the Office of the Maid to the rank of second class. They petition him to place the Victrix among the saints through justice due to her virtues, for the spiritual good of France, for the honor of the Church and as another triumph of his glorious Pontificate.'

The action of the chief of gen darmes in requesting the Archbishop of Sens to remove the Papal banners which hung from this prelate's windows on the occasion of the festivals held in honor of Joan of Arc, occasioned once more a serious conflict with the Holy See. In conformity with the decree of 1894 the refusal of the Archbishop to pay any attention to the pettiness of the local little-great-man means His Grace must figure in the dock, a thing Mgr. Cheseloug will have much pleasure in doing; for while a Catholic remains in France the Papal flag, the most ancient and the noblest in Europe, will float from his dwelling and the Vatican cares not one fig whom it pleases or displeases. With similar sentiments the suppression of the Portuguese Legation is viewed in Rome. From the day those barbarities, of which the Hottentots would feel ashamed, were committed in Lisbon against Catholics and Monarchists at the nod of a parcel of Masons, the Holy See gave no countenance to the worthless body. To Papa Munio was quietly recalled to Rome, and then the matter ended. What the Holy Father thought of the later on by his scathing denunciation and repudiation of the infamous measure. The Republican Government up to last week kept on its diplomatic representation to the Holy See, but no sign of recognition was given the Charge d'Affaires at the Vatican. In fact he ceased to be received even at the audience given to the Diplomatic Corps by the Papal Secretary of State every Friday. What then had the poor man to do but to pack his luggage and clear out, seeing that he was not permitted to pass the Swiss Guards at the great Bronze Door of the Vatican?

The arrangement of the temporal affairs of the late Archbishop Stoner, Titular of Trebizond, whose death here after a residence of fifty years in the Eternal City, removed an historic figure a few months ago, will probably lead to complications. Owing to extreme old age the Archbishop, it seems, believed he possessed much more means than was actually the case. The fact is he died in debt, and the assets, which mainly consist in the furniture of his place of residence in the Via Sistina, his pectoral cross, rings and other presentations, his carriage and horses are to be sold to meet his debts. The affair is at present in the hands of the British Consul in Rome.

An Astronomer Vindicated. Two years ago an interesting paragraph went the rounds of the newspapers detailing a curious application of science in the rebuttal of certain testimonies presented in an important criminal libel in Omaha. The prisoner in the case was charged with an attempt to dynamite the home of a well known politician of the Gate

City. A suit case containing explosives had been found at the scene of the attempt at ten minutes of three on the afternoon of May 22. The young girls were put on the stand to swear they had seen the accused carrying a suit case, near the house that afternoon. They themselves were returning at the time, from a Sunday School affair held at a church about twenty minutes' walk distant from the spot. The defendant's attorney discovered a kodak picture in which the girls appeared, taken shortly before they had started for home. A certain shadow appearing in the corner of the church, before which the girl witnesses had stood when the photograph was taken, suggested to him the possibility of defining the exact instant of the exposure of the kodak's plate. Recourse was had to the Rev. William Rigge, S. J., Professor of Astronomy of Creighton University in Omaha, and by astronomical data secured from him the prisoner's lawyer proved that the picture must have been taken at exactly twenty-one and one-half minutes after three, or more than half an hour after the suit case was discovered.

Although the testimony of the young girls was the principal proof advanced of his client's guilt, the attorney failed to satisfy the jury that their evidence should be disregarded. His plea, from the picture, that they could not have seen his client, as they claimed, because they were at the church, until after the suit case had been found, was perhaps too scientific to overcome the positive assertions of the witnesses. The prisoner was convicted. An appeal, however, brought him better success. The Supreme Court of the State, after considering the argument built upon the shadow appearing in the picture, remanded the case for a rehearing, and upon its second appearance upon the docket of the lower court the Prosecuting Attorney nolleed it for lack of evidence.

Omaha newspapers of a few days ago recall the whole story. It appears that the students of Father Rigge were curious to have their professor's conclusions practically tested for the experiment, and forth with a Daily News photographer to seek the shadow on the church. They found it. Father Rigge had declared that from the shadow the first picture must have been taken at 3.21 1/2, May 22, 1910. The second picture taken at 3.21 1/2, May 22, 1912, shows exactly the same position of the sun's declination.—America.

Don't For Catholics. Don't get into the habit of being late for Mass. A moment of preparation before Mass may be the means of opening your soul to many graces.

Don't talk in church without necessity. Talk with God, whom you may not have visited, in His temple, since last Sunday, you will have plenty of time to visit your neighbor. Don't criticize the sermon, nor the manner of preaching. It is a message from God bearing some truth to you. Heed the instruction and profit by it; it has something for you to learn.

Don't leave the church until the priest has left the sanctuary. Take a moment in which to thank God for the graces of the Holy Mass.

Don't talk in the aisles going out. Remember you are in the presence of God in His Holy Sacrament. Your gossip will keep until you reach the street.

Don't forget to bend the knee as you enter and leave your seat. This is an act of adoration paid to the Real Presence. Do it with faith and reverence.

Don't fail to see the holy water font and the poor box at the church door. Take a few drops from the one with which to bless yourself; drop a penny in the other that you may help to bless the deserving poor.

AUSTRIA. Extraordinary preparations are being made for the coming Eucharistic Convention. All the many nationalities represented in the diocese will attend, and the variety of their national costumes will lend a picturesque quality to the great Eucharistic pageant such as has perhaps never been witnessed in modern times. Delegations are likewise announced from many countries, and special meetings will be held by the different national sections. The watchword has gone forth that every sermon preached and every paper published must contain a reference to the Holy Eucharist. One of the most impressive scenes will be the general Communion of the thousands of children from all parts of the empire and from every Catholic institution throughout the land.

HAD DYSPEPSIA FOR TEN YEARS

COULD NOT KEEP ANYTHING ON HER STOMACH

Dyspepsia is caused by poor digestion, and to get rid of this terrible affliction, it is necessary to place the stomach in a good condition. For this purpose Burdock Blood Bitters has no equal. Mrs. Norman A. MacLeod, Fort Berth, N.S., writes:—For the last ten years I suffered dreadfully with dyspepsia, and I could not keep anything on my stomach. I tried several kinds of medicines, but none of them seemed to do me any good. At last a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, which I did, and after using five bottles I was completely cured. I would advise any one troubled with stomach trouble to use B.B.B. I cannot recommend it too highly. Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

It seldom falls to the lot of a newly appointed judge at his first assizes to have to pronounce two death sentences. Yet such is the fortune of Judge Gervais, better known as the good looking and debonaire member of parliament for Montreal.—Ottawa Citizen.

It is stated from Ottawa that Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, will accompany the Prime Minister and Hon. Mr. Hazen to England. Hon. L. P. Pelletier will go to England at the same time, and will consult with the British authorities on postal and cable rates.

On Monday judgment was handed down by the Supreme Court of Canada, at Ottawa, in the matter of the Lancaster marriage bill, submitted to it by the Dominion Government. The judgment of the court is to the effect that the Federal Parliament has no authority to enact such legislation as the Lancaster bill calls for.

At a Conservative meeting held at Regina a few days ago, Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of the Interior, announced the purchase of forty-seven acres on the water front at the Lakes, and the construction of a government owned and operated elevator, of three million bushels capacity, before the close of navigation. This was his answer to the false statements regarding the government's course on this question.

There are still fifteen million bushels of grain in the Canadian Northwest, and it will practically take all summer to ship it out, though nearly 150,000 carloads went over the Canadian lines between September 1st and May 31st. The previous year the number of cars was slightly over eight thousand. During the last month the shipments showed an increase of 190 per cent., and it is expected that this will continue until the next crop is harvested. At this rate the Hudson Bay route will be needed long before it is ready.—Ottawa Citizen.

Hon. George E. Foster, Canada's Minister of Trade and Commerce, was the guest at luncheon last Thursday evening of the Royal Colonial Institute at the Fishmongers' Hall, the gathering including many mercantile and commercial magnates. Most of the leaders of the London-Canadian circle were present. Earl Grey presided. Mr. Foster's was the only speech. He spoke for half an hour, sketching the wonderful rise of the Dominion and the gathering was unmistakably impressed. "We have gone wrong according to Cobden's theories, but, by George, we've had results," was one of his striking phrases. Another was, "I wish somebody would bury the word emigrant. When a man leaves Britain for Canada he's simply moved." In an eloquent peroration Mr. Foster appealed for the combined wisdom and experience of all parts of the Empire to be brought together. Within the last twenty-five years the Empire had outlived its organization. "Shall we lie down and say we are unable to make an organization which shall keep this Empire one?" he exclaimed.

The unfortunate consumer seems doomed to be up against it. During the depth of the winter the cost of butter is high because the article is scarce. At this season of the year the article is most plentiful, but the price is high because the cold storage companies are planting it away to market it during the period of scarcity.—Exchange.

The nineteen years added to the sentences of the three Western desperadoes who recently attempted to escape from Kingston penitentiary should have a soothing effect on these men, who have been boasting that no Canadian penal institution could hold them says the Ottawa Citizen. Not only were their original crimes of a most serious character, but ever since they have been in captivity they have been bragging regarding the alleged inability of the authorities to hold them. The Stony Mountain penitentiary officials were so alarmed by the bragadocio of these convicts that it was decided to transfer them to Kingston for safer keeping. In order to show that it was not empty talk, these convicts attempted to pound the life out of their guards in the Toronto Union Station while on their way down, and would probably have escaped if it were not for the opportune arrival of the local police. There recent all but successful escape from Kingston is still fresh in the public mind. They beat up the guards, locked the surgeon in a cell, and marched out of the institution through the main door, disguised in the clothing they had appropriated. These prisoners evidently represented a type of criminal that needs taming and the nineteen years sentences may help some. Certainly if they make good their boast and break out of Kingston penitentiary, a laugh will be on the mouth of justice.

Birth Day Honors.

These King's birthday honors were issued in London on Thursday last. The Earl of Carrick, Field Marshal, Sir William Gustavus Nicholson, Sir Francis Allston Channing who was born in the United States, and Sir Thomas Borthwick are created barons of the United Kingdom. Carrick's earldom is Irish and the English peerage gives him a seat in the House of Lords. Among the honors are the following Canadians: K. C. M. G.—Premier Boblin of Manitoba, and Premier McBride of British Columbia. C. M. G. John McDougald of the Canadian Department of Customs, and J. M. Macconn of the Department of Mines Joseph Dubuc, late Chief Justice of Manitoba, Knight Bachelor, and William Henry Walker, Imperial Service Order.

Mackerel Shipments.

On Wednesday of last week 205 barrels of fresh mackerel were sent on ice by express to the Boston Market. Thursday there were forwarded to the same market, in the same way, 370 barrels of fresh mackerel. In these two days there were shipped by express 575 barrels of No. 1 mackerel. The shipments were made from St. John's, Tignish, Morell, and other stations along the line. It stated that one fisherman obtained $90 net as a result of one days fishing. With a car ferry enabling shippers to send their catches of fish right through our shipments of mackerel, cod and other fish, not to speak of oysters, lobsters, etc. would soon increase beyond the dreams of fisher men and shippers.

Professor Kirkpatrick, engaged by the Federal Government in connection with the Car Ferry between this Province and the mainland, is at present at Cape Tormentine, for the purpose of locating the ferry dock at that place. He will also arrange for the dock on the Island side at Carleton Point. He, assisted by two engineers, is expected to spend the greater part of the summer at these places, in connection with this work.

Sir William McKenzie has returned to Toronto from a tour of the west and announced important Canadian Northern Railway plans for the future. Improvements in the vicinity of Toronto will amount to many millions of dollars.

The Automobile Peril.

(Ottawa Citizen)

The automobile season has not been long open, but already there have been entirely too many accidents in Ottawa due to carelessness or worse. At a late hour on Monday evening a machine said to have been travelling at the rate of forty miles an hour on Sussex St., dashed into a carriage, throwing the driver out on the street, while the automobile continued on its way without any attempt to ascertain what damage had been done, and the chauffeur's identity only discovered by aid of an eye witness. Only a short time ago a driver knocked down and seriously injured an elderly lady and did the same trick, but luckily his number was noted and his apprehension secured. In this case the guilty person jumped his bail and disappeared. A few days later an automobile ran into a carriage standing at the curb and knocked over two ladies who were on the far side of it. On Monday a chauffeur was fined $50 and had his license cancelled for killing a cab horse. Apparently the police magistrate is determined to deal severely with people who thus shows disregard for the safety of the public, and especially in the case of automobilists who drive away from the scene of an accident in order to escape detection. It is a question whether joy riders who injure people and then endeavor to escape punishment by racing away, should be admitted to bail when apprehended. In doing so they place themselves beyond the pale of ordinary offenders and it is just a question whether fining has any effect on such irresponsible and reckless individuals. Accidents may happen in which the driver of the automobile is manifestly to blame but if he stands by and shows a willingness to accept the responsibility of his act and make good the damage, he is entitled to the consideration which such action deserves. But joy riders who endanger lives and property by speeding and attempt to escape the consequences by flight, should be treated no better than ordinary criminals.

Incidentally the police might show more energy in the suppression of speeding. There has been a great deal of mischief of it already this season, especially late in the evening on Sussex, Rideau, Bank and Elgin streets, and the Driveway. Yet The Citizen believes it is correct in saying that except when an accident has occurred, there has not been a single case of prosecution on the part of the police. We do not refer merely to an automobile slightly exceeding the speed limit, but cases where machines are running at from thirty to forty miles an hour. Where and difference of opinion exists as to whether an automobile is exceeding the low speed limit or not, the case is not worth prosecuting, but there can be no difference of opinion if a machine is obviously running forty miles an hour when it should be only going ten, and such cases are comparatively common on any of the thoroughfares mentioned, during the later hours of almost every evening in the week.

Possibilities of the Wireless

Often the most commonplace news despatches mark the mile posts of achievement. Wireless telegraphy has been the means of saving many lives at sea, but it is not generally known that there shortly will be begun a transatlantic commercial service which will cut down both time and cost of transmission. It is announced in London that from now on messages may be placed at all telegraph offices in the United Kingdom addressed to points in Canada and the United States, and that these messages, if desired, will be transmitted by wireless. Aerograms may be sent from points in England to Montreal or New York at a rate of eight pence a word. The charge for cablegrams at present is a shilling a word. There is a corresponding reduction on deferred messages.

And now Nikola Tesla, the inventor makes a statement, quoted by the Indianapolis News, that great as has been the advance the world has made in the last century even greater changes are imminent. The greatest of these is the annihilation of distance, and this he says, is to be accomplished by wireless. "Annihilate distance in thought and action and you will give unbounded opportunities," Tesla declares, "to the economic healthful and peaceful development of mankind. This annihilation of distance will be brought about by the transmission of energy without wires." Tesla believes the first step is a world-wide and visualizing telephone, whereby not only the voice is heard, but the face of the speaker is brought within focus. The next is the transportation of bodies and materials in flying machines operated from wireless plants. And then will come the introduction of wireless power for all necessities.

It is an immense prophecy, but is it a dream? In the light of the past, no. Not a school boy but is familiar with the story of the first Morse telegram, and yet that was transmitted only half a century ago. Since then man has shaken off many of his ancestral limitations. And the end is not yet. St. John Standard.

Reciprocity in Licenses.

If a Canadian automobile is taken into the United States the owner has the privilege of touring in that country for thirty days without having to take out an American license. In the same way American cars coming into Canada are accorded a similar privilege. But if a car from Ontario goes into Quebec or a Quebec car comes into Ontario, new licenses have to be taken out and new numbers placed on the car. In other words Ontario and Quebec treat each other as if they were foreign countries, and even worse than if they were foreign countries, because the cars from every province can tour to the United States for thirty days without license.

As a matter of fact, the interprovincial licensing of motor cars chiefly affects Ottawa and Hull, as there are no other cities, or even large towns, near the border, especially on the Quebec side; and the autos of Montreal are practically debarraded from this province by bad roads. But while the province of Quebec is preparing to reciprocate with Ontario in the matter of the recognition of automobile licenses, the Ontario government has not yet met the proposition of Quebec. The Ontario automobilists have by far the most to gain by an agreement of reciprocity, because there are probably twenty Ontario cars going into Quebec for one Quebec car that comes into Ontario. The Ontario government might well take the matter into its immediate consideration.—Ottawa Citizen.

Intermaritime Shooting.

The Intermaritime Rifle match at Bedford Range Halifax, on Friday last, was won by Nova Scotia, with P. E. Island second and New Brunswick far behind.

The conditions for shooting were very unfavorable, a drizzling rain and heavy showers making it very unpleasant for the riflemen.

The scores were as follows.—

His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught, is expected to reach the Island on July 27th.

There is some talk of Charlottetown having a visit from Tom Longboat, the celebrated Indian runner, and that a race between him and Cameron, the famous Amherst sprinter, would be put on.

Fifty-nine field laborers were burned to death early on the 17th while sleeping in a barn near Tombove, Central Russia, on a property belonging to Count Orlyff Daydoff. The cause of the outbreak is not known.

Lieutenant Leighton W. Hazelhurst of the 17th Infantry, U. S. A., of Macon, Ga., and Al Welch of Washington, D. C., were killed at College Park, Maryland, on the 11th, when a new Army Aeroplane of the Wright type in which they were flying fell to the ground at the Army Aviation School and was wrecked.

Oscar Stone, a Gray, Ind. teamster, was saved from death when his mules kicked him to a safe place after they had come in contact with a live wire. Stone was driving the animals when the wire touched them. They reared and kicked back as the wire fell. Had the wire struck Stone he probably would have been killed.

On Saturday last, his birthday, Mr. M. J. Moran, senior clerk in the Customs, was presented with a beautifully engraved gold headed cane and a congratulatory address by his fellow officers. Mr. Moran has completed some twenty-seven years service. He was lately promoted to his present position, and the cane speaks volumes for his many good qualities.—Congratulations.

Max Pam, of Chicago, a wealthy Jewish lawyer, has given $25,000 to the Catholic University of America. In a letter to Cardinal Gibbons he enclosed a cheque for $5,000, and said he would give $5,000 annually for the next four years to provide scholarships at the Catholic University, provided that aspirants took up social and economic problems. "False leadership," he writes, "is the chief menace to our nation. To avert it we must have men of learning and integrity."

Harry Naughton, a Toledo boy, was found a stowaway in a lifeboat aboard the steamer Finland shortly after she sailed from New York the other day with the American Olympic team and was allowed to stay on board after H. Thompson, President of the Olympic Committee, had paid his fare. He was not discovered until the Finland had passed Sandy Hook. The boy said he rode on the trucks of the Twentieth Century Limited from Toledo to New York and stole aboard the Finland that morning unnoticed in the throng which came to see the Athletes off.

A shot fired in a gang mottally wounded an innocent bystander in New York on Friday last, Herman Fisher, a Brooklyn real estate dealer. He was standing at a street corner on the East side when three men approached. At the same time three other men approached in an opposite direction, and one of them pulled a revolver and fired a shot. Then all the men made off. Fisher was hit in the breast and fell unconscious. Half a dozen policemen ran up but were unable to get any trace of the men. When he revived, Fisher mumbled, "They didn't mean to hit me."

Tragedies of the Sea.

One of the unreported tragedies of the sea has just come to notice in Germany in the mysterious disappearance of the Hamburg trans Atlantic freighter "Mount Oswald." The steamship left Baltimore on February 17 with a heavy cargo of merchandise, and was due in Hamburg the first week in March. She has never been heard of since her departure from Baltimore. Weeks elapsed before the owners could be persuaded that she was lost but a few weeks ago the consignees of the cargo were officially informed that the insurance companies which were responsible for amounts aggregating $100,000 were now ready to pay the total due on the policies. Where and how the Mount Oswald disappeared is a profound mystery. She was a first class cargo boat of 5,000 to 6,000 and carried a crew of forty or fifty men.

Protesting a Seizure.

A despatch from Victoria, B. C., announces that the Seattle chamber of commerce has applied to Washington for a United States revenue cutter to patrol the international boundary along the Strait of Juan de Fuca. This is a matter of some importance. The bill of the Seattle chamber of commerce has the nerve to point out that the American fishing fleet in those waters is twenty times the size of the Canadian fishing fleet, and that the latter is composed almost entirely of chartered American vessels, yet "the Canadian government maintains in its fisheries protection service in British Columbia waters four vessels."

At the last session of parliament much interesting light was thrown on the fisheries situation at that point, as it was administered under the late government. It is no doubt true that there are twenty American vessels to one Canadian fishing in that vicinity, and the explanation is that the late Laurier governments allowed American vessels to poach at will in Canadian waters, yet "the Canadian government maintains in its fisheries protection service in British Columbia waters four vessels."

opened to capture an American poaching vessel red-handed, by some enterprising party of local politicians the vessel was released. Since the Borden government has been in power a new order of things has been established and the Canadian fisheries in British Columbia waters are being protected. Hence the indignation in Seattle.—Ottawa Citizen.

Mrs. Julia Clow, an aviator, was killed during a flight at the State Fair grounds, Springfield, Ill., by the wing of her biplane striking a tree.

The Hillsboro, N. B., Journal says: While at work in his garden some days ago Mr. G. G. Steeves made the discovery that a number of the smooth breasted hawks had started on devastating his trees. This is said to be the first visit of this terrible pest to that part of the province.

A Conservative estimate of the Spring wheat crop of this year, given by Mr. James Carriethers, the grain dealer, city, is 250,000,000 bushels. Last year's crop was in the neighborhood of 180,000,000 bushels, so that it will be seen that unless unforeseen conditions arise, the country will this year be richer by the value of 70,000,000 bushels of wheat.

Mistaking Chatham, Mass., light for Pollock Rip light, the British three masted schooner Kaimia crossed the outer bar and fetched up high and dry on the inner harbor last Sunday night. She is probably a total wreck. Her crew were able to walk ashore at low tide. The Kaimia is owned in Sydney, N. B., and was bound from Gaspe, P. E., to Vineyard Haven with shingles. She was built 24 years ago.

The All Canadian Route To Montreal.

Via the Intercolonial Railway Maritime Express is the only All Canadian Route to Quebec and Montreal from the Maritime provinces. The Maritime Express is generally admitted by experienced travellers to be the most comfortable train in America. This is especially true in regard to the dining and sleeping car services. The diners of the I. C. R. are roomy and well ventilated and furnished in the best of taste. The most excellent meals are served. Table d'hote at a price away below the a la carte rates prevailing on the company owned lines. The sleeping coaches are up to date in every particular, and the smoothness of the road bed makes the long journey easy and pleasant. Being popular with a class of travellers who are generally found to be the some of good company, the through journey is never found dull, and even during the winter months there is much of scenic interest in the Bay's ride through the Province of Quebec. Montreal is reached at the convenient hour of 6.30 p. m. and connections are made at Bonaventure Union Station with the through trains of the Grand Trunk Railway for Toronto, Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago and other points in Western Canada and the United States. Connecting train for the Maritime leaves Pictou at 14.20.—tf.

A VILLAGE TRAGEDY.

(By Gerard A. Reynolds.)

(Concluded.)

One night, in some small town over there on the Loire, he came back late to the lines of his regiment, with some comrades who had spent the evening at a cafe, where the good citizens were foolishly hospitable. He had taken a little too much though he was not exactly drunk. The sergeant of the guard, an old veteran gave him a bit of his mind in rough soldier phrase, and Pierre answered him back. 'Arrest that scamp!' said the sergeant. 'Scamp yourself, don't dare to touch me!' was Pierre's retort. If the sergeant had been a wiser man, he would have let him pass and simply reported him but the old soldier sergeant thought the volunteers must be kept in their place. He strode toward Pierre to disarm and arrest him, in a moment he was lying on his back; for Pierre's clenched fist had caught him between the eyes, and he went down with blood on his face. He was up in a moment, and roared to his mind to arrest Pierre; but the volunteer had put his back against a wall and drew his bayonet, and swore he would run through any man that came within his reach. But they were too many for him. While some came on with fixed bayonets and another slipped in at the side, shot his clubbed rifle and knocked Pierre down with the butt. At first they thought he was dead; but he had a hard head, and he soon came to. Then his case was hopeless. He was handed over to the military gendarmes, and told he would be tried next day.

There could be only one end to such a trial. Military law was sternly executed in the army of the Loire, and for his crime, armed resistance to arrest and violence to a superior officer—there was only one possible sentence. He was tried next morning. He faced the firing party as sunrise on the following day. His comrades formed in three sides of a hollow square, looked on. There were none from any where near here to tell of the tragedy. Only his lieutenant knew his story; and he brought a priest to him, and poor Pierre made a good end. Who knows but that it was a better death than he would have died if he had lived longer.

He wrote to his mother a letter full of regrets and protestations of affection; but he wrote in it that he was condemned to die. So the cure burned it, and only told her that he had sent her a message of devoted affection before he died. He could add truly that he died bravely; for Pierre faced the leveled rifles unflinchingly. And he could say, too, that he died for France; for the example of that military execution helped to rivet the bonds of discipline. If the poor woman had known all the truth, it would have broken her heart.

Monsieur le Baron gave her a pension. Our good villagers, naturally knowing nothing of the facts, worked up a legend. Pierre Gondal, they said had fallen bravely, fighting against a host of Prussians on the outpost line. They insisted on putting up the monument in the church. The Baron de Servigny modified the inscription they proposed, as to keep within the bounds of truth. Old Mere Gondal comes there day after day. She is past work now, and she dreams and prays beside the altar, waiting till her day comes, and she will see her son again; for we may hope it is well with him.

Itching Skin

Distress by day and night—That's the complaint of those who are so unfortunate as to be afflicted with Eczema or Salt Rheum—and outward applications do not cure. They can't.

The source of the trouble is in the blood—make that pure and this scaling, burning, itching skin disease will disappear. I was taken with an itching on my arms which proved very disagreeable. I consulted it was salt rheum and bought a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla. In two days it was not long before I was cured. Have never had any skin disease since. Mrs. H. W. WARD, Cove Point, Md.

Barbara's Opportunity.

Barbara sighed as she set the crock of cream on the cellar shelf. 'No opportunities,' she whispered; 'no inspiration, no changes, just the same old things, day after day. I don't see why Providence sent me down on a Western ranch, so far from everybody, giving me no open door. Here I am, young strong fairly looking to a hundred things, and here—I must do nothing. I can't leave father, I wouldn't do that but, oh, how I long for a wider outlook. Instead I must live in a place miles away from any of them.'

She sighed again, then mounting the stairs, went up into the kitchen. It was such a pleasant kitchen, too. Most housewives would have rejoiced in it. The sun came in at the wide, clean windows, without anything to hinder it. Broad fields stretched to the south and east, and back of the house to the west circled the mountains.

Barbara was a tall girl of eighteen now, with abundant braids of brown hair and clear, youthful coloring. Such a capital girl as she was, too. She was all her father had, and, of course, she wouldn't leave him; but girl-like she wanted to do a hundred things afar off. She did not see the opportunities at her own door. And then as it was nearing dinner time, she forgot her longings in a round of very necessary, healthful work.

Father was in a way, prosperous, and the ranchhouse had many almost luxuries. A telephone, some very pretty furniture, a fine piano, and a good many of the best books. There were fine pictures, too, for father was as good a hand to select a good engraving, or a water color, as he was to raise cattle.

Barbara too, had her horse to ride, a brood of fancy chickens, that were both a pleasure and a profit to her, and her particular hobby, beautifully upholstered, to drive about in. She ought to have been the happiest of girls and was, most of the time. But of late, she had gotten it into her head that she wanted to go to the city and do things. She wanted to be of service to some one and she imagined that on a ranch there was no opportunity.

At that moment, as she turned from the oven, into which she had just deposited an apple pie, she heard the sound of wheels, and looked up, Barbara caught a glimpse, through the window, of two people, young people they were, too, a young man and a young woman.

'I wonder what they want?' she thought, and then she went to the door. 'Could we come in and rest just a moment?' said the sweetest voice Barbara thought she had ever heard, Barbara gave a ready glad consent.

The young woman, she was scarcely more than a girl, slight of first, and Barbara noticed at once what a nice face she had, large brown eyes, a sweet mouth, and such lovely sorrowful smiles. And then Barbara saw that the young man with her looked very ill, indeed. He was thin to emaciation, and sagged as he tried to walk.

Barbara led them into her pleasant living room, and bade them rest, and then it was but a few minutes until the young wife, for Barbara found out that they were newly married, was telling her her story.

The young husband had left his hometown to come to the city with his young wife. 'He fell there were no opportunities there, she went on, and Barbara winced. 'Was not that just what she had been thinking in regard to herself?'

He found employment in one of the big department stores and, not being used to the confinement, bad air, and long hours, he fell sick. The little money they had been able to save soon went for doctor bills, and the nourishing things he must have. 'But,' added the young wife, sorrowfully, 'we couldn't get nourishing things—at least I could not. The milk was very poor, and we couldn't find any fresh eggs, and so, she concluded. 'I borrowed this horse and buggy from a man who has been so kind to us. What I want is to get Riger out on some-ranch, and let him live out of doors. If he does this, I am sure he will get well. If he doesn't, the tears welled up in the lovely eyes, and she left the sentence unfinished. There was a pause, the young woman broke in, 'If I could just get into some nice family, where I could help with the work,' she added.

Barbara's heart bounded. 'Was not this one of the opportunities she had just been longing for? Both so young, too. Why, thought capable, practical Barbara, they're nothing but two babies in the woods. What is going to become of them?'

At that moment, father came in, and he heard the story too. To one of the intervals of dinner getting, Barbara contrived to get him to one side.

'Father,' she cried, 'can't we take them in?'

There is that little horse near the barn that is stored full of old harness and things we don't need. It has two good rooms. They could have that, and she could help me. Father I've been wanting all morning to do something for somebody else. Here is one opportunity. You'll help me, won't you?'

Father kissed her. 'I think it could be managed dear,' he said, 'if you really want to help them. He looks very ill, but good air and sunshine will do wonders. As for her, she is evidently a lady, every inch of her. I feel very sorry for them both. Ask them to dinner, Barbara, and we'll see about it.'

And they did see about it, and so quickly that the very next day Barbara had every thing taken out of the windows herself, and such a good time as she had doing it, too. No one could take a greater interest in that little horse than she did. What trips she made back and forth, singing in her fresh young voice: 'Let the Sunshine In,' and 'When Morning Gilds the Skies.'

She put up the white curtains herself at the shining windows, took a rug from one of the upstairs rooms in the house, robbed her own pretty nest of its easiest chair.

Father put up a couple of shelves in the room that was to be used as a kitchen, and Barbara covered them neatly with crotones. She brought cream from her own stores, butter, fresh eggs cooked a chicken, and made bread and put on them, finishing up with a neat little array of jellies and preserves. And when the wagon finally deposited the two young people at her door again, Barbara ran to meet them, a smile on her face. If she could only have known what that smile meant to the troubled young wife, I don't think Barbara would ever have complained of her lack of opportunity of helping anyone again. It seemed to lift a mountain from that young hardened heart, bidding her to get good cheer.

Barbara led them straight to the little house she had made ready for them. When the young wife saw the white curtains and the soft rug, and the easy chair, and the room beyond, all ready to go to housekeeping, she could scarcely keep back the tears.

'It's just beautiful,' was all she could say, and Barbara never received any thanks she liked so well. The young husband was so weary, and when he was quietly resting, the young wife went into the house where Barbara was waiting for her.

She was but a girl, herself, and the only thing she could do was to pat her arms about Barbara and cry. Barbara patted her on the shoulder. 'You do think Edgar will get well, don't you?' she said brokenly at last.

'Yes,' Barbara's voice was infinitely comforting. 'I think he will, and you are not to worry about things. We intend to look after you.'

The young wife looked at her through shining tears. 'You're the sweetest girl I ever met,' she said, 'and the most fortunate.'

Barbara looked at her rather queerly. 'Do you know it is only a short time since I was lamenting the fact that I had no opportunities here—of doing good I mean.'

'The young woman's eyes widened. 'But you don't think so, now, she answered, 'after what you have done for us.'

Barbara smiled again. 'No. I don't think so any more,' she answered, almost solemnly.

WAS TROUBLED WITH HIS HEART HAD TO GIVE UP WORK

Mr. Alfred Male, Elmda, Ont., writes: 'I was troubled with my heart for two or three years. I thought sometimes that I would die. I went to the doctor, and he said he could not do anything for me. I had to give up work. My wife persuaded me to try Millburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. The first box relieved me, so I kept on until I had taken seven boxes, and they cured me. I would not be without them on any account, as they are worth their weight in gold. I advise my friends and neighbors who are troubled with heart or nerve trouble to try them.'
