"KYRA,"

OR,
The Ward of the Earl of Vering.

CHAPTER XXIII.
A Lovesick Swain.

"You are a most extraordinary girl, my love!" exclaimed Lillian Devigne, with a charming little laugh of admiring surprise.

The scene was the drawing-room at Queen's Gate—a room as sweetly beautiful and bewitching as Lillian Devigne, the speaker, herself; the person addressed was Kyra, there on an afternoon visit, out for a holiday from Minerva House, and looking more like the goddess chaste Diana, than a schoolgirl, in her slim, white facey, with its dark red rose, and her black, richly gleaming hair close to her shapely head.

"Most extraordinary, my dear Kyra!"

"Am I?" was the doubtful response. "Am I? Why do you say so?" and she looked at the fair face, so great a contrast to her own, with grave interest.

"My dear child, because I cannot help it. Did ever any girl make such an absurd reply to so genuine a question? I ask you if you consider your constant friend Charles Merivale handsome, and you reply that you do not know—that you never thought about it? And that with so genuine a lack of interest that is ludicrously astounding."

"Well, I have never thought about it," confessed Kyra, smiling in spite of herself, and pouring some fresh water from a dainty ewer into a still daintier flower stand.

Lillian Devigne sank into a chair close behind her, and drew a fancy card basket near her with an air of playful earnestness, that artfully masked her real interest.

"Now, how sweetly you said that, and yet how cruelly. Do you know, Kyra, I should not love you half so much if you were not such a puzzle to me. You are so strangely unlike all other girls of your age; so exasperatingly candid; so fearfully free from even a proper vanity that—there, I can't go on if you look at me with those great, grave eyes. Look at your flowers, my dear child, I beseech you."

Kyra turned her eyes away with a little, low laugh.

"Am I so strange, and strange only

Nerves Were So Upset Could Not Endure Noise

Neuralgic Headaches and Extreme Nervousness Caused Keenest Suffering—
Lasting Cure by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Once the nervous system gets run down everything seems to tend to make it worse. You worry over your condition, are unable to get the required rest and sleep, noises excite and irritate you and the future is most discouraging.

The nervous system does not get the proper nourishment from the food you eat, so you must have something also to lift you out of the run-down condition. You may find that your experience coincides with the writer of this letter and be encouraged to put Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to the test.

You will make no mistake in employing this food cure, for, acting as it does hand in hand with Nature, it is bound to do you good.

Mrs. Jas. Jensen, Gwynne, Alta., writes: "About ten years ago I was troubled with severe attacks of neuralgia and nervousness, and was for by being what you say? I cannot help it. You must teach me to be more like other girls."

Lillian Devigne flushed alightly at this unconscious thrust, but hid her momentary embarrassment by turning over of the cards in the basket with a laugh.

"Mr. Charles Merivale," Mr. Charles Merivale, "Mr. Charles Merivale! There are a score of them; he must have called every day, twice a day for the last month. And whom does he come to see?"

"You, I suppose," said Kyra, quietly; or Lady Devigne, perhaps."

"Oh, yes, of course, mamma. I forgot mamma," laughed Lillian Devigne with gay irony. "Of course! How flattered mamma would be! I will tell her. Oh, Kyra, Kyra, as if you did not know, you wicked girl, that the young Apollo—that's the name they give him at the club, my dear, because of his handsome face and golden head; I did not give him the name —as if you did not know that this curly-headed young lady-killer came to see a certain friend of mine, who pays me too short a visit now and then from her prison at Kensington!"

"Do you mean that he comes to see me?" asked Kyra, with the calmest air of innocence. "Do you really think he does, Miss Devigne?"

"Ah!" broke in Lillian, putting her hand to her ears. "Never that, if you love me! Why, child, you might have been brought up at a convent! Kyra, do you love me?"

"I do love you," said Kyra, as quietly as before, "so I will call you Lillian. Do you mean that he comes to see me? Is it not very kind? Why do you smile so? I think it is very kind. I will go and see him some day."

Lillian Devigne broke out in a silly laugh, and stopped her innocent companion with a flutter of a fan.

"Kyra, my love, you are incorrigible. The whitest young nun from a convent cloister is a monster of guile compared with you. You are like a child to whom we have to teach the alphabet—the alphabet of love."

And, now, you look as if you were listening to a lecture on geometry! But seriously, does Lord Percy know how often Charlie Merivale 'drops in' here, as he calls it?"

Kyra shook her head.

"I am sure I do not know. He would be very glad, for he likes Charlie very much; he is his cousin, you know, and they live together in the same house."

"My dear love," broke in Lillian Devigne, so softly that there was a suspicion of acidity in the interruption. "I know all about them—I knew all about them before you dropped from the clouds on to the scene; they are younger and elder brothers—inseparable, devoted; and, of course, Lord Percy knows and is pleased by his cousin's attention. Why, did not he send him to take you back to school one day? And does he not use him as a sort of Newfoundland dog to carry messages? Of course he knows —or do you think I would countenance the continual 'dropping in,' my dear love? I was only testing the depth of your sweet guilelessness and I find that it is, like the fairy well, fathomless."

Then, as Kyra smiled with a doubtful air, as if scarcely comprehending her dear monitor and friend's meaning, Lillian Devigne looked out of the window.

"And here, to carry out the old adage, comes the angel of whom we have been talking. Hark! that is the rustle of his wings!" she said, laugh-

Local Druggists Repair What Famous Surgeons Cannot Touch

Shattered nerves are beyond the reach of the Surgeon's knife. What will repair them? Dozens of people right here in your home town will bear testimony to this fact that Zoetic—the health tonic—has set them on their feet again. This famous combination of glycer-phosphates—the actual element of the human body—Cod Liver Oil and delicious tonic wine, supply the very elements that worn out nerves require. In a quiet way the action of Zoetic is truly marvellous. Without a trace of narcotic it induces sound sleep. And following that, better and better digestion. And following that a final and complete rebuilding of the nervous system drained of vitality. Two weeks' faithful use of it will convince you. Because you have been so often misled, expecting much and receiving little, we offer outright to refund the purchase price of Zoetic if at the end of two weeks you cannot report real progress toward better health. ing, as the scraping of a pair of wheels was heard, and the usual inquiry, answered in the affirmative, followed at the front door.

In another minute the angel himself appeared at the drawing-room door, and really went very near to earning the title, as it might be regarded from a sensitive young lady's view.

For Charlie, the Eton boy, had developed into a handsome and elegant young man of fashion, with a face so greatly admired that it had earned him the nickname of Apollo, as aforesaid—with a figure fully developed by an Oxford course of athletics, so faultlessly attired as to be the pattern and the envy of three-fourths of the junior clubs—and with all that grave, winning candor and British honesty and modesty that go to make that not-to-be-depised article of home manufacture, a young English gentleman.

He had done great things at Oxford—passed his "little go," won a sculling match, and carried off a cup at the university sports; and he was now home for what he and his young friends called "a fling."

Lillian Devigne glanced archly at her companion as she rose to greet the young Adonis; but his glance was lost on Kyra, who came forward without the slightest sign of embarrassment, or any feeling beyond simple pleasure.

"I was passing," said Charlie, dropping, after the usual exchange of salutations, into a velvet chair, and stretching his strong, muscular limbs with a sense of luxury delightful to his undergraduate mind—"I was passing, and thought I'd drop in. Hope you're not busy, Miss Devigne."

Lillian Devigne smiled at him graciously, for he could not come too often for her plans.

"Yes, fearfully, and so is Kyra. "You don't look it," he retorted. "This room is always cool and fresh—it is sweltering hot outside—"

"Certainly," said Lillian Devigne. "Will you ring for it?"

Charlie looked askance.

"For the cooling daught," laughed Lillian Devigne. "Oh! you are not the first Oxford man I have known; do I not remember how Norman Pacewell used to grumble because they would not give him soda water and brandy in the drawing-room? No, don't look so guilty—and, Kyra, dear, you mustn't kill him by smiling. You may have it," and she rang the bell for him.

"Well," said Charlie, "I won't be so foolish as to refuse; but it's very kind of you, Miss Devigne. You always are kind, and that's why a fellow likes dropping in—thanks."

This to the servant who brought him the soda and brandy in a silver tankard.

"And how is Lord Percy?" asked Lillian Devigne, now hard at work at her embroidery.

"Percy is quite well," replied Charlie. "Said that he would call here this afternoon; has he been here yet?"

Lillian Devigne shook her head; Kyra, listening intently, paused in her work of trimming a rose.

"Ah, then he will be here, be sure. Percy never breaks his word. Poor fellow! he looked bored to death this morning. Been shut up with the lawyer all the morning, and that is as bad as roasting coffee this weather."

"That reminds me that Lord Vering will very likely come in to five o'clock tea," said Lillian Devigne, "and will like his coffee burnt. I will leave you for a minute or two. Kyra, give him some more brandy and soda, or take him into the garden if he grows restless. You'll stay to tea, Mr. Merivale?" she added, as she left the room.

Charlie looked after her, then put down his tankard, and crossed over to where Kyra stood.

"You and Miss Devigne are fast friends now?" he said.

"Yes," said Kyra, "she is so kind as to have me here whenever I can come."

Charlie nodded.

"There's nothing very kind in that," he said; "but she is kind, all the same. Who would think she'd let a soda and brandy show its head in this little fairy place! And then she lets me smoke a cigarette in the garden."

"And you want to know!" said Kyra, with a naive smile.

He laughed, and returned her gaze with frank admiration and affection.

"What a girl you are, Kyra!" he said, admiringly. "You read me like a book, and—will you really though?" for Kyra had taken up a dainty little hat and made for the garden door as a sign that she would accompany him.

Charlie lit his cigarette, and the two walked round the small but beautiful garden for a few minutes in silence.

"Yes, this is better than a club to drop in at, Kyra, especially when you are here," he said, with a little sigh.

Kyra looked at him.

"Do you come to see me?" she said, looking at him.

Charlie looked back and nodded.

"Yes, of course, I do. I dare say I come too often. Perhaps they," and he moved his cigarette slightly toward the house, "say I do. Perhaps you think I do?"

"No!" said Kyra. "I am always glad to see you!"

She said it so calmly, with so genuine an air of friendship, that the young man eyed her curiously, and puffed away in silence for a moment.

"Yes, I believe you are. I believe you really like me, Kyra."

Kyra nodded.

"And you know I like you," he went on, biting his cigarette; "in fact, I thought a little while ago that—how straight you look at me, Kyra!—that I liked you too well."

"Too well?" she repeated, her dark eyebrows raised slightly, and her exquisite eyes wide open.

Charlie's handsome face flushed slightly.

"Yes, too well! You are so beautiful that it is little wonder a fellow gets out of his depth at first 'sigh,' and feels that he is hit."

"Hit?" echoed Kyra, two little wrinkles showing across her forehead.

"Yes," he nodded. "Why Kyra, you are so—so innocent, so different from other women," he faltered. "Don't you know what love is?"

She hesitated a moment, then stopped to pick a camellia in the path.

"Yes, I have read of it. Do you mean that you thought you loved me?"

Staggered for a moment by her sweet, innocent serenity, he was silent for a moment.

"Yes," he said, "that is what I meant, and what would have happened, for who, being with you long, could help loving you—you so beautiful, so—so pure and good."

He blushed like a girl, worse than Kyra did herself.

She looked aside a moment, then regarded him with a dreamy intentness.

"You say that?" she said, then sighed.

Charlie nodded his head emphatically.

And the crowd in the aisle tramps
merriily
Over my aching feet.
I saw the harassed conductor
Trying to get his fares
And the words his lips were saying
Were certainly not his prayers.
How often! Oh how often!
In the years that have passed away
Have I hung on a strap and grumbled
Because I had got to pay.

How often! Oh how often!
Have I wished it were in my power
To make the "Company" stand there
And hang on the strap by the hour.
And I thought how many thousand
Of bundle encumbered men
Each bearing his own kind of microbe
Had hung on the strap before then.
For my heart was full of anger
And my arms were full of bags
And my temper, once so placid
Was literally worn to rags.

But now my troubles are over.
They are buried as deep as the sea.
I ride back and forth in a jitney
And no more street cars for me.

Germany's Bravest Man

He Dares to Tell the Huns the Truth.
To mention the name of Herr Liebknecht among Germans is to bring down every kind of abuse on the head of the politician who has been described as the "bravest man in Germany." Liebknecht is a Socialist, and has always been an implacable foe of Prussian militarism, against the dominance of which we are now fighting. Although he may not have a single supporter in the Reichstag—the German Parliament—he never hesitates to trounce the system which is bringing ruin to his country. He has been shouted down and assailed in the Reichstag, and shot at in the streets of Berlin.

Nothing, however, daunts Liebknecht, for he comes of fighting stock. His father, Wilhelm Liebknecht, fought for Babel, the famous Socialist, almost precisely the same battle, during and after the Franco-Prussian War of 1870, and was sentenced to two years' imprisonment in a fortress for "treasonable intentions." Herr Liebknecht himself suffered confinement for eighteen months in a fortress for refusing to stop what were regarded as "seditions" speeches. His imprisonment merely resulted in his being returned at the elections of 1903 to the Prussian Landtag, one of the Parliaments of the countries constituting the German Empire.
A still greater sensation was to come when, in 1912, he was elected to the Reichstag actually for the Prussian Royal borough, the Potsdam constituency, where the Court and military naturally constituted the greatest social forces.

An excellent speaker, with a temperament full of enthusiasm and fire, highly educated and well read, Liebknecht soon became a leader among Socialists. Although the Socialist Parliamentary group has expelled him from its supine ranks meantime, there is no doubt that Liebknecht has a tremendous following of sympathizers. These are growing stronger every day as the people recognize what he has insisted on telling them time after time, viz. that Germany is waging not a defensive but an offensive war, and that all the misery which has been brought to the country is the outcome of Prussian aggrandizement.
It is interesting to note that Liebknecht, like his father, is a passionate internationalist, and three years ago he visited Paris, London, and Brussels, holding forth on the necessity of combating the machinations of militarists in every country and of preserving the world's peace.

Terrible Accident

MAN KILLED BY FALLING FROM ALOFT TO VESSELS DECK.

The Lunenburg banking schooner Annie L. Spindler crept into port last evening with flag flying at half-mast, indicating that a member of the crew had lost his life. Dr. Campbell, Quarantine Officer, and the Customs men boarded the vessel immediately she dropped anchor in the stream and learned that the dead body of one of the crew, a young man named Harold J. Ritcey was on board, he having met his death as a result of falling from aloft. The physician examined the body and pronounced that the spinal cord at the back of the neck snapped when the deceased struck the deck, he sustained besides a fractured skull.

Not long since the Annie L. Spindler, which was codfishing on the Grand Banks, landed her first catch, a full load, at the home port and left on her second trip, first going to Aquaforte for a caplin baiting. On Monday last banker Ritcey went up to reef a stay sail halyard. This he did alrigh and left to come down on the halyard ropes which were wet and slippery and started to burn Ritcey's hands. When about midway, owing to the turning sensation in his hands, he unconsciously loosened his hold of the ropes and fell violently to the deck, a distance of fully twenty feet. He landed on his back and was picked up in an apparently lifeless condition. All possible was done for him on board the vessel, but it could be seen at the outset by his fellow shipmates that his injuries were of such a serious nature that recovery was impossible. The poor fellow only lived 12 hours, as he passed away on Tuesday morning, without having regained consciousness. The circumstance is rendered all the more sad by the fact that the father of the deceased seaman was a member of the crew and witnessed the dying moments of his son. Deceased was 34 years old and a native of Riverport, N.S.

Immediately on arrival here yesterday the corpse was taken in charge by Undertaker Carnell, who had it brought ashore, embalmed and coffined. It will be sent to the late home of the deceased accompanied by his father.

The sad happening has cast a gloom over the Annie L. Spindler as seaman Ritcey was well liked and a general favorite on board.

BOWINGS' SHIPS.—The Prospero left King's Cove at 7.20 a.m. to-day, going north. The Portia left H. Breton at 9 a.m. to-day.

CHANGED HANDS.—The negotiations, which had been going on for some time for the purchase of the Puma and Lynx, have come to a head and both vessels left here together at 5 o'clock last evening en route to Glasgow. They will be used for foreign service.

PROMOTED TO SERGEANT.—Mr. Robert French, of Harbor Grace, received a message from his son Alex., from London, where he is evidently enjoying a few days respite from the firing line. "Sandy" has received the third stripe since his last letter, and has been in all the fighting going on lately around Ypres. He is enjoying good health.

Register Your Vote.
 We urge every citizen possessed of the privilege of a vote to exercise it straightway, if he has not already done so. He will have until 8 p.m. It is above all things desirable that the vote cast be a large one and the result truly indicative of the predominant opinion of the community. No previous Municipal contest has been of like importance. We stand, undeniably, at the parting of the ways: let every citizen realize it, sink all personal feeling and be governed in his voting by one consideration alone, the welfare of the city he lives in. If he will do this, we have no misgivings as to the result.
 So descends the curtain upon the "Commission," who have acted their part and acted it well: henceforth they are, as a Commission, no more. Whether, when it rises again, they are still in possession of the stage, or are replaced by others, our applause for their past performances will be the same. They have given us a lesson in citizenship which we will do well to lay to heart. Their work will endure for long. If they have done nothing else (and they have done a great deal), they have laid the foundation of a better state of things. It is for us to build upon it. It we reject with both hands what is really a golden opportunity, we shall have only ourselves to blame. But however that may be, we should at least recognize the value of the services the Commissioners have rendered us, voluntarily, efficiently and zealously. We know we speak for the great body of the community when we thank these gentlemen heartily, one and all.
 So much for retrospect: we have now to face the future. Whoever our chosen seven may be, let us give them our support and sympathy. Let our attitude be as far as possible, not as it has been so often in the past, one of criticism, but rather one of appreciation. We are too apt to regard all forms of government, legislative, municipal, educational or as it may be, as bodies quite detached from ourselves, and to look on coolly while they attempt the impossible. We forget they are our chosen representatives, who should work not merely for us but with us. Councils have at least one divine attribute—they will help those who help themselves. Unfortunately, we are not wont to show much zeal in helping ourselves. To take one instance, very pertinent to the present discussions on civic affairs—no council on earth will succeed in making our streets presentable as long as we are content to leave it entirely to them to do so. There is not another city in the world, at any rate that we have seen, that does not compare favourably with our own in this respect. Why? Simply because its citizens will not, council or no council, tolerate dirt and disorder in front of their doors and in their environment. If every one of our citizens would adopt this attitude, and would take pride in seeing his own street front neater and cleaner than his neighbour's, his own street neater and cleaner than the next one; if he would use his wheelbarrow to help the Council, instead of his eloquence to abuse it, we should soon see more improvement effected than a dozen Councils could compass. So too even with sanitation. It should not be necessary, as it is in so many instances, to enforce the installation of sewerage: if our poorer citizens had a proper understanding of its value, want of means would not so often be the excuse for its absence.

 This seems to us the most profitable deduction to be drawn from the battle of words that has lately been raging over a few points upon which the whole election will apparently be decided. If the whole city will wake up, cleanse itself and help the Council to cleanse it, that body will be immeasurably assisted in the performance of other, equally vital, functions over which it has sole control.

 PLAGIARISED AND OTHERWISE.

Fine weather and a large attendance of fans greeted the appearance of the Wanderers and Red Lions in the second game of series.
The Players were:
WANDERERS—Britt and King, battery; Hartnett, 1b; Hocken, 2b; Macleod, ss; Dr. Pritchard, 3b; Hunt, rf; McRindle, cf; McLean, lf.
RED LIONS—Power and Cooney, battery; Hiltz, 1b; Buckingham, 2b; Maher, ss; Ellis, 3b; Rolls, rf; Jenkins, cf; Quick, lf; Collins replaced Maher at fifth innings.
The Score by Innings was:
 Wanderers... 002 504 300—14
 Red Lions... 200 010 000—3
 The Wanderers were retired in the first two innings without a man reaching first, but they struck their stride (and incidentally Cooney's best offering pretty freely) in the third and fourth and scored 7 runs in these two innings. The fifth found them hitless but the sixth and seventh accounted for 4 and 2 runs, respectively, which finished their scoring with a total of 14 runs.
 The Red Lions made a good beginning in spite of King's great speed and notched up 2 runs in their first session at bat, but were afterwards held in check up to the fifth when Quick succeeded in crossing the plate. After this none of their sluggers were able to connect with King's deliveries, who held them practically hitless.
 The game could not be called brilliant and at times was rather slow, which was further accentuated by the fact that both teams took every possible opportunity of throwing the ball about the bases for practice despite the fact that the game was in progress. We think the Umpire-in-Chief should strongly discontinue this practice, and endeavour to have the games played with snap and sprightliness and without undue delays.
 The feature of the game was Jenkins' running grab of an exceedingly difficult fly, on which he scored a double play off Hartnett.
 Quick also showed up well in the outer gardens.

Grain Steamer at St. Pierre Roads.
 The British grain steamer Arachne, which was ashore at Point Platte, St. Pierre and was successfully refloated Tuesday night with the aid of the steamers Portia, Sable I, Pilgewarter and Amphitrite, is now at St. Pierre, having been towed there yesterday. Capt. Larder, of the Amphitrite, has divers down surveying the damages to the Arachne. It is unlikely that she will come here for repairs as the dry dock will probably be occupied for the next two months by the damaged grain steamer Lyngfjord.

Tribute to Dr. Grenfell

Editor Evening Telegram:
Dear Sir,—Owing to certain criticisms which have appeared in some of our newspapers of late in connection with Dr. Grenfell, I consider it my duty, knowing the Doctor for so long a time, to have something to say on this matter. Will you please publish the following:—
One Saturday evening in early September, 1892, we anchored in Hopeville H. for wood and water. The harbor was full of vessels, big and small, all homeward bound, the fishing voyage being ended. Just about sundown there sailed into the harbor and anchored right in the middle of the fleet, a fine looking vessel yawl-rigged, and from her trucks flew flags with letters thereon. They spelt "Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen." The ship was the Albert.
News soon got around that doctors were on board. Anybody in the fleet sick or lame or injured could get medical assistance by going on board. The invitation wasn't long ignored. Also books of all kinds were distributed to everybody, and those wanting clothing were abundantly supplied, for a lot of the crew wanted it badly, being away from home for three or four months. The next day being Sunday, services were held on board and on shore. It was indeed a grand day. Everybody was well pleased for such a ship as this had never been on the coast before to take such an interest in our fishing fleet. Who was the man who was interesting himself in our welfare? We were told it was Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell.
For three years I did not see the Doctor nor his ship. One foggy morning I made my way into Indian Harbor and anchored. I had my left arm in a sling and needed a doctor. Where was I to get one? I didn't have far to go for looming up in the fog was the same old Albert. I boarded her, Grenfell was there; that was enough, he did the rest. His name had by this time gone the length of the coast. He not only attended to the fleet, but he was paying attention to the shore-men and natives, establishing hospitals. During this short time he saw the esteem of all, kind, courteous and obliging. As years rolled by Dr. Grenfell stretched out his mission until he got up to Chidley. The Albert had gone and in her place the beautiful Strathcona steamed and dodged the fleet, bearing medical assistance, bringing news from the south if going north, and the same from the north if coming south. Everybody looked for Grenfell either way; his news was authentic, for Grenfell's word was his bond, he never lied. Hundreds of cases of sickness and accidents which would have ruined many a schooner's voyage, have been saved by Grenfell coming along just in the nick of time, twice in my own case. In the old days I would have to abandon the voyage and return south in search of a doctor, but Dr. Grenfell came, and that saved the situation. One of these cases was north of Cape Murgford. As for Grenfell he is practically a fisherman himself. He has their ups and downs. He gets the salt brine headache in his eyes, he is out in all weathers, for he is his own skipper, and an early bird. Let those that speak ill of him follow after his heels. Very surely it will be quite different to sitting in an editor's chair.
Not only do the natives on Labrador look for Grenfell but forty thousand fishermen watch for him some time or other. They know the magnificent work he has done, and they all know that the money he gets does not come from our Island Home. But they do know this, that in England, the U.S.A., or Canada, he lectures to raise money for his hospitals, it is for our benefit—the fishermen, and that whatever he says to the good people of those countries is the truth, and nothing but the truth.
I have heard him speak in Montreal to a crowded audience. I admired him before for his work on the Labrador. I admired him more after he was finished with his lectures. All these fiddle-faddle tales are not worth the paper they are written on. There is not a fisherman that I know nor a fishing skipper that sails a vessel to Labrador, has anything but good to say of Grenfell or his work and it would be to our shame if one of us could not give Grenfell his everlasting gratitude.
Many a time I have boarded the Strathcona and asked to see the Doctor. Some of the crew pointed to his private cabin. On these occasions I came in unexpectedly and found him sitting alone reading. "What? Not a novel, but his Bible, for his deep religious. He trusts his God, and asks no man his religion, treats all alike, poor and rich. There are not many rich on Labrador, but he meets them occasionally. Once I took passage with him for a few miles. With him he then had on board three native boys from different poor families. I asked him what he was going to do with them. He said "I am going to educate these boys, give them a trade, make good men out of them." They will live to bless Grenfell's coming. These are only small instances of the Doctor's work. Ask the men of our gallant Regiment in the trenches and out; ask the men in Trinity, Bonaville and Green Bays; ask the mothers and little children on the Coast, about Grenfell, and from their innermost soul they will say "God bless him."
Now, Mr. Editor of the Daily News, hands off. If you can say nothing good of Grenfell, say nothing, for when you strike at the Doctor you strike us.
I am, or was, a fisherman. Have been through a tough mill, through disasters, roughing it on the Labrador and the frozen north. If I did not know Grenfell as I do I could easily appreciate the grand work he is doing. I am now sailing shortly on a long sojourn in Arctic Land and I am well aware that there will be times during my two year's absence from civilization, when I will want some of the assistance which Grenfell is giving to my brother fishermen at home, and while I cannot get that help I sincerely hope that the good old Doctor will continue to help those who will be within his reach. Never mind those who wish to hurt you. And now good old friend we must part, in the meantime the Nail Splitter's philosophy won't do you any hurt.

"I do the very best I know, the very best I can, and I mean to keep going so until the end. If the end brings me out all right what is said against me won't amount to anything. If the end brings me out wrong, ten angels swearing I was right would make no difference." Abraham Lincoln.
In conclusion the least I can say is that I wish the gallant Doctor the best of good luck and a long life, and I know that thousands of my brother fishermen will not wish him anything worse.
Yours truly,
ROBERT S. JAMES.

A PRETTY DRESS FOR THE YOUNG MISS.

1705—Girls' Dress With Long Sleeve Finished With a Cuff, or With Sleeve in Short Puff Style.

White chaille with pink dots is here shown. The panel and belt edges are piped with pink china silk. The chemise is of pink Georgette crepe. This style will please the wearer. It has a shaped panel front in princess style, and full skirt portions joined to full waist portions under the belt. Back and front portions of the waist are cut in kimono style, with sleeve sections combined. Lawn, marquisette, crepe, voile, poplin, charmuse, messaline, dimity, cashmere, gingham, chambray and percale are also nice for this model.
The Pattern is cut in 5 sizes: 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. It requires 3 1/4 yards of 40-inch material for an 8-year size.
A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

A SIMPLE "EASY TO MAKE" DRESS.

1714—Girls' One Piece Dress With Sleeve in Either of Two Lengths.

This will make a splendid play suit. It may be worn with bloomers. The sleeve in wrist length has a hand cuff. Back and front of this model are cut in one with the sleeve, so that there are only a few seams to sew, and as the dress hangs from the shoulders, there will be little trouble in fitting and making it. Brown crash embroidered in blue or red, white linen embroidered in self color or in pink or blue, will be lovely for this model. It is also nice for percale, gingham, chambray, voile, rep, poplin, pique and drill.
The Pattern is cut in 5 sizes: 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. It requires 3 1/4 yards of 27-inch material for a 10-year size.
A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

PLAY FAIR.

RUTH CAMERON.

Absolute honesty first with one's self and next with all others—how rare it is! A young woman showed me a new dress the other night. "My husband doesn't like it," she said, with a provocative glance at him. He smiled over his pipe. "He says it makes me look like a barrel," she poked him a little further. "I said nothing of the sort," he countered calmly. "Well, you said it made me look terribly fat."

"I said, my dear, that those full styles made you look larger than you really were. Now was that what I really said, or was it not?"

"She Changed The Subject." She pouted, but she didn't deny. "It always takes men a long time to get used to new styles," she said, addressing herself pointedly to me. "Do you remember how they made fun of the scant dresses when they first came in?"

"You forgot to tell me whether that was what I said or not," he persisted. "Oh, I suppose so," she flung out petulantly. "I call you to witness," said he, "that that's the way she always distorts what I say to her and flings it back at me. Do you call that playing square?"

"Maybe she doesn't," said he. "She just likes to make me squirm, that's all, and I call it unfair. But then I suppose you couldn't expect a woman to play fair."

That made me angry. Women Aren't The Only Culprits By a Good Deal.

Women may have a monopoly of some faults, but I don't think the habit of flinging back in a distorted form the things that have been said to them is one of them.

It is a human, not feminine foible, to seize anything, even an injustice or a misquotation, as a weapon in an argument.

Most of us do it without realizing that we are being dishonest. We are dishonest with ourselves rather than others—we don't admit to ourselves that we know that wasn't just what was said.

Dishonesty with one's self is the basis of all dishonesty.

Are You Perfectly Honest With Yourself?

It is impossible to get any satisfaction or justice out of an argument with a person who will not or does not know how to be honest with himself.

"To thine own self be true, and it shall follow as the night the day thou canst not then be false to any man," means even more than appears at first.

Remember, it isn't all important that you shall prove yourself right, willy nilly, but it is all important that you shall be fair.

And be especially careful if you are a woman. Women have a reputation for unfairness to live down. We—this generation of women—owe much to the pioneers of the last few generations who have made many things possible and easy to us. This is one way that we can help pay the debt.

Quaint capelike wraps are worn over the evening gown this summer. They are trimmed with bands of fur or with wide bands of rich embroidery.

The Superior Quality that wins the approval of the most critical tea drinker, the quality that makes steady customers—that's HOMESTEAD. Fresh supplies just received from Ceylon.

"There's a Smile in every cup of Homestead."

"MEASLES."

Hundreds of children are suffering from "Measles" at the present time, and one has to be very careful in trying to avoid the complications that often follow them.
A heavy "Cough" is very prevalent during the present epidemic, and "Pneumonia" is the great danger. Avoid this by keeping a bottle of "Stafford's Phoratoxine Cough Cure" on hand.

Hr. Grace Notes.

The sad news was received by Mrs. George Harris, by cable, on Saturday, that her only brother Private Levi Verge, of a Canadian regiment, had been killed in action in France. Mr. Verge was 35 years of age and unmarried.

Messrs. W. H. Casey and F. J. Pumphrey, ecclesiastical students from Laval University, Quebec, arrived by Saturday night's train to spend their vacation here. In welcoming our young townsmen we wish them a pleasant holiday in the old home as well as a bright career in their sacred calling.

Fishermen in this neighborhood are doing fairly well with codfish just now, and are hopeful of a good season's work.

Mr. Matthew French, of Courage's Beach, was stricken with paralysis on Monday and is now very sick. This is the second attack Mr. French has had lately and his friends are anxious about him.

Miss K. Lynch, teacher at North River, is now in town as Supervisor of the C.H.E. Exams, now being held at Coughlan Hall.

Mrs. Nicholas Peddle, of Bristol's Hope, passed away last night at the age of 86 years. The many friends of Capt. Nicholas Peddle will sympathize with him in his bereavement.

We regret to report that Mr. John Ryan, mail carrier, is still confined to his home and unable to attend to his duties.

Mrs. Harold Rowe and infant, of Heart's Content, are now in town visiting friends.

Good work is still being done on the roads, and it looks as if Harbor Grace will soon get back its former good name for some of the best roads in the island. —COR.

What Are You Doing for that Eczema?

"Nothing; I've about given up trying to cure it."
"That is not wise. Do as I did and you will probably be cured in a short time. I used Zylex and Zylex Soap with it and my Eczema began to improve at once. A couple of boxes cured. You can get Zylex at your druggists."
Zylex, 50c. a box; Zylex Soap, 25c. a cake.

MORE TROUBLE IN THE EAST.
LONDON, June 28.—The threatened split in the British cabinet has taken a prominent place in all the papers. Most editorials are in favour of the Unionists to settle the matter and get down to the main business of the war. The Daily News says if there comes a split in the party, the Coalition Government should weather the storm, but the Government falls to pieces when the Allies are making a great effort against the Hun. The Daily Mail says the war are we playing a game of party politics? It is to throw the whole nation into the whirlpool of the Irish and miscellaneous questions, to distress the nation at large, but impatient contemplation there.

GERMANS ATTACK FLEURY.
PARIS, June 28.—German troops last night made another attack on Fleury, near Fleury on the sector of the front over which there has been in progress for some time. The assault was checked by French fire, the War Office says to-day. There was some fighting near Thiamont work, and German men captured several there. No change has occurred in the situation there.

KING CONSTANTINE'S DECREE.
ATHENS, June 28.—The situation in Greece is critical and full of uncertainty, though the demands of the Allies are being rapidly carried out. A decree for general demobilization of the army was signed yesterday, and the King has been in progress for some time. The King has been in progress for some time. The King has been in progress for some time.

PRUSSIAN LOSSES.
AMSTERDAM, June 28.—Latest Prussian casualties during the period from June 27 to June 28, 1916, bringing the total of Prussian casualties to 2,740,194. These figures, it is believed, include the losses during the period.

FRENCH QUELL SERIOUS REVOLT.
BARAT, Morocco, June 28.—French troops have quelled a serious revolt of the tribes in the region of Algeria, after a long and hard fighting. The rebels offered assistance, and were defeated. Their principal stronghold, stormed by two French battalions, their leaders then surrendered.

THE SHACKLETON ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION.
MONTE VIDEO, June 28.—The Shackleton Antarctic Expedition may be made by the government, which has been in the process of organizing it. His recent futile attempt to reach Elephant Island where he was marooned. The government has decided to support the expedition.

TO-DAY'S Messages.

11.00 A.M.

ROOSEVELT ON THE WAR PATH.

NEW YORK, To-day. When Roosevelt came here to-day from Oyster Bay to fulfil a dinner engagement to-night with Charles E. Hughes, he found at his hotel hundreds of messages from men who want to serve under Roosevelt in a division of volunteer troops which it is reported the Colonel is preparing to raise in the event of war with Mexico. The telegrams and letters which came from all parts of the country were so numerous that the Colonel's Secretary had to call for extra clerical help. The Colonel himself declined to discuss the reported plan to raise the division which it is said he wished to head.

ITALY'S DETERMINATION.

ROME, To-day. The Chamber of Deputies to-day held the first session since the selection of the new Cabinet. Premier Roselli in a speech outlining the policy of the Government said that Italy would continue the war with her Allies until victory was attained.

BRITISH SUCCESSES.

LONDON, To-day. A War Office communication issued to-night says: During last night there were raids, and patrols entered the enemy trenches at several points bombing the enemy and inflicting casualties near Angres. One of our raiding parties found the enemy trenches badly damaged by the Highland Light Infantry at Vermelles on the LaBassee road, when forty-six prisoners and two trench mortars were captured, and two enemy mine shafts destroyed with the loss of only two men. To-day the enemy exploded a small mine near Neuve Chapelle and another near Hulluch. Expecting slight damage to one of our saps they achieved no other result. We exploded two mines southward of Bethune on the LaBassee Canal.

CASEMENT'S TRIAL PROVIDES SENSATIONS.

LONDON, To-day. A day filled with sensational incidents in the trial of Sir Roger Casement for treason was brought to a sudden and dramatic close in the afternoon, when Sergeant Sullivan, Sir Roger's leading Attorney, collapsed in the midst of an impassioned summing up. Sullivan, himself an Irishman, was painting pictures of the wrongs which, he declared, were suffered by Ireland, maintaining that the prisoner had committed no treason when he attempted to raise the Irish Brigade in Germany for the purpose of protecting the rights of the people of Ireland against unlawful tyranny. It was during one of his most heated outbursts that the speaker suddenly paused, swayed heavily against the bench, then collapsed into his seat. Just previously the Chief Justice had cautioned the Attorney that he must keep to the evidence of his argument, the Justice adding that he had with difficulty restrained himself from interrupting the Attorney at several points in his speech. Sullivan apologized and proceeded, but the strain under which he was laboring proved too much for him. Earlier in the day the Justices had over ruled a motion of the defence to quash the indictment on the ground that the statute under which it was drawn did not provide for the trial of a man who had committed treason outside the realm. The effort to establish this was admitted the prisoner's main defence. It was announced no witnesses would be produced on his behalf, mainly because such witnesses must be secured from Germany and this was not permitted. Casement himself was called upon to make a statement to the jury. This statement, which was not given under oath and consequently permitted no cross-examination, contained a flat denial that the prisoner worked in the interests of Germany or that he had accepted German gold as a bribe. "I have never sold myself to any man or Government, and I have never allowed any Government to use me," he declared in a voice vibrating with emotion. He indicated that he had nothing to do with the rebellion and asserted this rebellion was not inspired or directed from Germany. In conclusion he declared he touched on these personal matters because they were intended to tarnish the case he held so dear. Sullivan said Sir Roger was charged with aiding Germany. He declared not an atom of assistance had been rendered to the enemy. Sir Roger had asked the men to enlist in the Irish Brigade when the war was over and the seas clear, said the Attorney. Those men were to fight for the cause of Irish Home Rule. He told of armed bodies which were operating in Ireland before the war, and declared Ireland was being bullied by these men and that the Civil Government had offered no protection. If his object was that after the war men should take up arms for the purpose of protecting the rights of the people of Ireland against unlawful tyranny, argued the Attorney, this was no treason. It is expected the summing up will be concluded to-morrow and the case reach the jury before night.

AMERICANS TO BE RELEASED.

EL PASO, Texas, To-day. General Jacinto Trevine has ordered the American prisoners interned in the penitentiary at Chihuahua City to be taken to Juarez and there with their arms and accoutrements to be released. This information was received by the Juarez Commandancia to-day. Mexican authorities asserted General Geo. Bell, Jr., commanding in the El Paso military district, has been notified of General Trevine's order and that the prisoners are expected to reach Juarez to-morrow. General Bell did not deny the report but refused to discuss it.

SAN ANTONIA, TEXAS, To-day.

General Funston received to-night a report from Brigadier General Bell, Jr., El Paso, which stated that General Bell had been notified by the American Consul Garcia that the American prisoners taken at Carrizal now are on their way north to Juarez and probably would arrive there to-morrow morning.

GERMAN PRINCE WOUNDED.

U. S. FIRM WITH AUSTRIA.

WASHINGTON, To-day. The American rejoinder to Austria regarding the Austrian submarine attack on the American steamer Petrolite was made public to-day by the State Department. It described the

The New President of Meth. Conference.

Rev. Edwin Moore, who has been elected President of the Newfoundland Methodist Conference at Grand Bank, came from Manchester, England, to Newfoundland in the fall of 1891; and then had the unfortunate experience of losing all his books and clothing by the loss of the schooner at Ireland's Eye when he was going to his station at Random, Trinity Bay. Friends soon supplied both necessities and he has for twenty years laboured successfully on many of the important circuits of the island: Has been stationed at Westleyville the past four years, and was at Grand Bank the previous four years, as Pastor; which has no doubt had some influence in placing him in the Presidential Chair yesterday. He has a well stored mind, and on several occasions his fine abilities have shone out in a marked degree, particularly some years ago on a Missionary Anniversary at Alexander Street Church. He married a daughter of the Hon. James Angel, M.L.C. We trust now so highly honoured by his brethren he will have a very successful year.

act as a deliberate insult to the flag of the United States and an invasion of the rights of American citizens. It requests a prompt apology, punishment of the submarine commander and payment of an indemnity.

HUGHES AND ROOSEVELT IN ACCORD.

NEW YORK, To-day. Charles E. Hughes, Republican Presidential nominee announced to-night at the end of an interview with Col. Roosevelt that he and the former President were in complete accord.

SERIOUS RIOT IN ROMANIA.

AMSTERDAM, To-day. Revised figures of the casualties resulting from rioting at Galatz, Roumania, on Monday, show fourteen killed and wounded. In addition a hundred persons were arrested. A general strike in sympathy with the Galatz movement has been called at Bukarest for Thursday. The Roumanian press generally attacks the Government for its fault to deal adequately with the food supply problem.

ON ALL FRONTS.

LONDON, To-day. Gains of additional ground by the Italians from the Austrians and by the French from the Germans northeast of Verdun, and by the Germans from the Russians in Volhynia are chronicled in the latest official communications issued by the Italian, French and Austrian War Offices. In addition, it is stated the Austrians are still holding back the wing of the Russian army which is endeavouring to drive past Kutly, in Bukovina, with Kolomea as its objective. In the Trentino region the Italians continue to force back the Austrians along almost the entire front, having made progress at various points in the region between the Adige and Brenta Rivers, the Lagarina and Arza Valleys between the Posina and Astico Rivers, and along the Upper But River. Northeast of Verdun the French have recaptured more ground from the Germans north of Hill 321 around Thiaumont Wood. Northwest of Verdun the Germans carried out a heavy bombardment against Avocourt and Chattancourt sectors, but were prevented from launching an infantry attack from east of Hill 304 by the effectiveness of the French artillery fire. In Champagne the Germans occupied French positions near Tahure but later were driven out. On the British front the expected big offensive by King George's men, apparently has not yet begun, but they are carrying out at various points successful raids on the German positions. The bombardment is heavy from the region of LaBassee Canal south of the Somme. In the latter region small British attacks were put down by the Germans, according to Berlin. Continuing their counter-offensive against the Russians in Volhynia the Germans captured the village of Linevka to the west of Sokul and also have taken by storm positions south of the village Vienna reports further Russian attacks near Kutly in Bukovina have been repulsed by the Austrian forces. Between the Vardar River and Lake Dolran on the Greek-Serbian border artillery duels are taking place.

AN ADMIRABLE CHANGE.

BERLIN, Ont., To-day. Providing the Lieut. Governor in Council ratifies by law the changing of the name of the city, the name of Berlin will be wiped off the map of Canada. The city will, hereafter, be known as Kitchener. Electors voted in favor of Kitchener, with Brock as second choice, Adams third.

TRENCH RAIDS FREQUENT.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS, IN FRANCE. Unusual heavy artillery firing with numbers of trench raids have continued all along the British front during the last 24 hours. Here and there were intense outbursts from artillery concentrations on both sides. The British used both gas and smoke to cover their trench raids. In the Ypres salient were found bodies of Germans killed by gas in their trenches. The Germans retaliated by bombardment of the Canadian positions at Observatory Height and Serrell Hill. The ease with which raiding parties

SULLIVAN UNABLE TO CONTINUE.

LONDON, To-day. Sergeant Sullivan, upon whom has rested the chief burden of the defence of Casement, was unable to appear in court to-day and finish his argument on behalf of the prisoner. The Chief Justice expressed his sympathy and said that it was evident that Sullivan had been laboring under heavy strain. Jones then addressed the court.

GERMANS REPTILED.

PARIS, To-day. After a violent bombardment which lasted the entire day the Germans attacked the French position northwest of Thiaumont in the Verdun sector but were repulsed with heavy losses, according to an official statement published by the War Office to-day. French machine guns and gun fire are declared to have devastated the attackers.

THE ONLY POSSIBLE VERDICT.

LONDON, To-day. Casement's jury retired at 2.55 o'clock. Flash-Casement found guilty of high treason.

Stories of Kitchener.

Kitchener remained a bachelor and was comonly reported to be a hater of women. Though silent and grim, he had a command of words that made what he said long-remembered. Many stories are told of his epigrams. He was reviewing a drill of a home defence company shortly after the German bombardment of Whitby and Scarborough. The Captain asked K. of K.:

"Should the Germans come, what uniform should we wear, sir?"

"The one you want to be buried in," was the reply.

An officer who had campaigned with Kitchener in Africa was asked how he spends his time:

"He works," was the reply.

"How does he amuse himself?"

"By more work."

"Has he no recreations?"

"Yes, two; still more work, and seeing that everybody around him works."

Kitchener had no use for favorites. A young officer was sent to him in the Orient by the War Office. He reported to Kitchener, who asked him if he knew when the next steamer sailed for England.

"I have not looked it up, sir."

"Well," snapped Kitchener, "you look it up and sail on that steamer."

In South Africa one of Kitchener's companies of yeomanry escaped from a Boer onslaught by retreating at full speed. When an officer reported the fact and asked, "What shall I do with your yeomen?" he received this answer, "Keep them as far from me as they kept from the Boers."

On another occasion a surgeon wrongly diagnosed the illness of a soldier and it was necessary for him to summon two other physicians. Learning the truth, he sent for the first doctor and said, "Take this man to the hospital and yourself to England."

Montana.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Sitwah."

Montana is one of the largest sized states, but is not extensively used for residence purposes as yet. It contains 145,000 square miles and five different climates. When a Montanan from Great Falls meets a Montanan from the Flathead reservation, they ignore politics and talk temperature until the police separate them.

Montana extends for 600 miles along the Canadian border, just below Alberta and Saskatchewan, and would have as good a climate as these provinces do if it would pay better salaries for publicity agents. It is traversed lengthwise by transcontinental railroads and the Missouri River, but is crossed north and south only by the Rocky Mountains in the western part.

For this reason citizens of Billings seldom know their northern neighbors unless they happen to run across them in a New York restaurant.

Montana is full of silver and gold, and the early settlers kept extremely busy getting it out and trading it for railroads and senatorships. There are few cities in Montana, and most of these are infested with smelters. A smelter is a small cross section of Hell in full operation. Only human beings will live in Butte and Anaconda. Trees, grass and flies have too much sense.

Montana also produces most of the blizzards which are used with such success in the central states. Blizzards can be supplied in northeastern Montana on twenty-four hours' notice, and as yet no means have been found of confining them to the State. When a Montana blizzard meets a herd of Montana cattle, a large number of refrigerator cars lose their next summer's job on the spot.

Montana was originally inhabited by a particularly fierce band of Indians, and was next vexed by a lot of mining kings who were, if anything, a little harder on the reputation of the state than the Indians. Now, however, the Montana farmers are raising alfalfa and apples and are exercising the divine right of suffrage so vigorously that it is no longer fashionable for a legislator to save enough out of his $10 per diem to buy a new ranch every summer.

Montana has many unique attractions, including a large flock of glaciers, a herd of buffaloes, the largest chimney in the world, most of the remaining free and unlimited cowboys, Mary MacLane once wrote up Butte so vividly that many people still see it when they have been indulging in frenzied feeding.

HEAD WAITER: Yes, sir, we are a bit old fashioned, as you say—but we find people like it so long as we make them comfortable. I haven't heard no complaints on that score.

GUEST: Good beds and good food, eh?

HEAD WAITER: Excellent beds and good wholesome food—comfortable Gas Fires and 'ot water in every room in the 'ouse.

GUEST:—Gas Fires, eh! That doesn't sound old fashioned.

HEAD WAITER: No, sir, it don't. But we 'ad to move with the times, sir, and it's our business to give people what they want. If you'll excuse me, sir, that 'ave been 'ere all my life, I find that our people mostly want 'ot baths, 'ot water, well cooked food, good fires, good beds and no fussing. We couldn't do that with coal—not satisfactory as I may say. So we puts in gas—everywhere. We cooks by gas, we lights by gas, we 'eats the water by gas and we 'as Gas Fires. So you can 'ave a 'ot bath in ten minutes if you want it, sir, a fire in your bedroom and whatever you like to order for dinner, sir, punctual to the minute.

GUEST: That sounds top-hole—but where's the old-fashioned part come in?

HEAD WAITER: It don't come in, sir, so far as that's concerned. But there's the 'ouse, the furniture, the pictures and—if I may say so—the 'omeliness of the place.

GUEST: (a trifle bored) Well, well I'll have that hot bath right away—if you'll get the bathroom ready.

HEAD WAITER: The bathroom is ready, sir, always. There's plenty of 'ot wafer, you'll find clean 'ot towels in the 'ot cupboard in the bathroom and the Gas Fire lighted in your room.

GUEST: Right O!—and dinner at 8 sharp, please!

HEAD WAITER:—What'll you 'ave, sir,—a nice sole, leg of mutton and sweets?

GUEST: Well, if that isn't troubling the cook too much—I'm rather late, I'm afraid.

HEAD WAITER: No trouble at all, sir. You see, sir, our kind of comfort means comfort for us as well as our people. We don't 'ave no coals to carry, no fires to make up, no bathrooms to attend to—This 'ere gas, if I may say so, saves money and time, and—

GUEST: You may say so at dinner time, please, I'm off to have that bath . . . (ascends stairs slowly) . . . Decent old boy, though he does talk a lot; and a real nice place. Thank heaven, I've struck a decent billet at last! (The bathroom door bangs sharply.)
