

PARLIAMENT.

A Long Debate on the Railway Subsidy Resolutions.

An Amendment Offered by Mr. Richardson Finds Three Government Supporters.

What Was Done in the Privileges and Public Accounts Committees—The Senate.

OTTAWA, Aug. 1.—Before the privileges committee this morning, evidence was called to establish the whereabouts of Thomas Farr, deputy returning officer at Collingwood, at whose poll the manipulation of ballots took place.

Mr. Borden of Halifax brought to the attention of the house and government the case of Major Maxwell of Halifax, who was thrown from his horse while riding for the purpose of military training in connection with his equitation course.

The minister of militia admitted that the case was a hard one, but said that after consultation with his colleagues he had reached the conclusion that it was not a case in which he could properly ask parliament to vote money.

Mr. Borden of Halifax said Maxwell was taking an equitation course, and though the accident occurred out of hours, it happened while he was endeavoring to perfect himself in equitation.

Hon. Mr. Fielding said his natural inclination was to support Maxwell's claim, but he was forced to the conclusion that the case was not of the same class as that which the government had recognized.

The minister explained that the capital charge of $125,000 included ten thousand dollars for engineering corps. There were two such bodies, one in New Brunswick and one in P. E. Island.

Mr. Powell then handed him the pad from which all the ballots used at this poll were supposed to have been torn. The stubs, ninety-eight in number, were all measured and found to be of a uniform thickness of two one-thousandths of an inch.

When the house met at three this afternoon Sir Wilfrid Laurier addressed Clerk Bourinot and the members, explaining the qualifications required for the membership.

of the fast line steamship contract, and the attempt to make another, which has failed.

All the same no one wants to see Sir Richard retired. His supporters and opponents would prefer to have him placed in charge of a department that has some responsibility attached to it. He is regarded as the ablest man in the government, and his practical efficiency is a mournful spectacle to those who remember him in other days.

There are two other departments which have no work in them worth mentioning. The president of the privy council has nothing at all to do in his official capacity except to look after the mounted police. The secretary of state is almost purely an ornamental officer. One of these ornamental departments it is necessary to keep for the premier, who may well be excused from the task of a heavy portfolio. It is true that Mr. Mackenzie while premier was also minister of public works, which then included railways, but he killed himself with over work and worry, and has left on record the statement that he would gladly have given up the department if it had not been necessary for him to guard the treasury from his party by remaining at the citadel with his gun. Sir John Thompson held the department of justice while premier, but he also would have done better to have escaped responsibility. Sir John Macdonald in the early days of confederation held the department of justice and later took on the more wearisome department of the interior. But in that department the importance of the department of the interior was not fully recognized, and afterwards he was glad to hand it over to others. Sir Mackenzie Bowell held a lighter department in connection with the premiership, and so did Sir Charles Tupper. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has wisely followed their example by taking an even lighter one.

But so far as can be seen there is no reason why the department of justice and the department of trade and commerce should not be abolished. There are several other departments which are quite capable of taking on additional work. The minister of agriculture takes life quite easily and is not supposed to be engaged half his time in official duties. The postmaster general has a comparatively easy task. The minister of inland revenue has very little functions except to carry out the instructions of his deputy. The minister of militia can be away six months without causing a collapse in the administration. Probably an able lawyer could do in three months all the work that falls to Mr. Mills in the department of justice, though Sir John Thompson showed that an able and experienced practical lawyer could do a great deal more in the department than an academic theorist who leaves all the practical work to the solicitor general. The department of railways, the department of public works, and the department of the interior are heavy portfolios, the department of finance has great responsibility. The department of marine and the department of customs require a good deal of looking after.

On the whole, there is no reason why the number of ministers should not be reduced by two, without in the least impairing the efficiency of the administration or giving inconvenience to the remaining ministers. In fact, they would never know the difference, and the ministry would still be as large as it was in the days when Sir Richard Cartwright and Mr. Mulock declared it to be too large. It is interesting to hear Sir Wilfrid Laurier explain the difference between our system and that of the United States, and show that a parliamentary minister has a great deal more to do than a purely departmental minister. The statement was made so many times from the same place by the other party, and was so contemptuously received by the other who is how premier, that one wonders whether Sir Wilfrid wakes up in the night to laugh over the change in the situation.

Sir Richard Cartwright has ideas also. He suggests under-secretaries, as in England, and intimates that he would like to see the cabinet reconstructed in such a way as to bring in a number of juniors, to serve a sort of apprenticeship before taking these offices. It would be wise for the opposition to head off this scheme if possible, even though it be good in itself. Because if fourteen under-secretaries were appointed we should still have fourteen ministers, or perhaps sixteen or eighteen. Every step that has been taken so far to decrease expenditure has led to an increase, and every junior appointment which has been made for the alleged purpose of reducing the number of seniors has led to an increase in the number of seniors.

Sir Richard says that he will retire from the government whenever the premier asks him, which shows that he is a different kind of man from fighting Joe Martin. But his announcement was greeted with a chorus of disapproval from both sides. The opposition prefers that somebody else should go, Mr. Tarte or Mr. Blair, for instance, and that Sir Richard should be put over one of the spending departments. There is a feeling that whatever faults Sir Richard Cartwright has, he has a fragrant mind, like John Galt's wife, and is honest.

CATHEDRAL PICNIC.

The Cathedral Sunday school picnic, which was held on the Bishop's grounds in Torreyville on Tuesday, attracted the largest crowd that has assembled on these grounds for years. There were over 3,000 people present, the day was fine and everybody seemed to enjoy the outing. Three trains were required to take the crowd out and bring them back to the city, the last train arriving about 9 o'clock. The best of order prevailed on the grounds. The races and archery contests found many competitors. Music was furnished by the City Cornet band.

Outside of the grounds there was considerable drunkenness and disorderly conduct, but the picknickers remained in ignorance of the conduct of the roughs who thus disgraced themselves.

REPORT OF GOV. COX RELATIVE TO THE RED INDIANS.

RESTIGOUCHE, New Mission, June 29th, 1786. Having arrived at the Indian Village in company with Mons. Bourq, Grand Vicar and Missionary to the Tribe of Restigouche Indians, last night at 11 o'clock, we, in pursuance to the important objects of our Commission from His Honour the Commander-in-Chief and Honourable Council of Quebec, assembled, Joseph Claude, 1st Chief of the Tribe; Joseph Gagnon, 2nd, and Francis Ewert del Condo, 3rd, and having by means of an Interpreter (furnished us by Mons. Bourq) explained to them the following address, we delivered it in writing to them, that they might have an opportunity, after a due consideration of its contents, of presenting a real state of their grievances and claims:

RESTIGOUCHE, June 29th, 1786. Brethren—We are come in the name of Our Common Father, the King, to assure you of the real interest he ever takes in the affairs of his children, and to enquire into the extent of your claims and state of your real grievances, that justice may be done you, and that they, as far as possible, be redressed. You have lately, Brethren, often expressed a wish that your boundaries might be ascertained, and a proper line drawn between you and the English and Acadians, who are to be regarded by you as Brethren. For such part, however, of your claims as we wish you to give up to the King, our Common Father, we have reason to believe that from our representations you will receive a just equivalent, and that they, as far as possible, be redressed. You are the more anxious to accomplish a final settlement with you upon the strictest principles of justice, that all animosities between you and His Majesty's subjects may cease, that proper limits may be fixed to the boundaries of your hunting grounds and fisheries, and that you in common with your Brethren, the English and Acadians, may be assured of a peaceful and happy future. In regard to your claim of the common fishery in the River Restigouche, we are well assured that from the favorable light in which we will represent your grievances respecting the same to the King, our Common Father, that he will continue to protect you in all your ancient rights and privileges, and at the same time we will take a proper opportunity of representing your grievances respecting the same to the King, our Common Father, who will be amply redressed.

We in the meantime advise you to observe a peaceable demeanor towards all those with whom you are further, to a due observance of honesty in all your dealings, leaving it entirely to us to remove by our representations all the just grounds of your contentions. The King, our Common Father, having occasion to provide for others of his children, both English and Acadians, wishes through his Chief Representative, with his Honourable Council in the Province of Quebec, who have authorized us to assemble you at present, in order to bring about an arrangement with you for some of the lower part of your Hunting Grounds toward the Great River Nouvelle and Macquaque, but although he has already purchased these parts along the west side of the River Restigouche to where the River Metapedia crosses itself into it, from the proprietors to whom these privileges had been formerly granted by the French King, His Majesty is possessed of such strict principles of Honour and Justice that he wishes not to take any part to himself without giving you some advantage that will be no less valuable to you in furnishing you with clothing and other necessities of life. Your Brethren, the Indians of the Upper Countries, upon a similar occasion lately made to them, generously gave up a considerable tract of country, their hunting ground, and for this sacrifice they were paid by British in a manner altogether to their satisfaction. Can you upon this occasion be less generous than they, or withhold a portion of your hunting ground which is the least valuable to you, when such an extensive tract along the Western Bank of the River Restigouche will be assigned to you for the purposes of the chase? We have reason to believe that you will not, after the strong assurances which we have given you of our favourable representations, we will make of you to our great Chief, and further, that in exchange for this trifling concession you will receive a gratuity from the British government more valuable to you. We at present are only desirous to know if you will readily comply with our wishes upon the River Restigouche, with the sole right of fishing in that River. Question 3.—In what manner and with what right and privileges do you wish to carry on the Salmon Fisheries in the River Restigouche? Answer—In order to prevent disturbances we wish to enjoy an exclusive right to the Salmon Fisheries on the said river, and dispose of our fish to the English and Canadian traders. Question 4.—Have you anything further to propose in regard to your claims and grievances? Answer—We wish that no settlement should be placed or used on the river, as this might be a great source of disturbance, that we are highly dissatisfied that Mr. Robert Adams has lately come from the south or New Brunswick side of the river, and placed his masters at the Point of Old Mission, without proper authority to us or order for so doing.

RESTIGOUCHE, New Mission, July 11, 1886. We again met the Indian Chiefs, viz. Joseph Claude, 1st; Joseph Gagnon, 2nd; and Francis Ewert del Condo, and in answer to the state of their claims and grievances, delivered to us by their 1st Chief, as mentioned yesterday, caused to be read and explained to them the following address: Brethren—We have considered with deliberation the extent of your claims and the state of your grievances, and we are persuaded that the Great Warrior, Sir Guy Carleton, our Common Father in America, will from our such part, however, of your claims as we wish you to give up to the King, our Common Father, we have reason to believe that from our representations you will receive a just equivalent, and that they, as far as possible, be redressed. You are the more anxious to accomplish a final settlement with you upon the strictest principles of justice, that all animosities between you and His Majesty's subjects may cease, that proper limits may be fixed to the boundaries of your hunting grounds and fisheries, and that you in common with your Brethren, the English and Acadians, may be assured of a peaceful and happy future. RESTIGOUCHE, June 30th, 1786. According to the appointment of yesterday, the three Indian Chiefs before mentioned, with the principal warriors, &c., met us to give us their day's address to them, when after reading of the copy of the testimony of Joseph Claude, we asked the following questions: Question 1.—What papers have you now to establish your claims to the Hunting Grounds on the north side of the River Restigouche as an exclusive right to the salmon fishing therein? Answer—Delivered a commission from Mons. Beuharnois while Governor of Canada, of which the following is a faithful copy. (Here follows the commission, of which the following is a translation): Charles M. de Beuharnois, Chevalier of the Military Order of St. Louis, Governor and Superintendent General for the King over all New France.—We, on the good testimony which has been rendered to us of the attachment to the French by the man named Claude, a Mikmak Indian, and of his zeal and affection for the Catholic religion, have by these presents named and established him Chief of the Village of Restigouche, for him in such capacity to discharge all duties which belong to said office. In testimony of which we have signed these presents and caused the seal of our arms to be affixed and countersigned by our secretary. Given at Quebec this 8th day of April, 1780. (Signed) BEUHARNOIS, M. DE LA FONTAINE.

Question 2.—What are the extent of your claims to the Hunting Grounds on the north side of the River Restigouche, and of exclusive right to the Salmon Fisheries therein? Answer—We claim for our Hunting Grounds on the west side of the River Nouvelle, along the northern bank of the River Restigouche, with the sole right of fishing in that River. equitable terms. From our representations a line will be immediately drawn by His Excellency Sir Guy Carleton, 1st Chief, not less advantageous to you than to His Majesty, whose interest is inseparably connected with that of all its subjects. This Boundary, together with the enjoyment of all your Ancient Rights and privileges in the Salmon fishing within the limits therein fixed, will furnish you with an ample field for your future comforts and happiness. (Signed) NICHOLAS COX. (Signed) JOHN COLLINS.

After debating the matter a few minutes among themselves, Joseph Claude, 1st Chief, in the name of all the rest of the tribe, consented peaceably to assign for His Majesty the great River Nouvelle and Point Macquaque to the Boundary which should be agreed upon, trusting entirely to the generosity of the government for an equivalent.

N. B.—This finished the business with the Tribe of Restigouche Indians.

CANADIAN QUERIES.

Do We Love Our Homes? (No. 4)

It is true that John Howard Payne is nearly forgotten and that his songs lie on the piano beneath Greig and the others? Do we still read the Cotter's Saturday Night, the best known of the poems on the shores of Grand Lake or Bellefleur? Is Canada, just emerging into manhood, getting nobly strong, or is the imperialistic love of display and aggrandizement even now beginning to sap our life, as it is doing with those who live in the Republic of the United States? It was Schiller who wrote of the mother-trout of the "mother-lobe" He sang to all Germany of love and liberty. Does not the higher nationality, the best patriotism, begin with home-love? It is the core of the great circumference that makes the Nation, even as God is the throbbing heart of the Universe and creates the World. Not specially the love of this or that petty effort of our own puny audacity, in city or country home, but the deep memory and cherishing affection that belongs to the place where our little hopes were successful or not, that only is true home-love.

KILLED BY LIVE WIRE.

MONTREAL, Aug. 1.—Calbert Cyr, fifteen years of age, residing on St. Louis street, leaped out of the third story window of his parents' residence this evening and grasped an electric light wire, receiving a shock which knocked him to the sidewalk below. He was picked up dead.

IN CARLETON COUNTY.

Duncan Buchanan of Adohaqui, who was in the city Tuesday, has recently completed the reconstruction of a grist mill for G. R. Mitchell of Waterville, Carleton county, which he fitted with one of the Buchanan turbines. The mill has three run of stones, and grinds wheat and buckwheat and also turns out cracked corn for feed. Mr. Buchanan says the crops in Carleton county promise a magnificent yield. Grain is an excellent crop, and root crops will be very large. Hay is also a splendid crop, and is now being got into the barns.

BOSTON LETTER.

Canadian Oarsmen Had a Walk Over on Charles River.

The Port of Boston Receives as Many Immigrants from Canada as from Europe.

Witnesses in Bram Trial Still in Custody—Cool Weather—Telegraph Operators—The Lumber and Fish Markets.

(From Our Own Correspondent.) BOSTON, July 30.—The great crowds of people who saw the international rowing regatta on the Charles yesterday were convinced before the programme had been completed that there are a few oarsmen in Canada worthy of the name. The Canadians in yesterday's races had a walk-over in the two events which they were entered, and it was the general opinion that they could have rowed around their opponents. The winner of the association senior single sculls was John Hume, the well known Rat Fortage, Ont. oarsman. The Brockville Rowing Club of Brockville, Ont., captured the international four-oared shell event without half trying.

Immigration Agent McSweeney of New York testified before the congressional industrial commission in that city a few days ago. The commission is investigating industrial conditions in the United States. During his testimony Mr. McSweeney said of Canadian immigration: "There are a great many Canadians who come here every year to work and then return. The problem is more pressing in Boston than New York. The port of Boston receives as many immigrants from Canada as from Europe. It has been estimated that from 50,000 to 70,000 come here every year, and many of them find their way as far north as New Orleans, where they work as longshoremen."

Quite a number of New Englanders and a few provincials are arriving in this state from the Klondike country. Seven-eighths of the men say they have had enough of the Klondike trail. A large number endured untold hardships on the Edmonton trail. Among the survivors, according to Mr. Charles Brown, former seaman of the Fuller. Several others all held in the case of the indictment still pending against Bram, alleging the murder of Second Mate Blomberg and the captain's wife. As Bram has been in prison a year, his conviction and sentence by means of a writ of error has gone by. He can have, however, the remedy of a petition for habeas corpus at any time. It is not believed, however, that much more will be heard of the Bram case in the courts.

The Worcester Telegram says: "A correspondent in search of novelties in Nova Scotia has discovered one, a village where there is a woman who never saw a beach, a young woman who never had a box of chocolates, and a young man who never saw a case of drunkenness. The correspondent refuses to divulge the locality, desiring to keep such a good thing to herself."

Daniel Hurley of Nova Scotia and Mary Payne of Stoneham, N. B., were married here by Rev. A. D. MacKinnon on July 24th. There is a large colony of telegraph operators in this country. The boundary line makes little difference to operators, as many of them are great travelers and have worked in both countries. In fact some of them have lived in half of the union, and most of the provinces. James A. Griswold, an operator of the Associated Press, who was raised near the Canadian line (in Buffalo), gives the writer a list of a number of Canadian operators in the United States, some of whom are among the following: William H. Edworthy, Boston, formerly of Toronto; Frank Atwood, Boston, formerly of Winnipeg; Jack Butler, Boston, formerly of Toronto; Charles F. Whitney, Lowell, formerly of Montreal; Charles F. Edney, New York, formerly of Missisquoi, Que.; J. J. Keating, Lowell, formerly of St. John; John B. Belding, Gardiner, formerly of Apohaqui; Edgar A. Cannon of Stillwater, Minn., formerly of Shediac; Clifford Cannon of Stillwater, formerly of Shediac. Most of the Canadians here, formerly were employed either on the I. C. R. or on the C. P. R. There are scores of Canadian operators in this country who are natives of Canada, but the writer has not been able to locate more than are given in the above list as the thoughts of the key frequently change their residences.

Louis Richard of Tracadie, N. B., was killed at Bangor yesterday by a pile of boards falling on him. He was 22 years old. The Beverly schooner Margaret reports the drowning of two of her crew off Scatter. They were Simon L. McLannan and Joseph Dulong of Tusket Fork, N. S. The following provincials have died here recently: In Newton Centre, July 28, Mary E. W. Donahoe, daughter of Dennis Donahoe, formerly of St. John; in Charlestown, July 27, Charles Hepburn of New Brunswick, aged 71 years; in East Somerville, July 27, Mrs. Catherine Mulcahey, widow of Patrick Mulcahey, aged 83 years, formerly of Halifax; in Charlestown, July 28, William E. child of William E. and Elizabeth Morris, formerly of Halifax; in Quincy, July 28, Allen Johnson, civil war veteran, native of Nova Scotia.

The weather here during the past week has been for the most part cool, with showers on two or three days. A large volume of business is reported by spruce lumber men. Spruce is in brisk demand, and some dealers say they may have trouble filling all orders during August. As a result prices are firm. Hemlock is active as well and in strong request. It is rumored here that many of the Maine spruce mills will shut down in October for some reason. Clapboards continue dull. Shingles are in fair demand, and laths are selling moderately at unchanged prices. Quotations are as follows: Spruce—Cargo lumber, timber, large sizes, $15.50 to 16.50; ordinary sizes, $14 to 15; oar stock, $12; rough dimensions, coarse and narrow, $11; boards, No. 2, 12 feet, $13; car lumber ordinary frames, $18; 12 in. frames, $17; 14 in., $18; yard orders, $14.50 to 15; mill random, $12.50 to 15; clear flooring boards, $18 to 19; second do, $13 to 14; four foot extra clapboards, $20; clear, $28; second clear, $23 to 25; No. 1, $17 to 20; laths, by car, $2.50 to 2.50; cargo laths, $2 to 2.25.

ST. JOHN, N. B., AUGUST 5, 1899.

WHERE MR. ELLIS FAILS.

The government seems to have found in Mr. Ellis a worthy and acceptable speaker. Nevertheless any one who knows the qualifications for the position of chief commissioner will admit that the member for St. John city has superior attainments. Whatever objection may be taken to the political views of Mr. Ellis or whatever criticism may be applicable to his course as the representative of the people of St. John, it will be agreed that he possesses in a marked degree the qualities required of a presiding officer. Mr. Ellis appears to be deficient in only one respect. He has no bull. He does not stand the favor of the cabinet minister from his own province. Perhaps the best citizens will not think any the less of Mr. Ellis on that account.

THE TRANSVAAL RESOLUTIONS.

It required, long and earnest effort on the part of opposition members to bring Sir Wilfrid Laurier up to the point of introducing the Transvaal resolutions. If he had not done it an opposition member would, and the ministers would have been obliged to vote for or against it. But there is this to say about the premier, that when he is faced to the point of doing such a thing, he does it well. His speech was well conceived and well expressed, going far enough and not too far.

THE TUBERCULIN TEST.

A correspondent of the Country Gentleman wrote to that journal, asking what conclusive proof there is that tuberculosis in cattle is not caused by tuberculin itself, when they are submitted to that test. The Country Gentleman referred the question to Dr. V. A. Moore, bacteriologist of Cornell University. His reply was: Tuberculosis is the result of the growth of tubercle bacilli within the body. Unless these organisms are present we cannot have tuberculosis. The reason why tuberculin cannot cause tuberculosis is, that it does not contain tubercle bacilli. Tuberculin is the liquid in which tubercle bacilli have grown for a certain length of time, and from which they have been filtered out. In addition to the filtering, the culture is boiled for a considerable time in order to kill the bacilli, and, again after filtering, the liquid is evaporated over a water bath, which in itself would kill the tubercle bacilli, or destroy any organized ferment which might be present. It is impossible to produce tuberculosis with tuberculin. A large number of healthy cattle have been injected with tuberculin, both in herds tested for the presence of the disease, and formerly, experimentally to determine the effect, if any, of tuberculin upon healthy animals, and there has not been a single case of tuberculosis resulting from these tests. Several healthy calves have been injected with repeated and large doses of tuberculin in order to produce an anti-tuberculosis serum, and not one of these animals has developed tuberculosis.

A SCHEDULE THAT FAILED.

The withdrawal of the "senate reform" resolution has caused little comment. Nobody appears to have taken the senate programme of the government as a serious matter. It was only seriously intended to coerce the senators. When it failed in that purpose it became a trivial affair. We shall hear more of this method of reform or of some substitute. But we shall not hear of it until the dealers and buyers have more jobs like the Yukon deal to be put through. Then we shall have the blackmail proposition and the hoodlum proposition together.

FARRSBORO, N. S., Aug. 1.—The new firm of cabinet makers and upholsterers from Windsor, which commenced business here yesterday. A company has been organized to build and operate a woolen mill here. The project was started by Messrs. Deacon A. E. Wall, Monday, Monday, Monday, the clerk, F. W. Emmerson, and Hon. H. R. Emmerson, premier of New Brunswick, who was a lay delegate. All these gentlemen, by the way, are strong liberals. The report of the temperance society, submitted by Rev. Bishop and others. This report condemned in pretty strong terms the dominion government for depriving the people on the subject of liquor. Mr. Emmerson has spoken to the effect that though a liberal, he must oppose the government because of its course. The premier took the platform and tried to check off the report, arguing that the association had the right to criticize the acts of politicians, that it was dangerous to do so, etc. One of the severest gentlemen present decried the speech as a "big bluff," but the premier was so confident that he had not been present when the report was read and desired time to consider it in order that he might discuss the matter more intelligently. He returned to the report tabled until Monday morning, when the association called for the report it was not forthcoming and it then transpired that though the premier knew that the association was to adjourn at noon on Monday, he had not the report from Moderator Wall and on Sunday night driven out into the country about six miles to "Coleman's." The members naturally rallied at once, which appears to have alarmed the moderator, who dispatched a messenger for the report. Mr. Emmerson arrived with it about 11 o'clock and made a speech commending the resolution, ending with a motion that the report be referred back to the committee for amendment, which was tantamount to killing it. This motion was, however, handsomely defeated and the report was adopted amidst prolonged applause, which led the moderator to remark sarcastically that the association was displaying a "very Christian spirit." Rev. Mr. Baker described Emmerson's action as "a political trick" and refused to take back the proposition, though the moderator threatened to leave the chair unless he did so. The general feeling of the association was that the premier had made a mistake.

The premier took the platform and tried to check off the report, arguing that the association had the right to criticize the acts of politicians, that it was dangerous to do so, etc. One of the severest gentlemen present decried the speech as a "big bluff," but the premier was so confident that he had not been present when the report was read and desired time to consider it in order that he might discuss the matter more intelligently. He returned to the report tabled until Monday morning, when the association called for the report it was not forthcoming and it then transpired that though the premier knew that the association was to adjourn at noon on Monday, he had not the report from Moderator Wall and on Sunday night driven out into the country about six miles to "Coleman's." The members naturally rallied at once, which appears to have alarmed the moderator, who dispatched a messenger for the report. Mr. Emmerson arrived with it about 11 o'clock and made a speech commending the resolution, ending with a motion that the report be referred back to the committee for amendment, which was tantamount to killing it. This motion was, however, handsomely defeated and the report was adopted amidst prolonged applause, which led the moderator to remark sarcastically that the association was displaying a "very Christian spirit." Rev. Mr. Baker described Emmerson's action as "a political trick" and refused to take back the proposition, though the moderator threatened to leave the chair unless he did so. The general feeling of the association was that the premier had made a mistake.

V. B. Ganong, proprietor of the Windsor hotel, is an admirer of a good dog and owns several well bred ones. Among them are a bulldog and Rex, a handsome St. Bernard. These two were on one of the wharves in town on Friday afternoon, when some children playing there pushed the bulldog into the river. He was unable to swim and Rex soon realized that his companion was in danger of drowning. The noble St. Bernard leaped at once into the water, caught the head by the neck and swam with him to the shore. Rex has been a favorite around town for some time, and this feat has increased his popularity.

Sunday morning last did not promise very well for a pleasant day down river, but several yachts made the start. Joseph McClure, Thomas McClure and Hugh Love started in the "Thetis," but only got as far as Crocker's Island when they ran aground. The tide was falling, and they had to wait patiently for several hours until the flood tide released them. In the meantime the yacht turned on her side, adding a great deal to their discomfort. When released they returned to town, determined that next time they will start on a flood tide or take a pilot with them.

On the farm of Richard Campbell a number of tall poplars were uprooted, several trees in his orchard were destroyed, the doors were blown from his barn and his fence and large entrance gate were damaged. At other farms considerable destruction was wrought by the wind.

MR. MACNISH'S CONFESSION. "ST. THOMAS, June 26th, 1899. Messrs. Crothers & Price, Barristers, etc., St. Thomas: "Dear Sirs—We beg to advise you that Mr. MacNish has discussed at length with his solicitors the charges contained in the petition which has been filed against his return as a member of the legislative assembly of Ontario for West Elgin, and that they have to a considerable extent investigated the charges contained therein and other matters which have come to their knowledge in connection with the election. And the subscribers hereto make the following statements and admissions respecting the same: "1. That a large number of persons were specially sent into the constituency, by men working on behalf of the liberal party, for the express purpose of taking part on Mr. MacNish's behalf in the election held January 12th, 1899, and we believe that fraudulent and corrupt means were used by some of such persons to secure his election.

"2. That several of the said persons illegally and without authority acted as deputy returning officers at the said election, and in at least three cases so acted in the names of reputable local men, having, under assumed names, been introduced to the returning officer by local agents of Mr. MacNish.

"3. That in many of the polling subdivisions of the riding there were grave irregularities connected with the return of the ballot boxes and their contents, the voting, and the counting of the ballots thereof.

"4. That there were large numbers of persons brought into the riding for the express purpose of personating legitimate voters, and assisted by some of Mr. MacNish's local supporters, such persons did personate qualified voters in voting for Mr. MacNish.

"5. That the declared number of votes for Mr. MacNish largely exceeded the number of bona fide voters cast for him.

"6. That a large number of ballots cast for Mr. MacNish were in some nefarious and corrupt manner manipulated, whereby the result of the election was rendered doubtful, and that in the connection the voting at Shedden and Middlemarch, and in several divisions in St. Thomas where said strangers so acted as deputy returning officers, merits special mention.

"7. That there are good reasons to believe that there are many specific and well authenticated cases where agents of Mr. MacNish concealed at their homes some of those strangers, who were ordered to report every month to the Home Missions Journal, Communications were received from Messrs. Howard, Millin, Thorne, Deming, Patterson, Smith and Wright in regard to holders for work. It was also reported that a mission had been opened in Gloucester county which would soon need a settled minister. The board adjourned until after the convention.

INQUEST AT OROMOCTO.

Captain Starkey Gives His Version of the Drowning of John Runciman.

It Contradicts in Some Essential Respects the Evidence of Oliver Simpson.

OROMOCTO, Aug. 1.—The coroner's inquest into the drowning of the late John Runciman at this place on Thursday last was resumed at 10 o'clock this morning. In addition to Mr. Slipp, representing the company, Mr. Mullin, representing the relatives of the deceased, A. W. Baird was present, standing to the coroner. Captain Starkey, on behalf of the estate of Geo. W. Baird.

CAPT. STARKEY.
Capt. Starkey was the first witness called. He testified that he was a duly certified captain. On Thursday, July 27th, he was master on board the steamer Victoria on the trip from Fredericton to St. John. When just below Wilnot's landing he gave the usual signal for the boat at Oromocto, this being the usual signal when the steamer does not purpose to land at the wharf. When the steamer got nearly to the Oromocto wharf he observed Mr. Bryson approaching the steamer in his small row boat, he being the regular attendant upon the steamer. He had with him a lady and two children, a barrel and some other small parcels. He came alongside the steamer and put his passengers and baggage on board. Captain Starkey then noticed another row boat coming out of the Oromocto stream and containing three men. One of them was waving an umbrella and signalling for the steamer to stop. The captain said that he came out of the pilot house and went aft upon the hurricane deck, leaning over with his hand upon the davit and watching Mr. Bryson put his passengers on board. The captain called out to the pursuer, Thos. Allen, to not start the steamer as he was to wait for the other boat. He observed that the men in the boat were rowing every way, and it took them some time to approach the steamer, which was drifting with the current. After some minutes the row boat came up to the steamer, the bow being a little behind the stern. The man on the boat pulled the boat up to the steps; then they reached the boat-hook and hailed her up to the usual place. The captain was looking on all the time and did not change his position a particle, he being on the hurricane deck and leaning over the side. The man in the stern of the boat went to the board the steamer, but he did not observe anything that would indicate that either of the other occupants of the boat wanted to board the steamer. The deck hands let go with the boat hook and the captain could not say what conversation took place below.

The deceased, John Runciman, was sitting on the centre seat where he had been rowing, and Mr. Simpson on the bow seat. The bell was given for the steamer to go on ahead, he presumed, by the clerk or pursuer, as he always gave the signal on such occasions.

THE STEAMER STARTED.
The deck hands let go with the boat hook and the captain could not say what conversation took place below. The deceased, John Runciman, was sitting on the centre seat where he had been rowing, and Mr. Simpson on the bow seat. The bell was given for the steamer to go on ahead, he presumed, by the clerk or pursuer, as he always gave the signal on such occasions.

AFTERNOON SESSION.
It was a quarter to two o'clock when the jury resumed its sitting. Capt. Starkey was first cross-examined by A. W. Baird. He (the captain) stated that he was on the hurricane deck when Bryson's boat left the steps, and it was about five minutes from the time she left before the boat containing the Runcimans and Simpson reached the steamer. Two were rowing, and they rowed like inexperienced men. He saw them when they reached the steps. Neither of them helped Geo. Runciman to board the steamer, but the deckhand who was on the steps assisted him. The next thing that took place the man let go of the bow of the boat with the hook, and the signal was given for the engineer to go ahead. The captain did not give the signal, but he heard it given. The two other men in the boat were still sitting down. When Runciman fell into the water he was about four feet from the small boat, and Simpson took an oar and tried to paddle towards him.

HE SAW AT ONCE.
That Simpson was not used to it, and he immediately called for his crew, calling for one Sandy Mayes by name and stamping on the deck and calling all hands to lower the boat. As soon as he got Mayes' attention he left and went to clear the boat away on the port side, this being the side opposite to that on which Runciman fell overboard, but Simpson was picked up on Oromocto when it is necessary and the weather permits, and the weather was such on Thursday that she could not come to the wharf. The steamer had passengers for Oromocto, a lady and her three children, and also a small quantity of freight. He was not sure by whom Mr. Bryson, who tends the steamer at Oromocto, is employed, but he believed by the Star Line Co. He had never examined the boat used by Mr. Bryson and could not say whether or not it was a safe one. When there are passengers on board the steamer, Mr. Bryson puts up a flag, but there was no flag that morning. The steamer had previously signalled for him to come off with his boat. When he has an unusual number of passengers he brings them on in his boat and does not call the steamer in, he being the sole judge as to how many he shall take in the boat. When passengers are going off or on the steamer by the steps, the deckhands stand on the bottom or next to the bottom step, and was there that day. The man on the steps caught the boat with his hand and caught the bow of the boat with the hook. The captain was positive that the boat-hook was used. The boat was pulled up until the centre seat was opposite the steps. The man who was upon the steps kept his foot under the gunwale of the boat. Geo. Runciman got out of the boat into the steamer the captain noticed. He saw all the time. As soon as George Runciman got on board the steamer, the signal was given to start the steamer, and the steamer started immediately. John Runciman then got up, stepped to the stern of the boat, and returned to the bow of the boat and caught hold of the leg of the deckhand upon the steps, the other man (Simpson) stepped alongside of him, and both were in the bow of the boat, throwing its stern up out of the water and its bow down so that the captain thought the boat would go under and both men be thrown in the water. The steamer and boat being in motion at the time. The backwash came so strong against the boat that Simpson had to let go. He probably had hold of the boat with his hand, but it would not have been sufficient time to enable the man with the hook to grab the boat with it, but it would have been dangerous to the occupants of the boat, whereas if she went free she would be all right. In his opinion, if Mr. Simpson had not grabbed the steps all would have been well, and he would have been able to get down. When he called out "Catch hold of him" three or four times, as previously told, he was calling to the man in the boat (Simpson) and not to the deckhands. He thought he would be thrown in the water. The crew of the steamer consisted of four deckhands, washes, purser, mate, engineer, 1st and 2nd, stewards, stewardess, two cooks, four or seven waiters, and fireman, besides the captain.

In putting on and off passengers from a small boat one man stands on the lower part of the steps, one man at the head of the steps, one man with the hook to catch the boat and another aft of that to assist in holding the boat. The reason assigned by the captain for going to lower the boat on the head of the steps, was that he thought the man with the hook to catch the boat and another aft of that to assist in holding the boat. The reason assigned by the captain for going to lower the boat on the head of the steps, was that he thought the man with the hook to catch the boat and another aft of that to assist in holding the boat.

AFTERNOON SESSION.
It was a quarter to two o'clock when the jury resumed its sitting. Capt. Starkey was first cross-examined by A. W. Baird. He (the captain) stated that he was on the hurricane deck when Bryson's boat left the steps, and it was about five minutes from the time she left before the boat containing the Runcimans and Simpson reached the steamer. Two were rowing, and they rowed like inexperienced men. He saw them when they reached the steps. Neither of them helped Geo. Runciman to board the steamer, but the deckhand who was on the steps assisted him. The next thing that took place the man let go of the bow of the boat with the hook, and the signal was given for the engineer to go ahead. The captain did not give the signal, but he heard it given. The two other men in the boat were still sitting down. When Runciman fell into the water he was about four feet from the small boat, and Simpson took an oar and tried to paddle towards him.

HE SAW AT ONCE.
That Simpson was not used to it, and he immediately called for his crew, calling for one Sandy Mayes by name and stamping on the deck and calling all hands to lower the boat. As soon as he got Mayes' attention he left and went to clear the boat away on the port side, this being the side opposite to that on which Runciman fell overboard, but Simpson was picked up on

To the question as to whether or not he told the reporter that the man at the steps, believing he was the only passenger as none of the others made an attempt to get aboard, rang the bell for the steamer to go ahead, and pushed off the small boat with his foot, he replied that he told the reporter that the pursuer had no indication of any other person wanting to get aboard, and they unhooked the boat and pushed it off.

TO JUROR WARD. The captain stated that it was the duty of the person on the steps to ascertain if all persons in the boat who wished to come aboard had done so, but there are not supposed to ask each individual if they want to come aboard.

TO JUROR WILMOT. The captain stated that when the man on the steps reached the bow of the steamer, the man who was going to board had stood up and the nearest to the steps got on board first. The man who was drowned in this case should have been first to get on board the steamer.

MR. MULLIN. explained to the jury that he had seen the Sun reporter who interviewed Capt. Starkey, and the latter stated to him that he saw and heard several persons connected with the steamer on the day of the accident, and then wrote up his story, the whole of which as published might be considered as an interview with the captain.

MR. SLIPP. asked Capt. Starkey several questions. The latter stated that he did all he could, and more than he was really able to do for the men. He yet feels the effects of the exertion.

The evidence was read over to witness, assisted to and signed by him, and the inquest adjourned until eight o'clock Thursday morning.

DR. PEAKE'S EVIDENCE. published on Monday, should have stated that he did not hold an autopsy, not being requested to do so.

OROMOCTO, Aug. 2.—The coroner's inquest into the drowning of John Runciman was resumed at 8.30 o'clock this morning. The same counsel appearing as were present at preceding sittings, L. A. Curry, Q. C., also appearing on behalf of the Star Line Co.

The first witness called was Jas. Gilchrist, one of the deckhands upon the Victoria, and who witnessed the drowning. He related, as Capt. Starkey had done, about the steamer signalling Wilnot for the small boat to come out at Oromocto, and that Bryson's boat came off and put into the steamer and took aboard the boat some passengers and freight. While Bryson's boat was alongside, Capt. Starkey told the pursuer not to start the steamer, as another boat with passengers was approaching. After Bryson's boat had left, the other boat, the Victoria, started on her way. The witness was standing on the first step above the water and with his foot caught the bow of the boat, and hauled it alongside of the steps so that it could be reached with the boat hook when the man with the boat hook caught the boat, and hauled her ahead. Gilchrist placing his foot upon the gunwale to keep the boat steady. He told the man in the stern, George Runciman, to come on and he helped him board the steamer.

As the other two men still remained in their seat and showed no signs of wanting to board the steamer, witness saw the man with the boat hook to let go; and he (Gilchrist) turned partly around to push the boat off. At that instant he heard the bell sound to start the steamer. The rowboat was slowly moving astern and someone on the steamer asked, "Is the coast clear?" Then the man in the second seat, John Runciman, made his first move, the witness still standing on the steps, and he tried to throw the boat past the life boat and beyond and paddle oar. Simpson was assisting aboard the steamer, and Runciman having disappeared, the locks were hitched for hoisting the boat from the water. The witness was positive that a boat hook was used to catch the boat. He did not hear Simpson ask the pursuer to be put ashore at Oromocto. He saw Simpson for only a moment after he boarded the steamer. He did not hear Geo. Runciman or anyone else say "Good-bye, boys."

MR. BARKER OF SHEFFIELD. was the next witness. He was a passenger on the Victoria. He was on the hurricane deck when Bryson's boat from Oromocto came alongside the steamer, and he noticed the boat containing the Runcimans and Simpson approaching. The signal was given to the main deck and aft, to the boat tending steps just as the other boat came alongside. A deckhand on the steps put out his foot and caught the stern of the steamer, and another deckhand caught her with the boat hook. The man sitting in the stern of the boat got up and boarded the steamer. The boat was immediately pushed off and the boat was heeled to go ahead. Just then the man on the second seat got up, took an oar overboard lying on the seat in the stern, rushed to the bow of the boat and caught the man standing on the step, the steamer being in motion at the time. The signal was given immediately. The back wash from the paddle wheel forced the boat away, and the man fell into the water upon his back, his head being toward the stern of the steamer. He saw someone on the passenger deck about to Simpson to throw him an oar, and Simpson tried to row to him, and having almost reached him, stripped off his coat and jumped overboard. Runciman being nearly under water, Simpson came up with him, and the witness continued watching them and walked around the stern of the steamer, and he noticed that the life boat was being lowered and was almost in the water. He watched the process of lowering the boat, and the hoisting blocks in both bow and stern were on hooks, leaving the boats perfectly free. Simpson was at this time struggling in the water just at the stern of the life boat, the steamer having backed up, and the man in the boat reached over and pulled him into it. As he was pulled in Bryson's boat rowed past the life boat and beyond and paddle oar. Simpson was assisting aboard the steamer, and Runciman having disappeared, the locks were hitched for hoisting the boat from the water. The witness was positive that a boat hook was used to catch the boat. He did not hear Simpson ask the pursuer to be put ashore at Oromocto. He saw Simpson for only a moment after he boarded the steamer. He did not hear Geo. Runciman or anyone else say "Good-bye, boys."

MRS. SHERMAN OF FREDERICTON was the first witness examined after dinner. She, her daughter and two boys were passengers on the Victoria from Fredericton on Thursday morning last, they landing at Oromocto, being put ashore by Mr. Bryson in his small boat. When the boat got nearly to the wharf there it noticed something wrong at the steamer, she having stopped, and then they noticed something floating in the water. Some person on the steamer was calling "Throw him an oar," and she saw a man in the small boat jump overboard. She thought that he was in the water five minutes before she noticed any attempt to lower the boat, and she did not see anything thrown to the man in the water. Mr. Bryson turned his boat and rowed back to the steamer, and she asked to be first put ashore. The boat reached there just as the life boat reached the water, and the boat was attached by the tackle to the steamer. The men in the boat were pulling Mr. Simpson out of the water and between the steamer and Bryson's boats. She assisted in pulling him in, and heard him say "Have you got the mast?" She picked up two coats and a hat from the water. Bryson's boat was then rowed to the wharf and the passengers landed. The steamer was by this time well under way on her trip down river.

PETER S. ALLEN. pursuer of the Victoria, was the next witness. He had been pursuer on this steamer for six weeks, and was previously pursuer on the Victoria on the Oromocto. He had worked on steamers for seven summers. He corroborated what had been stated by previous witnesses regarding the coming off of Bryson's boat at Oromocto, and the captain of the steamer told him (the pursuer) not to start the steamer, as another boat was coming. The boat rowed alongside, there being three men in her. James Gilchrist, who was standing on the steps, caught the bow of the boat with his foot and drew her alongside of the steps, and William Roberts and James Paley caught her with the hook and held her. George Runciman was the first out of the stern and boarded the steamer. He turned around and said "Good bye." The other two men still remained seated. The boat was let go, the men on the steps pushed her off, and the pursuer gave the bell to go ahead. Then the man in the bow of the boat jumped and caught hold of the rope on the forward side of the steps, when the captain called out: "Let go of the rope!" The other man caught hold of the pane's leg of James Gilchrist. The wash from the paddle wheel threw the boat back, when the man let go of Gilchrist's pane's leg and fell overboard. He (the pursuer) immediately stopped the steamer, and the captain called down to the young man in the boat to throw him an oar. He tried to paddle the boat with one oar, and paddled but little headway, and the captain gave the order to lower the boat. This was done and took, he thought, about a minute and a half. He knew nothing more about the affair until Simpson came on board the steamer, when he asked him why he did not row to the drowned man, and he said that he could not get the thole pins out, but that he had done all he could to save the man. Simpson asked where he got off, and he told him at Mauderville. That was all the conversation between them. His place was at the head of the steps to assist passengers getting on and off and to give the signals to start and stop the boat.

To the question asked by the foreman of the jury as to why a life belt was not thrown to the man in the water, the pursuer replied that he and others on board were so confused that they did not think to do so. He was sure that Simpson did not request him to be put ashore at Oromocto.

The question as to why more attention was not paid to Simpson after he was taken out of the water, Allen replied that he talked with him, and then Simpson went to the refreshment room and got a glass of brandy. He himself offered Simpson nothing. He was so confused that he did not know what to do.

He told Juror Morrow that it was his duty to know when a boat came alongside whether all the passengers who wished to do so had come aboard before he gave the bell to start the steamer, but in this instance the two men sat still in the boat and showed no signs of wanting to come aboard until after the boat had been pushed off. He had never started the steamer when any one in a small boat gave an indication of wanting to board the steamer.

The witness in response to the coroner's question did not admit that he made a mistake in starting the steamer when he did, as up to that time neither of the two men in the boat had given any indication of wanting to board the steamer.

Mr. Allen explained that the method of boarding the steamer on the day of the accident was precisely similar to that practiced every day and at other places on the river, where the steamer does not go to the wharf, and he never before had an accident.

The pursuer was cross-examined at considerable length by Mr. Curry and Mr. Mullin.

CROSS-EXAMINED BY MR. MULLIN.
Mr. Gilchrist has been upon the Victoria all the present season, and has previously been employed upon other steamers, and is used to river life. He had never before witnessed an accident of a similar kind. The witness had heard of the accidental drowning of Reuben Cameron in May last, but that was while tending the May Queen on the river. The steamer not belonging to the Star Line, the witness had seen the Sun reporter who interviewed Capt. Starkey, and the latter stated to him that he saw and heard several persons connected with the steamer on the day of the accident, and then wrote up his story, the whole of which as published might be considered as an interview with the captain.
