

SQUARE DEAL DUE THE MARITIMES

A. M. Belding, St. Johns Editor, Says Immigration and Shipping Big Needs.

TOURING CANADA

Immigration and shipping are the two supreme needs of the Maritime provinces, according to M. A. Belding, of the editorial staff of the Times-Star and the Telegraph-Journal of St. John, N. B., who is today a visitor in London. Mr. Belding, who is speaking tonight to the Canadian Club here, is at present engaged on an educational tour across Canada in which he will go through to the coast cities in behalf of his native province.

In an interview with The Advertiser, Mr. Belding complained both of the fact that goods are shipped from Ontario through American ports on their way to Europe and other parts of the world, and also that immigration is almost entirely directed to Western Canada by the Dominion agents in Great Britain, and that the Maritimes are in this respect overlooked. The freight rate to both American and maritime ports are the same.

Thornton Sees Discontent. Sir Henry Thornton, president of the C. N. R., during a recent trip to the Maritimes referred to "a certain discontent" evident there, and Mr. Belding in answer replied: "Lacking the industrial development they were assured would follow Confederation, seeing all the emigrants going westward, failing to get their traffic there, and being assured would pour through their ports, as part of a declared Canadian policy, having no share in the enlargement of territory the other provinces were able to secure, seeing their representation in parliament dwindling, and yet bearing since the first their share of the heavy national burdens, is it surprising that there should be a certain discontent and a sense of isolation?"

"What, you will ask us, is the remedy? Obviously the first one is to give the traffic to their railways and their ports which has been promised them since 1867, and which would only be a fulfillment of the declared national policy with respect to Canadian transportation."

U. S. Market Cut Off. "Previous to 1867," he said, "our natural market for our chief exportable products, which are fish and potatoes, was in the New England states. Our trade was there, but we cannot enter it owing to the American tariff."

"The point I particularly wish to make is that these provinces submit to the tariff which protects industries, while people who need employment leave the province to find it. There has been a steady drift of our kindred over the southern border. I have seen children and grandchildren in the United States, and I have said that I would rather have them in this native province, with as good prospects as they have in the United States. What we are seeking is a condition of growth and prosperity which will stop this drift."

"Lower freight rates will not do it, as we have learned by the experience of many years; but we ask the other provinces to remember that the maritime provinces have not only a heavy burden of low freight rates, but actually got them as one of the terms of Confederation, and that they were assured industrial and commercial development would come to them, with good maritime markets in the central and western provinces. I am not here to place the blame, if blame there be, but to explain Sir Henry Thornton's remark about a certain discontent, to which I add a certain disturbing sense of isolation."

Ready Sympathy. Mr. Belding on his tour so far has met with the sympathy of every city where he has spoken. Last night the business men of Hamilton, after listening to his address, passed and forwarded to the premier and the mayor of St. John a resolution expressing their wish to be of any possible service in the way of obtaining improved conditions in the maritime provinces.

He will speak in Winnipeg next week, and will proceed through the west speaking in every city. On his way east again he will include Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec. He is accompanied by J. D. McKenna, M. L. A., a brother easterner who is looking after the arrangements for the tour.

F. REID, FORMER RESIDENT, SUCCEMS IN MONTREAL

Frederick C. Reid, a former resident of London and a brother of Mr. J. P. Cook of 628 Wellington street, died yesterday morning in Montreal. Mr. Reid was born in the city 45 years ago. He was educated at the public and high schools here, and when a young man left the city for Chicago, where he accepted a position with the Great Northern Field company. Later he went to New York with the Royal shoe concern.

Through ill-health, eight years ago, Mr. Reid was forced to spend a year in California. He then came to London, where he resided with his sister, Mrs. J. P. Cook, for a time. His death in Montreal yesterday came suddenly, following a brief illness.

Survivors are three sisters, Mrs. J. P. Cook and Mrs. J. L. Dromgole of London, and Miss Marjorie Reid of Chicago, and two brothers, William S. Reid of Kansas and Wilson A. Reid of Winnetka, Illinois.

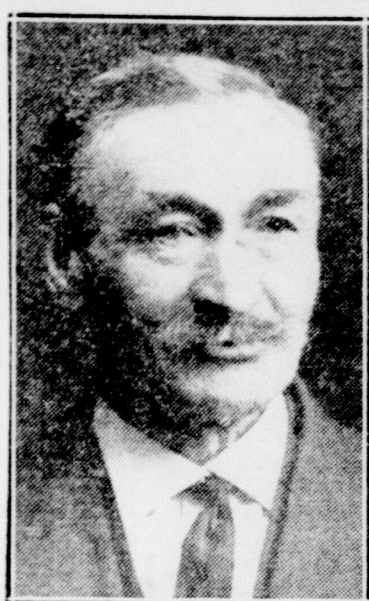

The remains will be brought to London for interment at St. Peter's cemetery. Funeral services will be held Monday morning at St. Peter's cathedral, where requiem high mass will be sung at 9 o'clock.

ENRIGT WINS PRIZE. F. S. Enright won the tournament euchre prize for the three weeks contest amongst G. W. A. players and the award was made at the veterans' card party last night. Mr. Enright won last night's first prize as well. H. Webb won second and H. Hill won the smoked glasses as a consolation. The ladies' prizes were taken by Mrs. H. C. Leslie, Mrs. J. MacNamara and Mrs. E. Flanagan.

TWO CLUBS WILL HEAR EASTERN EDITOR TONIGHT

A. M. Belding, editor of the Times-Star of St. John, N. B., will be the speaker this evening at a dinner for Canadian club and Round Table club members.

"A Message From the Maritimes" will be Mr. Belding's subject. He has come to Western Ontario with the sole object of promoting better understanding between central Canada and the seaboard provinces. He is a forceful and brilliant speaker, and is probably better informed about the possibilities than any other Canadian.

The dinner will be held in Smallwood and Ingram's dining-room at 6:15 o'clock.

MOTOR CLUB CHAGRINED OVER LICENSE SYSTEM

The announcement that H. J. Childs had again been appointed as issuer of automobile licenses for this district has proved a matter of disappointment to the London Motor Club. The members of the club felt that the London Motor Club should have a share in the issuing of licenses, and were promised the support of Sir Adam Beck in the matter, they declare.

SUCCEMS TO INJURIES.

Milestone, Sask. Jan. 23.—John Hunter, aged 67, a Milestone farmer, died today of injuries received Wednesday when a straw rack was blown off its runners by a strong wind, throwing him underneath. Hunter was found lying under the straw rack, stiff with cold, but conscious.

INSPECTOR ILL.

Inspector of Detectives Thomas Nickle has been confined to his home for the past three days by illness.

Hamilton is seeking a refund on the amusement tax paid to the province from that city some time ago. The Amusement City also sought a refund on fees from motor licenses, but has not made much headway with the request.

CITY SOLICITOR TO GIVE OPINION

T. G. Meredith Is Preparing Report on Mayor's Expense Account.

In order that the situation surrounding the city council's protest over the passing of the mayor's expense account for 1924 may be cleared, City Solicitor T. G. Meredith will give No. 1 committee at its meeting next Wednesday a report on the legality of such grants.

The solicitor is now preparing such a report, and while it is not likely that his findings will be made public before Wednesday, there is a strong feeling in civic circles that the report will designate the grant to the mayor as illegal. Last year's council has been blamed for passing such a grant without a bylaw, as is required in connection with other grants, and the defense is that the mayor never presented his account in order that this could be done.

With a new council now in power, the 1925 aldermen appear anxious to wash their hands of the matter except in the way of clearing up the legal point that a bylaw should sanction the grant. As soon as the solicitor's ruling is given, it is expected that action can be taken one way or another.

Though there has been some talk of demanding that the mayor hand back the $1,200 check which he received, this opinion is not entertained by the council. They do not appear to be after the $1,200 as much as they want to clear the air in regard to the means of legally passing grants, so that they may be guided in the future as well as the present in such matters.

SPEED COP QUESTION SOON TO BE DECIDED

Crown Attorney Judd Will Decide Whether Patrol Is Necessary.

Whether Middlesex county roads will be patrolled next summer by a provincial speed cop is a matter to be decided by Crown Attorney Albert M. Judd.

It is just a question whether the demand for a speed officer will be great enough to warrant the expenditure of the crown attorney. "I am not prepared to say just now what will be done."

County Clerk John Stuart declared that the county of Middlesex would certainly not ask for an officer to patrol county highways.

"The expenses would be quite high," said Mr. Stuart. The county would have to pay all expenses, such as gasoline, oil, repairs, etc., and this would amount to a lot of money spread over the season."

Last summer it will be remembered, that Provincial Constable Mennie, who is now stationed in London, was brought to the city by the police. He was not allowed to follow the fatal accident to John Knott, who was run down on the Pipe Line road, near his home.

Obituary

MRS. GEORGE S. TEMPLAR.

Mrs. George S. Templar, a well-known resident of London East and a prominent worker in All Saints Anglican church, died yesterday at her home, 1 Victoria avenue, West London, occurred last night at 9 o'clock.

Mr. Low, who was 94 years of age, had resided in London for the past 45 years, and his unexpected demise came as a severe shock to his many friends.

He formerly lived in McGillivray township and is survived by his wife, Marion and two daughters, Marion and Geraldine, and one stepson, Arthur Cathro.

The funeral will be held on Saturday afternoon from the residence to Mount Pleasant cemetery. Rev. Hocking will have charge of the services.

HAROLD HAMLIN.

The death of Harold Hamlin, 27 years old, occurred at Victoria hospital this morning.

He is survived by his wife, Lillian, and his mother, Mrs. Bella Curtis, of this city. One sister, Mrs. Frank Oglesby, also survives.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

Three blocks in length and varies from a 46-inch to a 60-inch pipe during its course.

The G. W. V. A. are planning a St. Patrick's night concert at the Better Ole in the city hall.

Escaping sewer gas near the city hall has made life in the offices of the city treasurer and the city auditor almost unbearable. Plumbing Inspector Young was asked this morning to try out the smoke tester.

Citizens seeking licenses are still calling daily at the city hall, though licenses have been issued by the police department for the past three months. Partly because of the fact that for years people have called at the same office annually for licenses and partly because of the fact that one of the offices at the city hall is labelled "License and Relief Department," has the change passed unnoticed by many people.

CHILDREN OF 25 ARE DEFENDED

Parental Guidance Is Needed More Today, Detroit Tells Kiwanians.

While deploring the lack of parental guidance in this age, George Berkman, supervisor of public schools in Detroit, assured the London Kiwanis club that the boys and girls of today were as fine and full of possibilities as any children in any other age. Mr. Berkman, who was speaking to the club on the tenth anniversary of the foundation of the Kiwanis movement in America, dealt appropriately enough with the work of the club amongst children and unfortunately, the essential spirit of the club.

Having outlined the inception of the mothers club in Detroit ten years ago and told the story of its early failures, Mr. Berkman discussed the relation of the club to the boys and girls of today.

We are apt today to criticize our boys and girls," he said, "but we must not forget that the temptations offered them are infinitely greater now than ever before. What they need is more care from their fathers and mothers, and a little more attention and love from themselves. They are entitled, that they will grow up to be as fine a race as any that has ever lived. I have no fear for them or for the race. But it is up to us to see that they get the best home influence."

"The supreme test of life after all is manhood and womanhood. There is nothing of more importance to the individual or the nation than that. As the child is trained so will he or she meet this test. The result lies very largely at the door of the parents."

HERZL GIRLS. The Herzl Girls celebrated the sixth birthday of their organization on Wednesday evening, a guest of honor, followed by a supper at the Horton street synagogue, was greatly enjoyed. Isidore Goldstick, honorary president, was the guest of honor, and Miss Rebekah Oppenheim, the president, presided over the pretty supper table, where the big birthday cake with six small blue candles, the chief feature. Tall blue candles cast a soft glow over the table, and carried out the colors of the organization. A program of songs, stories and games, concluded the evening. During the happy event each girl received a small birthday gift, which was a small blue candle, the colors of the club, blue and white.

ST. MARK'S GUILD. The regular meeting of the ladies' guild of St. Mark's Anglican church held in the schoolroom of the church yesterday afternoon. There was a good attendance. Mrs. E. Wilks, the president, presided over the meeting and she welcomed four new members to the organization. The members decided to buy the material for the surplices for the children who are to be in the choir in the near future. Mrs. R. Lamberton and Mrs. R. Parker were appointed to the committee to do the buying. It was also decided to make an autograph quilt.

Plans were discussed for a social afternoon, which will be held on Thursday, Feb. 5, and the following ladies were appointed to committee: Mrs. E. Wilks, Mrs. R. Lamberton, Mrs. R. Parker, Mrs. E. Wilks, Mrs. R. Lamberton, Mrs. R. Parker, Mrs. E. Wilks, Mrs. R. Lamberton, Mrs. R. Parker.

NEW ST. JAMES. A very enthusiastic meeting of the executive and district representatives of the cradle roll of New St. James' Presbyterian church, held on Wednesday afternoon at the home of the president, Mrs. L. McGowan, Sydenham street. In looking back over the work of the past year the reports showed that the ladies had reason to feel proud of the work they have accomplished among the different homes for children, the Victoria nurses, the Salvation army and other charitable work. During the year they also adopted three children at the Ronalds Roy church home. Following the business session a dainty lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Hindmarsh, Mrs. Buchanan and Mrs. Bryant.

CLASS NO. 3.

The members of class No. 3 of the Church of the Redeemer recently held a jolly skating party. After a pleasant evening on the ice a delicious supper was served at the home of Miss S. Gibbs, the teacher, who was assisted by her mother, Mrs. S. J. Gibbs. Among the guests were Misses S. M. Mansland, Margaret Vray, Phyllis Pether, Helen Tomlinson, Louise Schussle, Mabel Taylor, Dorothy MacPhee, Bernice Fier, Velma Walters and Lily Fox. The evening concluded with music and dancing.

SEPARATE COURT WILL DEAL WITH SEWER CLAIMS. A separate court of revision will be held in the Wellington-High street sewer, as notifications have been sent to 675 people who are included in the special local improvement assessments of that district.

In the consolidation of local improvement accounts for last year, the engineer's department has completed all other works than the Wellington-High street system. Two courts of revision will be held over the local improvement assessments.

PUBLICITY DIRECTOR.

Fred G. Knapp, advertising specialist of this city, has been appointed as publicity director for the Great War Veterans' Day Week, which will be staged during the last week of March in the armories. Mr. Knapp will have entire charge of all advertising for the veterans' big show. All publicity work will be carried on from his office at 7 Mark Lane.

BACON PRICE REDUCED.

Montreal, Jan. 23.—The price of bacon was reduced here this morning from 35c to 34c a pound. Dealers expect another substantial decline in price shortly, owing to the supply exceeding the demand.

HOCKEY SPECIAL.

A hockey special will leave London for Stratford at 6:30 tonight, bearing 600 Londoners for the game tonight. Returning, the train will leave Stratford at 11 o'clock. It will make one or two stops and arrive here in time for the last street cars, it is expected.

NURSERY RHYME GROUP TO APPEAR IN LORD ROBERTS SCHOOL CARNIVAL. In the "King's Winter Carnival," which is being presented in the Central Collegiate institute auditorium on Friday next under the auspices of the Lord Roberts mothers' club, the above group of nursery rhyme people will appear. "The Little Old Woman in the Shoe," who stands at the head, is little Miss Lillian Graham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Castle Graham. The first child in the shoe is Helen Burnett, and the others, Grant Young, Naomi Cooper and Betty Linnell. Those outside drawing the shoe are Helena Blackwell, Ruth Robinson, Jean Weister, Leslie Clarkson, and Headley Pearson standing at the back.

FRUIT TARIFF PROBLEM DEBATED BY GROWERS

Spirited Addresses Heard at Association Meeting Yesterday.

The London and Middlesex fruit growers' meeting at the department of agriculture office yesterday afternoon conducted a spirited debate on the tariff question as it affected the fruit industry.

W. H. Mundy and G. H. Noyes spoke in favor of free trade and submitted that better results would be obtained by the fruit growers of Canada and the United States, if they were allowed free access to each other's markets.

Green College and Roy Blinn maintained that it would be much better for the Ontario growers if a higher tariff was put on all fruits from the United States. This would mean a better demand for Ontario fruits. They pointed out that the United States growers used Ontario as a dumping ground for their strawberries. A program of protection, berries and that U. S. berries were cheaper in Canada than they were in the United States.

John E. Hocking, president of the association, presided at the meeting.

CITY-OWNED HOUSES CHECKED BY COMMISSION

Harry Wray, chairman of the housing commission, and John Cunningham, manager, spent this morning in going over rented and vacant houses of the commission. They checked up on repairs and renovations necessary and are making a report for Monday afternoon's meeting of the commission.

According to Mr. Wray an independent valuation of these houses will be secured in a very short time through the city assessment department and an outside valuator. This report is expected to show just what these houses are worth on the market, and hopes are entertained that the book value will go up considerably.

UNEMPLOYMENT PIVOT OF BRITISH POLITICS

Chicago, Jan. 23.—Solution of the British unemployment problem, difficulties through a gradual amalgamation of Liberals and Laborites, and banishment of unemployment primarily to encourage international trade were predicted yesterday by Lord Christopher Thomson, minister for the air service in the MacDonald Labor cabinet, in an address to the Chicago council on foreign relations.

Reviewing the international political situation in Great Britain, Lord Thomson pointed to unemployment as the pivot issue in Russian trade relations as the keystone of trade restoration.

NEW SUBSTATION TO COST $115,000

Work on Carling Street Link in Hydro System Progressing Well.

When fully equipped, the new Carling street substation will represent an expenditure on the part of the public utilities commission approximately $115,000, covering the cost of building and equipment.

At that, however, it will not be the most elaborate or expensive substation embraced by the commission's system. This honor will remain with No. 2 station at Kitchener and Campbell streets, which is valued at about $160,000.

The building of the Carling street station is completed except for the pouring of the concrete for the foundation and the roof and the hanging of the doors. R. G. Wilson, contractor, working on the cost plus basis, has carried on the construction in the process of which employment has been given to 12 or 15 men.

The commission awarded the tender for the erection of equipment for the new station, amounting to $36,500, to the Westinghouse Electric Company more than two weeks ago. Since the company has to make the bulk of the machinery on special order, delivery cannot be made until about April 1.

After careful consideration of the question the commission has decided that it would be most satisfactory to have the Westinghouse Company install the equipment purchased from them. The installation is therefore to be made by the electric company at a cost of $4,800. During the period of the installation the Westinghouse Company is to employ as many men as possible. Such a plan will enable employees of the commission to secure an intimate acquaintance with the workings of the new machinery and will at the same time relieve the commission of just that much of its payroll.

WHEABLE NOW QUILTS NEW ST. JAMES CHURCH

Relieves Clerkship Situation by Resigning Post—To Join First Church.

New St. James' session, which for several days occupied the unique position of having two clerks, again has only one.

The situation has been straightened out to a degree through the resignation of G. A. Wheable, M. C., nearly two years past in succession to R. D. Miller.

"Claiming to have held the opinion that Mr. Wheable's action was a resignation of his position as clerk, that he had resigned from the position of clerk at its last regular meeting, the new St. James' session appointed T. A. Egan in his stead as clerk."

Mr. Wheable associated himself prominently with the unionist adherents during the recent campaign, and his resignation now comes as practically the last of the 12 or 13 unionist elders of the session. He is joining the First Presbyterian church at the preparatory service being held tonight, First church having voted to enter the United Church of Canada.

BRITAIN LEADING IN SHIPBUILDING

Last Year's Total Shows
Large Increase Over
1923.

New York, Jan. 22.—Merchant ships launched throughout the world last year aggregated 2,247,751 tons, a gain of 37 per cent over launches for 1923. Lloyd's register of shipping announced today.

The 1924 total is the first post-war return to show an increase over the year immediately preceding it. Last year's figure, 2,247,000 tons, compared with 1,643,000 tons in 1923 and 3,332,000 in 1913.

Last year's gain, said the statement, was due in a great measure to the increased volume of launches in Great Britain and Ireland. Comparative figures showing the gross tonnage of vessels sent down the ways in the last two years follow:

	1924.	1923.
Great Britain and Ireland	1,439,885	645,651
United States	139,463	172,817
Other countries	668,403	824,713

World total ... 2,247,751 1,643,181

AT THE THEATRES

LOEW'S THEATRE.

"East of Suez."

Pola Negri, always a favorite with London movie fans, was far from disappointing a large audience at Loew's last night in her latest picture "East of Suez." The role of Daisy Forbes, beautiful young daughter of the British ambassador to Peking, suits Pola.

The plot is woven about the star, white men, a sinister Chinese nobleman who sets a trap for the girl and an old Chinese nurse, who alone holds the secret of the mystery of Daisy's parentage. "It is the general belief that the girl is half Chinese. Subsequent events prove otherwise.

The picture is an adaptation of the Broadway stage success is directed by Raoul Walsh, who was responsible for the direction of the "Thief of Bagdad."

"Aesop's Fables," which are more popular every week they appear, are exceptionally clever this week, and with "Topics of the Day," are featured. "The Cat's Meow," a Mack-Sennett comedy with Harry Langdon, also pleased.

Every one of the three vaudeville acts can be recommended. Klass and Brilliant in a musical offering, "Stick to Your Horn," pleased the audience most and were most liberal in their encores.

The three Demaroff Sisters have a novelty dance revue that is a whole lot better than the average. All three girls are nimble and they sure can dance. Special mention should be made of the costumes.

Willie Ride & Co., comedy cyclists, have some good stunts and received lots of applause.

CAPITOL THEATRE

"Peter Pan."

"Peter Pan," which has stood for more than twenty years as one of the most charming classics of the stage, is being presented in one of the most delightful fantasies ever seen on the London stage. Produced from the novel and play by James M. Barrie, opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre. Betty Bronson and Ernest Torrence are featured in the cast.

Peter Pan is the boy who wouldn't grow up. His quaint philosophy that youth is eternal and life is joy, joy, joy, is contagious from the first fairy-like scene of the picture. In no time the little lad of happiness has taken you to the Forest of Make-Believe, the Never, Never Land.

"Peter Pan," as a motion picture, shows as the stage production never could. Children's adventures with Indians and pirates. Every word picture the author painted in the story has been visualized on the screen with remarkable photographic effects.

Every man with the heart of a boy is Peter Pan. And everyone can remember days in dreamy solitude of hand-to-hand encounters with whiskered pirates of the Spanish main, desperate battles with the savage Redskins and death struggles with the wily Captain Hook.

"Peter Pan" is something new in motion pictures. It is admirably cast and contains scenes regarded as perfect gems among photographic classics. Every child who saw the picture yesterday was held spellbound for two hours at Indians, pirates, fairies and the colorful deizens of the Never, Never Land. The Capitol Theatre has made arrangements to screen the production at ten o'clock on Saturday morning so that every child in the city might have a chance to view an appealing spectacle.

CANADA WILL RETURN TO BRITAIN FOR LOANS

Approach of Pound Sterling To Par Value Cause of Change.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, Jan. 22.—With the British pound now approaching par, there will be a tendency for the Canadian government to look to London rather than New York for loans in the future. Prior to the war Canada's financing was done largely in London. The depreciation in the value of the pound sterling, however, made it necessary for the government to go to New York for its loans. Large amounts were also raised through domestic loans.

TELLER AND BANK FUNDS MISSING FROM GLACE BAY

Canadian Press Despatch.
Glance Bay, N.S., Jan. 22.—Justin Bennett, teller of the Glace Bay branch of the Royal Bank of Canada, is missing, and also funds of the bank amounting to several thousand dollars. The acting manager, J. W. Connell, of Montreal, who is relieving R. G. McCullen, local manager, now on vacation, could not give the exact amount but said the figure was "substantial."

The teller's vault had been rifled of Monday's cash and some of the books are also missing.

When You Can Be Well, Why Be Sick!

Why Suffer Delay and Grow Worse?

Enjoy Life—Health—Happiness

To Have No Back Pains, No Nervousness, No Kidney Disease, With Plenty of Life, Energy and No Blood Disease, Is the Wish of Every Young, Old or Middle-Aged Person.

To you—if you are sick—if you suffer—if you are afflicted with any ailments of MEN—if you are worn out, tired or failing, if you need medical advice—if you are not in perfect health—if life is a dragging, miserable existence—if you lack energy, vim and vigor that make life worth living, to you—rich or poor—young or old—you need my treatment at once.

Nerves and Blood Are Life

The lack of nerve force is found among men of all ages. This is true with men in all walks of life, from the day laborer to the mechanic or professional man. Merchant and clergy are alike sufferers—no man is exempt from the ailment who has rebelled against nature's laws—so if you have the result of overwork, dissipation, sedentary habits or worry, and your vital organs are disturbed, remember, delay in seeing the right doctor makes it more difficult to overcome the symptoms and you might reach an incurable condition beyond relief if you delay too long.

My Equipment

Is composed of the latest and best known agents in Electrical, Surgical and Mechanical Apparatus, and I am prepared by the knowledge of their uses and the experiences in prescribing them so as to get the greatest uniform results from them.

I Am Prepared to Give You

Permanence, Bacterins, Vaccines and any and all forms of treatment of this character that have been tried and proved a success.

YOUNG MEN—THINK OF YOUR FUTURE

How about it, are you qualified to face it—are others doing more and getting more out of life than you are? Find out, if you don't know already, what is dragging you down. No one can violate nature's laws and succeed. I have helped thousands physically, mentally, morally, I believe I (as I have thousands of other men) can help you. Just be frank and tell me your troubles. Let me help you to regain and maintain your health.

CRIME IN LONDON SHOWS DECREASE

Report of Chief of Police Birrell Shows Decided Reduction.

WANTS MORE MEN

Crime in London during the past year showed a substantial decrease over former years, according to Chief of Police Robert Birrell's annual report of the department of public safety, presented to members of the police commission meeting yesterday afternoon.

The report, submitted in comprehensive detail, reveals that the more serious criminal offenses were very few in London in 1924, and the total number of cases and convictions for the year were almost 1,000 less than in 1923. This, however, is partly due to the fact that fewer summonses were issued owing to the use of the warning card system.

Chief of Police, Robert Birrell, was complimented by the members of the commission, Magistrate Graydon, Judge Talbot MacBeth and Mayor George Wenig, on the high standard of efficiency maintained throughout the year in the department of public safety.

The traffic problem is one of the greatest things the police department has to contend with, Chief Birrell informed the commission.

Needs Larger Force.
 He requested an increase of at least four police constables be made to the department. The employment of more officers in the very near future is a matter of vital importance, he said.

Chief Birrell's report again drew attention to the inadequate condition of the present headquarters. He pointed out that the building was erected more than 50 years ago, and that every department of the building was too small to make for desired efficiency.

Ontario temperance act infractions, other than minor breaches, such as intoxication, show an increase over 1923, the convictions for 1924 numbering 10 more than in the former year. Convictions on charges of drunkenness totalled 307.

The total number of summonses issued for the year were 2,176, of which 2,032 were made out against males and 123 against females. This is a decrease for the year of 1,297. Convictions numbered 1,560. As many as 422 cases were dismissed, were committed for trial and sentence was suspended on 45. The gross decrease for 1924 in the number of convictions in all cases over the previous year amounts to 1,166.

The police department made 925 arrests during the year without warrants, and 196 with. Thirty-two persons were arrested in London for outside points, which included cities as far distant as Regina and Hull, Quebec.

O.T.A. Offences Increase.
 The year 1920 was the most active year in the local police court for O. T. A. cases, and since that time infringements of the Ontario liquor law have shown a marked decline. This year, however, revealed a slight increase. More than 150 cases were heard by Magistrate Graydon, 85 of which were convicted. The remaining 72 were dismissed. Drunkenness in the city for the past year was slightly less than in 1923, there being 35 fewer cases.

The department handled 324 cases of criminal offenses, involving property loss to citizens. Of the total number of such cases reported, only 92, or 28.39 per cent, were detected and the offenders brought to justice. In reference to the small percentage of these cases detected, Chief Birrell explained that a great number of bicycles had been stolen during the year. These were mostly "borrowed" wheels, and were taken by boys for a short time and then abandoned. They could only be reported as stolen, however, the chief said.

The total amount of property loss was $49,365, of which $43,709, or 88.75 per cent, was recovered and restored to owners.

39 Cars Stolen.
 Thirty-nine motor cars were stolen during the year. These were valued at $30,200. They were all recovered except one, valued at $400. Ninety-seven bicycles were recovered and 39 remain stolen.

Finances of the department of public safety are in excellent condition. Although there was an increase

MEN AND HORSES
 How closely related is man to the more intelligent of the animals is seen in many of the ailments to which both are prone and the remedies to which they answer.

Doctors and veterinarians are often times surprised to learn of the similarity of their methods of handling the ailments of man and beast.
 Sprains, burns, scalds, scratches and many other minor injuries, many everyday ailments, too in men and animals take the same course, and both answer immediately to the same treatment—Absorbine Jr.

Absorbine was first discovered by a very close student of the horse, W. F. Young, and by him, devoted to its cause. Its very exceptional benefits, however, were promptly seized upon for the human race and, in a milder form, the preparation is sold all over the continent today as Absorbine Jr. It is used for men, women and children everywhere as a positive germicide—a germ killer—and a prompt and certain healer of all hurts. It is useful not only for all the purposes served by ordinary liniments and embrocations, but as a mouth-wash and for anything else where a germicide is needed. Don't wait until you need it. Get it in the house today. $1.25 at your druggist's.

COLORFUL PLAY PRESENTED BY PUPILS OF LORNE AVENUE

"Canada Forever" Staged in Auditorium of Central Collegiate.

140 CHILDREN IN CAST

It was barely 8:30 o'clock when the velvet curtains fell on the last scene of the patriotic play, presented last night in the Central Collegiate auditorium by one hundred and forty children of the Lorne Avenue school. They fell on Miss Canada, white-clad and crowned with scarlet maple leaves, who had just completed a beautiful solo dance and uttered the last thrilling words of the play—"Canada Forever." Patricia Adams, as Miss Canada, stood out as one of the leading characters of the play. Beautiful as was this little scene showing Miss Canada alone, against a pretty sylvan background, cleverly painted by the teachers of the school, the outstanding scene of the whole

Eight of Family Killed In Sleep

Associated Press Despatch.
 Rome, Jan. 22.—A sensational crime is announced in despatches from Cagliari, Sardinia, today. Involving during the night the home of a family of eight persons living in the Jerzu quarter of that town, unidentified assassins killed all eight members of the family as they slept. The message gave no further details of the crime, but stated that widespread search had been instituted by the police for the criminals whose motive in committing the wholesale murder was not known.

production was the one which just preceded it. This was the great colorful tableau formed when all the choristers rathered on the stage to sing "O Canada." Shirley Doherty as the Fairy Queen, a glittering sprite of white and tinsel and sparkling green, held the center of the stage with her races and chorus of fairies. Behind were ranged in brilliant array Miss Canada's maidens, Indian maidens, and khaki boys, Canadian workmen and all of the provinces.

Production Well Chosen.

In the foreground stood Miss Canada on the left and Miss Wisdom on the right, with the aviator who had just found the lost key to Jack Canuck's treasure house, close by. George Spalding as Jack Canuck himself, clad in khaki, made a spectacular entrance, and the climax of the play was reached with the singing of "O Canada."

Directed by Mrs. E. Combs and the teachers of the Lorne Avenue school, the play was remarkably well presented. A medley of attractive dance and song numbers with a little plot running through it, the production had been well chosen and justified the success which attended its presentation. The collegiate auditorium was packed for the occasion with an audience which gave sympathetic and enthusiastic applause.

The main characters were ably taken. Doris Tuck appeared in the difficult role of Miss Wisdom, which she carried through in clever fashion.

Lyle Sellers took the part of the aviator, while all of the choruses were led by talented boys and girls.

Display Much Skill.

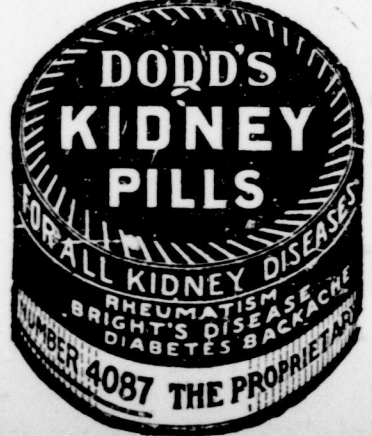

One of the prettiest of the choruses was that of the Indian Maidens, led by Mary Smith and Gertrude Adams. The Sailor Girls had a difficult dance and song number which they executed with skill. A solo sailors' hornpipe was a feature of this chorus, led by Jean Horner. The Boy Scouts should not be forgotten, and this sturdy chorus had for its leader, Maurice Taylor.

The first part of the play, in which a bright array of Canadian flowers appear in quaint choruses, was exceedingly colorful. There were violets and buttercups, daisies and clover blossoms, and dandelions, all gathered about Miss Canada.

The plot concerns itself with the lost key to Jack Canuck's treasure house, and how everyone turns out to hunt for it. The play comes to an end when the aviator arrives bearing the key and Canada's treasure is safe. It has a patriotic moral and makes an attractive production for school children.

At the close Principal O. E. Oppen of the school made a brief appearance on the platform, and pretty baskets of flowers were presented to Mrs. Combs, director of the play, and Mrs. Adams, the pianist. The presentations were made by Lyle's Miss Alma Campbell and Master Kenneth Gowin on behalf of the Lorne Avenue mothers' club.

SKIRT UNDECIDED AS TO ITS LENGTH

Fashion Show at Hotel Commodore, New York, Predicts Trend of Styles.

Associated Press Dispatch.
New York, Jan. 22.—The straight silhouette holds first place in the American fashion for women on view at the Hotel Commodore, where the spring fashion show of the National Garment Retailers' association is being held. Here and there in the gowns exhibited are suggestions of bustles, circular flounces and pannier effect, but these pay for their daring by being less warmly received.

Dress for every occasion, including the bathing beach, is shown. Many of the styles obviously are certain to become popular. That is true of every fashion show. But there is one note of doubt struck in the present show. No one seems to have fixed the proper skirt length. These lengths run from the suggestion of a train to the very short street frock so many women favor. Suit coats are particularly long-legged, many seem to be individual articles of dress.

Sport clothes, decorated with applied silk or accompanied by some unusual bit of embroidery or a dashing scarf, indicate a tendency to even beyond the comfort even of sport clothes. Materials of every variety are on view, with printed silks of numerous striking colors dominant.

A feature of the show is the bridal costume, said to have cost $1,000. It is a departure from the straight silhouette, with a full skirt and billowy folds. The dress required fifteen yards of Lohengrin satin, and the bodice outlines the figure, and is boned like those of two or three generations ago. The court train is caught in the flesh, and seems part of it, and the plain veil of tulle is caught below the collar, being held there with a narrow wreath of orange blossoms.

SHEERER YET, AND SHEERER

Special to The Advertiser.

New York, Jan. 22.—The colder the weather, the thinner the stockings become. One dealer advertises how so sheer that "one can read right through them, which might be of benefit to the stoutest lady. Most women, however, are satisfied if observers can see through the stockings without seeing through the wearer."

WEDDINGS

WAITE-CLINTON.

A very quiet wedding was solemnized at the Wellington street Methodist parsonage on Wednesday, Jan. 21, when Miss Mabel Alice Clinton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Clinton, became the bride of Charles Richard Waite, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Waite. Both are of Yorkmouth township. Rev. G. T. Watts officiated. Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Waite left on their honeymoon to Hamilton and Niagara Falls, and upon their return they will reside on the groom's farm in Yorkmouth.

ARRANGE PROGRAM OF PRESBYTERIAL

Eleventh Annual Meeting To Be Addressed by Miss Caroline MacDonald.

The eleventh annual meeting of the London Presbyterian of the W. M. S. is to be held in Knox Presbyterian church, St. Thomas, on Feb. 18 and 19. It promises to be an outstanding event in the history of this organization, and each session will be marked by interesting addresses.

On Wednesday afternoon there will be a registration of delegates at 1:30, after which the first session will be held. Mrs. J. M. McEvoy of this city will preside. At 4 o'clock an interesting address will be given by Miss Lillian MacVicar, who is home on furlough from India. Miss MacVicar's talks are most inspiring, and she will once more speak of her work among the people of India.

In the evening of the same day there will be a public meeting at 8 o'clock, when Miss Caroline MacDonald of Japan will address the audience. Miss MacDonald's talk will also be very interesting, and by it she will throw a great deal of light on the conditions of Japan and the work done there. Rev. J. M. MacGillivray will preside at this meeting.

Thursday morning's routine will be of a business nature, when the reports of the district vice-presidents will be given. The report of the nominating committee will also be presented at this meeting, and the election of officers for 1925 will be held.

On Thursday afternoon, Mrs. Detweiler of this city will give a report of the work of the C. G. I. T. groups and at 4 o'clock Mrs. F. McI. Smith will address the assembly. Following her short talk, Miss Lila Cameron will give a report of the summer school. At the social hour, when tea is served, "Our Young Women and the C. G. I. T. Groups" will be the topic for discussion.

A rally of the girls and young women will feature the evening session, when Miss Olive Purdy will preside. The address will be given by Mrs. J. McIntyre of Toronto, and will be illustrated with lantern slides. At this session, Miss Emma Berry of London will extend the greetings of the student Christian movement convention.

MISS JUNE WARREN, soprano, who will sing the first time before the Women's Music club at the coming recital on February 2.

Illustrated with lantern slides. At this session, Miss Emma Berry of London will extend the greetings of the student Christian movement convention.

CLUB NEWS

WOMEN'S LABOR PARTY.

Mrs. Floyd Wells presided over last night's meeting of the Women's Labor party, which was held in the labor temple. The members will join with the Women's Canadian club to speak at a high tea in the Smallman & Ingram tearoom on the evening of Feb. 3. The meeting concluded with refreshments, served by Mrs. J. Barker, assisted by Mrs. A. Canswell, Mrs. B. Thomson and Mrs. B. Edwards.

ST. MARY'S MOTHERS.

A very successful social was held last evening under the auspices of the St. Mary's mothers' unit, when cards and dancing were enjoyed by approximately 200. The prizes for cards were won by Mrs. J. MacDonald and Joseph Larkin. Music for the evening was supplied by the Currier orchestra. Credit for the success of this happy event is due the conveners, including Mrs. O. Cronwell, Mrs. Joseph Larkin, Mrs. J. P. McClafferty, Mrs. T. Kinney, Mrs. P. Keicher, Mrs. W. J. Ryan and others.

ENTERTAINS EXECUTIVE.

The executive of the Chesley avenue mothers' club held a tea recently at the home of Mrs. Annie Henderson, Esplanade street, the object being to raise funds for relief work in the district. The result was the very fine sum of nearly $20. The feature of the afternoon was an automobile contest. Mrs. McFarlane capturing the prize. An excellent program included piano numbers by Mrs. James Hendrie. At the tea hour the hostess was assisted by Mrs. Dowell and Mrs. Patton. Mrs. L. P. Mayne presided over the gathering.

One of the finest recitals of the season is promised the Women's Music club on Monday, February 2, when the following London artists will give the program: Miss June Warren, soprano; Mrs. Charles Ivey, violinist; Miss Helen Little, pianist; and Mrs. Harold Elliott, pianist.

GOLDEN LINK CLUB.

Mrs. G. Webber was the hostess for the Golden Link club, Thursday afternoon, at her home, Ellis street. Mrs. C. Brown won first prize and Mrs. J. Steel second. A very pleasant surprise was given Mrs. D. A. Gray, when the members remembered her birthday by presenting her with a silver cream pitcher. Mrs. A. Sheridan reading the address. Mrs. R. Collins making the presentation. Refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. R. Collins and Mrs. Lane.

LOBO W. I.

Mrs. C. V. Tuckey, president of the Lobo W. I., entertained the members of the branch and visitors at her home this week. The vice-president, Mrs. William Hodgson, presided. About fifty members were present, answering the roll call with a new year's greeting. It was decided to donate $5 to the Armenian relief work, and subscriptions were made to several magazines for the Byron sanatorium.

Mrs. Malcolm Gray led an interesting discussion on "A Woman as a School Trustee—Do We Need Her?" The paper was presented by Mrs. Duncan MacCallum on the subject, "How the Women's Institute Has Been a Benefit in the Community." The musical numbers were supplied by Elizabeth Sells and Laura Edwards. Tea was served by the refreshment committee at the close of the program. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Leslie Griffiths, Byron College, the president, occupying the chair for this gathering which took the form of an agricultural meeting. The agricultural papers on the history of agriculture were given by Mrs. R. Miller. Mrs. W. Merriam and Mrs. Raymond Smith. The appointment of Mrs. Raymond Smith as secretary-treasurer was a feature of the meeting. Roll call was answered by a favorite recipe. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mr. McKee, the Base Line.

EDITH CAVELL NURSES.

The Edith Cavell nurses association will meet at the Institute of Public Health on Monday night. A special speaker of the occasion will be Mrs. Jessell, wife of Dr. Jessell, Waterloo street, who has come to the city recently. Her subject will be social service work in New York city, about which she is well versed.

WOMEN and THE HOME

IN THE SHADOW OF THE GUILLOTINE

By RAFAEL SABATINI.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

The stirring days of 1793 find Angel Vidal, of Paris, awaiting the return of her husband, the Jeanne Vidal. He arrives from Holland and Angel decides to accompany him on his return. An aristocrat begs shelter and she gives it. The hunt one proves to be Cavalier de Peyron, who had once attempted to harm her.

And then, before he could reply, someone tapped him on the shoulder. He turned to confront a slender fellow with a white, freckled face, and sneering mouth. He was bareheaded, and his hair was red as the coat of a fox. In dress, such as the sculptor's care bestowed upon it, he might have been an aristocrat.

"A word with you, Colonel Vidal," he said quietly, the sneering curl of his mouth becoming more pronounced. "As many as you please," said Vidal, "though I know not who the devil

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

Chanel's Narrow Scarf Neckline Still Finds Favor.

In an account of some smart statement was made that many well-dressed women present wore frocks showing Chanel's scarf-trimmed neckline—of the sort that Chanel had given up some time ago. It may be that Chanel will resume this detail that seems to have made such strong appeal to well-dressed women in Paris.

It had its origin as one of the innumerable variations that were played on the scarf idea. The mark of distinction is that this Chanel scarf is very narrow—too narrow to resemble a scarf at all. The sketch shows a Chanel frock with this scarf neckline, made of blonde chiffon, which is one of the so-called "natural" shades that have taken such a prominent place in present fashions.

One detail of evening dress of the present season that demands comment is the rather high décolletage. Frequently the line at the front is very little below the collar-bone, producing an effect more smart than generally becoming.

A décolletage that has gained some following this season is found on the sleeveless frock held over the shoulders with strings of beads or straps of some sort, while the straight line of the frock at the front is left quite high. Sometimes with this high, straight line in front the bodice is cut rather low under the arms—but this low armhole appeals less to Canadian taste than to French.

The V-neckline on the sleeveless frock is something of a novelty and seems to be gaining admirers steadily. An interesting neck finishing on a new Patou frock consists of a narrow band of velvet, bound tight around the neck with little loops and long ends tied snugly at the back of the neck. The frock is sleeveless, cut rather low in front, and to the waistline in back.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

THEY SAY—

That in Paris little girls have their hair tied with wide hair ribbons that form enormous bows on the top of their heads, and sometimes even in quite cold weather they go out wearing or playing with no other protection to their heads than this.

That at some of the winter resorts where skiing, sledding and other snow sports are followed, the vigner women are wearing woolen mittens in preference to woolen gloves with separate fingers.

That in Paris the fashionable dress length is spoken of as halfway between knee and ankle. This is more satisfactory than so many inches from the ground, since fifteen inches from the ground on one woman would be nearer the knee, and therefore "shorter" than on a taller woman. However, this halfway rule is con-

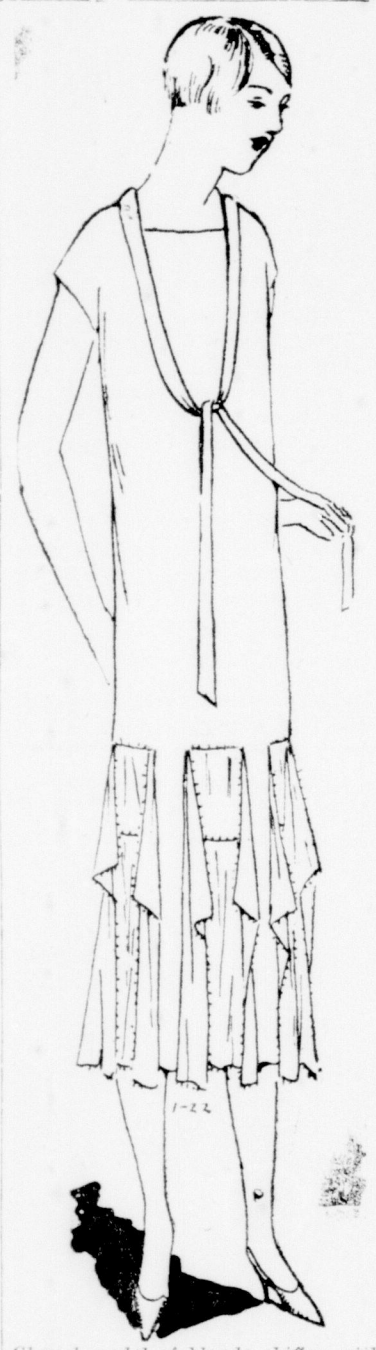

you may be."

"My name is St. Just," the man replied. "I am the most obscure representative of the aristocracy."

The description of himself was entirely superfluous. His name would have been enough for any man; it was more than enough for Vidal, who had been warned against him by Dumouriez, warned that St. Just was a friend of the fraudulent contractor Vidal was sent to denounce.

The soldier perceived that he had been indiscreet. But the precaution left him undismayed and unflinched. "I am listening," he invited the other.

"This way," said the representative, motioning him to step inside. Vidal shrugged, almost contemptuously—he disliked this fox-looking fellow with his foppish blue coat, his beaked boots and his immaculate buckskins that fitted him without a wrinkle. Nevertheless he obeyed the sidered by no means extreme. Some women have them even shorter.

Chanel model of blonde chiffon with scarf neckline.

That French women of fashion live no fondler for wool or silk-and-wool stockings because they look so out of keeping with the light shoes they are wearing at the present time. The way they get around the difficulty is to wear flesh-colored cashmere stockings of light weight, but considerable warmth, and over these wear thin silk stockings of whatever shade they wish.

command of those hard, pale eyes and that white hand so languidly waved. The crowd made way with alacrity. St. Just was greeted with the most bloodthirsty nature, the bitterest tongue, and the fiercest eloquence in the assembly.

There was something of the wolf under that fox exterior, and he was more feared, perhaps, than any man of his day. It was notorious, too, that he stood high in the favor of the incorruptible Robespierre, that in matters of policy the twain had but one voice.

He drew Vidal apart, and paced with him near the door across the lozenge of sunlight that gleamed brightly one moment to be secured the night as the gusty August wind drove its regiment of cloud-packs across the face of the sun.

"The readiness of your guess in itself confirms my accusation," was the unrepentant answer.

"It staggered the deputy for a moment. He raised his eyebrows.

You reason like a soldier, which is to say that you do not reason at all. Since Lemoine is the only contractor in the last three months who had been charged by the government with the supply of foodstuffs to the army it inevitably follows that your accusation must be aimed at him."

He paused a moment and then, in a humbly cold eyes scanned the faces of the stalwart soldier. "Tell me, Colonel Vidal, is this accusation the only business that has brought you from the army?"

"It is the chief business."

"What is the other?"

"My general is anxious to receive the reinforcements promised him. I am charged to conduct the new levies back to Holland with me."

"Will you take a word of advice from me, colonel?"

"That," said Vidal, "will depend upon its nature."

"Turn your entire attention to what you deem—quite unjustly—the lesser part of your task. Obtain the assembly's sanction to conduct the levies to the army. As for the affair of Lemoine and the boots—leave it alone. You can do no good by—"

Vidal impatiently broke in. "You are speaking to a soldier," he said, half angrily. "I have received orders from my general, and none but my general may relieve me of them. Do you realize that were I to do as you are suggesting, Dumouriez could have me shot for disobedience?"

"I will see to that," St. Just assured him. "I will speak not only with my own voice, but with that of Robespierre himself. You shall have complete immunity from any consequence of your mission, or rather of your compliance with my request."

Vidal stood still and squarely faced the representative. "Will you tell me what affair this may be of yours?" he asked so truculently that a faint flush showed in the other's pale cheeks.

"I am concerned with the interests of the nation," replied St. Just, and he made it plain that he kept his patience with difficulty under the opposition. "I am convinced that the best interests of the nation would not be served by your denunciation."

"That is not my affair," said Vidal, stubbornly, disliking this fellow more and more. "My affair is to obey orders. I am an instrument; no more."

St. Just set his teeth. "You are receiving orders now," he said. "The army of France—your general himself—is subject to the representatives of the people—the sovereign people of France."

"Permit me to observe, citizen, that you are not the representative of the sovereign people. You are only one of the representatives. The others are inside there."

"And my business is with them in collective assembly, not with any single member of them who obviously is endeavoring to serve ends of his own behind their backs. Aye, you may glare at me, citizen Cavalier de St. Just, who began life as a revolutionist by rifling your own father's money-box. You're a thief, my friend, and the friend of thieves, as witness your concern for Lemoine."

"Citizen soldier," said St. Just between his teeth. He was livid and his eyes blazed with fury. "You insult me!"

"It is you who insult me by supposing that I am of your own dishonest kidney."

"Credent!" swore the representative. "You dog!" A word from me can destroy you."

"Speak up," Vidal bade him now in a voice of thunder. "Let the people hear your threats that they may cast themselves whether we have returned to the days of Capet when a knave of a court flunky might threaten an honest man. A word from you to destroy me? Bah! he laughed.

"I should have something to say to that. I am a soldier, Cadet. I have survived the guillotine, all of them in front, made with clean steel. Do you think a stab in the back from the dirty tongue of a politician is going to trouble me?"

St. Just recoiled before the fierce vehemence of the man.

He was afraid. Not only physically afraid of Vidal, but far more afraid of the incendiary effect which his words might have upon the crowd. St. Just knew well—and better—that the rabble was just so much anarchical tinder ready to be set in a blaze by the first fiery tongue that preached revolt against any authority whatsoever.

"Be silent, you fool!" he snarled.

The doors at the far end of the hall were thrown open at that moment. An usher's loud voice rang through the vast space.

The Citizen-Colonel Vidal is awaited by the representatives of the august nation at the bar of the assembly.

"I come!" he rumbled back, and half turned from St. Just. Then he paused, and considered the fox fellow over his shoulder. "And when I have told the representatives I shall tell the people—all of it, my friend. They shall hear from me that St. Just the thief is the friend of thieves, and they shall draw their own inferences from my talk. That is what you have earned by your attempt to pervert a soldier's honesty. Much good may it do you."

And he clanked off up the hall, his steps ringing through the silence that had fallen upon the crowd, eyed at by the bearded eyes of every man and woman present.

Beyond the double portals Vidal was detained for a moment by the usher, and when at last the small balize door leading into the chamber was opened, and the crowd, and the bar of the assembly he found that St. Just was before him. Even as he stepped forward at one end, he beheld the other end, and the latter was never far away and would to take his seat at the foot of the rostrum.

Thence St. Just's pale eyes met the soldier's, and an air of silent, unobtrusive challenge, which even now might have deterred a man less bold. Vidal, however, calmly sent his glance sweeping round the silent multitude of representatives as he drew forth the notes with which he came provided.

He began by speaking of the glorious achievements of their fellow countrymen and the lustre shed upon French arms in Holland, and went on to urge the need of reinforcements against the mercenaries of foreign tyrants if the campaign were to be brought to a speedy and victorious close.

His martial figure and the ringing voice, addressing them as it might have been a soldier's, made a profoundly favorable impression. Unconsciously he seemed to symbolize French military valor. To look at him was to gather a sense of confidence in the inevitable, ultimate prevailing of French arms.

He concluded that portion of his address with information that he was deputed by his general to lead to the field of glory such recruits as might have been raised in Paris during the last few days of the revolution. He spoke of the assembly, and found an echo in the gallery above, which was thronged with patriots of both sexes, many of them attracted thither by news of the scene between St. Just and the soldier, and fully expecting it to be now succeeded by a scene of still greater intensity.

Vidal paused a moment. Then, fixing St. Just, he passed to the second part of his errand.

"So far, citizen representatives, I have spoken of French valor and French heroism, in which all Frenchmen may justifiably take pride. Also that I must abandon so inspiring and inspiring a theme. But necessity demands that I speak to you now of French dishonesty, French cupidity, and French treachery. If we cannot avoid taking shame in this, at least we can remove that shame by punishing the deed that has evoked it."

He paused, and the expectant hush that followed was pierced by a short, thin laugh and the acid voice of St. Just, seeking to discredit the speaker by inviting contempt upon him.

"The citizen colonel is a maker of phrases."

But no one heeded the sarcasm; not even Vidal, who now proceeded formally to lay his accusation against the contractor of boots.

"They heard him in utter silence to the end. When that reached one or two deputies, each intending to make his way to the rostrum. But it was not for nothing that St. Just had taken his seat at the very foot of it. He anticipated the very thing that the steps of St. Just, and was granted speech by the president.

But Vidal, clenching his hand with his great index, threw back his head in a belated attempt to make his voice heard.

"Citizen president, I have not yet done," he roared. "Before you hear the deputy St. Just I have yet to inform you of a sequel to the affair of Lemoine, from which you will gather that you may have to hear the citizen St. Just in a different sense."

"If the affair is to be discussed," said St. Just, dominating the assembly from the height of the tribune, impressing it by his sardonic calm. "It were well to take one thing at a time. And already we have one very grave statement that requires to be dealt with."

"What else the citizen colonel may have to add touching a matter which he says himself is but sequel to that upon which you have heard him, must wait until we can find it expedient and convenient to discuss it. You will uphold me, citizen president, my suggestion that we proceed in order with our dates, and deal with matters singly as they arise."

"But—" began Vidal.

"Be silent, citizen colonel," the president commanded him.

St. Just shrugged and leaned against the bar, content to await his turn.

St. Just dabbed his lips daintily with a filmy handkerchief, and cleared his throat.

"We have heard a formidable accusation launched," he began. "It is an accusation which if established against the person it implicates will inevitably bring his head into the national basket. In the dark days of tyranny now overpassing the lives of true men were ruthlessly sacrificed upon slight evidence. But in the new age of reason that dawned upon France, in these glorious days of liberty and fraternity in which all men are equal in the eyes of the law, it would ill become us to form hasty judgments, or to—"

When a Man Marries He Simply Adds a Domestic Life to His Business Career, But No Woman Can Have Both.

"What sort of interests can the well-to-do man provide for his wife, or she for herself, comparable to the interests the man has in his own work?" a very intelligent young man asked me the other day.

"No person's interests should be entirely another's," he went on, "and while labor and sacrifice and unselfishness all play a very important part in every right-thinking person's life, they should not be everything. It isn't natural for any one to do everything for love—or love, and a square meal."

"And just as a man finds a kick in competitive endeavor in business, so should a woman. I think I find something very real, very tangible in life, entirely apart from her home or her family—something in which she herself is the central figure, something in which she can excel on her own account, and from which she can derive a satisfaction, and a reward, that doesn't come by proxy."

"It seems to me that what women need more than anything else is a strong, driving, personal, selfish interest outside of the home. How can they get it? They can't get it, my friend, without wrecking the home. The greatest misfortune in being born a woman is that one has to choose between domesticity and a career. She can't have them both, as a man can."

When a man gets married, he simply adds the comforts of a home, and the joy of having a wife and children, to the never-dying interest he finds in his business or profession. But when a woman gets married she has to sacrifice either one or the other, or else she makes a hash of both.

No woman can be a successful businesswoman and a successful wife and mother at the same time. Careers and babies no more mix than oil and water, and the woman whose hopes and ambitions and aspirations are centered on some outside interest has very rare to let the home fires go out for lack of tending.

But, for all of that, the domestic woman's life is not dull, nor lacking in thrills.

To begin with, to run a house economically and efficiently requires just as much executive ability, just as much planning and thought, as it does to run a business, and it is just as interesting a proposition. The housewife must be as good a buyer, know just as well how to assemble the stock she needs, use just as much tact and diplomacy in dealing with those about her, bring all of her ability to bear on the job just as much as she would if she were conducting a shop.

Believe me, the woman who gets no kick out of being a good housekeeper would get no kick out of business or a career. Whatever she did would be only the dull grind of a monotonous work to her, for she has no imagination, no pride of craftsmanship, no spirit that sings a psalm over labor well done. We take out of things only what we put into them.

Often it is more interesting to be the king-maker than it is to be the king, and the woman who helps her husband and her children on to success gets a happiness out of it that she never would have gotten out of the gratification of her own personal ambitions.

Finally, women share with God the supreme excitement of creation. Every mother who holds her babe in her arms gets a thrill out of it that no man ever gets out of any triumph. She has an interest beside which all other interests fail. She has all the ambitions, all the hopes, all the aspirations of the world bound up in the little bundle on her breast.

Oh, women do not find domestic life dull. They get plenty of thrill out of making comfortable homes and keeping husbands pacified and beaming down on them. God help us all when they cease to get a kick out of that, and have their vital interest outside of the home.

But he hadn't seen any one else there that morning, and when he had flown around looking for Peter, he hadn't seen any one who could have caught Peter. Finally he decided that sitting there now was a waste of time and he flew off to hunt for some one.

be almost sure to see him.

Now, it seemed to Peter that Terror would never leave his perch. He just sat and sat and sat and watched and watched and watched. But at last he did spread his wings and fly away. He was gone only a few moments, but when he returned and looked down in that bramble-tangle through the brambles Peter Rabbit was nowhere to be seen. Terror leaped forward and those keen eyes of his searched everywhere through that bramble-tangle. Right away Terror made up his mind that Peter must have slipped out and run away while he, Terror, was away.

He can't have gone far," thought Terror. "I was gone only a few minutes and he can't have gone far. There is no other place near where he could hide."

Up into the air went Terror and over the tops of trees this way and that, looking down through that bramble-tangle with those wonderful eyes of his. From up there in the air he could see all around for a long distance, and you know his eyes are very wonderful. But nowhere did he see a little brown form bounding along over the snow. Terror's wings are swift and strong. It took him almost no time at all to look everywhere that it was possible for a Rabbit to have run in the short time since he had just seen Peter sitting in the bramble-tangle.

Back to his perch Terror flew and once more looked all through that bramble-tangle. Peter wasn't there. Anyway, Terror couldn't see him there. It was hard to believe. Terror began to suspect that Peter must have left the bramble-tangle and had been caught by some one else.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 23, 1925.

Now It's Up To The Free Press.

On Tuesday of this week the London Free Press spoke with much fervor about the building up of a bonne entente between Ontario and Quebec. Nor was it simply a passing reference, but of the sort that burned with the fires of deep conviction; it uttered words that flow only when a person's soul is deeply stirred.

The Free Press said in part on that occasion: "For years the Free Press has been campaigning for a bonne entente between the French-speaking and the English-speaking citizens of Canada."

"For years this paper has been of the opinion that every person in Canada should speak English and French."

"In Quebec, right here at our doors, we have a vast region, a large population concerning which the people of the rest of Canada know very little more than they knew before the war of France or Belgium."

Ending the bonne entente epistle were the ringing words: "United, we stand on guard for Canada. . . . Divided, ultimately the resources of this great country would fall into the hands of the outsider."

Noble sentiments, every one of them. Fine, great big, soul-stirring emotions.

Why, then, did the Free Press on the very next day take a large slice of Quebec and dump it down in Central Africa?

A story in that paper described a trip made by the city engineer to Ungava in 1905 to view an eclipse of the sun there, and the heading announced:

"SAW ECLIPSE IN CENTRAL AFRICA."

What under the sun is the Free Press up to anyway? One day announcing, with all the fervor of a politician speaking on the full dinner pail, that "United, we stand on guard for Canada," and then the very next day piling on to Quebec, tearing Ungava from its proper moorings in the northern section of that province, and scouting away off and making a present of the territory to South Africa.

The Free Press had better work fast, organize an expedition to South Africa and get Ungava back and return it to where it belongs in Quebec. Otherwise its are-long campaign for a bonne entente between Ontario and Quebec is going to get busted up into a great many small sections.

Can Give An Object Lesson.

Some of the votes on church union show a Division of almost 50-50 on the question. A remarkable example of this comes from Brantford, where St. Andrew's Presbyterian church voted 236 for union and 235 against. The vote of one member would have turned the verdict the other way. St. Andrew's, Brantford, is not an isolated case, as there are quite a number where votes of almost similar character have been recorded.

It would be a much simpler matter to adjust had the majority been more decisive either way. In dealing with a vote that is almost a tie there will of necessity have to be a display of fair-minded Christian charity and toleration that the church should be in a position to supply.

The period of readjustment on which the Presbyterian church is entering will call for qualities of toleration and sympathetic treatment to a greater degree than the preliminary arrangements or even the taking of the vote.

After all, those who go into union and those whose conscience has dictated that they shall remain out are working for the same great cause. They have an opportunity now to give an inquisitive and somewhat skeptical world a demonstration of how Christian men can readjust their differences, even if those differences do entail the possession or the giving up of property that runs into large sums of money.

Your One Chance To See An Eclipse.

If you want to see a total eclipse of the sun, it is advisable that you do so on Saturday morning, because the next time one comes this way will be 224 years hence. There will be no old-timers here then to recall when there was one away back in 1925.

Prof. Kingston of the University of Western Ontario has done his full share toward telling the people of London and the district in general what to expect, and how to watch this unusual event in the heavens.

If the ancients had had the advantage of listening to astronomers they would have been spared many uncomfortable minutes when these total eclipses came on without any announcement. The men of those generations had the idea that something awful was about to happen; even writers of almost recent years carried the same idea in their works.

One marvels at the exactitude with which the astronomer of today can tell beforehand just when the eclipse will take place, at exactly what points it will be visible. He can tell to a second how long the sun will be covered in Hamilton, how much less time in London, and how St. Thomas will probably not see it at all. He can go farther afield and state definitely that one-half of New York city will be in darkness while in the rest of the metropolis there will be nothing unusual. He speaks with such finality that he takes his study out of the realm of theory and brings it down to the status of an established fact.

See all you can see on Saturday morning. Be ready with your smoked glass, and even if it is a cloudy morning there will be other remarkable features worth noting. If conditions are favorable the light on Saturday morning for the minute of the total eclipse should be about the same as an average night when the moon is on duty.

There is nothing to be alarmed about. The moon, in itself a dead body that does not use its own light, for it has none to give out, makes a trip around the earth every 27 1/3 days. On this particular trip it is going to come right in between us and the sun. It gives our finite minds a little glimpse into the infinite wonders of the great universe about us, and shows how wonderfully these great heavenly bodies swing in their well-charted courses in the great realm that we can refer to only as the sky.

All Eyes Turned Toward Ottawa.

Ottawa has at last come to grips with the great big issues of the day, and in this struggle the senate has joined.

Parliament opens on February 5, and it's a great session for the tailors and dressmakers of Ottawa. On the opening day the governor-general arrives at the seat of government; the premier appears then in his Windsor uniform, silk knee breeches and all, while the gentleman usher of the Black Rod is also resplendent in an outfit that bounds back to the days when knights were bold and gallantry held sway.

So there the stage is all set, but some one must be on hand to welcome the governor-general, and that some one is the aforesaid gentleman usher of the Black Rod. Nothing in all this to get excited about, but wait—the usher belongs to the senate and he must not go near the commons. Not for the life of him could he venture upon the vulgar soil of the commons. The main entrance to the parliament buildings leads not to the senate but to the commons, hence the senate declares that the governor-general should—or could we dare to say must—enter at the small entrance at the east end of the building because there, and there only, can the usher of the Black Rod properly usher the king's representative into the house and to the senate.

When it was suggested that the governor-general enter at the main door the senate was up in arms. The members who live in Ottawa promptly sent an ultimatum on the subject to the commons, and when it was deciphered it read "Not by a jugful." Never imagine for one short minute that the senate is going to allow one ounce of its glory to be bitten off and transferred to the other chamber. Great battles have been fought over smaller issues, and what the country needs today is not a cut in taxation, but rather another great battle of some sort or other.

So the stage is set; the senators have been aroused to action; the gentleman usher of the Black Rod is to be backed to the last ditch as a better exhibition than the premier in his gay Windsor uniform, silk breeches, cocked hat and all, and on this great nation-building issue the senate is prepared to ram its old muskets with rock salt and fight till there's not another charge of rock salt left.

The citizen who can fall to be inspired by this great Canadian episode is surely a white-livered individual. The idea of the governor-general entering parliament at the main gate rather than having his phaeton pull up at the entrance that vibrates only to the shuffle of senatorial feet—well, it's a darn insult to the senate and who's going to blame the old boys if they do kick their heels up over the dashboard?

Opportunity knocks, but he's rather inconsistent at times. Here's V. K. Greer, who just a short time ago built a tidy little hut to live in in South London, and is now called to a position that will ultimately beckon him off to Toronto.

Ned and Thrift

Thrift be a goodly thing to have, providin' as it's evened up, and all the savin' what it makes ain't took from out one single cup. Now that ain't plain like it should be so gettin' out this thought to you, I be a-tellin' of the thrift Ned Whiskers got his folks to do.

I mind of meetin' Ned one day when last year's time was most all done, and Ned was stormin' of the waste of his three daughters and his son.

So Ned he goes to home that night as angry as a chicken hen, he tells them of their wasteful ways and reads the riot act again. I guess before the thing was through Ned had a session with his spouse, he chalkin' down some hard, fast rules about the runnin' of the house.

Ned made the kids all walk to school although they lived high two miles out, he wouldn't give 'em street car fares, the walkin' kept away the gout.

Likewise he quit a-takin' them to see the movin' picture show, he said as how when he was young he never had such place to go. He made his wife cling to her boots no matter if they were too old, and if when she went walkin' out her shins and toes was blue with cold.

The furnace burned the coal too fast, so Ned he throttled down the heat, and says if they was cold at home to put more covers on their feet.

When all this thrifty stuff was on no doubt Ned saved a bone or two, instead of eatin' sirloin steak Ned piled the turnips in his crew.

I never seen much change in Ned when he was walkin' round the street, there never was when he come round much grass a-growin' 'neath his feet.

When Ned had et his supper up and choked the furnace for the night, he rolled his carcass down the street to where the scenes was gay and bright. He was as frisky as a colt, not balky like a long-eared mule, he was the first to greet the crowd and shoot a friendly game of pool.

And when they was a-through with that Ned drew the shekels from his jeans, and asked the boys to sit with him and quaff the tasty pork and beans. When street cars didn't come along why Ned would raise an awful fuss, he was blown if he would walk or wait, he'd ride home in a taxi bus.

So that was how Ned practiced thrift, how he was reachin' out for wealth, the boob he laid it on the kids but never turned it on himself.—ARK.

To the Editor

Closing of Fish Market.

West London Mother Says the Idea Should Be to Provide Good Food at Cost With No Idea of Making a Profit.

Editor of The Advertiser:

Sir—I noticed a letter in The Advertiser a day or so ago about the city council ordering the closing up of the city fish market, and I am as much at a loss to know what they could have been thinking about as the East End Worker.

Unless I am very much mistaken, a city fish market should be run not so much with the idea of making money out of it as providing cheap food for the people of London. A few years ago the government made an attempt to bring fish from the Canadian lakes in here at a low price, and it was a good move. Today the most of the fish is sent to American points. The council seems bound to kill off the last chance the people have of bringing back the idea of Canadian fish for Canadian tables at a price the people can afford to pay.

The aldermen who voted to close up the fish stall certainly do not understand the problem that is facing the housekeepers of London in trying to provide good food for their families in a time when fish is none too plentiful and wages not very high. If they did understand this question they would never have voted as they did.

I live in the west end of the city, but I entirely approve of the views of the person who wrote a day or so ago from the east end. When we get east and west together on this question we may get some place in the interests of cheaper food for London.

The Position of the Farmer.

Hopes Some of the City Residents Will See the Problems Rural Communities Are Facing and Offer a Solution.

Editor of The Advertiser:

Sir—After reading some of the figures given at the recent meeting of school trustees in London I hope some of the people in the cities can get a better idea of the load that the farmer is carrying at present in education as well as in other things.

There are not so many families on the farms; the young people do not stay here as they used to, because they find they can make more money by working less hours in the city, and you cannot blame them for going. There are other farmers right around here who would try the same thing if all their holdings were not tied up in farm lands, buildings and live stock.

It would not be so bad if it were not for the fact that every time the farmers make a move to try and better their condition in a political way they meet with opposition from the very people who should try and help them. When Mr. Drury was premier of Ontario the Toronto Globe, for instance, seemed determined to drive him out of office.

The farmer does not like to be held up as a poverty-stricken individual, but the plain fact is that he has been hard hit in recent years and he is entitled to the sympathetic consideration of the men in the cities who are always too ready to denounce him as trying to ruin the country by the political ideas he would like to see in force. We're not begging, but we would like the city people to try once in a while to put themselves in our place and then ask them what they would do.

A Real "Old Grit" Writer.

Says Tories Are Always Preaching On How the Country is Going to Be Ruined—Turns Back to Old Days of Tory "Patriots."

Editor of The Advertiser:

Sir—I have just received a letter from your paper that my subscription is due, and that I will be cut off if I don't pay up. I have been a reader of The Advertiser for some years, and the reason I stay with the paper is that I consider The Advertiser not just one of the best papers published, but the best of all papers in Canada today. Its policy not only on the political views of the day but on all subjects pertaining to the welfare of all classes, irrespective of politics, has been to give fair treatment to its opponents as well as to its political friends. That is my reason for standing by The Advertiser as a staunch friend, and as long as I find it continuing in that way I will stand by it.

I am a Halton county Liberal, one of the strongest kind. Some of the Tories in my district call me an old Grit, and probably I am, but I cannot help that, as I am loyal to my convictions as to what I think is right. I have read and heard so much of the so-called Tory loyalty, and it makes me think of the days of 1837 when they were so loyal as to seize McKenzie's type and paper and throw them in Toronto bay, rotten-egg Lord Elgin, then governor-general of Canada, fire the parliament buildings at Montreal, then have a meeting in Kingston and sign a manifesto for annexation to United States. That is the loyal Tory party of Canada that is always waving the old flag at election times and claiming they are the saviors of the country, and that unless they hold the reins of power the country will go to the bow-wows.

But in spite of all their talk the Liberal party is becoming stronger than ever. We have a real leader in Premier King and we will sweep the country at the next general election. With best wishes for the best newspaper in Canada, I remain, Making Home Brew.

"Cautious" Tells How to Prepare a Drink That Has Tremendous Force, and How To Test It.

Editor of The Advertiser:

Sir—I see that another man in Detroit is the victim of poison liquor, and it brings to mind the following recipe for home-brew liquor, which is intended more as friendly warning than a joke. "Chase wild turkeys for three miles, and gather up the hops. To them add ten gallons of tan bark, half a pint of shellac and one bar of home-made soap. Boil 36 hours, then strain through an L.W.W. sock to keep it from working. Add one grasshopper to each pint to give it a kick. Pour a little into the kitchen sink. If it takes the enamel off it is ready for bottling."

CAUTIOUS.

A woman dentist in the other London says girls entering the profession should have big feet. Probably because it's necessary to put a patient down on the floor sometimes and stand on him.

A man of 72 in Omaha has a fortune of $115,000 left to him, but says he will keep right on at his job of stacking shingles at $28 per week. Still he can take comfort from the thought that if a bundle falls on his toe he can take a couple of days off without starving.

IN AFFECTIONATE MEMORY OF A BELOVED FRIEND.

One by one our friends are passing. From the view of mortal eyes; Constantly our loved are homing; To their mansions in the skies; Kindest deeds are gladly proffered. While our dear ones lie in pain; Nurse and doctors are attentive, But our loved can not remain.

Tenderly are voices calling— Hands are beck'ning them away; While beside their fluffy couches We're entreating them to stay; We see not those hands which beckon, Nor sweet voices do we hear; But our loved have visions clearer, And acuter is their ear.

Sadly, softly and grief-stricken, Our farewells to them we say; Though to realms of fadeless beauty Angels lead them on their way. Their departing oasis upon us, Grief and sorrows, keen and deep; Then in loneliness we often Steal away to sadly weep.

Of ourselves we think in pity, Burdened with our load of care; We forget those happy welcomes For our loved ones over there. On those shores they'll not be quitting, To return to earth again, Till that blood-bought host from glory Comes with Christ the King to reign.

LITTLE CHANGE NOTED IN BROOKLYN ROBINS

Third Base and Right Field Only Positions To Be Changed.

HENRY RECALLED

Associated Press Despatch.

New York, Jan. 22.—Barring a bit of tinkering with the right field position, the riveting of an otherwise strong pitching department with a southpaw to replace "Dutch" Ruether, and a possible effort to bolster up third base, Manager Wilbert Robinson will stand fast with his second-place Brooklyn National league team for 1925. Uncle Robbie has gathered together a host of new material for the 1925 season, but his principal efforts being directed toward bolstering up the pitching department, which was woefully weak last season. Dick Lanning now is the strongest candidate for the regular berth in right field. Robbie was forced to use Griffith against left-handed pitching last season, due to the frequent injuries sustained by "Bunny" Neale. Brooklyn's only substitute right-handed batter, the team's secondary defence, which was woefully weak last season. Dick Lanning now is the strongest candidate for the regular berth in right field. Entrained for military camp. I left on the morning of Nov. 11. While waiting in Wilkes-Barre to make an Allentown connection news of the signing of the armistice arrived. The Pittston contingent was ordered to return home. I telephoned mother. She answered tearfully. She had broken down, of course, after I left. As so many mothers did in those days. I returned to Baltimore early in December and worked in the shipyard until March. Then I received a contract from the Buffalo club. It called for $200 a month. I wrote President Lammie, asking for $300, and I signed. Mr. Lammie also owned an interest in the Newark club. I was sent from the Eastern training camp to play with Newark in an exhibition game against the New York Yankees. I filled in as shortstop. Ernie Shore and Pete Schneider pitched for the Yankees. Muddy Ruel, who was later to reach the top of his game as Washington's catcher, did the receiving. The Yankees won 2-1. Ed. Rommel was one of the Newark pitchers. He had been south with the Giants. He was beaten, but he pitched a good game. That season he won twenty-two games in the International league, and the following year went up to the majors with the Athletics.

I didn't cover myself with glory at bat, although I did manage to get hold of one of Shore's twisters. I had hit for extra bases. I weighed about 140 pounds at the time. This added weight and the careful coaching Schulte the previous fall, had added considerable power to my swing. As I rounded first I saw Duffy Lewis stretch out his hands and catch my line drive.

The International league was a good school for youngsters that season. The clubs had many experienced players who had outlived their days in the big leagues. They were a great help in polishing the ones on the upgrade and making them ready for the majors. Players who, like me, were soon graduated from the International league, included George Kelly, Frank Brewer, Frank Elber, Frank O'Rourke, Al Schacht, Ed. Rommel, "Socks" Seibold, Charlie See and Bennie Bengough. Bill Ryan was with Buffalo that season. He won fifteen games and the next year was recalled by the Giants. Jack Bentley was with Baltimore. Wilbur Hubbell was pitching for Toronto.

Inside of Matthew's Trip.

Schacht, who was to be with me later in Washington, had a good season on the mound. He wasn't a comedian then, but a mighty good pitcher. He won nineteen games and lost seventeen for Jersey City. He never seemed to have much except headwork. He was one of the iron men of the league. He was a pitcher who never had a real chance in the majors until he was pretty well burned out by hard work in the majors. Then he couldn't stand the big league pace. There are such cases and they are among the tragedies of the diamond. Rube Parnham, Buffalo's leading pitcher and about the most effective in the league, won 28 games.

"Spark Plug" Matthews, who later had a notable record with the Athletics, was shunted back to the minors and came up again with Washington to help greatly in a successful pennant fight with the International with the rest of us ambitious youngsters. The Buffalo club was playing in Rochester the day he reported. He was in a navy uniform, just having been discharged. He changed it for a baseball suit and made an instant impression. He was a very little chap, a hard fighter and a hustler all the time.

There was much speculation when Washington led him up at a crucial stage in the pennant race. He helped inspire the team, and his hitting was a factor in starting us on a winning streak when he had either to go ahead or drop out of the race.

When the Buffalo club left Newark I was alone. The next time I talked to McGraw was when we shook hands before the first game of the world series in Washington.

"Hope the best team wins, Bucky," the Giant leader said. "You deserve credit for landing your club on top."

"Thanks, Mr. McGraw," I answered. "I hope I'll be half as successful in baseball as you've been."

TOM GORMAN ON TRAIL OF 'BAD MAN' RANDALL

Senator Manager All Het Up Over Tactics of Hamilton Player.

NIGHBOR IS OUT

Canadian Press Despatch.

Hamilton, Jan. 22.—Tom Gorman, manager of Ottawa's N. H. L. club, gives Ken Randall, Hamilton's veteran defence player, all the credit for the Bengals' 5 to 4 overtime victory over the Senators last night.

Gorman thought so much of Ken's play that he will report it to Frank Calder, president of the league.

It is Tommy's firm conviction that Randall "cut" the red, white and black out of a victory.

Randall butt-ended our goater, Connell, and he had to be sewed up. After that the youngster was untended and could hardly see the puck," said Gorman heatedly after the game. "And Randall also put Frank Nighbor out of commission," he added.

Early in the second period Nighbor had to be sewed up the ice, with blood streaming from a cut in his leg. Nighbor didn't know who kicked him, but Gorman insisted that it was Randall. Nighbor was unable to play again. He will hardly be able to get back into action for a week, Dr. Perkins, after inserting three stitches in the cut, said.

"I regard the rest of the Hamilton players as gentlemen," said Gorman, "and our club would just as soon see them up on top as any other club, but Randall must be curbed. He does a lot of bad acting always on his home ice, and I intend to make it warm for him. We cannot stand to have our players cut down. The people pay to see hockey, not butchery."

MONTREAL POWER REGAINS LEAD

Canada Car Shares in Good Demand, With Others Showing Activity.

Montreal, Jan. 23.—The local stock market was active, and strong this morning, such activity being due to various factors. Prices for the most part continued to advance.

The first indication of the annual statement showing the company's financial condition, Montreal Power led the market in activity and strengthening from 70 points to 76 $\frac{1}{2}$. Smelters was also strong, establishing a new high at 60 $\frac{1}{2}$, while Canadian Car & Foundry, because of good demand for Canada Car shares as a result of the intimation at the annual meeting that the company might acquire shareholders might soon share in the company's profits, the stock advancing 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 54 $\frac{1}{2}$.

Bonanza, Cammear and Textile likewise responded to favorable buying, the former gaining a point to 84 $\frac{1}{2}$, and the latter rising 75 to 79 $\frac{1}{2}$. The latter rose up fractionally, the more important ones, these being Atlantic Sugar $\frac{1}{2}$ to 51 $\frac{1}{2}$; Steel Canada, 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 10 $\frac{1}{2}$; Steel of Canada $\frac{1}{2}$ to 51 $\frac{1}{2}$; Canadian Steamships to 51 $\frac{1}{2}$.

SCHOOL SITUATION STILL HANGING FIRE

Secret Session Fails to Advance Accommodation Problem Here.

No decision was reached by the executive committee of the board of education at an informal meeting held in camera last night with regard to the accommodation needed for both primary and secondary schools throughout the city.

The need of improved and additional accommodation for public schools, collegiate institutes and the technical high school was discussed from all angles.

The committee will hold other private meetings within the next few days in an endeavor to draw up some definite program which can be presented to the full board for its consideration and approval, prior to being forwarded to the city council.

The board is generally convinced of the need of the new college units and a substantial addition to the technical school classroom accommodation, to say nothing of an auditorium and gymnasium, but, nevertheless, it may adopt the attitude that "half a loaf is better than no loaf at all," and thus proceed with one new college, if the city council declines to provide the necessary funds for two new buildings, as well as for the technical school addition.

OPENING OF ASSIZES.

The winter assizes will not open till 2 o'clock next Monday afternoon. It was announced by Edmund Weld, clerk of the crown, this morning. Mr. Weld has received a letter from Mr. Justice Ross, requesting that court be not convened till 2 o'clock instead of the usual hour of 1 p.m.

WHAT KIND OF A COUGH Is Yours?

WHETHER it is a simple cough that you have been inclined to ignore, or whether it is a cough that almost seems to burst you by the racking exertion, with aching head and aching body—

Get a box of Peps at once, take a tablet from its silver wrapper, and as it dissolves on the tongue, breathe in the HEALING, BALSAMIC FUMES that are then given off. Notice how the balsamic odours find their way by inhalation along all the breathing passages and there allay the inflammation causing you trouble.

You cannot possibly get at these delicate membranes by any other way. Liquid medicines are merely swallowed into the stomach. Peps act direct on the affected tissues and remove the cause of the irritating cough in a way no other devised remedy can.

HARD TIME PARTY.

A most successful and delightful hard time party was held on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Thompson, Kitchen Avenue, by the members of the Builders' Bible class of the Hyatt Avenue Methodist church. The guests, who came in costume, enjoyed an evening of games, during which their fire was judged by Rev. R. J. McCormick, Mr. Hoffman and Mr. Callard. Mrs. Hahn won the prize for the best dressed lady present, and Mrs. Griffith and Mr. Ducker were awarded the prizes for the most poorly dressed guests. The games were under the direction of Mrs. Callard and Mrs. Thompson. Later in the evening hard time rations of soda biscuits and water were passed to the company, after which a more substantial meal was chosen from a card menu for an exceeding ordinary style. The proceeds of the event were in aid of the class.

HYATT AVENUE CHURCH.

About fifty members of the congregation of the Hyatt Avenue Methodist church went to St. Thomas last evening to hear Evangelist Brown who is conducting services in the Grace Methodist church. Mr. Brown held in London last October and conducted very successful services in the Hyatt Avenue church.

KNOX W. M. S.

The members of the executive of the W. M. S. of the Knox Presbyterian church met Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Sugden Pickles, Ridout street south, to discuss the arrangements for the work this year and to draw up a program. They were also given an opportunity to meet the new president Mrs. W. W. Campbell, and at the conclusion of the business session a social half hour was enjoyed, when tea was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. A. R. Robertson and Miss Gertrude Green. All the members of the executive were present.

ST. PATRICK'S SOCIAL.

Another delightful social evening is being arranged by Mrs. P. Clifford and R. Walsh, joint conveners, and their committee, to take place this evening in St. Patrick's parish hall, when cards and dancing will be a feature of the evening.

HYATT AVENUE SERVICE.

Mrs. Meyer's class of the Hyatt Avenue Methodist church was in charge of a service at the weekly prayer meeting of that church Wednesday. Miss Edna Vinning, the president of the class, occupied the chair, and Mrs. Meyer gave an inspiring talk on "The Prayer Life of Jesus." Rev. R. J. McCormick, the pastor, continued his study of the Book of Amos.

KING STREET C. G. I. T.

The Senior C. G. I. T. group of King Street Presbyterian church, which had been disbanded, was reorganized Wednesday into a new club under the leadership of Mrs. C. White. A delightful supper was served, with 15 girls in attendance. Election of officers was held with the following results: President, Margaret Thirsk; vice-president, Margaret Campbell; secretary, Edna Gardiner; treasurer, Tena Quire; pianist, Jean Johnston, and reporter, Mrs. C. White. The evening was spent in lively discussions, and plans for a play to be put on early in March. The girls planned a skit party to be held next Wednesday night, for which Miss Edna Thirsk is lending her home in King street.

ST. JAMES' CHOIR.

A very interesting and happy event took place recently in the parish hall of St. James' Anglican church, South London, when the annual banquet of the choir, that church was held. It was also the occasion, the presentation of wedding presents from the church warden and the choir members to Miss Gladys Wood, whose marriage takes place on Saturday, and also to Mrs. Grace, formerly Miss Parsons. The church warden's personal gift to Miss Gladys was a silver service, while the choir presented her with a massive mantle clock, suitably engraved. Mrs. Grace received a silver brooch from all good wishes were offered to the bride-elect, and the response was made by the groom-elect, H. Coulson. The choir program being effectively and humorously carried out, the toast to the King was proposed by the chairman, who also proposed the toast to the church, to which G. E. Forsythe responded; a solo by A. L. Green; the toast to the choir was given by C. Hodgins and response was made by A. W. Anderson; a solo by Miss Harriet; and the presentation of gifts by Rev. W. W. Armstrong, rector of the church; a song, "For All Eternity." At the beginning of the program the chairman requested that each speaker would tell a joke during his talk, and in this way a lively note was struck throughout the evening.

A fitting finale to the evening was the slight-of-hand done by the well-known entertainer, W. J. Bugler, which greatly mystified the audience. The long banquet tables, at which the evening was very much enjoyed, were attractively decorated by the ladies of the choir, under the direction of Mrs. Husbands.

CHALMERS SLEIGHRIE.

The members of the young people's society of the Chalmers Presbyterian church last night enjoyed a most delightful sleighride party. After a hour's drive out the Wellington road the young people returned to the church, where a hot lunch was served. Mrs. Muriel Findlay, convenor of the social committee, was in charge of the arrangements, while the supper was served by the new advisory committee, which includes Mrs. Tiley, Mrs. Foster and Mrs. Radie. The happy evening was concluded with several jolly games.

ST. GEORGE'S GUILD.

The annual meeting of the women's guild of St. George's Anglican church was held recently, when splendid reports were presented. The guild has contributed the total of $1,053.34 to the fund of the church during the past year, of this sum $397.25 being contributed for church support and $455.55 was applied to the building fund.

During the meeting the following officers were appointed for 1925: President, Mrs. G. B. Sage (re-elected); vice-president, Mrs. W. J. Brown and Mrs. R. J. Brown; secretary, Mrs. G. J. Guymer (re-elected); assistant secretary, Mrs. Lizzie Raymond; general conveners for the year's work, Mrs. F. G. Turville and Mrs. E. E. Talbot.

After the election plans for the year's work were made, and arrangements were completed for a guild supper to be held in February. The meeting was well attended.

CHRIST CHURCH GUILD.

The church women's guild of the Christ church (Anglican) held their regular meeting last night in the schoolroom of the church. Rev. Canon Quinn, the rector, occupied the chair. The following officers were re-elected for 1925: President, Mrs. J. Percy; treasurer, Mrs. Fred McRae; reports shown that a successful year has just been closed. There was a good attendance.

ONTARIO TO FIGHT FOR HYDRO RIGHTS

Provincial Government Ready To Come To Grips With Federal Powers.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Toronto, Jan. 22.—Determination to unrelentingly fight any effort on the part of the government at Ottawa to deny the province its right to develop the St. Lawrence river for power purposes was decided this evening by a conference of Premier Ferguson and his cabinet, with Sir Adam Beck and the Ontario Hydro-Electric officials.
Opportunity will be taken soon to place the views of the province before the King administration, Premier Ferguson announced after the conference. Hon. Mr. Ferguson further announced that if the federal government approved the plans of the provincial hydro commission for the development of the St. Lawrence, the Ontario government would immediately commence construction of one of the power plants.
The fame of a successful remedy is often spread far and wide by women telling one another of its merits, as is evidenced by a letter written by Mrs. Wm. Riddell, of Mt. Forest, Ont. She writes: "I was weak, miserable and in pain. A friend told me what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for her. I tried it and am now well and strong. There is nothing equal to it for women's troubles." There are women everywhere who have been benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and gladly tell their friends and neighbors about it—Advt.

HELP KIDNEYS BY DRINKING MORE WATER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Help Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and bladder irritations often result from acidity, says a noted authority. The kidneys help filter this acid from the blood, and pass it on to the bladder, where it may remain to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread; the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse. Again, there is difficulty in voiding it.
Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is often one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Begin drinking lots of soft water, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast. Continue this for two or three days. This will help neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs, which then act normal again.
Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with alkali and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by acid irritation. Jad Salts causes no bad effects whatever.
Here you have a pleasant, effervescent little water drink which may quickly relieve your bladder irritation. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year—Advt.

HEALTH AREAS PLANNED FOR PUBLIC PROTECTION

Chief Medical Officer For Ontario Advocates Formation of Districts.
FULL TIME WORKERS
Health Officers and Staff Advocated For Every 20,000 People.

Special to The Advertiser.
By Staff Correspondent.

Sarnia, Jan. 22.—Establishment of permanent public health organizations in selected areas of the province embracing the equivalent of a city population of about 20,000 was strongly advocated as a policy for Ontario, by Dr. John W. S. McCullough, chief health officer for Ontario, in his address tonight, given in connection with the public health demonstration at Sarnia.
For 904 municipalities in the province there are only eight permanent organizations, he declared. It is impossible, Dr. McCullough said, for the public health interests of 20,000 people to be given the attention they deserve by other than a full time medical officer of health and an efficient staff. For a city, such as Sarnia, this would consist of the medical officer, two sanitary inspectors and probably two properly trained public health nurses. England, with more experience in public health work, realized that it was an investment of a paying nature, and the U. S. was now following the example.

The great obstacle was the financial embarrassment of some municipalities, and Dr. McCullough's idea was to make the plan equitable and possible by consolidating the weak municipalities into units of approximately 20,000 population. His entire efforts outside of departmental work were devoted to an educational campaign aimed at the establishment of the plan outlined.

Treat 800 Cases.
Late this afternoon more than 800 cases had been dealt with and many are still constantly arriving for registration. It has been necessary to practically double examining staffs in general, medical and children's clinics. At the Sarnia General hospital there is a waiting list for operations. Operations, which are mostly for adenoids, will be continued as long as necessary after health week closes.
Dr. T. J. McNally, district health officer, today paid tribute to the professional men, who are working at top pressure in cases, almost to the point of exhaustion.
According to the official figures issued for the first three days work in clinics has been divided as follows: General medical 75; general children 307; chest 71; dental 69; special 56; occupational diseases 26; nose and throat 5; special orthopedic 19; operations 42. PASSENGER ON L. AND P. S. R. DROPS DEAD IN SEAT OF CAR

Special to The Advertiser.
By Staff Correspondent.

St. Thomas, Jan. 22.—Mrs. Anna Doyle, 30 Flora street, widow of the late Joseph Doyle, passed away on the London and Port Stanley car at 5 o'clock this afternoon, while on her way to St. Thomas from stop 11, where she had been visiting at the home of C. Hezan, Yarmouth.
Mrs. Doyle was apparently in the best of health when she left her home this morning.
She had taken her seat in the car, and was in the act of handing her ticket to Conductor McGeorge, when she dropped back in the seat unconscious.
The car was filled with normal school students returning to this city. Several of them, thinking she had fainted, attempted to restore her.
Coroner Dr. Ewin was notified and decided that an inquest was unnecessary. Death was due to heart failure.
She was a member of the Holy Angels' church of this city, and had always taken an active interest in the ladies' organizations there.
Mrs. Doyle was born in St. Thomas 76 years ago, and had lived here all her life.

Richard Stutt succumbs to attack of pneumonia.
Forest, Jan. 22.—Richard Stutt, highly-respected resident of Forest, and pioneer of Bosanquet township, died at his home here this afternoon in his 88th year, after a short illness with pneumonia. He was born in Ireland in 1837. He was well known as a contributor to daily papers, served many terms as trustee, councillor and magistrate. In 1891 he was a Liberal candidate for the dominion House. The funeral will be held on Saturday afternoon.

CROSS WORD PUZZLE NO. 87

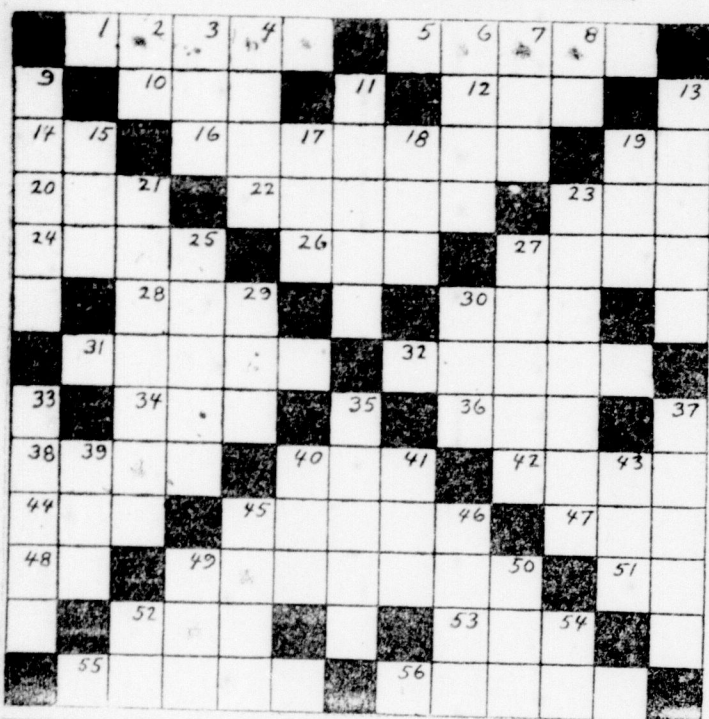

This puzzle is just hard enough to prove interesting to the experienced solver and yet easy enough to prove a tickler to the neophyte. In it you will find many new words, but none of them will require search in the dictionary.

Each word reads from left to right (horizontal) or downward (vertical) according to position. Lettered in correctly, words that cross will interlock. Each number in the white squares also refers to a definition in the accompanying table.

Each definition suggests a word possessing the exact number of letters to fit the white spaces allotted to it.

Each white space is to receive one letter only. Words start only in numbered squares.

THE ADVERTISER'S DAILY CROSS WORD PUZZLE.

TWO EXTRA INVISIBLES

We are shortening the contest by giving four Invisibles Saturday instead of two. Be sure and get four tomorrow.

SEASON-END CLEARANCE OF MILLINERY

Two Groups—Velvet and Felt Hats, $1.00; Pattern Hats, $5.00

There remain just a few hats from the winter modes to clear. And months yet in which one may wear a winter hat. All have been divided into two groups for immediate sale.

Velvet and Felt Hats for general wear are marked at $1.00. Both trimmed and untrimmed models are offered. Large, small and sailor shapes untrimmed, or with smart adornments of ribbon.

The other group includes the remainder of the season's Pattern Hats. Advance models that will be smart for next season's wearing. Colorful Hats to freshen your winter wardrobe. The number of Hats is not large. The values are splendid. All to clear at $5.00

Millinery Department, Second Floor.

SALE OF CHOCOLATES SATURDAY

132 boxes to be cleared. A supply may be bought, for these are tightly sealed, and their contents fresh and appetizing. These high-grade chocolates are not to be included in the new season's stock. They are marked at a low price for immediate sale tomorrow. For entertaining or for your own use—the opportunity is for an economical supply.

Hommed ready to use, made from heavy yarns, in twill weave. These make splendid oven cloths or for drying pots and pans. See them at tomorrow's January clearing price 19c each

Replenish Your Bath Towels From Tomorrow's Offering

Many people still prefer the soft absorbent qualities of the Turkish Towel for general use as face towels. This sale presents an opportunity to purchase medium and small sizes at about half regular and less. Yes, some are imperfect in weave, but mostly overmakes from the mill year-end clearance. We have grouped them under two prices, so suggest you make it 9:15 a.m. tomorrow for best selection.

LOT NO. 1—3 FOR $1.00

A big collection of pretty borders and stripes, in a wide variety of patterns. In many cases you will find you get three towels for the actual regular price of one 3 for $1.00

LOT NO. 2—2 FOR $1.00

One-half to one-third the regular selling prices for these values should mean 9 a.m. tomorrow. Lovely qualities, slightly imperfect and sub-standards 2 for $1.00

THE WINNIE WINKLE SKIRT

Smartest and Newest of Vogues for "Winnie Winkle, the Breadwinner"

Clever little Winnie Winkle lends her name to the newest jumper skirt. And in her role of "Breadwinner" she proclaims it to be a very practical style indeed. For when Winnie's been dancing late at night, she finds that her jumper slips on in the morning in just the twinkling of an eye. And it needs only the natty blouse of broadcloth or silk to make it the most fetching and efficient business costume imaginable. The Winnie Winkles make a gay spot of color on our Second Floor. Blues and greens and red, and pretty plaids, stripes and overchecks, all in the softly finished flannel that the season likes so well. And they follow the vogue, too, in straying from the "straight and narrow." For the "Winnie Winkle" jumper has the circular cut, and the inverted pleats that give a pert flounce to the newest skirt line. The new jumpers have only been here just a day or two, so perhaps you haven't seen them yet. But make a point of seeing them the first time you're in the store. For the "Winnie Winkle" jumper is soon going to be as popular as pretty Winnie Winkle herself. The prices are $6.50, $7.50 and $10.00

Second Floor.
