DAWSON, Y. T., TUESDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1902.

PRICE 25 CENTS

BEGINS IT WITH SCANDAL.

Davison Has First Mass Meeting of Campaign and Shows His Policy to be the Smirching of Rivals by Innuendo and Personal Slander.

The first mass meeting of the municipal campaign, which was held in the A. B. hall last night, was one of the best conducted political meetings ever held in Dawson, and would have been the most harmonious but for the insinuation of one of the candidates for mayor upon the introduction of scandal and personal abuse. The meeting was called by the supporters of Mr. Davison, candidate for mayor, and it seemed at first that people were taking very little interest in the campaign, for the hall filled but slowly. The galleries were well filled eventually, but there still remained an empty space in the center of the floor until the end of the meeting. The proceedings were advertised for eight o'clock, but the supporters of Mr. Davison remained in the background until nearly nine awaiting an audience.

It was after midnight when the most interesting episode of the evening took place, and this is therefore placed at the beginning of this report. About eighteen candidates had spoken, and two or three who were not candidates, and Mr. Davison, who had made a long speech to open the meeting, was closing it with his reply to everything that had been said. Alderman Murphy had told his idea of the alleged deal with Mr. McLennan in his attempt to secure that gentleman's support, and had stated as an evidence that "under proper control" were added to Mr. McLennan's platform on the police question, as he (Mr. Murphy) did not believe in the retention of the Mounted Police by the city.

Mr. Davison told of this deal at length, taking the Sun for his authority on the subject, and said that the McLennan committee intended to carry out that combination there was no doubt from the simple fact of those three words having been added by Mr. McLennan to meet the wishes of Mr. Murphy.

P. R. Ritchie called out from the back of the hall that the words in question were not added by Mr. McLennan, nor at his or Mr. Murphy's suggestion. They were put in by Mr. Sparing, one of the committee. Then the sun began. There were loud cries of "platform," and "Ritchie," "Ritchie," but the able chairman called upon Mr. Davison to conclude his speech. Mr. Davison proceeded with the bald unsupported statement that the followers of Mr. McLennan did make the first advances toward the consummation of the alleged deal, but that "the supporters of Mr. McLennan would not stand for such a scheme, and they repudiated it with the result that Mr. Murphy was thrown out and could not be candidate for the mayoralty."

As he concluded there were again loud cries for "Ritchie," and that gentleman went to the platform and warmly thanked the audience for this opportunity of making an explanation. In the first place he would say that Mr. Davison was entirely wrong in his statements on the subject. There was a proposition made to Mr. McLennan and a committee was appointed to wait upon Mr. Murphy and see what the proposition was. A proposition for a candidate to withdraw and give his support to another was one which would be thought worthy of consideration by any candidate. That committee waited upon Mr. Murphy, and heard what he had to say, they returned to report. There was no definite arrangement entered into then or at any other time. Mr. Murphy made a statement in the Sunday Sun which was entirely wrong. As to the words "under proper control" having been put in at the suggestion of Mr. Murphy that was a lie.

Alderman Murphy excitedly asked him to repeat that. Mr. Ritchie did so and repeated also his former statement that they were put in by Mr. Sparing.

Mr. Murphy: Is it not true that you showed the list to Mr. Beddoe?

Mr. Ritchie: As to Mr. McLennan having adopted your four men that is entirely wrong; also as to the three words mentioned also.

Mr. Murphy got excited and called upon Mr. Beddoe to tell his side of the story.

Mr. Ritchie finished his speech with the statement that the friends of Mr. McLennan did not require the vote of Mr. Murphy and never had desired it, and Mr. Murphy jumped up and asked that Mr. Beddoe be called. Mr. Beddoe came forward reluctantly and said he did not know what he was called upon to explain.

Ald. Murphy: Did not T. D. Macfarlane bring a list to you and ask if you would support it?

Mr. Beddoe: He did not bring a list but he mentioned to me some names.

Mr. Murphy: Please repeat the list.

Mr. Beddoe: To the best of my recollection the names were Macdonald, Murphy, Edwards and McKinnon. That day they asked me if I would support Mr. McLennan. I said I could not give any reply to that at the moment, because I leaned very heavily toward Mr. Murphy.

"But if Mr. Murphy was not in the field, what would you do?" I was asked. That, I said, would be another matter. The chances were that I would support Mr. McLennan, in the belief that he was a strong man and a probable winner. I think that is all, Mr. Murphy.

Mr. Murphy: That is all.

Mr. Beddoe asked Mr. Ritchie if he thought this statement was correct and Mr. Ritchie said he thought it was but he would like to call Mr. T. D. Macfarlane in substantiation. But the chairman, who is a strong supporter of Mr. Davison, saw that his side was losing ground in the argument, as was attested by the cheers from Mr. McLennan, so he abruptly closed the meeting adjourned.

George Edwards was called to the chair and stated that the meeting was called by the supporters of Mr. Davison to give every candidate a chance of stating his views. There were twenty-five candidates altogether, and the four candidates for mayor would be permitted half an hour each to speak and the candidates for alderman ten minutes each. He also graciously expressed his pleasure at so many ladies being present and stated that there were thirty or forty ladies who were voters and in this respect Dawson was ahead of many of the cities of the Dominion. Mr. Edwards proved to be an excellent chairman in every respect, and introduced each candidate very wittily.

Jefferson A. Davison, candidate for mayor, opened the meeting and explained his claims for election upon this and the fact that he was the first candidate to issue a platform and the first to call a public meeting. He also threw a big bouquet with a hook on it to catch the ladies' vote, and for the firemen he did not seem able to say enough. In his speech at the end of the meeting he devoted the most of his time to the capture of those twenty-one votes of the fire department. The Mounted Police have votes also, and he landed them to the skies. He showed what it would cost the city to have a police force of its own, and what a trifle the present system would cost, but his declaration for the continuance of the present system had a string on it. He thought circumstances might arise on this subject and that it should go to the people to be voted upon. He next discussed the present financial condition of the city.

Then he came to his great strong point. This was the contract entered into by the city with the waterworks company. What were they waiting for? He would tell them the company had accepted a contract at a price that was unprofitable. They were waiting for Mr. McLennan to get into office (groans) and give to the waterworks the price they had been waiting for (more groans). He already had the city offices under his own roof, and he would have more if they elected him. (A voice: We'll elect him anyway. Loud applause.)

Mr. McLennan was next called upon by the chairman and as he rose he was warmly cheered. He began somewhat slowly, for Mr. McLennan has never posed as a public speaker, but when he got over his first remarks he spoke ably to the point. He said the last speaker seemed to have water on the brain (laughter). He regretted that he was not an orator and able to hold an audience for half an hour with the details of his platform, but he hoped, however, to make himself understood even if he could not make a speech.

It did not seem to him that a platform should be made up of mere details as to licenses and so forth. A platform should be on broad principles and all the smaller details would have to be gone into by the council in any event, and treated according to circumstances that at the time existed and might or might not exist at the present moment. Convention Seems to Have Been Futile.

Two Nominees of Convention and Four Other Candidates.

The object of the Caribou convention was to cut down the number of candidates in district No. 2 for the Yukon council, and it succeeded in the nomination of two of the most popular men on the creeks. It was thought that there would be no other candidates except Max Landreville, who was afraid to go into the convention, Mr. Tyrell having withdrawn in their behalf. But when the time came for making the official nominations this morning there were no less than six candidates who entered the race and put up their forfeit money.

Arthur Wilson and M. H. B. Henderson, the nominees of the convention, were officially nominated, and after them came Max Landreville, hotel keeper of this city, Rev. John Pringle, Presbyterian minister at the Forks, J. B. McNamie, an old time miner, and George White-Fraser, Dominion land surveyor, of this city.

SKATING CARNIVAL

Rink Prettily Decorated for the Occasion

Attendance Was Small on Account of the Cold Weather—About Twenty in Costume.

It is a pity that the weather was so frigid last night, otherwise the athletic rink would have been crowded with spectators and merry-makers at the first fancy dress carnival ever held on the ice in Dawson. The huge rink was very prettily decorated for the occasion, rows of flags and bunting being strung entirely across the rink at each of the trusses. The Police band was in attendance as usual and did not a little to enliven what might otherwise have been a rather prosy evening.

About twenty of the skaters were in costume, some of them striking others original and a number very pretty. Considering the chilliness of the atmosphere the most comfortable display was that of a lady and gentleman dressed as a la sourdough in pill parades, across the gentleman's back being painted "Coldfoot or Bunk." There were several Tobys with the real cork on their pretty faces instead of a mask; two were in the court costume of Louis Quinze, there was a Mexican bandit with a "cawgild" in imitation of bushy, wide sombrero, and gun, a Goddess of Liberty, a fairy from the land of Miss Christiantheism, clown both real and imitation, a gentleman in a Tuxedo, to say nothing of the Venuses and Aphrodites who skated in their every day habiliments.

The ice was in splendid condition and had the weather been twenty degrees warmer the rink would have been crowded. It is reported that the directors will give another carnival later in the season after the weather becomes more settled and it is not suicidal to put on lighter garments. If such is definitely determined upon there can be no doubt but what it will be a huge success. Dawson is skating mad this winter and anything pertaining to the sport on steel runners will go tremendously if the conditions are at all favorable. The affair last night was a success though the attendance was small.

NOMINATION DAY OF YUKON

Dr. Thompson, C. W. C. Tabor, G. K. Gilbert, W. A. Beddoe, Wm. Thornburn and Two Others Put Up Their Two Hundred Dollars Forfeit.

It was thought last night that there would only be three candidates in the field for the Yukon council that were at all worthy of consideration, namely, Dr. Alfred Thompson, C. W. C. Tabor and George K. Gilbert, the labor candidate, but at the close of the nominations today there were five. To avoid having so many candidates in the field, and the danger of the most unworthy candidates slipping in by reason of this splitting up of the vote, a meeting was held yesterday in the rooms above the Pioneer saloon of friends of all the candidates to see if some arrangement could not be come to by which the number of candidates could be reduced. It was a very representative meeting, and it was also a meeting at which was displayed a great deal of local patriotism. Both the candidates and their friends recognized the danger and were willing to make sacrifices. Two of the candidates present magnanimously left their candidacy in the hands of the meeting, and it was at this point that William Thornburn bolted. He was not afterwards taken into consideration.

It was felt, however, that the meeting was not sufficiently representative for the purpose, and a motion carried unanimously that each of the three candidates named appoint three friends each and leave his fate in the hands of these. This was done with the result that George Vernon was the man to make the sacrifice and withdraw.

The time for the nominations this morning was between eleven and twelve, in Pioneer hall. Sheriff Ellibeck being sick his son Jack acted for him. It was half past eleven before any candidate appeared, when Dr. Thompson, with J. P. Smith and Alex. Macfarlane as his sponsors, filed his nomination papers. Then came Mr. Carter, who presented the nomination papers of Mr. Gilbert, the labor candidate. Next appeared Alexander Prudhomme, who was followed by H. D. Hulma with the nomination papers of Mr. Tabor. Next came William Thornburn, whose papers were presented by his law partner, M. D. O'Dell.

At a quarter to twelve W. A. Beddoe rushed breathlessly in with his papers not yet complete. He asked Alex. Macfarlane to complete them for him, and explained his hurry by saying he seemed to be a little ahead of gun time. There were some jokes and the papers were filed. Half a minute to twelve another breathless individual arrived and filed the papers of the most unworthy Jack Ellibeck declared the nominations closed and that a poll would be taken at the same place on January 13th.

Each of the candidates deposited a $200 forfeit and Dr. Thompson was the only one who used gold coin for the purpose. Tabor, Gilbert and Prudhomme handed in certified checks, and the rest put it up in greenbacks.

There were about seventy of the friends of the candidates and people simply curious present, and before they dispersed Mr. Macfarlane announced that a public meeting would be held this week, at the A. B. hall, by the supporters of Dr. Thompson, at which all the candidates were invited to attend.

JAP CANDIDATE WITHDRAWS.

To the Electors of District No. 1, Y. T.—

Giving the matter mature thought and consulting with my agent, also the president of the executive and friends, I decided to retire from the contest for a seat in the Yukon Council. In doing so I wish to extend my hearty thanks to the gentlemen of all shades of opinion who endorsed my candidature and who loyally stood by me throughout the campaign up to date.

GAMES ARE CLOSED

Sergeant Smith Makes Another Roundup of Vagrants.

Whether the conviction of "Poker Dick" yesterday under the vagrancy act had anything to do with the closing down of the games that have been running in the city for several weeks is not known, but it is a fact that last night there was not a short card game visible anywhere. Another thing that is not known is how far Sergeant Smith is going to carry his warfare against those who live by their wits and have no visible means of support other than as dealers and boosters. Two note cases similar to that heard yesterday were in the police court this morning. Thos O'Connor and Herbert Schofield, both charged with being loose, idle and disorderly persons, vagrants who for the three months previous have not been engaged in honest labor. Mr. Hagel, K. C., appearing for both defendants, asked an enlargement until tomorrow which was granted.

"Poker Dick" was in court presumably as a witness and he looked the picture of dejection and despair though he has but a month to serve. He has already begun serving his time and he was clad in the regulation muckinaws, for rap and moccasins.

In the case of O'Connor and Schofield, cash bail was fixed in each in the extent of $500.

LANGUISHES IN JAIL

At noon today Billy Ask, under charge of having fraudulently obtained $20 from Vincent Veneo, was still in jail, having been unable to secure bondmen. The second charge that has been preferred against Ask comes up Saturday, on the first he having been bound over to the territorial court for trial. His bail is fixed at $500 personal and two sureties in the sum of $250 each.

MR. McLENNAN'S ADDRESS.
The address of R. P. McLennan to the voters of Dawson is couched in exactly such terms as would be expected from a man of long business experience and high standing in the community. Very briefly, but pointedly Mr. McLennan expresses his views upon all important matters which concern the voters and taxpayers of Dawson. He strongly favors the retention of the services of the Northwest Mounted Police and says so in a plain, outspoken manner which admits of no misinterpretation.

He favors a reduction of one-third of the salaries now paid to mayor and aldermen and frankly explains his reasons therefor.

He promises the taxpayers an economical administration and will see that value is received for every dollar of revenue expended.

He assures the electors that the present high standard of efficiency of the fire department will be maintained and the same improved in every possible manner.

Taken all the way through, Mr. McLennan's letter shows plainly an intelligent comprehension of the needs of our growing city and a clear determination to apply the most practicable means available for the protection of the community interests.

But what is even better than promises the people have the knowledge that Mr. McLennan is a safe man. They know that whatever charge they may see fit to place in his keeping will be carefully guarded and protected. They know that whether he is pledged or not upon any specific measure, that his every action in office will be animated by a desire to do full duty by his fellow townsmen.

Mr. McLennan is essentially a man of business who regards the management of community affairs in identically the same light as he does the direction of a business establishment. If elected to the office of mayor he will give the city a business administration, of which in view of existing conditions Dawson stands badly in need.

There were many strong points in Mr. McLennan's speech last night. It was full of manly vigor and sturdy independence. It was not the speech of a practised vote-catcher. One of his strongest points was in regard to the ownership of the water front by the city. Upon this subject Mr. McLennan has already devoted much time and thought and made no little progress in getting the matter before the attention of the government. The bright thought in his speech last night upon the water front property was that if the government could not give the property to the city they could be forced, they being landlords and renting this property within the city limits, to pay taxes for it. This shows the keen business insight Mr. McLennan has into such matters.

It seems a pity that the self-styled champion of law and order in the majority race should have found it politic last night to do everything he could publicly to attach to his party the champion of the wide open town idea. He became the champion of the candidate for alderman whom Mr. McLennan's supporters had rejected and whose straight ward politician's "deal" they repudiated as soon as it was published. There are two candidates for the majority who are supposed to be for the maintenance of law and order as against a "wide open" town. One is for the retention of the mounted police and the other is a "trimmer" on the subject. One is out for a high principle, the other is out to catch the votes.

George Vernon will have the credit of showing the greatest amount of local patriotism that has been displayed in this or perhaps in any campaign. With so many candidates in the field for Yukon council there was a decided danger that the two most undesirable candidates might be elected. Purely in the interests of the public good, for Mr. Vernon had strong backing, he withdrew. It now remains for some one or more to follow his manly, honorable and self-sacrificing example.

It was a very harmonious meeting last night until the harmony was broken by Mr. Davison. He has the questionable honor of introducing into the campaign the aid of personal scandal of another candidate to bolster up his cause. He is the first to insinuate that any other candidate was seeking office from dishonorable motives. "Lo, I am not as these Pharisees," he seems to say.

The counsel who tries to abuse the opposing counsel is always believed to have a poor case. The candidate who can only hope to succeed upon the alleged demerits of other candidates and not upon the merits of his own, can never succeed in an intelligent community such as this.

Whenever George Vernon comes before the public again as a candidate he may feel confident of a handsome majority if he gets his deserts as a local patriot.

Francisco schooners came to this city. The schooners are the Cape Horn, Pigeon and C. H. White, owned in San Francisco, and the Kate and Anna and James Hamilton Lewis, formerly the Dally of Victoria, she having been sold at Seattle and rechristened. After being seized by the United States cruisers in Bering sea for hunting of the Copper islands, the cruiser Zabiaka captured three and the Aleut took the other.

Those secured by the Zabiaka did not make a fight against seizure, other than a protest against their illegal taking when on the high seas.

When engaged in a lawful pursuit, but the James Hamilton Lewis, which was seized by the Aleut, made quite a fight before the Russians took her.

The James Hamilton Lewis was hunting off the Copper islands when she was overhauled by the Russian cruiser Aleut, the same vessel as had been pursuing Capt. McLean's brother's vessel, and ordered to heave to, but McLean shouted back that he would not, that he was in neutral waters and neither the Russians or any one else had a right to interfere with him.

The man of war swung off a short distance and fired a few shots intending to frighten the sealers. The sealers were not frightened and started to run, and after another volley, which tore through the schooner's canvas the Aleut steamed across the bow of the schooner carrying away her forward rigging and as she swung alongside a party scrambled aboard from the Aleut and took possession of the sealer.

Still McLean did not give up. With several sealers assisting him he carried a chain and attempted to throw it over the propeller of the Russian vessel, but the attempt failed and the sealers were carried off to Petro

Palofski and all placed in jail together with the others that had been taken by the Zabiaka and the Yakout.

Taken all the way through, Mr. McLennan's letter shows plainly an intelligent comprehension of the needs of our growing city and a clear determination to apply the most practicable means available for the protection of the community interests.

But what is even better than promises the people have the knowledge that Mr. McLennan is a safe man. They know that whatever charge they may see fit to place in his keeping will be carefully guarded and protected. They know that whether he is pledged or not upon any specific measure, that his every action in office will be animated by a desire to do full duty by his fellow townsmen.

Mr. McLennan is essentially a man of business who regards the management of community affairs in identically the same light as he does the direction of a business establishment. If elected to the office of mayor he will give the city a business administration, of which in view of existing conditions Dawson stands badly in need.

There were many strong points in Mr. McLennan's speech last night. It was full of manly vigor and sturdy independence. It was not the speech of a practised vote-catcher. One of his strongest points was in regard to the ownership of the water front by the city. Upon this subject Mr. McLennan has already devoted much time and thought and made no little progress in getting the matter before the attention of the government. The bright thought in his speech last night upon the water front property was that if the government could not give the property to the city they could be forced, they being landlords and renting this property within the city limits, to pay taxes for it. This shows the keen business insight Mr. McLennan has into such matters.

It seems a pity that the self-styled champion of law and order in the majority race should have found it politic last night to do everything he could publicly to attach to his party the champion of the wide open town idea. He became the champion of the candidate for alderman whom Mr. McLennan's supporters had rejected and whose straight ward politician's "deal" they repudiated as soon as it was published. There are two candidates for the majority who are supposed to be for the maintenance of law and order as against a "wide open" town. One is for the retention of the mounted police and the other is a "trimmer" on the subject. One is out for a high principle, the other is out to catch the votes.

George Vernon will have the credit of showing the greatest amount of local patriotism that has been displayed in this or perhaps in any campaign. With so many candidates in the field for Yukon council there was a decided danger that the two most undesirable candidates might be elected. Purely in the interests of the public good, for Mr. Vernon had strong backing, he withdrew. It now remains for some one or more to follow his manly, honorable and self-sacrificing example.

It was a very harmonious meeting last night until the harmony was broken by Mr. Davison. He has the questionable honor of introducing into the campaign the aid of personal scandal of another candidate to bolster up his cause. He is the first to insinuate that any other candidate was seeking office from dishonorable motives. "Lo, I am not as these Pharisees," he seems to say.

The counsel who tries to abuse the opposing counsel is always believed to have a poor case. The candidate who can only hope to succeed upon the alleged demerits of other candidates and not upon the merits of his own, can never succeed in an intelligent community such as this.

Whenever George Vernon comes before the public again as a candidate he may feel confident of a handsome majority if he gets his deserts as a local patriot.

COUNCIL MEETING

Railroad Bill Given Its Second Reading

Chief Lester Submits a Comprehensive Report of the Fire Department.

Contrary to expectations the meeting of the council last night was not the last of that body, though the election of their successors occurs next Monday. A special meeting will be held on Wednesday afternoon and the council will also meet next Monday evening, it being provided in the charter that those who are at present in office shall remain the incumbents until their successors are sworn in Monday evening, however, will positively be the farewell appearance of the council as at present constituted unless something unforeseen should occur in the meantime. The chamber last night was honored by the presence of quite a number of distinguished visitors who were interested in the railway franchise bill, including Thos. O'Brien, W. H. Parsons and Arthur Davey who are in favor of the bill and D. A. Cameron, T. B. May, H. G. Wilson, Harry Hershberg, Maurice de Lion and one or two others who are against it.

The first business taken up were the petitions for and against the First Avenue franchise, both of which were liberally signed. A communication was read from the house at Winipeg which furnished supplies to the fire department to the amount of over $450. The city was notified that the account was now over sixty days overdue and the firm was drawing at sight for the amount. It should be explained that the goods for which the draft is in payment are those still at Whitehorse and which did not arrive in time to reach their destination before the close of navigation. Had they come to hand as expected there is no doubt but what the bill would have been paid on presentation. Whether it will now or not is a question. It may not be liquidated until the goods arrive in the spring.

W. S. Little, of the board of control of the free library, wrote the council to inquire the status of the Carnegie matter, what position it was in and if anything was being done in the way of providing a site for the building. The board of control is very anxious to know in order that they may govern themselves accordingly. The Yukon Hardware Company notified the council that such corporation is the successor of McLennan & McFeely and that hereafter they will collect the rent for the premises occupied by the council. It is requested that checks be made payable to the company hereafter. New bills presented included the following:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Amount. Includes A. M. Brown ($ 6.50), N. A. T. & T. Co. (218.77), Standard Oil Company (6.00), Klondike Mill Company (36.25), Klondike Mill Company (62.80), Klondike Mill Company (45.10), Klondike Mill Company (42.50), Klondike Mill Company (43.10), Klondike Mill Company (43.00), McLennan & McFeely (16.85), Norquay, chairman of the committee on fire, water and light, filed a most comprehensive report of the fire department covering the past year, the first of its kind ever submitted. Adair handed in a report of the finance committee in which the following bills were recommended paid:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Amount. Includes Gilbert & Johnson ($ 51.50), Gilbert & Johnson (7.50), Dawson Hardware Company (27.11), M. A. Probst (8.50), Standard Oil Company (12.00), D. A. Shindler (1.00), Dawson Hardware Company (17.75), Dawson Free Library (175.00), Dawson Water Company (15.00), E. C. Co (4.00), McLennan & McFeely (300.00), McLennan & McFeely (75.00), McLennan & McFeely (11.00).

His worship took occasion to remark at this time that the meeting then being held would not be the last of the council; that a special meeting would probably be called for Wednesday afternoon at which time the library matter would be considered and also in all probability the franchise bill would come up for its final disposition, though definite action on the latter may be deferred until Monday evening. There are a number of things still pending before the council and it is the desire of his worship and the aldermen that the slate be wiped off clean for their successors.

Wilson suggested that in view of the petitions for and against the franchise bill it would be a good idea for the city clerk to take each list and go through the tax roll and ascertain what relation one bore to the other relative to the property owned and taxes paid by the signers. It was also pointed out that many of the signers were probably not property owners on that portion of First Avenue affected and they should receive no consideration, nor should those who paid taxes on personal property only. The owners of realty are the only ones concerned and they alone should receive attention. The suggestion was agreed to. Murphy moved that the committee on printing have the annual report of the fire department printed in pamphlet form for distribution on the outside with particular reference to having the same reach the hands of the various fire insurance companies doing business in the Yukon. His worship approved of the idea stating that such was the first complete report ever made and was highly creditable to the city, Chief Lester and the department. Agreed. Adair moved the second reading of the franchise bylaw. Murphy supported the motion, but stated that between that time and the next meeting he proposed to interview the property owners concerned and personally learn their views upon the question. Then he will know his own position in the matter and the bill as far as the present council is concerned can be definitely settled. Macdonald filed the annual report of the license inspector, which was adopted, and adjournment was taken until Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

IS CRITICAL

Peculiar Difficulty Between the Pope and France. Rome, Nov. 29.—The difficulty between France and the papacy is entering on the phase which I may be allowed to call critical. With his vigilant, clear-sightedness the Holy Father had entered on an exchange of relations with the republic, in which he gave much without receiving back anything, in the hope of making the republic tolerant and saving the concordat.

The Dreyfus affair and the disobedience of refractory Catholics have for the time being put an end to his first hopes, but his expectant spirit, his long suffering, have for the moment preserved France from a break with Rome and with the church. Between the violence of the left and the irritation of the right, the Holy Father is like the crucified Christ between the two robbers. Is that not too often the attitude of the church that contrives the work of redemption? It is the incomparable merit of Catholicism that it possesses, at the top of its hierarchy, the great ordering power which marks the strict distinctions between weakness and crimes, and practices in a sovereign way the policy of compromise, that great art of diplomacy.

CONCORDAT IN DANGER

Will he be able to maintain the concordat against the logic of actual conditions and the inclinations of the anti-clericals? And will he be the prelude to a policy of peace and of broad tolerance? That is the point of the actual differences. M. Combes has come into power with the mission of settling with the church the conflict regarding the congregations. Of his own initiative, but with the connivance of the anti-clerical coalition, he is making ready for the abolition of the concordat by successive stages; that would be the second act in the drama. That is why the president of the council shows a liking for vexing and irritating measures. He is taking his revenge and is trying to excite the Pope to reprisals. If Leo XIII. should retort to M. Combes' violence, the latter would take advantage of the pretended "declaration of war" to complete the separation.

POWER OF PEASANTS FEARED

What checks him is the fear of the peasants and the adherence of the Republican group of which M. Loubet is the head. In spite of indifference which is too common, in some provinces the peasant would not like to see the republic touch the village cure, if he does not go to church, he nevertheless wishes: the priest to be the intermediary between himself and God; he wishes to be baptised, to be admitted to the first communion, to marry before the altar, and to be buried with the rites of religion. Now, so soon as the government, with insufficient reason and with no pretext of provocation from Rome, breaks the contract, the peasant will show by his vote his discontent and disaffection. In any case, the break would provoke disturbances of which it is difficult to calculate the effects. The sectarians have no intention of running these risks. They would rather have the Holy Father show his righteous indignation, in which case the government would say to the peasants: "There is no person who is responsible. The Pope has insisted on this; take your revenge." So it would obtain at the same time the full reward for its hateful machinations and the use of the voters against the church.

MYSTERY IN MOVES MADE

Leo XIII. however, has no desire to play the part of a useless and harmful martyr. So he wraps himself up in silence and circumspection, which men of mean intelligence and partisans call pusillanimity, whereas, on the contrary, his prudence is defeating the most perfidious trick of French anti-clericalism. A mysterious game is being played by M. Combes and the Pope, the closest of games of chess, in which the fate of France and perhaps the near future of the papacy are at stake. Who will win? Will M. Combes go ahead, regarding only his cold hatred and his obscure mission? Nobody believes that. Leo XIII. will let himself be driven to the last ditch before committing an act that may be the prelude of the separation of church and state. Better informed than parties are, he foresees that for the concordat, police laws would be substituted that restrict more than the "organic articles;" he foresees that in the villages each mayor's office would be turned into an annex of the Palais Bourbon, when religious passions would fight face to face; many parishes would sink into great deserts; the faith would receive a cruel blow and it would require long and hard efforts to procure for the church the financial aid from the state that it cannot do without. Leo XIII. is suffering for our good. Is he not worthy of passionate admiration, as well as of joyful filial obedience?

LOUBET IN COMBES' PATH

Behind M. Combes' violence there is an afterthought; it is to overcome and disarm the obstinacy of M. Loubet and the concordat party, who look on the break with Rome as a leap in the dark and also of France's foreign influence. M. Combes and his anti-clericals care little for such possibilities. They have determined to put an end to the concordat and to the protectorate in the east. It is necessary to obey. With M. Loubet, M. Delcasse in his negotiations with Rome tries to put off final decisions. He seems to hold the concordat. When the Italians made their pilgrimage to the Holy Land he seemed disposed to favor the statu quo, while the appointment of M. Boppe, a diplomat of experience, to the Jerusalem consulate general has been looked upon as a clear sign of the importance the qual d'orsay attaches to the preservation of the present situation. Is this a diplomatic fiction? Is M. Delcasse trying to conceal the course events are taking or is he really subordinating the purpose of his party to national interests?

POPE HOPES FOR PEACE

I shall not try to settle the question. In this particular instance the Vatican cannot and must not provide M. Combes with arms against M. Loubet and the party for the concordat. Consequently, if unexpected incidents do not arise, the Pope's hope of seeing peace preserved is not wholly chimerical, at least until the next elections take place. That is why the Pope resents, with more than justifiable irritation, the lack of political sense of certain Catholics in France by their manifestation in favor of a separation of church and state. Why can they not leave to the only persons responsible the duty of being judge and arbiter of decisions for the future. INNOMINATO.

Mr. Morgan's Son-in-Law

There is a young man in New York who is not content to be known as the son-in-law of his father-in-law, even though that father-in-law be J. Pierpont Morgan. Herbert A. Satterlee, who married a daughter of Mr. Morgan a few years ago, is padding his own canoe with just as much energy as though he didn't have any parent by law. He is engaged in the practice of law, and his friends are authority for the statement that his business is a very lucrative one. Mr. Satterlee comes of old Revolutionary stock, and as a side issue is very much interested in army and navy affairs. Through his interest in the organization of the naval militia of New York State, Mr. Satterlee has been a member of the staffs of Governors Morton and Black. His largely increasing business, however, has compelled him to practically abandon the militia service. Mr. Satterlee is regarded by his father-in-law as one of his A. No. 1 trusts.

Physiology of Genius; Amazing Discovery.

By Wm. Trowbridge Larned.

Neuro-psycho-medico-physical circles in New York—and therefore everywhere—have been vastly agitated since the receipt of the recent news from Paris of the startling discovery made by an eminent psychologist of Toulouse. That he has seen fit to veil his identity in no way lessens the significance of the conclusions he has drawn from his examination of the great chemist, M. Berthelot. His declaration that M. Berthelot's genius may be directly traced to marsh fever and a blow on the forehead is welcomed as the first recorded instance in which known cause and effect may be inductively applied to an obscure and hitherto unexplained phenomenon. For years it has been the dream of the investigator to establish some definite means of determining the exact relations of body and mind. The materialist has busied himself with the scapel and the scales. He has declared that the brain secretes thought as the liver secretes bile. He has carved and weighed the body of man and declared it to be wanting in spiritual attributes. Excepting through the senses, he has said, man knows nothing and can know nothing.

Then came the reaction and with it psychical research. Through trances and through states of hypersensitiveness the psychologist has sought to detect the soul in the human tenement. He has watched by the bedside of the dreamer, and compared the dream with all possible physical data. Along with him has labored the alienist, baffled at every turn by the deep seated mysteries of the nervous system. "Any man," he says, "who pretends to understand the brain is an impostor." Lombroso, as everybody knows, leaped into the breach long ago, in his own way, and Nordau followed him with a wider synthesis. But people would have none of it. "There was Wordsworth's case," I must see what the biographers have to say about his ailments in the nursery period. It is quite possible, however, that in instances of unequal production the existing disturbance of later life. In M. Berthelot's case the malady and the accident were near together, in early childhood, and were of an impulse and coherency sufficient to set up a single stream of consciousness. Of course the exact determining cause which put that current into chemical relation with the mind stuff cannot be indicated in the present imperfect condition of psycho-physic. But it is quite conceivable that if M. Berthelot had merely stubbed his toe he might have gone into politics. "Doctor," I ventured to suggest, "if it is really shown, after all, that poets are made and not born, is it not possible that a life too strenuous or exposure to perils might alter somewhat the current of the imagination? Since Mr. Kipling has been in South Africa you may have noticed—" "Ah!" exclaimed the distinguished physician, smiling, "that is a delicate subject I may not touch upon." "But, doctor," I asked, "is not this discovery fraught with danger? Will not persons risk their lives and refuse to be vaccinated in the hope that smallpox or a railroad collision will develop a taste for invention or the fine arts?" The great physician looked grave for a moment. Then his face lighted up. "It is true," he remarked, "that prize fighters sometimes receive severe blows in the solar plexus, the seat of the nervous system, and that thence you might infer the exciting cause of the astonishing literary facility displayed in their writings for the press. But science—I mean our science—proceeds more cautiously, and awaits the assembling of facts before it reaches conclusions. It would not thus hastily accept, however plausible it might seem, for the pugilist's development of form—I mean literary form, of course. "Similarly we would not conclude that M. Berthelot's case afforded ground for the apprehension you suggest. The evidence rather leans to the theory that adults may not contract disease or disaster with any certain probability that they will subsequently invent or create. As for experiments with children, that, of course, would not be tolerated. "It follows, I suppose, gentlemen," I said, addressing the body as a whole, "that the infrequency of genius nowadays is—er—due to the splendid efforts of the medical profession in stamping out disease. Am I, right in inferring that with the improved methods of sanitation genius will never become epidemic?" But the physicians at this point went into executive session. However, I subsequently ascertained that the possible extinction of genius is regarded merely as a side issue, and that bay and hurly ad lib. await the disclosure of the Eminent One's identity. The first tendency of the new science is to soften the asperity of literary critics. Many offences in historical novel writing and other malignant expressions of the scribbler's itch will fall naturally into the domain of pure pathology. Who would prod a poem by the British laureate when it might be the inevitable product of the mumps in early childhood? Is it Marie Corelli or the whooping cough which must be criticized? Until we learn whether Hall Caine was ever held head downward in a dark cellar by mischievous playmates, it would be indecent to express an opinion concerning his work. It will be seen that the air is charged with embarrassment. An exception of course is the American school of realists. It is estab-

Address of R. P. McLennan to the Electors of the City of Dawson

Ladies and Gentlemen,—Having allowed my name to go before you as a candidate for the mayoralty I deem it proper to publicly intimate the grounds upon which I ask your suffrages. I am strongly of the opinion that municipal government should be conducted on the same lines as the affairs of any large mercantile institution, and accordingly that political methods should be discarded in favor of business principles. I propose accordingly in this campaign to be and remain entirely independent of any ticket in order that my hands may be free to take action upon any business arising in the council, relying on the electors to strengthen my hands by the choice of an efficient body of aldermen fairly representing the various interests and localities of the city.

I do not consider that there are any great permanent abuses resulting from the administration of the retiring council. I accordingly do not advocate any radical changes and I am strongly opposed to a trimming and shifting policy, as I believe that a system thus adopted cannot be altered without causing unjustifiable injury to individuals. I especially will follow the footsteps of my predecessor in maintaining and increasing the present high efficiency of the fire department and I will strongly oppose any attempt towards removing the policing of the city from the strong hands of the Northwest Mounted Police. At the same time I will insist on and expect no difficulty in securing the strict enforcement by them of all city by-laws and regulations.

I will also further and extend to the city limits in a systematic manner the public works in the way of streets and sewers inaugurated by the last council and will endeavor to have the funds available for such improvements expended without unduly favoring any section. I consider that at the earliest moment the city should move in the

PETITIONS ARE FILED

For and Against the Railway Franchise

Bill to be Taken Up Again at a Special Meeting of the Council.

A peculiar thing about the petitions filed with the city council last night for and against the railway franchise is that in several instances the same names appear on both petitions leaving one in doubt which is really favored.

Maurice de Lion, agent of George de Lion, was present and was asked how it happened that his name appears on both lists.

"Realizing that it is to the best business interests of the city of Dawson that a terminus of the Klondike Mines Railway Company should be established in Dawson with as little delay as possible at a point where freight will receive the minimum amount of handling, and that as little inconvenience as possible be occasioned by the use of such streets as are necessary, with that end in view and for very many other apparent reasons, your petitioners respectfully urge and pray that no time be lost in granting to the Klondike Mines Railway Company power to enter the city at a point on the bank of the Klondike river commencing on or near Sixth avenue, thence to Craig street, thence down Craig to First avenue and along the westerly side of First avenue to a point at or near the warehouse of the Standard Oil Company."

"The petition is signed by C. E. McKee; the Joseph Ladue Gold Mining and Development Company of the Yukon, by T. B. Cooke; Yukon Sawmill Company, by W. M. Heron; Standard Oil Company, by M. A. Rainbow; Ames Mercantile Company by W. H. Parsons; Merchants Transportation Company, by R. W. Calderhead; Northern Commercial Company, by W. H. Fairbanks; George de Lion, by Maurice de Lion; A. D. McDonald, by John McCormack, his atty.; McDonald Trading Company, by John McCormack; Trading and Exploration Company, by C. W. Thebo.

The petition against the bill is likewise addressed to the honorable mayor and city council of the city of Dawson and is as follows: "We as ratifiers of the city of Dawson most earnestly protest against the petition of the Klondike Mines Railway or any other company to grant them a franchise to build, operate or maintain a railway along First avenue north of Princess street in the city of Dawson. We most respectfully protest for the following reasons: "That the operation of a railway along First avenue will naturally result in a great loss of business to many of the merchants and others carrying on business on First avenue, especially those engaged in the retail trade. "That the operation of a railway along that portion of First avenue north of Princess street will greatly damage and injure your petitioners by reducing the value of their property. "That it will greatly interfere with shipping and handling of goods by other shippers than the railway. "That said First avenue from Princess street north will be practically made into a shipping yard for the benefit of the said railway company for which they offer no compensating advantage. "That said First avenue is already closely crowded with business and shipping for a portion of the year, and if a railway track be laid along said street from Princess street north, it will be to the great injury of those carrying on business on that street. "We wish to say further that the said railway company should without difficulty be able to secure water front advantages west of First avenue, but should not on any account be given a franchise to lay tracks, to operate or maintain a railroad on said First avenue, especially north of Princess street. "We most respectfully pray that this our petition be favorably considered."

LICENSES COLLECTED

Annual Report of Inspector Worlock

Handsome Sum is Added to the Revenues of the City. Result of License Bylaw.

The report filed at the council meeting last night by License Inspector Worlock shows the revenues of the city to have been increased during the past year from such source to the extent of considerably over $6000, the licenses issued covering sixteen occupations. The number issued was 106 and number of transfers two. The collections cover only that period since the appointment of a license inspector before which time, according to the statement made by Alderman Macdonald, the territorial government had collected between $2000 and $3000 and which went into the general revenue of the territory. The city has had charge of its own finances only since June 30 last. Mr. Worlock's report in detail is as follows: Auctioneers, 4 $ 400.00 Bowling alleys, 1 100.00 Boxing permits, 1 50.00 The Billiard and pool tables, 2 112.50 Cigars, cigarettes and tobacco, 40 1716.50 Drays, 27 967.50 Livery stables, 4 325.00 Milk vendors, 2 100.00 Pawnbrokers, 1 150.00 Pedlars, 2 350.00 Scavengers, 3 800.00 Second hand dealers, 5 412.50 Shooting galleries, 1 50.00 Street stands, 2 125.00 Transient traders, 4 600.00 Water carts, 5 300.00 Transfers, 2 7.50 Total $6466.50

MASQUE BALL.

A. B.'s Preparing for the Big Event. The A. B.'s are making exceptionally elaborate preparations for the grand masque ball which is to take place on New Year's eve. No one will be allowed on the floor unless masked, until after 12 o'clock. Many beautiful costumes are being prepared and the affair promises to be a grand success. Tickets may be secured at Sale & Co.'s, Monarch Shoe Store, Yukon Hardware Co., or of Dr. Edwards.

WHIST PARTY.

A Pleasureable Party on Last Chance. One of the season's events on Hunter creek was the progressive whist party given on Saturday night by Mrs. Ogburn at her home, 9 above Last Chance. The evening was passed at progressive whist, and was concluded with the serving of dainty refreshments. Among the guests were the following: Mr. and Mrs. Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Werne, Mr. and Mrs. Doan, Mr. and Mrs. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Freeman, Mr. and Mrs. Debnay, Mr. and Mrs. Ogburn, Miss Pasky, Miss Irvine, Miss James, Miss Forney, Miss Crawley, Capt. Graves, Messrs. Brandt, Woods, Bramton, Griffiths, Shimming, Lacerte, Guiberson, Osmond, Cunningham, Traves, Fulton, Clarke Bros., Fitzpatrick, Payson and Quirk.

ROYALLY OBSERVED

Sulphur People Have a Fine Celebration. Christmas day was royally observed on Sulphur creek. The scene of the festivities was No. 23 above, McCarty's roadhouse. A big Christmas tree was provided, which was laden with good things, with particular care for the children. A fine program was rendered including a solo by the Rev. Van Wyck, a recitation by Mrs. Slater and a solo by Mr. McHride. Every child on the creek was present and nearly all of the parents. At the conclusion of the program a splendid spread was served to nearly 150 guests. Everyone present voted it the most successful event that ever occurred on the creek.

The finest of office stationery may be secured at the Nugget printery at reasonable prices. Send a copy of the Nugget's Christmas edition to your outside friends.

the producers. "So if you vote for me you are voting for the retention of the mounted police as the city force, and there will be no referendum, and no trimming upon that subject. (Loud applause).

Mr. Davison has referred to the water question, and he insinuates that I am going into the council in order to get something for the water-works. I have been in business here for four and a half years, and I have been in business for twenty years altogether. Do you think I have jobbed the people I have dealt with? Has it ever been suggested even? I can assure you that there is nothing further from my mind. (Cheers). I know that I have no need to assure you, and I see that it was not necessary for me to answer the ungentlemanly insinuation of Mr. Davison. (Renewed cheers). I have been asked by a number of friends to consent to become a candidate. I was asked to do so last year. This year I have consented. I am not going to bring reproach upon them. And I have no intention of bringing reproach upon you who will vote for me, nor upon myself, by working any job or permitting any job to be worked for I am mayor. (Loud applause). If you think that I might descend to such baseness you would be very foolish to vote for me, and if I thought it might be possible I should certainly like you not to do so. (Renewed applause).

D. W. Davis, mayoralty candidate, was next called for, but a note was read from Mrs. Davis that he was suffering from the grippe.

SINGER IN TROUBLE

Hel-n Jewel is Laboring Under a Peculiar Hallucination. Helen Jewel, the erstwhile prima donna whose voice has often been heard singing "Hosanna to the King," is confined at the barracks in the woman's ward under the charge of insanity and it is said that it will be several days before she will be able to appear in court for an examination. Last night the detail at the town station was somewhat startled to see wafted into their midst a vision clad principally in smiles and filmy garments which upon closer investigation took the material form of Miss Jewel. She had a wild, haunted look about her eyes and asked for protection, saying that some one had a lot of X-rays turned on her and was peering into her very soul. She also appeared to have other hallucinations and Sergeant Smith after seeing that she was properly dressed had her escorted to the barracks where she was placed under the care of Assistant Surgeon Thompson. Her case is not thought to be serious and a week's rest in the sanitarium will probably do much toward restoring her mental equilibrium.

NOTICE.

There will be a meeting of all opposed to the granting to the Railway Company the right to run up Klondike avenue, on Tuesday night (tonight) at 8 p'clock in the rooms over the Bonanza saloon, to take action to oppose such grant.

NEW YEARS AT FORKS

Preparations Are Almost Completed

Splendid Program Has Been Arranged Including the Best Local Talent.

Rev. Father Lebert of Grand Fork is doing all in his power to make the sacred concert a success which is to be given in St. Patrick's church at that place on New Year's night. Nearly everybody is fond of hearing a good concert and there is no doubt but the church will be crowded, as everyone will avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing this concert, which will be the best that has ever been given at Grand Fork. Following is the programme: 1. "Nazareth," solo, Grand Fork. 2. "Kyrie," solo and chorus, Grand Fork. 3. "O Holy Night," solo, Grand Fork. 4. "Lead, Kindly Light," solo and chorus, Grand Fork. 5. "The Rose Tree," solo and chorus, Grand Fork. 6. "Adeste Fideles," solo and chorus, Grand Fork. 7. "Ave Maria," solo and chorus, Grand Fork. 8. "O Salutaris," duet, Grand Fork. 9. "Palm Sunday," solo and chorus, Grand Fork. 10. "Come, Holy Spirit," solo and chorus, Grand Fork. 11. "The Rose Tree," solo and chorus, Grand Fork. 12. "O Salutaris," duet, Grand Fork. 13. "Star of Bethlehem," solo and chorus, Grand Fork. 14. "Pray for us," solo, Grand Fork. 15. "There is no Heart Like Thine," trio, Grand Fork. 16. "Benedictus," quartet and chorus, Grand Fork. 17. "Calvary," solo, Grand Fork. 18. "Agnus Dei," duet and chorus, Grand Fork. 19. "The Rose Tree," solo and chorus, Grand Fork. 20. "The Rose Tree," solo and chorus, Grand Fork.

That was a terrific game of hockey on Christmas afternoon, and several of the players were badly bruised. One of them, J. M. Merritt, of the Bank of B. N. A., discovered two days later that he had two or three ribs broken. He went immediately to the hospital. The doctor said it was pleurisy. How disappointed Mr. Merritt must have been.

MEAL TICKETS.

This is altogether a misunderstanding. The Nugget did run such a line for some days, but there is nothing in connection therewith to prove that it has gone into the restaurant business. It refers to the printing of meal tickets, and bill heads and all sorts of printing, and it is the other printers who are gnashing their teeth, and not the Jap, at the mention of such low prices.

Stroller's Column.

Tomorrow is the last day of the year, generally known throughout the mining camps as "swear off day."

chances are exceedingly slim, to kiss a few Indian babies.

Marty Mack, the poet, sends the Stroller a parody "On the Banks of the Wabash," only the first verse of which can be given in this column, however, as the rest is far too realistic for some of the readers of the Stroller. Here it is with all its poetic craving: Round the Yukon's banks for many months I've wandered, But a freight train never came within my view. Often times I wish I were in New York city, Where I first received my free-lunch oyster stew. For there is one thing that I miss in Dawson city, And without it life appears so incomplete. We never get those hot Frankfurter sausage, Or cry of "Hot Tomatoes" on our streets. The Stroller may perhaps relieve the longing of Marty by saying that the hot tomatoes disappeared from the streets of New York several years ago. It was common in San Francisco for years, and was even heard in Chicago before it reached the metropolis. It had a brief but profitable reign. Large companies were formed to manufacture the toothsome and appetizing food, then it began to be canned, then it was no longer a novelty and is now practically forgotten.

That was a terrific game of hockey on Christmas afternoon, and several of the players were badly bruised. One of them, J. M. Merritt, of the Bank of B. N. A., discovered two days later that he had two or three ribs broken. He went immediately to the hospital. The doctor said it was pleurisy. How disappointed Mr. Merritt must have been.
