And he lit a cigar and prepared to enjoy it.

Max Rutherford was alone in this world, as far as near-relatives were concerned, although he could count his friends by the score.

He was educated for the bar, but before that education was completed his father died, bequeathing his little fortune, a few thousands to Max. As Max was an uncommonly generous fellow, as his friends were fond of saying, and being somewhat extravagant in his tastes and mode of living, he did not find it at all difficult to spend those few thousands in a very short time. And so, at the age of 25, we find him, handsome, honest, good hearted and bravely striving to reach the pedestal of his ambition, but poor.

"Now for the club room. I don't want to stay here longer than necessary," and he picked up his hat.

The landlady met him at the door. "A lady to see you, sir. She is in the parlor."

"A lady? All right; I will go down immediately."

At the parlor door, which was wide open, he suddenly stopped. There, sitting beside a table back to him, was the slight, black-robed form of a woman. Her head was bowed low and her hands were clasped. She looked the very picture of grief and despair.

As he crossed the threshold she arose and with a quick, girlish grace, moved toward him. Then Max saw that she was heavily veiled, and she made no movement to throw the veil back.

"You are Max Rutherford, are you not?"

Max started at the low, musical tones fell on his ear.

"I beg that you will pardon me for this intrusion, but truly," and the voice grew more earnest, "I felt obliged to come, my trouble is so great. Nay, I was driven to it, and no one but you yourself can aid me. Will you listen to my story?"

"Certainly. Pray be seated."

"I am Helen Castleton, and an orphan, and doubtless a stranger to you."

"You are. I have never had the pleasure of meeting you before," he answered.

"For ten years I have lived with my uncle, my mother's brother. He is immensely wealthy. I am supposed to be his heiress. But my life for the past three years has been most unhappy. I am not of age, and shall not be for a year to come, and my uncle is determined to persuade me to marry a man old enough to be my father. He, too, is worth his millions, and for that reason my uncle bids me marry him.

This man follows me wherever I go, professing to love me, but those professions fill my soul with disgust and fear. I hate him! I'll die before I consent to wed him!" and her voice trembled so that Max longed to snatch away her veil and gaze on the possessor of that pleading, tearful voice.

"I ran away from home two years ago," she continued, "but my uncle and the one who claims to be my lover found and brought me home. Home! ah, heaven! what a home! All the while I have had since I was a child; yet it is little better than a prison. I have never had any girl acquaintance. He would not allow me to see any one excepting his own friends, and they were only money-seeking men. I disliked them all.

"To-morrow morning my uncle says I must marry this man—that I shall be forced to do it. I cannot! Oh, I cannot! Heaven, let me die first!"

And with a piteous moan she held both hands out to Max.

He clasped them in his, and, as he did so, a pitying yearning tenderness filled his heart for this veiled stranger.

"Tell me how I can help you," he murmured.

"Max Rutherford, will you—marry me?"

Then, as if deeply ashamed, she turned from him, clasping her hands over her eyes.

As for Max, if a bomb shell had exploded at his feet, he could not have felt more astonished or bewildered, but before he could articulate a word she turned to him again.

"Listen, please. I have seen you day after day, as you passed my uncle's house. You looked so honest and kind that somehow I felt that you could and would help me. Am I right or wrong? You are only a struggling lawyer."

He smiled bitterly at that.

"I have many thousands in my own right. My father willed it to me. They cannot touch that. I have drawn it all. Here it is," and she laid a roll of bank bills on the table beside him. "I ask you to accept it. It

Max gave a faint cry of astonishment when he saw the glorious face that was revealed to him—a scrawny face, as white as marble, large, dark, plaintive eyes that looked at him frankly yet pleadingly—eyes that thrilled him through and through. It was a face that Max Rutherford could never forget.

He made a movement as if to clasp her in his arms, but she started back, and with a frightened cry, snatched up her cape, then turned and fled down the long aisle. And before Max could realize it she was driven away.

Nothing was left now for him to do but to return to his boarding house.

Three years have passed and Max Rutherford has reached his goal at last. He has made for himself a name and has attained a position to be proud of. He has not only the one case, but many more. His briefs were once dry-rotted, sharp yet truthful and powerful, and success crowned these fearless and untiring efforts.

London society now greeted him with extended arms, yet he turns away and shuns all such advances.

He is not happy or even satisfied—there is something wanting. He yearns with all his soul to make one other plea—longs to win one other case, and then he will rest content.

He has never seen or heard one word from his wife since that strange marriage occurred. His search for her has been untiring and fruitless.

Not a penny of her money did he touch, but carefully treasured it, hoping to be able to restore it to her ere long.

One day he was called to the bedside of a dying man who wished to make his will. As Max entered the room the attendants were sent out.

It was not an ill-looking face that Max gazed on, but it was aged by suffering, and there was a haunted expression to the eyes painful to see.

"Before the will is drawn up," he said, "I wish to make a confession. You have a good face, and I have heard of your meritorious success as a barrister. Perhaps you can help me."

"I will endeavor to do so."

"Three years ago my niece, Helen Castleton, was living with me. She was a good girl and I did not appreciate her. I tried to persuade her to marry a man old enough to be her father, but a man worth even more than I am, and I can count my wealth by millions. She refused to marry him. At last I said she would be forced to do it. I remember that she replied that she would sooner die. And that night she fled. We found her the next morning, just outside of London. She proudly held up a folded certificate saying we were too late, that she was already married. Then I—wicked sinner that I am—I crept her, adding that I never wished to see her ungrateful face again, and I never have. May heaven forgive, I would give much now to see her once more—little Helen, my dear sister's child!" and his eyes glistened with tears. He continued on slowly.

"I wish you to search for her. Find her, and I leave the sum of $30,000 to you. The remainder is Helen's; if she be dead, I bequeath to her husband and his heirs. I wish to make a will to that effect. Make haste! Send for the housekeeper to witness. Quick! I cannot live much longer." And the dying man gasped for breath.

The will was drawn and signed.

"You will search for her?" he pleaded.

"Yes, and heaven helping me I will find her," and Max turned away struggling to master himself. As he did so, the door opened, and a woman's form flew to the bedside.

"Uncle!" she cried, "they told me you were dying! Uncle! Uncle! do not die without taking back that terrible curse—for mother's sake bless your niece!"

"Helen, thank God! I bless you—forgive your uncle. Pray—for pardon!" and with that last word his soul passed away.

For a moment longer she knelt there in silent prayer, then pressing a kiss on the cold lips she arose, and turning noticed Max for the first time.

He stood there with outstretched arms.

"Helen, my wife, come to me!"

With a piteous cry she tottered towards him, and he folded her in his arms, pressing warm, passionate kisses on her face.

"Let me go, Max!" she pleaded.

"—I—"

"I do. You asked me to marry you, my precious love, now I ask you to strive to love your husband. My wife, I love you! I have loved you from the moment you unveiled your face to me."

"Max! You cannot mean it! I don't, for you torture me!" and she strove in vain to free herself.

"Listen," she said. "After I left you, I travelled as companion to a lady. Lately I heard that my uncle was dying, and the curse troubled me so that I returned to London just in time to receive his blessing. I was hoping that I would not meet you. Let me go and hide my face from your sight."

"Never! I have mourned your loss more than you can know. Now that I have found you do you think that I can give you up? No, my love shall hold you. Darling, try and love me."

An incredulous joy shone in her face.

"Is it true, Max—husband; do you mean it—do you want me—me?" and she flung her arms around his neck and he saw the glad love light beaming in her eyes.

"Yes, I want you—my wife."

While Frederic Remington was in the west he observed a well executed portrait in a dark room on the wall of a cabin, and asked whose picture it was.

"That's my husband," said the woman of the house, carelessly.

"But it is hung with fatal effect," urged the artist.

"So was my husband," snapped the woman.

"There goes old Faith, Hope and Charity!" exclaimed the country cousin as an elderly gentleman drove past in an old-fashioned gig.

"Who is he?" enquired the London cousin, "and why do you call him that?"

"He's our medical man," was the reply, "and doctors everybody round here for miles."

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., FEB. 10, 1899.

The Civic Contest.

Tuesday was a bright and pleasant day and most favorable for the voters to get to the polls. The vote was not large, however, owing no doubt to a considerable degree to the large number who were disqualified in consequence of unpaid taxes. The friends of the candidates did a considerable amount of work and teams were provided for all who wished to go to the polls.

The small vote obtained by Capt. Tingley is of course to be accounted for by the fact of his declining the nomination and asking by card in the ACADIAN and otherwise that the electors should not vote for him.

The Electoral Lists.

The revision of the electoral lists is now going on. The revisors have met and prepared the list which has been posted for inspection. Persons wishing to have their names, or the names of others, added to or struck from these lists must make application setting forth grounds for same before the 20th of this month.

Town Council Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the council was held on Wednesday evening. Present: the Mayor, Couns. Sawyer, Harvey, Porter and Bowles and the recorder.

A REMEDY FOR GRIPPE.

Halifax, N. S., Jan. 2nd, '99.

TO THE OZONE COMPANY. DEAR SIR,—I have used your OZONE for myself and family for severe attacks of Grippe, and find it an excellent remedy. It removes the cause of the disease—and the disease itself.

When first attacked with Grippe, which is generally indicated by head and backache, and often by chills and fever, take a tablespoonful of OZONE in the same amount of water, every hour, until eight to ten doses have been taken, which will break up the disease. After that three to four tablespoonfuls should be taken a day until well and strong.

Hundreds are being cured. Get it at once. For sale at Head's Drug Store, Wolfville, Borden & Co., and H. G. Martin & Co., Canning.

A Canadian Who Fought His Way.

Prof. Schurman, President of Cornell University, who has gone to Manila at the head of a commission to report upon the Philippines for President McKinley, is a Canadian.

A farmer's son, in Prince Edward Island, he worked, first for ten cents a day threshing, and afterwards for $30 a year in a store.

His next jump was to $60 a year in a larger establishment. Being anxious to get an education, Schurman saved a part of his wages—some $80 in three years, and was enabled to take one year at the Prince of Wales' College, Charlottetown.

At the end of the year he had no money; but he had won a scholarship and with that and a trifle earned at night by keeping a storekeeper's books he managed to pull through his course.

Then he took to teaching until he had saved $100, with which he went to Wolfville to attend Acadia College.

Here he chanced to hear of the Gilchrist scholarship, which gives the winner $500 a year and a course at the University of London.

He fought for it and won it, and at the end of this course won the Hibbard traveling fellowship, worth $2,000 a year, and giving the winner a term at Harvard.

The student returned to Nova Scotia to become a professor, and finally went to Cornell as the head of the University there.

It is a good record for the farmer's boy.—Mail and Empire.

Nova Scotia Farmer's Association.

The fourth annual convention of the Nova Scotia Farmer's Association is to be held in the Court House, Annapolis Royal, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, February 22nd, 23rd and 24th.

A programme of unusual interest has been prepared, embracing addresses by Hon. Sidney Fisher, Minister of Agriculture; Professor F. T. Shutt, chemist, Experimental Farms, Ottawa; Mr. A. G. Gilbert, manager poultry department, Experimental Farms, Ottawa; J. J. Ferguson, Smith's Falls, Ontario; W. W. Hubbard, editor Co-operative Farmer, Sussex, N. B., and a number of prominent agriculturists from our own province. Among the subjects to be discussed are—Dairying; the Growing of Bacon Pigs; the Preservation of Farm Manures; Statute Labor and Assessment; the Agricultural School.

Opening session begins at 2 p. m. on Wednesday, February 22nd; evening session 7.30. Third session on Thursday, February 23rd, at 10 a. m., 2 p. m. and 7.30 p. m. Two sessions on Friday, February 24th, at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m.

"Every town," writes a subscriber, "has a liar or two; a smart Aleck; some pretty girls; more loafers than it needs; a woman or two that tattle; an old foggy that the town would be better off without; men who stand on street corners and make remarks about the women; a man who laughs an idiotic laugh every time he says anything; scores of men with the caboose on their trousers worn smooth as glass; men who can tell you about how the war question should be settled, and how to run our people's business, but who have made a dismal failure of their own."

WOLFVILLE, N. S., FEB. 10, 1899.

The Civic Contest.

Tuesday was a bright and pleasant day and most favorable for the voters to get to the polls. The vote was not large, however, owing no doubt to a considerable degree to the large number who were disqualified in consequence of unpaid taxes. The friends of the candidates did a considerable amount of work and teams were provided for all who wished to go to the polls.

The small vote obtained by Capt. Tingley is of course to be accounted for by the fact of his declining the nomination and asking by card in the ACADIAN and otherwise that the electors should not vote for him.

The Electoral Lists.

The revision of the electoral lists is now going on. The revisors have met and prepared the list which has been posted for inspection. Persons wishing to have their names, or the names of others, added to or struck from these lists must make application setting forth grounds for same before the 20th of this month.

Town Council Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the council was held on Wednesday evening. Present: the Mayor, Couns. Sawyer, Harvey, Porter and Bowles and the recorder.

A REMEDY FOR GRIPPE.

Halifax, N. S., Jan. 2nd, '99.

TO THE OZONE COMPANY. DEAR SIR,—I have used your OZONE for myself and family for severe attacks of Grippe, and find it an excellent remedy. It removes the cause of the disease—and the disease itself.

When first attacked with Grippe, which is generally indicated by head and backache, and often by chills and fever, take a tablespoonful of OZONE in the same amount of water, every hour, until eight to ten doses have been taken, which will break up the disease. After that three to four tablespoonfuls should be taken a day until well and strong.

Hundreds are being cured. Get it at once. For sale at Head's Drug Store, Wolfville, Borden & Co., and H. G. Martin & Co., Canning.

A Canadian Who Fought His Way.

Prof. Schurman, President of Cornell University, who has gone to Manila at the head of a commission to report upon the Philippines for President McKinley, is a Canadian.

His next jump was to $60 a year in a larger establishment. Being anxious to get an education, Schurman saved a part of his wages—some $80 in three years, and was enabled to take one year at the Prince of Wales' College, Charlottetown.

At the end of the year he had no money; but he had won a scholarship and with that and a trifle earned at night by keeping a storekeeper's books he managed to pull through his course.

Then he took to teaching until he had saved $100, with which he went to Wolfville to attend Acadia College.

Here he chanced to hear of the Gilchrist scholarship, which gives the winner $500 a year and a course at the University of London.

He fought for it and won it, and at the end of this course won the Hibbard traveling fellowship, worth $2,000 a year, and giving the winner a term at Harvard.

The student returned to Nova Scotia to become a professor, and finally went to Cornell as the head of the University there.

It is a good record for the farmer's boy.—Mail and Empire.

Nova Scotia Farmer's Association.

The fourth annual convention of the Nova Scotia Farmer's Association is to be held in the Court House, Annapolis Royal, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, February 22nd, 23rd and 24th.

A programme of unusual interest has been prepared, embracing addresses by Hon. Sidney Fisher, Minister of Agriculture; Professor F. T. Shutt, chemist, Experimental Farms, Ottawa; Mr. A. G. Gilbert, manager poultry department, Experimental Farms, Ottawa; J. J. Ferguson, Smith's Falls, Ontario; W. W. Hubbard, editor Co-operative Farmer, Sussex, N. There continues to be a great amount of sickness in town, and in the outlying districts we hear of cases where nearly every person in a community has been laid aside by the gripe or some similar ailment.

The ice harvest is now being gathered in. The quality is said to be excellent. In the districts we hear of cases where nearly every person in a community has been laid aside by the gripe or some similar ailment.

The weather since the beginning of February has been remarkably steady and cold. The mercury has remained near the zero mark all the time. The days have been bright and clear, however, as a general thing.

The hockey match at Aberdeen rink last Saturday afternoon between the students of the collegiate school of Wolfville and the Wolfville juniors resulted in a score of 3-1 in favor of the visitors. The game was a spirited one.

The glass was placed in position in Mr. Stedman's new store on Wednesday, and the painters are now at work on the interior. The shop will be a most attractive and commodious one. Mr. Sinclair expects to occupy it in a short time.

During Lent Rev. K. C. Hind is to be absent from Wolfville, taking the place of Rev. James Simmonds, curate of St. Marks, Halifax, who comes to Wolfville. The exchange is to be effected in consequence of the health of Rev. Mr. Simmonds.

We want our farmers—especially the secretaries of our agricultural societies—to send us interesting news items relating to farm work in every department. Farmers should keep to the front as well as any other class and we are ready to do them justice when required.

Two hockey games are arranged to be played in Aberdeen this evening. One will be between the Wolfville and Windsor Seniors, the other between the Juniors of the same town. The game will no doubt both be interesting, and will likely be witnessed by a large number of spectators.

We have received the programme of the thirty-first convention of the Maritime Young Men's Christian Association which meets at St. John on Feb. 15-17. The programme is a most comprehensive one, and the meeting will no doubt be most interesting and profitable. We notice the name of Mr. E. C. Strubart, of Acadia, on the list of speakers for the meeting to discuss college work.

The Wolfville Orchestra has arranged to give the concert which was referred to by the ACADIAN some weeks ago, on Friday evening of next week in College Hall. The orchestra will be assisted on this occasion by Mr. E. R. Laurent, of New York, baritone soloist. The concert will undoubtedly be one of the best entertainments that has been given in Wolfville for a long time and should be attended by every lover of good music. We hope our people generally will turn out and show their appreciation of the efforts that have been put forth by the orchestra to give a really good performance.

Local and Provincial.

Last Saturday the citizens of Bridge-water voted on the question of incorporating their town and decided by a majority of 266 to 40 to do so.

At the regular monthly missionary meeting in the Baptist church last Sunday evening an interesting address on Home Missions was given by Rev. A. Oshoon.

The next lecture of the course being given in the Presbyterian church will be given by Prof. Falconer, of Dalhousie College, on "Rome." This lecture is said to be an exceptionally good one and should be well attended. The date will be announced later.

The purchase of Rev. J. B. Hennequin's place at Lower Wolfville is Mr. Hugh Bullock. Mr. Bullock formerly spent a me time here before his return to England two years ago. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Bullock in this vicinity are pleased that they have decided to settle in Wolfville.

A new fifty barrel flour mill is now running in Dartmouth. This is the second modern flour mill in the Maritime Provinces, and Mr. Matheson, who has assumed the whole responsibility of this enterprise, deserves the greatest success. Matheson's Acadia K. D. cornmeal has always been in favor in this part of the country and he informs us that his dealings with our business men have been of the most pleasant kind. He now can fill mixed orders to better advantage. The best trade in Dartmouth uses Matheson's Hungarian flour. His adv. appears elsewhere.

As noted in another column the marriage took place at New Minas, on Wednesday, of Mr. S. Thomson, of Dartmouth, and Miss Estie B. Bishop, eldest daughter of O. Ansley Bishop, E. C., of New Minas. We learn that the wedding was a very happy and auspicious one; that the guests included a considerable number of relatives and friends; that Mr. Hugh Miller, of Halifax, was groomsmen, and Miss Addie Bowles, of Colbrook, and Miss Estie Bishop, sister of the bride, were bridesmaids; and that the bride was handsomely remembered by many friends, as shown by the presents received. The happy couple will reside in Dartmouth, where Mr. Thomson is well established in business. The ACADIAN extends congratulations.

Missionary Societies Fraternize.

The W. M. A. S. of the Baptist church had a very pleasant meeting on Wednesday afternoon in the vestry of their church. Members of the missionary societies in connection with the Presbyterian and Methodist churches were invited. The room was tastefully arranged for the occasion and presented a very pretty appearance. Mrs. Hatch presided and welcomed the visitors with appropriate remarks. An interesting address was given by Mrs. Trotter, descriptive of the work being done by the Baptist auxiliaries, and Mrs. Donkin and Mr. MacDonald described the work being done by the societies of their respective churches. The latter also read an interesting letter from Rev. W. R. Foote, missionary at Korea. An address was also given by Mrs. Harrington, of Halifax, editor of the Message, the organ of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Presbyterian church in Canada. Mrs. Harrington is a daughter of the late Dr. Goddie, and in her address she spoke in a most interesting manner of the work done by her father while a missionary to the New Hebrides, and recounted her experiences of her life there. A pleasant feature of the programme was a well rendered solo by Mrs. Hatch. After the programme had been completed refreshments were served and the remainder of the time was spent in a social way.

Day of Prayer for Students.

For many years past it has been the custom of the American and Canadian churches to observe the last Thursday in January as a special Day of Prayer for Colleges. This year a movement has been inaugurated by the World Students' Christian Federation to unite the whole Christian world in the observance of a day; and with a view to securing universal action the date of observance has been changed to Sunday, Feb. 12th.

The institutions in town will mark the day by special services, and the prayers of all the churches are earnestly solicited for these and all similar institutions. At 9 o'clock Sunday morning, the students, professors and teachers of the college and academy will meet in the college chapel for prayer. At the morning service in the Baptist church the Rev. Mr. Hatch will preach a special sermon to students. In the evening at 7 o'clock, a special service will be held in College Hall, in which all the institutions will unite, and in view of which there will be no evening service in the Baptist church.

"Canada and Her Future."

The second lecture of the course being given in St. Andrew's church was delivered on Tuesday evening. Mr. E. M. MacDonald, M. P. P., of Pictou, brother of the pastor of the church, was the speaker. The subject, "Canada and her future," was treated in a most interesting manner, which held the close attention of the audience throughout. The speaker defined true patriotism to be not only love of country but a love based upon a thorough knowledge of the elements which made a country worthy of being loved. The advantages of our country, its vast natural resources and unparalleled political institutions were eloquently referred to. The speaker pointed out the requirements for the successful future of our country, chief of which he claimed to be honesty and integrity on the part of our public men. The future destiny he predicted for Canada was not annexation to the United States, nor even independence—but a closer federation with the motherland, and a taking upon ourselves of a share in supporting the grand empire to which we belong.

At the close Mayor Thomson, who presided, made a few appropriate remarks. Prof. James in a neat address moved a vote of thanks which was seconded by Mr. B. O. Davison and eloquently supported by President Trotter and Mr. William Chipman. It was unanimously passed by a rising vote and gracefully acknowledged by the lecturer, after which the national anthem was sung and the audience dispersed.

H. H. Wickwire, M. P. P., has the thanks of the ACADIAN for parliamentary papers.

FRUIT TREES

At Wholesale in Lots of 100 and Upwards.

During the Xmas holidays I visited the Nurseries of Ontario and selected at Grimsby, and two other points near by, a car lot of (1000) ten thousand, consisting of Apple, Pear, Dwarf and Standard Plums, Cherries, Peaches, Quinces, Currants, Gooseberry, Raspberry, Blackberry, Grapes, Strawberry plants, Lawn shrubs, Street Trees, also 1000 Roses 2 years on own roots, all of which will be dug in the spring, and are first class. I dug in the spring in Fruit Park in the spring of 1898, 17 1/2 acres. This entire lot of trees will be disinfected before shipment and guaranteed "clean." They will be packed in moss in car with out boxing, and freight rates will be reduced one half. Trees are scarce this year. I now offer a part of the above to large planters, dealers or clubs at wholesale prices where orders are sent in without solicitation. Send list of requirements for quotations. I will print a sheet list of varieties.
