The Earl's Son;

TWO HEARTS UNITED.

CHAPTER XV.

Talbot raised his head and knitted his brows. Now that the man mentioned it, he remembered that Farrington was one of the family names. He had not heard it for years, but—Ah, yes, it was a mere coincidence, of course.

"Is that all?" he asked, contemptuously. "I have listened very patiently, my man—"

"I ain't done yet," said Oatway stolidly. "The other night as I was sauntering, just for exercise, through the woods, I came upon the head-keeper's hut. There was two of 'em a-talkin', this Ralph Farrington an' the head-keeper; an' just for passin' the time, I crep' up an' listened. Burchett was tellin' about the way his sister Janet was lured away by one o' the swells at the Court, how she disappeared an' left no trace—usual kind o' thing, you know; but it set me thinkin', an' I was goin' away to think it out, when the young 'un—nearly spotted me afore through on o' those cursed dawgs o' his—collared me in the last spinney. He treated me rough, he did! Reg'lar mauled me!"

His hand went to his throat and loosened his collar, as if he were choking.

"He treated me vile, he did!" he went on, with an oath and an ugly scowl. "An' it's well for you he did!" he added, with a sudden snarl; "for if he'd been civil an' gentle with me I should have up an' told him what I'm tellin' you; an' where would you have been then, Mister Talbot Denby?"

Talbot smiled.

"Very much where I am now, my man!" he said; "for, of course I

THOUGHT SHE COULD NOT LIVE

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Unionville, Mo.—"I suffered from a female trouble and I got so weak that I could hardly walk across the floor without holding on to something. I had nervous spells and my fingers would cramp and my face would draw, and I could not speak, nor sleep to do any good, had no appetite, and everyone thought I would not live. Some one advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had taken so much medicine and my doctor said he could do me no good so I told my husband he might get me a bottle and I would try it. By the time I had taken it I felt better. I continued its use, and now I am well and strong."

"I have always recommended your medicine ever since I was so wonderfully benefited by it and I hope this letter will be the means of saving some other poor woman from suffering."—Mrs. MARTHA SEAVY, Box 1144, Unionville, Missouri.

The makers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have thousands of such letters as that above—they tell the truth, also they could not have been obtained for love or money. This medicine is no stranger—it has stood the test for years.

If there are any complications you do not understand write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidentially) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

needn't tell you that I don't believe a word of your extremely crude—of your cock-and-bull story. Wait, please!" as Oatway struck his leg and prepared to burst in with an oath. "That your wife had already been married, was a widow, before you married her, I have no doubt; but that she married the Earl of Lynborough—that was your assertion, was it not?—is too ridiculous—"

"I went to the chapel—in the grounds," broke in Oatway. "I seen the registry of his birth; the names are the same as them on their certificate of marriage! Eh, what?"

Talbot sneered.

"Very fairly put together for an illiterate person like yourself," he said. "But if I asked you for the certificates—which I have no intention of doing, believe me—I should be told that you had lost them, that they had been accidentally destroyed—"

Oatway leered at him triumphantly. "Not so fast, guv'nor!" he said. "I'm not so green. Not me! I've stuck to them papers, an' I've got them now!"

He took out the greasy pocket-book and, laying it on his knee, struck it with his big, dirty hand.

"There they are, tight an' snug!" he said, gloatingly.

"But you refuse to let me see them!" remarked Talbot, with a shrug.

"Not a bit of it!" retorted Oatway. "There they are!" He opened the pocket-book and, taking out some papers, actually thrust them into Talbot's hand. "Oh, I'm not afraid! I've got the copies in another pocket! You can tear 'em up, if you like—But you just try it!" he added, savagely. "Try it, an' I'll choke you where you sit!"

Talbot took the papers and, slowly unfolding them, examined them closely. His heart seemed to him to cease to beat as he read them. If they were not skillful forgeries—too skillful to be the work of such a man as this—they were genuine certificates of the marriage of the earl to Janet Burchett, and the birth of his child: the son and heir of the Earl of Lynborough. It was too amazing, too incredible! Why, the man who had just passed was, if he were the child whose certificate of birth Talbot held in his hand, Viscount Denby, the next Earl of Lynborough! And he Talbot Denby.

Not a muscle of his face moved, but he could feel the blood in his veins turn cold.

He could have borne the shock better if it had been any other man; but that this fellow who had set him at defiance and had broken his stick almost across his back should be the heir to Lynborough, should oust him out of the title and estates— Oh, it was too monstrous, too improbable and far-fetched!

"Well, guv'nor," demanded Oatway, who had been watching him closely, "what are you goin' to do? F'r instance, what offer are you goin' to make? What are you goin' to give me for those papers, an' to 'old my tongue, eh?"

Talbot awoke from his hideous reverie and tossed the certificates to him.

"Nothing," he said, with an air of indifference.

"Nothin'?" echoed Oatway.

"Certainly not! If this story were true, if these certificates were genuine, which I doubt, the story is probably known to half a dozen, to twenty other persons—"

"No, no; I'll swear it isn't!" Oatway broke in. "It was her secret, an' she kep' it, why, I don't know; I'll admit I don't! There's not a livin' soul as knows she was married, as knows who the boy is but me. I'll swear it! What! d'ye think she wouldn't have told me, the man she was goin' to marry! Why, when we fell out I used to ails Jee about her 'mistfortune,' an' she never let on, never spoke up an' said she was married. And d'ye think if she could keep her tongue quiet under them there circumstances that she'd let on to other people! No, guv'nor, you may take your Bible oath that only me—only you an' me now—knows anything about it."

Talbot was silent for a moment. In a moment much thought can be accomplished. Why had the earl never married, but remained a bachelor? Why had he let the title and estates descend to him, Talbot, whom he did not like? Talbot reflected that he, and as it seemed, no other person, knew anything of the earl's past and early life. The earl never alluded to it; no friend of the family ever spoke of it. A mystery, a veil, which Talbot had only vaguely noticed hitherto, hung over it. Great Heaven, had the earl really contracted this marriage, and had a son been born? Could it be possible that the son was the young fellow who had passed them a few minutes before? Here on the estate! What should he, Talbot, do?

"I think you believe in this story of yours," he said at last. "But I must examine into the matter, I must consider—"

"While the grass is growin' this 'ere horse is starvin'!" broke in Oatway. "I'll go to the rightfu' 'er. I hate him, but business is business!" Talbot smiled.

"That would be the very worst way of doing your business," he said. "If you went to him the first word you uttered would give you away and put him on the scent for himself; if you went to the earl he would probably give you in custody for attempting to obtain money under false pretences—and then inquire into the matter for himself."

"You're clever, you are!" growled Oatway.

"I am certainly clever enough to see the weak points in your scheme my man," Talbot said, coolly. "I'm not sure that I ought not to act as the earl would do—"

"But you won't," sneered Oatway. "No," he admitted, "I've no desire to start a scandal. I will consider the matter. Come here—better go farther into the wood—to-morrow night at ten o'clock, and I will meet you, if it should be convenient for me to do so, and give you my decision." He rose with a languid and careless air. "Better wait here until I have gone some distance up the road. Good day."

He sauntered off, his hands in his pockets, his head erect, his face as composed as usual; but his brain was in a whirl, his heart was beating thickly. To lose the title, the estates, to have them snatched from him by this gamekeeper fellow! To be in the power of a ruffian of the lowest type!

He reached the Court, and going to his room drank some brandy from the flask in his dressing-case. The spirit encouraged him fictionally, and he thought he would seek the earl and try and sound him by referring, as if by chance, to his early life. A footman said the earl was in the library, and Talbot went there; but his artificial courage fled at the sight of the cold, stern face as the earl raised his head and looked at him.

Talbot saw that a large parchment was stretched out on the table before his lordship and that the safe was open.

"I beg your pardon, sir," he said. "I'm afraid I'm interrupting you. I came in for a book—"

"Not at all, not at all," said the earl. "Get your book, by all means. I was looking over the will Mr. Bolton has just sent me. Strange that a man cannot express his intentions plainly without the rigmorole of a kind of dog-Latin! May I trouble you to put this in the safe and lock it?"

He folded the will and Talbot took it, placed it in the safe, which he locked, and handed the keys to the earl.

"Thanks!" said the earl. "You had a pleasant drive, I hope?"

Talbot was standing by one of the book-cases fingering the books, and he looked over his shoulder, mechanically watching the old man put the bunch of keys in his trouser pocket.

"Yes, oh, yes—well, not particularly so," he corrected himself. "The fact is, sir, that I asked Veronica to be my wife; and—"

The earl looked up quickly and with a little nod of satisfaction.

"You did? I'm glad. I think you were very wise, Talbot. Veronica is a woman in a thousand. I do not think you could find a more suitable wife, or one who would—he phrase is not a particularly delicate one, but it expresses what I mean—do you more credit?"

"I am glad to have your approval, sir," said Talbot; "but unfortunately I did not succeed in getting a favorable answer from Veronica."

The earl raised his brows and his lips tightened.

"She refused you?" he said, drily.

Talbot hesitated.

"Well, scarcely refused," he replied. "I a ma'raid I took her by surprise. I must confess that I had not made up my own mind, did not know until recently that my heart was engaged—"

The earl's smile became still more caustic and cynical. He knew that Talbot's heart had been engaged at the exact moment when he told him of the will in Veronica's favor.

"—And she would not give me a decided answer. But I do not despair, sir. I still hope that I may win her affections. By the way, sir, we agreed that you should not know—"

The Best of Life.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"Grow old along with me The best of life is yet to be The last of life for which the first was made."

In speaking of a bride whose first year of married life is near its close I heard someone say, "Well, the happiest year of her life is almost over."

Strangely enough the speaker was a married woman. But then she is of the type that thoughtlessly accepts current notions as unquestionable truth, and apparently she is too old to remember her own first year of married life.

There is a current notion exploited in fiction and accepted by people who accept such notions without putting them to the acid test of their own thought or experience, that the first year is the happiest year of any woman's married life.

To my mind, this is an utterly false idea. And I think it causes more or less unhappiness. For when a bride who has always accepted this theory finds that she is not as radiantly happy as she has been led to expect, and reflects that this year is the best and the others will probably be less happy, she is often disappointed and depressed. Women live in the future a great deal more than men. Hence while the fear of being less happy would be a mere passing shadow to a man, to a woman it might loom up like a serious trouble.

And such a needless one!

For if every successfully married woman would look back over her married life and try to answer honestly I think nine out of ten would admit that the first year was not the happiest time.

Why should it be? The first year is the year of re-adjustment. Now re-adjustments in any line are necessary; they make for ultimate comfort, but they are not in themselves comfortable. The two parties to the union have a great many things to learn about each other which courtship did not teach. They must learn these the first year. They have a course to chart. Once they have charted it they will learn to avoid reefs and whirlpools and rocks, but the first few voyages may be rather troublous.

Again courtship is carried on on the mountain tops of romance. With marriage there must come a descent into the valley of everyday life. When you get used to it, the valley of everyday life is a very sunny, happy place. Besides, in the right kind of a marriage you don't stay there all the time. You make wonderful excursions onto the mountain tops every now and then, and love them all the more because you don't try to live there all the time. Nevertheless, the first descent is rather sharp and painful, and people who make it seldom foresee that they are coming back again or realize how pleasant the valley will be in its own way.

So do not be afraid, little brides, when the first year doesn't measure up to your expectations. Remember, this is not the best; it is only the gateway into the best. "The best of life is yet to be."

Ruth Cameron

Beyond All Succour.

A TALE OF TRAGIC WILD LIFE AND OF A WOUNDED LION.

There was a vicious report as he fired, but too late—a shout, a coughing grunt; the man was down. No; he was up somehow. There was another report close beside; a crash of splintered, parted reeds; a whirling, yellow, black-tuft-tipped tail, and—silence.

The lion went on through the high reeds, smashing his way without speaking a path, galloping a wonderful, long, leaping gallop, in which all four feet nearly touched when in the middle of each bound.

That Hovering Vulture.

He had certainly intended to kill the man who fired at him—had, in fact, got him over, knocked him down like a nine-pipe; but the other man had fired in his face, and—missed! And the beast would revile him for missing.

Far, far better had he not bungled the job, and let the heavy 476 Express bullet finish the work the first man's 275 bullet had begun.

As it was, he hung on his stride, and dropped to a trot—a heavy, loose, dog-like trot. But this trot fell to a walk, and the walk stopped.

He looked round, growling horribly to himself in hollow rumblings. He stared back at the bent and broken reeds, and for a moment it looked as if he were coming back to finish the fight he had not commenced. Then he moved on again, and a host of flies swarmed, buzzing, on to the pool of blood that had collected where he stood.

The heat was intense, and the air thick with a thousand swarming insect plagues. A single vulture thing hung as if suspended by a string from the brazen-copper dome of the heavens, and some antelope being crashed away, unseen, to one side of him.

The lion took no notice of anything. He was limping now, and the flies followed him like a halo.

Just Before Dawn.

He stopped by the river, and drank in the shallows feverishly, till the water reddened about him, and his quick eyes detected a swirl made by a crocodile following up the blood scent. Thereafter he retired into the bushes and lay down. He was still growing a little and his eyes burning deep in the great head of him, were awful to look upon.

Night came swiftly, as it does in those sinister lands; the flies gave way to the steady song of mosquitoes, and the beasts came to drink—zebra, antelope, gazelle, rhinoceros—and the affe, elephant, rhinoceros—and the lion, with his burning eyes, watched them.

Sometimes they, the nervous ones—the zebra, antelope, gazelle, and giraffe—"winded" him, and fled, stampeding in a confused thunder of hoofs and clouds of dust, but the king of beasts never moved.

His wound was stiffening. A great pool of blood marked where he lay. His coat was sopping.

Just before dawn he went down to drink again. He was very thirsty, even for a lion. A single hyena was at the edge when he appeared, and, though well out of reach, it barked, as the hyena always does, at nothing. But it came back; it hung round; it sniffed, and the lion saw it and knew.

From All Sides.

The long, stifling day, with its mad-dancing, black swarms of flies around the wounded beast, dragged brazenly on, and, except for his snaps at the tormenting winged fiends, one might have thought the lion was dead there in his bush.

Then a tiny graceful gazelle came by, and the lion sprang out; but he fell short, and nearly pitched over on to his nose. Things had got so bad as that.

Night came again, aridizing westward over the tress, and the vultures that sat on them all around croaked their disappointment. The guinea fowls called one to the other as they flew up to roost, and a jackal howled somewhere.

Then the hyena appeared, with glowing eyes, lurking in the shadows. But he was not alone now; there were dozens of other cruel eyes glowing, too, and suddenly a most infernal chorus of crackling laughter burst from them.

The lion was still now, lying on his side, growling a little.

Then, about three hours before dawn, the hyenas rushed from all sides, and he died, fighting feebly, the death of nearly all lions—a prey to the loathsome hyenas.

Reticule bags are quite small, and it is the smart thing to have them made of a material to match the dress.

Religious Reception at Trepassey.

On Sunday, 28th June, 1914, the solemn and imposing ceremony of the Reception of Miss Mary Keane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Keane, Monkstown Road, St. John's, known now in Religion as Sister Margaret Mary of the Divine Heart, was performed in our beautiful Parish Church which was artistically decorated for the happy event, in presence of the Right Rev. Monsignor Roche, V.G.; St. John's, assisted by our esteemed Rev. H. T. Renouf.

The church was thronged, numbers having come from the most distant parts of the Parish.

The procession formed immediately after last Mass. First came the cross bearer and acolytes then a large number of aspirants to the Sodality of the Children of Mary followed by a still larger number of Children of Mary in blue cloaks and veils, then the Sisters of the Community and lastly the Rev. Mother and Postulant who was neatly attired in white robe and flowing veil. It wended its way from the Convent to the Church, on its entrance the choir began the hymn "O Gloriosa" and continued until the Postulant reached the altar steps where Monsignor Roche stood vested in cope to receive her.

The function of Reception is a very solemn and touching one. Monsignor Roche delivered an eloquent and impressive sermon suitable to the occasion. He spoke at length of the religious life, of the peace and happiness to be found therein, of the great graces lavished on those who sacrifice home and friends to follow God's call. He brought forcibly before the young lady's mind that God had bestowed a great grace and special favour on her by calling her to serve Him more faithfully, and to strive to attain a higher degree of perfection than she could possibly do in the world.

After the sermon the Postulant retired, laid aside the worldly dress and returned to the altar steps clothed in the religious habit and white veil. The blessing and bestowing of the remainder of the religious dress then took place after which the Novice accompanied by Rev. Mother and Sisters left the Sanctuary while the choir rendered the closing hymns: "Ecce Quam Bonum" and "Deus Misereatur" in their usual excellent style.

After the ceremony the priests, parents and friends were entertained at the Convent.—Com.

Illuminating.

The Dominion Minister of Finance, Hon. W. T. White, made a public statement on the matter of not availing of an option to retire £6,000,000 bonds, which is illuminating as to the present issuing of Dominion bonds. These bonds mature on July 1st, 1915, but the Government has the option of redeeming the whole or any portion of them on or after July 1st, 1914, on giving three months notice. The Finance Minister states that "No such notice has been given because having regard to prevailing quotations for Dominion and other so-called gilt-edged securities it is in the interest of the Government from the business standpoint not to exercise, for the present at least, the option which it holds."

The object of the option to the Dominion Government is obvious. These bonds bear 3 1/2 p.c. That was the rate of interest at the time they were issued. If money became cheaper at the time the option could be exercised than it was at the time of flotation, then it would be in the interest of the Government from a business standpoint to exercise the option. It is not to the interest of the Government to exercise it now for they would have to float Four Per Cent. bonds to redeem them and for these they would get, according to present quotations, only £98 for every £100 issued. In other words they would have to issue a little more than £2,000,000 of Four Per Cents to redeem these £6,000,000 three and three-quarter per cents, and in addition pay about £15,500,000 in interest than they are doing now for them. This statement of the Dominion Finance Minister shows the adverse condition of the markets to Canadian borrowings even on Dominion bonds. The Dominion Government is in no better position in the London market than the Newfoundland Government. We question if her position is as good as ours.

Her position is not such as tends to make us hanker after Confederation for relief in a financial direction.

Man Arrested

ON SERIOUS CHARGE—RELEASED ON BONDS.

On complaint of a little girl, aged 15, a well known business man was arrested under warrant last evening on a serious charge. It appears that the complainant was in the employ of the defendant who, it is alleged, approached the girl periodically within the past three months and made entreaties to her. The preliminary proceedings of the case began to-day in private before Judge Knight. The formal charge read by His Honor was a serious assault on a girl under sixteen years of age. The accused was not asked to plead. He was represented by Gibbs, K.C., who asked for a remand. This request was agreed to and the defendant was admitted to bail.

22nd Anniversary.

To-day marks the anniversary of one of the most important and calamitous events in Newfoundland history and is still fresh in the memories of most of our people. It was on July 8th, 22 years ago in the year 1892, it will be remembered that the city of St. John's was almost entirely wiped out by fire and thousands of families were left homeless and destitute. The conflagration lasted for over a week and the loss of property was approximately estimated at sixteen million dollars and only one quarter of that amount was covered by insurance.

The fire started in a hay barn on the higher levels. It may be said that the heat on that occasion was intense with a high wind raging, and strange to say that conditions were something similar this morning.

St. George's Notes.

Religious Reception at St. George's.

On Sunday evening in the Cathedral several aspirants were received into the Sodality of the Children of Mary. The Society walked in procession in white robes and veils. The aspirants were received at the Altar of the Blessed Virgin. Bishop Power spoke of the Mother of God as the model of purity and humility and as the model mother. He advised the members of the Sodality to honor their parents, to love, respect and be advised by their mothers, and, instead of striving to shine on the street or in public assemblies, to be sunniest and most lovable in their own homes.

On Monday morning, at High Mass, took place a never-to-be forgotten ceremony, the reception into the Order of the Mercy Nuns of two novices, one of whom, Miss A. Gillis, in religion Sister M. Michael, is the first native of the West Coast to be received at St. George's.

The Cathedral was crowded to its utmost capacity, even though it was a week day. Many visitors had come for the occasion, among others Dr. Burke, Inspector of Catholic Schools. There were many visiting clergymen. The procession of the Sisters of Mercy, the two young postulants and the Children of Mary, were met at the door of the Cathedral by a procession of the Acolytes, the Clergy and the Bishop. The Postulants were dressed in white silk, with veils and wreaths of lily of the valley and accompanied by two little girls white robed and with flower wreathed hair, as maids of honor. They knelt within the Sanctuary and received Communion during Mass attended by the Rev. Mother and the Mother of Novices.

His Lordship Bishop Power addressed them and in touching and eloquent words pointed out the heroic sacrifices they were about to make in renouncing the world, its pleasures and its honours; in severing the ties of kindred, parting from father and mother, from sisters and brothers, in sacrificing, as it were, their own identity, surrendering the very names by which they had been known and loved. What could the materialistic, self-seeking world think of this? How explain this miracle of self-sacrifice?

The preacher then spoke of the reward which was assured them and quoted some of the glowing and inspired passages of Scripture, so filled with poetry and imagery that it needed not the vision of the Seer of Patmos to glimpse the white robed band, undefiled of the world who ever sing: "Honor and praise and glory to Him who sitteth at the right hand of the Most High, Hosanna in the highest."

The Postulants proceeded to the Convent where they were dressed in the garb of the Mercy Order and receiving from the Bishop, at the High Altar, the white veil of the novice.

Several of our separated brethren attended and followed with breathless interest the simple yet striking and impressive course of the beautiful ceremony, and those among the great congregation "who think in their hearts" were more convinced than ever, that the things worth striving most strenuously for are not the things of this world, Miss Gillis and Miss Byrne—Sisters M. Michael and M. Joseph had chosen the better part. A. J. O'R.

Post Marks.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Sir—Legible or illegible Post-marks? This is the question I wish to put before the Inspector of Post Offices in Newfoundland regarding the way in which many letters that come to this country are Post marked. They certainly are far from system.

The General Post Office of St. John's, the railway office and a few important offices are indeed almost the only offices which exhibit the town, date, hour and year on the envelopes in a legible manner. In conversation with a Newfoundland, and as the "snobs" of St. John's say, a "Bayman," too, the other day told me he just received two letters from home. How long are they coming? said I; we both scrutinized the envelopes and they were so indistinctly daubed we could not make out. To be plain and open in matters I must not let all the blame lie on the "baymen." I received a letter from St. John's a few days ago and I could not make out the name of the office it was mailed in. The main office stamp was all right. I have no wish to particularize names. I don't mean to provoke enmity and incur contempt of those luminaries; but I would advise the Superintendent to wake up some of those drones.

I think it my duty to indicate everything of importance that falls under my observation relative to the Old Colony.

Yours very truly,
JOHN B. CODY.
Somerville, Mass., U.S., July 2, 1914.

A great saving in laundry work can be achieved by using paper napkins on all, except the most important occasions.

The Banana.

By GEORGE FITCH,

Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

The banana is a soft, delicious fruit about the size of a policeman's belly. It comes in bunches like trouble and has made it possible for the Italian race to prosper in America. Bananas can now be purchased in this country wherever the nickel can be found. But forty years ago, they were a great rarity and people gathered together around a banana for the privilege of peeling it and taking adventurous bites. It grows in the tropics and consists of a large plant with extensive leaves and a stalk in the middle which produces, when kindly treated, a bunch of bananas each year and sometimes throws in a tarantula or a small snake for good measure.

The banana is picked when green, but when kept long enough becomes tender and melting. It is almost as nutritious as beef, and in Africa has formed both dinner and dessert for millions of people ever since Africa was founded by Nature.

In this country, the banana is still rated as a delicacy and is principally used by travellers to stave off starvation on way trains, and by small boys to combine pleasure and excitement. With five cents' worth of bananas a small boy can eat himself into a warped and distended state and can also carpet a large section of sidewalk with the discarded skins. Stepping on a banana skin is one of the most disconcerting things that can happen in this country. Nothing can floor a man so quickly except possibly a letter which he once wrote to a trusted friend before he thought of running for office.

Americans now own millions of acres of banana plantations in Central America and large fleets of steamers are employed to bring the crop to this country. The banana can also be dried and ground into flour. Some day all the jungle between Mexico City and the Isthmus of Panama will be transformed into banana plantations and the Italian peasant who now cuts black bread for seventy years and then dies with a sigh of relief, will be able to enjoy bananas without emigrating to this country and selling them for a living.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office, its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error, the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modern and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. Mr. Percie Johnson represents this world known firm in Newfoundland. ap17.3

Household Notes

Dried rose leaves make a delightful pillow.

Always salt meat after cooking, not before.

Corn should not be put up in glass jars, as the light darkens it.

To remove stains from the hands nothing is better than lemon juice. Use a funnel in filling a hot-water bottle if you would save the rubber.

A few drops of ammonia in the hot dishwater will brighten glass and silver.

The best way to mend linen is to stretch it smoothly over an embroidery frame.

Two or three slices of lemon in a cup of hot tea is said to be a cure for sic headache.

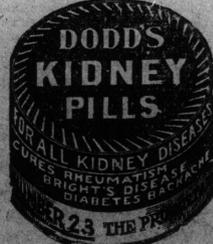

If you spill ink on the carpet, put salt on it instantly. It will help remove the spot.

Lemon peel should always be pared very thinly; the white part under it is bitter.

If you want to be sure of finding your garden tools easily, paint the handles bright red.

If you wish to place a dish directly on the ice, put a rubber ring under it to keep it from slipping.

Wrap cheese in a cloth moistened with vinegar, if you would keep it moist and free from mould.

Obituary.

When death comes, some family time and again must necessarily answer the roll call and suffer an irreparable loss. This fact was emphasized on the first instant, when Alonzo, the only surviving son of Michael Vasseur, Esq., J.P., was called to the Great Beyond fortified with the rites of Holy Church. The great white plague which has already played such havoc in this family—literally wiping them out, so to speak, has also claimed poor Alonzo for its victim. Ever since the New Year the health of the deceased was noticed to decline and give way, and death, sooner or later, was not unexpected, yet considering the short time he was stricken with the disease and the apparent hope manifested on all sides for his recovery, the end was comparatively sudden. Although never possessed of a very robust constitution he enjoyed fairly good health, and the termination of his life at this stage was never for a moment contemplated, but having contracted a severe cold last autumn, consumption soon developed itself, and despite the efforts of the best medical skill and treatment, both from home and abroad, to combat the disease the patient was forced to give way to its ravages, and like a good soldier of Christ most resignedly gave up the world in submission to the will of God. The deceased, in a word, bore an excellent character, and was in every respect a model young man, he was never known to utter an unkind word towards anyone, and his meekness and submission to the ways of the world, no matter how perplexing at times, were always proverbial. The writer, who was his life long friend and companion, can testify to his sublime modesty and manly character. His life and death furnishes us with a beautiful example of how to live and how to be prepared to die. That he was one of the few exceptions of young men whose moral and religious fervour always excelled there is no doubt. It can be truly said he led a most exemplary life, and his death was no less holy and edifying. He was in his 26th year, and leaves a wife, father and three sisters to mourn the loss of a dutiful son and faithful husband and brother. May he rest in peace.—Com. St. Lawrence, July 2nd, 1914.

Mary Still in the Flesh.

SENDS KIND REGARDS TO ALL HER OLD FRIENDS.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir:—"Old shoes may rot, but old love can never be forgot," and I do love the Telegram. It is the only newsy paper I can get, and when the boy fails to come I have to send Tom down and get it, and oh, I am so disappointed when mostly on Mondays he tells me they are "all gone."

As it is so long ago since I sent a word to the paper, I must ask you to tell my friends that I am still in the flesh, and so is Tom, and he is better this year than he has been for many years. I went down town a few nights ago, and I visited several of my old friends and had a most enjoyable time. It was after 10 o'clock when I left the last friend I visited, and then I had to almost tear myself away, so pleased were they to see me. But my socks, didn't I laugh on my way home. As I was passing up Water St., a young man came out of a house at a quick pace, and the lady who let him out closed the door rather hurriedly, in fact too hurried for the gentleman visitor, as she caught his coat tail in the door, and the poor fellow was held fast like a rat in a trap. Well, sir, I stopped and watched, and laughed till I almost cried to see the poor man tugging away at his coat tail, but at last he had to knock and appeal to the lady to "please allow him his freedom."

Uncle Staff was down from Bay Roberts for a week or so lately doing some necessary repairs to the building that contains the Beacon Light. It is a pity that some of our carpenters could not be found competent for the work, and thus save poor old "Uncle Staff" the trouble of leaving his home for so long. What's the matter with our carpenters, anyway, are they all on the wrong side?

I have been very much amused this spring watching the hobbie skirts and the other new fashions. But the hats with the mainmast in them appealed most to my curiosity. Tom says they are jury masts, but they remind me mostly of fifty or sixty years ago, as at that time when a man had a boat or schooner to sell, he always put a broom to the masthead. Everybody would then know the vessel was for sale. A few Sundays ago we had a very high wind, and Tom, who cut his eye teeth on the water, sat by the window all the afternoon, watching the fair ones as they passed along, each, as he said with a jury mast up.

Well, my laws, but some of the greatest former supporters of the Government are now very quiet on politics. Tom told me yesterday of one poor man who was forced to give up his cherished smoke on account of the high price of "bacey." He says he feels as cheap as five cents when he gets in company, especially as he says the shop-keepers are making more money on the "weed" now than formerly. He thinks the extra duty should have been put on cigars and other things consumed only by the "upper ten."

I think that this scribble is quite long enough.
For Tom is now in and his order is "put."
The clock has struck ten—our bedtime you know.
So the rest of this letter I'll have to forego.

But I'll write you again at no distant date.
I have more to tell now, but tis really too late.
And with kind regards to my friends, one and all.
They can have their fine "style," but I'll have me shawl!
Yours sincerely,
MARY.

That Bell Isld. Affair.

The latest theory offered respecting the mysterious death of the young man Fitzgerald at Bell Island, is that he was struck a violent blow with a sort of metal instrument in the back of the head. Beyond that there are really no details to hand. Last evening Inspector General Sullivan left the city for Bell Island to conduct an exhaustive enquiry into the tragedy.

Although the Bank of France has not made any official announcement, it is reported on the Bourse that the public had applied for more than forty times the amount of the issue made yesterday of $161,000,000 of new Government three and a half per cent. loan. If this should prove true, applications have amounted to more than the entire National debt of France.

LONDON, To-day.
The Belfast correspondent of the Times states that at several places during the last few days, there have been panics, owing to reports that one side is preparing to attack the other. The most sinister and most persistent of all is the statement that Belfast Nationalists or a section of them have stored up a vast quantity of vitriol which they intend to fling at the Unionists. The rumor further says that Ulster Volunteers have provided themselves with vaseline to smear their hands and faces against against such an attack. The Times correspondent rebuked Steele Maitland, M.P., Director of the Unionist Association, for his declaration that there would be no civil war, as the Nationalist papers naturally used this to prove Ulster was still bluffing. The Times correspondent adds the men have rifles and are asking when they will use them. The thread cannot be stretched more taugly as breaking is near.

LONDON, To-day.
The committee stage of the Home Rule Bill will be taken to-day in Lords. The Peers will press amendments relating especially to the total exclusion of Ulster limitation of the Irish parliament's power over finance, the reservation to Imperial Parliament of certain Irish services and control of appointments. Earl Halsbury will offer an amendment reserving to the Imperial Parliament the appointment of High Court and County Court Judges and also for appeals to the Lords instead of to the Privy Council. Lord McDonnell has a whole series of amendments which would virtually reconstruct the Bill the effect of which would be Home Rule within Home Rule. Earl Dunraven will move a new clause to suspend the Operation of the Act until a commission has reported on a federal scheme. Other amendments aim at protecting the minority in regard to taxation. It is now generally accepted even in Ministerial circles that owing to Redmond's unswerving attitude, the Government cannot possibly consent to the exclusion of the entire province. The concessions will probably apply to four Ulster counties with the Protestant sections of Tyrone and Fermanagh, but Carson will probably refuse to submit to such a scheme to the Ulster convention.

St. John's Gas Light Company.
Dear Sir,—I have analyzed a sample of Sulphate of Ammonia made at your Works and I found 20.5 per cent of NITROGEN, Sulphates of Ammonia and Nitrate of Soda are the two principal Nitrogen manure.
Sulphate of Ammonia is less soluble than Nitrate of Soda, consequently it is a safer manure to use during a wet season.
Yours truly,

LOBSTER FISHERY.
There arrived by the S. S. Portia a shipment of lobsters which came from Bonne Bay. We learn that whilst the lobster fishery all over the Island this year may be considered a failure yet the fishery between Bonne Bay and Fort Saunders is good and the catch is ahead of last season.

TO BE OPERATED ON.—Last evening a man named Wm. Earles entered the General Hospital to be operated on.

Workman Injured.

While working at Morey & Co's South Side premises yesterday afternoon Michael Connors, a labourer, residing on Mundy Pond Road, met with an accident that will incapacitate him for some weeks.

He was assisting to discharge the salt cargo of the S. S. Ness, and a tub of salt that was being hoisted from the hold of the ship struck him in the ankle severing an artery.

The injured man was taken to O'Mara's Drug Store where temporary bandages were applied, pending the arrival of Dr. Burden who had been summoned by telephone. Upon arrival the doctor was obliged to insert four stitches to close the wound, after which Connors was driven to his home on Mundy Pond Road.

The unfortunate man is the father of the young lad who met such a tragic death less than two weeks ago, and general sympathy is felt for Mrs. Connors over the occurrence which will incapacitate her husband for sometime.

To-Night's Match.

The Stars and Feildians will be the players in to-night's football game, and the line-up is as follows:

FEILDIAN—Lush, goal; F. Rendell, Strang, backs; Strong, Tait, Ryall, halves; Winter, C. Rendell, Pinesent, E. Rendell, Trebble, forwards.

Collegians Victors.

A large concourse of spectators witnessed last evening's football match on St. George's Field between the C.E.I. and Collegians, and which resulted in the latter coming off the victors by three goals to nil. The personnel of the teams were:

C.E.I.—Marshall, goal; Hussey, L. Stick, backs; Drover, Fox, R. Stick, halves; M. Churchill, Hartley, Hunt, Auckinleck, E. Churchill, forwards.

COLLEGIANS.—Quick, goal; Ayre, Barrett, backs; E. Barnes, H. Barnes, Pike, halves; Smallwood, Fenwick, Noonan, Hutchings, Maddock, forwards.

THE GAME.

At the opening play was fast and furious, both teams being equally aggressive. The Collegian forward line made a splendid dash. Smallwood and Fenwick combined well. The latter sent the leather to the C.E.I. goalkeeper who barely saved. After that the Institute boys increased the pace and put it all over their opponents. Several good but ineffective runs were made. For fully ten minutes play was confined to College territory, the Institute straining every nerve to score, but failed. Quick was called upon to save many shots which he did. Twice within close range the ball was sent like a flash by C.E.I. players, but each time it struck the

At the City Hall.

Yesterday afternoon an informal meeting of the Civic Commission was held at the City Hall. The Chairman, Mr. Gosling, presided, and the following members of the Commission were present:—Messrs. C. P. Ayre, E. M. Jackman, J. W. Withers, F. McNamara, I. C. Morris and Hon. John Anderson.

SECOND HALF.

The Collegians were in better form during this period and the result of their work was a great surprise. Noonan, the College centre, sent a grounder to Marshall, who failed to save as the ball passed between his legs and the first goal was recorded for the Collegians. Immediately after the C.E.I. had the best of play and made an onslaught on their opponents. Churchill had a try but Quick was on the spot and sent the ball clear of danger. Play then became a bit rough. Individual play and skying the ball became noticeable, while combination was conspicuous by its absence. Through a scrimmage near the Institute goal, Hutchings landed No. 2 for his team; ere the close Maddock headed in the third.

It has been reported to the police by South Side people that a foreign seaman who is supposed to have deserted, is daily roaming that neighbourhood and that they do not like his movements. He is now being sought by two police officers.

Divorced Life
By Helen Hessing Fuesler

A Struggle With a Microbe

Vague recollections of how fortunes had been made with simple little mail order projects flitted through Marian's mind, and she agreed to go to work for Henry Ignatz. She took on her hat and coat and her employer began initiating her into the manner of wrapping bottles of liniment with printed circulars, next with an outer wrapper, then tying, addressing and stamping the little packets. Before the end of the afternoon she had developed skill at the task. It was monotonous labor, especially for a "private secretary," but Marian thought it would tide her over for a few weeks until she could find a more desirable position. As she worked Ignatz thumped the typewriter machine, and prated about the wealth he expected to make with the venture.

"By jinks," he said once, "it looks like you are going to be a big help to me. You're all right, little girl."

"Do you think I'll do," she answered coldly, half amused and half angered at his patronizing attitude.

"You bet. You're taking right hold. You can cut out work for to-day. Show up at about 8 in the morning. Don't worry about your salary. I'll make that right."

"How much will it be?" pressed Marian. All of a sudden she felt sickened by the thought that she had come to the point of actually working for a fellow like this.

"Well, suppose we say twelve a week to start with. That's good money for a beginner," he added with a smirk. "How does it listen to you?"

A year ago her husband's salary of $2,000 a year denoted "poor white trash" to Marian. To-day, in the light of her harsh experiences, $12 a week was eagerly to be seized, at least for a temporary expedient.

"It will be all right," she acquiesced.

As she turned to put on her hat and coat, her employer glided toward her and undertook to put his arm around her.

"What do you mean?" she demanded sharply, turning upon him.

"Ain't you goin' to kiss me good-night?" he said, coming closer.

"I should say not," she laughed harshly. "You're taking entirely too much for granted."

"What do you think I'm paying you good money for?"

Give me the money I've earned this afternoon, and I'll clear out of this junkshop. Half a day's work at twelve dollars a week makes you owe me one dollar. Let me have it immediately. I'm in a hurry."

With only protestations, Ignatz finally produced a crumpled dollar bill which Marian accepted and then departed. Hating herself for the day's sickening experience, she descended the dismal stairway and entered the street. With a heart full of bitterness and defeat, she wished she had never come to New York.

To-morrow—A Rainy Day.

The One Theme.

You talk of Pope and Byron, of Milton, Keats and Scott, and I admit I'm tired of all that kind of rot; you say the world is richer since Shakespeare sung his lays; to Jones, our southpaw pitcher you give no word of praise. Through innuendo after innuendo he pitched a hitless game, and yet you come here grinning to talk of Wordsworth's fame. You speak of Alexander, and say he was a brick, that storied old commander who sighed for worlds to lick; I fear there's nothing in it, this clawing o'er his bones, and at the present minute my thoughts are all of Jones. Your musty ancient heroes were doubtless wearing bells, your Hannibals and Neros, your dauntless William Tells, but they are dead and planted, long since they met their fate, and I am now enchanted with Jones, whose curves are great. Of statesmen and of thinkers you come to spout a while, and they are surely thinkers when tommyrot's in style, but statesmanship is musty, and thinkers are a bore, when Jones, the true and trusty, is making batsmen sore. Forget the printed pages, the wreaths and balls of fame, forget the berds and sages, and come and see the game!

Civic Commission.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—I see by reading the daily papers that many of our citizens are greatly disappointed in seeing that Mr. Ellis has not been chosen as Chairman of the Citizens' Committee, and says that he should have been appointed to that position owing to his experience in civic matters which in itself should qualify him for that office, and he, Mr. Ellis, resigns from the Committee because he was not so honoured, saying that he was promised the appointment through Sir Edward Morris. Anyway, what had he to do with it? Is it because Sir Edward is running this unfortunate country that he should run the affairs of the city as well? He, to my mind, knows very little about either of them and especially so far as his financial calculations are concerned. His estimation of himself is similar to that I had witnessed on one of our mercantile premises some years ago when a package of goods was being shipped by one of the steamers which was loading there. One of the employees asked who the package belonged to, when his co-worker said in reply: "Reid," who made Newfoundland; and so I think Sir Edward believes in his mind he owns it if Mr. Reid made it, or turn the tables and say Mr. Morris owns it and Mr. Reid owns it.

I think that Mr. Ellis, with all due respect to him, played a very small, childish part in the course he has taken. While I will confess he is one of our most upright citizens, he should have taken a broader view in the matter. His action goes to show that it was not the interest of the city he had at heart after all but his own personal aggrandisement.

Now we come to the matter of practical experience, which I say in many cases doesn't count. I will now cite a case in connection with the Proprietor of the paper which you have the honour of being its Editor, and it is just this. When Mr. Herder made the move to start a daily paper in this city he was just a young man, but imbued with new ideas as to the possibility of making a daily paper a success. He was confronted with the options of the old-time printers of that day who had all the way from thirty-five to forty years experience. They plainly told him he would never make a success of it. What do we see to-day. He not only made it a success but it has been instrumental in educating this Colony into newspaperism, and has seen the death of nineteen other daily papers who started with men of far greater experience than Mr. Herder. The success greatly depends on the system of management, and the same will apply to our Citizens' Committee, or at least we are hoping for it.

Allow me to quote another instance of practical experience, and I could quote many. I happened to be in a shop owned by one of our smartest mechanics who had a poor simpleton employed around the shop to keep him from starving. As I was present the mechanic was perplexed and greatly troubled as to how he was going to repair a piece of machinery which had been sent to him to put in order; he had puzzled his brain over it for hours. Suddenly the poor unfortunate said to him: "Look here, boss, if I were in your place I wouldn't do it in that way." The boss looked at him with scorn and said: "Go away, you, what do you know anyway, tell me," and he did. The result was the idea was a good one and the job was completed in less than an hour. So much for practical experience. It is like the old saying: "What man has done man may do," or, again, "There is just as good a fish in the sea as ever yet were caught," and the same will apply to the Citizens' Committee and the old Councillors.

You, sir, contend that the Committee made a bad start in not choosing Mr. Ellis as their Chairman. How do you know that before you have given them a trial? Put new blood, as it were, in a new concern and it very often infuses new life, making the venture a paying one, and I believe that is just what the said Committee are going to do. The controversies going through the press the past week appear to be very small and narrow minded and shows very forcibly the small, narrow souled spirit that is within most of us. Why don't we have broader views and instead of throwing dirty water on the gentlemen who have allowed themselves to be placed on the Committee and giving up their own precious time to try and serve the interest of the city without any compensation only the welfare of our city? Before they have time to get themselves together and start in to do something, certain persons butt in and do all in their power to drown them in their work without offering them a word of encouragement. Shame on such people. It is time enough to bearnear them with mud when we find they have neglected the duties they have taken upon themselves to perform. I say away with such small, narrow-mindedness and give the Committee a chance and encourage them for all we are worth.

Before closing I would just say to Mr. Goaling, be firm, sir, and heed not the murmuring of some pettifoggers, and above all don't get cold feet as Mr. Ellis has done. As for poor Mullaly, well, we will let him rest, he mightly wants somebody to coax him.

Thanking you for trespassing so much on your valuable space.
I remain,
Yours sincerely,
A CITIZEN.

Cactus Cravath.

The fairies tell some yarn about a turtle puttin' on a bout o' race with a hare. The r a b b i t sprung a burst o' speed, then stopped when it had copped a lead an' slept without a care. The turtle, as the story goes, just kept on followin' his nose—it didn't hesitate. An' that slow-goin', steady bloke had crossed the line when Bunny woke. Some yarn, that, I believe me, mate.

It's just like Old Three Hundred's tale. His pace was like a winded snail in comin' from the bush. He showed the coast league fans his worth but when he sought a big league berth he somehow lacked the push. The A. A. circuit went clear daff about his drives. But in the draft Cravath was overlooked. Cravath was nearly 20 when his name went in for draft again an' finally he booked.

Right off the bat he banded the pill all 'round the Phillies' lot until they hailed his Home Run King. He can't lay out an infield throw, so all his wallows have to go clear past the inner ring. Eleven times in every year he's banded that little horseshoe sphere an' gone the whole way 'round. The way he massacres the ball he doesn't have to worry 'bout coverin' out field ground.

Foreign Decorations Officially Gazetted.

Ottawa, Ont., June 29.—The wearing of foreign decorations at functions in Canada is dealt with in a measure by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught and officially gazetted. It provides that no British subject is to wear the insignia of any foreign order without having previously obtained His Majesty's permission. Private permission, obtainable through official channels will enable decoration to be worn only on occasions specified in the terms of the communication granting it, while full and unrestricted permission is designed to meet cases where the decoration was earned by valuable public service. Medals for saving of life may be accepted from a foreign state without specific permission and may be worn at state functions.

Financial Loss Caused by Suffragettes

AMOUNT TO TEN MILLION.

The course of the debate on the question of militant suffragettes in the house of commons makes it clear that the Government are reluctant to take extreme measures with the wild women. It is difficult to say how far their policy is actuated by purely humane consideration. In spite of the excesses of the militants, chivalry is not yet dead, though it is only just alive. But it may reasonably be asked whether the time for humanity is not passed. The public generally, however, are at last thoroughly exasperated and there is every reason for fearing they will begin to take the law into their own hands.

The suggestions of the Home Secretary that a policy of silence on the part of the press would prove of advantage is impracticable. Where reckless criminals are concerned such a denial of advertisement would be calculated to lead them to aggravate the scale and character of their crimes until silence became impossible.

Public opinion, too, is concerned rather with the necessity of maintaining law and order than with the justice of exacting retribution for crimes already committed. The prevailing sentiment is that there have been enough of burnings and explosions and their recurrence must be made impossible. If there is nothing left to appeal to but the fears of the women, then recourse must be had to fear.

The "Cat and Mouse Act" must not be held to have been a total failure. The figures given by the Home Secretary show that if the outrages have increased in seriousness, their number has not grown, and it is probable that the majority of them are the work of a very limited number of individuals. Mr. McKenna puts it as low as thirty.

In Parliament itself there was a general tendency to criticize every form of tenderness manifested to destroyers of property. There was one aspect of the working of the "Cat and Mouse Act" that failed to find any reflection in the debate. The expense involved in keeping an adequate watch on the women out on license who invariably fail to surrender themselves upon the expiry of their licenses, is relatively enormous. It is estimated that this expenditure, together with the damage done to property in the last three years by the militant women has involved the community in a financial loss of over $10,000,000.

Harbor Grace Notes.

A large number of passengers came over to the Bay on Saturday night to spend the week-end and Labor Day with their friends in the bay.

Yesterday's heavy downpour of rain kept many of our people indoors. The rain poured down in torrents until about 10 p.m. when it cleared. Today is very fine and clear, a day that the farmers are all pleased to see.

Miss Geraldine Fitzgerald, who has attended Victoria Street school here for some time, is leaving by this afternoon's train for her home in St. John's, and will shortly go from there to Grand Bank where she will spend the holidays.

Trappers had a very good sign of fish this morning. They are hopeful now of a "spurt."

When the s.s. Invermore was coming in on Saturday evening, she crashed into the wharf of Messrs. Munn & Co. and considerable damage was done.

A Pathetic Case

Of Rare Occurrence.

Last night a woman and her three children, the eldest of which is but six years old, were taken to the police station for shelter, having been deprived of their home on George Street owing to failure to pay the rent.

The case is a particularly pathetic one, and one that has evoked much sympathy from those who are acquainted with the circumstances.

Nearly a year ago the woman's husband, whose name is Curran, sailed for Bahia as seaman on the brigantine Clementine. He was taken ill during the voyage south, and upon arrival at Bahia was sent to hospital. The vessel sailed before he had fully recovered, and on being discharged from the institution about a month later, he joined a Norwegian steamer, Morger-Or bound to Rotterdam, hoping to work his way back to Newfoundland. He wrote a letter to his wife informing her of his recovery and expressed the hope to return home soon. This is the last news she has heard of him.

She became anxious about him in March last and accordingly wrote the Secretary of the Seamen's Institute in Liverpool, asking for information of the steamer on which her husband had sailed, and received a reply saying that the steamer was then seven months at sea without being heard from. It was then presumed that the ship had been lost with all hands.

Since then the poor woman has had a hard struggle to provide maintenance for her little ones, but her earnings were scant, and insufficient to meet the rent with the result mentioned above. The case is of rare occurrence in this community, and only needs to be brought to the notice of the authorities to have proper provision made for this deserving case.

Do Your Looks Quite Satisfy You?

If Your Color is Bad, If You Suffer From Pimples, Here is Good Advice.

Fine Results in Two Weeks.

Miss Nettie E. Callaghan, a well-known young lady in Middleton, writes as follows: "I was affected for two years with a rash, and ugly looking pimples that spread over my face. My color was poor, and my blood evidently completely out of order. Certainly it was a most despairing sort of a case, because various treatments did but little to help me. A friend of mine in Toronto, Ont., advised me to get Dr. Hamilton's Pills, so I sent at once for five boxes. In two weeks I felt like new—looks improved, spirits rose, and I felt I was getting well. I have used this remedy for a long time, and now wouldn't be without it."

If you are in ailing health, have blood disorders, stomach trouble, or headaches, Dr. Hamilton's Pills will help you quickly. All druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butterfat. 25c. per box, five for $1.00. Sent postpaid by the Catarthozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Seneca Arrives for Supplies

The U.S. patrol ship Seneca, arrived in port yesterday afternoon for coal and supplies. The Seneca has been doing service in the track of the ocean liners on the Grand Banks, warning the ships of icebergs and other impediments to navigation. After coaling here she will proceed to the coast of Greenland where a study of ice conditions and tidal currents will be made. Much work of this nature will also be done along the Labrador coast. The ship will sail again this afternoon.

Save $15.00 on a
Filing Cabinet.

We can give you an OLIVE finish, FOUR DRAWER, LETTER SIZE COLD ROLLED STEEL FILING CABINET, with a filing capacity of 20,000 letters, for $35.00; and this we believe is $15.00 cheaper than the regular market price.

Standardization enables them to be made in large quantities at lowest cost, and that is why we can sell at $35.00 what other manufacturers ask $50.00 for.

Come in and see it, we are using one ourselves.

For two years we have been in communication with Manufacturers of Filing Cabinets in America, Canada, England and Germany, and at last we have found what we believe to be the best and the lowest priced Cabinet made. You will believe it too after you have seen it.
