SPONTANEOUS receptions and celebra tions are generally more enjoyable than those long planned and to which deep thought has been given. This proved to be the case on Tuesday night when about 150 of our citizens turned out to wish two have a set of the set were then commencing. The time was close to the limit allowed for social func-tions of this nature. While the cere-mony was going on at the parsonage, a reception was gotten under way. A little delay was experienced through the bash-fulness or nervousness of the newly wed-ded pair, but this is quite usual at affairs of this kind. However being assured by the clergyman that all was well, they emerged from the house, and a proces-sion was formed headed by a band com-posed of talented solo players, and to the melodious strains of "The Gang's All Here" proceeded to the home of the bride. There some little difference arose through the doorkeeper failing to honor some of the invitations and he was promptly ejected by a county constable. After refreshments, speech and song was the order of the night. The groom re-plying to the toast of the bride thanked those assembled for their presence and interset in bing and his bride. Ho was those assembled for their presence and interest in him and his bride. He was not much of a speech maker, he said, but wished to express his pleasure at the re-ception and also to thank the band for the "excellent music" rendered. Other speakers followed, some advising caution speakers followed, some advising caution and calmess in their mirth, while the theme of others was, "Keep the ball roll-ing; let joy be unrestrained." Everyone seemed to enjoy the evening, and after a reasonable time the guests departed so as to allow the happy couple to seek their downy couch and dream of unalloyed bliss during their married life. May their dreams come true

Let It Be The Best

We wish to call the attention of every resident of Warwick, Brooke, Plympton, Bosanquet and Watford to the supreme importance of making the annual exhi-bition of the East Lambton Agricultural Society the best ever witnessed here. There is not a man in the district who is not able to produce something of nature's growth or his own manufacture that will stand well in competition with that grown or manufactured by others. There grown or manuactured by others. There is not a lady who is interested in the fair but can supply some article of needle-work, some fancy collar or handkerchief, or linen or embroidery that will be ac-cepted as superior in some respects to some other article exhibited, and thus assist in making the show more attract-ive. Every farmer stock reiser hortiassist in making the show more attract-ive. Every farmer, stock raiser, horti-culturist and market gardenershould add to the list of attractions. Last year we had 1800 entries. This year we should have 2500. Nature has been very prodi-gal in her gifts. With few exceptions the crops were never better, and it will be our own fault if we are second to any other county fair in Ontario. Let every man do his duty and the fair of 1913 will man do his duty and the fair of 1913 will go down in history as the best county fair held in Ontario.

THE Brandon News says there are men walking the streets there who will loaf rather than accept $2.50 a day in the harvest fields, with board included. Last year men were scarce, and they could force $3.50 and $4 a day for their services. This year there are plenty of out-of-work and the law of supply and demand is op-erating in the farmers' favor. There seems to be no standard wage for harvest-ers, the idea of the men being to get all they can and of the farmers to part with no more than is absolutely necessary.

Last month there was held the centenary of the battle of Chrysler's farm, one of the most decisive engagements of the war of 1812 when a handful of Canadian militia reinforced a small body of regular troops and inflicted a severe defeat upon an overwhelming force of American invaders. The scene of the battle has ever since been one of the historic points in Canada.

The event was celebrated with due eelat, some of the country's leaders in civil and military life taking part in a reunion, within sight of the border which the invaders crossed. Over on the other side it is different. The Americans have never acknowledged the existence of such a place as the famous farm and in their school or general histories, works noted for their deliberate oversights and one-sided statement of facts, no account appears of this disaster to American arms. There is no grave acknowledgment of a defeat by a gallant foe.

There is now in the United States an agitation in progress to revise the histories of that country especially for use in schools, so that the rising generation may no longer be kept in ignorance by the omission of important incidents or prejudiced against outside nations by partisan treatment of those that are recorded. When this is done the American record of the war of a century ago is due for a thorough revision by the historian. The battle, the cen-tenary of which Canada has just celebrated, will after the lapse of a century, be given a place in American annuls.

A Word on Departmental Exams.

A Barrie paper laments that scholars persist in writing on departmental examinations in spite of the advice of the Principal that they have little or no chance of passing, thus wasting money, causing disappointment to their parents, and "injuring the good name of the Institute." We suspect that the last reason is the one that inspired the protest, and that comes directly or indirectly from the staff. It raises a question in school ethics inorth later. It was a young clerk was handed Jock MacF. his weepurse, with the "spondies" as he set foot out of the 'train, and certain wild hopes were making that young man's heart beat a trifle unevenly. But our canny Scot counted his money unheeding, and when he had finished he looked up long and suspiciously at the young man. "I-isn't it right, sir ?" stammered the latter, in bewilderment. "Richt-richt! It's richt enough; but where's the interest, mon ?" was MacFaddy's stern refort. on which it is well that there should be a clearer understanding. Fundamentally, it is the question of whether the schools exist for the pupils, or for the teachers. The prospect of an examination is a spur to the student, whether he expects to pass it or not. Undoubtedly also to write on the examination at the close of the term is in itself a good exercise, and it is an aid even to the one who fails. If a pupil who for any reason is not up to the standard required for passing wishes to profit by these advantages and is willing to pay the price, is there any reason why he should be deprived of the opportunity? Even if it is only a matter of "taking a chance," why should he not be allowed to do so? It may be that on that "chance" will depend whether or not he can pursue his studies to their conclusion. When the Principal has advised the pupil as to the likelihood of his passing he has done his ducy. The final decision should be left with the pupil and his parents. The article in ques-tion says "the Principal has no authority to prevent students from writing." It would be a great mistake if he had such authority. Our Public and High Schools are not competitive institutions, depending on their reputation to attract pupils. The interests of the pupils should in all cases be paramount over the natural desire of the teachers to make a good record in the examinations. The only legitimate objection to hav ing pupils who are not recommended write, might be raised by the Department, if it was found that the labour and expense of the examinations were being seriously increased by the practice of writing on a chance or for experience. But the fee exacted, and the unwillingness of the majority to labour seriously without good prospect of success, are probably sufficient deterents to prevent serious difficulty on this score. The point is that teachers should not attempt to exert pressure to prevent pupils from writing for the sake of improthey have been held it does not blow a bugle to command attention and then announce to all the world the deductions that it has arrived at. Its study is for its own information and not for that of its enemies. Oc-casionally, however, it has to act quickly on its lesson and then the public discovers what has been learned in a very emphatic way. A year ago the lesson was the danger and consequently the value of the sub-marine. This year the lesson has been of a very opposite nature. The submarine has been met by a ship of the air that has robbed it of half its terrors by making it impossible for it to keep its approach to the enemy concealed. For the purposes of the manoeuvres the British navy was divided into two equal fleets, the "Red" and the "Blue." The "Red" fleet was to put to sea and then to try to attack Great Britain for the purpose of landing an invading force without encountering the "Blue" fleet in such numbers as to make the attack a failure. This it succeeded in doing at two ports. It is general ly understood to be a result of this proved inadequacy of scouting power in the fleet and the success of the sea planes as observers that the Admiralty has announced its intention of building sheltering sea-plane stations every one hundred and fifty or two hundred miles along the coast and of constructing an aerial navy as great as any other in the world. Over the water and under the water goes the modern navy and the great sea monsters, the battleships, are daily becoming less the impregnable indomitable feature of the navy that they have been esteemed. What the end is to be no one can say, but the present bopeful aspect of the case is that the sea-plane as an adjunct to the navy will be a greater aid to the defence than to the attack.

To the extent that it is so it will be a deterrent to the waging of war.

White—Smith A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Levi Smith, English St., Strathroy, on Tuesday, September 2nd, at 2.30 p.m., when their second daughter Gertrude Freida, became the bride of Hughie White, of Barrie. The cere-mony was performed by the Rev. G. N. Hazen, of London. To the strains of Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus, sweetly rendered by Lefa Smith, sister of the bride, the bridal party took their place in the drawing room, which was prettily decorated for the occasion, with cut flowers and ferns. The bride looked charming in a travelling suit of royal cavendish velvet and lace waist trimmed with lace and sequin. After the cere-mony and usual congratulations, the party took their place in the dining-room, where a dainty dinner was served. The bride and groom were the recipients of numerous gifts showing the high esteem in which the young couple are held. Edward Currie's fine new bank barn on the Longwoods road, Mosa, about a mile west of Strathburn, was struck by lightning on Thursday evening of last week and burned. A favorable wind en-abled the saving of Mr. Currie's house and his other barn a short distance away. Mr. Currie saw the fire break out, but had time only to save his horses and a buggy. The contents of the burned building, excepting these, were all de-stroyed. They included 24 loads of grain, 20 loads of hay, harness and weigh scales.

"The Valentine Supper at Kittrage Corners".

(By Carrie Craig)

GUIDE ADVOCATE, WATFORD, SEPTEMBER 12. 1913

It had always been the custom. Why, Mary Kittrage's grandfather tells of how, when he was a little lad, they held Val-entine Suppers at Bethel church,—not this one—but the old log church that the pioneers built when they first settled in that part of the country. Robert Kit-trage had been a grand old man, always pushing for good roads, welldrained land and freedom from noxious weeds. He wanted all men to live God fearing lives, and gave them example as well as pre-cept. It was in his honor that the vil-lage had been named. His son, Samuel, was more easy going—too much so for violent temper and he had never been taught to control it, so that in the end it finished him. One day when his father was away, John got mad at the colt and began to beat it most cruelly. He got a kick in the forehead that killed him in-tantly. It had always been the custom. Why, kick in the forehead that killed him in-startly. Shortly after this Samuel Kittrage was struck in the back by a falling rafter while assisting at a barn raising. The blow injured his spine, so that although he lived for five years he never walked again. The shock of the news gave his wife a paralytic stroke. Their daughter, Mary, was seventeen when this happened and for thirteen long years she cared faithfully for the bedridden couple. Thus at thirty the last of the Klitrages was a shy, sweet-faced little woman, with quiet, capable ways. The year of mourn-ing was over and the neighbors urged Mary to take part in the annual Valen-tine supper.

They were making extra preparations this year, and it promised to be even more attractive than usual. The show more attractive than usual. The show windows of Krutter's empty store---where the supper was to be held--were dressed up to resemble enormous valen-tines. And really, it was like a peep into fairyland. All who saw it agreed that it was almost too beautiful. But very few were permitted to see it until the night of the fourteenth. The empty store shelves were covered with cotton, on which was printed many a Valentine jungle, some tender, and some funny ones. One that caught the eye, where it stood out in black on white cotton, was jingle, some tender, and some funny ones. One that caught the eye, where it stood out in black on white cotton, was "Valentine, Valentine, over the river. When my pig dies I'll send you the liver." The walls were very tastefully decorated with evergreen boughs and festoons of colored paper roses. One counter had been taken out, to have more room for tables. A long table ran down the centre of the room well laden with good things, and under the glass show cases on the remaining counter gleamed an equally tempting array of pies, cakes and luscious canned fruit —for they always had a sale of home make cooking after supper was over. As the married ladies had first choice, they took up all the space under the glass case, so that the old maids and widows had to have their goods arranged on small tables along the opposite side of the store to the matrons. Said matrons graciously permitted the young ladies to

Assimilable Immigrants

[Buffalo Express.]

[Buffalo Express.] Canada is to be congratulated upon the character of its immigration in the last thirteen years. According to the figures just published by the Canadian Minister of the Interior, about 2,500,000 immigrants have reached the Dominion since July 1, 1900. Of these newcomers by far the greater number have been English-speaking people. The United States contributed a little more than 891,000 and the British Isles sent nearly 874,000. From countries where English is not spoken the immigration all told
