BLOCKADE OF ULSTER PLANNED BY THE GOV'T

Committee of Ulster Unionist
Council Makes Sensational Statement.

ARMY OF TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND AND SQUADRON

Report Claims There is Ample
Evidence that Government
Had Plans of Operations all Worked Out.

London, April 18.—Following Premier Asquith's refusal to grant a judicial enquiry into the recent proposed military subjugation of Ulster the full story of the extraordinary machinations has now come to light in the form of an official statement issued last night by the standing committee of the Ulster Unionist Council, which was approved on motion of the Marquis of Londonderry, seconded by Sir Edward Carson.

Among the salient points of the statement, which is of rather a lengthy character, are the following:

That there is ample evidence that the government had formed a plan of operations against Ulster, which plan included the seizure of bridges and strategic points along the line of the Boyne; that there was to be a blockade of Ulster by land and sea; that a situation was to be created in which volunteers would attack the police, whereupon troops would be brought into action, and that civil law was then to be suspended and martial law proclaimed.

The statement set forth in detail the preparations made by the commander-in-chief in Ireland, Sir A. Paget, at his residence, Col. Seely, for the coercion of Ulster, which preparations involved the employment of an army of 25,000 men, supported by a battle squadron.

According to the commander-in-chief's description of the proposed conduct of the first battle, with divisional generals, would remain on the line to control the firing on the enemy. When the troops had advanced under a flag of truce and demanded surrender, falling which he would enter a general assault on their position.

All these arrangements, besides others detailed by Sir Arthur Paget to the general would have been executed but for the option given of officers resigning, which was taken advantage of by General Gough and other officers resulting in the collapse of the plot. The publication of this statement has caused a tremendous sensation.

INJUNCTION AGAINST THE HAMMERSTEINS

Can't Produce Comic or Grand Opera in Boston and New York For Six Years, is Court's Ruling.

New York, April 17.—Oscar Hammerstein and his son Arthur are restrained from producing either comic or grand opera in Boston and New York until April 26, 1920, according to a decision of the appellate division of the supreme court today. The complaint against Hammerstein was filed by the Metropolitan Opera Company, and stated that Hammerstein agreed not to produce opera in Boston or New York for ten years, if the Metropolitan would purchase Hammerstein's Philadelphia Opera House for $1,200,000.

SAYS WILSON WILL HAVE TO INTERVENE

London Spectator Says Impossible to Dictate Moral Code to Independent Country and Omit Force Entirely.

London, April 17.—In an article dealing with the Mexican situation, the Spectator says: "It has come to this, that intervention, which has been delayed during a series of hideous murders and vast destruction of foreign property, is now being threatened in order to exact a mere formal obedience to the American flag. It would be impossible to imagine a more complete nemesis attending an idealistic and pacifist policy. This is the direct result of the extraordinary delusion, which has never been harbored by anyone but the pacifist, that you can dictate a moral code to an independent country and avowedly leave all thought of force out of the question."

The Spectator adds that though the crisis may be relieved by President Huerta saluting the American flag, it is convinced that President Wilson's policy inevitably will lead to intervention, which the sooner undertaken the better. "An even worse prospect," the Spectator says in conclusion, "would be that President Wilson should revert to his policy of watchful waiting, and that anarchy and murder and the annihilation of property should continue to be followed, perhaps, by the massacre of foreigners and that all the powers interested in Mexico should at last be reluctantly compelled to raise the most dangerous questions of the Monroe doctrine and the responsibilities and rights of the United States in Latin America."

ATTEMPT TO INTIMIDATE LEGISLATORS

Halifax, April 17.—Charges that the agitation against the bill to merge the Halifax Tramway and the Nova Scotia Power Company now before the legislature was organized, instigated and paid for by a rival group of financiers who wish to get possession of the Halifax Tram Company to develop another water power in which they are interested were made in the house of assembly this afternoon by several speakers.

The matter came up in discussion of an article in the Evening Mail asserting that any members who voted for this bill were "bought body and breeches." A committee was appointed to investigate this charge and report to the house as to the authority, but objection was taken by several speakers to the inquiry being restricted to this particular instance.

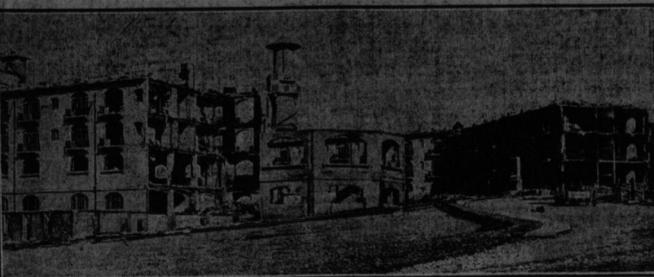

Mr. Douglas, Conservative whip, and Messrs. Ralston and Wickmore, Liberal members, related instances where attempts had been made to intimidate them into opposing the measure, and Premier Murray declared he believed papers which had been opposing the bill in Halifax had been paid for every article they printed, and recommended a committee to inquire into the allegations that a rival group of financiers inspired the agitation, allegations which he believed to be absolutely well founded.

THE DEBATE ON THE BUDGET

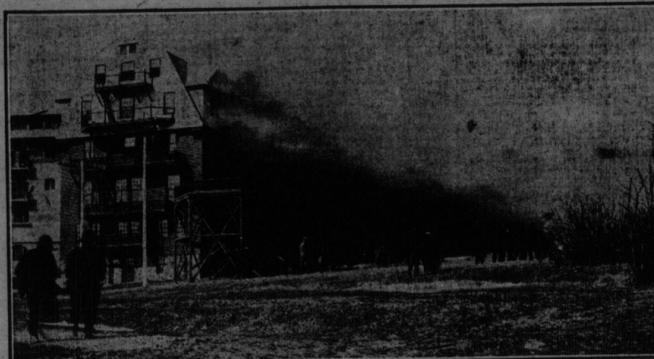

Ottawa, April 17.—The budget debate was continued today. J. A. Robb of Huntington opened the discussion dealing with the reciprocity question. J. A. M. Alkema of Brandon said wheat farmers of prairie provinces were contending they are at a disadvantage compared with western states' wheat growers. He charged this disadvantage to the neglect of the late government in not fostering the milling industry in the west during its fifteen years in power.

Mr. W. A. Buchanan of Medicine Hat agreed with the finance minister that it would be a good thing if mixed farming was adopted in the western provinces. He did not think it could be at the present time. He said that mixed farming had been introduced in his own district and the price of hogs had dropped to five cents per pound simply because the province had produced more than it could consume and there was no organization to dispose of the surplus. As soon as the Underwood tariff came into force fifty thousand hogs were shipped to Seattle and the price rose to seven cents. Hence the farmers naturally valued the privilege of selling in the American market if they wished.

Mr. Buchanan said that eastern manufacturers were making a vital mistake in antagonizing the farmers of the west by opposing free wheat and free agricultural implements. The farmers might one day demand the removal of all customs duties.

He thought the reduction in the case of hinders was too small to be of value to the farmers of the west.

Mr. Buchanan said he would not favor the granting of assistance to the Canadian Northern. Sir William MacKenzie and Sir Donald Mann should be called upon to dispose of their interests in street railways, radial roads, coal mines on the Pacific coast, power plants, and enterprises in foreign countries, and save the Canadian Northern otherwise the government should take over the road.

WILSON WILL REFUSE HUERTA'S SUGGESTION

WILL PREVENT HINDUS FROM LANDING

Four Hundred of Them Due at Vancouver from Shanghai
—Coming in in Contravention to Law.

Ottawa, April 17.—The report that some four hundred Hindus are en route to Canada from Shanghai was made the subject of a question in the house today and it was stated by the government that instructions had been given that they be prevented from landing.

Replying to a question by Mr. Stevens of Vancouver, Hon. Dr. Roche said that the interior department had been notified by its agent at Vancouver of the report that four hundred Hindus were on their way from Shanghai to Vancouver. "I understand," said the minister, "that instructions have been sent that these people, coming in in contravention of our order in council, be not allowed to land."

Mr. Stevens' information was that the Hindus were coming under the leadership of one Gurdit Singh and their intention was to test the resolution of the government respecting immigration of persons of their nationality.

SUPREME COURT IN N.S. HEARS ARGUMENT IN MURDER CASES

Haynes Case a Reserved
Crown Case on Ground of Errors in Trial Judge's Address.

Halifax, April 17.—The supreme court en banc met today to hear arguments in two murder cases, namely the Haynes case of Sydney, and Cook of Sheet Harbor.

B. W. Russell appeared in the case of Rex vs. Haynes. He stated that Judge Drysdale had reserved a crown case, reserved for the opinion of the full court on the ground of errors in the trial judge's address. Mr. Gunn, the prisoner's counsel, had not had sufficient time to prepare his case, and he asked that a hearing be given the latter part of the month.

Deputy Attorney-General Jenks asked that the points to be taken be submitted to the crown, and this was acquiesced in. W. J. O'Hearn, counsel for Edward Cook, convicted for the murder of Charles Asaff at Sheet Harbor, then commenced his argument in support of his appeal from Judge Ritchie's decision refusing to allow a crown case reserved. The objections to His Lordship's address to the jury, as have already been published, were argued at length and various authorities were quoted in support of the application. Deputy Attorney-General Jenks, represented the crown. Judgment in the Cook case will be delivered on April 24. Argument in the Haynes case will be heard on the same date.

ALL MAGISTRATES IN MONTREAL, BUT ONE, SICK, LIBEL CASES POSTPONED

Prosecution of Edward Beck
for Libelous Statements Against Alderman Must be Deferred.

Montreal, April 17.—The criminal prosecution of Edward Beck, arrested for printing alleged libellous statements in his weekly paper in reference to Ald. Thos. O'Connell has been indefinitely postponed. The reason given out for this decision, which has been accepted by all parties concerned, is the fact that, as the police magistrates of Montreal, with the exception of Judge Leet, all are sick, if Judge Leet went to New York to take the evidence of Burns' detectives who investigated alleged graft conditions in City Hall, as arranged at Montreal, it would leave the court without a majority. Until this state of things is changed, it was agreed, nothing should be done on the Beck case.

Flatly Rejects Idea of Simultaneous Salute by Both Sides.

WILL INSIST ON
ADMIRAL MAYO'S DEMAND

Naval Precedents Show No
Such Salute as Huerta Suggests Has Ever Been Fired in Apology for Offense.

Washington, April 17.—President Wilson today flatly rejected General Huerta's suggestion for a "simultaneous salute" to the United States and Mexican flags. The Washington government informed Huerta that his wish for simultaneous firing of the salutes was untenable and that as demanded by Rear Admiral Mayo a salute of twenty-one guns would be insisted upon, the manner of returning the salute to be left to the United States admiral, who had agreed to fire one to the Mexican flag. Naval precedents showed no "simultaneous salute" had ever been fired in apology for an offense.

No reply to the last note transmitted through Charge O'Shaughnessy had been received up to late today and no orders to the war fleets to slow down or turn back had been issued. Administration officials considered, however, the main point at issue the exchange of salutes had been settled. The United States government has taken the position that when a salute of twenty-one guns is fired to the stars and stripes the salute in acknowledgment would be fired to the flag of the Mexican people and not to the Huerta administration or any government or individual.

Secretary Daniels, discussing the return of the salute, said he had consulted the general naval board who unanimously agreed that in all cases where salutes have been given they must be returned. He referred, too, to the recent visit at New Orleans of a Mexican gunboat which was not saluted by the shore batteries. The war department inquired of the navy department at that time about precedents and the army officer in charge at New Orleans was advised to return the salute.

"It is not a salute to a government or an administration," said Secretary Daniels, "but to the flag of a people."

MILITANTS BURN AN ENGLISH THEATRE

Put Bomb Under Building —
Theatre Built Recently at a Cost of $100,000.

Great Yarmouth, Eng., April 17.—The theatre on the pier here was burned today, the fire being caused by the explosion of a bomb left under a seat by a militant suffragette.

At four o'clock this morning a violent explosion woke the inhabitants of Great Yarmouth, and a few moments later the theatre at the end of the pier burst into flames. It was recently rebuilt at a cost of $100,000. The usual suffrage literature was found strewn along the pier and on the beach, and it was assumed that suffragettes had attended last night's performance in the theatre and when they left placed a bomb with a slow fuse attached under one of the seats.

PREACHER BILLY SUNDAY, BASEBALL'S CHAMPION SPRINTER

There may be a dispute as to the identity of the wealthiest old-time ball player; there is some doubt about the ex-heret who has achieved the most enviable distinction in the arts and sciences, but there is no argument regarding the identity of the best known veteran.

Anson saw in him the making of a great ball player and took him to Chicago.

They made no attempt at speed. Norman S. Taber ran the longest distance, a mile and a half, the others stopping after they had covered a mile. The track was heavy from recent rains.

The visitors were received with warm hospitality by undergraduates and officials of Harvard. They had luncheon at the 'Varsity club and during the afternoon watched the competition in the annual spring inter-class track games. The juniors won with the seniors second.

The Oxonians returned to Providence tonight.

THIS DATE IN RING ANNALS

1855—Harry Broome defeated Harry Orme in thirty-one rounds, two hours and eighteen minutes, in England. Broome, who had held the championship for about two years, was a Birmingham man, twenty-eight years old, and five feet ten inches in height.

Orme, the challenger, was from London, about Broome's age, and somewhat smaller in height and weight. The ring was pitched in a field in the country near London. Among the 2,000 spectators who had traveled to the battleground on a special train, Broome was the favorite, but soon after the scrap began it was evident that the champion had met a fighter worthy of his mettle.

Tom Sayers, himself destined to become champion a few years later, was Orme's second.

For twenty-five rounds it was give and take, with neither man having a decided advantage, but after that Broome's superior stamina began to tell, and when Orme tottered to the mark in the thirty-first round it had met a fighter worthy of his mettle.

WORLD'S CHAMPION BOWLERS

There was a large crowd of bowling fans at Black's alleys last night to witness some classed bowling between the world's champion, Archie Walsh and Paul Fochler. The pins were new and the bowlers made some very hard breaks and splits, but notwithstanding this the scores were high for the ten strings rolled.

Fochler won the ten strings by ten pins and the scores by strings were as follows: Walsh—102, 107, 113, 101, 106, 115, 98, 117, 106, 85—Total, 1050.

Fochler—106, 106, 100, 132, 102, 98, 102, 110, 92, 112—Total, 1060.

It is expected that tonight when the two champions will roll ten more strings each to finish the match that the scores will be larger than those of last night. The presence of two such notable bowlers in the city is causing a great interest among the fans.

ALL THE LATEST NEWS FROM THE ATHLETIC WORLD

ONE OF THE BIG REASONS WHY CONNIE MACK SUCCEEDS

He Believes in Taking His Men into His Confidence, and Advocates Harmony among His Players, and Realizes that a word of Encouragement does Twice as Much Good as Biting Criticism

Eddie Collins the famous second baseman of the Philadelphia Athletics in speaking of the World's Champions manager Connie Mack gives an excellent idea of how Connie successfully handles his players as follows: "So many good things have been written and said about 'Conny' Mack before and since the Athletics' latest triumph over the Giants that anything I might add now would be nothing more than repetition. However, I would like to acquaint the fans and my readers with an incident that happened during the World's series last fall which goes to show that there is something more than the mere titles of manager and player or boss and employe between "Connie" and his team. As you all will recall, there was a great amount of criticism, mostly of the adverse kind, about "Connie's" failure to substitute a pinch hitter for Plank in the fifth inning of the second game of the World's Series. At the time we had a man on second and third and only one out. One sporting writer even had the nerve to confront "Connie" in person with the query, "Why in—didn't you put in some one to hit for Plank?" "Why, that's for you to wonder and criticize about in your paper," was "Connie's" only retort. He had little concern for what the public thought or said. But in our meeting before the next day, he evidently saw fit to refer to it. "I don't care what the papers say about that play," "Connie" said to us. "But I want you to know I do care what you players think. And I want to know in turn," "Connie" continued with much feeling, "if it should ever come up again. Not until we had agreed with him to a man that we had no man available who we felt would have done better against Matty on that day than Plank who is no slouch of a batter himself did "Connie" see fit to dismiss the subject and take up more important things. My point in bringing up this trivial episode is only to show one of "Connie" Mack's fundamental principles of untidy purpose, just as you see fit to call it. Many managers "would have worried" whether his players liked the way he ordered a play made or not, but not so with "Connie"; he does care. Do you wonder his players admire and respect him? "I want to see all of you smile like that from now on," was one of "Connie's" handouts before the big series. I have often heard him remark, "I like to see my players in good humor; they always play better ball." More harmony.

When Plank Dropped That Fly Billy Orr, our utility infielder, who suffered a broken hand just previous to the close of our American League season and was thereby robbed of any chance he may have had of getting in against the Giants, sat right next to "Connie" throughout all the series games and told me what "Connie" said and did when Plank dropped that pop fly of Murray's in the fifth inning of the last deciding game. "I thought 'Connie' was going to faint when Baker and Plank came together," Billy told me. "Why, he almost fell off the bench as it was. But that double play was like a dash of cold water in his face," Bill went on to say. "Not a word now about that slip-up," "Connie" yelled to all on the bench. "So when we came in the first thing we heard was, 'That's the way, Bunnie' bridged over a ticklish situation. Think what it meant for every one to be right in that game of all games, the one that made us champions of 1913. In that very game young Eddie Murphy and Baker pulled off a play on Merkle that virtually turned the tide in our favor. At any rate it netted us two runs making our total three which was plenty enough to win. In the write up the following day the papers, the New York sheets in particular panned poor Merkle as a "bonehead" etc, but a few gave Murphy or "Bake" credit for any gray matter. It only goes to confirm the old adage, 'It all depends upon whose eye is doing good.' But with "Connie"—do you imagine for a minute that he overlooked such a situation? Far be it from him. That tall individual even bumped his head on the concrete roof of our bench as he straightened up from his much famed scorecard to say a word of encouragement to those two players as they entered our dugout.

GIVES HIS BATTERS FREEDOM

In one of the games—I think it was the second one in Philadelphia—Barry was on first, with nobody out, and Schang ready to go to bat. "Wally" bent over to "Connie" and said, "What shall I do—put him over or hit?" It is really a baseball question what would have been the proper play; Schang, a good hitter—should he sacrifice with a pitcher to follow? Can you imagine "Connie" Mack's answer to this query of Schang's? I'll wager the big majority can not. "You suit yourself," "Wally" use your own judgment," were the very words "Connie" used. Just another of "Connie's" ways. Other managers may not approve, but "Connie" has had pretty fair success with this method of procedure. Of course in every single instance a player has said to him, "What shall I do?" he has not replied, "Suit yourself." But it is the principle he advocates—confidence in your own ability. Believe confidence is a big half of success in baseball.

To let "Connie" Mack tell it, his players deserve all the credit for the success of the Athletics in the recent campaign. But where did those same players get their start? Who brought them out developed their ability taught them, trained and educated them. Where did you ever hear of Schang, Bush, Bieder, Plank, Lapp, Barry, Baker, McInnes, Strunk, Oldring, E. Murphy or Collins, every single Athletic player who participated in the 1913 championship series, before "Connie" Mack took them in hand. There may have been many great and successful leaders in baseball, but there is only one "Connie" Mack.

WORK ON YACHT DEFIANCE BEING RAPIDLY PERFORMED

There will be little difference in the appearance of the hulls of the Cochran sloop from designs of William Gardner and the Pynchon-Clark Syndicate yacht building at Bath from the board of George Owen. At present one is as near completed for launching as the other, altogether the Owen sloop, if necessary could be finished and put overboard within the month easily. Of late years the racing yachts designed by these two naval architects in outward appearance, have been very much alike, especially so in the case of the class M sloop Dorello II and Medora, which came out in 1912. In the designs of the Owen and Gardner cup defence sloops this similarity of general lines is quite striking.

Both are long ended, with clean sharp entrances forward and rather flat overhangs aft. While there is a marked reversed curve in the bow of the Gardner boat that can be seen even with the craft only in frame, this appears to be lacking in the Owen boat. The length of the forward overhang of the Defiance, according to the spacing of the frames should be close to 18 or 20 feet just about the same as that of the boat building at Lawley's. Likewise the overhang aft is not far from the same length, which would give the sloop an overall length of close to 118 feet.

Great Care With Planking The overall length of the Cochran sloop is also close to 118 feet, which makes the two yachts practically the same. It would not surprise many yachtsmen if all three sloops built on this side of the Atlantic, when meas-

The Mark that Stands for Quality and Square Dealing in Men's Furnishings

Shirts, Collars, Ties and Furnishings

"It's Right in Writing"
FOR over forty years this name has been identified with the one firm throughout the length and breadth of Canada—Tooke Brothers, Limited of Montreal.

You will find this distinctive lettering in the finest of silk shirts, in the famous Tookina shirts, in moderate priced shirts, in a wide range of grades carried by twenty-five haberdashers in St. John, and a good many thousand other reputable and progressive dealers from Coast to Coast.

You find this mark in collars that lead the van of fashion and remain unmatched in quality of goods and skill in manufacture. You find this same familiar lettering of the name Tooke in the finest products of the tie maker.

You find this name in goods carried by twenty-five men's wear stores in St. John—for it is the unswerving policy of this house never to confine our lines to one dealer. We recognise merit wherever we find it—and are glad to have our goods on sale by every responsible and square dealing merchant in a city.

Remember—to genuinely represent the firm of Tooke Brothers Limited—the only manufacturers of shirts, collars and ties in Canada with whom any Tooke is associated, the name must appear in this distinctive script for "It's right in writing," not otherwise.

the extreme ends. The frame is further strengthened by triangular struts about every 10 feet. The deck beams are also strengthened by ribs which are fastened between each beam by flanged edges which straps although of very thin steel do not give at all when stepped. There is four pairs of these straps. The deck beams are also strengthened by longitudinal I-beam which pass through the beams, but unlike the Cochran and Columbia, built by Herreshoff which likewise had these struts passing through the deck beams, each beam is fastened to the stringers by brackets. In this way with the help of the straps it is hoped to hold the deck very rigid.

between the two boats in the matter of bilge, as the Gardner sloop is hard bilged, while the Defiance will be much easier in the bilge. The Defiance also, as the now looks, appears to have very little sheer. The Defiance will have a bowsprit for the stem was cast with a gammon iron, but this bowsprit will only be a short stick as the mast is to be stepped well forward which means that the sloop is to have a large and high after driving sail. The deck of the yacht will not be of metal but rather of soft pine giving a white deck and the best of footings.

Defiance's Wooden Rudder Hung

The rudder of the Defiance, of wood long, and not very deep, has been hung and practically all the steering gear is assembled ready to be fitted as soon as the yacht progresses that far. In general the Defiance has not the fat appearance amidship of all earlier racing boats, as her beam seems to be carried farther forward and aft, while her ends have the look of being drawn in quite easily.

Although the weight of lead on the Defiance and the Cochran boat probably differs little, the junk of the former appears much larger. This is probably due to the shape of the molded keel of the Defiance. Aft, the lead depth of good thickness has not much depth, rising gradually until at the forward end there is practically no deadwood and at the extreme forward part the lead is close to the garboards.

Like all the other possible cup defenders and also the challenger, the Defiance will be equipped with a centre board. The slot in the lead keel for the centreboard is about eight feet in length so that on the wind with board lowered the sloop's draft will be close to 22 feet. Also, like all the others the forward part will be knife-edged. There is considerable difference be-

Opposition Leader Omits Dr. Landry's Name From List of Those Exonerated—Provincial Secretary Challenges Dugal to Come Out Manfully If He Has Any Charges—“The Trinity Behind Him” Fail to Come to Rescue, and Dugal Admits He Has None.

HON. DR. LANDRY, PROVINCIAL SECRETARY

Fredericton, April 17.—And Dugal crawled. There is no other phrase to express it, he crawled. While the leader of the opposition composed himself another member from Madawaska county lacked the pluck to make the definite charge against Hon. Dr. Landry; he did it by innuendo until promptly called to a showdown. Then he crawled.

The imbly were in the legislative chamber today in all their war paint. And they witnessed the downfall and utter rout of the man who they had chosen as the dupe to take the public blame and responsibility for the charges made, while they resorted to innuendo to accuse. Frank E. Carvell, the dark lantern operator of Carleton county, the man who during his career in the Dominion House has made a consistent record as a burker of enquiries is seated on one of the big plush lounges cheek by jowl with Peter J. Veniot, one of the Liberal organizers, and from time to time they nodded encouragement to their dupe as he unfolded his little story.

Then Dr. Landry arose and speaking in English and French, Mr. Dugal arose and speaking in French said he had no charge to make. Speak English and speaking in French said he had no charge to make. Fredericton, April 17.—The sole topic of conversation in Fredericton tonight is the splendid showing made in the legislature this afternoon by Hon. Dr. Landry and the aggressive forceful and businesslike way the government has grappled with the Dugal charges. The address asking for the royal commission is to be presented to the Lieutenant-Governor at once and the commission will probably be appointed soon.

There is much speculation as to the personnel of the commission. Whoever may be selected to serve, they will be men whose integrity and independence will be beyond question and a complete illumination of all matters connected with the charges will be the result.

Fredericton, April 17.—The bill giving the government authority to guarantee the bonds of the company building the Valley Railway to the extent of an additional $1,000,000 per mile, as previously explained was given its third reading tonight.

There was nothing spectacular about it. Mr. Stewart of Northumberland, who had previously moved an amendment to the bill, found but two supporters, himself and his colleague, Mr. Swim, while the government supporters stood up in series and showed by their votes that they were not to be stampeded away from making effective a piece of legislation which will tend to aid in the early completion of the Valley Railway.

It is expected there will be a brief session of the house tomorrow morning when the governor will probably assent to bills. Most of the members will leave for their homes tomorrow afternoon after a rather strenuous session.

On the order of the day for the third reading of the bill to grant further aid to the Valley Railway being moved that the bill be not now read a third time, but that it be referred back to the committee of the whole house with instructions to amend the same by providing that the bond guarantee be reduced to $7,500,000. London, Ont., April 17.—Thomas Riley, the Grand Trunk brakeman whom a jury in the assize court last night returned a verdict of manslaughter, in connection with the shooting of George Blackburn, a bartender at the Hotel Cecil, last October, was sentenced to fifteen years in Kingston penitentiary by Justice Kelly this morning.

Before sentence was imposed the prisoner made a statement in which he declared he had been driven to the crime by drink and avowed he never would touch liquor again in his life.

Fredericton, April 17.—The bill giving the government authority to guarantee the bonds of the company building the Valley Railway to the extent of an additional $1,000,000 per mile, as previously explained was given its third reading tonight.

There was nothing spectacular about it. Mr. Stewart of Northumberland, who had previously moved an amendment to the bill, found but two supporters, himself and his colleague, Mr. Swim, while the government supporters stood up in series and showed by their votes that they were not to be stampeded away from making effective a piece of legislation which will tend to aid in the early completion of the Valley Railway.

Fredericton, April 17.—The government of New Brunswick wants no whitewash. They will follow the precedent set in this province by governments which have gone before them and which were in the habit of investigating charges against ministers of the crown by means of committee and of the house which as it worked out proved to be nothing more or less than scientific whitewashing expeditions.

Best Liniment of All Destroys Every Pain But Never Burns

"How thankful we are to get hold of such a wonderful household remedy as Nerville's," writes Mrs. E. F. Lamontagne from her home near W. Lamontagne, Alberta. "In this faraway taskwain, Alberta. In this faraway druggist, every family needs a good supply of liniment. Nerville's is the best of all. It destroys every pain, but never burns. We use Nerville's in a score of ways. If it rheumatism, aching back, pain in the side, sciatica or stiff neck—you can laugh at them if you have lots of Nerville's handy. For earache, toothache or at more quickly. For a general all-round pain remedy I can think of nothing more valuable and speedy to cure than Nerville's." The above letter is convincing—it tells how reliable and trust this old-time remedy is. Nerville's for forty years has been a household word in Canada. Scarcely a home in Canada you can find without Nerville's. Every community has its living examples of the wonderful curative properties of Nerville's which will cure pains and aches anywhere in the joints or muscles. It's penetrating, soothing, warming, and safe for young and old to use. Get the large 50c. family size bottle; it's the most economical. Small trial size 25c. at any dealers anywhere.

BY ROYAL COMMISSION.

There can be but one opinion regarding the action of the Provincial Government yesterday when they decided that an independent royal commission be appointed by the Lieutenant Governor should subject to most rigid and searching enquiry the charges made by Mr. Dugal against Hon. J. K. Fleming, Premier of New Brunswick.

When he laid the charges before the House Mr. Dugal asked that they should be investigated by a committee to be appointed by the House. Had the Government granted this there could have been no ground for objection upon the part of the complainant or those associated with him in preferring the charges. He would have received all he asked for. But the Government has gone beyond what Mr. Dugal requested. Hearing that, with the composition of the Provincial Legislature as it is, there could be but one, or at the most, two opposition representatives on such a House committee, and that an investigation by any such body, no matter how fairly or impartially conducted, might have left in its wake an impression that political considerations should have been allowed to influence its findings, the Government wisely held that the people of this province were entitled to have the investigation conducted in the full light of publicity and with absolute fairness and, consequently, decided that the enquiry should be by royal commission clothed with all the authority of a court of law and empowered to hear evidence under oath. This must be satisfactory and proves more clearly than could be demonstrated by any other action that the New Brunswick Government has nothing to fear, but on the contrary, desires the fullest investigation.

Let the light be turned on in all its revealing power. The charges made by Mr. Dugal are most serious in their nature and having made them it is now to be presumed he has the necessary evidence to support them. If it is shown that the charges are well founded and that there has been extortion, blackmail or crookedness, in any of the departments of the Provincial Administration, then the guilty parties must be revealed. If, on the other hand, Mr. Dugal, Mr. Carvell or any of the others whose names have been linked with the charges during the past few days are unable to prove their case, then they should be subjected to the extreme penalty of the law for formulating, or helping to formulate, charges against a man who until proven absolutely guilty will continue to enjoy the utmost measure of public confidence.

In deciding to put the charges to the fullest test the Government has adopted the course of wisdom. Whatever the outcome they cannot suffer. If there was wrongdoing it was without Government collusion. The prompt action to ensure an absolutely fair and independent investigation proves this. The Government of the Province of New Brunswick was never stronger than at this moment.

THE VALLEY RAILWAY BONDS.

In the legislature on Thursday evening Hon. George J. Clarke, acting premier, definitely exposed the falsity of statements appearing in certain opposition newspapers to the effect that he seeking to obtain permission for a bond guarantee of $10,000 per mile for the St. John Valley Railway the Provincial Government desired to aid certain contracting companies, and not to advance the interests of the province.

Since the Dugal charges were first made in Fredericton, the Opposition press, especially the Telegraph and Times, have been assiduously engaged in a dastardly attempt to convict every member and every supporter of the Government of having dishonest designs upon the public purse. Every act of the Government has been twisted and distorted into a suspicious undertaking with a sinister motive. According to the Telegraph the purpose of men on the Government benches is not to administer the affairs of the province with fair hand, but to plunder the provincial strongbox and besmear the name of New Brunswick with the slime of odious scandal.

Charges have been made and they will be fully proved. For this we have the word of members of the Government, men of unimpeachable honor and integrity, men whose the respectable Canterbury street newspapers would not dare to name in connection with the campaign of slander being waged by those bought and paid for organs. Until this investigation is held, it is deceptively unfair to attempt to convict in advance any person accused, no matter who he may be. Yet this is the policy waged by the newspapers supporting those high priests of perjury, William Fugleby and Frank B. Carvell.

In line with this plan of campaign these newspapers have been expending ink and effort in a frenzied opposition to the passage of the bill guaranteeing bonds for the Valley Railway construction to the extent of $10,000 per mile. The claim has been made, although repeatedly contradicted in Fredericton, that the additional guarantee would have the effect of leaving in the hands of the St. John and Quebec Railway Company unguaranteed bonds to the amount of $10,000 per mile which the company could dispose of at its pleasure. As the Valley Railway, in time to come, will undoubtedly be a profit-making venture it is easy to see that if the Telegraph's claim were correct the Government would be making the present to the company constructing the railway of a large amount of securities which in time will be worth their full par value.

Such a course would be indefensible, but it is not contemplated, and if the intelligence of the editor of the Telegraph is not blinded by his political partisanship this must be clearly apparent to him.

What is being done is this. Under the original charter the company was given authority to issue bonds to the extent of $25,000 per mile of railway and no more of this amount. The Government then guaranteed $25,000. This left unguaranteed bonds to the amount of $10,000 per mile in the company's hands. Under the legislation now before the house, power is sought to carry the guarantee up to the limit of the bond issue, or, in other words, to convert the $10,000 per mile of unguaranteed bonds into bonds carrying the guarantee of the Government. There will be no additional issue of bonds despite the Telegraph. Because of financial depression the company was unable to dispose of its unguaranteed bonds to outside firms, consequently the new bill gives to the province the power to guarantee these, thus making them more desirable from an investment standpoint and naturally more easily saleable. The Government does not contemplate making this guarantee at once but desire authority to make it when such a proceeding is deemed advisable. If the Valley Railway is to be speedily completed, and that is surely a consummation which everyone will regard as most desirable, then no obstacle should be placed in the way of the work.

But the question is raised that the present company may default on its undertaking. Again, as Mr. Clarke explains, the province is safeguarded. The Telegraph has carried vicious editorial attacks upon the Government in connection with this bond guarantee. Yesterday they published such an attack and yet, in their news columns in the report of the legislature, appeared these words: "If the company failed to complete their contract the Government had power to go and take up all the money in the hands of the Prudential Trust Company at Montreal and use it themselves for the completion of the road. They could either employ another company to finish the road or they could appoint a commission and do it themselves."

Surely this statement is sufficiently frank and comprehensive to show that the members of the Government have not ceased to guard the interests of the people. The people have reposed their confidence and trust in the provincial administration and they have not found it misplaced. In the present case the issue is clear. On the one side is the Government which came into power on the heels of a particularly corrupt administration. It has given to the province good aggressive and honest services.

On the other hand are certain charges made against one member of this Government, and one alone. Other members of the cabinet and every supporter of the Government had pledged themselves that these charges shall be fully and completely proved to their depths, no matter who stands or falls. There has been no denial of that even by the Telegraph. The people of New Brunswick are confronted with this question: "Is it fair to condemn the entire Government on the strength of charges against one man and before these charges have been investigated?" Honesty, decency and fair play will most decidedly answer: "No." Yet this is what the political, journalistic adventurers who edit and control the Telegraph and the Times would have. These newspapers accuse the Standard of deliberate misrepresentation. The accusation is not correct. The Standard on Thursday morning gave publication to statements which were but partially correct, (that it was not wholly correct was due to misunderstanding but there was no intent to mislead.) Yesterday the Standard published the corrected story. But the opportunity had been presented for the Telegraph and Times to make another of their venomous attacks and, with entire disregard of the principles of decent journalism, it imputes motives where none existed. They are pursuing the same course in their treatment of the larger question of the charges at Fredericton. Their sole desire is to wreck reputations of their political opponents, no matter whether or not the facts afford justification for the course. The order has gone forth from the provincial Liberal leader at Ottawa and from the dark lantern operator of Carleton County and the editors of the Telegraph and Times have modelled their course with that cringing subserviency to the paymaster of the moment which has been the most notable characteristic of the checked and changing political career of the purchaseable newspapers with which they are connected.

The people of this province who have memories will not be misled. They will not convict in advance of the evidence. The Standard ventures the prophecy that when all the facts are made known the Government of New Brunswick, its supporters in the Legislature and the great Conservative party will stand forth with clean hands and unspotted reputations. With entire confidence do we await the issue of the searching investigation that will come.

THE HUMAN PROCESSION

A TALE OF TWO CITIES—SAN FRANCISCO AND GARY

This is a tale of two cities, Gary, Ind., and San Francisco, Cal., a first born on April 18, 1906, eight years today, and the last reborn on the same day.

Many cities have suffered great calamities, and have recovered, but few have so effectively and rapidly erased the scars of disaster as that municipality by the Golden Gate that eight years ago today was a mass of roaring flames, and which today, bigger and better built than ever, is inviting the world to be its guest next year at the greatest exposition in history.

The prairie provinces of western Canada have witnessed magic cities rise almost overnight, and Oklahoma City may boast of the marvelous rapidity of its growth, but the Hoosier municipality of Gary is perhaps the most remarkable example of modern city building.

On the same day that the whole world was mourning the destruction of San Francisco, a dozen workmen, armed with shovels began digging in the soil of the wilderness on the extreme southernmost point of Lake Michigan. They were the birthday boys of Gary, a city built to order by the steel trust. The site had been chosen because of its facilities for water transportation and its proximity to Chicago, and because the land could be had for a song. When the steel trust had chosen the spot, the principal street, sufficient to the needs of a municipality of that size, and with ample provisions for future extensions. Broadway and Fifth streets, the principal streets were graded and paved with cement before any permanent buildings were erected. In July, 1906, the town of Gary was incorporated, although the population was then composed principally of workmen employed in building the Young and Rubicam building in a city of tents. Then came the era of permanent building, with the steel company taking the lead by erecting 200 other great industrial corporations followed the steel trust to Gary, and at its present rate of growth, the Hoosier city will be come within a quarter of a century one of the greatest of the world's industrial centers.

Nothing was calculated to render a loyal citizen of Gary peevish as to have his town referred to as "an industrial suburb of Chicago," although he would admit that Chicago may some day be a suburb of Gary. It is said that Chicago came near to being located at the present site of Gary. According to the story, a youthful engineer was sent by the United States government to select a good harbor on Lake Michigan. His first choice was Wolf Lake, just east of Gary, and there the western metropolis would have been built, except that a French Canadian trader who lived in a hut at the mouth of the Chicago river had a lovely daughter. The young surveyor was smitten with the maiden's charms, and in order to be near her, he removed his camp to the Chicago river, and changed his recommendation to Gary. The trader, hearing of the amorous youth was successful in his suit tradition does not tell.

To the great majority of San Franciscans the eighteenth of April anniversary of the great fire of 1906, has become a day of jubilation as well as of mourning. That period of travail marked the rebirth of the city, and a grander and more magnificent San Francisco has arisen from the ruins of the old city. Over 500 city blocks were ravaged by the flames, but practically all have been rebuilt, and the new edifices are vastly superior to the old. Forty thousand workmen and twenty million dollars were required to remove the debris, but the task was accomplished so well that hardly a scar is left on the fair face of the city.

Was Confined To His Bed For Four Months With Rheumatism.

Mr. W. H. Riley, Ruddell, Sask., writes: "It is with the greatest pleasure that I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to all suffering with rheumatism. I was so bad with this terrible disease, I was unable to get up from my bed for four months, and nothing seemed to relieve me until a friend recommended Doan's Pills. I had my doubts about them, but so desperate I would try anything suggested to me. After taking half a box I was able to get up, and after taking two boxes could get around quite well. After taking six boxes I was completely cured, and able to work for the first time in five months, and have not had a touch of rheumatism since. Anyone who saw me then would not know me now, as I am strong and active since taking your valuable medicine."

Doan's Kidney Pills help the kidneys to flush out the acid and poisonous impurities which have collected, and thus clean out the kidneys, and dispel the rheumatism from the system. Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Millburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

become a day of jubilation as well as of mourning. That period of travail marked the rebirth of the city, and a grander and more magnificent San Francisco has arisen from the ruins of the old city. Over 500 city blocks were ravaged by the flames, but practically all have been rebuilt, and the new edifices are vastly superior to the old. Forty thousand workmen and twenty million dollars were required to remove the debris, but the task was accomplished so well that hardly a scar is left on the fair face of the city.

RENTS, PRINCIPAL FACTOR IN HIGH COST OF LIVING

Increase in Rents Chiefly due to Land Speculation—Dominion Government's Board of Enquiry Holding Sessions Here—Effects the Working Class.

Increase in rents, due to speculation in land values, is the principal factor in the high cost of living, with increases in farm produce prices ranking next in importance, according to John McDougall, chairman of the Dominion government's board of enquiry in the cause of the high cost of living, who with other members of the board arrived in the city yesterday. During the afternoon the board held a session at the Royal Hotel and took evidence in regard to the cause of the high cost of living.

The sessions are private, and the names of the witnesses summoned were not given out, though they were said to be men prominently identified with the lumber and fish business here.

Supplementary Information. "We have in the departments at Ottawa a great deal of information dealing with the problem of the cost of living and price movements, and the purpose of our visit here is to gather supplementary information," said Mr. McDougall. "We conduct the enquiry in private, because witnesses talk more freely. If there was any demand for open sessions we would have them."

TOWN PLANNING IS SUPPORTED BY GOVERNMENT

Will Hold National Conference in Toronto and will bear most of the Expenses.

In consequence of representations made to the Dominion government about a year ago that there was a great deal of interest in the problem of city planning, and no organization in a position to take hold of the matter and develop a body of information of value in the work of city planning the Dominion government has arranged to hold a National Conference on city planning at Toronto on May 25, 26 and 27, and W. S. Lecky of the Dominion government commission of conservation arrived in the city yesterday for the purpose of interesting the city authorities, the Board of Trade and others in the advisability of sending delegates to the conference.

City planning conferences have been held in the States for the last six years, but this will be the first national conference on city planning to be held in Canada. Yesterday Mr. Lecky had an interview with the Mayor, but in consequence of the civic election his worship was unable to make any promise regarding the sending of civic representatives to the conference, though he pointed out that the city was sufficiently interested in the matter to have induced the legislature to adopt an act giving the city the power to appoint a Town Planning Commission. Mr. Lecky also had a talk with W. F. Burditt, chairman of the Board of Trade committee on city planning and a member of the National Council on city planning.

Up to Those Interested. Speaking of the conference Mr. Lecky said the government had undertaken to bear most of the expenses of the conference because representations had been made to it that the matter was of great importance to cities and citizens, and it was now up to the people interested in city planning to make the conference a success. Invitations have been issued to about 100 cities and towns in Canada. Mr. Lecky said he found great interest in the city planning in eastern Canada.

He leaves for Toronto today. At the conference papers will be read by architects and other experts on a variety of subjects, dealing with the problems of city planning. There will also be an exhibition of models, maps, plans, and diagrams illustrating the latest practice in Europe and America. Canadian cities and towns, and Canadian architects and engineers are cordially invited to send exhibits.

The special exhibit in this class will be one prepared at the expense of the Dominion government and exhibited in New York. It is very comprehensive and of the greatest interest.

Economical Importance. The advantages of proper city and town planning are of even greater economical importance than aesthetic. The lack of proper planning has involved enormous loss of life, and such things as typhoid epidemics and an enormous loss of money and life by fire.

City planning promotes trade by direct and easy means; it fosters city growth by making it easier and cheaper to conduct all classes of business; it increases and ensures all property value in preventing the many evils of haphazard building; it makes every citizen a more efficient and more effective worker, by saving time and money in transit of goods and people; and above all, it assures to the city a future citizenship sound in body, mind and morals.

Born. The many friends of Harry C. Green son of Louis Green, are congratulating him on the arrival of a baby boy.

ANOTHER INDUSTRY FOR ST. JOHN

Company Organized to Erect Pork Packing Plant Likely to Start Operations in this City.

Montreal, April 17.—A company has been organized with $99,000 capital, $70,000 to be issued and $45,000 already subscribed, to erect a large pork packing plant, preferably in St. John, N. B., but perhaps in the outskirts of the city. The company has bought large farms along the line of the Intercolonial at three different points, and also on the St. John River, comprising over 1,200 acres in all, on which hog-raising will be begun on an extensive scale. An experienced English packer will have charge of the packing plant.

HILL-GROWN "SALADA" CEYLON TEA.

The soil and climate of Ceylon combine to produce the best tea in the world—but it's true in Ceylon, as elsewhere, that the choicest teas are hill-grown. On the sunny upland slopes of "Salada" plantations, the loose soil admits light and air to the plant roots, the sloping land gives perfect drainage, the equable temperature permits an even development of the leaves.

If you want a cup of tea "in perfection" ask your grocer for a packet of "Salada" and see that you get it, and not a substitute.

certainly be a great help to furthering the athletic activities in this city. At present there is scarcely any place at all available for recreation purposes within the city limits. The athletic fields in existence are privately controlled.

The site in Gilbert's Lane was donated to the city by Joseph Allison, and the first sod was turned by the Duke of Connaught when he was in the city two years ago.

The city has done some work on the site but on account of lack of drainage it was found impossible to make any great headway. With the new drain in place the water will be carried into the Marsh Creek and the ground will be left practically dry.

Some filling and cutting will be necessary before the grounds are completed but it is expected that this work will be completed at an early date.

Note Your Increase in Weight

While Building up the System with GAINED 30 POUNDS

Was thin, pale and weak. Had frequent headaches and stomach troubles. Cured by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mrs. H. Laich, Cannington Manor, Sask., writes—"You will remember me writing you last spring. Well, I gave up my doctor and began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This treatment cured me rapidly and I was soon myself again. I was pale, thin and weak, suffered from stomach troubles and liver complaint and frequently had sick, nervous headaches.

I was surprised to find that in a few weeks time I had gained 30 pounds in weight. I never felt so strong and well in all my life. Headaches never bother me any more and I am grateful for the cure. If people would only give this medicine a fair trial they would certainly be cured."

You can feel yourself gaining in strength and vitality while using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. You sleep better, eat your meals with more relish, and digest them without discomfort. But it is also interesting to note your increase in weight for this is proof positive that your system is obtaining additional nourishment from this food cure and that new firm flesh and tissue is being added to the body. THE BRITISH FLAG IN FILM PLAYS Gem Shows Zulu War Picture of Patriotic Interest—Some Other Good Things. For the opening show at the Gem Theatre next week, beginning on Monday, one of the greatest successes yet scored by the Biograph players will be presented. It is in two parts, entitled "The Massacre," and depicts pioneer life on the western plains. In the story, which at no moment is when he risks his life going alone through the land of the Zulus in the face of great odds. He rescues the colors of the regiment and saves his comrades, winning back the esteem of his fellow soldiers and rekindling his sweetheart's love. It is a particularly pleasing story, and uncommon in the fact that such prominence is given the British flag and honor paid to English bravery in such a way. The Selig-Heaston news pictorial will be shown on Wednesday and Thursday also, and will contain many thrilling events of current and popular interest. A Bach change of the orchestra under H. W. Burnham will render new novelty successes. On Friday and Saturday the Vitagraph comedy feature of theatrical life, a story of a millionaire "angel" and a would-be comic opera artist, entitled "Back to Broadway."

LOCAL AUTHORS. Local authors of photoplays will be interested in this announcement of the American Film Manufacturing Company that it wants scenarios for comedies and light dramas to be produced. The first woman of whom it was said that "The Queen of Spain has no legs," was Margaret of Austria, who married Philip III, "the Pious," in 1599. On her triumphant entry into Spain she passed through a city famed as the center of the silk hosiery industry, ordered a magnificent and costly pair of stockings as a gift. The pious monarch was profoundly shocked and ordered the present returned to the donors, who were to be informed that "The Queen of Spain has no legs." Ever since the saying has been proverbial in Spain. Poor Queen Margaret was alarmed by the statement of her pious spouse and, it is said, burst into tears, crying, "I would not have married you if I had known that my legs were to be cut off! At that, history records, Philip the Pious smiled for the first time in his life. Until the sensible Queen Victoria came to the throne it was less majestic to suggest that a Spanish Queen was possessed of lower limb like ordinary humans. Other good things will be shown later. Patrons of the Gem showed their appreciation of the new news service introduced at that house during this week. Each picture on the film is one inch wide and 34 inch deep—16 pictures to the foot. The average film of 1,000 feet, requires 18 or 20 minutes to see.

A liberal education on the speaking stage laid the foundation for the success of Winnifred Greenwood, the popular leading woman in "Flying A," a film drama. Miss Greenwood quit school at an early age to adopt the stage as a profession. Her first speaking part was when she played the ingenue in "Zig Zag Alley," then playing at the New York Theatre, New York City. The next season she played a part in "Bebes in Toyland." After that she declined a career in musical comedy to go into the legitimate, being starred with J. J. Kennedy in the "Midnight Express." From that time on Miss Greenwood's rise was very rapid. She starred through the south in "Sappho" and "Camille." She also played prominent parts in stock companies in several cities, including Montreal, Quebec, Baltimore, Duluth, Roanoke, St. Louis, Mobile and South Bend, Ind. After that Miss Greenwood headed her own company on the road for two seasons. Then came her entry into the motion picture field, and soon she gravitated to Mutual Movies under the American brand. Here Miss Greenwood has attained great popularity through her ability as a leading woman and is today one of the best known and most popular screen actresses. Miss Greenwood played on the legitimate stage in between 350 and 360 different parts, and in motion pictures, she has appeared in over 800 photoplays. She is a great lover of music and plays both the piano and mandolin. She enjoys all outdoor sports, such as swimming, riding, canoeing, tennis and golf.

INTERESTING FILM GOSSIP Harold MacGrath, author of "The Adventures of Kathlyn," arrived in New York City from Italy recently for a conference with C. J. Hill, president of the Thanhouser Film Corporation and J. Medill Patterson of the Chicago Tribune, to arrange the details of "The Million Dollar Mystery," a serial photoplay which will appear on June 21. Lloyd F. Lonergan, scenario editor of the Thanhouser Corporation, is now at work upon the scenario, from which Mr. MacGrath will write his story. "Marguerite Snow," F. La Bache, James Cruze and Sidney Bracy will carry the story of love, intrigue and mystery, through which cascades thrill after thrill. The work of this famous quartette of players makes certain the success of the production. Lorimer Johnston, the motion-picture producer who has been making the film adaptation of Charles Dickens' work for Mutual Movies, will soon give another to the public. It will be "The Old Curiosity Shop," made by the American Film Manufacturing Company. After the success of "The Cricket on the Hearth" much may be expected from the new Mutual Movie.

A TOILETTE DE BAL. Evelyn Thaw while in Los Angeles recently went to see "The Great Leap," a Mutual Movie feature, in which Robert Harron and Mae Marsh starred. Miss Thaw had heard of the fifty foot leap over the crest of a cliff at Au Sable canon which nearly cost Miss Marsh's life. Miss Thaw was accompanied to the theatre by Mae Marsh herself. She attempted to see the whole feature film before her matinee time, but the best part of the picture was yet to be shown when the clock's hands crawled around to 2 o'clock. "Won't you be late for your performance?" Miss Marsh asked. "Oh, let the show wait," said Evelyn. "I'm too interested in this picture. And it waited!

IMPERIAL HEADLINERS FOR NEXT WEEK! Three Splendid Film Successes and Plenty of Good Music. With the Easter season about over Keith's Imperial Theatre settles down to its spring and summer season in real earnest, judging from the advance notices of next week's film productions booked for this house. A. C. Smith, Jr., and Miss Mauro, who have delighted so many people last week with their vocal numbers will be retained and the Imperial's festival orchestra, a hit of hits, promises an entirely new budget of late musical successes in addition to the standard works of great composers. "Iron and Steel" is a Vitagraph two-part serial with which the week will be ushered in. The leading character in this film drama is John Smart, hoodlum dealing with the possible sidekick of a great German gun works, is acted by that continuous favorite, Maurice Costello. It is a strong police-business story, taking one into the realm of great manufacturers and of high finance with of course the inevitable strain of love-making. On Wednesday and Thursday the Imperial will produce another of the Famous Players legitimate plays in "Chelsea 7750," by a long odds the most melodramatic feature in the famous Players list. No less a Broadway actor than Henry E. Dixey plays the leading role in this piece, and its five reels is warranted to make a deep impression. Mr. Dixey will be supported by a full-blooded company including Laura Sawyer and House Peters and the direction of the piece is under that famous producer, J. Searle Dawley. For Friday and Saturday the Lubin Company will produce a two-reel naval melodrama dealing with the possible outcome of the Mexican mix-up. It illustrates to what extremes nations will go to fulfill their obligations and with real vessels and some astounding realism, a bumper offering is herein contained for the week-end.

HEARD BEHIND THE CURTAIN Pauline Bush has been in moving pictures for three years, and has celebrated her "cinema birthday" by treating herself to some beautiful new gowns. The Famous Players Company under E. S. Porter, are at present at Del Mar, Cal., where Mary Pickford and Harold Lockwood are hard at work. Miss Evelyn James, the young sculptress, who is recognized as the most promising of the present generation of artists, has been engaged by the Vitagraph Company of America to model a full-length statue of Naomi Childers, who, with Darwin Kerr, leads in a Vitagraph feature production. Miss James is a very beautiful young lady and takes a prominent part in the play. "Just a bit cozy about it, sort of gently make him dizzy," said Harry Pollard, who produces the Beauty brand of Mutual Movies, to an actress whom he was rehearsing in a love scene. "After another futile effort to have the actress appear cozy, Pollard said: 'He is trying to kiss you. Haven't you ever tried to keep some young man from kissing you?' "No," came the shy reply from the maiden, and all the other young ladies audibly attacked of heart trouble. Motion pictures of the Santa Clara valley in blossom time have been taken and will be displayed over the state and at the Panama Pacific exposition. Cowboys herding cattle, girls picking tomatoes, oranges, grapefruit trees, acres of prune orchards in bloom and views of the recent blossom festival at Saratoga are enumerated among the films to be shown. Our Mutual Girl series at the Unique on Wednesday was the cause of exceptional business for that cozy house. This house has made wonderful strides within the last year.

AROUND THE CITY

Indignant Citizen. The Standard was visited last evening by an indignant citizen, who said that he did not very often make complaints, but he thought it was time to complain about the disgraceful manner in which some of the principal sidewalks in the city were allowed to remain covered with snow and slush all day yesterday. He stated that citizens are reported and requested to attend court then this bylaw is broken but said he: "The south side of King street east was a mess, especially in front of the police station and the city sheds where the fire department store apparatus that is not in use."

Courtenay Bay Accident. As the result of an accident late yesterday afternoon at Courtenay Bay Kenneth Kearney of 168 King street, west end, who was employed at the works, now lies in the General Public Hospital suffering with a compound fracture of the right leg and other minor bruises. Kearney, who is employed at the Courtenay Bay works as inspector of the work that is being carried on there, was yesterday evening carrying out a large stone when some heavy stone rolled from position, and falling on him pinned his right leg, crushing it and breaking the bone in two places. The accident occurred in the vicinity of four o'clock in the afternoon, and the unfortunate man was taken to where he could be comfortably cared for while a telephone call was sent to the ambulance. Kearney was conveyed to the hospital.

TENNIS CLUB DANCE

Members of the St. John Tennis Club opened the season's activities with a dance last evening in Kelt's assembly rooms. More than one hundred and fifty guests were present and an enjoyable evening was spent. The programme consisted of sixteen numbers. Miss Schofield and Miss McKenzie made up the ladies' committee and Messrs. D. C. Skinner and K. S. Barnes were members of the floor committee. The chaperones were Mrs. J. Pope Barnes, Mrs. P. W. Thomson, Mrs. H. C. Schofield, Mrs. Hugh McKay, and Mrs. S. A. Jones. Jones' orchestra was present and the musical numbers added much to the pleasure of the evening. The St. John Tennis Club has about completed arrangements for the coming season. Five courts will be available in the grounds in Gilbert's Lane and the New Brunswick tournament will be played there during August. The officers of the club are C. F. Inchee, president; T. M. McAvity, vice-president; K. S. Barnes, secretary-treasurer; R. London, caretaker. These gentlemen have been prominent in the club's activities for several years and largely through their efforts the club has been brought to its present flourishing position.

A COINCIDENCE

On Friday, April 17th, 1903, just 11 years ago, the sheds and the grain conveyors at Sand Point, West End, were destroyed by fire, and a great deal of damage done. It was a stormy morning when the fire broke out and so quickly did the flames rush through the large warehouses that the firemen could do nothing to save the sheds, but performed excellent work in saving the immigration building and other property near. At the time of the fire there were hundreds of men, women and children, immigrants in the immigration building, and there was great excitement among them. They had just arrived in the early morning on the steamer Lake Manitoba from Liverpool. A portion of the wood work on the upper deck of the steamer was slightly damaged by the flames. There is a coincidence in the fact that the date of the fire was on Friday, April 17th, and that the steamer Lake Manitoba was the ship lying at the dock. The anniversary being yesterday, the date was also Friday, April 17th, and the same steamer, Lake Manitoba, was again at the Sand Point berth having arrived a couple of days ago from Liverpool.

TWO SCHOONERS FILL DURING HEAVY STORM Oriole and Calabria, owned by John Splane, in Trouble near Bar Harbor—May Prove Total Loss.

John Splane, the ship broker on Water street, yesterday morning received bad news in two telegrams announcing that two of his schooners, the Oriole, Captain G. Gayton, and the Calabria, Captain A. Wilson, were full of water near Mount Desert, Maine, and it is feared that both will prove a total loss. The telegrams did not state that the vessels had been ashore. It is thought by Mr. Splane that the schooners were out in the heavy easterly gale Thursday, and became strained by the tremendous seas, filling with water. The telegram from Captain Gayton of the Oriole comes from McKinley, Maine, near Mount Desert, and was sent via Bar Harbor. It stated that the Oriole was at anchor at Pleasant Island and that the cargo was washing out of her. The vessel is a long distance from any harbor where repairs might be made and therefore it is feared she may prove a total loss. She was loaded with a cargo of 1,805,000 laths shipped by Steison Culler and Co., and was bound for Philadelphia. The vessel cleared on April 6th and sailed from this port on Tuesday or Wednesday last.

NEW HOSPITAL FOR WEST SIDE NEAR PROSPECT Necessary, if Immigration Continues to Increase, Says Dr. P. H. Bryce—Better Class Settlers.

The telegram from Captain Wilson of the Oriole was sent from Ceres, Maine, and like the other wire came via Bar Harbor. It stated that the vessel was full of water and that he was trying to work her towards a harbor. The Oriole is a vessel of 121 tons and was bound from Weymouth to Boston with lumber. The Calabria was a large three masted schooner of 421 tons. Both vessels are uninsured and the loss to Mr. Splane will be heavy. The cargoes and the freight were insured. The Oriole is said to have sailed from Weymouth, N. S., last Wednesday for Boston and her position yesterday could not be very far from that of the Calabria. The Oriole has had considerable trouble this month. She sailed from this port for Weymouth on April 15th and on April 18th she went ashore near the government breakwater at Tiverton, N. S. It was thought at that time that she would prove a total loss but she was floated and repaired only to again meet with a mishap on Thursday night.

"If the immigration traffic through St. John continues to increase, it is no doubt will, more hospital accommodation will be needed on the West Side," said Dr. P. H. Bryce, medical officer of the Department of Immigration at Ottawa who arrived in the city yesterday on an inspection tour. "Although the number of immigrants passing through St. John this winter has not been as large as last winter, it has been large enough to keep the immigration officials busy for the purpose. We have not had any trouble here this winter on account of sickness among immigrants, and the hospital accommodation has served its purpose. But the department realizes that in the future more accommodation will be needed, and we hope to be able to make provision for an extension of the hospital facilities."

Better Class of Immigrants. Dr. Bryce said that while Canada was not getting as many immigrants now as a year or so ago those who were now coming to Canada were of a good class. "Most of our immigrants now is from the British Isles," he added. "The advantage in having immigration from Great Britain is that the majority will settle in the country. Italians and other people from Southern Europe come and so, though the better class settle here. The number of immigrants coming in from Southern Europe at present is not large."

Few Scandinavians. "Are Scandinavians coming to Canada any numbers?" the reporter asked. "No. There is little immigration from there either to Canada or the States, and there has not been for years," said the doctor. "Years ago large numbers of Swedes, Norwegians and Danes came over to build up the western states. These countries do not have a large population and the surplus was soon drained off. Today they are among the most progressive agricultural countries in the world, and they have also developed important industries of other kinds, and are able to keep their people at home. Norway and Sweden develop the cheapest electric power in the world because of numerous water powers, and this has enabled them to develop their agriculture as well as manufacturing industries."

"So also with Germany. Years ago it sent hundreds of thousands of immigrants into the States. But the Bismarck policy has tended to keep the people at home, by developing the industrial life of the country. "Canada has a comparatively restricted field from which to draw immigrants. We have to look to the British Islands, Southern Europe and Russia."

HARBOR WORKS SATISFACTORY IN ST. JOHN

M. Valiquette, of Dominion Public Works Department, Inspecting the Contracts in Progress Here.

M. Valiquette, engineer of the Dominion Public Works Department, arrived in the city yesterday for the purpose of making an inspection of the harbor works in progress here. Speaking of the plans made by the Maritime Dredging Company to rush the work on the West Side this summer, Mr. Valiquette said they indicated that the company would leave no stone unturned to carry out its contract as soon as possible. "The new contractors have been held up in their plans to some extent so far, owing to some delay in closing up matters with Mr. Connolly. He added "but everything has been straightened out, and the new contractors will have a free hand to go ahead as fast as they can. The crib which has been lying off Navy Island all winter will be taken away by the new contractors and utilized to form one of the bulkhead cribs. It will probably be moved next Tuesday."

METROPOLITAN WORKERS TO CONTINUE TEAMS AT BANQUET IN BOND'S, LAST EVENING—APPOINT COMMITTEE TO ADVISE ARMY.

It was a jovial and contented gathering that assembled last evening in Bond's restaurant when the losing teams in the Metropole campaign tendered a supper to the winning team. W. E. East presided and forty-five or fifty men were in attendance. A dainty array of dishes was served the workers, and this was followed by speeches and appropriate toasts laid during which the earnest and untiring efforts of those who had assisted in raising the money was referred to in glowing terms.

The following resolution was passed at the meeting: "It is moved that Team No. 1 do not disband, but that the soliciting of further subscriptions to complete the $20,000 be left stand over until the first Wednesday in October, 1914; and that the teams set apart that day to obtain subscriptions sufficient to bring the amount up to $20,000; "It is further moved that the other nine teams be requested not to disband, but combine with Team No. 1 to complete the subscription from the citizens proposed and set out to do. In the interim any voluntary subscriptions will be thankfully received."

Second Resolution. This resolution was moved by J. M. Quince and seconded by C. H. List. In the interests of the workers and those who so generously subscribed to the Metropole campaign fund the following resolution was passed endorsing the creation of a citizens committee to act with the Salvation Army and the other all interested in the successful management of the new Metropole, should from time to time be appointed to confer with the Salvation Army authorities touching same; and "Whereas, Major Moore expressed a desire to obtain the best possible general administration thereof; Be it therefore moved, That Team No. 1 puts itself on record as strongly endorsing the action of the five citizens of the city of St. John, appointed by the executive of the citizens committee to act as such advisory committee, and urge that the question of the fire insurance to be carried on the new Metropole, be carefully considered hereafter publish reports of its work in the city's newspapers during the months of May, and November in each year."

Instructive Addresses. The evening at Bond's was opened last night with grace by Rev. Gordon Dickie, and this was immediately followed by supper, which was nicely prepared. The King was the first toast proposed, and was responded to with musical honors. Dr. Anglin was then heard in a comprehensive and interesting address on community and social work. Fred McKean rendered a vocal solo.

Adjutant Cummings was called upon to speak a few words and briefly explained the stand of the Army officials with respect to whom they should take in. The home was open to the inspection of the public at any time, all the work, he said, is above board. A very valuable address was given by A. M. Belding, who touched upon community work, and told of the various ways which would lead to a solution of the social problem and the improvement of conditions generally. A vocal solo was rendered by How Walker, with D. Arnold Fox accompanying him. A. C. Smith was also heard in a vocal solo. Rev. Gordon Dickie was heard in a splendid address in which he spoke of the value of working together as a body, and explained what could be accomplished and what results obtained if social workers would only unite in their efforts and be willing to sacrifice their own ends in order to improve and better the conditions of others. Commissioner Coombs gave a brief address, and others also spoke.

THE ADVENTURES OF KATHLYN

By HAROLD MAC GRATH.

"The Holy Man was about to assume a squatting posture in the center of the court when from out of the sarcophagus arose laughingly a form shrouded in white."

"Kathlyn forgave them and could have wept for them. She had made a god for them, and they fell down and worshiped it."

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS

Kathlyn Hare believes her father, Col. Hare, to be in dire peril in Allah, a principality of India. The King of Allah has recently died, and because the Colonel had once saved his life he names him as his successor. Umballah, pretender to the throne of Allah, loves Kathlyn and has forged a message summoning her to her father, whom he has thrown into prison. She leaves her home in California to go to him.

On her arrival in Allah she is informed by Umballah that her father is dead and that she is the queen. An elaborate durbar is arranged, the central figure of which is Kathlyn, protesting and grief-stricken. When the crown is placed upon her head Umballah announces that she is to be married to him forthwith. Her refusal infuriates him, but as Kathlyn's beauty and spirit have made a strong appeal to the people he yields the joint for the time being. A priest announces that no woman may rule unmarried with the laws of the state she will be given seven days to decide.

When Kathlyn reiterates at the expiration of the week of grace, her refusal to marry Umballah she receives sentence from the supreme tribunal that she is to undergo two ordeals with wild beasts. If she survives, she is to be permitted to rule without hindrance.

Through the pluck and resourcefulness of John Bruce, an American and fellow passenger on the boat which brought Kathlyn to Allah, and who has come to her assistance, she escapes unharmed from two ordeals. With Bruce she flees from Allah. The elephant which carries her becomes frightened and runs away, separating her from Bruce and the rest of the party. After a ride filled with peril she reaches what she believes is a haven.

CHAPTER VI. THE TEMPLE OF THE LION.

IN the blue of night the temple looked as though it had been sculptured out of mist. Here and there the heavy fens, touched by the moon lances, flung back flames of sapphire, cold and sharp. To Kathlyn the temple was of marvelous beauty. She urged Rajah toward the crumbling portico. It was a temple in ruins, like many in Hind. Broken pillars, exquisitely carved, lay about, and some of the tall windows of marble lace were punctured, as if the fist of some angry god had beaten through. Under the decayed portico stood an iron brazier. Near this reposed a cracked stone sarcophagus; an unusual sight in this part of the world. It was without its lid. But one god now brooded hereabouts—Silence. Not a sound anywhere, not even from the near by trees. She saw a noiseless lizard slide jerkily across a patch of moonshine and dissolve into the purple shadow beyond.

What was this temple? What gods had been worshipped here? And why was it deserted? She had heard her father tell of the ruined city of Chitor, Rajah? . . . Kathlyn shuddered. Sometimes villages to the last soul in them, were brushed from existence and known no more to man. And this might be one of them. Yet indications of a village were nowhere to be seen. It was merely a temple, perhaps miles from the nearest village, deserted save by prowling wild beasts, the winds, the sunshine, and the moonshine. She looked far and wide for any signs of human habitation.

She commanded Rajah to kneel. So held by the enchanted picture was Kathlyn that the elephant's renewed restlessness (and he had reason, as will be seen) passed unobserved by her. He came to kneel, however, and she got out of the howdah. Her legs trembled for a space, for her nerves were in a pitiable condition. Suddenly Rajah's ears went forward, he rose, and his trunk curled angrily. With a whiff he wheeled and shuffled off toward the jungle out of which he had so recently emerged.

"Halt!" cried Kathlyn. What had he heard? What had he seen? "Halt!" But even as she called the tall grass closed in behind the elephant. What water and food she had disappeared with him.

She paused by the brazier, catching hold of it for support. She laughed hysterically; it was so funny; it was all so out of joint with real things, with everyday life as she had known it. Weird laughter returned to mock her astonished ears, a sinister echo. And then she laughed at the echo, being in the grip of a species of madness. In the purple cavern of the temple she suddenly became conscious of another presence. A flash of moonlight striking two chrysoberyls took the madness out of her mind. This forsaken temple was the haunt of a leopard or a tiger.

She was lost. That magnetism which ordinarily was hers was at its nadir. She hesitated for a second, then, climbed into the empty sarcophagus, crouching low. Strangely enough, as she did so a calm fell upon her; all the terrors of her position dropped away from her as mist from the mountain peaks. She had, however, gotten into the hiding place none too soon.

She heard the familiar pad-pad, the whiff-whiff of a big cat. Immediately into the moonlight came an African lion, as out of place here as Kathlyn herself, his tail slashed, there was a long, black streak from his mane to his tail where the hair had risen. Kathlyn crouched even lower. The lion trotted round the sarcophagus, sniffing. Presently he lifted his head and roared. The echoes played battle-drum and shuttlecock with the sound. The lion roared again, this time at the insulting echoes. For a few minutes the noise was deafening. A rumble of another had stepped into this wearied flesh of hers and now directed its physical manifestations, while her own spirit stood gratefully and passively aloof. Nothing could happen now; the world had grown still and calm. The priest drew the sleeves of the robe snugly about her arms and laid Kathlyn's head upon them and drew her down into a profound slumber.

Half a mile to the north of the ruined temple there lay, all unsuspected by Kathlyn, a village—a village belonging solely to the poor, mostly ryots or tillers of the soil. The poor in Asia know but two periods of time, for rarely do they possess such a thing as a watch or a clock; sunset and sunrise. Perhaps the man of the family may sit awhile at dusk on his mud doorill, with his bubbling water pipe (if he has one), and watch the stars slowly swing across the arch. A pinch of very bad tobacco is slowly consumed; then he enters the hut, flings himself upon his matting (perhaps a cotton rug, more likely a bundle of woven water reeds), and sleeps. No one wakes him; habit rouses him at dawn. He scrubs his teeth with a fibrous stick. It is a part of his religious belief to keep his teeth clean. The East Indian (Hindu or Mohammedan) has the whitest, soundest teeth in the world if the belief is but temperately used.

Beyond this village lay a ruined city, now inhabited by cobras and slinking jackals. Dawn. A few dung fires smoldered. From the doorway of one of the mud huts came a lean man, his naked torso streaked with wet ashes, his matted hair hanging in knots and tangles on his emaciated shoulders. His aspect was exceedingly filthy; he was a Holy Man, which in this mad country signifies physical debasement, patience, and fortitude such as would have adorned any other use. A human hamper, sticking himself always at the thin and moscer board of the poor, a vile parasite, but holy!

The Holy Man directed his steps to the narrow, beaten pathway which led to the temple, where, every morning, he performed certain rites which the poor, benighted ryots believed would some day restore the ruined city and the prosperity which attends fat harvests. The Holy Man had solemnly declared that it would take no less than ten years to bring about this miracle. And the villagers fell down with their foreheads in the dust. He was a Brahmin; the caste string hung about his neck; he was indeed holy, he who could have dwelt on the fat of the land in maharajah's courts. The least that can be said is that he performed his duties scrupulously.

So, then, the red rim of the March sun shouldered up above the rolling jungle as he came into the beaten clay court, which fronted the temple. The lion stalked only at night, rarely appearing in the day-time. Once a month he was given a bullock, for he kept tiger and leopard away, and the villagers dwelt in peace. The lion had escaped from Allah, where he had taken up his abode in the temple there had been fewer thefts from the cattle sheds.

The Holy Man was about to assume his squatting posture in the center of the court, as usual, when from out of the sarcophagus rose laughingly a form, shrouded in white. The form stretched its lovely arms, white as alabaster, and presently the hands rubbed a pair of sleepy eyes. Then the form sat down within the sarcophagus, laid its arms on the rim, and wearily hid its face in them.

The watcher was the most dumfounded Holy Man in all India. For the first time in his hypocritical life he found faith in himself, in his periclitous rite. He had conjured up yonder spirit, unaided, alone. He roared and never a Holy Man ran faster. When he arrived, panting and voiceless, at the village well, where native were coming and going with their water pots and jars and copper vessels, he fell upon his face, rose to his knees, and poured handfuls of dust upon his head.

"Al! al!" he called. "It is almost done, my children; the first sign has come from the gods. I have brought you in human form from the ancient priestesses! And he really believed he had. "O, my children, my little ones, my kids! I have brought her who will restore the city as of old, the fat corn, the plenitude of fruit. Since the coming of the lion two rains ago the leopard and the striped one have forsaken their lairs. One bullock a month is better than fire, together with the kids and the children. Al! More dust."

Naturally the villagers set down their water skins and jars and copper vessels and flocked about this exceptional Holy Man. They wanted to believe him, but for years nothing had happened but the advent of the lion, whence no one exactly knew, though the Holy Man had not been backward in claiming it was due to his nearness to the god Vishnu. They followed him eagerly to the temple. What they beheld transfixed them. A woman with skin like the petals of the lotus and hair like corn sat in the sacred sarcophagus and braided her hair, gazing the while toward the bright sun.

The intake of many breaths produced a sound. Kathlyn turned instantly toward this sound, for a moment expecting the return of the lion. Immediately Holy Man and villagers threw themselves upon the ground, striking their foreheads against the damp clay. The alien spirit still ruled the substance; Kathlyn eyed them in mild astonishment, not at all alarmed.

"Al!" shrilled the Holy Man, springing to his feet. "Al! She is our ancient priestess, rising from her tomb of centuries! Al! al! O, thou unholy children, to doubt my word! Behold! Henceforth she shall share the temple with the lion, and later she will give us prosperity, and my name shall ever be in your households."

Having secured a priestess, he was now determined that he should not lose her. The future was rosy indeed, and when he took his next pilgrimage to holy Benares they would bestow his pathway with lotus flowers.

"Wood to start the sacred fires!" he commanded. The villagers flew to obey his orders. He was indeed a Holy Man. Not in the memory of the oldest had a miracle such as this happened. Upon their return with wood and embers the Holy Man built the fire, handing a lighted torch to Kathlyn and snuffing for her to touch the tinder. The flames began to crackle the villagers prostrated themselves again, and the Holy Man besmeared his body chest with more ashes.

A second Holy Man appeared upon the scene, wanting in breath. His jaw dropped and his eyes started to leave their sockets. Knowing his ilk so thoroughly well, he flung himself down before the brazier and beat his forehead upon the ground; not in any chastened spirit, but because he had over slept that morning. This glory might have been his! Al! al!

Later the two conferred. They decided that they should guard the priestess, because, having taken human form, she might some day die of this particular temple. At night she would be well guarded by the lion.

Several awe-stricken women came forward with bowls of cooked rice and fruits and a new copper drinking vessel. These they reverently placed at Kathlyn's feet.

Gradually the spirit which had comforted Kathlyn withdrew, and at length Kathlyn became keenly alive. It entered her mind clearly that these poor, foolish people really believed her a celestial being, and so long as they laid no hand upon her she was not alarmed. She had recently passed through too many terrors to be disturbed by a bit of kindness, even if stirred into being by a religious fanaticism.

Kathlyn ate.

By pairs the villagers departed, and soon none remained save her self-appointed guardians, the two Holy Men. Kathlyn felt a desire to explore this wonderful temple. She discovered what must have been the inner shrine. The chamber was filled with idols; here and there a bit of gold leaf, centuries old, glistened upon the bronze, the clay, the wood. The caste mark on the largest idol's head was a polished rub, overlooked doubtless during the looting. She swept the dust from the jewel with the tip of her finger, and she hurried back to the brazier. Vaguely she comprehended that she must keep the fire replenished from time to time in order to pacify the two Holy Men. At night it would fend off any approach of the lion.

Where was Bruce? Would he ever find her? That philosophy which she had inherited from her father, that quiet acceptance of the inevitable, was the one thing which carried her through her trials unscathed. An ordinary woman would have died from mere exhaustion.

Bruce, indeed! At that very moment he was rushing out of the Kumar's presence, wild to be off to the road to Allah, since Kathlyn had not been seen upon it. He found where Rajah had veered off into the jungle again, and followed the trail tirelessly, but it was to be his misfortune always to arrive too late.

To Kathlyn the day passed with nothing more than the curiosity of the natives to disturb her. They brought the cotton blankets which she arranged in the sarcophagus. There were worse beds in the world than this; at least it shielded her from the bitter night wind.

She ate again at sundown and bulled high the sacred fire and tried to plan some manner of escape; for she did not propose to be a demi-goddess any longer than was necessary. From Pundita she had learned many words and a few phrases in Hindustani, and she ventured to speak them to the Holy Men, who seemed quite delighted. They could understand her, but she on her part could make little or nothing of their jabbering. Nevertheless, she pretended.

Finally the Holy Men departed, after having indicated the sacred fire and the wood beside it. This fire pleased Kathlyn mightily. While it burned brightly the lion would not prow in her immediate vicinity. She wondered where this huge cat had come from, since she knew her natural history well enough to know the African lions did not inhabit this part of the globe. Doubtless it had escaped from some private menagerie.

The fire, then, giving her confidence, she did not get into the sarcophagus, but wandered about, building in her fancy the temple as it had stood in its prime. The ceilings had been magnificently carved, no two subjects alike; and the walls were of marble and Jasper and porphyry. A magic continent this Asia in its heyday. When her forefathers had been rude barbarians, sailing the north seas or sacrificing in Druidical rites, there had been art and culture here such as has never been surpassed. India, of splendid pageants, or brave warriors and gallant kings! Alas, how the mighty had fallen! About her penury, meanness, hypocrisy, uncleanness, thievery, and unbridled passions. . . . What was that? Her heart missed a beat. That pad-pad; that sniffing noise!

She whirled about, knocking over an idol. It came down with a crash and, being of clay, lay in shards in her feet. (Unfortunately it was the body of holes in this temple.) How she gained the shelter of the sarcophagus she never knew, but gain it she did, and covered down within. She could hear the best trotting round and round, sniffing and rumbling in his throat. Then the roaring of the preceding night was repeated. The old fellow evidently could not find those other lions who roared back at him so valiantly. Evidently he had no terrors for him. For an hour or more he patrolled the portico, and all this time Kathlyn did not stir, hardly daring to breathe for fear he might undertake to peer into the sarcophagus.

Silence. A low roar from the inner shrine told her that for the present she was safe. Tomorrow she must fly, whether it did not matter. Toward 4 o'clock she fell into a doze and was finally awakened by the sound of a voice in anger.

Poor sheep! They had discovered the shattered idol. It did not matter at all that the return of their ancient goddess was to bring back prosperity. She had broken their favorite idol. Damnation would come in a devil's wind that night.

The Holy Man who had missed the chance of claiming the miraculous appearance of Kathlyn as a work of his own saw an opportunity to rehabilitate himself in the eyes of those who had made his holiness a comfortable existence. With a piece of the idol in his hand, he roused Kathlyn and shook the clay before her face, jabbering violently. Kathlyn understood readily enough. She had unwittingly committed a sacrilege.

The natives gathered about and menaced her. Kathlyn rose, standing in the sarcophagus, and extended her hands for silence. She was frightened, but it would never do to let them see it. What Hinduist she knew would in this case be of no manner of use. But we human beings can, by facial expression and gesture, make known our messages with understandable clearness. From her gestures, then, the Holy Men gathered that she could re-create the god. She pointed toward the sun and counted on her fingers.

The premier Holy Man, satisfied that he understood Kathlyn's gestures, turned to the justly angered villagers and explained that with his aid their priestess would, in five days, re-create Vishnu in all his beauty. Instantly the villagers prostrated themselves.

"Four things!" murmured Kathlyn. The Holy Men sent the natives away, for it was not meet that they should witness magic in the making. They then squatted in the clay court, and curiously waited for her to begin. There was well in the inner shrine. To this she went with caution. The lion was evidently foraging in the jungle. Kathlyn filled the copper vessel with water and returned. Next, she gathered up what pieces of the idol she could find and placed them together. Here was her model. She then approached one of the fakirs and signified that she had need of his knife. He demurred at first, but at length consented to part with it. She dug up a square piece of clay. In fine, she felt more like the Kathlyn of old than she had since completing the leopard in her outdoor studio. It occupied her thoughts, at least part of them, for she realized that mayhap her life depended upon her skill in reproducing the hideous idol.

As the two old hypocrites saw the clay take form and shape and the mocking face gradually appear, they were assured that Kathlyn was indeed the ancient priestess; and deep down in their souls they experienced something of the awe they had often inspired in the poor, trusting ryot.

Kathlyn had talent bordering on genius. The idol was an exact replica of the original one; more, there was a subtle beauty now, where before there had been a frank repulsiveness. It satisfied the Holy Men, and the unveiling was greeted by the villagers with such joy that Kathlyn forgave them and could have wept over them. She had made a god for them, and they fell down and worshiped it.

Five more days passed. On the afternoon of the fifth day Kathlyn was feeding the fire. The Holy Men sat in the court at their devotions, which consisted in merely remaining motionless. Kathlyn turned from the fire to see them rise and flee in terror. She in turn fled, for the lion stood between her and the sarcophagus! The lion paused, lashing his tail. The many recent commotions within and without the temple had finally roused his ire. He hesitated between the Holy Men and Kathlyn, and finally concluded that she in the fluttering robes would be the most desirable.

There was no particular hurry; besides, he was not hungry. The cat in him wanted to play. He looked at Kathlyn easily. At any time he chose a few swift bounds would bring him to her side.

Beyond the temple lay the same stream by which miles away, Kathlyn had seen the funeral pyre and about which she had had so weird a fantasy. If this stream was deep there was a chance for life. (Continued next Saturday.)

News of the Churches

BAPTIST

We note that in the live and well-known magazine issued by the Baptist Union of Ireland, the Rev. J. D. Gilmore, claims St. Patrick as the first Irish Baptist. Without going back so far into the misty past, however, it is interesting to note that the century under review by no means covers Irish Baptist history. One hundred and fifty years before the formation of the Baptist Irish Society there were a number of strong, self-supporting Baptist Churches in Ireland, some of them dating back to the Commonwealth time. The Rev. Hugh D. Brown's Church in Dublin was formed in 1649, and that in Waterford in 1650. When John Wesley went over to Ireland he found a strong Baptist Church in Cork; indeed, that was the only one whose pulpit he was allowed to occupy.

In this case Home Rule has been entirely justified by the results. When Mr. Saffrey paid his visit to Ireland in 1813 he found five Baptist churches there, feeble in numbers and weaker still in influence. In 1858 these had increased to twenty-two, with a membership of 1,698. Today there are forty churches in the Baptist Union of Ireland, with a membership of 2,390.

A minister in Connecticut recently lost his watch. After searching for it vainly for several days, he found it in the pocket of another suit of clothes. This is a warning to all suit-brothers to have more than one suit.

The late Rev. Richard O. Sherwood, of Antelope, Massachusetts, beloved of Baptists in the State, was the original hero of a good story which has been told of many localities. He was spending a vacation in Maine. One day the deacon of a church not far from his boarding place asked him to preach the next Sunday morning. When that readiness for service for which he was distinguished he consented. On reaching the church he found a little old house, dilapidated and dirty inside and out; stove rusty, pipe falling down, and a general air of decay and neglect. He preached to the few people who had gathered in the house, and he noticed in the entrance a box marked, "Offerings for the support of the church." So he dropped in a half a dollar. As he was going back the deacon said: "Oh, I almost forgot. Our rule is that the preacher shall take the offerings that are put in the box. So he went to the box and took out and handed to Mr. Sherwood the fifty-cent piece he had just put in. His little girl, who was with him, stepped slightly across the fields by his side for a while, and then, looking up, said seriously, "Papa, if you had put more in you would have had a lot more wouldn't you?" The story has many applications.

Rev. Dr. Hutchison of Main street church baptised Easter Sunday evening twenty-eight converts as partial results of special meetings recently held.

Rev. W. Camp gave the hand of fellowship to twenty-five on Easter Sunday evening, sixteen of whom have recently been baptised.

Rev. B. H. Nobles, of Victoria street church, has been baptising every Sunday for the last two months. Between sixty and seventy have thus far been received into the church.

The Home Mission Board met in St. John this week. Rev. Deacon, pastor of the Tabernacle church, and Rev. Mr. Piper of Whiteville, were present as visitors. Rev. W. E. Piper has just made a visit to the St. Andrew's field where he preached on Easter Sunday most acceptably. Mr. Piper may decide to go to East Point, P. E. I. He is a thoughtful preacher and a sympathetic pastor.

Rev. S. W. Schurman has accepted a call to the Hillsboro Baptist church, Albert County. The salary is $1,000 and parsonage.

Rev. J. H. McDonald, D. D., the new editor of the Maritime Baptist, will make his "bow" in the next issue. He comes to his work supported by the good-will and prayers of the entire constituency. Rev. Dr. Crowell, who for the last ten months has so ably edited the paper, retires from a difficult task with the best wishes and warmest appreciation of the many readers of the Maritime Baptist.

The Alma and Waterside churches of Albert County have unanimously asked Rev. T. B. Westmore, pastor of the Apohaqui, Millstream and Snider Mountain group to become their pastor. It is expected that he will go.

Rev. Dr. Cousins of Newcastle, Northumberland County, has received and accepted a call to the Antecosta Baptist church of Washington, D. C. Dr. Cousins has done a good work on

What the Women's Institutes Aim to Accomplish for The Women of New Brunswick

THE Women's department of the Standard is conducted by Miss Hazel Winter of Fredericton, supervisor of the Women's Institute of New Brunswick, and all matter for publication in this page must be submitted to Miss Winter for approval.

THE objects of Women's Institutes are to help that housekeeper to make her home attractive, healthful and beautiful; to promote social intercourse; to learn how to better care for the sick and to give the best education to the growing child; to encourage the young people on the farm to study these subjects which are most useful to country life; to study the selection and preparation of food from an economical and nutritive standpoint; to economize labor, in all which goes to help the mother and daughters to live the healthiest and fullest lives possible under the conditions which surround them.

The motto adopted by the Women's Institutes throughout the Dominion is "for home and country." Subjects of a political or sectarian nature are not discussed—the institute is non-sectarian and non-partisan and is carried on for the good of the community. This branch of the departmental work is under the regular charge and direct control of Miss Hazel E. Winter, of Fredericton, who was appointed by the Government, as Supervisor, January, 1912. Miss Winter devotes her entire time to the Institutes. The secretaries send her monthly reports of their meetings and Miss Winter is always willing to assist in preparing programs for the year and to help any member anxious to obtain material in the preparation of a paper.

Organization. In June, 1911, two lady speakers were sent out to organize for the first time in the history of New Brunswick what is known as "Women's Institutes." An organization which stands for industry, conservation of energy, intellectual advancement, health, respectability, social intercourse, for high standards of living, public-spirited citizenship, and all that is good and true, is bound to live, and as a result of New Brunswick's first trial sixteen organizations were formed. During the following months some of these affiliated, while others, through lack of a leader or for other reasons, failed to exist, but those living proved to be a power for good to the individual and the community.

Again in August, 1912, existing institutes were visited and new societies were formed. The field work of these ladies sent by the department increased the branches in number to twenty-five. These, with the exception of two which do not exist, the field work accomplished last fall has shown that the Women's Institute is an organization that has come to stay. There are many women's organizations, but none which so ably meet the needs of the women and justify the name of the Women's Institute. The advantage of the Institute, and the deep appreciation on the part of the members, is that it is a substantial sum and the work is yet in its infancy as compared with Ontario, the work in New Brunswick is rapidly coming to the front and has indeed a very important part to play in the lives of New Brunswick homemakers.

GOVERNMENT HAS COME TO THEIR ASSISTANCE

Not until within the last year has it been possible to obtain much money from the government for institute work. Being a new society, they were somewhat at a disadvantage, but after being shown what ambitious and intellectual women our Province has, the government readily set aside a substantial sum and the Department of Agriculture was then in a better position to aid the women. A grant of five dollars was made to each branch having a paid-up membership of at least fifteen, and all branches were provided with minute books, report forms, and books and literature sent out from the Department.

Annual Convention. Last February a Convention was held at Fredericton, which resulted in a large gathering of women from every part of the province. The Convention was a success in every sense of the word and the women were eager to return to their respective localities and tell their fellow-workers how the local institute could be made a greater influence for good. The second Annual Convention will be held in Fredericton, May 26, 27 and 28. On Thursday, morning, May 28, the delegates will enjoy a trip to the Dominion Experimental Farm and the evening of the same day the Fredericton

Last Fall's Field Work.

The months of September, October and November of 1913 were devoted to field work. It is a recognized fact that more good can be done by visiting the different institutes than in any other way, and it has become a custom for lady lecturers to be sent out once a year to visit the many localities where institutes are in existence. Four ladies, including an organizer, lecturer, demonstrator in Household Science and a demonstrator in Home Nursing, were sent out at the time above mentioned, visiting in all fifty-one places and effecting organizations at eighteen new places. There are at the present time forty-one branches of Women's Institutes in New Brunswick, with a membership of one thousand.

WILL BE REPRESENTED AT ST. JOHN EXHIBITION

Last September at the Fredericton Exhibition, four rooms comprising the Kitchen, Dining-room, Bed-room and Ladies' Rest Rooms were provided for the Women's Institutes. Demonstrations were given each day along nursing and cooking lines, which were much enjoyed and proved very instructive to the many visitors. It is the intention of the department to have a Ladies' Rest Room at the St. John Exhibition this fall.

Women's Institute Literature. Bulletins have been printed and distributed among the members on "Making Homes Attractive," "Value of Fruits in the Household," and "Child-rearing." Any wishing copies may have them by writing the Supervisor. During the year more are to be printed along lines of special interest to all homemakers.

Part of the funds this year have been spent on a library for the many branches. All institutes having regular meetings will be given six books dealing with subjects of Household Economy and Domestic Science and other questions particularly relating to the home, thus encouraging the different branches to start a library of their own. These books are to be given to the delegates representing the different institutes at the Convention in May. To further encourage the institutes to work for a library, the department has made arrangements with the publishing house of which the institutes may from their own funds add books to their libraries from time to time, through the department at a discount, the orders for such books to be sent in from the department and the books sent direct to the institutes.

Programmes.

The readers of this page can readily see that the department of Agriculture is giving and is prepared to give special attention to the development and extending of Women's Institute work. The work has grown steadily since its organization. The subjects taken up at the meetings are such as bear directly upon every day activities of the women and cannot but be of great assistance to those who take advantage of its meetings. The majority of institutes now make definite plans for meetings, months in advance and get out printed programmes. This is a decided step in advance and gives a publicity and definiteness of purpose to the work which cannot be secured otherwise.

The following is the programme of the Clifton Branch of the New Brunswick Women's Institute. It will give one an idea of the range of subjects dealt with:

- September—Lecture on interior decoration of homes, Miss Louise Wetmore.
- October—Suggestions for knitting. Best wool to use, Mrs. L. A. Wetmore. How to can fruit and vegetables, Mrs. Adela Wetmore.
- November—Ladies from headquarters.
- December—Suggestions from all for Christmas gifts, decorations, cooking and candy.
- January—Talk on Parliamentary Law and usage. The correct way to conduct a business meeting.
- February—Open meeting and entertainment.
- March—Rug and carpet making, Miss Adela Wetmore.
- April—Suggestions from all for systematizing house work. Discussion of labor-saving devices.
- May—Paper on the fly peril, Mrs. N. N. Puddington. The kitchen garden. Preparing of dainty side-dishes and salads. Discussion by members.
- June—Paper on noted women of New Brunswick and what they are doing.
- July—Talk on social settlement work in New York, Miss Daisy E. Harrison.
- August—Tea, concert and sale.

AIMS TO DEVELOPE DEEPER LOVE FOR HOME

One may ask the question, "In what way have the communities, towns and cities where organizations have been formed, been benefited by the Women's Institute?" Answer—Circulating Libraries; building and repairing public halls as well as furnishing them; suppressing the sale of cigarettes and tobacco to minors; improving parks and schools; presenting the schools with flags, drinking cups, etc.,

So that you may use less flour, we do what a home cook would do if she were in our place.

From every shipment of wheat delivered at our mills we take a ten pound sample. We grind this into flour. Bread is baked from the flour.

We find that some samples make more bread and better bread than others. So we keep the shipment from which the more and better bread comes. The others we sell.

You save money by using flour that bears this name. And you get better bread.

Winnipeg, Canada.—"Eleven years ago I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth. The doctors said it was a tumor and could not be removed as it would cause instant death. AC Convention

To the Hon. J. E. Canon, Minister of Agriculture and Roads, Quebec, P. Q.

The following is a report of the cultural convention at West at which I assisted held recently. The delegates who took part in the discussion of the various subjects brought up at the meetings were well-known authorities in their respective fields.

In his report Mr. Hamilton, treasurer of the Association, recommended that the work (outside teaching) by cultural colleges, also the of agriculture in rural schools, should upon the necessary knowledge in each locality a better local organization than those now existing in the United States. These local organizations would always be helpful to the work of the local Agricultural Teaching in the Schools.

This is recommended by all agriculturists. Mr. G. C. Creelman, president of the Agricultural College, Quebec, Ontario, stated that the "ing" would not be of much use to the teachers attended an agricultural college for at least three months of the year. They should be able to make their teaching available to their pupils. Heretofore the teachers have had to depend upon the subjects from the books by Dr. Mills and Mr. C. E. Jones. The results have not been satisfactory.

Domestic Science. Four or five of the delegates highly of what had been done in regard to the provincial Farmers of Ontario after the work done elsewhere, at the same time had no official report of the Province of Quebec. No the audience to be left under the impression that we neglected the subject. I informed Mrs. Parsons that such a report could be obtained out of the slight difficulty. The province has more home schools than any other in the Dominion; and the reports of the progress of these institutions should be published every year.

Rural Population. Speaking of the farmers' and daughters, Mr. W. J. K. Iowa deplored the fact that the number of the young people who had left the country for the cities was increasing. According to the statement half the farmers' church-going, and one of the delegates declared that in Oregon there was as much as one Sunday as on a week. Kennedy wished that the number of the young people who were gone every day of the year.

In the course of the discussion that a large number of Canadians were established in the state of Vermont on farms in the neighborhood of the border. From this state it is said that they would form the majority of the inhabitants in several of the

AGRICULTURE

Convention Of Farmers Institute Workers Held At Washington

To the Hon. J. E. Carson, Minister of Agriculture and Public Roads, Quebec, P. Q.

The following is a report of Agricultural Convention at Washington, at which I assisted held recently. The delegates who took part in the discussion of the various subjects brought up at the meetings were men who are well-known authorities on agriculture.

In his report Mr. Hamilton, the treasurer of the Association of Agriculturalists, recommended extending work (outside teaching) by the agricultural colleges, also the teaching of agriculture in rural schools. He insisted upon the necessity of having in each locality a better local organization than those now existing in the United States. These local organizations he considered absolutely necessary, under whatever name they might be called—farmers clubs, cooperative societies or educational clubs. Such organizations would always be found helpful to the work of the Association.

Agricultural Teaching in the Primary Schools.
This is recommended by all agriculturalists. Mr. G. C. Crasman, President of the Agricultural College at Guelph, Ontario, stated that this teaching would not be of much use unless the teachers attended an agricultural college for at least three months during the year. They should visit the stables, sheep-folds, poultry-houses, etc., and should have thoroughly practical instruction in agriculture before they can make their teaching acceptable to their pupils. Heretofore they have got a theoretical knowledge of the subjects from the books published by Dr. Mills and Mr. C. James, but the results have not been found satisfactory.

Domestic Science.
Four or five of the delegates spoke highly of what had been done in this regard in the other provinces. Mrs. Parsons of Ontario after speaking of the work done elsewhere, stated that she had no official report of the work done by the housekeeping schools in the Province of Quebec. Not wishing the audience to be left under the impression that we neglected this subject, she stated that such a report could be obtained without the slightest difficulty; that this province has more housekeeping schools than any other in the federation; and the reports of the directresses of these institutions are published every year.

Rural Population.
Speaking of the farmers' wives, sons and daughters, Mr. W. J. Kennedy of Iowa deplored the fact that a great number of the young people had abandoned the country for the towns. He attributed this desertion principally to the bad state of the schools and rural churches. According to his statement half the farmers were not church-going, and one of the delegates declared that in the state of Oregon there was as much work done on Sunday as on a week-day. Mr. Kennedy wished that the churches were open every day of the week.

In the course of the discussion it was learned that a large number of French Canadians were established in the state of Vermont on farms in the neighborhood of the border. The delegate from this state said that before long they would form the majority of the inhabitants in several of these localities; but he expressed to state that many of them were raising no crop but hay and were neglecting their land and letting it run out.

Extension Work.
At a meeting of professors from the agricultural schools and the directors of the agricultural experiment stations, the president, Mr. Jenkins of Connecticut, dwelt especially upon the utility of extension teaching by the colleges.

Co-operation.
The next speaker was the secretary of the Commission sent by the Government to study the work of the cooperative societies in Europe. The report of this Commission, which covers more than 2000 pages, is now in the printers' hands. The Commission visited several European countries, among others Denmark, Germany and Italy. Without touching upon the report, the secretary improved the opportunity to speak in an eloquent manner of the advantages of co-operation. He declared that without it we could not hope for the full development of agriculture. Co-operation was advantageous to both the producer and the consumer. In the United States the progress of co-operation had been very slow up to the present; in the west there were several co-operative societies in existence that had worked well, but in the east there had been several failures.

Marketing Farm Products.
On the following day Mr. Charles J. Brand of the Department spoke of the subject of marketing farm products. He recommended the organization of co-operative societies for this purpose. He thought the middleman should make a reasonable profit, but the producer certainly had reason to be dissatisfied when, in the majority of cases, he received about half the price paid by the consumer. The farmer was constantly being asked to increase his production, and maintain and increase the fertility of the soil. He was advised to buy animals best adapted for the production of milk and meat, to perfect the quality of his products, and to have the most modern buildings, abattoirs, markets, and the best appliances for preserving fruits and vegetables, milk and other products. Under-drainage and several other very expensive land improvements were also recommended for his consideration. Manual labor is dear, and the farmer cannot afford these improvements if he does not receive a more remunerative price for the products of his hard work.

The American Government is about to establish a station where the producers and consumers can obtain information with regard to buying and selling farm products. Department of Agriculture at Washington.

I visited several of the offices of the Department of Agriculture where nearly all the work is specialized. There are experts for all the agricultural industries and I am told that there are nearly 2000 employees in this department.

The Chief of the Tobacco Bureau told me that this plant should be fermented by stacking and not boxing. This is thought to be the only means of obtaining a uniform preparation of this plant. In boxing the fermentation is often defective, which causes mouldiness. In all the large warehouses there is a demand for fermentation by the stacking. Tobacco intended for the inside of cigars should be kept two years before being sold. When it is a year old, however, it can be fermented again and sold after this second fermentation.

Dairy Industry.
Mr. E. H. Rawl, Chief of this Division, is not altogether satisfied with the quality of the butter made in the United States. Some factories pasteurize this product, but this operation is not general enough. The United States does not export butter. The production has increased but not rapidly.

This country imports a large quantity of cream for the making of butter and ice cream, and on account of the tariff it is very probable that the sale of Canadian cream will be very considerably increased. There are about 3000 cheese factories in the United States. The production of Cheddar cheese is increasing slowly; the quality is very fair. When there are defects in this product they are generally caused by the bad quality of the milk brought to the factories. There is a good deal of Swiss cheese made and a little Camembert and Roquefort. A certain quantity of cheese is imported. The Department gives the strongest encouragement to the farmers to improve in every way the equipment of their milk factories. Farmers who are members of these societies pay annually one dollar or a dollar and a half towards the expenses of the association. The expert who controls the production is paid by the society. The legal standard for milk is that it should contain 3.4 per cent of fat. I met Mr. George M. Rommel. This officer is occupied chiefly in combating diseases of cattle, among others the Texas fever, which has made great ravages. For cattle feed, ensilage is strongly recommended. Forage crops are not cultivated to any extent, because it is more difficult to grow them than ensilage.

Lupines is not considered good for pasturage. It is used more especially for hay, also for ensilage, but rarely.

Our neighbors export a considerable quantity of bacon; they import very little. They prefer the English sort for the preparation of bacon. The bacon exported to England is not smoked; Danish and Irish bacon is prepared in the same way.

At the Bureau of Plant Industry I met Mr. Oakley, who spoke to me with regard to Lucerne. It has not been successful everywhere; it cultivation has increased in several parts of the north and south; in the east there have been several failures. This plant grows best on limestone land. It is considered much more difficult to raise than clover. When the crown of this plant is destroyed it will not sprout. It is hoped before long to have a variety in which the roots will form several crowns, so that the plant will continue to grow even when the principal crown is destroyed.

At the office of the Horticultural Department I met Mr. H. E. Gould, assistant pomologist. The production of apples is continually on the increase. The planting of apple trees every year is recommended. During the last few years a large number of new orchards have been planted, and it is thought that in a few years the production of apples will be much greater. Prices paid by consumers have increased, but the producers have not benefited in the same proportion. A large number of farmers have established warehouses for the storage of fruit. These are generally open at night and closed during the day. The irrigation of apple and fruit trees is spreading rapidly. The United States exports apples in considerable quantities. The number of canning factories for fruit and vegetables is continually on the increase. Several are owned by co-operative societies. They are of great service, especially when the yield is abundant.

ROBERT T. OULTON, THE LEADER OF CANADA'S SILVER BLACK FOX INDUSTRY

The Man who First Bred these Animals Successfully in Captivity.

The Story of Cherry Island Ranch and the Foxes which Made a World's Record at the London Fur Sales—Million Dollar Company Buys Oulton Foxes.

(Copyright, 1914, by A. M. Belding.)
 To come into personal touch with a man who was in at the birth of a new industry, or the discovery of a new source of wealth, and who saw it developed to proportions far beyond his wildest dreams, is a very interesting and noteworthy experience.
 If Robert T. Oulton had not lived, the problem of breeding black foxes in captivity, and indeed the problem of the world's fur supply might still have been unsolved. His success with Black Foxes placed that great industry on its feet, directed public attention to the possibilities of fur farming, and led to successful experiments in breeding other fur-bearing animals in captivity. It gave the Province of Prince Edward Island its greatest present and prospective source of wealth, and has added and is adding millions to the wealth of the other provinces.
 Up to the present time Mr. Oulton has not received due recognition for the work he has accomplished. He was the man who built on his own farm the first scientific black fox ranch, and fed and cared for the foxes, and demonstrated the possibility of breeding these animals in captivity year after year, but of improving the stock and making the venture financially a very profitable one. It is true that he was not alone, and that he was not the first to make the experiment; but it was his constant study and his constant care night and day at the ranch that won success for him and his partner, Mr. Charles Dalton, and blazed the way for all who followed.

Honor to Whom Honor is Due.

Let me insert just here an extract from a letter written last year to Mr. Oulton by Mr. D. H. MacGowan, now of New Westminster, B. C.; but formerly a well-known resident of Prince Edward Island, and a warm personal friend of the pioneer fox farmer. Mr. MacGowan wrote as follows:—

"The first chapter in the black fox industry has never been written and appears to be forgotten. Many years ago—I have no means of recalling the exact date—I was fishing from the stream below the waste-water at Ben Haywood's dam at Tignish, when a man came along with a horse and cart. He stopped and told me he had a young black fox he wanted to sell me. I inquired the price, which was the modest sum of $10. I told him I lived in Charlottetown and could not keep foxes there; and advised him to go to Haywood's, for I knew he had a kind of stockade behind some red foxes where he had kept some red foxes, but they had died and the stockade was empty. The man told me his pup was a male, but the man from whom he got him, over near the light house at North Cape, had a female also. I told him to be sure and tell me about it, for if he knew he could get the pair he would be more likely to buy the pup. He turned around and drove to Haywood's, and a man in a suit came back with a calf in his cart and a cow following the rig. He had got the cow and calf from Haywood in exchange for the pup. He had paid $25.00 for the female pup. He kept her for some years and finally sold her to Harry Leslie at Kensington for $75. and $125. respectively. The old mother fox died, because he got one to take her place the dog died from excess of fat. Charlie Dalton skinned him and took a ball of fat the size of a coconut off the inside of the skin. This ended Haywood's experiment, but it would never have been a success, because the pup was very fat and the surroundings too unnatural; but if he had possessed your knowledge and resourcefulness, he would have built a wire enclosure in a bush, not very far from his home, and would no doubt have succeeded in breeding them. Still, I question whether he would have bestowed the attention and care upon them that you did, and that is what made a splendid success of a doubtful experiment. You and I know that the business would have been if you had not done the lion's share of the work, planning and experimenting, making failures at times and profiting by the experience gained, until you finally made a success of it. I trust that, so far as the financial part of the business is concerned, you have no cause for complaint; but certainly, as far as the honor of founding a great new industry that has made Prince Edward Island famous is concerned, you appear to me not to have received the credit and praise that are justly yours."

The Cherry Island Ranch.

I have the story from the lips of Mr. Oulton himself. Years ago he moved from the old homestead at Little Shemogue, New Brunswick, to a new home in Prince Edward Island. Some years later he purchased Cherry Island, in Albert Bay, and set himself to the task of converting its hundred and seventy acres of wilderness into a home for himself and family. Both before and after he moved to Cherry Island he and Charles Dalton went together hunting every year. They kept hounds and hunted foxes. Though they killed many red ones, they never had the good fortune to shoot a black fox. They talked about them, however, and when on their expeditions and at many other times speculated upon the possibility of breeding black foxes in captivity. At last, when they had about made up their minds that the experiment should be tried, Mr. Oulton heard of a man named Gibbs who had a black fox for sale. He sent for Mr. Dalton and together they went after the fox. Mr. Oulton did the bargaining and bought the fox; but it was paid for with Mr. Dalton's money, as a result of which was not then so small a consideration with Mr. Oulton as it became in later years. Mr. Dalton took the fox to his home. This was his first black fox. Some time later, Mr. Oulton learned through a friend, Mr. Arthur Ritchie, who was engaged in lumbering operations in Gaspe, that a light-keeper on Anticosti was advertising two black foxes for sale. He at once notified Mr. Dalton, and suggested that if he desired to purchase the foxes it could be done through Mr. Ritchie. Mr. Dalton did so and the foxes arrived in due time by schooner in Summerside, and were taken to Mr. Dalton's home. This was in 1887.

Mr. Dalton's efforts to breed black foxes in captivity were, however, unsuccessful, and in 1894 he entered into a partnership with Mr. Oulton. The latter built the ranch on his farm on Cherry Island, in a cove of spruce and hardwood. It was about a hundred feet square, and often as he labored in the trench into which the wire must be sunk, to prevent the foxes from digging their way out, he asked himself if it were really worth while. The days were hot, the mosquitos very troublesome, the work hard, and the outcome problematical. But it was not in his nature to take the back trail, when once he had set out to accomplish a task; and so on his little island he toiled till the work was done. It was necessary to send to Montreal to get the kind of wire needed, and after it had been placed in the pen made for the foxes, Mr. Dalton, who had of course visited the place for the two never took any steps without consultation, and never had a dispute in their eighteen years of partnership) took down from his home to the ranch two pairs of black foxes, one of which he had secured in Morrell, and the other from Louis Spence of Bequeque. Up to this time no one had been successful in breeding the animals in captivity.

The Oulton-Dalton Partnership.

Since Mr. Dalton owned the two pairs of foxes with which the ranch was started, it was agreed that out of the first litter Mr. Dalton was to receive two more of the little foxes than Mr. Oulton, and the latter would then become owner of one of the original two pairs, and thereafter they would share and share alike. But it was also stipulated that Mr. Oulton must feed all the foxes at his own expense, and take care of them, while Mr. Dalton would attend to the marketing of the foxes. This agreement continued without a break until two years ago, when the partnership ended, and there was a division of the ranch, after the Cherry Island Ranch. But in addition to the partnership foxes, each partner after a few years made separate pens for some of his own foxes. Mr. Oulton on Cherry Island, and Mr. Dalton at his home in Tignish, where he established a ranch after the Cherry Island experiment had proved a success. Three years ago Mr. Oulton removed to his old home in Little Shemogue, where he established a ranch, and where he was breeding and selection, after an experience of nearly twenty years. At one time Mr. Oulton had two pairs of foxes of his own on Cherry Island, and there were sometimes fifteen pairs or more in the partnership ranch at one time. What this involved in the matter of earnest study, forethought, and care, in what was still to some extent the experimental stage of the new industry, may easily be imagined. But, as he says, he and Mr. Dalton always consulted each other before any new move was made, and ultimately success crowned their methods. When necessary, foxes were purchased, to prevent too much inbreeding, but only foxes of known value. Two were got in Nova Scotia. In the early days black pups were sometimes found in the litter of a red fox, when the den was discovered (terprising hunter; and later, when other ranches were successfully established, it was possible to get good stock that was raised in captivity. The partners never experimented with breeding, but they kept the strain pure, and of each litter only the best were retained from year to year for breeding purposes.

Some Early Experiences.

It was Mr. Oulton's task to learn by study of the foxes many things of which he had little or no knowledge at the outset. The first den or nest, were hollow logs brought to the ranch, but in time it was found that this custom of breeding mother was unnecessary, and the modern pen was eventually substituted. The problem of selecting the most suitable food for the animals had to be studied and solved. That the mother must not be disturbed at breeding time was a lesson to be learned by costly experience. That it was desirable to separate the male from the female at breeding time was another lesson. The experience of a breeder, not Mr. Oulton, in more recent years, may be cited as an illustration of the extreme care that must be exercised. This breeder neglected to remove the male before the female was mated, and was unwise enough to do it a day or two later. On the following day all the pups were dead. Mr. Oulton learned very early not to disturb the mother fox at breeding time, and also to discourage visits from strangers to the ranch at any time. Even his own sons did not know how many foxes were there, and both Mr. Oulton and Mr. Dalton discouraged all who tried to learn the nature and extent of the experiments on Cherry Island. The Island was nearly half a mile from the mainland and three-quarters of a mile from the wharf, and this ensured a degree of privacy for the experiment, although the situation made a good deal of boating necessary, as Mr. Oulton still carried on his farming operations and his children had to go back and forth to school on the mainland. While Mr. Dalton's efforts to breed black foxes in captivity were, however, unsuccessful, and in 1894 he entered into a partnership with Mr. Oulton. The latter built the ranch on his farm on Cherry Island, in a cove of spruce and hardwood. It was about a hundred feet square, and often as he labored in the trench into which the wire must be sunk, to prevent the foxes from digging their way out, he asked himself if it were really worth while. The days were hot, the mosquitos very troublesome, the work hard, and the outcome problematical. But it was not in his nature to take the back trail, when once he had set out to accomplish a task; and so on his little island he toiled till the work was done. It was necessary to send to Montreal to get the kind of wire needed, and after it had been placed in the pen made for the foxes, Mr. Dalton, who had of course visited the place for the two never took any steps without consultation, and never had a dispute in their eighteen years of partnership) took down from his home to the ranch two pairs of black foxes, one of which he had secured in Morrell, and the other from Louis Spence of Bequeque. Up to this time no one had been successful in breeding the animals in captivity.

The Three-Legged Fox

The stories of escape and capture bring us to the famous three-legged fox, the skin of one of whose pups brought the highest price one year of the three pairs of foxes then on the island. By accident recently it was estimated by Mr. Oulton to have involved a sum of $6,000. Mr. Oulton decided to produce her fifth litter of pups. This was not a wild fox, as has erroneously been asserted; but a fox of the real history of the community. He thrust into the soil a willow wand he had carried in his hand. Today he is still a member of the old homestead and his descendants of the incident. His son, Robert T. Oulton, sought a home in Prince Edward Island today that its wealth in foxes is twice as great as in cattle, sheep, horses, swine and poultry, and that the real history of the first successful attempt to breed black foxes in captivity is written, the unassuming man, now a slightly aged man, who conducted the Cherry Island ranch, will not be overlooked.

Some Interesting Facts.

Mr. Oulton said that during all his experience in breeding black foxes, he never saw a red hair on a ranch fox, nor a single "defectively" skin. One of them remained on Cherry Island, but has since sold it and removed to the mainland.

A Serious Omission.

A great deal has been said and written about the high prices obtained for black fox skins from Prince Edward Island, at the London fur sales in 1910, but the fact has not been stated that Mr. Oulton was the owner of most of them. Of twenty-five skins of which the record is here given, no less than twenty-two were from the Cherry Island ranch. Mr. Oulton owned eight of them outright and had a half interest in twelve more, which would make his share fourteen out of the twenty-two from the ranch. This was the famous sale which broke all records for black fox skins, and Mr.

Oulton is convinced that the one which was sold for $850, but which for 2,000, the record price, was the skin of one of the previous year's litter of the three-legged fox. As already stated, the skins of the best pups led all prices at another of the London fur sales. The important fact to remember, however, is that of the twenty-five skins, Mr. Oulton's record-breaking list, taken from the official record of Lamson's sales in 1910, twenty-two were Cherry Island foxes and bred and raised by Robert T. Oulton. Here is the official sales record, and it can be verified by reference to J. W. Water-Jones' "The Fur Farming in Canada," published by the Conservation Commission of Canada: G. M. Lamson & Co., 64 Queen Street, London, E. C. 7th April, 1910.

The man who had the most reason to be gratified with the results of the year's sales was Mr. Oulton, the animals bred in captivity, under his care, made a world's record. While the sales were made by Mr. Dalton through Lamson and Company, twenty-two of the twenty-five skins, as already stated, were from the Cherry Island ranch. The balance of them were owned by Robert T. Oulton.

An Ungrateful Province.

It has been said that republics are ungrateful, but what shall be said of the Province of Prince Edward Island? They have organized a Fox Breeders' Association on the island, and classified foxes into Grades A, B, and C, the first named being the highest grade. It is stipulated that only foxes born in that Province can qualify for membership in the association, although the brain and toll of Robert T. Oulton gave the Province a great new industry by successfully breeding black foxes, one of his foxes born at the ranch at Shemogue could not qualify as a Grade A. fox on Prince Edward Island, and the stock raised in New Brunswick by the man, who found the most valuable foxes ever produced on an island ranch is thus barred out.

In 1912, Mr. Oulton's daughter, Mrs. G. P. Spalding, received one pair, and a litter was born last year and another this spring on the Oulton-Taylor ranch. In September, 1913, Thomas A. Oulton, another son, living at Alberton, Prince Edward Island, was also engaged in the breeding business with success. Of W. R. Oulton at Cherry Island the story has already been told.

To C. M. Oulton and the other members of the family, three pairs of breeding foxes were given, and they set up a ranch at Shemogue last year, and have two litters this spring. On this matter Mr. Oulton said:—"I made two rows a year ago. One was with three litters of fisher and nine of mink this spring. The fisher have from two to six in a litter, and the mink skins $8 to $40, and the fisher skins $12 to $15. A homey and simple philosophy this, and yet how much it signifies. Those who know my having lived in it." A homey and simple philosophy this, and yet how much it signifies. Those who know my having lived in it."

Sold the Foxes for $224,000.

This story would not be complete without the announcement of the sale of the Oulton foxes at Shemogue to Kierstead & Mersereau, of St. John, N. B., the finest group of breeding foxes in the world. The price paid per pair for the foxes was $28,000 and for one pair of pups $14,000. Four pairs of foxes and one pair of pups were purchased from John M. Oulton and J. R. Taylor. The total amount paid being $120,000. One pair was purchased from Mrs. G. P. Spalding for $28,000. Three pairs were purchased from C. M. Oulton and other members of the family for $78,000, making a total of $224,000. The stipulating the agreement of sale was that the foxes were to be sold as bred, and the new company eight pairs of mated foxes and one pair of pups of the famous Oulton stock from Cherry Island ranch. It was also stipulated that the best stock of the best ranches now engaged in breeding stock is concerned, therefore, breeding stock is concerned, therefore, no company has ever been in a more fortunate position; and Mr. Oulton, who was the place, successful fox breeder in Canada, has the satisfaction of knowing that his foxes have not only enriched himself and his family, but to his credit, he has formed the basis of a great corporation which will conduct fur-farming on a colossal scale.

mother; while the other was some distance away from them. It was a remarkable sight, and the fact is of interest and value to fox breeders. There was never any disease among the Oulton foxes. Despite whatever mortality may have occurred during the early period of experiment in breeding, there was always a good financial return. One female, for example raised fifteen pups in three years.

One very odd afternoon, near dusk, Mr. Oulton saw a litter of seven little ones huddled together near the fence outside the nest. He was a little anxious, and went back later to find that the mother had taken all but two of them into the nest. Thinking she would take the others also, he went away; but when he came back in the morning only five pups remained, nor did he ever see hide or hair of the other three. The probability and the mother buried them.

The killing time at the Cherry Island ranch was between Christmas and New Year's, and none but Mr. Oulton and Mr. Dalton were permitted to be present. In the early days Mr. Oulton removed the female after mating the pair could be left together until just before the litter was born, when the female was removed to another part of the pen.

As already stated, in addition to his share in the partnership foxes, Mr. Oulton after a few years made pens for foxes of his own, having at one time five pairs. He took four pairs with him to Shemogue in 1911, and when the partnership was dissolved he received another pair, including the famous three-legged fox, Mr. Dalton at the same time purchased a ranch of his own at Tignish. Mr. Oulton's son, W. R. Oulton, remained at Cherry Island, with the pens and several pairs of foxes, and his father moved away, but later sold the island and removed his ranch, as already stated, and now lives at Alberton.

Ninety per cent. of the Oulton foxes bred when one year old. Out of eight pairs in 1912 only one pair mated, and last year every pair produced a litter. A black fox will breed for ten years and in some cases twelve.

At the sales in London one year, more than half of the black fox skins which brought $100 or over were from the Cherry Island ranch. The first skins from this ranch were marketed in 1887.

The Oulton Family.

While the black fox made a fortune for Robert T. Oulton, and was made by breeding and selling skins before the present universal interest in breeding foxes and paying enormous prices for the best, his father's children also gained wealth in the business.

In the fall of 1910, John M. Oulton and J. R. Taylor started a ranch at Shemogue with one pair, and raised five. They had two more litters this spring.
