Holding Fast.

When the anchors that faith has cast
Are dragging in the gale,
I am quietly holding fast,
To the things that cannot fail.

I know that right is right,
That it is not good to lie;
That love is better than spite,
And a neighbor than a spy.

I know that passion needs
The leash of sober minds;
I know that generous deeds,
Some sure reward will find.

That the rulers must obey;
That the givers shall increase,
That duty lights the way,
For the beautiful feet of peace.

In the darkest night of the year,
When the stars have all gone out,
That courage is better than fear,
That faith is truer than doubt.

And fierce though the fiends may fight,
And long though the angels hide;
I know that Truth and Right,
Have the universe on their side.

"Dixons of them, Amber, but I like my white gowns better these sweet, warm summer days."
"My India silk is just as cool," cried Amber, smoothing down the soft folds of green flowered silk with her dainty, jeweled hands.

Only last evening she had heard Cecil Grant declare that a pretty girl always looked angelic in white, and that was why the storm had burst on Violet's head to-day.

But, all unconscious of her cousin's bitter jealousy, the lovely girl shook back her golden locks and answered, smilingly:

"I like my white gowns better."
Amber's eyes grew dark with flash for her pretty cousin, and she flashed out, angrily:

"You wear them to please my handsome lover, Cecil Grant, because he said white gowns were pretty! You are trying to steal him from me!"

Gentle Violet stared at her angry cousin with wondering blue eyes and cried, breathlessly:

"I did not know you claimed Cecil for your lover, Amber, for I thought—"

"Thought?" she paused, with a lovely blush.

"You thought he admired you, Miss Vanity? Well, you were bitterly mistaken, let me tell you! We were engaged before you came home from school, and Cecil has only been amusing himself with your credulity, while I looked on and applauded the fun! But the joke has gone far enough now, and the nonsense must come to an end. Ever since you came home you have tried to supplant me in Cecil's heart, and I will no longer endure this rivalry!"

But she paused in her angry speech for want of a listener. Poor Violet had rushed from the room to tears.

Her grief was keen and bitter, for Cecil's smiles and looks had wiled away her girlish heart, and it was cruel to hear that he loved another.

She had wandered down to the river bank, her heart aching over the perky of handsome Cecil, who had made such audacious love to her with his tender, dark eyes while he was engaged to Amber.

"I—I—hate him!" she sobbed miserably. "He is a wretched flirt, and Amber is so better to let him fool me so wickedly! I should like to punish them both for their treachery to me. Why didn't they tell me frankly at first that they were engaged to be married and save me all this bitter pain?"

And all the while, behind the shade of the golden willows, Cecil Grant had been watching his little love in her soft, white gown and listening to her petulant complaints.

Suddenly he started forward, crying out, eagerly:

"Sweet Violet, you must not think such unkind thoughts of me, for I am not Amber's lover, in spite of all she has told you. My darling, I love you!"

He gazed at Violet with adoring eyes, and she blushed to hear from her lover's lips those sweetest words in the language, "I love you!"

"Sweet Violet, I love you!" cried Cecil Grant, ardently, and he sank down beside her, catching her little snowflake of a hand in his, pleading tenderly:

"I adore you, my little darling! Will you be my wife?"

It was an abrupt proposal, but Cecil knew that his tete a tete with Violet were always interrupted by Amber, so when he saw his darling stealing down to the river all alone, he said to himself that he would follow and make hay while the sun shone.

He did not think that anyone had seen him going toward the house, so he changed his course and went after Violet.

And he was just in time to catch her sorrowful, wondering exclamations over his supposed perfidy.

He comprehended like a flash the deceitful game Amber Laurens had been playing, and determined that sweet Violet should not doubt him a moment longer.

So, while the summer sunset was gilding the sky and the waves with molten gold, and the bird sang to his mate in the greenwood tree, the blue-eyed little beauty listened, beneath the shady willows, to the sweetest story man ever breathed to woman's ears. The old but ever new story of Love.

And no nobler man than Cecil Grant ever whispered the story, no fairer, purer maiden than Violet ever listened to it with blushes of tender joy.

But the summer breeze, as it sighed through the willows, had a mournful sound, and the river gliding by the green, flowery banks murmured low of mystery and tragedy and sorrow.

"Cecil, I cannot marry you!" cried Violet, and she added, sadly:

"You belong to Amber. You were betrothed to her when I came home!"

He denied it with passionate vehemence:

"I admired Miss Laurens very much, but I only called on her to pass away the time. I never spoke to her of love or marriage!"

"Then you were a wretched flirt, Cecil Grant! for your attentions made me think you loved me, and all our friends predicted our speedy marriage!" cried an indignant voice, and there was Amber, magnificently beautiful in an elaborate white gown and gleaming, amber jewels.

She had watched him from her window going down to the river and followed him, eager for an interview on this romantic spot.

And this was her reward, to hear his avowal of love for her cousin and indifference for herself.

Oh, how cruelly her proud and loving heart was stung by the serpent of jealousy coiling there!

She could have slain the pair of lovers, so close together there beneath the shade of the golden willows.

And she could not repress the bitter, reproachful words with which she startled them from their sweet love-dream.

Cecil Grant sprang to his feet, crying, eagerly:

"I beg your pardon, Miss Laurens, if I have indeed acted so imprudently as you assert. My only excuse is that I did not think. You had many admirers besides myself, and how could I guess that your choice had fallen on me? I am very, very sorry. Will you forgive me?"

"Never I never!" she cried, bitterly, and with burning tears, as she rushed away and left him alone with his fair young love, sweet Violet.

They gazed a moment in each other's eyes, then Cecil drew her to his breast and held her—strained in a long embrace.

"You are mine, Violet! mine forever!" he whispered, tenderly. "Never mind Amber. She will get over her disappointment and marry another."

But he did not know the fiery, burning heart of Amber Laurens.

She had loved him with a passion that was intensified to madness by his loss.

And as she fled wildly back to the house, she registered a burning oath that Cecil Grant should never find happiness with Violet Head.

"She must give him back to me, or I shall die of despair!" she cried, with burning tears, that almost blistered her beautiful cheeks.

"She must give him back to me, or I shall die of despair!" she cried, with burning tears, that almost blistered her beautiful cheeks.

She had never thought that Violet was her equal in beauty, never believed that they could be rivals in love.

The shock of her awakening was terribly intense. Reason seemed to totter on its throne.

She had loved sweet Violet in a careless, cousinly fashion before, but now all her love turned to jealous hate.

Pacing the floor of her sumptuous apartment, like a beautiful, angry tigress, she brooded over her bitter defeat, and wondered how she could punish her cousin for the triumph she had won.

Nothing she could do to Violet seemed too cruel to satisfy her thirst for revenge.

She would have liked to see her cousin dead in her coffin, and stand by and hear the clods rattling harshly down upon her grave. The sound would have been music in Amber's ears. From a beautiful, imperious, loving girl, she was transformed into a jealous, angry, revengeful woman. Blighted love had changed the current of her thought, her hopes, her very life. She had but one aim now. It was to sweep her lovely rival from her path, and win Cecil Grant's heart at last.

CHAPTER II.

Fate itself seemed to play into Amber's hands.

Judge Camden had been away two months, leaving his granddaughters in charge of their orphan, a distant widowed relative, and he was expected home that evening. Indeed, when Amber came down stairs presently, she found that he had already arrived.

She met him fondly, not through excess of love, for the judge was a stern old man, but because she hoped he had brought her a gift from the great city.

"Oh, grandpa, welcome home! I have missed you so much!" she cooed, sweetly.

"Umph!" he grunted, ungraciously. "But where is Violet, eh?"

A sudden light gleamed in Amber's eyes as she answered, quickly:

"She is down at the river with a young man, sir!"

"A young man! Why, what the deuce— Mrs. Shirley, madam!" thumping his cane loudly on the floor to frighten the meek little widow.

"Now what do you mean by letting that child Violet go gallivanting around with a young man?" he cried, violently.

Mrs. Shirley cowered before his black looks and murmured, deprecatingly:

"Dear me, Judge Camden, Violet is quite seventeen years old, and old enough to walk out with a young man, I suppose, considering that her mother was married at sixteen."

"Don't throw her mother up to me, you spiteful creature! Wasn't it a runaway match, I want to know? And didn't that wretch, Lieutenant Mead, break my poor girl's heart in two years with his dissipation? A disgrace to the navy he was, and a good riddance when he died, I say! And what must have become of that poor baby Violet if I hadn't brought her here and raised her—eh? And now, while I'm away, you let her begin to follow in her mother's footsteps, you careless woman! But I'll settle Violet's future. She shall not elope like poor Marie! I've picked out a nice husband for her myself, and she is to be married in a month!"

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!" whispered the simple little widow, dismayed at this bold declaration, while Amber exclaimed, maliciously, seeing a chance for mischief:

"But, grandpa, Violet's engaged already to Cecil Grant!"

Judge Camden sprang from his chair, his handsome old head eyes glaring under the brittle white brows. He thundered, furiously:

"No, she isn't, by Jupiter! She shall marry the man I've chosen for her! Cecil Grant, indeed, the young rickshaw! Poor as a church mouse, with nothing but a hand-ome face and a long pedigree! He'll never get my Violet, the fortune-hunting young scoundrel! Go, Amber, and tell her to come here to me instantly!"

Amber obeyed his mandate quickly, only too glad of the chance to separate the lovers.

When she reached the river, she found them saying good-bye beneath the willows with lingering glances and shy caresses. Violet was saying:

"The Wolfville Speedway" is now completed and those interested in the light harness horse are under renewed obligation to the enterprising owner. The recent repairs have been made with an eye to utility and comfort and at considerable expense, and all light harness drivers will be welcomed that have provided themselves with a season ticket, which can be obtained for a mere nominal price, and we are quite certain that there are but few who will be inclined to enjoy this delightful speedway who have not so qualified.

The Speedway is about half a mile in circumference, with the turns well thrown up and magnificent footing all around.

For a few years there has not been in this city of Wolfville a single half mile of driveway suitable for light harness driving, a condition that has long involved great hardship, loss and injustice to dozens of citizens who own and desire to use light harness horses. Of course there are certain parks, avenues and boulevards, that are suitable and used by the heavy equipages such as four-in-hands, coaches, carts, broughams, drays, dump-carts, etc., and where ample accommodations for spectators are provided, also where the asphalted side walks are available and used, apparently under police protection, by bicyclists, and still not a fraction of a mile where the light harness horse can be speeded, as nature designed he should be, without endangering the life of the driver or someone else - all of which has had overcome by one enterprise and philanthropy of one gentleman, and now we have within the city limits the finest driveway to be found near any town or city in Nova Scotia.

Probably there are as many gentlemen and ladies in Wolfville who delight in the use of the light harness horse as can be found in a city of like dimensions anywhere, yet men are not naturally inclined to invest in property which they cannot use, and with a good speedway, wisely used for purposes intended, there will be a natural increase in the class of our citizens. For these, and for many other reasons we are constrained to congratulate the gentleman who has within the city limits the finest driveway to be found near any town or city in Nova Scotia.

The open air concert given by the band on Monday evening drew out a large number of people. It was the first appearance before the public since its reorganization, and the performance elicited much favorable comment. Instruction in Syringing.

Prof. Sears will meet the farmers of Lower Horton in Mr. Patterson's orchard, Acadia Villa, Thursday afternoon, June 10th, for a practical lesson in "Syringing." He will have his own pump with all the most approved nozzles; will prepare all mixtures for spraying on the spot, and spray the trees. In the evening the Professor will lecture on spraying the kindred subjects in the Hall of Acadia Villa school. This will be a rare chance for our farmers to learn the important and absolutely necessary lesson of "how and when to spray."

Band Concert.

The open air concert given by the band on Monday evening drew out a large number of people. It was the first appearance before the public since its reorganization, and the performance elicited much favorable comment. Under the direction of Mr. Robson the band has made most satisfactory progress, and is a credit to the town. We trust we may be favored with frequent treats, such as was enjoyed on Monday evening, during the summer. Following is the programme rendered on that occasion: Quickstep: "Grip of the Friendly Hand,".....Newson Waltz: "Chimes of Trinity,".....arr. by Schottische: "Woodland Flowers,".....arr. by Dan Godfrey Waltz: "Mazurka,".....Vanderwell Gallop: "Round We Go,".....Dawson Ballad: "Alice Where Art Thou,".....arr. by Dan Godfrey Waltz: "In Old Madrid,".....Trotter Quickstep: "Hearts Best Love," Newton Bohemian Girl.....Balf Gallop: "Express,".....Dawson God Save the Queen.

A Plea for the Home.

By CHARLES S. KAY.

"No cause, however sacred, can permanently justify a pervading weakness of the divine institution of the family."

In view of certain tendencies in modern society, we may well ask the question, What is to be the future of our American family life?

Some fully recognized and often described tendencies may be dismissed with a word. Latitudes in religious observance and moral conduct, granted by the parent to the child, inevitably leads to filial disrespect.

A sort of bacillus of restlessness is being engendered in the blood of the children and youth of our time. This will eventually render the quietude and pleasure of home life distasteful, if not well-nigh unendurable.

No fancied gain along physical, mental or religious lines can compensate for a loss of the true home ideal. Many organizations founded in the highest purposes for mental and moral elevation of the young, are now being sacrificed to the selfishness of the individual.

It helps the matter but little that some of the many agencies thus rivaling the home are denominated "religious." These often take shape in innumerable meetings, socials, entertainments and rallies, which those who have followed with discernment well know, are, in many instances, simply excuses for irresponsible congregation and street strolling.

Young persons have been known to ostentatiously attend a religious assembly when they have never gone beyond the doorstep or vestibule of the church in which the meeting was held.

We have religious associations, "institutional" organizations and ecclesiastical clubs—all good in their way, and doing a valuable work; but many of them have this drawback—they more or less tend to divert interest, effort and companionship from the home. In many cases the father, the son, the daughter and also, often the mother, vacate the home almost continuously, leaving certain members of the family to loneliness, to questionable companionship, or to the street.

The uplifting agencies and amenities of the home require time for their inculcation and development. How can they be fostered by an aggregation of persons, of more or less numbers, who have outside duties, appointments, schemes or "engagements" for every leisure moment of the day, and for every waking hour of the night?

The pupil, the religious newspaper, and the instructor of youth need to unite in efforts to encourage and protect the home idea in the hearts of the people. We should all revert to a higher appreciation of the office and possibilities of the Christian home. Children and youth—and older people as well—should be inspired with a purpose to reclaim and preserve the home from the roads by the growing spirit of restlessness and preoccupation.

No agency, however commendable, should be allowed to deprive the home of its ancient, essential and God-ordained supremacy. Chicago Standard. Springfield, Ohio.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

THE HEALTH OF THEIR DAUGHTERS SHOULD BE CAREFULLY WATCHED.

Young Girls Susceptible to Troubles That May Result in Decline, Pale Faces, Headaches and Picky Appetite, the Symptoms of Early Decay.

Some months ago Maggie, the fifteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Sweeney, of John street, of this town, began to fall both in health and spirits. Her face was almost as white as chalk, her appetite very fickle, and her limbs began to swell.

It is quite evident that this young maiden was suffering from a lack of blood, as do so many young girls who are just at a critical point in life, and it is quite as apparent that there is no other remedy the equal of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in such cases.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure by going to the root of the disease. They renew and build up the blood, and strengthen the nerves, thus driving disease from the system. Avoid imitations by insisting that every box you purchase is enclosed in a wrapping bearing the full trade mark, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."

THE KIND YOU NEED.

The True, Reliable and Easy Working Diamond Dyes.

When the Diamond Dyes are used the work of home dyeing is a pleasure to every woman. Doubts and fears regarding results are never entertained. There is a confidence in every woman's heart that success will crown her efforts.

For long, long years Diamond Dyes have been the favorite family dye in every civilized country, and although imitation package dyes are now being offered for sale by dealers who think more of big profits than of giving satisfaction to the public, the great inferiority of these imitation dyes in strength, fastness, beauty and brilliancy was soon discovered, and they are now avoided and condemned by all who prize good, bright and durable colors.

Thousands of testimonials are coming in from all parts of the country testifying to the excellence and vast superiority of the Diamond Dyes.

Refuse all poor, worthless and imitation dyes when they are offered to you. Ask for the "Diamond," and see that the name is on each package. Book of directions and card of 48 colors free to any address. Write to Wells & Richardson Co., Montreal, P. Q.

Scraps for Odd Moments.

People who take offense usually find that there is plenty of it to be had.

Mrs. Widowsby—Yes, Willie has made me the work of cleaning the back yard, but—I have to clean Willie.

Old Doctor—How do you get along with your husband now, Mrs. Maguire? Mrs. Maguire—Very nicely, thank you, he's dead.

"What are those two loads quarreling about," asked Mr. Frog of his wife. "I don't know," replied Mrs. Frog, but they are hopping mad.

First Pair One—Let me see. Who's the oldest person in the Bible? Second Pair One—You're down in your family Bible, aren't you, dear?

Minards Liniment is the Best. "Do you think it makes much difference which planet a person is born under?" "Not a bit, so long as he keeps on earth."

Fruin—"You hear that horrible story about old Stiff's being buried alive? Dr. Polus (hastily)—"Buried alive! Impossible! Why he was one of my patients!"

"Where on earth could she have picked up so insignificant a man for a husband?" "I haven't any exact information, but he looks as if he might have gone with a pound of tea."

"What is the meaning of the word 'Inkswarm' I asked the teacher. 'Johnny Curno, you may answer.' 'Water is inkswarm when it gets warm and dark.'"

"Sometimes," said Uncle Eben, "a young man dat hab a lot of push make mistake ob applyin' it all to de high place of pleasure 'stead of savin' some for de wheel barrow ob necessity."

Minards Liniment Cures La Grippe. "Why are you trying to get your friend a public clerkship?" "Because he hasn't a particle of business about him and I can't afford to get him employment in my office."

"Do you suppose Mrs. Manyred really loves her lawyer admirer?" "In a way, yes. You see, he's secured all her divorces for her, and he's got a connecting link with the post."

Keedick—Young Browns added "to his name after he inherited his rich uncle's fortune." Foodick—That's quite right. Rich people are entitled to more ease than poor people.

Father—"Who's the sharpest boy in your school, Bobby?" Bobby—"Well, Tommy Jones says he is, and ma'am says Billy Barlow is, and I—well, I don't like to say who I think, because I ain't as conceited as Tommy Jones."

Anxious Mama—Yes, Mr. Lakeland, the fact is I have three daughters who ought to be settled in life. Is this your friend of yours a marrying man?

Mr. Lakeland (of Glasgow)—Not to my great extent, ma'am. I'm afraid I wouldn't want to take more than one.

Editor in Chief—You had a very poor paper this morning. Managing Editor—Why, we licked the boots off the opposition. We had four exclusive stories.

"That doesn't make any difference. Their headline was three inches longer than ours."

Uncle Silas (at the phone)—"Hello! I want to talk to my nephew." (After listening a moment) "Well, now, you just like all the rest of the women folk, you're just a little bit of a pecker."

Minards Liniment the Best Hair Restorer. Here is a "character" given to a student on leaving her last situation: "The bearer has been in my house a year, but eleven months. During this time I have seen her at the house, but I have not seen her for a long time, and I have not seen her for a long time, and I have not seen her for a long time."

Mother—"Don't you feel able to sit up to-day?" Boy—"No, ma'ma, I'm too weak." "Well, let me see, I guess you won't be able to go to school Monday. To-morrow is Saturday, and—"

Boy (jumping out of bed)—Saturday! I thought it was Friday.

MINARDS' LINIMENT is the only Liniment asked for at my store and the only one we keep for sale. All the people use it.

CHARLES FURBER, Pleasant Bay, C. B.

Bride—Now, my dear, how shall we manage about church? We're going to different churches, aren't we? You know. Shall I go with you, or will you go with me? Groom—I'll tell you how we'll fix it. You tell your minister that you are going to my church, and I'll tell my minister that I am going to your church. Then we won't be mixed and needn't go any where.
