Fired By Ambition.

The Story of One of Napoleon's Bravest Generals.

PART I.

At an early period of the Consulate, a certain Abbe Bossu examined the young men who were to be admitted as students in the Polytechnic School. Though not the only examiner, his veto was all powerful.

One day, when the First Consul was about to start on a hunting expedition, the aide-de-camp on duty, as he crossed the court at Malmaison, perceived a handsome, gentlemanly young man, leaning against one of the sentry-boxes at the gate, and looking anxiously at the chateau.

The aide-de-camp, M. de Lacuee, approached him, and politely asked if he wanted anyone. The young man without looking at the person who addressed him, replied:

"Ah! sir, I have a wish, which everyone I have consulted tells me it is impossible to gratify; and yet I shall die if it be not accomplished. I want to speak to the First Consul. I tried to obtain admittance into the Court, but was refused at the gate. I was asked if I had an appointment! An appointment! I, an appointment!"

And without casting even a passing glance at M. de Lacuee, the young man again fixed his earnest gaze upon the chateau. M. de Lacuee delighted in an adventure; and this youth, with his animated countenance, and voice trembling with emotion, inspired him at once with interest. Again approaching him:

"Well, sir," said he, "and what do you want with the First Consul? I can convey to him your request, if it be reasonable. I am the aide-de-camp on duty."

"You, sir," cried the young man, seizing M. de Lacuee's hand, which he squeezed with transport; "are you the First Consul's aide-de-camp? Oh! if you knew the service you could render me? Pray, sir, take me to him."

"What do you want of him?" "I must speak to him!"—and he added, in a lower tone of voice: "It is a secret."

Lacuee contemplated the youthful petitioner, who stood before him with a look of intense earnestness, squeezing the hand he held as if it were in vice, his bosom palpitating, and his respiration oppressed; but his look evinced a mind of the noblest stamp. "This youth is not dangerous."

TWO WOMEN TESTIFY

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did For Their Health—Their own Statements Follow.

Haliburton, P. E. I.—"I had a doctor examine me and he said I had falling of the womb, so I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has done me a lot of good. All the bearing-down pains have vanished. I have gained ten pounds in weight, the discharge is all gone, and I feel better than I have for a long time. I think any woman is foolish to suffer as I did for the sake of a few dollars."

"You can use my letter as a testimonial. It may encourage other poor women who suffer as I did to use your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. GEO. COLLETT, Haliburton, Lot 7, P. E. I.

Read What This Woman Says: New Moorefield, Ohio.—"I take great pleasure in thanking you for what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. I had bearing-down pains, was dizzy and weak, had pains in lower back and could not be upon my feet long enough to get a meal. As long as I laid on my back I would feel better, but when I would get up those bearing-down pains would come back, and the doctor said I had female trouble. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was the only medicine that helped me and I have been growing stronger ever since I commenced to take it. I hope it will help other suffering women as it has me. You can use this letter."—Mrs. CASSEY LORD, New Moorefield, Clark Co., Ohio.

A Murderous Police Force

Mounted "Black Trackers" of Queensland Butchered All Prisoners.

It is seldom that a civilized white government has given active and constant support to a system of police, the main tenet of which was indiscriminate and totally irresponsible butchery in the name of law and order. Yet within the last forty years the black tracker police of Queensland were established and sanctioned by that government, and clothed with the complete functions of judge jury and executioner.

Queensland is the largest division of Australia and to this day immense tracts of it, particularly in the northern portion, are dense stretches of wilderness almost untrudged save by the native bushmen, the original people many of them still in the state of savagery and determined opposition to the ways of civilization that marked them when the first whites sought that region to colonize and make available to the world its great resources.

In 1875 an effort had yet been made to civilize the bushmen tribes. They still clung to their primitive weapons the spear and the boomerang. Small in stature, of a low degree of mentality, they were aggressive in their protest against the settlers and cunning in the planning of their attacks. At odd and unexpected times they would come swooping out of the bush, raid the ranches, murder the heifers and escape with the stolen cattle and horses to the fastnesses of their wilderness haunts, into the intricacies of which no white pursuers could successfully follow them.

The Chinese were also in the gold mines of that isolated region and as they invariably carried their dead victims away with them, the horrible conviction possessed the white settlers that the bushmen were addicted to cannibalism.

These depredations had become more frequent and more murderous in their character under the systematic leadership of convicts transported for brutal crimes committed at home and who had escaped to the unexplored tracts of the bush, where joining the natives they became still more savage and cruel than those uncivilized people themselves.

To deal effectively with this danger, which was halting the advance of settlement and striking a disastrous blow at the industries that were making for the development of the region, the Queensland Government resolved to try the experiment of a mounted police force formed from certain tribes of natives that had accepted the overtures of the settlers and lived in peace with them, if not in entire accord with their ideas of existence and duty.

These natives were of a district distant from the northern wilderness and had no ties of association with the bushmen of the latter. These half savages became enthusiastic and expert horsemen and workmen and the duty they were to perform was congenial to their nature.

"So he wants me to examine him, does he? What could have suggested such an idea to him? It is a strange one!" And he rubbed his chin. "How old is he?" resumed the first Consul, after walking about some time in dignified silence.

"I do not know, General, but he appears about seventeen or eighteen."

"Let him come in."

said the First Consul to Junot, taking him into a recess of a window, "If we had a thousand like him the conquest of the world would be but a promenade!"

And he turned his head to look at the young man, who, absorbed in meditation, was probably preparing his answers to the questions which he supposed would be asked of him.

In about half an hour Napoleon began the examination, with the result of which he was completely satisfied. The youth at once gained admittance to the Polytechnic School; there to prepare for his commission in the Grand Arme.

Lugard's Race.

How British Proconsul Secured Nigeria For the Empire.

It was a terrible march, a sort of tropical edition, upon a minute scale, of the retreat from Moscow, with the enemy hanging ever upon both flanks, that Sir Frederick Lugard made in his celebrated race to see the King of the Borgus and secure Nigeria for Britain. In one attack he was struck on the head by a poisoned arrow. He would not rest, but trust on, saving his life by taking every antidote. He got the better of his wound, and reached Borgus five days ahead of the nearest expeditions. But it was out of the frying pan into the fire.

There was that tradition of the Borgus to live up to; this bold imprudent white man must die.

Klama, the King, did not want openly to kill him, for he was astute enough to realize that he might be attended with ill consequences from this white man's powerful distant friends. So he plotted with his medicine men and chiefs as to the best manner in which to put him out of the way. Lugard declined what was in progress, and told the king that he knew, saying: "I risked this, and have placed myself entirely in your hands. It is for you to do your worst, as for the time being you have the advantage, but please don't imagine that you are deceiving me."

It astonished the king, that this lone Englishman should stare death in this way.

"You have trusted to me," he said, "and you shall not trust in vain. I will be your true friend. But, now let me give you one serious warning: Never again trust a Borgus man as you have trusted me!" He signed the treaties; he remained. Sir Frederick's firm friend, and as long as the latter continued in Africa, sent him regulary his some tokens of affection and good will. And so the five French expeditions trickled in, one after another, to find their rival peacefully recuperating, and the business all done. He had raced and beaten them fairly, and as long as the result of the victory is reflected today in the enormous territory which now smiles in prosperity under the Union Jack.

It was in 1899, upon the transfer of the Royal Niger Company to the crown that Sir Frederick became high Commissioner for Northern Nigeria. When, by the way, did that name originate? It was brilliant young lady, Miss Flora Shaw, who, in the words of Cecil Rhodes, "did the colonial news for The Times, who christened the country; she gave it the pretty name of Nigeria, and she is helping now to govern it, south and north, for the Flora Shaw of yesterday is the Lady Lugard of to-day.

Sir Frederick had only a staff of eight men when he began the enormous task of governing this world in miniature, but he raised and trained native troops, organized and administered, and actually had troops to lend for the Asanti war.

His great aim was the suppression of slavery. He found that many of the tribes counted not merely their possessions but their actual money in slaves. Slaves stood for potins and shillings, and covries represented peace. So terrible were the results that in one area where less than fifty years before had been a population of fifty millions there were now only twelve millions.—London Ideas.

The Artis's Model.

The Profession Is a Hard One and Remunerative Small.

In a hundred studios in the by-ways of Chelsea a common scene is to be witnessed almost every morning. The artist is usually looking over the daily paper, immediately after breakfast. The time might be about ten o'clock. Along the echoing passages one hears shuffling footsteps. The cause of them mounts the necessary steps slowly and bears down upon an artist's door. "There is a faint double knock and a pause. The painter flings his paper aside and throws open the door. It reveals to him, perhaps, a fair child, perhaps a genteelly-dressed woman, in faded finery; perhaps down-at-heel man of middle age.

"Do you want a model?" is the query the visitor puts. The artist, promptly answers, "No"—the probability being he has engaged a sitter for the work that day. The child usually takes "No" for an answer, although I distinctly remember one little model, with a severe cold, inclined to present his credentials—"Be and Billy, we've dib sittin' as adgels (angels) for Bister Macdamber, and we've berry good adgels too," was his recommendation of himself and another small boy.

The female model will insistently give a list of the artists to whom she has been sitting, with the suggestion that she is conferring a favor by leaving the studios of the leading R.A.'s for a second-rate painter just out of his student days. The men are some-

Lugard's Race.

How British Proconsul Secured Nigeria For the Empire.

It was a terrible march, a sort of tropical edition, upon a minute scale, of the retreat from Moscow, with the enemy hanging even upon both flanks, that Sir Frederick Lugard made in his celebrated race to see the King of the Borgus and secure Nigeria for Britain. In one attack he was struck on the head by a poisoned arrow. He would not rest, but trust on saving his life by taking every antidote. He got the better of his wound, and reached Borgu five days ahead of the nearest expeditions. But it was out of the frying pan into the fire.

There was that tradition of the Borgus to live up to; this bold imprudent white man must die. Kiama, the king, did not want openly to kill him, for he was astute enough to realize that that might be attended with ill consequences from this white man's powerful distant friends. So he plotted with his medicine men and chiefs as to the best manner in which to put him out of the way. Lugard devised what was in progress, and told the king that he knew, saying: "I risked this, and have placed myself entirely in your hands. It is for you to do your worst, as for the time being you have the advantage, but please don't imagine that you are deceiving me."

It astonished the king, that this lone Englishman should stare death in this way.

"You have trusted to me," he said, "and you shall not trust in vain. I will be your true friend. But, now let me give you a serious warning: Never again trust a Borgus man as you have trusted me!" He signed the treaties; he remained Sir Frederick's firm friend, and as long as the latter continued in Africa, sent him regular yam and some tokens of affection and good will. And so the five French expeditions trickled in, one after another, to find their rival peacefully re-organizing, and the business all done. He had raced and beaten them fairly and the result of the victory is reflected today in the enormous territory which now smiles in prosperity under the Union Jack.

It was in 1899, upon the transfer of the Royal Niger Company to the crown that Sir Frederick became High Commissioner for Northern Nigeria. When by the way, did that name originate? Who originated the theory that the banjo is a musical instrument? It is easy to pick out the man from the small town. He is the one who wears rubbers.

times still more amazing. Diving into their pockets, they pull out bundles of faded photographs of Royal Academy pictures. "That's me, as the Duke of Wellington," the model man suggests, pointing at a figure in a celebrated painting, or as a variation of the subject the visitor may, add, "I am in Mr. Baumber's drawing in this week's Punch," or "I'm the (cabman in Belcher's drawing in last week's Sketch." All of which may be quite true and is very likely.

For consider, when you go to the Royal Academy, the New Gallery, or the Tate, and see the work of the modern English school, that the romantic figures woven out of the artist's fancy have very often their living representations, going about in shabby clothing, looking for casual sittings in Chelsea studios. The glorious knights in armor, the stately cavaliers, the monks of sombre pictures, the dashing bloods of Georgian times, the queenly heroines of subject pictures, the wondrous figures which represent poetic ideals, the wan and wistful faces which appear in tragic groupings, where modern English art is exhibited, have very often counterparts in the commonplace ranks of the artists' models, while a close student of contemporary black and white work, behind the scenes in studio-land, can lay his hand on dozens of personalities who have inspired this happy joke or that faithful illustration of author's text in the popular illustrations of the hour.

Some artists draw very literally from the model and the finished work is very nearly a portrait in paint, while work, is often a liberal reflection of the obscure personalities of the people who sit in studios.

Amongst the rank and file one finds an ex-professional runner, much in demand for his lithe figure and muscular legs; an actor with a university education; an old chorister from the Royal Italian Opera, whose face and beard have been the centre of interest in at least three great pictures; a number of women who break the work of sitting with intervals in the choruses of musical comedy and pantomime, and a number of quaint male characters whose earlier careers would be helpless to attempt to classify. Generally speaking, models, particularly males, have always some marked individuality, and a few of the more striking types are apt to think their share in successful pictures is more important than the artist's.

The Hermit.

"Oh, gentle hermit of the glen," I asked, "why have you flown afar from the abodes of men, to dwell here all alone? Hast sored on humankind in a neighbourhood, and all that culture means, so much that you must seek the woods, and fill yourself with greens?" The sad-eyed hermit deftly threw his whiskers over his arm, and heaved a sigh and took a chew, and viewed with some alarm. "I follow well considered plans, by living in this wood; for here there are no also rans, no statesmen great and good. I list all day to singing birds, and hear the bobcat's yowl; here no one fills the air with words, no wild spellbinders howl. There are no issues to confuse, no Pledges to redeem; a man just sits around and chews, and life's a pleasant dream. There are no tiresome windy dubs, to talk of "peepul's rights"; there are no Ananias Clubs, no crazed convention fights. No selfish statesmen paw the air, for 'principles,' they yaw—for principles, and all they care is just to reach the top. Your politics is such a fake, so threadbare, stale and punk! So I'll remain, in feu and brake, with 'possum, owl and skunk." Thus spake the hermit, and he fit a stogie moldy-blue. "You're wise," I said; "if you'll permit, I'll just stay here with you."

Bait Concessions

Some time ago we directed attention to the report in the N. Y. Fishing Gazette about bait and ice concessions to foreigners made by the Government to the Booth Fisheries Co. The Fishing Gazette considered the Company had obtained terms extraordinary favourable to them — the first of the kind ever granted by Newfoundland. Here is a paragraph of the report:

"The Newfoundland Government has never sold an ounce of bait or ice to foreigners, and the satisfactory terms of the contracts made with the Booth Fisheries Co. gave that Company the exclusive concession for fifteen years for these vital materials."

Now that the Premier is back he says that the Company "will agree that no bait fish placed in cold storage will be sold except to Newfoundland fishermen."

This means apparently that the Company has not agreed as yet, but that the Government hope that they will agree to this limitation, which is in direct contradiction to what the American papers were contemplating the Company on having had already conceded to them. It looks as if our exposure has done its work and that the Government is backing down. Sir Edward Morris says under his new clause the Booth Company will be more limited in its sale of bait than Trefethen and Lord were under their agreement. That being so, it follows that the Trefethen and Lord agreement permitted them to sell bait to persons who were not Newfoundlanders. It will be remembered how strenuously the Government denied this allegation at the time. Now the truth is out.

Further, people are not going to be satisfied with any such professions as are appearing in the Government press. They want to see the text of the agreement and see for themselves what bait concessions are being given away, and particularly so in view of the practical abandonment this year of bait protection during the first baiting of the bankers.

A special train will leave for Waterford Bridge at 4 o'clock this evening to take patrons to St. Patrick's Garden Party at Rae Island, returning will leave at 8 o'clock.

JOHN B. AYRE,
Dinner at King George Institute.

Some fifty guests attended an informal dinner in the dining room of the King George Institute last night to hear how the Institute might be conducted. Before taking their places at the table the guests were conducted through the building, and the attractiveness, commodiousness, convenience, the fittings and furnishings came in for much praise. The splendid plunge bath and the shower baths particularly attracted attention. The fitting out of this department we are told cost some $7,000. After dinner the Superintendent outlined the object of the Institute at some length, and called on Dr. Grenfell to supplement his remarks. Mr. G. A. Warburton gave his experience of some twenty-five years in the working of Y. M. C. A.'s in Canada and the States. Sir Edward Morris had a word of praise for the Institute and testimony to the need of such an institution and the good it could do was given by the Rev. W. T. D. Dunn, J. Browning, President of the St. Andrew's Association, and G. C. Feary, President of the Board of Trade. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Mr. Sutherland at 11 o'clock and brought the dinner to a close.

A., and for three years past has been the Director of the choral choir of St. Ann's Church at city. The other two gentlemen are located at West Virginia. All remain until the latter part of August. The Xaverian Order is a teaching order akin to that of the Irish Christian Brothers who are doing such excellent educational work in St. John's and in the United States and all over the British Empire. Bros. Carew, Ryan and Griffiths would be glad to impart any information desired as to the workings of the Order, and would be especially pleased to meet any young men who have a vocation for the religious life and who might wish to join the Brotherhood.

Recovery is Doubtful

if the quality of the drugs and medicines given a patient is not above doubt. We spare no effort in obtaining the purest and most reliable goods. Efficiency is dependent upon freshness in almost all Drugs and all our preparations are compounded from Drugs which have not deteriorated through age.

Prepared only by DR. F. STAFFORD & SON, St. John's, Newfoundland.

Cheaper Flour.

Flour, an article largely used of course by our people, is now cheaper at the mills than heretofore, a fact which will be hailed with pleasure by all. Big crops are looked for the coming autumn in Canada and the United States, and later it is expected that the harvest in Russian and the Argentine will be larger than for some years past. Cheap flour in this period of high prices for all class of food-stuffs will be a Godsend to the masses of the people here. Pork and beef are at present very high, and the price of molasses, another necessary for our people is also in the ascendant.

"At Home" To-Morrow.

The Ladies of George Street congregation have been busy for some time planning for the "At Home" which is to take place on to-morrow on the grounds surrounding the residence of Mr. C. P. Ayre. Dainty refreshments will be served, also ice cream and candy. The proceeds are in aid of the new School and Hall, the building of which has been contemplated for some time past, and which is urgently needed to successfully carry forward the work of this Circuit. We would bespeak a liberal patronage from the public generally who would wish to spend a pleasant afternoon and at the same time contribute toward a worthy object.

Who Killed It?

Special to Evening Telegram.
 Dear Sir,—I have read the editorial of the Daily News of this morning—in fact I always read them—as from the pen of a cultured gentleman who comes from a land of culture—a land too which has given us our greatest Empire the world has ever seen. The editorial refers to the decision of the Privy Council re the contract made by the Bond Government, and which said Council upholds! The editor speaks of it (the late Bond Gov't) as a "dying administration." I object to his statement! The Bond Government was not a "deceased administration!" Mr. Robinson knows, as well as thousands of others, that the late Government was put out by money. That one word covers the situation! He knows, as we all do that there was too much money and too much ruffianism pitted against the Bond Party to enable them to stem the torrent. Let Mr. Robinson put himself in Rt. Hon. Sir R. Bond's place if he can, and try to imagine the deceit, the ingratitude, the villainy of the pact who opposed him!

I am quite an impartial person, but I can't forget the horrors of "Black Monday" and its attendant miseries I say again, Mr. Robinson, put yourself in Rt. Hon. Sir R. Bond's place. You are of the same culture of the same great land whose forbear brought to this and other offshoots of the Empire our characteristics of honour, integrity, justice and fair play which distinguish the old land. Look at Bond's career! Remember am not saying there were no "spot on the scene" of his administration but I do say that he had more in his Cabinet to advise than to support him—men who were sticklers of his policy but betrayers of his trust! I this not so, Mr. Robinson? And the to be kicked overboard in a November sea by the agents of the so-called "People's Party!" I say again, Mr. Robinson, put yourself in his place and you'll realize the truth of my statements. A man who had saved his country and been honoured by his King! And then you speak of "dead or dying administration." Who killed it? What killed it? We all know who and what, and time will tell for itself!

And now perhaps we come to the most serious part of the subject—your criticism on the English Privy Council's decision re the Commerce Cable Company's contract. Is it not written, "Let every soul be subject to the Higher Power?" Is not Mr. Robinson constituting himself within the power? And does he not think he is creating a dangerous precedent when he attempts to arrogate to himself the right to criticise the highest law tribunal of the greatest Empire the world has ever seen! Sometime we hear lofty statements from Editor Robinson on the justice, the impartiality, etc., etc. of the English courts now, however, because it has decided against his pet and for the late Head his tune is changed!

Mr. Robinson, too, writes very often loyalty to the Throne, love, country, respect and veneration for the Motherland, and pride on that Empire on whose limits "the sun never sets!" Here in his criticism he launches, but in a contrary spirit, and breathes defiance on the judgment of "wise heads and sound minds!"

If such a course is not tending to weaken loyalty, I don't know what is! But his motives are as gossamer—easily seen through! He is on the side of the powers that be—he is booked for and will get a big job under if they are returned next year so there is no partiality in his judgment, even to jeopardising the loyalty of his readers in their allegiance to the law of the Empire.

Fine Fire Escape

When the flashing touches were being given the exterior of the King George Fishermen's Institute, Mr. Donald Baker, blacksmith, erected on the exterior of the building a fine substantial iron fire escape. It is 63 feet from the upper balcony to the ground, is 5 feet wide and contains two stairways connecting the lower balcony with the upper. A ladder also runs from this to the annex and another goes down between the main building and Harvey & Co's premises. This would be most serviceable should fire occur.

Brains.

BY H. L. RANN.

The brain is a neat mechanical contrivance with which people absorb misinformation. With most people it is located where it keeps up a loud buzzing and prevents the owner from hearing anything but his own voice. The brain is composed of small cells which secrete currents of air and undigested opinions, forming a pleasing melody which are ejected into a conversation at a high rate of speed. After a plain, crude brain has been run through the High School and a college curriculum, it becomes so muscular that it can tackle the dead languages without a can opener. Some brains are geared higher than others, and do not need to be primed with the comic supplement or lubricated with 49-cent fiction. The largest brain ever produced in this country was the one worn by the late Dan'l Webster, who always had to sit for his hats. Whenever Dan'l wanted to use his brain for any purpose he would take off his hat and allow his thoughts to flow in a northwesterly direction in the form of a sixteen-hour discourse upon that sacred instrument, the constitution. The brain of "T. Roosevelt" is not as large as Dan'l Webster's, but it is more porous and evades some of the shortest and most abrupt words in the English language. The college brain is an expensive variety which is sharpened to a high pitch of culture by coming in contact with the home plate and the 100-yard dash, after which it is turned loose on the business world at $5,000 per year. The legal brain is one which will guarantee to acquit anybody who has not confessed in the presence of a notary public, and is a very profitable style to cultivate. So many people are cultivating the legal headpiece that confessions are becoming fewer and farther between than strawberries in a hotel shortcake. A person is said to have a brain storm when his mind revolves rapidly on its axis and collides violently with the established order. Some brains are like an Arizona river, an inch deep and a mile wide at the mouth, but these are not effective except for political purposes.

A man who is deaf to other sounds can nearly always hear the rustle of a wetcoat.

Would Fall in a Faint

This letter from Mrs. Martin very well describes the terrible condition in which many a sufferer finds herself. She also tells how she regained health and strength by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food after all other treatments had failed.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes—"Before I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition from nervous exhaustion and prostration. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor. The weakness was so great that I could not so much as sweep the floor without fainting, but the nerve food helped me after the doctors failed. It has done wonders in building up my nervous system. I can do my own housework now and washing, and feel that this great medicine has been a God-send to me. I think it is the best of medicines."

At a luncheon of the American Women's Society in London to-day, Dr. George Parkin, organizing representative of the Rhodes Scholarship Trust, said he had approached J. P. Dr. Parkin said that such a plan would satisfy other nations that "hands across the sea" means something.

Special to Evening Telegram.
LONDON, July 16.
In reply to questions this afternoon as to whether friendly representations are being made to the United States Government with the aim of securing generous treatment for such British shipping as shall pass through the Panama Canal, Sir Edward Grey merely quoted article 3, part of the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty, which reads: "The Canal shall be free and open to the vessels of commerce and war of all nations observing these rules, on terms of entire equality, so there shall be no discrimination against any such nation, or its citizens or subjects, in respect of conditions or charges on traffic or otherwise. Such conditions and charges of traffic shall be just and equitable." Grey added: "As it appeared to the majority of His Majesty's Government that some provisions of the Bill now before the United States Senate would not be consistent with this article of the Treaty, it has been thought right to point out those objections to the Government of the United States in order that they may be taken into account while the Bill is under consideration."

Special to Evening Telegram.
WASHINGTON, July 16.
Britain's protest that the United States has no right under the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty to pass its own coastwise vessels free through the Panama Canal, while it collects tolls from British and other foreign ships, found emphatic support in the Senate to-day. Opening the fight over the Panama Canal Bill, sent to the Senate by the House, in which the free provision for American vessels is the important feature, Senators Burton and Root of New York outlined the ground upon which the opponents of free tolls for American ships will fight their battles. Both Senators declared that Great Britain surrendered important rights in Panama, held under the former Clayton-Bulwer treaty, because of a pledge for equal treatment to all ships given by the United States. In the existing Hay-Pauncefote Treaty the controversy hinges on the question whether the United States, in its pledge to treat ships of all nations equally, meant to include vessels owned by its own citizens. Senator Root, the former Secretary of State, unreservedly declared that the Hague Court would be called upon to settle the dispute finally, if the United States passed the Bill with the free provisions, which he characterized as unjustifiable discrimination against other nations. A decision against the States by the Hague Court, he said, would undoubtedly involve the country in the repayment of the millions of dollars to the owners of foreign ships, which might have been taken in as tolls at the canal. It is expected by the State Department officials to-day that the detailed British statement of protest against the Canal legislation would arrive in New York within the next forty-eight hours.

Dastardly Deed.

At dusk Monday evening as Mr. Jas. Nangle, carpenter, of this city, and Mr. John Flannery, of Topsail, were driving up slowly from the latter's residence to the station at Topsail they discovered that a wire had been spread across the road and was fastened at either side to a tree. It was just high enough to take a person driving over the place at night in the throat, and the obstruction was carefully covered with the leaves of trees which were wound around it and held in position with twine. Anyone driving quickly would be caught with it about the face or throat and the injury they would receive would be serious if not fatal. Who drew the wire across there it would likely be hard to discover, but that an effort should be made to identify him, so that proper punishment should be meted out to him, is imperative. The man who would do such mischief as the perpetrator of this deed had intended is a scoundrel who should receive no mercy if caught. It was fortunate that the men named were going at a slow pace, for they were right up on the obstruction before they were aware of its presence. Mr. Flannery after much trouble undid the wire and threw it away.

GENTLEMEN.—Last August my horse was badly cut in eleven places by a barbed wire fence. Three of the cuts, (small ones) healed soon, but the others became foul and rotten, and though I tried many kinds of medicine they had no beneficial result. At last a doctor advised me to use MINARD'S LINIMENT and in four weeks' time every sore was healed and the hair has grown over each one in fine condition. The Liniment is certainly wonderful in its working.

BY RUTH CA

How much of the happiness in this world is built on the very foundation of other people's envy?

That is a very disturbing and d is heartening thought which comes to me whenever I realize how o largely the value we place on things is determined, not by their intrinsic beauty or utility, but rather by their rarity.

Luxuries would not be luxuries if everyone could have them. "Automobiles are so common nowadays," says one of the rich folks who was among the first to own a car, "that there is no fun in having one. Why, every plumber and two-penny clerk has his machine. I think I shall sell mine." You see, a large proportion of his pleasure in owning a car consisted in having something that other people could not have.

Would the woman who declares she loves her diamonds because of their fire and sparkle continue to love them if a gigantic diamond mine were discovered and diamonds became inexpensive and correspondingly common? Indeed she would not. She would forget all about that fire and sparkle which she declared was so surpassingly beautiful, and would want some other gem which common people could not afford. The fact that it had less intrinsic beauty would probably mean nothing to her.

A plain girl longs with all her heart for a diamond necklace which she can wear to the ball.

But she knows that the diamond necklace is not the thing that will make her happy. She knows that the thing that will make her happy is the love of a man who will love her for her own sake.

And she knows that the love of a man who will love her for her own sake is the thing that will make her happy.

So she knows that the thing that will make her happy is the love of a man who will love her for her own sake.

And she knows that the love of a man who will love her for her own sake is the thing that will make her happy.

So she knows that the thing that will make her happy is the love of a man who will love her for her own sake.

And she knows that the love of a man who will love her for her own sake is the thing that will make her happy.

So she knows that the thing that will make her happy is the love of a man who will love her for her own sake.

And she knows that the love of a man who will love her for her own sake is the thing that will make her happy.

So she knows that the thing that will make her happy is the love of a man who will love her for her own sake.

And she knows that the love of a man who will love her for her own sake is the thing that will make her happy.

So she knows that the thing that will make her happy is the love of a man who will love her for her own sake.

And she knows that the love of a man who will love her for her own sake is the thing that will make her happy.

So she knows that the thing that will make her happy is the love of a man who will love her for her own sake.

And she knows that the love of a man who will love her for her own sake is the thing that will make her happy.

So she knows that the thing that will make her happy is the love of a man who will love her for her own sake.

Envy.

BY RUTH CAMERON.

How much of the happiness in this world is built on the very ugly foundation of other people's envy! That is a very disturbing and I should think a very unchristian thing which comes to me whenever I have occasion to realize how largely the value we place on things is determined, not by their intrinsic beauty or utility, but rather by their rarity.

Luxuries would not be luxuries if everyone could have them. "Automobiles are so common nowadays," says one of the rich folks who was among the first to own a car, "that there is no fun in having one. Why, every plumber and two-penny clerk has his machine. I think I shall sell mine." You see, a large proportion of his pleasure in owning a car consisted in having something that other people could not have.

Would the woman who declares she loves her diamonds because of their fire and sparkle continue to love them if a gigantic diamond mine were discovered and diamonds became inexpensive and correspondingly common? Indeed she wouldn't. She would forget all about that fire and sparkle which she declared was so surpassingly beautiful, and would want some other gem which common people could not afford. The fact that it had less intrinsic beauty would probably mean nothing to her.

A plain girl longs with all her heart to be pretty, and thinks she would be perfectly happy if she might be good to look at. Suppose a fairy godmother should appear to her and say, "I will make you very pretty, and at the same time, since you tell me beauty is such a desirable thing, I'll make every other plain girl in the world pretty, too." Do you think the plain girl would be satisfied? Do you think she'd be delighted at the good fortune which had come to all her sisters through her? Or would she be disappointed at the fairy godmother's catholicity of giving? I'll leave it to your knowledge of human nature to decide which.

I doubt if there is any motive which is behind more of our thoughts and words and acts than this desire to outshine other people, to have something which other people want and cannot have, in short to be the object of other people's envy.

It stands behind a woman's desire to have a richer cake at her party than Mrs. So-and-So served at her function. It spurs the great statesman in his struggle for fame—"that last infirmity of noble minds."

But its commonness is no excuse. To my mind it is one of the ugliest and most ignoble passions in the world.

To teach myself to value things for their intrinsic beauty or utility, and for the actual happiness I can get out of them, rather than for their rarity or the envy I can excite with them—this is one of my dearest ideals. Will you adopt it with me? Or perhaps you are one of the rare souls who have already attained it.

WOMAN'S WISDOM.

The worried mother wakes up to hear her baby's heavy breathing—a little cough—perhaps the croup or whooping cough. She does not want to send for the doctor when perhaps the trouble does not amount to much. Finally she thinks of that medical book her father gave her, The Common Sense Medical Adviser, by R. V. Pierce, M. D. She says "just the thing to find out what is the matter with the little dear." Two million households in this country own one—and it's to be had for only 31c. in stamps—1,000 pages in splendid cloth binding. A good family adviser in any emergency. It is for either sex. This is what many women write Dr. Pierce—in respect to his "Favorite Prescription," a remedy which has made thousands of melancholy and miserable women cheerful and happy, by curing the painful womanly diseases which undermine a woman's health and strength.

"My desire is to write a few lines to let you know what your valuable medicine has done for me," writes Mrs. MARGARET ZUREBERT, of 223 S. Benton Street, Baltimore, Md. "Before the stroke came to our house I was a very sick woman. I wrote you for advice which was kindly given and which made me a different woman in a short time. After taking the first bottle of 'Favorite Prescription' I began improving so that I hardly knew I was in such a condition. I did my own housework—washing and ironing, cooking, sewing, and the worst of all nursed three children who had whooping cough. I hardly knew of the advent ten minutes before—so easy was it. The baby is as fat as a butter-ball. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best medicine for any woman to take when in this condition. I recommend it to all my friends."

Whale Fishery vs. Codfishery.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Mr. Editor—Time and again letters have appeared in the papers condemning the killing of whales and each time the writers of these letters have been scoffed at and derided. Now we ask the question, "Who are the persons that thus laugh?" We have it indirectly answered by saying, "Those who scoff are the men on Water Street and elsewhere who have interests in the whaling business."

"That is quite natural," some one will say. Well, perhaps so; and it is just as natural that the fishermen try to do all they can to ensure good catches of fish every year. Everybody knows that good catches are not secured; that is, generally, of course. How is it that good catches are not secured? Because the fish do not come to land. How is it that the fish do not come to land? This is the reason: the whales being nearly all destroyed, the whale bait which God provided for the enormous animals has greatly increased in quantity. It is well known that these little fishes do not come to land to spawn, consequently the codfish do not have to come to land to find food. Some one will say, "Do codfish eat whale bait?" The person who doubts the fact that codfish eat whale bait has never cut open a codfish. I would advise him to do so.

Again, if codfish eat whale bait, so whales eat caplin. If they eat them of course they must chase them and consequently drive them to land. I do not say that caplin would not come to land but for the whales, but I do say that the caplin would come to land sooner than they do and in greater quantities. Now as there are no whales to devour the whale bait and to drive in the caplin, it is evident that the codfish have no need to come to land for food, and if they do happen to come to land they have already been glutted with food so that it is impossible to catch them with hook and line. A few, perhaps, may be jigged, but as far as the hand line and trawl are concerned, nothing can be caught with them.

Just at this time of the season there are myriads of caplin and whale bait on the grounds; also there is lots of codfish off on the grounds, but none can be got either by hook or twine. By the first because the fish is glutted, and by the second because the fish do not come to land.

How is it that herring are not more plentiful in Placentia Bay? It is because there are no whales to drive in the herring bait. I have asked dozens of old fishermen for their opinions concerning this, and they have all sounded the mournful cry: "No whales! No whales!"

Mr. Editor, a few are growing rich at the expense of thousands of fishermen. Will no one take up this cause? And not only this cause, but the cause of Newfoundland? We know what we have to trust to from such men as Morison and the Governor. The man who hastens the abolition of the whale fishery will be worshipped by its people and by the generations yet to come.

Where is Mr. Coaker? We thank him for what he has done, and he has done much. Will he, with you, Mr. Editor, not hasten to the rescue of our staple product? Yours, etc., PERSONNE.
Great Burin, July 10, 1912.

Placentia Pencilings.

The fishery during the past week has improved very much. Mr. R. Wyse arrived yesterday with 300 qts. from his trap, and Mr. Joseph Wyse is also reported well fished. We also learn that fish has struck in at Golden Bay and all the traps are doing well. This is very encouraging, for up to last week prospects were anything but bright.

Owing to the long spurt of dry weather and no water in the South East River the trout and salmon are not procurable beyond the Lily Pond, and although plentiful there it is only the thoroughly initiated can capture any.

Mr. Edward O'Reilly who for the past two years had been performing the duties of Sub-Collector at Placentia, whilst at St. John's a few days ago was struck by a motor car and had his side badly injured, came home on Tuesday last accompanied by Mrs. O'Reilly, and is now confined to his bed under the doctor's care. We learn with regret that it will be some time before he will be able to be about again. Mr. O'Reilly is one of our most popular men, courteous and obliging to all, his many friends here and elsewhere will be anxiously looking forward to his restoration to health.

The Tale of Perfect Time in a Watch

From Mainspring to Hairspring, between them lies the secret. The Mainspring is the power which it transmits to the active parts of the watch. The Hairspring has the control and regulates the motion. The firing is most delicate; imagine a 100th part of a hair. (Impossible isn't it?) Yet it is enough to interfere in its performance, so wonderful is the adjustment. The friction from accumulating dirt; lack of oil, etc., destroy these perfect things. Do not let your watch run to ruin from neglect. Remember our business is the care of watches, and our opinion costs nothing.
