Have You Given Your Stenographer a LINE-A-TIME?

WE have sold a number of them in the last month or two, and the testimonials we have received show the greatest enthusiasm over this little Machine that saves so much for the employer and the stenographer.

Were it not for the LINE-A-TIME hundreds of thousands of typists would have no prospect of relief from the nerve racking and health breaking practice of twisting their necks and shoulders, and straining their eyes a thousand times a day, over note books and record sheets.

Hundreds of thousands of employers would have to go on wrestling with the problem of how to increase the output of their typewriters without requiring more "work" from the operators.

The LINE-A-TIME has become widely popular with employers and office managers, not only as a money making, labor saving invention, but as a humane device that increases output by removing a condition detrimental to the welfare of the operator.

THE PRICE IS $8.50.

We will gladly put in a LINE-A-TIME for a week or a month so that your stenographer can give it a trial. If at any time she does not like it, or you think it does not do all we claim for it, we will take it back and there will be no charge for the time you have had it.

A New Novel by a New Writer.

The Honey Pot by Countess Barynska. It is a story of the stage, and never perhaps have the expectations and disappointments of the aspirant for a successful stage career been more naturally described. Two girls, Maggie and Lexie, hold the interest throughout. They are excellently contrasted. Maggie, the daughter of an actress, having been associated with the stage from her earliest childhood and influenced by its freedom, while Lexie has been brought up in refinement and wants a career for the use of her talent. It is not too much to say that Maggie, the lovable and loving girl who, with all her worldly wisdom, falls a prey to the man who captures her fancy, is a triumph of characterization. Natural and human she is the heart of the book; but hardly less interesting is Lexie's stubborn fight with its happy ending and the many intimate pictures of the life of the chorus girl. The whole story rings true. Paper, 65c; Cloth, 90c.

HOW MRS. BEAN MET THE CRISIS

Carried Safely Through Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Nashville, Tenn.—"When I was going through the Change of Life I had a tumor as large as a child's head. The doctor said it was three years coming and gave me medicine for it until I was called away from the city for some time. Of course I could not go to him then, so my sister-in-law told me that she thought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would cure it. It helped both the Change of Life and the tumor and when I got home I did not need the doctor. I took the Pinkham remedies until the tumor was gone, the doctor said, and I have not felt it since. I tell every one how I was cured. If this letter will help others you are welcome to use it."—Mrs. E. H. BEAN, 525 Joseph Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

"KYRA," OR, The Ward of the Earl of Vering.

CHAPTER II.

"As sure as I can be. The flowers, for all your commendation, are rare, and not to be bought in Covent Garden; and that boy the duchess brought to me last night said that he had seen a bouquet like them on his cousin's table."

Her ladyship nodded and bit the end of her ivory pencil, musingly.

"For another reason. If the count had sent them, he would have left a card; the other man would be sure not to do so."

"Why not?" asked her ladyship.

"Because," replied the daughter, with a faint smile at her mother's obtuseness, "because he is the sort of man to detect thanks."

"A phenomenon!" ejaculated Lady Devigne.

"And because I happened to mention that I liked the flowers."

Lady Devigne looked at her beautiful daughter with half-doubting gaze. "And yet he was not there last night."

"No," said Lillian, "but he will be here this morning."

"How do you know that?" demanded Lady Devigne, half startled by the tone of assurance.

"Because," came the reply, with a smile of sweet confidence, "last night was a piece of self-denial for which he will reward himself to-day; he will want to thank me for being kind to the boy last night—that will be the excuse."

Lady Devigne recorded a silent note of her daughter's proficiency in the knowledge of the masculine character, and nodded.

"You seem to be very confident of—of your influence, Lillian. We have not seen much of him."

Lillian Devigne rose, with a smile. "No; at present, mamma, he has not thrown prudence to the winds; it is for us to say whether he shall do so." As she spoke she looked at her mother with a curious smile, then seating herself at the piano commenced playing softly.

"The season is young yet," murmured Lady Devigne. "The earl is not an old man by any means—mamma, not so very old—and has a constitution of iron, or he would have been dead years ago. Your father was in his set, and if—"

"She stopped abruptly. "They tell me this map is wild, and it is a strange thing if he is not, every Vering I have known was."

Still the pure white fingers went on playing.

"The estate is hampered fearfully—I know that, and the earl's private money may not come to the young Chester. There is a risk—not a great one, certainly, but still a risk—are you listening, Lillian?"

"Yes, mamma," and for a moment the music ceases; for a moment only. It begins again, with the half-musing murmur of the calculating mother.

"Yes, there is a risk, and the season has scarcely begun. They say the Marquis of Orland is ill. Spend the season here—it may be true—what are your inclinations, Lillian?"

The music of the piano does not cease, as the music of her voice chimes in, soft and low, and sweet.

"We have declined long ago, mamma, that my own inclinations were not to be consulted."

"But—but—must have formed some idea. What do you intend doing?"

A slight flush sweeps across the lovely face as she turns to answer. "I shall follow your advice, mamma."

"Well, then, my dear Lillian," responds her ladyship, with slow calculation, "be careful, and do not be too hasty."

Then the music breaks out, into louder strains, and the face which had been partially visible from the mother's watchful eye is completely hidden.

Suddenly the music comes to an end—with a quick, light movement, Lillian Devigne stood beside the table, arranging the flowers as we first saw her—arranging them with an air of sweet abstraction and careless grace that changes to one of perfect surprise and welcome as the footman announces Mr. Chester and Mr. Merivale, and those gentlemen come forward.

CHAPTER III.

Certainly a beautiful woman is the grandest, sweetest sight on this earth, of ours. How much is its sweetness increased when the woman wears a smile of pleasant welcome.

Percy Chester paused for a moment in the doorway of Lady Devigne's drawing-room to take in, as it were, the exquisite loveliness of the girl bending over the flowers in the vase, and his appreciation was not lessened by the quick smile which brightened her face as she turned to him.

"How you startled me!" she murmured, in her low, clear, even-toned voice, so full of that subtle music which high breeding alone can produce. "I thought it was the man from Howell and James."

"And must be proportionately disappointed," put in Percy, with his rare smile.

"No," she said, with a faint, pleased little curve of the lip that was the very perfection of art—the next thing to a smile and a pout; "no, not altogether."

"And he lives with you?" she resumed, half-absently. "How nice for you to have some one to talk to—confide in, to sympathize with you. How I envy you!"

She sighed. The sigh invited further questioning. Percy, who was never so vulnerable as when a woman grew softly confidential, drew a little nearer, and leaned over the arm of the ottoman on which she had sunk.

"Why should you envy me?" he asked, wondering, as he spoke, in an undercurrent of thought, if there were gether, for mamma and I were just agreeing that we were rather triste, and—then you came. We are very grateful."

As she spoke she subsided into one of the lounges, and made room for him beside her.

"That is strange," he said, "for I came this morning to get rid of that load of gratitude on my part."

She opened her beautiful eyes with charming surprise.

"Yes," he said, answering the look, and glancing toward the other end of the room, where Charlie Merivale was chatting in his boyish way with Lady Devigne, who held his open, ingenuous soul in her hands and read it like a book; "yes, I cannot let your kindness of last night to my cousin yonder pass without expressing my gratitude. It was good of you to be kind to him, and believe me, the boy shares my gratitude."

A beautiful smile, so open, candid and lovable, swept across the face of Lillian Devigne.

"I wish that I could accept your thanks—as some people do—just as if I deserved them; but I can't be so horribly deceitful. Do you know that I fell desperately in love with your cousin the moment I saw him, and that my kindness, as you call it, was perfectly interested? He is so nice, 'such good form,' as you gentlemen say, and most dangerously handsome. Do you know I knew that he was a relation of yours the moment I saw him? Was it not strange?"

Poor Chester was staggered for the moment by the too obvious flattery, but as he glanced at the sweet face, so apparently innocent of any worldly wile, he could not believe that she had meant to administer so palpable a sop to his vanity.

"Charlie and I are not very much alike, either," he said, looking over at the lad as he stood by the conservatory door, inward in responsive gratitude to Lady Devigne's subtle graciousness.

"And he lives with you?" she resumed, half-absently. "How nice for you to have some one to talk to—confide in, to sympathize with you. How I envy you!"

She sighed. The sigh invited further questioning. Percy, who was never so vulnerable as when a woman grew softly confidential, drew a little nearer, and leaned over the arm of the ottoman on which she had sunk.

"Why should you envy me?" he asked, wondering, as he spoke, in an undercurrent of thought, if there were ever such exquisitely shaped hands, as those which played beneath him with a half-faded flower.

"Because," she said, with a faint, confiding smile, "I myself am so utterly alone. I have no father, no sister, no brother."

Percy glanced at Lady Devigne. "Yes, mamma; I have dear mamma; but she is so practical, so matter-of-fact, and yet very lovable; but you understand me, I am sure, and are laughing at me."

And a little serious, deprecating smile drooped her sweet lips.

"I am not laughing—I could not laugh at any such feeling of yours," said Percy Chester, with that earnestness which with the fair sex is so dangerously taking in him; "I do understand, and I sympathize."

She repaid him for the avowal with an upturned glance of her eyes, then broke off suddenly:

"Did your cousin tell you that he had seen me in the park this morning?"

"No," said Percy, "and as he did not tell me, I am sure that he did not see you."

"And he laughed." "I saw him," she nodded, smiling. "How well he rides; I suppose you taught him? He has the military seat. You were in a cavalry regiment, were you not?"

"Yes, for a short time," said Percy. "I sold out because I was too lazy and too fond of my liberty. Yes, I taught Charlie what little he knows of horsemanship."

"I have just got a new purchase," said Miss Devigne. "I don't know whether I shall like her; I am almost afraid of her, really."

And she laughed a low, musical laugh.

Percy Chester, if he prided himself on anything, did so on his love for and knowledge of horsemanship.

"I have not seen her," he said. "I wish you had. Perhaps next time we meet in the Row, you will give me your opinion. I have had no one's excepting the dealer's, and he is likely to be biased."

"Very much so," assented Percy. "Then he stroked his mustache as a bright idea and a great temptation came uppermost."

How nice it would be if he could persuade this lovely woman to take a gallop over the tan in the early morning, when the birds were in full song, and the park fresh and free from the midday dust."

"Shall you be riding to-morrow?" "Yes."

"Suppose—I wonder whether Lady Devigne would forgive me if I suggested that you took the new mare for a gallop in the Row before breakfast? I could see her then."

Lillian Devigne looked surprised, pleased, then doubtful.

"What do you call before breakfast?" "Nine o'clock," replied Percy, boldly.

"That is the middle of the night." "I am aware; but if we made it any later we should have the Row full of the riding-masters and their demobilies."

"I will come," she said, with a charming affectation of boldness. "I will coax mamma, and—but are you sure that it will not be inconvenient for you? Nine's too early for gentlemen, who, I am told, do not get their breakfasts until noon."

"Don't believe such a libel on our sex," laughed Percy, rather guiltily. "And we will say nine to-morrow—that is, if you are not too exhausted by some gayety to-night, and sleep through the tryst."

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS How They Cure

PLESSISVILLE, QUE. "I suffered from Kidney Trouble for several years, and tried numerous remedies and doctors' prescriptions without permanent relief, my case being chronic. After seeing about Gin Pills, and as it is a well known fact that Juniper, without alcohol, is excellent for the Kidneys, I decided to try Gin Pills. One single pill gave me great relief. I have now taken four boxes of Gin Pills and find myself completely cured. No more had humor—increased in weight—clear eyes—fresh color—more strength and vigor. This is what Gin Pills have done for me."

"You have felt," he said, "in a large measure, the suffering that has come to our shores from the hands of our one-time allies."

He went forth to dare and die. Ah, not through the breathless thrills of the answer—"He was you!"

Is it not true, O Canadians? In a beautiful land we dwell where as yet no hostile army assails us with shot and shell.

But how many have priced and sold. How fearful the price they paid. To guard our shores from the threat that threatened to invade.

And but for these countless hands and the deeds of valor done, we had suffered the fate of Ireland. At the hand of the merciless invader.

And while we enjoy the freedom which brave men died to win, shall we have no part in the pain? Without which our hopes are vain.

Who can list to the voices called for help to withstand the foe? And refuse to part with loved ones who are longing, perhaps, for you.

O, women with sons and husbands, with brothers and sweethearts. In the day of our Empire's need, how much may depend on you.

And you who have none to offer, whose thoughts, perhaps, to the pain. Toward some quiet spot in God's land, where your loved ones long to be laid.

Remember, you, too, are helping. To answer the war's demand. While you give, for the soldier's part. The work of your willing hands.

And pray to the God of battles. For these loyal souls and these. Who patiently face the danger of the firing line for you.

French Canadians and the

(From the Montreal Herald.) Perhaps the best summary of the French-Canadians have in this war was given by the Marquis de Lamoignon in his recent address before the Canadian Club of the Habitant and the war, called that it had been officiated in the House of Commons when at 10,000 French-Canadian joined the colors, and that on present time at least 14,000 soldiers in the expeditionary French-Canadian units in sent war are:

The 22nd, under Col. Gaudin; The 41st, under Lieut-Col. Gaudin; The 57th, under Col. Piquet; The 63rd, under Lieut-Col. reau;

The 150th, under Lieut-Col. diers; The 165th, under Lieut-Col. The 167th, under Col. Reads; English name, but a Frenchman; The 178th, under Col. Giroux; The 189th, under Col. Piquet; The 206th, under Col. De S; The 233rd, under Col. Leprou; A stationary hospital, under Col. Casgrain;

Another stationary hospital, Col. Beauchamp. Also a field battery, which the late Major Janin.

Here we have practically units of 1,000 men, making 14,000. There are, at the front, other units to start. Having given these names, Mr. Lamoignon said: "Place this down: At least 17,000 soldiers will be found in the trenches of our army before the end of the war."

And if we obtain from parliament of Militia and Defence assistance as I and my Mr. Casgrain, obtained, I may say that, with goodwill to malice toward none, you should have 20,000 or more from the of Quebec without any difficulty.

Some time ago a local corps viewed, and one of the officers mounted on a horse that had been distinguished itself in a battle. A wag in the crowd posed to have recognized the horse he shouted out: "Baker horse promptly stopped dead nothing could urge it on. The call was getting painful, the officer was suddenly struck by a brilliant idea, and remarked to Joseph Lambert to enter St. Hospital, Signal Hill. He is a from tuberculosis.

"For You."

In the splendor of strong young manhood stood one, in the house of prayer, who poured forth a burning message to the people gathered there.

He pictured, with startling clearness, the terrific forces hurled at the gallant men whose triumph means peace for the troubled world.

"You have felt," he said, "in this village, the night of the mailed hand; for one of your lads has fallen, defending his native land."

"Was it only for fame and glory he went forth to dare and do?" Ah, no! through the breathless silence thrilled the answer—"He went for you!"

Is it not true, O Canadians? In a beautiful land we dwell, where as yet no hostile army assails us with shot and shell.

But how many have toiled and suffered, how fearful the price they paid, to guard our shores from the legions that threatened to invade.

And but for these countless heroes, and the deeds of valor done, we had suffered the fate of Belgium at the hand of the merciless Hun.

And while we enjoy the freedom which brave men died to maintain, shall we have no part in the suffering without which our hopes are vain?

Who can list to the voices calling for help to withstand the foe, and refuse to part with loved ones who are longing, perhaps, to go?

O, women with sons and husbands, with brothers and sweethearts true, in the day of our Empire's peril how much may depend on you!

And you who have none to offer, whose thoughts, perhaps, turn with pain toward some quiet spot in God's Acre where your loved ones long have lain;

Remember, you, too, are helping to answer the war's demands, while you give, for the soldiers' comfort, the work of your willing hands.

And pray to the God of battles for these loyal souls and true, who patiently face the dangers of the firing line "for you."

French Canadians and the War.

(From the Montreal Herald.) Perhaps the best summary of what the French-Canadians have done in this war was given by the Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, in his recent address before the Canadian Club of Ottawa on the 14th and the war. He recalled that it had been officially stated in the House of Commons last session that 10,000 French-Canadians had joined the colors, and that up to the present time at least 14,000 were under arms in the expeditionary forces. The French-Canadian units in the present war are:

- The 22nd, under Col. Gaudier.
The 41st, under Lieut-Col. Archambault.
The 57th, under Col. Paquet.
The 69th, under Lieut-Col. Danestean.
The 150th, under Lieut-Col. Barre.
The 163rd, under Lieut-Col. Desrochers.
The 165th, under Lieut-Col. Daigle.
The 167th, under Col. Readmon—an English name, but a Frenchman.
The 178th, under Col. Girouard.
The 189th, under Col. Pluize.
The 206th, under Col. De Salaberry.
The 233rd, under Col. Leprohon.
A stationary hospital, under Lieut-Col. Casgrain.
Another stationary hospital, under Col. Beauchamp.
Also a field battery, which was under the late Major Janin.
Here we have practically thirteen units of 1,000 men, making 14,000 soldiers, some at the front, others ready to start. Having given these particulars, Mr. Lemieux said: "Please take this down: At least 17,000 sons of habitants will be found in the ranks of Kitchener's army before the year has elapsed, and if we obtain from the Department of Militia and Defence the same assistance as I and my friend, Mr. Casgrain, obtained, I make bold to say that, with goodwill to all and malice toward none, you shall have your 20,000 or more from the Province of Quebec without any difficulty."

Some time ago a local corps was reviewed, and one of the officers was mounted on a horse that had previously distinguished itself in a bakery business. A wag in the crowd is supposed to have recognized the horse, for he shouted out: "Baker!" The mobbing crowd urged it on. The situation was getting painful, when the officer was suddenly struck with a brilliant idea, and remarked with a bearing of his steel: "Not to-day, thank you!" The procession moved on without further delay.—The Royal Magazine.

Back From the Westward. Whale Fishery; Only one Vessel Will Prosecute

The S. S. Portia, Capt. Joe Keen, returned from the westward Saturday night. It was the ship's first visit this season to Bonne Bay and the round trip was made in nine days. The ship brought a small freight and a few passengers. From parties who came on the Portia we learn that codfish are plentiful on the Cape St. Mary's grounds. Herrings struck in abundance in several parts of St. Mary's Bay during last week. As a result some good catches of codfish were made. Mynn's boat, of Mortier Bay, got 35 quintals on the Cape Grounds Friday last. One of the first of the banking fleet to reach the home port with the spring catch is Mr. S. Hanson's new schooner in charge of Capt. Handrigan, which arrived at Grand Bank last week. She had 900 qtls. of cod which were taken in the Gulf around Cape North. Capt. Handrigan reports that the other Newfoundland bankers are doing fairly well and have catches ranging from 200 to 700 quintals. He reports that fish are plentiful but that stormy weather is hindering operations.

Patient Brought Here in Schooner.

The ambulance was called to Bowring Bros. wharf yesterday and conveyed to the General Hospital Evelyn Brown, aged 18 years, for treatment. The patient is suffering from a bad knee, the result of a hurt she received in the leg many years ago and it is feared amputation will be necessary. The sufferer belongs to Fair Islands, B. B. and was brought here in the schooner Ethie May.

Throbbing, Neuralgic Headache Cured Head-Splitting Distress Vanishes Instantly

This Wonderful Curative Linctant Never Fails. RUB ON NERVILINE.

Neuralgia quickly cured is twice, nay, ten times cured. Little neuralgia pains grow into big ones, but "Nerviline" in ten minutes relieves even the worst ones. Even a single application will remove the nerve congestion that causes the pain.

Nerviline penetrates deeply into the sore tissue, reaches the source of inflammation, drives it out root and branch. Every drop of Nerviline is potent in pain-subduing power, and its strongest charm lies in the fact that it rubs right in, even to the very last drop. Nerviline is not greasy, and its pain-removing power is at least five times greater in strength than ordinary remedies.

In aid of Empire Day Red Cross Fund.

The W. P. A. have appointed a Committee of Ladies to sell refreshments at the Sports, May 24th, at St. George's Field. All who can are requested to send donations of cakes, sandwiches, lemonade, ice-cream, etc., to the following ladies:—Mesdames Adams, V. P. Burke, Herder, C. Hutchings, Holloway and C. P. Ayre on or before Tuesday, or to the field on Wednesday morning. Owing to the large number of appeals being made at present, the ladies have decided that this shall be the only appeal they will make. May 17, 20, 22.

GROVELING.

We do not rise on shining wings, to altitudes sublime, because on little footy things we fool away our time. We do not try to walk the stars, or from low levels fly; our talk is all of motor cars, and climbing hills "on high." We don't discuss the latest burst of rare and deathless song, but talk of slaw and liverwurst, and bless the dinner gong. We're talking nearly all the time, and all our talk is bunk; we'll talk a fortnight for a dime, and six months for a plunk. We rip our neighbors up the backs, and drone about the crops, and roast the grinding income tax, and criticize the cops; we talk about H. C. of L., which takes our good long green, and we denounce, with bitter yell, the price of gasoline; The same old topics every day, and all the sad year long! You never hear a fellow say a word of Art or Song! None ever stops you on the street, to talk of Milton's rhymes, but every pilgrim will repeat his spiel concerning times!

Calls Sub Commander Inhuman.

Liverpool, May 16th.—(New York Tribune)—Chief officer Collins of the British four-masted ship Calgate which was sunk by a German submarine in the Atlantic, who landed at Liverpool yesterday protested vigorously against the submarine commander's inhuman and barbarous conduct in setting the seaman adrift in open boats after sinking the ship during a terrific gale and in a high sea. "I reckon nobody calling themselves white men or claiming to have in them a shred of humanity would cast men adrift in a small boat during such weather," said Collins. "When I was leaving the ship I did not think the boats would live through such a sea." The Calgate's crew belonged to many nationalities. The chief officers boat was adrift forty-five hours before its occupants were rescued by a patrol vessel.

The Limit.

A certain retired tradesman admits that he is a "very poor judge of a good horse," while the local blacksmith lays claim to be a "very good judge of a bad one."

One day recently the former took an animal which looked like a horse down to the smithy to be shod. "Ow many shoes shall I put on?" asked the wielder of the hammer, surveying the sorry-looking steed. "Four, of course," said the animal's owner; adding slowly, "if you think he's worth it." The smith put two shoes in place and then stopped. "Mind you," he said warningly to the proud owner of the equine curiosity, "I ain't a-goin' to say as your 'oss ain't worth another couple o' shoes; but I'm sartain sure as 'e's got as many as 'e can carry away!"

Woman Hurt at Gambo

Mr. Eli Whiteway received a message from Gambo a few days ago stating that Mrs. Wm. Lush had fractured her hip and was being sent on to St. John's to enter hospital, also requesting that the ambulance be at the station to receive her. Two expresses have since reached the city and twice the ambulance had to return empty. As cases like this have to be attended to immediately, and every available cot is filled, outport-people who intend entering the hospital should advise by wire the moment they leave their homes.

Signs of Great Things

There are signs that great things will be doing in Mesopotamia during the next few months. Today the news comes of a force of Russian cavalry joining Gen. Lake, British Commander-in-Chief, to the South of the river Tigris. The form of the message seems to carry with it the information that this force of Russians came either from Persia or that portion of Asiatic Turkey to the North-east of Mosul. The message says that the official communication issued on Saturday night brings the welcome but astonishing intelligence that the party of Russian cavalry had succeeded in joining Goring's force on the South bank of the Tigris. These words appear to exclude the possibility of the Russian cavalry having been transported by the Siberian Railway and sea to the mouth of the Tigris just as the Russian forces were sent to France. As no information has come of the Russians arriving at Mosul or its vicinity, it may be that this force crossed to the West of Mosul and marched through the midst of Mesopotamia, passed Bagdad, and then got in touch with the British forces, but the journey is so long and perilous that it is difficult to imagine that such a feat has been accomplished. It seems more probable that it is part of the mobile force which had been operating in Persia to the East of Bagdad. The difficulties of getting these to the South of the Tigris would also be considerable as there would be difficult mountain passes to cross on the borders between Persia and the province of Bagdad. Later news brings the intelligence that a very considerable number of Austrian troops, 12,000 is the number mentioned, have arrived at Bagdad, and that 4,000 German troops are being sent to aid the Turks in Asia Minor. There is also mention of a concentration of forces near Alexandrette with a view of frustrating the landing of Entente troops by the Navy. Alexandrette is to the North-east of Cyprus in the North-east corner of the Levant just where the North Syrian coast line turns sharply to the West and forms almost to the right angle. The railway to Bagdad crosses close to the coast here, and there is also the junction of the Syria railway which runs towards the Egyptian frontier.

Lieut.-Col. Franklin.

Major Franklin, who was mentioned in despatches on New Year's Day, and that previously had acted as temporary Lieutenant-Colonel, is now we believe, Lieut.-Colonel of one of the Warwickshires. We congratulate the gallant officer on the high honor that has been conferred upon him, also to his father-in-law, the Hon. George Knowling.

"Scotty" Allen Makes Good.

Gains Rapid Promotion — Is Now a Sergeant.

His many friends in the city, particularly in the East End, will no doubt, be glad to know that Ben Allen, popularly known as "Scotty," has won rapid promotion through the ranks of the Army. A letter received by last mail tells that he is now attached to the Territorial Royal Field Artillery Training School and is an instructor of bayonet and Swedish drill, holding the rank of Sergeant. When previously heard of some few months ago he was a Corporal in the R. F. A. Regiment, since then he graduated from Barracks at Aldershot, having passed a highly creditable examination and for which he was given an extra stripe.

On three different occasions during the early part of the war Sergt. Allen tried to enlist with Our Regiment. He was turned down by the doctor. He was anxious to see the front and then he visited Bonnie Scotland his birthplace and enlisted.

We congratulate "Scotty" and wish him continued success and good luck.

S.O. E Church Parade

Yesterday afternoon, Lodges Dudley and Empire, S.O.E., held their annual church parade and attended Divine Service at St. Thomas's Church. Notwithstanding the fact that almost all the younger members of the Society have enlisted, the parade was fairly large. Rev. Dr. Jones, Rector, was the preacher on the occasion and after welcoming the Society took as his text, "Surely the wrath of man shall praise Thee," and in an able manner described the present war as seen through the eyes of religion. A special form of service had been arranged, consisting of the following hymns: "Onward, Christian Soldiers," "Eternal Father, God Supreme," "O God Our Help in Ages Past," Psalms and prayer, and for the anthem, Mozart's Gloria in Excelsis. The collection amounted to $50.00, and will be donated to the Patriotic Fund. At the conclusion of the service the congregation sang the National Anthem. After returning to the hall patriotic addresses were delivered by District Deputy Bro. G. B. Lloyd, Past Presidents, Hon. R. A. Squires, W. Quick and Pike. The usual vote of thanks of the preacher, choir and organist were passed.

Obituary.

MARY CUMMINS.

There passed away yesterday, at the residence of Mr. W. Pridoux, Superintendent of the Poor Asylum, Miss Mary Cummins, daughter of the late Captain James Cummins, famous as a seal-killer in the days before steam. Miss Cummins was well known in the city and for many years was Matron of Villa Nova Orphanage, which was established by the late Rev. Father Michael Morris, and after leaving there, took up her duties as Matron of the Poor Asylum, where she has been for the past quarter of a century. Deceased, who had reached a ripe age, was possessed of many excellent traits, and her many acts of kindness and charity to the members of the Institution will not soon be forgotten. The funeral will take place at 2.30 p.m. on Tuesday, from Mr. Pridoux's residence, Poor Asylum.

Tag Day.

The Red Cross Committee are holding their "Tag Day" to-morrow when the city will be canvassed for subscriptions towards the funds of their most worthy object. It is hoped that every citizen will give liberally and so make this collection a record one.

The Fair Ones for the Daylight Bill

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—The Daily Star in its issue of Saturday last states that its representative visited some of the mercantile premises (apparently with a view to finding fault with the now popular Daylight Bill) and learned that employers of labour as well as employees were opposed to the strenuous efforts being made by Mr. Anderson and his associates to introduce the "Daylight Scheme." If he had come further east, in his travels and visited the business places where the early hours have been adopted during the summer months, he would, no doubt, have been advised of very good reasons why the "Daylight Bill" should be enforced. He seems to pour all his sympathy on "the man of the wharf" but does not consider seriously the "female in the store" at all. Let him reflect for a moment and he will find that whilst the "man on the wharf" is at work he is enjoying the beautiful sunshine but what of the hundreds of female workers in our factories, shops, offices and work-rooms—are they not worthy of some little consideration?

In conversation with a wharfinger of over forty years experience I have just been informed that it will not make the slightest difference in the spreading or curling of fish, if the "Daylight Bill" is enacted, therefore why should the "man on the wharf" be considered more than anybody else in this important matter.

I fail to see how any level headed man or woman should oppose such a scheme unless he or she be too lazy to arise an hour earlier than usual during the summer mornings. Surely it was not the intention of our Maker that we should sleep away the beautiful sunshine now at our disposal, by turning day into night. Was not daylight intended for work and recreation, and darkness for rest and sleep? Wishing the "Daylight Bill" every success and apologising if I have been too lengthy in my remarks.

Yours very truly,
MORE DAYLIGHT.

What the Magazines Are Saying.

"Children," said the Sunday School superintendent, "this picture illustrates to-day's lesson: Lot was warned to take his wife and daughters, and flee out of Sodom. Here is Lot and his daughters, with his wife just behind them; and there is Sodom in the background. Now has any girl or boy a question before we take up the study of the lesson? Well, Susie?" "Please, Sir," lisped the latest graduate from the infant class, "where the flea?"—Harper's Magazine.

A visiting justice to a certain jail saw a prisoner who had a rat, and said: "Ah! you have a pet, I see." "Convict," "Yes, sir; I feeds him every day. I thinks more of that ere rat than any other living creature." Magistrate: "Ah! in every man there's something of the angel left, if one can only find it. How came you to take such a fancy to the rat?" Convict: "'Cos he bit the jailer!"—Cassell's Magazine.

Nursing bottles should be so constructed that the inner surface should contain no corners to collect milk. After each feeding the bottle should be scrubbed with a bottle brush with soapy water and filled with water containing boracic acid until time to boil them before refilling with the next day's supply. They should all be scrubbed each morning before putting in a kettle and covered with cold water, and allowed to boil.

The best remedy for baby's cold is to give a dose of castor oil. Then apply camphorated oil under the nose, the great financier, once sat at dinner beside a woman who was doing her best to get some tips as to what would be a good business for her son to engage in. Rothschild parried the question for a time, but at last he turned and said sharply: "Madam, I will tell you, selling matches is a very good business, if you have plenty of it."—System (Chicago).

SUCCESSFUL AIR FIGHT.

LONDON, To-day.
A British official on the western campaign roasts: Yesterday, Saturday, our aeroplanes had several successful encounters. An aeroplane fell on fire into some trees near Abimfor Wood in the enemy's lines, one of its occupants being seen to fall out.
Another hostile machine fell in flames near Contalmalosa, also in the enemy's lines after an encounter with one of our scouts, and the third crashed to earth in our lines near Maricourt. One of our aeroplanes fell into the enemy's lines. Much successful artillery work was accomplished early this morning. A hostile machine landed undamaged in our lines, and the pilot and observer were made prisoners.

JOHN DILLON'S MESSAGE.

LONDON, To-day.
John Dillon, the member of the Commons, who recently bitterly denounced the Government's methods of dealing with the Irish revolt, sent the following message to Judge McGoorty, Irish Fellowship Club, Chicago:—
"Irish insurrection inflicted a serious injury to the Irish cause. All hope of securing Home Rule in the near future depends more than ever on the union of the Irish race throughout the world and especially the support of Irish America."

GARVIN ON AN IRISH SETTLE-MENT.

LONDON, To-day.
Discussing the Irish question, Editor Garvin of the Observer says the only real method of Irish settlement is to revive the Buckingham Palace Conference which broke down before the war chiefly on the narrow question of Tyrore. We assume this will be the Premier's main proposal. It is desirable this settlement be molded between Irishmen themselves, and we hope that if the Buckingham Palace conference is resumed, its basis will be somewhat enlarged so as to embrace men like Sir Horace Plunkett who was not included before, but above all more depends upon Sir Edward Carson and John Redmond than ever depended on Irishmen before.
Cannot Redmond and his friends concede the exclusion of Ulster at the outset in order to get an immediate settlement? Cannot Carson and his friends agree to the joint sessions, meeting alternately at Dublin and Belfast, for the management of common Irish affairs? Let every effort be made first for the inclusion. If this does not work, then let Ulster be excluded for a time on such terms that there will be in a few years one Irish Parliament and one Irish nation.

T. P. O'CONNOR ON THE SITU-ATION.

LONDON, To-day.
T. P. O'Connor in an article in Reynolds Weekly newspaper says the suggested creation of a joint executive council, representing the two great Irish parties is impossible and would aggravate and not alleviate the passions and divisions. It would be disastrous to think, he says, of coercing Ulster, which must be won by equitable concessions. O'Connor adds he has received discouraging accounts as to the state of the feeling in Ireland. Among the wholesale arrests now going on there are those of many men who violently opposed Sinn Fein-ism. He says he knows personally the case of a boy of 17, home from school on vacation, who was sent to solitary confinement for five days, given insufficient food and only freed from his cell ten minutes out of each 24 hours and had nothing to read. This boy was the son of an ardent supporter of John Redmond.

Four thousand German troops are Warner's Rust-Proof Corsets!

The season's vogue of soft materials that cling to the figure, portraying every defect, makes a careful study of the corset a necessity.

The semi-fitting frocks, for instance, are really more dependent upon the lines made by the corset than one imagines at first glance.

Our study has been to stock only such corsets as we know, through a thorough fitting test, to not only meet every style requirement but to fit, while adequately supporting comfortably.

Therefore we have selected WARNER'S RUST-PROOF CORSETS because they Shape Fashionably—Fit Comfortably—Will Not Rust, Break or Tear.

Humble Pie.

RUTH CAMERON.

Do you know how to accept an apology gracefully and generously?

The other day I happened to hear one woman apologize to another for an unkind thing she had done. She didn't try to excuse herself, she said bravely and simply that she had done an unkind thing and was sorry.

And what do you suppose the other woman answered? "So am I."

Just that. Nothing to soften it, or to show that she appreciated the other's penitence.

It was like a tub of cold water emptied on one's head. I fairly gasped in sympathy.

She won't apologize very soon again. The woman who had apologized turned scarlet and shut her lips tightly together. I doubt if she will apologize to anyone very soon again.

And the woman who accepted her apology in that ungracious way will be to blame.

On another occasion I heard a mother whose daughter had come to her and, with that was evidently a painful effort, said she was very sorry she had been naughty, answer coldly, "That does no good now."

What a cruel answer to give a child! True, apologies cannot wipe out the consequences of a wrong, but they at least put one on record as regretting it and meaning to try to do better the next time.

It takes a good deal of courage to apologize. Many otherwise good and brave people do not seem to have the courage to own that they were wrong; have known people—men especially, I think this is particularly a masculine fault—who would do almost anything rather than own in so many words that they had been wrong. They would try to make up to you by being unusually kind and thoughtful, but when it came to saying, "I was wrong; I am sorry," there they absolutely balked.

There are other people who depend too much on apologies. Of course there is another type of person who seems to think it doesn't matter what he does if he apologizes for it afterwards. Over and over again he will offend in the same way and then expect you to freely forgive him when he says he is sorry, though you know all the time the same thing will happen again.

People like this have only themselves to blame when penitence wears thin and their apologies are ungraciously received. They know how they can earn a more gracious response.

But to the person who is apologizing for an offence that one has no reason to think will be repeated, one owes a decent gracious response for one's own sake. To respond ungraciously is to prove one's self a bore.

Humble pie is the most disagreeable eating in the world. Be sympathetic enough to help it down with the relish of your gracious reception.

Paint the handles of garden tools a bright red. They will be easily found if mislaid.

Mr. Widener Pays $200,000

FOR THE DOLLUS TAPESTRY. Famous "Crucifixion," from Morgan Collection, bought by Philadelphia Collector.

Mr. Joseph E. Widener, of Philadelphia, who recently acquired the famous Mazarin tapestry from the J. Pierpont Morgan collection for a price reputed to have been $600,000, has just purchased another of the famous examples in the same collection from the art firm of P. W. French & Co., No. 6 East Fifty-sixth Street. His newest acquisition is "The Crucifixion," by Van Orley. This makes Mr. Widener the possessor of the two tapestries which connoisseurs hold to be the most important of the Morgan collection and which are declared to be unsurpassed in America.

Mr. Mitchell Samuels, of the firm of P. W. French & Co., yesterday confirmed the sale of the tapestry to Mr. Widener, and declined to state the price received. It is known from other sources, however, that Mr. Widener paid about $200,000.

There were forty tapestries in the Morgan collection, which was acquired about two months ago from Mr. J. P. Morgan by the art firm for a price said to have been $2,000,000. The tapestries are still at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, to which institution they were lent by the late Mr. Morgan, but will be removed about June 1st.

The tapestry which Mr. Widener has just bought is generally known, among collectors as the Dollus Crucifixion. It is wonderfully rich with gold. It once belonged to the magnificent Berwick and Alba collection, which was spoken of so reverently by William Morris at the time of the sale. It is a few years later in date than the Mazarin tapestry, having been woven about 1525, and is in the style of the early Renaissance. The design was the work of the Fleming who originated more tapestries than the other designer, Bernard Van Orley.—N.Y. Herald, May 10.

GENERAL IVANOFF RETIRES.

Czar Pays Great Tribute to His Work in the War.

Petrograd, April 4.—General I. N. Ivanoff has retired from the command of the Russian armies in Volhynia and Galicia.

Reuter's Petrograd correspondent says that General Brusiloff commanding the eighth army has been appointed commander-in-chief of the armies of the southwestern front, in succession to General Ivanoff.

Emperor Nicholas, in a rescript referring to the actions fought by General Ivanoff, particularly the great battles which led to the capture of Lemberg and Przemysl and also his brilliant resistance of the Austro-German forces on the Vistula, says he recalls with profound gratitude the military labors of General Ivanoff, his skilful handling of armies, and his love for his soldiers.

"These long months of work," says the Emperor in the rescript, "have impaired your health, and so I sadly accede to your request and relieve you to your functions. I appoint you to the Council of the Empire, and wishing to have the benefit of your experience and science, I attach you to my personal staff."

General Brusiloff has done notable work since the outbreak of the war. His troops in September, 1914, captured the town of Halicz in Galicia, and his victory enabled the Russians to defeat the Teutons at Salskoye. For his achievements General Brusiloff was decorated by Emperor Nicholas. He is 63 years old.

Had a ship's anchor fall on my knee and leg, and knee swelled up and for six days I could not move it or get help. I then started to use MINARD'S LINIMENT and two bottles cured me.

British Papers to Be Smaller.

In consequence of the serious shortage of paper, at higher prices, which England is facing, the daily newspapers are asked to be ready to make a reduction of 40 per cent. in their pre-war size. It is even hinted that the Board of Trade may force a cutting down of the supply to publishers. The latter possibility is creating alarm in the English literary world. Many British newspapers are now setting their text matter in 7 point, in sympathy with their reduced size.

One man said to another, "I hear your wife has been taking singing lessons." "Yes," was the reply. "Well what do you think of her voice since it's been trained?" "It's no better, but there's a lot more of it."—Organist and Choirmaster.

In 1867, he opened a millinery establishment on Washington street. This burned in 1869 and he opened a second store on Temple place. He married Miss Margaret A. Costello, who also conducted a millinery establishment, and the two places were operated together until his retirement in 1912.

He was one of Boston's heaviest tax-payers for many years. He built the Grace building on Washington street, the Columbia Theatre and the adjoining building, the Mantua and Sheffield buildings on Tremont street, opposite the Majestic Theatre, the Head building at 181 Tremont street, next to Masonic Temple, and various other properties. At one time he owned the Langham Hotel.

He travelled in Europe extensively, making 16 trips with his family. He was one of the first extensive importers of millinery. He was a life member of the Catholic Union of Boston and was a member of the Charitable Irish Society.

During the second Cleveland administration, his only child, Pierce J. Grace, was the vice consul-general at London from 1892 to 1895. William J. Rescue of the Tara's Prisoners.

ROMANCE OF THE DESERT.
(From W. T. Massey's)

While on the Western Egyptian front last week, I heard full details of the rescue of the Tara prisoners from four officers engaged in that daring enterprise, in an absolutely unknown country, to succour nearly 100 starving Britons. It will stand as a classic in motoring annals. In many ways fortune favored us, but it was only by a complete disregard of tremendous difficulties and a display of high qualities of courage and resource that the expedition was successful.
The discovery of the place of concealment was one of the romantic features. When General Lukh re-occupied Sollum he found that the enemy had burnt the camp, and the German-owned munition factory at Bir Waer, six miles south of the port. Ten armoured cars, following up the enemy's tracks, came upon a remarkable road, which, starting in the desert, runs to Tobruk, ninety miles away in Tripoli. According to English notions the road surface was execrable, but the armoured car enthusiasts declare it to be splendid. Over it the motors had a speed of thirty-five miles an hour.
At Aziza, nineteen miles from Bir Waer, the cars suddenly came upon the enemy, and dashed into a Turkish mountain-gun and two machine-guns, killing every gunner by maxim fire. Then, without a halt they charged in line over the boulders, stiff scrub, sandy patches, and all the other traps among the widely-scattering foe, who were taking to their heels at the approach of the magical instruments of the infidel. The charge continued for seven miles, but the enemy, thrown into the wildest confusion, could not be further chased for fear of a shortage of petrol.

Many of the enemy were killed, and three field-guns, nine machine-guns, hundreds of rifles, spare parts, dynamite, travelling work-shops, and a quarter of a million rounds of rifle ammunition were captured.
Some of the camels, hit by our machine-gun fire, blew to pieces as if struck by a high explosive, and their burst into flames. It was found that the Arabs had loaded them up with bombs and petrol.
Arab's Long Memory.
On returning to Sollum, the Duke of Westminster was informed that a letter had been picked up in the ruins of Bir Waer from Captain Gwatkin Williams to Nuri Bey, complaining that the Tara prisoners were starving and ill, and suggesting that medical comforts should be procured at Sollum. The letter mentioned Bir Hakim as the place of the prisoners' detention. Every prisoner and refugee was interrogated, but none knew Bir Hakim except a man who said he had fed a flock there thirty years ago. Subsequently another man, who had been the prisoners' guard, was discovered, and the Duke asked permission to attempt a rescue. Every man in the batteries sat up all night and next day tuning up the machines. The batteries were reinforced by light cars carrying guns, and all the motor ambulances within travelling range of Sollum were brought in.
By midnight on March 16 there were gathered at the old Turkish fort on the ridge above Sollum nine armoured Rolls-Royce cars, five touring cars with guns, light cars with supplies, and the ambulances—forty-two motors altogether. No tourist trophy cars were ever more carefully prepared than these.

At three o'clock on St. Patrick's morning the column moved out of the fort across the few miles of trackless desert, until the Tobruk road was picked up. Aziza, the scene of the charge two days before, was reached in darkness, and the force halted for the first rays of the sun to light up the sky behind them. The cars then hummed ahead, gathering pace as the shadows disappeared. At sixty-five miles a small party of Arabs were disarmed, but the men were set free, as there was no room for prisoners.
For miles the tracks of a car had been seen and at eighty-one miles we captured a Wolsley belonging to the Royal Naval Armoured Car Division. The car's engine was in good order, but one of the back wheels was buckled. It had improvised tyres.
A great quantity of sheet rubber has been washed upon this coast, presumably part of the cargo of a torpedoed ship. The Arabs had rolled it up tightly, bound it with camel-hair, and fastened it to the rims with wire. An officer went out a few days later for his car, and found that it had been burnt.
When the column got eighty miles on the Tobruk road the cars changed direction, turning on the desert due south. After fifteen miles rough-and-tumble over desperately rough ground the party began to feel uncertain of success. The two Arab guides were arguing as to whether they were on the right track; the man who had not seen Bir Hakim since his boyhood thought they were wrong. The other Arab would not say much, although circumstances proved him a zealous guide. He thought the pace of the car was greater than it really was, and he expected to arrive sooner.
The desert was now very stony, but the going was fairly hard. A hundred miles went by, and then 105. That was believed to be the limit of the distance, but still there was not the faintest sign of the Tara prisoners' camp. At between 110 and 115 miles nobody spoke, and the silence suggested fears of failure. A mile further on the Arab became animated, on seeing a sort of small mountain.

"Are We Free?"
A halt was called at two o'clock, and the Duke sent forward the armoured cars to attack. They raced up to within 200 yards of the mound, and, as one would expect, the first car was that of Lieutenant William Griggs, the famous jockey, who regards this as the biggest of the classic races in which he has taken part.
Before the relievers the prisoners were standing silhouetted against the sky-line, absolutely motionless and silent as statues, dumb with amazement at the appearance of the strange throbbing feet. At last one man threw off the sack covering him and faintly cheered, and the crowd staggered forward in the rolling gait of starved men, and swarmed round the cars, crying, "Are we free?" They could not be persuaded to leave the cars, and slightly hindered our advance to tackle the guards, all of whom were subsequently killed. One officer declared that the prisoners were so excited that they "jawed like blades."
Meanwhile the remainder of the column, on seeing the prisoners leave the mound, started a tremendous race to the spot. They ran abreast, caring not for obstacles or punctures; but just tore forward as fast as their engines would propel them, and the air was filled with the cheers of the crews and the noise of the exhausts.
The prisoners' condition was desperate. A heap of white shells showed that snails had been their staple diet. Occasionally they had goat flesh, but the amount served out was reduced to the size of a skinned mouse one prisoner said. Some parties had gone out daily to find edible roots. These had been collected from a wide area, and as the captives' strength diminished they made painful journeys with small results. They think that in five days their resources would have ended. Some of them took freely of the bread, milk, jam and lully beef carried in the ambulances, and the cars were slowed down on the homeward journey. Sollum being reached on the following day.
The cars travelled 240 miles. With the rescued prisoners were two mascots of the Armoured Car Division, one being a parrot brought away from Ypres, which cannot speak, but betrays its former home by making a quaint noise like the flight of a shell. A shop's officer and a Greek interpreter missing from the prisoners were found safe. They went under escort to Tobruk for food, the guards telling the Italian authorities that the prisoners were starving and that the English would pay. While food was being procured the Italians received a wireless message announcing the rescue, and the two were immediately released.

A lecture on the war was being given at a finishing school for young ladies, and the lecturer wound up by exhorting his listeners to persuade every able-bodied man they knew to enlist. In the course of his fervent patriotic appeal he thumped the table and exclaimed feelingly: "What would be more sad than a man without a country?" "A country without a man!" promptly piped a particularly pretty flapper in the second row.—Pearson's Magazine.

LIGHT, HEAT, COMFORT!

The proprietor of one of the best known multiple shopping systems is credited with saying, "Give me any old shop, in any old street, and I'll guarantee to make it in twelve months the most widely known and best frequented shop in the district."

Mixed metaphors, perhaps, but expressive. Now we can more than imagine the kind of shop this well-known individual would open, for we pass it in almost every town—always a landmark to the street. No one fails to notice it. There is an indefinable air of welcome and invitation as one stands for a moment on the pathway and lets one's gaze travel inside it.

We cordially invite all progressive business men to visit our showroom and see our latest Lighting and Heating Appliances by the adoption of which the ideas outlined in the above extract from a London paper may be easily secured.

War News.

Messages Received Previous to 9 A.M.

MUNITION FACTORIES.

LONDON, May 20. David Lloyd George last night announced that one hundred and thirty-one munition factories have been added to the establishments under the Government. The total is now 3,577.

WAR RATES DROP.

NEW YORK, May 20. Transatlantic war risk rates have dropped from three per cent. in both New York and London markets during last week.

A NEWSPAPER'S PROFIT.

LONDON, May 20. The action of Great Britain in consenting to relax her blockade order and permit the safe passage of fifteen thousand tons of dye stuffs from Germany to the United States is strongly condemned in a lengthy editorial in the Morning Post, "because such action gives an advantage to the manufacturers of the Central Powers over our own manufacturers."

GERMAN GOVERNMENT'S PROPOSALS.

WASHINGTON, May 20. In pursuance of its policy to eliminate all possible cause of friction with the United States, the German Government proposes a solution to the Von Igel case, it is for the proceedings against Von Igel to be dropped and his papers returned on the understanding that he be recalled and punished in Germany if the evidence shows that he was guilty of an offence. The seized papers contain much valuable information affecting high personages who were involved in intrigues against the enemy.

LYNCH'S SENTENCE.

LONDON, May 20. The United States was officially informed today that the sentence of Jeremiah C. Lynch, naturalized American, who has been convicted of complicity in the Sinn Fein revolt, would be annulled by the military authorities during the day.

GERMAN ATTACK.

PARIS, May 20. German troops took the offensive along the Yser Canal between Steenvoort and Het Sas last night, the War Office announced today. An attempt to cross the Canal failed. The Germans also attacked in Champagne. The War Office announced that asphyxiating gas was used but that the assault was repulsed. Dunkirk was bombed by German aeroplanes, five persons being killed, and eleven wounded. In retaliation for the attacks, French aeroplanes dropped bombs on the German camps. On the Verdun front there were no important developments. French positions at Avocourt and at Deadman's Hill were bombarded very violently. Germans made another big attack on Le Mort Homme, but were repulsed by the French with heavy losses. Belgian aviators have bombarded a German aviation post in reprisal for raid on their cantonment. The French made a surprise attack on a German trench in Champagne district, and killed or captured all the occupants. The Germans made a raid on the British lines southwest of Loos. They entered the front trench, but were ejected.

ST. PIERRE BULLETIN.

PARIS, May 20. Northwest of Roye our artillery bombarded an enemy's munition depot, where several fires broke out. South of Soissons two strong German reconnoitering parties were dispersed by our fire. In Champagne a raid enabled us to penetrate in the German lines northwest of Ville sur Tournai.

south and dropped twenty-five explosive bombs over southeastern Kent. In one town a few bombs took effect. One soldier was killed, one woman and one seaman injured; one public house was wrecked and several houses were damaged. The remaining bombs caused no casualties or damage. The raiders all made off as soon as their bombs were discharged. One of the raiding seaplanes was brought down by a naval patrol off the Belgian coast this morning.

AUSTRIA CLAIMS BIG CAPTURE.

VIENNA, May 21. Austria claims capture of 13,000 Italians as prisoners, twelve centimetre howitzers, 107 guns, and 98 machine guns, since beginning of the offensive.

AUSTRIAN OFFENSIVE REPORTED BROKEN.

ROME, May 21. Italy reports the Austrian offensive broken, and the capture of a thousand prisoners, large stores of munitions and provisions from retreating Austrians.

AUSTRIAN CROWN PRINCE AT TRENT.

NEW YORK, May 21. A Rome despatch received here late today says that the Austrian Crown Prince has arrived at Trent, and is directing the campaign against Vicenza, on the northern Italian front.

tempted to escape when she caught sight of the British submarine.

The captain headed her under full speed for Swedish territorial waters, but stopped promptly when the boat was struck by a well directed shot from the submarine. The crew, including two women, were given ample time to leave the ship before it was sunk.

GREEK COLLIER SUNK.

TOULON, May 21. A Greek collier was sunk on Thursday by an Austrian submarine. Twenty-seven members of the crew were picked up by a French torpedo boat and brought to this port.

FROM MESOPOTAMIA.

LONDON, May 21. An official communication issued to-night, concerning the situation along the Tigris, follows: General Lake reports that on the 19th the enemy vacated Betharissa, an advanced position on the right bank of the Tigris. General Goring followed up the enemy, attacked, and carried Dujailem redoubt. The enemy are still holding their position on the left bank of the river, in force. Russian cavalry have joined General Goring after a bold and adventurous ride. This first news of operations on the Tigris since the fall of Kut-el-Amara, was sent to-day by General Lake, Commander of the British forces in Mesopotamia. Although it shows that the Turkish hot Sannayatt positions on the left bank of the Tigris, where the British check made it impossible to carry out the relief of General Townshend, it brings the welcome but astonishing intelligence that a body of Russian cavalry has succeeded in joining General Goring's forces on the south bank of the Tigris. How this important junction was effected is still unknown, and the story is awaited with intense interest. The supposition is that the detachment consisted of the Russian army which is threatening the Russian, but it still remains a puzzle where and how the Russians succeeded in passing the river. The Turkish hot Sannayatt has raised the question whether the Russians have already cut the Baghdad railway at Mosul. In any case, the unexpected appearance of this body of cavalry is as great a surprise as was the first landing of Russian troops in Marseilles. It is another instance of the rapid steady movement of the Russian forces in Asia Minor.

WHAT ROME SAYS.

ROME, May 21. The great offensive of the Austrian forces has so far found such well-placed resistance that all efforts result, according to official communications, in heavy losses and dispersion of their troops. Several thousand prisoners, arms, ammunition and provisions, abandoned by the retreating Austrians, have been captured. Some of the fiercest fighting occurred in the mountain heights far above those in which any previous combats have taken place.

RUSSIANS STILL ADVANCE.

PETROGRAD, May 21. Russian troops have occupied Saksa in Persia, and advanced on the village of Ban.

Funeral of Private Maxwell Reeves.

Large Number of People of St. John's Accompanied Remains to Railway Station—C. L. B. Band Played Dead March.

The funeral of the late Private Maxwell Reeves, who died last Friday morning at the General Hospital, took place yesterday afternoon from the residence of Mr. W. J. Clouston, Queen's Road, where the remains lay since the previous evening. Robed in the uniform of the Newfoundland Regiment the remains rested in a beautiful casket in the front room of Mr. Clouston's home. The casket was covered with a costly white velvet, the handles being of plated silver were exceptionally large, covering the casket was a large Union Jack, while pinned on the breast of the deceased was a beautiful pink rose, the emblem of purity, a fitting tribute to the soul of the young soldier. At the head of the casket on a special table, rested a magnificent wreath of red flowers, in the form of a cross, presented by the Red Cross Workers of the St. John Ambulance Brigade, and on the top of the casket and arranged on special stands were some beautiful and costly wreaths kindly presented by the following:—Officers of the 2nd Newfoundland Regiment, members of A Co. 2nd Newfoundland Regiment, Women's Patriotic Association of Newfoundland, Imperial Order of Daughters of the Empire, Mrs. W. J. Clouston, Mrs. W. H. Jones and Mr. Ernest Maunder. The cap, belt and arms of the departed soldier also rested on the top of the casket and with a faint stream of light pouring through the Venetian blind the room wherein the dead soldier lay presented a most impressive scene.

Shortly after 2 p.m. crowds started to gather at the junction of Queen's Road and Garrison Hill, while another crowd equally as large assembled at the Parade Grounds and watched the manoeuvres of the different sections of volunteers prior to the commencing of the parade. Headed by the C. L. B. Band the 2nd Newfoundland Regiment, 650 strong, proceeded from the Parade Grounds along Harvey Road, Military Road and Rawlins' Cross to Queen's Road the front rank halting opposite Mr. Clouston's house. The guard of honour with side arms, comrades of the same mess as the deceased, stood at attention and formed a square surrounding the hearse. By this time the swaying mass of humanity which had gathered from all parts of the city and nearby country places blocked the streets and filled to overflowing the vacant spaces in front of St. Patrick's Hall. The Rev. Mr. Brinton, Curate of the C. of E. Cathedral, who attended the deceased during his illness, was present and read the opening service for the burial of the dead, after which the pall-bearers, all volunteers under direction of Undertaker Carnell placed the casket on the hearse. As the remains were being brought through the door the officers stood at salute and with one quick motion the whole battalion came up to the attention whilst the great crowd of men, women and children looked silently on. The funeral parade, which was the largest of its kind ever seen in the history of St. John's, proceeded via Queen's Road, Theatre Hill, down Adelaide Street up Water Street to the Railway Station. The order of the cortege was:—

The Battalion Bugle Band with muffled drums C. L. B. Band The remains Relatives and civilian mourners Officers and men 2nd Nfd. Regiment Squads of N. C's Officers C. L. B. and C. C. C. The Royal Naval Reserve

As the procession proceeded the band of the C. L. B. played the favourite hymns of the dead soldier, "Son of My Soul," "Abide with Me," etc., and at the Railway Station played the Dead March. After this the casket that contained all that was mortal of the late Private Maxwell Reeves was laid in a strong coffin covering and while the battalion again stood at attention the bugles sounded the Last Post, after which the remains were placed in care of Mr. H. B. Curtis, Manager of the Reid-Newfoundland Express Company to be forwarded by this morning's train en route for St. Lawrence where the burial service will be concluded.

The Regiment returned to Headquarters via Job Street, New Gower Street, Theatre and Long's Hill, the C. L. B. Band discoursing music along the route of the March.

MARKET WELL STOCKED.

The Postal Department had installed at the G. P. Whether this system will prove successful or not time alone will tell.

Luck.
By GEORGE FITCH.
Author of "At Good Old Slwash."
Luck is the power, much more mysterious than the attraction of gravitation, which gives you the good things you don't deserve, and keeps you working for everything you get when it deserts you and chums up with your hated rival.

Luck is not controlled by a trust and cannot be bought in sealed paper packages. Men are born with luck, just as they are born with red hair and Jacksonian democracy—though they can lose the luck, while the others are permanent. With luck a man can drop a diamond studded watch into the river and can stun a catfish with a clam full of pearls in its stomach. With luck a man can have $10 worth of chickens stolen and can trace the thief by means of a pocket-book full of $20 bills which the latter has dropped in the hen house. With luck a man can have his political career made instead of ruined by being elected Vice-President—up to date this is luck's most wonderful achievement.

With a luck, a man who can't earn $2 a day with his muscles, or twenty-five cents a day with his brain, can sit down before a little table with funny marks on it and can make $500 in a night by guessing where the little ball is going to land. Without luck he can sit at the same table and leave his shoes and overcoat behind when he goes home.

Luck has made as many millionaires as industry has—though it doesn't get the credit. And it has made ten times as many paupers. Luck is a fine thing to have in prosperity when you don't need it. It will smuggle up to a rich man like a cat to a saucer of cream, but when a man has learned to think of luck as an old college chum and to depend on it to pull through a big business deal, it is generally some where else admiring the scenery. The world is full of men who are trying to persuade luck to earn their living, and you can detect most of them by the way they fall to pay back what they borrow of you. Luck loves nothing better than to lead a good friend into a grandstand and pick out a pony for him which is going to win 20 to 1 in the next race. But when the same friend tries to lead luck into the same grandstand and pick out another which will win him enough to pay his room rent on Saturday, it couldn't talk harder if it were being abducted. Luck positively refuses to work by the day.

The Eastern Trust Company.

A few reasons why an estate can be better administered by the Eastern Trust Company than by a personal executor or administrator:—
 1. The Company affords the estate absolute security; it has a paid-up capital of $931,000.00, and a reserve fund of $229,300.00.
 2. It has a long experience in the work of administering estates; it is incorporated for this business of acting as a trustee, and, unlike many other trust companies, it does no other.
 3. Its existence is perpetual. Your estate, in the event of the death of a personal executor or administrator, must look around for a substitute, and the work of administration is impeded during that time, and the new executor is unfamiliar with the policy of his predecessor, and confusion results. This company's existence is perpetual, and there is a continuity of policy in its administration that the death of its officers does not break.
 4. It possesses the confidence of governments, universities and prominent charities and administers their funds.
 5. A number of other advantages which will appear in due course.

Have just opened our new Spring Suitings. We were fortunate in securing a splendid range of
