Exposition Will Have a Big Feature List

This Year's Show Will Be Replete With Amusements—Good Fish Exhibit Planned.

The Nova Scotia Provincial Exhibition this year will be more replete than ever in amusement features and it will be better in its industrial, agricultural and commercial phases. The Fair will open on Saturday, September 12, and run to the following Saturday. Manager Hall says that he will have some decided novelties in the mechanical department. For instance, the United Shoe Manufacturing Company of Canada will have fifteen shoe-making machines in continuous operation. They will make all kinds of shoes in full view of visitors, and all parts of them will be produced from the upper to the sole and exemplifying sewing, pegging and all other operations in various styles of footwear. These machines will be driven by a 15-horse power motor.

In the amusement features Manager Hall has arranged for eleven great specialties, including singing and comedy acts, besides a fireworks display that will be equal if not eclipse what has been done before. The midway will be on new and attractive lines—a show in itself. The exhibition management predict.

All in all the 1914 Exhibition at Halifax will be on a more imposing scale than any hitherto, and will be an ample reward to all who come to Halifax for an annual holiday trip to the City, taking in the Provincial Fair.

D., postmaster at Bridgetown, are brothers; and Mrs. Fenerty, of Brooklyn and Mrs. Riley of Torbrook, are sisters of the deceased.

A distinct earthquake shock was felt here on Tuesday, Monday, July 27th. Lightning storms are frequent. A large ash tree at W. R. Nelley's was badly hit recently. Also destroyed a lawn swing and a pane of glass. One of the family received quite a shock. Last week W. L. Spinney's place was visited and ornamental trees splintered. Sunday morning Henry McMaster's barn was hit at Meadowvale and a three-year-old colt killed, two pigs, besides damage to the building estimated at two hundred dollars.

Larger Wheat Area Under Cultivation

But Government Report Says Drought Has Affected Spring Crops—Live Stock Shows Decrease.

OTTAWA, July 17.—Revised estimates are available of the areas sown to spring crops this year, their condition on June 30, the acreages under the later-sown cereals and of hooed crops, and of the numbers of farm livestock. The areas of wheat, barley, mixed grains and oats, and clover are less, and of hay, rye, peas and alfalfa more than the estimates a month ago, when in Eastern Canada seeding was late. The areas under wheat is now placed at 11,022,000 acres, or 7,900 acres more than in 1913. Spring wheat occupies 10,048,700 acres, as against 10,045,000 acres in 1913, and the area to be harvested of fall wheat is 973,300 acres, almost the same as last year.

The area under oats is placed at 10,814,500 acres, 380,500 acres more than in 1913. Barley occupies 1,597,400 acres, against 1,613,000 acres last year; rye, 111,280 acres, against 119,130 acres; peas, 205,950 acres against 218,930 acres; mixed grains, 463,300 acres against 473,800 acres; hay and clover 7,779,000 acres against 8,169,000 acres; and alfalfa 90,385 acres, against 903,560 acres.

For the three Northwest Provinces the wheat average is 10,063,500 acres as compared with 10,633,000 acres last year; an increase being shown in Saskatchewan and Alberta, but a decrease in Manitoba. Oats occupy 6,106,000 acres as against 5,792,000 acres in 1913; and barley 1,038,000 acres against 1,023,000 acres.

The net increase in the three provinces for the three crops is: wheat, 27,500; oats, 314,000; and barley 13,000 acres; a total of 354,500 acres for the three crops. The largest increase of area in the three provinces is for oats, 314,000 acres, which apparently shows that increased attention is being given to mixed farming.

The acreage under the later sown cereal crops of 1914 are estimated as follows: Buckwheat 54,000, as against 380,000 in 1913; flax 1,163,000 as against 1,562,800; corn for husking 256,000 against 278,000; beans 43,830 against 46,200; potatoes 475,900 against 473,500; turnips, etc., 175,000 against 186,400; sugar beet 15,500, against 17,000; and corn for fodder 317,000, against 308,650.

The condition of spring-sown crops at the end of July was on the whole fairly satisfactory, excepting hay and clover, which, owing to the prolonged drought, has a standard condition of 73.7, as compared with 90.2 a month ago. All the other crops have exceeded from the high figures of June and their condition in percent of the standard of 100 was as follows:

Fall wheat, 78.2; Spring wheat, 86.3; all wheat, 84.5; oats, 87.3; barley, 86.2; rye, 84.7; peas, 86.9; mixed grains, 87.3; alfalfa, 81.5; and pasture, 83.2.

COMPARISON FOR SIX YEARS.
The condition of Spring wheat is marked as high as ninety in Saskatchewan. The percentages for wheat, barley and oats represents the promise of yield per acre superior to the six year average in the case of spring wheat and barley by three percent, and of rye by one percent, equal to the average in the case of oats, and one percent inferior in the case of fall wheat.

Estimates compiled from the reports of correspondents as to the numbers of farm livestock at the end of June result for all Canada as follows: Horses, 2,947,738; milch cows, 2,673,286; other cattle, 3,363,531; sheep, 2,058,945 and swine, 3,434,201—an increase in the case of horses, but a decrease for the other descriptions. In making their estimates this year correspondents were requested to take specially into account the known large exportation to the United States of farm live stock, and although many correspondents reported that new breeding stock will largely make up for deficiencies caused by these increases in the exports, it is apparent that the diminutions shown were caused by such exports. Tabulation of the returns by Provinces show that the decrease is mainly in the eastern part of Canada, since satisfactory increases in the numbers of livestock are shown for the Northwest Provinces, especially Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Leaders Have Aged

British Statesmen Show Marks of Their Long Struggle.

There is no activity on which a man ages more quickly than in politics. Quite young men in the British House of Commons look prematurely old.
At times even Mr. Churchill, over whose head only 40 summers have passed, has the look of a man of 50, and the tall-tale marks of age under the eyes have registered themselves. His colleague, Mr. Lloyd George, some 11 years older, has the walk and the alert figure of a well-preserved man of 50, but his hair worn thickly at the back, is quite gray. When the Chancellor is vexed the lines on his face show out very strongly. Only when he smiles, he looks his real age.

Mr. Asquith's hair, or what there is of it, is quite white. He gives the impression that he has lived every one of his 62 years, and that time has dealt not too kindly with him. He is young-looking, however, compared to Mr. Birrell, two years his senior, whose deathly pallor is accentuated by the mass of white hair that always seems awry. For a philosopher with an agreeable turn of humor, the Irish Secretary has ill-resisted the advance of years. One imagines his career likely to end with the dissolution of the present Government.

Thirteen years older than his leader, Lord Morley has aged perceptibly these last few years. His step is slow and measured; his voice is one rang through the House like a clarion, is now low and difficult to hear; the fine ascetic-looking face is the face of a very old man. One sees the difference in time's treatment of others when one notices the tall, upright, steady figure of Lord St. Aldwyn, better known as Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, striding proudly thru the Lords. On him the years have fallen very gracefully. He might be only 60 from that firm gait of his, and yet he is 77. With his daily floral buttonhole and his well-fitting clothes, Mr. Redmond encourages the belief that he is young, but regarding him in one of those off-moments, when his features assume a settle expression, one cannot help being struck by the time-worn picture he presents. His hair is now quite white.

Lord Lansdowne makes a brave struggle to resist looking unduly old, and remembering that he is 68 one must admit he has done much better than most contemporary statesmen in Parliament. His carriage is remarkably upright, and he shows wonderful vitality, due to the careful way in which he has husbanded his energies. Mr. Balfour, three years younger, has remarkably improved in health and appearance since he relinquished the reins to Mr. Bonar Law. He looks ten years to the good as compared to the days when the "Balfour must go" cry was the leading note in English politics. As for Mr. Bonar Law, he wears very well, and one has some difficulty in believing he is really 56. It would seem, therefore, that on the Liberal side age comes more quickly than on the Unionist. To be in office may be tempting, but it has its penalties.

St. John Exhibition

The Experimental Farm System of Canada is co-operating this year in making the Agricultural Department of the St. John Exhibition a larger and more complete feature than has been the case for some years. Owing to the early dates on which the Exhibition must be held in order to secure reasonable weather for those attending, the display of Agricultural products has during the last two or three Exhibitions not been as comprehensive as the Exhibition authorities would like but this year a special effort is being made and the Experimental Farm System will make an exhibit embracing the following departments: Animal Husbandry, Field Husbandry, Forage Plant Cereals, Botanical, Horticultural, Poultry, Chemical and Bees. This exhibit will be in charge of special officials and will be of a high educational value and of great interest to all classes whether farmer or not. It is also planned to supplement the value of the exhibit by literature especially prepared and also by special lectures to be delivered under the supervision of the Provincial Department of Agriculture. In these days it is the up-to-date and scientific farmer who produces the goods that command the best prices, and these lectures will describe the latest and most effective ways of getting the desired results. Other features are also under contemplation which will indeed make the St. John Exhibition of 1914 an Agricultural Exhibition in fact as well as in name. The dates are from Sept. 5, to 12th.

U. S. Apple Crop Will Top Record

SPOKANE, Wash., July 25.—This year's apple crop in the United States will exceed the record of 1912, according to a survey of the North Pacific Fruit Distributors, the co-operative selling agency which handles 65 percent of the Pacific northwest's commercial shipments.

It is apparent from reports issued by the head offices in Spokane that apple shipments from Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana will amount to about 15,000 cars a smaller total than authorities estimated earlier in the season. However, this figure is not final. The big selling agency is now making a careful survey of the crop in all localities. Each district in the four states will furnish a definite estimate to be reported at a meeting in Spokane, July 25.

Conflicting reports of California's apple crop have been received. The Watsonville district and the Pajaro valley each promise 2,000 cars. Conditions vary widely in other parts of that state.

Colorado, it is reported, will have the largest crop in its history, totalling between 3,000 and 3,500 cars. Utah and New Mexico will show increases.

"Practically all states have apples," the summary continues. "New York's crop will be the largest since 1896, it is declared. There may be a falling off in Indiana, Wisconsin and Minnesota, but these states are unimportant in point of production. Iowa is still uncertain. There will be large gains in all other New England, Southern and Middle Western States, particularly in the well-known apple producing districts.

Fifth Edition Desbarats Newspaper Directory

Since the publication of the last issue of the Desbarats Newspaper Directory the newspaper situation of Canada has changed to quite a considerable extent and the 1914 Edition of this Directory will be gladly welcomed by advertisers and others interested in newspaper facts. This new Edition is more comprehensive than any of its predecessors, and brings the information up to the latest period of any directory published. A very satisfactory feature is the greatly increased number of publishers of leading newspapers and periodicals who have given sworn detailed statements of circulation. A larger number than ever of country weeklies have furnished the publishers with exact circulation figures. The usual gazetteer features are included and a list of the most important manufacturers in each city and town is given—an exclusive feature of the Desbarats Newspaper Directory. It is attractively bound in cloth, contains some 336 pages, and the publishers' price is $5.00. On receipt of request and for the nominal price of 35 cts., the Desbarats Agency have made a practice of sending a copy of their Directory to any business concern interested in advertising. Said requests should be made on the stationery of the firm making the application to the Head Office of the Desbarats Advertising Agency, Limited, Montreal.

Letter from Rev. H. G. Mellick

Dear Editor:

Before leaving Lawrencetown I promised some of my friends I would try to write a letter for your columns. It was a rash promise to make, going on vacation, but I will try to fulfill it. If you see fit to print it I will ask them to receive it as a direct communication to themselves.

We are here at my old home on "The Island." This is the land of black foxes, but as we have black foxes in Nova Scotia I need not write about them here. They raise more than foxes over here. They raise fine horses, and cattle and sheep. They grow lots of potatoes and oats. Within the past thirty years there has been great improvement in the methods of industry and in the appearance of the homes and the general conditions of life.

The auto is allowed to run here now, but not much beyond city limits. The country roads are too narrow for safe autoing.

We had a pleasant trip coming; at a few points delayed trains caused some complaints, chiefly of the stomach. Doctors tell us one could, and some actually do live without a stomach. That would be a great convenience if it would come into general use like the telephone. Imagine what a change it would make. It would spoil that catchy little rhyme

"We can live without friends,
We can live without books;
But what in the world would we do
Without cooks."

Until the new invention, or new man, comes into use, we must have cooks and something to eat.

The hotels at Truro were pretty well crowded, but by a little hunting we found room. By starting on the early train from Middleton, we could have made the journey to our journey in one day.

We came direct from Picou to Souris, P. E. I. In all my trips across the Strait I never came this way before. It is a delightful sail. The steamer "Lady Sybil" that runs on this route is not so large as the ones going to Charlottetown, but it is comfortable and makes fairly good time. Good meals are served on board.

The distance from Picou is about the same to Souris as to Charlottetown, so we saved a day and a night in time, and several dollars in money by coming this way.

A great many tourists or native Islanders come down here for the summer vacation. It is quiet and cool. The great stretches of sand beach along the sea shores are lovely and there is fairly good fishing in the lakes and streams. We have tried for fish, but so far have not had very good luck, except when we went to the fishermen on the shore, where we get all the fresh cod and mackerel we wanted without hook or money.

We have found it a great convenience to have the train coming to within a few yards of my old home, a branch line having been completed to here recently.

We are all well, and we thank our friends for their kind wishes for our happy vacation, and for their efforts helping us out. We hope to return with renewed vigor for our work.

A friend whose praises are sung by all who have dealings at the station in Lawrencetown, kindly loaned me a case for my spectacles. It seems the boys had been smoking in close proximity to the case and it absorbed a very strong odor of tobacco which it still gives off very prominently. Some of my friends here who do not know these facts cast suspicious glances at me. It is hard to eat garlic or smoke in private and not give evidence of it in public. If this case is my undoing it will be up to the boys about the station to explain the facts and clear me of blame for the odor, or I may be like the colored man who was put for what he called fragrant. I think the open air and the sea breeze will improve the case as well as our health.

With all good wishes to our friends and all your readers,

Yours very truly,
H. G. MELLICK

Cold Comfort

There is a certain hotel up in British Columbia that has a reputation for being reasonable cold. It is a frame structure, and the walls are thin and shaky. One morning during a blizzard two guests who had been there the night before came out of their rooms on opposite sides of the hall. The first man said:

"Whew! I'm nearly frozen! I never was so cold in my life. I slept with all my clothes on and everything else piled on me, but I'm frosted through!"

"Same here," said the other. "I was on the windward side of this hut. I put my buffalo coat over my clothes, but I don't think I'll ever get warm."

They went down to the hotel office. There, huddled over the stove, was a stage driver who had lost his hair and whiskers were lumps of ice. His fur hat was frozen to his head. He shivered and shook with the cold, though he was practically sitting on the stove. He looked like a human icicle. The two guests looked for a minute. Then one of them asked:

"Which room did you have, partner?"

Tennis Tournament at Lawrencetown

On Saturday afternoon the first tournament of the season was played on the Lawrencetown Tennis Courts, between the Round Hill Tennis Club and the Lawrencetown Tennis Club.

The two clubs were very evenly matched and neither side had much advantage. The events were even and the home club won out by the small margin of three games.

After tennis a luncheon was served on the Island Park and the visitors left for home on the evening express.

His Majesty the Rhinoceros and How He Lives

If there is any one animal in this world with a perpetual bad temper it is the rhinoceros. Whether the sun shines, or the wind blows soft, or the rain is gentle and soothing, the rhinoceros is looking for trouble. He wouldn't be amiable if he could. He always looks at his world through blue glasses.

At first sight of the rhinoceros, or rhino, as he is called, his wonderful head is what attracts your attention. It is big and all out of proportion to the rest of his body. It is so ugly that it is like a nightmare, with the short, thick ears standing up, ready and listening. His upper lip is long and pointed and made to take hold of things. His horns are most curiously made. They are formed entirely of hair, pressed so tightly together in its growth that they form the dangerous horns with which they can make terrible wounds. These horns are sometimes quite small, only two or three inches long, but they are often as large as three and a half feet long. The longer horn is placed above the nostrils and the shorter one a short distance behind it. Altogether, the head of this animal is terribly strange and ugly.

Big as he is, the rhinoceros is not slow when he makes up his mind to move. Although he is of unwieldy size and has an awkward manner of walking, he is wonderfully quick and easy in the movement of his legs. He can run as fast as an ordinary horse. His eyes are not keen, but his sense of smell and his acute hearing make him a dangerous enemy to be near. The hunter does not need to get closer to the animals than a hundred yards, but as with me, those who are curious to study them must get close enough to see them clearly; therefore I had to be very wary.

This I found out in my hunting experience last year in Africa. One morning I saw two of the rhinos napping in the shadow of a bush. One was a cow and the other her calf, almost fully grown. They were accompanied by the usual number of tick birds, who, while feasting on the insects which infested the brutes, kept vigilant watch for intruders.

The birds arose suddenly, which caused the two brutes to get to their feet. Not smelling what startled the birds, they tried to see the cause. I did not wait, but stepped back. At once they came for my trembling porter and me. There was no time for hesitation, they came so swiftly, so I grabbed my rifle and fired a shot, which, while it did not kill the animal, had the effect of turning them both in another direction. My first close view of the wild, black rhino was not exactly satisfying. However, I trudged on.

Some distance farther on I sighted two more of the animals feeding. They were immense and fine specimens of their ugly kind, and one of them had an extra large and ridiculously ferocious-looking horn. My scared porter was still shaking from the previous encounter with the cow and calf rhinos, but we used care in our stalk, and the wind favoring us, we were crawling quietly toward them when I discovered another rhino about a mile and a half away and nearly down wind. I saw him just in time to avoid giving him my scent, thereby avoiding the charge he would certainly have made. If he had charged I would have been between two ferocious attacks from as ugly and wicked foes as one could imagine—two black rhinos on one side and another on the opposite side—so I became more wise than brave and crawled the other way, but always keeping my eye on the lone monster.

Soon he turned around and around, sniffing at the ground just as a cat will when it is ready to curl up for a nap. Then he laid down and went to sleep. Getting on the safe side of the wind, I crawled nearer and breathlessly watched the gigantic sleeper. He slept soundly, unconscious of the presence of hated man. At last a resistless desire to arouse him caused me to yell at him. Never did I see such quick effect. In a flash, with head down and erect tail waving the sign of battle, he charged for me. He meant business, and he meant it until he got a bullet which turned him from my way. The shot also disturbed the other two, who went off.

I sat down to give my jumping heart a chance to get quieted. Then the wind blowing just right, I moved toward the two rhinos, getting near enough for a satisfactory observation of them; in fact we got near enough to see the expression of their vicious little eyes. It would take the word "wicked" and all the synonyms for that word to picture those savage, angry lights.

We doubt if wild animals often attack people unless they are provoked; but these black rhinos did charge us without the slightest cause. In all my hunting experience, collecting specimens of these animals to be distributed among various scientific societies of the United States, I found that, clumsy as the rhinoceros looks and clumsily as he walks ordinarily, he can and will charge a human being when he sees fit.

The smallest rhinoceros specimen that I secured weighed in the flesh and bone 1,900 pounds, and that is considered an extremely small representative of the animal. The largest specimen that I secured weighed 8,900 pounds, or more than three tons. What the age of this largest specimen was myself nor no one else has been able to determine. We have some proof that the elephant lives to be three or four hundred years old. There is also some scientific evidence that the hippopotami reach an age between three and four hundred years.

As nearly as we have been able to estimate from studying his remains, the largest specimen that I brought back with me must have been at least four hundred years old to have secured his physical development.

I would have liked to have been able to have lived those four hundred years with him in the jungles of Africa and to have seen and known all the wonderful changes that must have taken place in the Dark Continent during that time. So far as being of service to the human race, the rhinoceros is valuable in a number of ways. His skin tans well, makes a fine shoe, and also an excellent coat for sailors or those who do rough work. His flesh is not good eating, but his bones are of the finest quality and can be used for any number of purposes. His tusk is of ivory vegetable formation and is used to make ornaments. The bones of his body, which have enormous strength, go into knife handles and the formation of the grips of many other tools; they practically will not wear out.

Diarrhoea Among Children

(Issued by the Department of the Public Health, Nova Scotia.)

When a baby has loose green passages, it means that he is sick and needs medical attention. The disease may be mild at first and the baby often shows no other signs of illness than diarrhoea. There may be no fever. Such a baby often becomes dangerously ill in a short time. Send for a doctor.

Sixteen per cent of the deaths during the first year, and thirteen per cent of the deaths during the second year of life, in Nova Scotia, are due to infantile diarrhoea.

The simplest cases of vomiting, and diarrhoea during the summer should not be neglected. Every such case should be treated as an emergency.

Stop the milk at once. Give a teaspoonful of castor oil, and feed nothing but barley water until the child has been seen by a doctor.

Do not give any cordial or teas or diarrhoea mixtures. Never give any medicine other than castor oil to the baby except upon the doctor's orders.

If the baby has fever, it is ill and you should consult your physician immediately.

The Department of the Public Health, Nova Scotia, issues a pamphlet on the Care of the Baby, which may be had free upon application to the Provincial Health Officer in the Province.

The decree to which foreigners are responsible for capital crimes in the Dominion is indicated by the fact that of eleven cases now before the Justice Department there is not a Canadian or British subject in the list. They are mostly Italian and Poles.

Slipping Cars and Other Things

(By Byron H. Stauffer.)

Over in England they "slip" railroad cars. The feat opened wide our American eyes. We had giggled gleefully over the dinky, gaily-painted locomotive, christened "The Duchess of Argyle," which was to carry us to London town. One of the gentlemen in the party urged his wife to take the dear little thing into her arms and fondle it as she might a well-washed, woolly and terribled poodle. And in the absent-mindedness of our amusement at the sight of the diminutive coaches we almost made the mistake of entering a rear car labelled "For Reading passengers only."

But once behind that we, false-tongued engine, we began to smoothly glide through park-like fields at sixty miles an hour. And as we shot through the depot-shed of Reading without even hesitating, we expressed the fear that those rear-coach passengers might do bodily harm to the conductor for carrying them past their city. A fine old Englishman assured us, however, that the Reading people had reached their destination. "We slipped their car, you see," he added, just as if we were supposed to understand what that meant. It had to be explained to us that "slipping" the car meant uncoupling it a mile or two down the track, turning it adrift, as it were, with a brakeman aboard to bring it to a halt right in the arch-roofed depot at Reading, while we were hurrying on towards the Metropolis without a second's loss.

We had never before seen it on this fashion. Perhaps the trick would not fit into our American railroad methods, depots and passenger cars, but I rather suspect that my travelling companion was right in telling the fine old Englishman that America "had nothing on" England in this matter, though the F. O. E. did not seem to grasp the slang, and had to have me explain to him that what we meant to say was that the Old Country had "put one over" on our new world, and that we would "have to come across." These phrases we finally translated into as pure English as we could command, and the F. O. E. seemed to regard us as exceptionally modest Americans whose acquaintance would be worth cultivating.

Slipping a car is really a great convenience. No need of beckoning a yard-engine to come down the track and get the undesired carriage. No waiting till the hostler of the iron steed gets his languid hand on the throttle, and the switchman gets the track laid out in proper fashion. No jolting and creaking and air-brake-sighing, while the task is being completed—no shunting, just slipping. The method is respectfully commended to the consideration of several railroads of my acquaintance.

In fact, this old-work trick furnishes a fine text for several kinds of exhortations. Every busy man, for instance, wishes that all people knew how to slip a business interview when it has reached its destination. Sometimes the visitor seems unable to get away without a deal of shunting. The engine makes several false starts. You do wish the man would take his hat, say good-day, and leave you to your heavy-laden desk.

In social calls, too, the guests often shunt around the hall after the wraps and hats are donned, the tired hosts meantime making every effort to appear interested against fearful odds.

Many a congregation, of course, would be glad if the parson could but slip his meeting an orator missed two or three golden opportunities to sit down in a whirl of enthusiastic applause. But he had one thing more to say, and he backed up and down the track before the terminus until everybody was tired.

Slipping our troubles at the right depot is an art many need to learn. Leave the business cares at the office, and the home cares downstairs. Don't take either to your bed. "I go to bed to sleep, Tom," said John Wesley, when his friend persisted in talking shop after the candle was blown out. I must now slip this little article, hoping the postman will bring it to a stop in the editor's office.

Secrets of Ancient Egypt

Many Are Now Seeing The Light of Day. Archaeologist Gives Details of Remarkable Discoveries On The Nile.

Prof. Edouard Naville, the well-known Egyptologist, has returned to Geneva and given further details of his remarkable discoveries in Egypt, including a reservoir more ancient than the Pyramids, and the tomb of the god Osiris, king of the dead. The professor is particularly desirous not to claim the honor of his discoveries alone, but to share it with his assistants, Messrs. Wainwright and Gibson, of London, and Thomas Whittemore, of Taft College, Boston.

The discoveries were made at Abydos, the old Egyptian Abut, which is half way between Cairo and Assuan, about eight miles away from the Nile, in the desert.

INTERESTING FIND.

"The ground I went over was not in a sense exactly new," said the professor, "for in 1913 Prof. Flinders-Petrie and Miss Murray of University College, London, had made interesting discoveries at Abydos, but I penetrated further during my two expeditions in 1912-1913 and 1913-1914.

"We worked from December 24, 1913, to March 11, 1914, and during the eleven weeks we experienced some anxiety and excitement. At nine yards under the soil we found a large building, constructed of granite and very hard red sandstone. This edifice is divided into three naves, which are surrounded by sixteen large cells, all identical in size and shape, and containing no inscriptions on the walls whatever.

"This latter fact proved that the building was very ancient, as the walls of the more modern edifices in Egypt are covered with inscriptions. In front of the cells is a stone platform surrounded by ten huge blocks of granite, and the platform skirts the reservoir, which we have not yet explored.

TOMB OF OSTRIA.

"On the opposite side to which we entered we found the burial place of Ostria, as the Body of the Dead and the inscription on the walls of the funeral chamber twenty yards by five yards proved to be beyond all doubt. We found also that in some remote past Egyptian thieves had entered the chamber of Ostria by piercing a hole in the wall, but it will of course never be known what the thieves carried away. Did they take the sarcophagus of Ostria?"

"According to our observation the temple and tomb of Ostria were modified and perhaps enlarged by Seti I., about the year 13 B. C. Ancient legends state that the body of Ostria was dismembered every night by his enemies and that the members were transported to different part of Egypt, and further that his sons gathered the members every morning and brought them back to the temple of Abydos. For this reason perhaps there are supposed to be several tombs of Ostria in Egypt, but the real one is at Abydos, we are sure."

SON OF EARTH AND HEAVEN.

Osiris, it may be recalled, was one of the principal Egyptian deities and the son of earth and heaven. After a war waged with his brother Seti, representing the eternal conflict between good and evil, he was slain. He rose again, however, and had dominion over the dead in the netherworld of Amenti. His wife was Isis (the dawn), his son Horus (the sun in his full strength.)

Next Sabbath: How Will It Be Kept?

Do you ask me what's the matter? Do you wonder what is wrong When the nation turns from worship, Sermon, prayer and sacred song? Why do people rush for pleasure, Leave religion in the lurch? Why prefer a padded auto To the cushion pew in church?

Reader, well I know the answer, But if I should speak aloud What I think is the real reason, It would queer me with the crowd You'll be popular, dear reader, When you wield the critic's birch, You'll be safely in the fashion? If you blame things on the church.

A man in Mississippi, sentenced to ten years' imprisonment, resorted to a hunger strike, and was permitted to starve to death. Contrary to the theory of the Suffragettes, the American nation does not appear to be unduly excited over the event.

The body of Commissioner Rees, of the Salvation Army, has been recovered from the sunken Empress of Ireland and fitting services were held at the burial.

—ONE of the most serious questions now presenting themselves for solution to the governments of Great Britain and the United States respects their treatment of the foreign peoples who have come under their sway.
No unprejudiced person can doubt that the occupation of the Philippines by the United States has been of great advantage, materially socially and morally, to the inhabitants of these islands. Neither can any unprejudiced person doubt that British ascendancy in India has been for the betterment in every way of the various sections of that great land. Lord Lawrence when Governor-General of India, said that notwithstanding all the good which the British government had done for India, the missionaries had done more good than all other agencies combined. But, leaving out altogether the present—consideration of the labors of the missionaries, the British government has done great things for India. In the immense reservoirs for the reception and distribution of water for purposes of family supply and irrigation there had been an almost total cessation of the famines which were such a frequent and distressing occurrence. In the setting up of a strong central government there has been an end of internal strife between local rulers and their factions. The introduction of systems of education along the lines of correct science has tended greatly to undermine the superstitions which held the people in ignorance and fear. There has also been the training in industrial arts and the opening up of commerce for the enlightenment and uplift of the masses. These and other advantages and concomitants of British rule have tended to awaken a sense of nationality. The people have begun to ask: "Why cannot we be rulers in our own land? Why should we be regarded as inferiors, and prevented from a reasonable share in the management of our own affairs?" As subjects of Great Britain, submissive to her authority and employed to defend and maintain it, why should we not be regarded as on an equality with our fellow subjects in other portions of the Empire? If our fellow citizens of other parts are allowed to come in among us and engage in such business as they desire, why may not we fellow citizens belonging to India be deterred from the same liberty of citizenship wherever we may choose to live under the same flag? We may be sure that the brave Sikhs, whose fathers and brothers have stood side by side with English Scotch and Irish soldiers on hotly contested battlefields and have merited and won the rewards of victory with the bravest, will not long tamely submit to be refused entrance to Canada on its western or eastern coast, or into any other part of Britains wide domain.
A solid and enduring imperialism must be based upon equality of rights. There must be no specially privileged classes, white or black or brown. There must be a fair field for ability and worth wherever they are found, whatever the racial differences may be. It should not be impossible for statesmen to formulate along these lines of ability and worth a standard of citizenship which will do justice to all. Otherwise the bonds of Empire will be but as a rope of sand. The sooner all the advocates of imperialism understand this, the sooner will their hopes be realized, and the first thing to be done is to hand over to the representative parts of Great Britain the control of such matters as pertain to their own purely local affairs, as is now the case in the different Provinces of Canada. Then a central Parliament with representatives from all the parts will have time wisely to consider and plan and direct such measures as will secure the stability and progress of the Empire as a whole.

The new bridge over the St. Lawrence near Quebec to take the place of the one which fell during erection, is now under construction. The Scientific American says that in strength, weight, capacity and length of span it will be the greatest structure of the kind in existence, and that there can be no doubt of its successful completion, as the faults which led to the fall of the first one are known and have been avoided.
The great Fifth Bridge in Scotland has two spans, each 1710 feet in clear length. Quebec bridge will have only one span but it will be 1800 feet in length. The longest of the suspension bridges over East River, New York has a span of only 1600 feet, and the old Brooklyn Bridge is still shorter. The Quebec bridge will have two railroad tracks and two footways. The tracks are expected to carry their full length two trains loaded with the heaviest modern freight traffic, besides the engines. Five thousand pounds per linear foot on both tracks is their estimated capacity. Most of the floor beams are 10 feet in depth and each weighs 55 tons. The main parts of the cantilever are built of four separate columns which are latticed together, measuring 9 feet by 10 feet and each post weighs 1500 tons. The shoe at the foot of each post is 19 feet high, 22 feet by 26 feet at the base and weight 400 tons. To build the pyramids was as easy task in comparison with the putting in place of these immense pillars. When and where will a greater bridge be built?

British Opinion on Feminine Fashions
"When feminine fashions, however objectionable, were far less hideous than they are at this moment, I was tempted to declare that woman ought not to have a vote until she has the sense to wear a dress which she could fasten up herself.
"The fact is that men cannot imagine a woman dressed as women have seen fit to dress for the last few years, being content to take any serious or worthy part in the work of the world."
"The thing that matters is that the mass of our women are not only content but eager to do any outrageous thing that is dictated by Fashion, and that fashions change with such increasing and bewildering rapidity that a large part of what ought to be the useful mental life of women is occupied in wondering what they ought to wear."

Speculators in Trouble
(Berwick Register.)
The Maritime Lumber Company, composed of British capitalists, including Lord Denbigh and John Howard, Agent General for Nova Scotia, which took over the Alfred Dickie Lumber properties when that concern went into liquidation, is in trouble. Its properties are now offered for sale by the Sheriff of Halifax County, at the suit of the Eastern Trust Company, foreclosing a mortgage given to the Royal Bank for money advanced. The sale will take place in the latter part of July. The areas embrace 300,000 acres of pine, spruce and hemlock and contain, as estimated, 1600,000,000 feet of lumber.
The Company put $300,000 into the venture and there are stock and bond liabilities aggregating $4,800,000.
Commenting on this item of news an exchange says:—
This is the Company that once proposed to build the railway from Halifax to the Strait of Canso. It is very unfortunate that through some mismanagement so much British capital is every now and then lost in Canadian speculations.
It is very unfortunate that speculators should be encouraged to make such investments. Lord Denbigh and John Howard had no intention of manufacturing lumber. They got possession—at a cost to them of one dollar an acre—of these 300,000 acres of woodland, estimated to contain 600,000,000 feet of pine, spruce and hemlock timber. They knew that timber would be needed and purposed to extort a good round profit from the lumber men who would cut those trees and convert them into building material or pulpwood. Unfortunately for them they have failed to secure a victim, and unfortunately for the country, there is nothing to prevent some other gang of speculators from securing these lands and holding them out of use, so ultimately compelling the manufacturer and consumer of lumber to pay an extortionate price for that material. Lumber cannot but advance in price, but that advance should accrue to the community not to the men who secure the tracts of woodland at a cost of one dollar or less per acre, and then hold them out of use until an enormous profit is assured.

Rural Deanery of Annapolis
The clergy of this Deanery met in chapter at Granville, P. E. I., on Monday and Tuesday, July 20 and 21, under the presidency of the Rev. H. How, Rural Dean. All the benefited priests of the Deanery were present. The Bishop of the diocese and Canon Vroom of King's College were welcome visitors. Messrs. Jones and Jeffery, Lay-readers, were also present.
A portion of the Greek Testament was, as usual, read and translated, followed by a critical and devotional paper on the passage read, by the Rev. W. S. H. Morris.
Other interesting and instructive papers included the following: "Non-vigilant Judgment," by the Rev. H. How; "The Fall," by the Rev. W. S. H. Morris; and "Confirmation," by the Rev. Dr. Hunt, of King's College, Windsor.
A long and instructive Conference was held, respecting the series of Parochial Missions to be held in every parish in the Deanery during the latter part of October. The Bishop informed the clergy as to the missionaries who will visit each parish, and a discussion took place concerning the preparation for the mission.
On Tuesday at 8 a. m., the Holy Communion was celebrated and the sermon ad clerum was preached by the Bishop.
The Bishop administered the Rite of Confirmation on Monday evening at Christ Church, Lower Granville, and on Tuesday evening at St. Luke's Church, Annapolis Royal.

Boats here full of cherry seekers visit Bear River most every day. The crop is abundant, but the price seems to be in keeping with the high cost of buying.

Bait has been very scarce for the last two weeks, so there has been very little fishing done by the boats. Dog fish have not shown up very badly this season.

Fishing has been very good this season and prices have been well up, so this may well be called a year of plenty, as the crops of the farm are considered generally above the average.

Schooner Albert J. Lutz, Captain Apt, arrived in port Sunday morning having made two successful halibut trips near Anticosti. The Captain says he made the trip home from Canso, 360 miles, in sixty hours, which with head winds and calm alternating, is "going some," an average of 6 miles per hour.

Panama Canal to Open Next Month

Ships Drawing Thirty Feet Can Make Passage After August 15.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Opening of the Panama canal to the world's commerce on August 15, next, is announced by Secretary Garrison of the Washington War Department. No ceremonies will mark the climax of the years of toil involved in digging the big ditch across the backbone of the continent. That will wait until the official opening in March, 1915, when an international fleet of warships will pass through the waterway and up the Pacific coast.

Secretary Garrison, on announcing the date of the canal's opening, stated that at this time ships needing not more than thirty feet of water would be accommodated in the passage between the two oceans. A greater depth will be available later.

HIS HEALTH IN A TERRIBLE STATE

"Fruit-a-lives" Healed His Kidneys and Cured Him

HAGERVILLE, ONT., AUG. 26th. 1913. "About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My kidneys were not doing their work and I was all run down in condition. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen 'Fruit-a-lives' advertised, I decided to try them. Their effect, I found more than satisfactory.

Their action was mild and the result all that could be expected. My kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes, and I regained my old-time vitality. Today, I am enjoying the best health I have ever had."

B. A. KELLY

"Fruit-a-lives" is the greatest Kidney Remedy in the world. It acts on the bowels and skin as well as on the kidneys, and thereby soothes and cures any kidney soreness.

STYLES IN HOUSEMAIDS.

Young Mrs. Wombat was a dame Who always dressed in style. She understood the fashion game. On dresses spent a pile.

Oh, she was willowy and slim. Could wear both checks and stripes! She liked to have her housemaids trim. And they were slender types.

But she would meet them on parade. And note with many frowns A pantry girl or parlour maid In one of her own gowns.

She had to drop her slender girls. From knowledge caution springs. And now she hires some portly pearls. Too fat to wear her things.

Too Much For the Whale. The Sunday school teacher was making a review of the Bible lesson.

"That's right. Now, Frank, who was the strongest man?" "Jonah."

"Cause the whale couldn't hold him after it got him down!" -Philadelphia North American.

Reasonable Expectation. "Has your son found anything to do since he came out of college?"

"Not yet."

"There ought to be plenty of work for a young man of his ability."

"Probably there is. You see, he has been looking for a place where he could start in at the top, but I expect him to give it up and take something else eventually." -Chicago Record-Herald.

WORRY CAN KILL.

Science Proves That Fretting Frequently Costs Life.

We have often heard that worry can kill even the nine-lived cat, but we have only half believed it, and until now we have had no scientific proof that it was so.

Medical science has recently confirmed the fact and explained how worry commits its murders. It has reached the conclusion that in many instances of what has been regarded as lunacy, and from which the victim usually dies, the cause has simply been one of acute worry.

Instead of the person dying of mental breakdown he has worried himself to death.

Worry medical science now defines as the dominance of one idea, usually that of fear. There is a fear of some existing condition or dread of what may happen. The idea crowds all others from the mind, or permits them only the feeblest and occasional activity.

The most terrible tyranny is the tyranny of an idea.

This one idea pounds hammer-like upon one set of brain cells. It overstimulates them, causing an unusual flow of food to those portions and a dearth of it to other parts of the brain.

This would not be serious if it happened only now and then, for every brain cell should be replenished by more than the usual flow of blood at times to keep it properly fed and nourished.

But a constant overfeeding of these cells causes a congestion there. The cells become more and more distended. The worry grows more and more acute.

The pounding of the blood against the sides of the cell acquires a hammer-like violence. The sides of the cells become more and more distended. There is a so-called "clot on the brain." Death follows.

The cure of the worry that kills is prevention. Refuse to worry. Do your best, and having done this, decline as positively to fret about the results as you would decline to drink a draught of poison.

Worry comes as an occasional visitor to everyone, but as we shut our doors to unwelcome visitors, so we close the portals against the entrance of worry.

Admitted, it ceases to become a visitor—it is a habit, and a habit that destroys. The action of worry upon the brain cells is most like the constant dropping of water upon a stone.

At first it makes not the slightest impression upon the stone, but in time it wears it away. The cells of the brain are of more delicate tissue, and the steady wear and tear of the extra blood supply in time quickly wears them out.

Or, according to medical science, it is as though a garment worn day after day without change soon falls into tatters.

Examinations of the brain after death have shown a group of nerve cells at the crown of the head that have perished in the same way the nerve of a tooth dies. While every other brain cell seems to be in ordinary condition this group has shrunk.

It is a curious coincidence, and science says a consequence, as in visible as effect and cause, that the hair on the portion of the scalp just above this brain area is the first to grow gray, and an excess of blood in any portion of the brain causes the scalp above that portion to be over-heated.

Keep the Spade Bright. If the hired man carelessly puts the spade away without cleaning it you may have a hard time cleaning it next time you go out to dig.

But if you have been careful to pot cinders in a nice pile not more than one minute will be required to clean the spade and make it as bright as a new dollar.

Simply dig in the cinders for a minute or so, shovelling them about as you do gravel and cement when mixing concrete, and the job is done.

We learned this while shovelling cinders into a post hole when building a fence. It works like a charm.

Russian Marriages. The celebration of a Russian marriage sometimes extends over three days. At the wedding festivities the bride is expected to dance with the men one after another until she drops with sheer fatigue.

It is a matter of pride with her to keep going as long as possible, and it is not unusual to find a bride dancing bravely for three days and three nights of vigorous frolic.

When a girl is dancing with a man she always holds his pipe. It would be regarded as extremely rude if a man should continue to smoke his pipe in such circumstances.—Tit-Bits.

DOFFING THE HAT.

It Was Once a Sign of Abject Subservience to a Superior.

We consider a man a gentleman who takes off his hat to a lady. At least the act is thought to be gentlemanly polite. The origin of this custom, like so many other customs common among so-called civilized peoples, go back to primitive times.

When a person was made captive his conqueror stripped him of his weapons and clothing and left him without anything he could call his own.

The captive was thus made a slave, his lack of clothing being evidence of his subjugation. We need only to look at the sculptures of the Assyrians to see the truth of this fact.

And in Isaiah xx. 2-4, we find this reminding statement: "And the Lord said, like as my servant Isaiah hath walked naked and barefoot three years for a sign, so shall the King of Assyria lead away the Egyptians prisoners and the Ethiopians captives, young and old, naked and barefoot."

The first step then, in tracing the origin of taking off the hat, is the surrender of the clothing among primitive and ancient peoples as a mark of submission.

The next step is the uncovering of the body as a mark of reverence. There are all degrees of uncovering, though often only the most valuable parts of the clothing are taken off in the presence of superiors.

Captain Cook tells us that during his stay at Tahiti two men came on board, and, as a sign of respect, took off the greater part of their clothing and put it on Cook and his friend.

In Abyssinia, Spencer tells us, it was the custom for inferiors to bare their bodies down to the girdle before superiors. But in the presence of equals only a corner of the tunic was removed so as to bare the shoulder.

This baring of the shoulder, especially throughout the Gold Coast, is a custom as common as taking off the hat with us.

Uncloaking in Spain is similar in origin. In Africa the men bare their shoulders and doff their caps to superiors, thus joining two customs in one.

It must be remembered that this act of uncovering the body was ceremonial in nature and used to show reverence to a superior. Then came the use of the ceremonial to propitiate the dead.

At funerals and in our graveyards men take off their hats on entering churches and before images of Christ and the Madonna.

In times of chivalry men raised their hats to ladies to show reverence. But this was only superficial in meaning.

A knight would ride down a poor peasant woman carrying a large burden and never think of helping her—least of all would he think of taking off his hat to her.

However, if he heard of some beautiful damsel of his own class in the slightest danger, imaginary or real, he would go to her aid, hat in hand, kneel and dedicate himself to her service.

To-day much the same thing occurs. Ordinarily a ray youth forgets to take off his hat to his mother, yet he shows this deference to his "best girl."

After all it is only form, and politeness should go deeper than this. However, the form persists, and it is of some historical interest to remember that it is a remnant of the primitive stripping of a captive by which process was expressed the fact that he yielded up all he had.

Taking off the hat to a wealthy girl means occasionally not only the yielding of all she has, but the getting of all she has. Ceremony is often nothing but a hard calculation in regard to personal results, especially where self-aggrandizement is the ultimate aim of the polished individual.

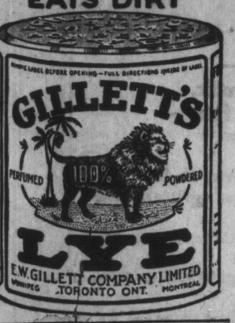

The Rich Turkish Beggar. Beggars are never suppressed in Turkey. The story is told (and they say it is true) about a lady who by mistake gave a beggar of Constantinople a gold piece.

The man had left his post when she returned, but one of his colleagues told her where he "resided."

It was a fine house, and at the door was a servant, who politely informed the lady that "my master is dressing. He will be down soon." And then the well-groomed beggar, dressed for dinner, appeared and gladly returned the gold piece, exclaiming in the meanwhile that such mistakes were highly embarrassing.

NURSED A HOT TEMPER.

Something Had to Give Way When William Morris Spoke Loose.

Though explosive tempers may not be admissible and temperamental explosions are not always harmlessly expended, they are always preferable to sullenness, brooding resentment or cold anger.

Arthur Compton-Rickett in his study of William Morris—"that jolly vivid man," as he terms him—relates several new instances of Morris' violent thunderclaps of temper and swiftly ensuing sullenness and withdrawal.

Once while he was painting he was startled from the room, and presently his railed model heard him furiously denouncing some one outside whom he dismissed or ejected and then returned a moment later still boiling with wrath.

He could not resume his work, but made wild dashes about the room, growling and muttering, until at last in a culminating access of rage he took a flying kick at the door and with a vast crashing and splintering smashed in a panel.

It was too much for his model's nerves, and he started to flee, but at that moment Morris, with his ire entirely gone now that the explosion was over, turned with a beaming smile, and assured him generally:

"It's all right, it's all right, but something had to give way!"

FLAVOR OF FOOD.

It is an Important Factor in Digestion and Good Health.

If it were not for flavor we should not digest our food properly. Epicureanism in eating is the handmaid of good health. Flavor has been called the soul of food.

The viands that are most agreeable to our sense of taste, those we enjoy most, are those we are most likely to digest well and from which we are most likely to derive the maximum of nourishment.

A book was devoted to this subject by Henry T. Fick of New York. He called it "Food and Flavor." In a review of it the Scientific American says: "The psychic factor of desire must precede ingestion or results will be unpropitious. To each cent spent for nutrient we add five more for flavor. Flavor, in short, has an appetizing value, a health value, a commercial value."

The evolution of a discriminating appetite and the education of the cook must go hand in hand. But your gluttony is never an epicure. Rational mastication must accompany the highest enjoyment of food, and in this enjoyment lie the perfect assimilation and health. It is for that stimulates the flow of the digestive juices; it is the digestive juices that prepare the food for the extraction of nutriment."

The Professor Was Wrong. Several decades ago a learned professor delivered a course of lectures, in one of which he proved to his own satisfaction that the Atlantic ocean could never be crossed by steam. Steam records had been discovered and applied on land, but he was confident it could never be applied to the ocean.

Under the peculiar conditions of the hearing rides, the danger of storms, the rolling of the tide, and so forth you could never apply steam to navigation across the Atlantic. The book in which that lecture was published was on the first steamer that crossed the Atlantic. The captain took it along as a sort of curiosity. The book did not have a very large sale, but there has been quite a run of steamers ever since, and the professor ceased to argue that steam could not be utilized on the ocean.—Christian Herald.

Saltin' One's Smoke.

The strangest way of taking his salt was probably Dr. Parr's. Parr had received a letter to fill his pipe half with the finest tobacco and half with salt. After that it is not very surprising to learn that he smoked "with a philosophical calmness."

On one occasion when the two met Charles Lamb's furious smoking of the strongest tobacco filled Dr. Parr with astonishment. Gently laying down his pipe, he inquired how Lamb had arrived at his power of smoking at such a rate.

"I tolled after it, sir, as some men toll after virtue," was Lamb's reply.—London Graphic.

Strychnine.

Strychnine is one of the most powerful vegetable poisons known, but it has very odd effects. Up to about one thirty-second of a grain it is often used in medicine as a stimulant. Very little more is required to bring on that peculiar state known as "tetanus" in which the muscles lock themselves up into such hard masses that they are as rigid as bone.

An overdose, however, has been known in at least one instance to cure itself.—Exchange.

How He Felt.

"You act as though you thought yourself superior to the government." "Well," replied the genial egotist, "I do feel slightly superior. As a taxpayer when I owe the government anything I pay. When the government owes me anything it does as it likes about the matter."—Washington Star.

TRUTH ABOUT MEXICO

LONDON TIMES CORRESPONDENT GIVES A VIVID PICTURE.

General on Trial Says He Could Not Fight Rebels in the Open Because of He Let His Soldiers Scatter They Would Desert—Officers Would Be Shot Down by Their Own Men.

A timely and gripping book, "The Real Mexico" has just been written by H. Hamilton Fyfe, the special correspondent for The London Times. A chapter devoted to the federalist army has a particular interest at this time. Among other things, Mr. Fyfe says:

"Torreon, the prosperous centre of the cotton-growing district, was taken by the revolutionaries in September. After denying for a week that it had fallen the War Office admitted the truth, but said that it would be retaken in a few days. For a month or so nothing happened. Then it was announced that a blow would be struck. Gen. Velasco would start at once, and the rebels would be driven out of Torreon. The Government had been urged to act vigorously, because in the cotton district a record crop was in need of being picked. They responded by putting a new tax upon cotton 'to meet the cost of the warlike operations' and by doing nothing."

"For six weeks after I saw Gen. Velasco's brigade in its five trains 'recon remained in the hands of the rebels. The forces which were to re-take it advanced and retreated, chased and set to partners, marched this way and that. Gen. Velasco was frequently reported to be not with his command, but in Saltillo. Not until the 10th of December was Torreon retaken and then only because the rebels had drawn off and left the garrison very weak."

"After the evacuation of Torreon by the Federals, Gen. Mungua was tried by a court of inquiry. The intention was to shoot him. This was his defence: 'How could I meet the rebels in the open? I was obliged to fight in loose formation. I was obliged to keep my troops together. If I did not they would melt away. Desertion is the idea uppermost in almost every soldier's mind. Again, how could I order my officers to lead their men to the attack? I knew their men would shoot them down as soon as they got the chance.'"

"The best generals would find it hard to do anything with such an army as this until they had disciplined it and discovered a certain number of men whom they could trust. Mexican generals have unfortunately very little talent for war, and they make, as a rule, no attempt to 'lick their men into shape.' Officers in command of the troops are therefore very slack. At a small battle in the State of Morelos the Federals by use of machine guns forced the rebels to retire. The nature of the country made it easy for their retreat to be cut off. But the Federal colonel looked at his watch. 'It is time for dinner,' he said and told his bugler to sound the 'Cease fire.' The rebels leisurely went away."

"That kind of incident, which happens daily, helps to keep current the belief that Federal officers do not wish to bring the war to an end. They do not take soldiering seriously."

"The Mexican army has no army service corps, no medical department to speak of. It carries no camp equipment, no supplies. Watch a field force break camp at dawn. First there go pattering off a horde of women laden with pots and pans, baskets and sometimes chickens. These are the soldiers' wives, the camp followers, the commissariat of the force. That they move as quickly as they do is a miracle. Whatever the day's march may be, they are always on the camping ground before the men arrive. They fix up shelters, they cook tortillas and frijoles (maize cakes and beans), they make coffee. You see them mending their husbands' coats, washing their shirts, roughly tending their wounds. Without these soldiers' wives and their camp followers, the army could not move. Criedas (maid-servants) were positively afraid to be out after dark."

"The difficulty of an invasion would lie in suppressing guerrilla warfare among the mountains, in the mountains, wherever the country offered good cover for 'sniping' and sudden attacks upon small detachments. It would be necessary to put in force a measure like the crimes act in Land League Ireland, which would make it a serious and it necessary a capital offense to possess arms."

Mr. Fyfe attributes Mexico's troubles largely to the rise of a middle class where before there were only the upper and 'peon' classes. This new group foments discontent in the breast of the 'peon' against those to whom his fathers had been accustomed to bow meekly ever since the Spanish conquest.

As to the future, he sums up as follows: "Madero was an accident. It is unlikely that the Mexican people will be deceived again in the same way. But the man who is to rule Mexico successfully must have something of Madero's good will and sympathy, as well as a great deal of Don Porfirio's ruthlessness and strength."

In a Bad Way.

"You seem much upset, my good man," remarked the c-rate, who happened to call when Murrin was laying down the law somewhat emphatically to his family circle.

"Husset?" bellowed Murrin. "I should think I am husset! Our blessed kid's just set 'issel on fire, an' blowed it the misus 'ere altho' bin an' put 'im out with my pot o' beer, an' me stony broke too!" -London Telegraph.

The Whole Business.

A very young housekeeper went to market to purchase a spring chicken. After selecting one and inquiring the price she said:

"Isn't three shillings rather high? The poultryer in our road only charged me 2s. 9d. the other day."

"With the feet on?" asked the salesman.

"No, I believe, now you mention it, the feet were cut off," she replied, with some hesitation.

"I thought so," said the man at the stall. "When we sell a fowl here, ma'am, we sell it feet and all." -London Telegraph.

Mr. Sampleson is a very irascible man, and is in the habit of punishing his boys severely. Not long since he observed that one of his sons needed a new pair of trousers. He scolded the boy for wearing out his clothes so fast.

The Frenchman did not like the look of the barking dog baring his way.

"It's all right," said his host; "don't you know the proverb: 'Barking dogs don't bite?'"

"Ah, yes," said the Frenchman. "I know ze proverb, you know ze proverb; but ze dog—does he know ze proverb?"

During a concert tour of the late Theodore Thomas and his celebrated orchestra, one of the musicians died, and the following telegram was immediately despatched to the parents of the deceased:

"John Black died suddenly to-day. Advise by wire as to disposition."

In a few hours the answer was received, reading as follows:

"We are broken-hearted; his disposition was a roving one."—Tit Bits.

"No man is as well known as he thinks he is," says Caruso. "I was motoring on Long Island recently. My car broke down, and while the chauffeur was repairing it, I entered a farmhouse to get warm."

"The farmer and I chatted in the kitchen before the wood stove, and when he asked my name, I told him modestly that it was Caruso."

"At that name he threw up his hands. 'Caruso!' he exclaimed, 'Robinson Caruso, the great traveller. Little did I expect ever to see a man like you in this humble kitchen, sir!'"

One day Mr. Smith went to buy a bushel of buckwheat for sowing. The man who sold the wheat was away but his wife undertook to wait on the customer. She found a peck measure, and they went to the granary.

She filled the measure twice, and, pouring the contents into the bag, began to tie it up.

"But, Mrs. Lawton," said the man, "it takes four pecks to make a bushel."

"Oh, does it?" replied the woman, as she untied the bag. "Well, you see I never had any experience in measuring grain before I married Mr. Lawton. I always taught school."

While presiding over a Church Conference a speaker began a tirade against the universities and education, expressing thankfulness that he had never been corrupted by contact with a college. After proceeding for a few minutes the bishop interrupted with the question:—

"Do I understand that Mr. X—is thankful for his ignorance?" "Well, yes," was the answer, "you can put it that way if you like." "Well, all I have to say," said the prelate, in sweet and musical voice, "all I have to say is that Mr. X has much to be thankful for."

The young Scotchman never liked his nother-in-law and this weighed heavily on the mind of his wife, who was ill. Calling her husband to her bedside, she said to him: "Sandy, lad, I'm verra ill and I think I'm about to dee, and before I dee I want you to gie me a promise." "I'll promise," replied Sandy.

"What is it?" "Weel, I ken that when I dee I'll hae a fine funeral, and I want you to ride up in front in a carriage wi' ma nither." "Weel," sadly responded Sandy, "I've gie'd ye my word, an' it's nae me that'll gang back on that, but I'll tell ye one thing: ye've spoilt the day for me."—The Argonaut.
