The London Daily Mail throws out a significant hint by expressing the hope that our government will complete the reform by lowering the huge charges levied on parcels...

Hen Works Six Days Rests on Sabbath

Munice, Ind., June 19.—Here's a nature story that is worth while, especially as it comes from a minister, the Rev. C. R. Watkins...

"There is not so very much to distinguish this hen from the ordinary one," said the Rev. Mr. Watkins...

"I first noticed her religious tendencies several weeks ago, and it was these, perhaps, combined with her industry as a layer of eggs, that are responsible for her being alive today..."

Since, although that was several weeks ago, now she has become a fixture in our home. She is in no farther danger of the roosting pen."

Dr. C. M. Carter, pastor of the first Baptist Church, vouches for some of the story. The Rev. Mr. Watkins first mentioned the circumstance to Dr. Carter...

A Toast to Gentlemen

The following toast to gentlemen is handed in by a lady contributor: Bless 'em! They have our joys, they double our sorrows, they treble our expenses, they multiply our cares, they excite our magnanimity, they increase our self respect, waken our enthusiasm, arouse our affections, control our property, and out-manoeuvre us in everything.

This world is a dreamy world without them. In fact, I may say without prospect of successful contradiction, that without them this wouldn't be much of a world anyhow. We love them, and the dear things can't help it: we control them and the precious fellows don't know it. As husbands they are convenient, though not always on hand; as beaus they are not by any means "matchless."

As our husbands, they are indispensable as visitors, handy at state fairs, and indispensable at oyster suppers. They are splendid as escorts for some other fellow, wife or sister, and as friends they are better than women. As our fathers they are impressively grand. A man may be a failure in business, a wretch in constitution, not enough to boast of as a beauty, nothing as wit, less than nothing as a legislator for women's rights, and not very brilliant as a member of the press, but if our father, we overlook his shortcomings and cover his peccadilloes with the divine mantle of charity.

Then as our husbands, how we love to parade with them as our paragons! In the sublime language of the poet: We'll lie for 'em, We'll cry for 'em, And if we could we'd fly for 'em; We'd do anything but die for 'em.

Files are easily and quickly checked with Dr. Shoop's Magic Ointment. To prove it I will mail a small trial box as a convincing test. Simply address Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. I surely would send it free unless I was certain that Dr. Shoop's Magic Ointment would stand the test. Remember it is made expressly and alone for swollen, painful, bleeding or itching piles, either external or internal. Large per box. Sold by all Dealers.

The Situation in the United States

Some striking evidence has recently been produced with regard to the American pulp and paper industry and the supply of raw material. Two enquiries have been made at Washington into the matter, one at the meeting of the governors of states convened by President Roosevelt to consider the preservation of natural resources...

At the meeting of the state governors, presided over by Mr. Roosevelt himself, Mr. James J. Hill, the great railroad magnate, spoke on the forestry problem of the United States, and pointed out that the end of American timber resources was plainly in sight under present conditions. He stated that according to the very highest estimates the stand of merchantable timber in the United States was only two thousand billion feet, already grown to over forty billion feet and was three or four times the annual increase of timber. At this rate the United States was rapidly using up its forest capital. He said that the New England supply, which is the greatest concern to Canadians, was already gone, the Northwest supply was going fast, and the South had passed its maximum production and was on the decline. There was therefore only the Pacific coast left. In the case of some varieties of timber he said that the next ten years would see absolute exhaustion.

Even still more striking from the point of view of the Canadian pulp-wood question is the testimony of Mr. David S. Cowles, President of the American Paper & Pulp Association, before the Special House Committee. He was asked: "What would be left of the paper industry in the United States in a few years from now if the Canadian Government should levy an export duty on pulpwood and woodpulp?"

"Little or nothing," said Mr. Cowles. No array of statistics could be more convincing of the precarious nature of the American manufacturer's position than this admission from the man who is now practically at the head of American pulp and paper makers and who more than any other has the right to act as their spokesman, being president of their association. This statement shows clearly and unmistakably that Canada has it in her power to decide whether the American paper industry shall or shall not continue to remain an American institution or shall become a Canadian one.

In connection with these remarkable statements by leading American business men, there are a few figures recently issued by the American Census Bureau that are well worth careful consideration. The American statistics give as the latest returns for the Canadian pulpwood imported into the United States during 1907, spruce to the amount of 965,575 cords, and 19,798 cords of poplar. This means that Canadians are harvesting almost one third of the 3,500,000 cords of pulpwood used in the United States during the year. Furthermore there is a great deal of Canadian wood which goes into the United States but does not appear in the returns, so that the annual exportation is probably well over the million mark. On broader rivers, as between New Brunswick and Maine, considerable quantities go across without any record being taken of them in government lists. The same applies to remote parts of Georgian Bay and Lake Superior where timber is rafted and floated across to the American side in secret. Methodists of courage; to differ considerably in various parts of the country, and there are places where 140 or even 170 cubic feet are reckoned to the cord instead of 128. Besides a good deal of wood which is shipped as cut-

Good Counsel

You are soon to leave the break away from the trailer ties of home, and go out to seek for fortune in the world. Let us whisper a few words of counsel. We suppose you wish to be rich; most people do. We don't think riches desirable. We should be sorry to have inherited wealth. But a competence is very desirable, is indispensable. Well the way to get it is by way of forethought and plain industry to execute, and prudence to keep the earnings of your work. Get what you honestly earn, but never take more. Money is by no means the best thing in life. You are here in this world to become a good man, a wise man, a just man, an affectionate man, a religious man. Work for your manhood as much as for your money; take as much pains to get, and as much to keep it. Keep clear of vice, especially intemperance, gambling and licentiousness. These three ruin thousands of young men every year. Be not gloomy, sour and stiff. Cheerfulness, gaiety, liveliness and mirthfulness belong to your period of life. You will find little real pleasure in anything your conscience forbids. As you have opportunity, cultivate your mind and forethought, and produce and industry will help you here as much as in getting money. And now would you prolong the sunshine of life forever? We must say to you that there is no real happiness in life without religion. It is a restraint from doing wrong, an encouragement to do right, and a great comfort at all times of life. And finally remember, though absent from the sight of the dear ones at home, you will ever live in their hearts; and their highest earthly wish will be that you may prove yourself a noble man.

wood ultimately finds its way to the pulp mill. On all these different counts it is safe to say that in 1907 Canada sent to the United States well over a million cords of pulpwood. And the question is how long are Canadians going to feed the industries of a commercial rival to the detriment of their own industrial development?

A Sensational Wedding

Consternation was brought into two homes yesterday by the foolish act of a young girl. Miss Beattie Tweedie, daughter of the governor of the province, came here last week and was a guest at the residence of Jas. G. Stevens, K. C. Tuesday afternoon, at about five o'clock she left the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stevens, and down town she was joined by a man named McKewen, or McElroy according as he interprets his own name, and together they proceeded to the residence of Rev. Chas. G. McCurry in Calais, and there the ceremony was performed that made them man and wife.

Later it developed that the man in the case had served as coachman for Governor Tweedie but had been discharged some weeks ago. Miss Tweedie, or Mrs. McKewen, returned Tuesday evening to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Stevens and spent the night there, and Wednesday afternoon she told her hostess what had transpired. The happy (?) couple left on the evening express over the C. P. R. enroute for Montreal.—Courier.

The new Rates Mean big Increase Mortuary Fund

Toronto, June 21.—The new rates adopted by the I. O. F. mean an increase of nearly $900,000 a year to the mortuary fund. Should there be any lapses on account of the higher rates this will, of course, be an advantage in decreasing the liability of the order. The increase averages $8 per member per annum. A deficit of $646,623 in 1907 under the old rates would under the new table have netted a surplus of $275,000. The order numbers 112,000 members, carrying $140,216,520 insurance. The average rate formerly paid was $1.01 per $1,000. This has been increased 65 cents per $1,000.

It has been decided to abandon the orphan's home on Foresters' Island, built by the late Dr. Oronhyatekta at a cost of $250,000. The sixty children cared for there will be provided for in the new farm house near Toronto.

The Union Trust Company will be continued in connection with the I. O. F. The capital stock was reduced from two to one million. The Foresters' stock was reduced from $1,000,000 to $400,000. On this amount ten per cent profit was paid. Toronto, June 21.—Harry Collins, the newly re-elected supreme treasurer of the Independent Foresters, died at his home on Mayor street about five o'clock Saturday afternoon. Last Monday when he announced his withdrawal from the contest for supreme chief ranger he was far from well and the attack culminated in a few days in acute conditions of nephritis, a form of kidney disease from which he has suffered for many years. Collins was sixty-four years old, and he held the office of supreme treasurer of the I. O. F. for eighteen years. He leaves one son, Harry, residing near Strathcona, Alberta and two daughters, both married. A widow also survives.

Lion and Bear are Good Friends

St. Petersburg, June 12.—Russian newspapers are unanimous on a few subjects, but on the subject of King Edward's visit to Russia, the reactionary Rossiya and Novoe Vremya are as cordial as the liberal Ketch or the rebel Russ. This is a great tribute to the popularity of the English Sovereign, and to properly understand how great it is we must bear in mind the attacks which the 'Novoe Vremya' made about a year ago on the French and their President, and the coldness with which the Russian Liberal press regarded the meeting of the Kaiser and the Czar at Swinemunde.

The only regret of the Russ is that the meeting takes place at sea, and that the Russian people are thus deprived of an opportunity to directly welcome their English guests. But the English King and his valiant sailors may rest assured that the Russian nation extends to them its heartiest welcome. The fact that the meeting takes place at sea is probably due to the tactfulness of King Edward whose host, the Czar, would be placed in a rather awkward position if he saw this people everywhere greeting the monarch with the greatest enthusiasm while paying him, their lawful sovereign no evidences of regard such as might be insisted on by the police and the Cossacks.

That demonstrations of welcome would occur were King Edward to put his foot ashore is a fact which there is no disputing, and of which the British Embassy in St. Petersburg is well aware, but the welcome would not, of course, be so much for the King personally as for the ruler of the friendly English nation. Campbell-Bannerman's happy phrase, La Douma est morte, vive la Douma! is probably forgotten in England by this time, but it will never be forgotten in Russia, and I notice that two Russian papers—the 'Slovo' and the 'Russ'—mention it, in the articles which they devote to the welcome of King Edward, thus showing that England's popularity here is due to her advocacy in Russia's dark hour of the cause of Russian freedom.

At a most difficult moment, says the 'Slovo' these words came to us like a message from heaven. King Edward's visit to Revel will, says the same paper be regarded with the greatest satisfaction by the people of Russia. The land of the oldest of parliaments will be welcomed by the land which contains the youngest of parliaments—thus showing how largely King Edward's welcome is a welcome to liberal England. The 'Retch' makes this still clearer.

THE POLITICAL ASPECT
The monarch of England, it says, the future guest of the Russian Emperor, can count on the very heartiest welcomes from the people of Russia. In the person of the English King the leading portion of the Russian public is glad to welcome England and the English nation, a friendly feeling towards which nation constitutes, we may say, one of the most precious traditions of Russian liberalism. In purely political matters Russian liberalism has always—to often in opposition to other tendencies—insisted strongly and stubbornly on the necessity of the closest possible rapprochement with England. In this, as in many other things, the feelings of the Liberals have been justified by the march of history.

If one feels dull and spiritless, in the spring or early summer, they call it 'Spring Fever.' But there is no fever—usually. It is the after effect of your winter habits. The nerves are mostly at fault. Tired, worn-out nerves leave us languid, lifeless, and without spirit or ambition. A few doses of Dr. Shoop's Restorative will absolutely and quickly change all of these depressing symptoms. The Restorative of course won't bring you back to full health in a day or two, but it will do enough in 48 hours to satisfy you that the remedy is reaching that "tired spot." Druggists everywhere are advising its use as a splendid and prompt general tonic. It gives more vim and more spirit to the spoonful than any other known nerve or constitutional tonic. It sharpens a falling appetite, aids digestion, frees sluggish livers and kidneys, and brings new life strength and ambition. Test it a few days and be convinced. Sold by All Dealers.

Cheese Frowned On In Japan

A Japanese who is not of the high-collar or ultra European cult would no more think of eating a rpe Camembert cheese than an American would think of giving a broiled lobster to a friend for a birthday or a New Year's gift. Yet the people who

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet their only symptoms are of a certain specific nerve sickness—nothing else.

Dr. Shoop's Restorative

call cheese "rotten milk" find decorative and symbolic attributes in the humble crustacean that has become a word of reproach in the western world.

Because there are no cows in Japan except those kept near the foreign settlements to supply Europeans and Americans, there was no cheese in Japan until that delicacy came in with the white resident. The Japanese, being introduced to cheese for the first time with the advent of the French restaurant in Yokohama and the foreign style Imperial Hotel in Tokio, appraised it with elemental directness. It smelled bad and was unfit food, so says the New York Sun.

"We eat daikon, which smells somewhat strongly," a Japanese student of the Imperial University once said, "but the smell is natural; it is part of the daikon. Your foreign cheese smells of decay; it is not cheese until it has decayed. I don't think it is proper to eat decayed things."

So inbred seems the Japanese antipathy to cheese that the rats in chrysanthemum land will not touch it. Foreign housewives in Yokohama say that when they open a tin of Denmark cheese they have no need to "cove" it again, for the rats will run right over the can and tackle the bag of rice on the pantry shelf.

The rats, it would seem, have never tasted cheese and do not care to try. The lobster, on the other hand, is a popular emblem of long life with the Japanese. To give one to a friend on his birthday or at New Year's means that the donor wishes that he may live so long that he may become doubled over like the lobster.

Sometimes a boiled lobster is hung up with pine boughs that are used to decorate the houses on New Year's Day, but more often it is a more abiding lobster made of cotton and scarlet cloth that has the place of honor over the door lintel.

Saved by a Cool Head

Sir Andrew Clarke while travelling in India ascended a high tower one evening and found at the top another tourist, an Englishman. They chatted pleasantly for a few minutes when suddenly the stranger seized Sir Andrew by the shoulders and said quietly: "I am going to throw you over." The man was a fanatic. The physician had only a moment in which to gather his thoughts, but that moment saved him. "Pooh!" he replied unconcernedly. "Anybody can throw a man off the tower. If we were on the ground you could not throw me up. That would be difficult." "Yes, I could," retorted the fanatic. "I could easily throw you up here from the ground. Let us go down and I will do it." The descent was accordingly made during which Sir Andrew managed to secure help and release himself from the perilous situation.

G. T. R. Rails Make Long Journey

An order of 2,500 tons of steel rails for use on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, from the Prince Rupert end, were recently shipped by a long route. They were made at Pittsburg and shipped to New York, thence across the Atlantic, through the Suez canal and Indian ocean and up the Yellow sea to Kobe, and there laden on the steamer Tencor, thence taken across the Pacific to Vancouver, B. Do Women Wash Their Hair Often Enough?

Lately there has sprung up a theory that the less hair is washed the better is its condition. This is so, even among hairdressers, who, after all, would profit considerably by an increase of custom if women washed their hair oftener. Now I am convinced they and women in general are wrong. The average woman should wash her hair twice as often as she does. At least twice a month, and often more frequently; in fact, I go so far as to say as often as the scalp feels in the least scurfy or dusty. It can never be wholesome to have the scalp covered with a loose super-surface of scurf or dust. This must be removed at once and the scalp left healthy, if the hair is to be beautiful. True, hair tonics and special dandruff recipes are great helps, but the ordinary homely shampoo is not easily to be beaten. Use soft rain water whenever you can get it, and you will be surprised to see how silky and delightful the hair will be afterward.

Do You Lack Self-Control?

If you are constantly keyed up, nervous perhaps depressed—look to your over-worked nerves for the cause. They are starving for the nourishment that Ferrozone so quickly supplies. Besides its tonic action on the nervous system, Ferrozone has marvelous blood-forming properties. It thus supplies strengthening materials to every nook and corner of the body and brings the system to a condition of perfect health. To be strong to eat well, and work long without fatigue, use Ferrozone; it is the best nerve system tonic known. At all dealers in 50c. boxes.

Meaning of "Muff"

The record of the fact that muffs were once worn by more men than women in Paris suggests the odd ingenious definition of a muff as "a soft thing that holds a lady's hand without squeezing it." "Muff" appears to have come to us from German, in which language, curiously, "muff" means, not only a hand comforter, but also a sulky person or a growing dog. These seem, however, to be two different words. Was our own metaphorical "muff" an illusion to the effeminacy of muff wearers, or simply an intimation that the person was distinctly "soft"?—London Chronicle.

An Upper "Berth"

A professor in the University of Berlin who came over here a year ago was much surprised the first time when he travelled in a sleeping car to be asked by the porter for his berth ticket. "My berth ticket?" he said. "I have my passport, I have my letter of credit, and I have even in my trunk my certificate of vaccination; but why the railway company should want my berth ticket I do not see." "But," said the porter, "I must know whether you have upper or lower berth." "Upper, of course," said the German. "Look at my passport does it not say 'well and highly born'?"—Yale Alumni Weekly.)

If you can have help enough to keep your household machinery in perfect running order without making a machine of yourself, do so by all means. White doors are lovely, shining tinware is very fine, spotless windows and highly polished silver are a delight; the mending basket, emptied every week is much to be desired, but there are things of more importance, and if it all depends on one pair of hands, one back and one set of nerves, for Heaven's sake, for your own sake, for your children's sake, don't.

Try Greetings for Job Work is a Firm Believer in Canada's Destiny

Ottawa, June 6.—An interesting letter accompanied the check for $10,000 contributed to the battlefield's fund by an anonymous Britisher, in New York. The contribution was received by Earl Grey. The letter which is written on Hotel St. Regis paper, says, in part: "As a British subject, I admire the pluck and patriotism of the Canadians in the work of consecrating the historic battlefields of their country in a way to emphasize the genuineness of the entente cordiale so happily established between the two powerful races resident in the Dominion. If the spirit of unity, typified as it will be in the course of celebration at Quebec, is perpetuated, Canadians must become a great and powerful people—a lusty nation.

"I believe it is a mistake to suppose that intelligent Americans are envious of Canada's prosperity and prospects. Americans look on at the preparations with deep interest and goodwill, and they will be with you in thousands in July.

"It is not exaggeration to say that the eyes of a great part of the world are turned towards Canada at this time. If it will serve any good purpose to publish this letter, you are at liberty, Earl Grey, to do so. With profound respect and the best of goodwill and wishes, I enclose my card and a cheque for ten thousand dollars as a subscription to aid you in your battlefield's plan, from a BELIEVER IN CANADA'S DESTINY."

Sinking Sensations in the Stomach

Do They Affect You?

These unpleasant feelings of weakness and collapse indicate that the sympathetic nervous system is out of order. The cause is impairment of nerve tone, arising from failure of the stomach to perform its work. Acute indigestion follows and the natural result is mental depression, and a feeling of collapse and extreme weakness. The best, because the quickest and surest cure, is Ferrozene.

It acts at once upon the digestive and assimilative organs—it fortifies the stomach—makes the blood nourishing, gives it a rich, red color, the best evidence of health. "For ten years I suffered acutely from stomach trouble," writes Mr. Maxwell Thompson, of Toledo. "I always had a headache and dull feeling after meals. My appetite was poor and I didn't relish food. It was all due to a weak, defective stomach. I read about Ferrozene and ordered six boxes from my druggist. It was no time at all before I felt much better, and when all the Ferrozene was used I really took a new lease of life. I am stronger, brighter, and feel more like work than before trying Ferrozene. It is a splendid tonic, the best I ever used."

Ferrozene is unrivalled in curing stomach ailments, try it and be convinced. Sold by all druggists in 50c. boxes.

Along-haired man walking along the street met a little boy, who asked him the time.

"Ten minutes to 9," said the man.

"Well," said the boy, "at 9 o'clock get your hair cut." And he took to his heels and ran, the aggrieved one after him.

Turning the corner the man ran into a policeman, nearly knocking him over.

"What's up?" said the policeman.

The man, very much out of breath, said: "You see that young urchin running along there? He asked me the time and I told him, 'Ten minutes to 9,' and he said, 'At 9 o'clock get your hair cut.'"

"Well," said the policeman, "what are you running for? You've got eight minutes yet."—Happgood's Opportunities

Much Interest Shown

Unexpected interest is being shown in St. John Exhibition by the merchants and manufacturers of not only the Maritime Provinces, but in Upper Canada as well. These, with the entries in the Agricultural department, will be sure to make the show a most attractive one. The amusement features promise to be stronger and more novel and startling than usual. The Prize Lists are interesting reading, and are sent upon request, to anyone. The dates of the Exhibition are easily remembered—September 12th to 19th.

Catarrh Cured or Money Back.

The cause of Catarrh is a germ. It multiplies in the lining of the nose and throat, spreads to the bronchial tubes and finally reaches the lungs. Cough syrup can't follow to the lungs—it goes to the stomach—and fails to cure—Catarrh is inhaled. It goes everywhere—gets right after the germs—kills them—heals the soreness—stops discharge and hacking—cures every trace of Catarrh. You're absolutely certain of cure for Catarrh. Throat irritations, colds or bronchitis, if you use Catarrhozone. 25c. and $1.00 sizes sold everywhere.

Progress of the G. T. R.

The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway now has a continuous line of between 300 and 400 miles west from Portage la Prairie towards Edmonton, but this fact gives but little satisfaction to the officials of the company. What they want is to have the tracks already laid extended into the heart of the city of Winnipeg, and they won't be happy till they get it. A freight service is to be inaugurated between Winnipeg and Saskatoon within the next month. This will be limited to settlers' effects and necessary articles of freight, and nothing less than carloads will be carried. The service will be operated under what is termed "construction operation," as the line cannot be regularly opened until the Board of Railway Commissioners has passed upon

GONE CROOKED

Almost daily comes the report of some man or men in positions of responsibility being unfaithful to their trust, the officials of the Banque de St. Jean in Montreal being among the latest. In this day of fast living, in order to keep up with the pace, men become dishonest. They lack moral courage sufficient to cause them to slow up rather than do wrong. Moral cowardice is at the root of wrong-doing. Watch the history of these men as they are being brought to account for their wrong-doing. In all probability their history will be that of those who a short time ago were arrested for a similar offence. One, the most pompous of them, afraid to face a trial on equal terms with the others, turned State's evidence. Another who gloried in the name of political leader, wept while his attorney tried to gain the sympathy of the Court for him. Another came into Court with a great show of physical infirmity—the whole being a most pitiable exhibition of abject moral cowardice.

The man who goes wrong usually does so because he is not brave enough to do the right when it takes something of manhood to do it. "Gone Crooked" is a kind of a word picture of the situation. One goes "crooked" because he has not moral strength to go straight. He is a wobbler, and you can detect his wobble in every transaction. Now and then a man who insists on living straight is called a coward, but we may depend on it that this is but the hypocritical thrust of the real coward who is not brave enough to stand for the eternally right. Watch the elements of the sneak in such are one when brought face to face with his misdeeds. There can be no real manhood without noble character, and there can be no true courage without genuine manhood.

BURNED TEMPERANCE WORKER'S PROPERTY

Dundas, Ont., June 15—The last of three fires of which temperance workers have been the victims, this morning destroyed five barns and the stables of John J. Lyon, who lives on the Stone road leading from Hamilton to Ancaster, Ancaster Township.

All the stock except one horse and cow was saved, but everything else was lost. There are no facilities in the district for fighting the fires.

During the local option fight in Ancaster Township about two years ago, Lyon, Matthew Burton and John Lewis were very active on the side of temperance, and threats were made which have been carried out in the destruction of the property of Lyon and Lewis, and the attempted destruction of that of Burton. It is believed the fires have been started entirely at the hands of the liquor element. Worthy weapons of a worthy cause.

Stuart McAdam left on Thursday for Woodstock, where he will be employed by Gallagher Bros. a well known granite firm.

Mrs. Fred McMillan and Mrs. Wm. Dockendorff, of St. John will spend the summer with Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Matheson.

Rev. H. I. Lynds has gone to Sussex to remain over Sunday. Services in his church here will be conducted by Rev. E. Westgate.

Mr. Harry Frauley, Miss Bessie Frauley, Mr. Edward McGrattan, and Miss Mamie O'Neill were guests at Pauls hotel, Beaver Harbor, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Thaddeus Dick and son Edward recently arrived in this city from Goldfield, Nevada, enroute for St. George, N. B.—Eastport Sentinel.

Mrs. Harry Frye and two daughters came in on Saturday's train and left at once for Frye's Island. The young ladies are attending school at Wolfville.

BY THE WAY

Settle!

One touch of whiskey makes the whole crowd chin.

The only thing in locomotion that has not altered its legs.

When a man "paints the town red" he doesn't use water colors.

It's an animated game of give and take with the chances in favor of both.

Some give according to their means—some according to their meanness.

For obvious reasons the aldermen are discreetly silent regarding the town hall.

Watch for the Masonic goat on the 24th! He's mightier than the circus elephant.

Good hotel accommodations add as much to the advantages of a town as any one thing.

Advancing wages, big dividends, active business and tokens of prosperity everywhere—except—why?

Politics—of the kind that cares nothing for efficient public service and everything for the loaves and fishes.

Judging from the number of dogs on the streets, the public executioner will have his hands full this year.

It is even harder than ever to make both ends meet with the price of meat soaring high above our reach.

Our local authorities would do well to exercise a little common sense in the enforcement of our somewhat rigid license laws.

The town is putting on all the glory of summer, thus justifying the proud boast of being the most beautiful spot on the map.

A noted scientist declares that the North Pole is shifting. It must be true for it has evaded the grasp of explorers for centuries.

The St. Louis man who won $100 by holding his tongue for ten hours, is suspected of having been coached by his wife for ten years or more.

The pleasure seekers must always work overtime. No eight-hour law for them to fall back on, for it is a 24-hour job with the leisure class to "live." Said, but true.

Collier's Weekly is after evidence against loan sharks all over the country. That journal would perform greater service by pointing out where a fellow could secure a loan just now at most any old rate of interest.

Papa—I hear you were a bad girl today and had to be spanked!

Small Daughter—Mamma is awful strict. If I'd known she used to be a school teacher I'd a-told you not to marry her.

That tramp that sold an Indiana woman a rare plant consisting of a cat's tail in a vase, the part that wagged the tail being concealed by the earth in the body of the receptacle, displayed a degree of invention that may some day rank him with Barnum.

The parents who rear their sons in idleness are doing them an unspeakable harm. Every boy is entitled to know by actual experience what hard manual labor means, and to get the blessing that comes from toughened muscles and a tanned skin.—Ex.

A rainy Sunday at this season is the most deplorable of human disappointments. There never should be one, and when man runs the universe, fair summer Sundays will be provided for, with other pleasant natural phenomena thrown in to give good measure.

Answer to Correspondent: We don't think the town has a bye-law that compels telegraph and telephone Co.'s to paint their poles within the town limits. If you suggest the matter to Mayor Lawrence, he would no doubt, bring it to the attention of the Council.

Bessie, a bit of blue-eyed girl, was about to go with her aunt to dine at a friend's house.

"Don't forget your manners, Bessie," said mother.

"Be sure to say 'Yes, sir, No sir, and Yes ma'am, and No ma'am' when any one speaks to you."

"At table the first question asked her was, 'Bessie, will you have some soup?'"

"Yes, sir, no, sir, 'es, ma'am, no, ma'am," said Bessie stantly, while every one burst out laughing.

union fishermen are sticking closely to their principles, while the sardine syndicate boatmen are refusing to buy unless contracts are signed. The independent packers are purchasing the greater part of the catch from union weirs. The action of the packing syndicate in holding out against the fishermen while causing a lot of unnecessary feeling, is also serving to strengthen the position of their rivals, the independent packers. No matter what settlement may be reached between the syndicate and the union fishermen the latter cannot honorably ignore the claims that the independent men have upon them.—Beacon.

The Martin - Senour 100 per cent PURE PAINT

Investigate Before You Buy In these days of sharp competition, it is well to know that you get what you pay for. There are so many brands of house paints on the market, now-a-days, advertised as "pure" (but little better than "dope") that a man ought to investigate what he intends to buy.

We suggest to those about to paint to make a practical test and convince themselves. Buy a small can of the Martin-Senour 100 per cent. Pure Paint and one of any other brand with which you may have been favorably impressed, selecting about the same colors, and paint a few feet. Carefully measure the paint, so that you use no more of one than the other. Thus with the conditions the same, you can determine for yourself which paint has the better body or covering capacity; which is the easier brushing out and has the better finish. If you do not decide in favor of the Martin-Senour 100 per cent. Pure Paint, our agent will return the money you paid for the can of Martin-Senour 100 per cent. Pure Paint used in the experiment, and we will credit the same to him.

The street committee have quite a number of men working on the sewer. Owing to the rock formation and its proximity to the buildings the work is necessarily slow on the upper street. The work will be rushed and as plenty of help is now available it will not take long to complete the job.

James O'Neill has about completed extensive repairs on his residence. A new veranda has been built, and the house painted an attractive color. With an ideal location, surrounded by nice grounds, it makes one of the most attractive and comfortable homes to be found in the county.

We have received the prize list of the St. John exhibition which will be held Sept. 12th to 19th. $15,000 will be paid in premiums. There will be round trip tickets issued on all railways and steamers for one fare during the whole period of the exhibition, with special cheap excursions on special days.

A man covered with smallpox walked into the Halifax City Hall last Friday morning and going to the Board of Health office, asked to be sent to the hospital. The man is a laborer who arrived a short time ago from England. He was locked up, an ambulance was secured at once, he was then removed to the infectious diseases hospital.

Boyl's hotel is enjoying good patronage. The house has been thoroughly renovated, rooms well furnished, and good sample rooms for commercial men. In a thrilling race down the street--from the pump to the wharf--between four sailors and a huge barrel of water, Saturday morning, the barrel distanced the whole bunch, and arrived at the winning post in good condition. In the toss up for positions the barrel chose the sidewalk, thus having a decided advantage. The event was of the spectacular kind, and fortunately there were no teams or pedestrians to block the barrel in its mad race to the wharf.

"It is a fact," said a railway man, that a station house will be built before snow flies. It will be near the mail platform. We trust that the fact will materialize. A vast amount of printers ink has been consumed in advocating a building that would be in keeping with this summer resort. The work done the last few weeks makes the N. B. Southern look more like a railway, where large traffic is expected. We begin to think that the right men have been found, that will give the road an impetus never dreamed of, a realization of the hopes that the original projectors of the Grand Southern Railway entertained.---Oak Bay Cor. Advertiser.

U. S. Fish Commissioner Bowers in speaking of the lobstering industry says that they are more plentiful than for some time past. In support of this, he points out that the price of lobsters now ranges from 9 to 15 cents each, where as a few years ago it was twice that. That lobsters are more plentiful in many places along the Maine coast is unquestioned but not at all points. Mr. Bowers is wrong, too, in attributing the decline in price altogether to the large supply of fish. A part of it should be attributed to Massachusetts nine-inch-law. This law has let down the bars for the New Brunswick and Nova Scotia lobsters and the Massachusetts market is flooded with them. These lobsters, while not to be compared with those taken on the Maine coast, have forced the price down.---Eastport Sentinel.

THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

A Telegram

The fire burned bright and cheery on the broad hearth of a delightfully old-fashioned fireplace in an old southern home in sunny Tennessee.

A mammoth old gray cat basked in the warmth and a lovely red brown setter opened his eyes lazily and slowly stretched out full length and dozed off again fully conscious of "all the comforts of home."

The plants blooming on the window sill nodded approvingly whenever a wee breeze crept in through the open window to fan into motion the exquisite perfume that lingered around the blossoms.

The book case in the corner had been carefully dusted and the big round table showed that it had been recently polished and was very proud to show its aristocratic carvings and glad to be a part of the furnishings in this well kept room.

The big clock ticked loudly as if delighted to call attention to its newly washed face, and several chairs were standing invitingly around the room, and seated in one very comfortable armchair was a nice looking woman of perhaps 35 years of age. The newspaper she had been reading was lying on the floor. Her head was bent forward and she was intently gazing into the fire and was meandering in thought into the past.

"Twelve years! Why it seems more like 50, and yet," glancing toward the mirror on the wall, "time has dealt kindly with me. I don't really think that I have aged so much. How foolish I was to allow such a silly thought to sadden my life. High ho! But regrets come too late! How very handsome he looked that day, and how very much I did care for him."

Turning around, she selected a nice red apple from the well-filled dish on the table nearby.

"It's funny, but Harry did love these apples."

Every thought was of him. Her fingers, turned the apple round and round. Taking up the knife she slowly and carefully peeled it and holding the peeling carefully so as not to break it, she glanced at Hugo, the Irish setter, who had just opened his great brown eyes.

"This is silly work. Even Hugo knows its childish, and what would Miss Grace say if she opened her cat eyes? Oh, well, the neighbors will never know. Of course, I don't believe in this nonsense, but a little nonsense now and then is relished by yours truly. Here goes once, twice, three times."

Over her head it whirled and fell into a heap on the floor. She closed her eyes for a moment, while Hugo arose and walked to where it lay curled into the letter H.

"Oh, no, master dog, you must not touch that letter. You remember Harry, don't you, Hugo? We will let that lay there all day. Perhaps it will bring us some good news. I suppose he is married to some Western girl long years ago."

A loud ring at the bell made her hastily gather up the peeling that she was going "to let lie on the floor all day." A messenger boy stood on the step.

"A telegram for you, ma'am."

Her face blanched, as she had never received but one wired message in her life, and that told her of the death of a dear brother, consequently a telegram in her estimation always carried bad news.

"Please sign here, ma'am, and let me get off here quickly."

She timidly signed the little delivery book, and the boy noticing her nervousness, said, "I don't think it is as bad as that, ma'am. He won't get here until tomorrow."

"He? Who? What does he mean? The sound of wheels caused her to look toward the window and alighting from the stage-coach was a girlish figure, her favorite niece, and as she rushed out to welcome her, the young lady exclaimed:—

"Oh, auntie, I wanted to surprise you, so I did not write you that I was coming."

"Oh, yes auntie, dear, Harry meant to meet me at the junction, and he has some important business to look after in this section and then he is going to pay his respects to you," and she threw her arms around her aunt's neck and kissed her affectionately.

Here was the solution of the enigmatical telegram: The handsome girl standing before the fire was named for her and very evident her "affinity" was Harry.

A feeling of sadness pervaded her heart and was reflected on her face, and Phyllis remarked, "Why, auntie, you don't seem to be happy upon my arrival, and I wanted to see you and have you meet my Harry."

"But, girlie, I do want you. I was only thinking of a surprise I have for you, but you must be nearly famished, so we will let the surprise remain in exile until tomorrow."

Putting her arm around her niece she gently led her into the dining room, and soon a very dainty lunch was served and after a couple of hours conversation about things in general, and Harry in particular, they both retired to dream of—guess who?

The next morning after breakfast Phyllis, attracted by the singing of the birds, wandered to the gate in front of the house. Just then a carriage stopped and a handsome man stepped out, and lifting his hat, said:

"I was informed that I would find Miss Phyllis Jordan here."

With a mischievous twinkle in her eye she replied, "Yes, sir, that is my name."

"You! There must be some mistake. The lady I refer to must be several years your senior."

"Possibly you would like to see my auntie. If you will walk into the house you will find her in the library."

Phyllis returning to the house a half hour later was startled to find the handsome stranger sitting near her relative with his arm resting familiarly on the back of her chair. She said, "Auntie, is this my surprise?"

Aunt Phyllis blushing replied, "No, Phyllis; this is my own surprise. I rather think you will find yours coming in the gate."

With a cry of delight she bounded out and said, "Oh, Harry, why did you not wire me as you promised? Then the happy voice of her aunt said: "The telegram came and filled two missions, for it brought two Harrys instead of one."

Some Incidents in the Battle of the Plains of Abraham

How Wolfe and Montcalm Met in the Final Struggle for the Domination of the New World

(By Benjamin Sulte, F. R. S. C.)

During the celebration of the centenary of the founding of Quebec the various historical spots in and about that city will doubtless attract the attention of many visitors. As it may be presumed that most of them, before visiting the locality itself will have read a description of the eventful battle of the Plains of Abraham, we do not purpose describing the whole action, but shall relate merely a few episodes of that famous day, which were however, of great importance in deciding the issue of the contest.

Leaving the city of Quebec, on the side towards the Citadel, and following the crest of the river bank, here about three hundred feet high, we soon reach a cove called by the French Foulon, and afterwards known as Wolfe's Cove. A little further on we reach another cove where the French had a battery near the Bishop of Samos. A short distance further up the river there was a post with a hundred and fifty men under arms, day and night. Similar posts were scattered along the heights of the river bank as far as Cap Rouge. These heights were patrolled by two hundred cavalry and fifteen hundred foot, under Bougainville.

The strength of this force is thus accounted for. Wolfe had failed in every attempt to land on the Beauport Flats, east of the city; and as the English must conquer or leave before the first of October, fearing the dangers of navigation, the mind of their commander-in-chief was turned towards the "inaccessible heights" above the town for a last trial before giving up the campaign. Accordingly some of the fleet, under Admiral Holmes having on board about four thousand soldiers, were sent west of the city. The instructions were to ascend the river nightly with the incoming tide, and then descend again, in the morning with the ebb tide. It seemed evident to the French that their intention was to find some unguarded locality in which to land the soldiers.

As to the date of attack, the moon, the tide, and the wind had all to be taken into account. Except for the latter, which was necessarily uncertain, Wolfe found that on the morning of September 13th, between the hours of one and five o'clock there would be little light and an ebb tide—conditions favorable for the landing. Consequently he issued instructions to all concerned, and on the eve of that day went himself on board the Sutherland at the hour of the incoming tide. On this night Admiral Holmes' fleet extended its movements even west of Cape Rouge, but some of the vessels were left from place to place, as if to watch the shore. The object of this was to draw Bougainville as far as possible from Wolfe's Cove.

To prevent Montcalm from aiding those at the Cove and Samos when the alarm should be given, it was arranged that Admiral Saunders with the rest of the fleet would make a feint attack on the Beauport camp as soon as a red light should appear at the mast head of the Sutherland. This light would be shown when Wolfe with one hundred picked men should find himself on the top of the heights at the Cove. Then all the vessels under Admiral Holmes were quickly to disembark their troops to ascend the captured cliff.

Soon after three o'clock on the morning of the memorable thirteenth of September the troops were ready to go ashore in the light boats at a moment's notice. Wolfe with one hundred chosen Highlanders floated down in silence with the ebb tide. They were challenged by the sentry of Samos' battery, but a Scotsman answered in good French, "Shut up, we are bringing provisions to the town."

A convoy of provision boats was actually expected to come down the river that night; but they had been captured by the English fleet. On hearing this answer the sentry went to notify the guard. It was then a few minutes before five o'clock.

Under the leadership of Captain Donald McDonald, twenty-four of the Highlanders reached the summit of the Foulon Cove at the same moment having first taken the precaution to wait until the only sentry there had his back turned towards them. The remaining seventy-five men were close behind, climbing the escarpment with the help of roots and bushes.

Discovering the enemy, the French sentry quickly alarmed the post, but the few soldiers there, not knowing the strength of the English, ran in the direction of Samos. The red lantern now appeared on the Sutherland and the small boats pushed towards the shore with all haste. Saunders' vessels moved towards the Beauport camp, ousting Montcalm to sound the reveille and prepare to repel the expected attack.

As soon as three hundred of his troops had reached the top of the bank, Wolfe ordered a detachment of one hundred and seventy-five to capture the Samos battery, whose fire had opened upon the small boats landing troops from the fleet. Hearing the cannonade at the camp Montcalm knew that Samos was attacked, but he was prevented from giving help, as Saunders began at the same time to shell Beauport.

In a short time news came to Wolfe that the guns at Samos had been spiked, and that the men of that post were in flight towards Sillery and Cap Rouge. Then, about an hour before daylight, the troops began the march towards the Plains of Abraham, situated nearer to the city. Wolfe left one hundred and twenty-five men to occupy the stone house at Samos, with the view of stopping Bougainville on his way to the Plains since it was evident that he would at once take this course on learning of the presence of the British in that neighborhood.

About half-past eight o'clock Wolfe had dispersed of his small force in battle array upon the Plains. The French were then leaving the Beauport camp to meet him. Bougainville had learned of the Samos fight and started about the same hour to find out what was taking place.

The reader will remember that at Waterloo Napoleon lost very valuable time in trying to capture a fortified farm house on the field of action. Bougainville did the same at Samos. His efforts, also, were in vain, but when he gave up the attempt the battle on the Plains had been ended by the defeat of the French. Pressing forward without knowing this, he realized the situation only on his arrival at the rear of the British forces.

The battle on the plains was brisk and sharp, and murderous, yet the fight lasted but fifteen minutes. When Wolfe fell, having been thrice wounded, the command passed to Brigadier Townsend. The French were soon in full flight towards the Beauport camp, from which they had come. The fugitives, spread over the open plain, were cut down in great numbers by the claymores of the Highlanders and the bayonets of the English and Irish regiments. The survivors gradually concentrated in the somewhat narrow road east of the city, leading towards the French camp. They became a disorderly mass, pushing one another towards the head of the abrupt descent. The slaughter on the plains would have been slight in comparison with that of this flock of frightened men, had their pursuit not been suddenly checked by nine hundred of the French Canadians throwing themselves into a bush near the top of the hill, and firing steadily and with remarkable precision upon the British forces.

The British charged the bush, and the French force went in their turn down the hill, making a second stand on a convenient spot, where they again checked the British advance. Two hundred of the French were killed at this place, but, meanwhile, the great body of the fugitives had been able to escape.

The victorious British troops had now before them the River St. Charles, on the other side of which was the French camp. The sight of this checked the impetuosity of their advance, and their officers, by order of Townsend, succeeded in restraining the ardor of pursuit and ordered the retreat to the Plains. Here they were once more arrayed in battle line, this time with the front facing Lorette.

Bougainville was expected to attack from that quarter. Two small brass cannon were placed on one flank of the British line, and the men were ordered to rest. This move showed great wisdom on the part of Townsend, for if caught on the River St. Charles between the French camp and Bougainville, few of the British soldiers would have escaped. But here on the Plains their position was fairly secure.

Townsend could not tell whether or not Vaudreuil had communicated with Bougainville by the Lorette Road. In such case the Beauport forces would probably march toward the Plains, and the British would be squeezed between them and Bougainville. The day, already famous by one brilliant battle, was in Townsend's belief, likely to see another on the same ground.

At noon came the advance of Bougainville. Should he halt on the west, we may be certain to see Vaudreuil coming before long on the other side. But he does not halt, he makes a reconnaissance in force, he comes nearer, within range. Townsend orders a gun or two to play upon him. Five of his men are brought down. See! He wheels back; all is over; evidently Vaudreuil is not in the game.

And so Bougainville went to Lorette to learn the whereabouts of the French army. During the afternoon Vaudreuil raised the camp at Beauport, and took his way by a northern road to reach Cap Rouge and Three Rivers.

In the United States politicians spring up like mushrooms over night and as quickly they die, politically. Vice President Fairbanks has announced that he will not again be a candidate for that office and it is understood that his presidential aspirations have been rendered as nothing by a combination of circumstances. Following this Mr. John Hays Hammond has declared himself as anxious for the Republican nomination for the vice presidency. Mr. Hammond has the reputation of being the most highly paid engineer in the world. In 1905 he signed a contract with the Guggenheims under which he was to receive $250,000 and was at the same time permitted to engage in private professional work. A few weeks ago it was announced that his time would be given exclusively to the syndicate and his salary doubled. He is willing, it appears, to give up this and to accept a very unimportant office in the administration at a salary of only $8,000. Mr. Hammond was born in San Francisco in 1855 and was educated at Yale. During his boyhood he gained some slight experience with his father who was engaged in mining in the west. After his graduation he served with the United States Geological survey and later became a consulting engineer with office in San Francisco. Barney Barnato heard of him and took him to Africa to make a mineralogical survey of Rhodesia. Because of his friendly relations with some of the more prominent men in Africa Mr. Hammond became involved in the Jameson raid, was placed under arrest and condemned to death. Efforts were put forth on his behalf by the United States government and he was subsequently released by the Boers upon payment of a fine of $125,000. Since his release and until 1905 he had practised his profession of consulting engineer in the United States.

How Mrs. Davis and Miss Perham of Greenwood, Me. sisters and companions through life died on the same day and how one preceded the other to a spirit world and returned to summon the other is being told far and wide by neighbors and friends who are familiar with the story of the strange circumstances. So remarkable is the life and death story of those two sisters that it is told in whispers. Mrs. Edward Davis was seventy years of age while Miss Perham, her sister was seventy-three. After Mr. Davis died the sisters lived alone in the isolated cottage for many years. They became firm believers in spiritualism and psychic control. Mrs. Davis told her sister just one week before her death that one night as she lay in her bed her husband had appeared to her. He had talked with her and as he was almost to disappear bade her join him in the land beyond the grave. She said that he had told her all about the life unseen and that they had set the day for her death. She said she longed to join her husband.

The following Monday was the day appointed. Two days before that time Mrs. Davis fell ill. She spoke cheerfully of the future life she was about to enter. "Good-bye," she whispered to Miss Perham. "Today you must follow so that we will all be together." Miss Perham went into the orchard to gather apple blossoms for which Mrs. Davis had asked, saying that these were the only flowers she wished to have at her funeral and on her grave. As Miss Perham stood under a tree in the orchard and was reaching for the clusters of blossoms, she seemed to suddenly see her sister standing smiling at her side. "Come, sister," Mrs. Davis said. "It is time for you to join us. I am so happy. Come!" Before Miss Perham could pick the blossoms which she had dropped from her nervous hands Mrs. Davis had vanished and she was alone. On entering the house she found her sister's dead body lying on the bed. A peaceful smile rested on her face. Neighbors came to prepare for the burial and the undertaker was summoned. Before the plans for the single funeral were completed Miss Perham fell ill and she died in a few hours, and the sisters were laid to rest side by side in the little cemetery.

 There are thousands of vacant farms in New England where the buildings can be made tenable at little expense that can be purchased for a fraction of the cost of the improvements already made upon them, and where a city man could send his family for six months in the year and make them hearty, healthy and happy. A few cows, hens, and a garden will go a long way towards supplying the table with the most healthful food in the world, and as much more farming can be carried on as the owner may desire. Hundreds of business men have found in such places the true elixir of health for their families, and praise the day they left the crowded city for such health and enjoyment. The Village Belle
 Under a "Merry Widow" hat
 A village maiden stands;
 The maid—a stammering belle is she
 With soft and delicate hands,
 And the smile that comes from those lips of hers
 Is one that pleases man.
 Her teeth are pearls, her eyes are stars,
 Her face is free from tan,
 Her brow has naught of care nor toil;
 She shirks when'er she can,
 And looks the whole world in the face
 (Though she owes her dry goods man.)
 Week in, week out, from night to night,
 You can see the fellows go,
 You can hear them speak their heavy parts
 With hearts that beat so, so,
 Like a sail that flaps in an ocean breeze
 When the ship rocks to and fro.
 And little brothers, as is their wont
 Look in at the open door,
 They love to see their sister frown,
 And hear the fellows roar,
 And oft they catch the sparks that fly
 Bill! ha! when the day is o'er.
 Primping, fussing, fussing,
 Onward through life she goes;
 Each morning finds her chewing gum,
 Each evening sees some beans;
 Nothing attempted, nothing done,
 To earn a night's repose.
 Thanks, thanks, to thee my village belle,
 For the lesson thou hast taught:
 Thus—all of life is not to pose,
 Such lives oft come to naught,
 But those that count are lives of worth,
 With deeds of kindness fringed.

A LESSON IN MODESTY
 The arrival of the Mauretania last week after a shaking up that smashed her deck hamper and sent many passengers to their berths, must have surprised those sanguine persons who inform us that the modern giant liners have robbed the Atlantic of all its terrors. One can hardly blame Neptune, or Prof. Moore of the Weather Bureau, or whoever was responsible for the turmoil for giving us a lesson in modesty. When the elements get thoroughly waked up in the middle of the Atlantic even the latest Canamers have to slow down and take their pounding meekly. It will require still bigger waves and harder winds to interfere with the schedules of the new thousand-foot steamers already under discussion, but the Atlantic Ocean, whatever its other faults, is not a mollycoddle, and will certainly do its best, as they say in the ring, to make it interesting for anything that comes off the ways, even if it is a fifth of a mile long.

UNION BLEND TEA PRIZE
 I beg to thank my many friends for their support during the last year. Many thousands of boys and girls have been rewarded five dollars ($5.00) for collecting and returning the complete alphabet taken from Union Blend Tea packets.
 The success which this mode of advertising has met with has decided me to continue the same method indefinitely, and I hope to distribute ten thousand dollars ($10,000) this way next year.

Our New Hair Vigor

Ayer's Hair Vigor was good, the best that was made. But Ayer's Hair Vigor, new improved formula, is better. It is the one great specific for falling hair. A new preparation in every way. New bottle. New contents. Ask your druggist to show it to you, "the new kind."

Does not change the color of the hair.

Formula with each bottle show it to your doctor. Ask him about it, then do as he says.

As we now make our new Hair Vigor it does not have the slightest effect upon the color of the hair. You may use it freely and for any length of time without fear of changing the color. Stops falling hair. Cures dandruff.

Made by the J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

The nomination was most acceptable to all of the party.

Minor St. Clair Francis passed through Boston Thursday afternoon heavily ironed and guarded by United States marshals. He has been ordered transferred from the Maine state prison to the United States prison at Atlanta.

Francis is the man who escaped from Bridgewater state farm and for years terrorized the countryside before he was recaptured. He was caught in St. John N. B. after robbing the Red Beach Me. Postoffice. He was indicted by Postoffice Inspector Robinson to return to this country. He will serve out at Atlanta the greater part of a 16 year sentence which he received for robbing the postoffice and shooting a watchman at Red Beach.

Accompanying Francis are William Haddell and William Phelps, both long-term prisoners. Phelps participated with Francis in the Red Beach job and was arrested with him at St. John.

A year ago last fall Francis was recaptured at Barnham, Me., after he had escaped from the state prison and had been freezing and starving for 17 days.

LOCAL AND SPECIAL

From various parts of Canada the crop outlook is reported to be excellent. The prospects are now very bright for a great wheat crop in the West.

Saturday was a scorching, and bade fair to break the record. At noon the thermometer registered 92 and everybody sighed for a camp in the woods, at Lake Utopia, where not one of those white hot rays could get through the branches overhead. In the evening a cool breeze stole out of the west, the thermometer sank and everyone was happy.

It remained for Messrs. Polley and Lord to break all trout records. One day last week they quietly slipped out of town and as quietly slipped into town in the evening, with a hundred and ten of the finest trout that has come out of the water this season. No fancy flies, rods or reels, but an alder pole, a grocery store hook and the despised worm did the business. "One more trial at this pool," says Mr. Polley, "before its location is divulged." The guests at Boyd's hotel enjoyed a trout dinner as a result of this trip and the generosity of the fishermen.

The dispute between the Fishermen's Union and the packers still remains unsettled. Although the price of sardines the immediate cause of the trouble the fishermen regard the American packers as trying to break their union, and are firm in their stand of a demand for a uniform price of $6 a hoghead through out the season. The Eastport dealers who pack the sardines wish to vary the price according to the stages of the season, and contracts which they have made with independent fishermen call for a rate of $9 a hoghead up to July 1, $8 up to Aug. 1, $5 until Sept. 1, and $4 during the balance of the season.

A lobster which measured four feet in length was caught Saturday at Split Rock, below Tiner's Point, by Frank Burchell of Spruce Lake. Mr. Burchell had a very hard time to manage the big fish. It was too large to haul into the boat, so a rope had to be procured and the lobster towed to shore. James Burchell helped his brother to land it.

The lobster was the largest ever caught in the Bay of Fundy so far as the Sun can learn. Its feelers were like two horse whips.

The catch was a lucky one for Mr. Burchell. He sold the lobster to Geo. Filson, an Eastport buyer, for $35.--Sun.

Among the criticisms of labor unions, sometimes heard, is the complaint that they make too little distinction between the efficient worker and the one who is inefficient, but demand equal consideration for all. The three local unions of the carpenters and joiners in New Bedford have evidently resolved not to rest under this reproach and have now arranged that all applicants for membership shall pass a stiff examination in which a practical test of workmanship is the principal feature. This is for the purpose of protecting themselves and also putting themselves right with the contractors who heartily favor the movement. The examining committee is made up from three unions and before it each applicant must appear and demonstrate his skill, or lack of it, in that particular handicraft. It is not a mere form, because in each case there will be from fifteen to twenty practical problems for the applicant to solve. This action is worthy of imitation by all trade unions. It may restrict membership somewhat, but it would give to these organizations everywhere a higher standing than they now possess and command for them increased confidence on the part of employers and the public.
