A LIGHTHOUSE AT FAME POINT.—A t is better than having two teams, and of better quality than the Russian. On as there is constant emulation be-the whole, Russian agriculture is just now tween the man in the field and the tween the man in the field and the man at the heap to see which shall come out aftend of the other. Not enough use is made by farmers of this spirit of emulation. Farm work is mostly rather isolated, but it is better generally for two men to work alone. Some hired men will do very little unless they have company. Rarely will any one do as much alone as he would if working with others.
