Surely nobody expects to find and ancial statement in a bill asking for an extension of time. One would just as well look for mice in the ear of a cat. On the other hand, nobody in Bona venture ever dreamt of asking the payment of debts due on the section of Matapedia to Paspebiac from any company auth rized to build the secion from Paspebiac to Gaspe. According to that principle the Atlantic Quebec & Western or its alter ego, the Petroleum Oil Trust must be obliged to give their financial statement and pay Bonaventure labor's claims and if they refuse Mr. Marcil is requested to move the six months hoist, and Mr. Lemieux is expected to second the motion. What is sauce for a goose is sauce for a gander. "The trustees, your special says, have made no application themselves at Ottawa seeing they are not willing to do anything but hold the old road." It was worth the while to ask them. It was not likely Mr. Galindes would have crossed the Ocean and gone to Ottawa, if he was only willing to hold If the trustees make no application themselves it might be because they think the application must be made by the company whose road they have been put into possession, that is to say the A. & L. S. Ry. Company. Would it not be sufficient to insert in the A. & L. S. Bill a clause giving the trustees the necessary powers to build the road to Gaspe. Two years ago it was done for the section from New Carlisle to Paspebiac, it might be repeated this year for the Section from Paspebiac to

If it was legal for three miles it must be legal for eighty. But the six months hoist is a poor neans to build railways. Whoever thought of first billing a man and afterwards asking him to transact business Let there be light.

THE BREED TO KEEP. A Question That an Experienced Man Finds It Hard to Answer. J. A. T. wants to start dairying on his farm and asks what breed of cows he had better adopt, what breed I have and if they are satisfactory. A dozen years ago I could have answered this question rather positively and definitely, as I could a good many other direct questions, but it is wonderful what an effect half a score of years of severe practical experience on the farm and careful observation have in making a 38 MIXED for Moncton..... 6.00 man conservative, says L. W. Lighty in National Stockman and Farmer. He 30 MIXED for Moncton 19.00 will not venture to tell a man just what he is to do and how he is to do it. Some of his finest (?) plans would not work out in his own hands. How could he expect them to do so secondhand? In selecting a breed of cows for dairying a person should consider himself and his environments. The breed that a person admires most is likely to prove the best in his hands if carefully studied and properly handled. For dairy purposes it is of course advisable to select a typical dairy breed, though I have known men to make at least a partial success with a beef breed. though not typical beef cows. It might possibly be helpful to the questione and others in selecting a breed of cattle to mention a few of the chief characteristics of a few of the commonest dairy breeds. The Channel island cattle (Jerseys and Guernseys) were originated and bred on the islands of this name, where the climate is not nearly as severe as in our northern states. If we turn the island cow with our native and then use our old methods of little or no shelter in winter and compel the cows to hustle over the hids for their feed in summer, the native is likely to come out ahead. The same is true of (Daily except Sunday)..... 20.15 hills and valleys to find a day's living.

Holsteins. In their native home, the Netherlands, they often share part of the house with the family. Feed is abundant and of the right kind. Their bodies are very heavy, and their bones I know men who have lots of rough land that furnishes some pasture and who are opposed to "babying" cows, as very good results. Their native home is a cold and rough country and pro-But do not for a moment think that any breed can be had that will bear neglect, only that some are better hustlers than others.

Corn For the Silo. Corn should be put into the silo when it is almost ready to cut and can be put in at the time it is ripe enough to cut with good results. Formerly it was thought best to cut corn when rather green for silage, but later practice leans toward the stage of ripeness -just before it begins to dry out and the stalks become woody.

With sorghum we should think that it should also be well ripened before being made into silage, as at that stage the sugar in the juice is fully matured and the seeds are most valuable as feed.-Dairy and Creamery.

It May Be So. A missionary in London declared recently that in response to an appeal for articles for use on an African farm a milking stool was sent to him from England and that one day the negro farm hand returned to the house with the stool badly battered, declaring that the cow refused to sit on it.-Exchange.

When the cows are to be kept in the stable through the winter, each stall should have its drinking trough kept filled with water where the cows can reach it at any time, says farmers'. bulletin No. 151, issued by the agricultural department at Washington. Such an arrangement is not expensive, as iron troughs large enough for the use of two cows in adjoining stalls can be purchased very cheaply. By placing them on a level in connection with a supply pipe and using a single float valve to regulate the flow, there will be no waste and each trough will receive a frequent supply of fresh water. There are objections to this individual system of watering, however, and some good dairymen prefer the overflow trough so placed that cows can go to it in stormy weather without ex-

The Seven Golden Cities. The "Seven Golden Citles," one of the most popular legends of the latter part of the dark ages, were said to be situated on an island west of the African coast. The island is represented as abounding in gold, with magnificent houses and temples, "the high towers of which shown at a great distance." The legend also relates that at the time of the conquest of Spain and Portugal by the Moors, when the in-habitants fled in every direction to escape slavery, seven bishops, followed by a great number of people, took to ships and put boldly out on the high seas. After tossing about for some time they landed on an unknown is land, the famous spot which in after Business Co-operation. The dairy industry of Denmark af fords a wonderful example of the benefits of business co-operation, says Na tional Stockman and Farmer. Co-operative dairies have been in operation there for twenty years and in that time have grown to over a thousand. The average number of shareholders is 146 and of cows 832. This shows that small dairies are the rule, the average less than six cows to the dairy. Some idea of the economic advantages may be had by considering that instead of 146 churnings there is but one; that instead of 146 varieties of butter there is but one-and it is good-and that the producer benefits by both the saving of labor and the quality of the product. TOULOUSE GEESE.

They Are Fine Birds, Though Not Equal In Weight to the Embdens. These are the pride of France. From them comes the pate de foie gras, so nuch enjoyed as a delicacy by the gormands of the world. They gain their name from the city of the same name in southern France, but like the Houdan and other fowls of France the Toulouse geese in their native land are cultivated purely for market purposes. The finish for exhibition-fine feathers and increased size-has come under the handling of the English and American fanciers. Mr. Lewis Wright tells us that the goose is the result of breeding and feeding up the graylag and selecting the largest and darkest col-

"What Is an Expert?" "You often speak of expert poultrymen," says a correspondent. "Now please tell us-what is an expert?" We must confess that the question came with something of a shock, for really it never heretofore occurred to us that any one who knew the meaning of the common word "expert" would not know what was meant when it was used to describe a poultryman. But as we think it over in the light place in our columns it does not seem so strange that some confusion should Properly speaking, an expert poultryman is one whose experience and training have qualified him for some branch of poultry keeping. Such a man is an expert in his particular line. Some are expert in several lines. If there is one who may fairly claim to be expert in all lines, he has not yet been located. But some recent communications appearing in these columns have treated of "experts" as a species of parasites among poultrymen. Some of our correspondents have had dealings with men who professed experience and skill they did not possess, and so seem to have arrived at the conclusion that none of those claiming to be accomplished poultrymen is so in reality. Thus it has happened that the term "expert

Poultry Manure. As is well known, poultry manure is extant, says a writer in an exchange. During the warm weather, however, quality of his butter, thus following | very rapidly with its ammonia, it is not advisable to keep it separate from the other manures. It will be more economical and serviceable either to use it immediately or to mix it with the stable manure. The dropping from growing animals or birds is not so valuable as that from matured stock, so that the autumn or winter is a better time to store up the poultry droppings. A very good way in summer to dispose of it is by making it into a liquid manure and watering fruit trees, flowers and vegetables all into the roots.

CLEAR SKIN RULES.

Don't bathe the face while it is very warm or very cold. Don't be afraid of sunshine and fresh air. They give bloom and color.

Don't bathe in hard water. Soften it with a little powdered borax or a handful of oatmeal. Don't wash the fare when traveling unless it is with a little alcohol and water or a little vaseline.

Don't rub the face with too coarse a towel. Treat it as you would the finest porcelain, gently and delicately. Don't neglect sleep. You can even sleep yourself good looking. A long nap and a hot bath will make any woman good looking.

Don't attempt to remove dust with cold water. Give the face a hot bath with soap. Then give it a thorough rinsing with clear tepid or cold water. Don't forget that the nurses of woman's beauty are seven: Fresh air, sunshine, warmth, rest, sleep, food and whatever stirs the blood, be it exercise or enthusiasm.

Don't forget that beauty is a power. There is nothing more potent. It is to a woman what capital is to a merchant. Its absence is a misfortune; its culture wise and proper.

Farmers' daughters who leave comfortable homes to seek uncertain employment in town often make a mistake. There are few cases where the same amount of energy and industry expended at home would not bring equal returns, besides the comforts and safeguards that are retained.

Most girls could obtain the use of an acre or two of land, and on this they might produce something profitable. Eggs, guaranteed strictly fresh; pure honey, fat squabs, plump and tender chickens-all these good things are desired by city people, and many of them are willing to pay a good price for articles that are always kept up to the mark in quality. Open to Women. The world of commerce, unlike the higher professions, offers a fair field to women. It has no restrictions of sex. Opportunities therein are endless, possibilities limitless. It is, to be sure, a difficult world, where competition is cruelly keen. It demands untiring industry, quick wits, clever brains. But its rewards are worth having, and they come quickly to those who succeed. Businesses in these days do not grow slowly. With the help of advertisement, they spring up like mushrooms. New wants, new luxuries, are constantly evolved from the changing conditions of life, and those who can supof some discussions recently taking ply them do not need to wait long for prosperity. The supplying of a simple want is the foundation of most of the prosperous businesses that are the romances of the commercial world. Many instances might be cited to show that there is always plenty of scope for those who can most skillfully "find out men's wants and meet them there." For the Fair Chemist. The following miscellaneous measures and their equivalents are likely to prove of service to the amateur who is going in for homemade cosmetics: A dram is an eighth of an ounce. An average tea or coffee spoon will hold one fluid dram. An average wineglass holds two fluid ounces, a teacup five fluid ounces, a breakfast cup eight ounces and a tumbler eight ounces.

A minim is a measured drop. Drops poured from a bottle vary greatly, according to the size of the lip of the bottle. The dropper, which is to be obtained at any drugstore, will measure a full drop. One gram is equal to 15 43-100 grains, and 3 9-100 grams equal one

The Spirit of Hospitality. The spirit of hospitality is too beautiful to be neglected. It should pervade every home, be it one room or ten. One should always stand ready to share one's meal with a chance guest, put up a visitor overnight and allow friends to enjoy a pretty home and lovely grounds. The larger one's possessions the heavier are the claims of hospitality. I have no fondness for men and women who accept much and give little, says the Pittsburg Press. It is a form of selfish people, however, so charming in manner that one is willing to overlook their faults, to shut the eyes tightly whenever the hard, unattractive side of their natures peer through the veneer.

In Business. Two young women have a flourishing coal business in Indianola, Ia. One of them was for some time employed in a coal dealer's office in Des Moines and learned to like the business so well that she induced her sister to go into partnership with her in their home village. They erected coal sheds and opened an attractive office and are said to be doing well.

Silver in daily use may be kept very bright if allowed to soak in strong borax water for four or five hours occasionally. The water should be perder if carefully followed.

> Paper Hunting. One of the most exciting of all riding games is paper hunting, or following a trail made by dropping pieces of paper. It can be made as dangerous as steeplechasing or no more so than an ordinary gallop over the fields. The danger is in the fences to be ridden over, says Country Life In America. There is no limit to the pace but the speed of the leading horse and the necessity of keeping the trail. The "hare," as the man a-horseback who lays the trail is called, is expected to foil his pursuers, the "hounds," as often as he can by the arts of the fox or by his own ingenuity, only restricted by certain rules of the game.

The American climate, with its extremes of heat and cold, is very trying upon ivory, and ivory backed mirrors of European manufacture almost invariably crack across the back after a few months of use upon this side of the Atlantic. The American manufacturers have hit upon the expedient of leaving a space between glass and frame in order to allow for contraction and expansion.
