At the meeting of the committees held recently the matter of making the celebration an annual event was discussed and viewed very favorably. It was thought, however, that the present haphazard methods of management should give place to a permanent organization.

The value of such an annual gathering is generally recognized by business men and it is suggested that a meeting be held early next year to appoint officials to manage the enterprise. Mr Parish has very kindly offered to leave the race-track intact and permit of its being used for speeding horses, etc., as soon as the surrounding crop is harvested.

The committees acting in the past have demonstrated that the Labor Day celebration can be made a success. It now remains for citizens generally to join in placing the matter on a permanent basis.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Ninety years of age on Saturday, October 14th, was the occasion for a family, neighborly and friendly celebration in honor of Mrs Lovinia Purvis, widow of the late Elijah Bowser, at the old homestead in the township of Bastar, where she was surrounded by all of her children, namely: Mrs (Rev.) Wm. A. Hanna, of Sydenham, John, Edward and Miss Sarah at home Mrs C. H. Johnston of Elgin, Mrs George Hough of North Augusta, with a few of her grand-children and over twenty of her immediate neighbors and friends from Brockville and Athens.

After consuming a few turkeys and other luxuries to match, they spent a few hours in friendly chat of past and coming events. The party was called to order on the lawn in front of a camera artist to leave an impression that cannot be easily erased, let it be good or bad.

After many wishes for returning birthday parties, the friends dispersed, well pleased with their part in the celebration.

Card of Thanks

Mrs John Wiltse and family desire through the Reporter to return thanks to friends and neighbors for their many acts of kindness and expressions of sympathy during the illness and following the death of the late John Wiltse.

The Brockville Poultry Association met on Friday last and decided to hold a winter show on Dec. 27, 28 and 29.

DEATH OF JOHN WILTSE

On Sunday last John Wiltse, one of Athens' oldest and most esteemed citizens, passed quietly from earth away, aged 81 years, 3 months and 12 days. He had been ill for several weeks and a few days before his death lapsed into a state of unconsciousness.

Mr Wiltse's whole life had been spent in this neighborhood. He was a son of the late Joseph Wiltse and was born on the old homestead now occupied by Albert Wiltse. He married early in life Loretta, daughter of the late James Wiltse, and together they have fought life's battles nobly and well. For many years Mr Wiltse followed farming successfully and also engaged in other business ventures, in all of which he was successful, his unceasing industry securing for his declining years an ample competency. About twenty years ago Mr Wiltse erected a comfortable home in Athens and has since lived a retired life enjoying the society and warm friendship of old friends and neighbors.

Mr Wiltse's character as a citizen and business man was such as to gain the favorable appreciation of all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance. He was liberal in his gifts to the church and to all worthy enterprises and every movement for social and moral reform could count on his unswerving support.

He had been married 60 years and this is the first time death has broken the home circle. Besides his wife, he leaves six children, namely, Irwin of Athens, Sabra, Susan and Isabell at home, Mrs James T. Gallagher of Newboro, and Mrs W. C. Smith of Athens, and one half sister, Mrs Aden D. Wiltse of Clinton.

The funeral service was conducted in the Methodist church on Tuesday afternoon and it was largely attended by people of the village and surrounding country who desired to pay a last tribute of respect to the worth of the deceased.

The pastor of the church, Rev. F. A. Read, delivered an inspiring, comforting, closely reasoned discourse, the subject of which was, "Does God send trouble?" taking for his text Job 14: 1, 2.

The casket was covered with a wreath of floral offerings, including a wreath from the Official Board of the church. The pallbearers were W. G. Parish, Isaac Alguire, W. H. Jacob, H. R. Knolton, J. F. Gordon, R. E. Cornell.

CENSUS RETURNS

Mr G. C. Cumming, Census Commissioner, gives the following figures for the municipalities of this district:

Brockville	9,372
Athens	800
Elizabethtown	4,732
Front of Escott	1,098
Front of Yonge	1,439
Rear of Yonge and Escott	1,145
Total	18,586

As usual, following a census, ambitious towns are questioning the official figures. Provincial pride has also been stirred, as Quebec has shown a greater rate of increase than Ontario. The West has been looking forward to the time when the preponderance of the Dominion's population would be west of Fort William, and the census figures certainly indicate that "westward the course of empire takes its way," but nevertheless the Western rival towns are not happy. Each aspires to be the greatest Roman of them all.

The following statement of the basis of population in the Dominion House clearly indicates the trend of our population:

	1901	1911
Ontario	86	82 4 loss
Quebec	65	65
New Brunswick	18	11 2 loss
Nova Scotia	18	16 2 loss
P.E. Island	4	3 1 loss
Manitoba	10	15 5 gain
British Columbia	7	12 5 gain
Saskatchewan	10	15 5 gain
Yukon	1	1
Total	221	232 11 gain

The new parliament will thus have 232 members.

Captain Alf. Hunter, Fish and Game Inspector for Eastern Ontario states that the government has given its assurance that the work of exterminating ling and other pirate fish from the Rideau waters and Bob's Lake will be continued this year. This is a work that should be extended to Charleston Lake.

5 Ways to Cook APPLES

BAKED APPLES AND PEARS.—Pears and apples sprinkled with sugar and baked for seven hours until red in a moderate oven make a pretty and very agreeable composit.

APPLE TARTS.—Peel, quarter and core tart apples. Line pie tins with plain paste, put in a layer of the quartered apples, sprinkle with two table-spoonsful of sugar, a tablespoonful of cinnamon, a little flour, and dot with small lumps of butter.

APPLE JELLY WITH ORANGE.—Tart apples cooked as for jelly; one cup sugar to one cup of juice; two oranges, etc., one-fourth of the rind; throw away the white part, cut up the pulp in tiny bits. Cook fifteen minutes. Pour in jelly glasses.

APPLE MERINGUE.—Peel and core six apples, being careful not to break them. Put them in a syrup made of two table-spoonsful of sugar, a cup of water and bake them until they are tender. Butter a baking dish, put the apples in and add a cup of sugar and jam. Beat the whites of two eggs to a stiff froth, and a tablespoonful of powdered sugar. Cover the apples completely with the meringue, put into the oven and bake until the meringue is brown, or for about ten minutes.

APPLE DUMPLINGS.—Fill the six cups of a buttered muffin pan with pared and spiced red apples, sprinkle delicately with salt and add two table-spoonsful of water to each cup. Stir together three times a cup and a half of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt, three table-spoonsful of baking powder, a cup of milk, a fourth of cup of shortening. Mix to a soft dough with one-half cupful of milk. Drop the dough from a spoon over the apples, smoothing it well over each cup. Bake in a moderately hot oven twenty-five minutes. Served by inverting the muffin pans upon a large platter, bringing the apples uppermost. Upon each dumpling place a spoonful of hard sauce and grate a little nutmeg over that.

OUR YOUTHFUL HOPES.

William Dean Howells, the novelist, says the New York Tribune has overestimated on the fine new edition of his works that is beginning to appear.

"You should not be so sure," said the reporter, "over the success of your literary career."

Mr. Howells, shaking his head, rejoined: "Our careers are never successful enough to warrant the attention of the public."

"It's a funny thing," said the old animal trainer, "but you can't train a horse to walk on his hind feet, because he ain't built that way."

"It's not the long hard pull uphill; it's the hilling back going down," New York Sun.

"The mule is a gentle beast, and so is man. And so is man. He's satisfied with the last. Like man, he may be taught some tricks. And so is man. He does his work from 8 to 5. The mule—when he gets mad, he kicks. And so does man."

The mule—he has a load to pull; And so has man; He's toughest when he is full; And so is man. Like man, he holds a patient pose. And when his load is heavy, he will rejoice. The mule—he likes to hear his voice; And so does man."

The mule—he has his faults, 'tis true; And so has man; He does some things he should not do; And so does man. Like man, he doesn't yearn for style, But waits contented with the while. The mule—he has a lovely smile; And so has man."

The mule is sometimes kind and good; And so is man; He eats all kinds of breakfast food; And so does man. Like man, he balks at gaudy dress And all outlandish foolishness; The mule is accused of mulishness; And so is man."

Blissful Ignorance. (Success Magazine.) Holden, the New York "bird man," lately had in his shop a tortoise parrot. Day after day it sat silent on its perch, indifferent to every question. At last a Cuban lady came into the shop and spoke to it in her native tongue. The parrot brightened up at once, opened its beak and emitted a jargon of vehement Spanish words. When the parrot finally ceased speaking, the lady turned to Mr. Holden, and blushing violently, asked: "Do you understand Spanish?" "No," he replied.

"Thank God," he cried, and left the shop.

WOMEN'S RIGHTS.

The women suffragettes have reason to rejoice at the victory gained by them in California last week. It is a step nearer the goal they are striving for, and, whether right or wrong, is bound to have an influence in their favor.

Another outstanding fact of last week in this connection was the appearance of women delegates at the Methodist Ecumenical Conference, in Toronto. Given a seat and a voice in this world's Parliament of Methodism, it will be hard to frame excuses for keeping them out of the Annual Conference or the Quarterly Board.

Not only that, but it gave these delegates an opportunity to appeal to the reverend fathers and brethren on behalf of women not only pathetic in the extreme, but bristled with arguments in favor of women having the suffrage that have yet to be met.

The statement that "the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world," and by implication does not need a vote, was met by the query, what about the millions of women who have no cradle to rock, and what about those who have done rocking the cradle. The other attack argument that women should not have a vote because they cannot fight, was met by the statement that the time was coming when the world would emerge from the barbarism of men, but that in the meantime woman did her share in the field of battle under the red cross.

They might have gone further, and asked what about the millions of men—aged and infirm, the weakling and the sickly, who are unfit for war, but still possess votes. The legal disabilities under which women are legally placed, was a compelling force in making women take up the role of a suffragette, they contended, and they felt it to be a "call of God." It is noteworthy that none of the mere men delegates ventured to cross swords with the ladies.

That the heaven is working in the Methodist Church is seen by a note in last week's Christian Guardian from Mrs. Deltor, North Bay, in which she says:

"I intended to say that this year there was a strong feeling against promising any specific amount to the trustees of the church, and that the ladies simply raise what they could in the ordinary way, but to make no special efforts, not that the Board did not appreciate the Ladies' Aid and its splendid work, but because the Official Board had thus far failed to recognize by resolution or otherwise the right of women to be represented in our church courts."

These words mean, if they mean anything, that if argument and appeal will not give them their rights in the church they will use coercion. No vote, no money will be the ultimatum. Apparently the women are growing tired of collecting money, washing dishes, buying carpets and such like work. They resent perhaps the largest half of the membership, and they want equal rights with the men. And they will get them.

Headaches Over the Eyes

Mean Frontal Catarrh

APT TO GET INTO EARS, CAUSING DEAFNESS, OR TO REACH THE LUNGS AND END IN CONSUMPTION.

You Can Cure Catarrh in Any Stage by Breathing the Healing Balsamic Fumes of Catarrhose, and Here is Proof.

Mr. Uric Beraut, a young gentleman who has lived for years in Sweetsburg, Que., inherited catarrh from his mother. The disease spread through his system till he was a physical wreck.

"As a child," said Mr. Beraut, "I was prone to an ulceration of the mucous lining of the throat and nasal passages. I grew pale and emaciated, lost all desire for food, and got into such a dreadful condition that my friends said that Catarrh was fairly eating me up."

"Every organ of my body seemed affected, and the doctor said it was the first stage of consumption. He advised Catarrhose and I inhaled it ten minutes at a time every few hours, and was rewarded in a few days by a wonderful improvement."

"Catarrhose pleased me and the doctor so well that I used it continually, and took Ferruginous Tablets after each meal to build up my strength. In about three weeks I was quite recovered, and the doctor says no remedy but Catarrhose could work such a miracle."

"Everyone in town knows I was just about dead with catarrh, and my cure is an evidence upon their fellows. Catarrhose can do it. It is a pleasure to recommend Catarrhose."

A GREAT POSSIBILITY.

Wonderful are the works of electricity, yet, so to speak, in its infancy. We are still on the edge of an unexplored realm. We have learned something about what electricity does; of the beginning, essence of it we know nothing.

Thirty-five years ago electric lighting and the telephone were curiosities of the continent. A proposition at Philadelphia; to-day hundreds of millions of dollars are invested in electrical ventures. It is largely displacing steam for purposes of power. It lights our streets and dwellings. It hauls our cars. Its power is transmitted great distances. We are learning to dispense with wires and to talk by wireless across great spaces.

The other day operators in San Francisco and Hokusai, Japan, held a 15-minute conversation 6,000 miles apart. This world is becoming smaller. It will be said that this capacity to talk across oceans and continents will be useful in war. It will; but it will still more useful in peace. Already it has proved effective in commerce, summoning help at sea, warning against danger, and averting disaster. And who knows but that by and by we may learn how to direct electric discharges by wireless so as to make war practically impossible—so as to render navy-building useless, and war ships of either sea or air obsolete? When a boy shall become able to press a key and send the mightiest Dreadnought to the bottom by exploding her own magazines, while she is many miles distant, or to wreck the greatest aeroplane, Dreadnoughts and aeroplanes will be more likely to give way to reason in the settlement of international difficulties. And it seems as if the building of engines of war will go on, in spite of labors for peace, till nations become convinced of the futility of attempting to outvie each other in armaments. Perhaps when a warship costing twelve millions may, miles from land, be turned into a mass of twisted wreckage by a message, by this mysterious force, directed by a schoolboy, from shore, naval appropriations may be reduced and justice may be exalted.

CENSUS MAKES THE POPULATION 7,100,000

Gain of Nearly Two Millions--Saskatchewan Largest Increase.

Ottawa despatch: The official census figures of the Dominion were handed out to-night by Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture. They show that the population is about 7,100,000, an increase of nearly 2,000,000 in ten years. The figures will be slightly increased when the full returns have been received.

Some of the returns are not complete. There are four electoral districts which have not yet made full returns, viz., Cumberland in Nova Scotia, Regina and Battleford in Saskatchewan, and Yale-Cariboo in British Columbia, which are estimated to give a population of 70,000.

The population of the cities and towns reported may be changed slightly on revision, but it is thought it may be accepted as correct.

The figures follow:

POPULATION BY PROVINCES.

This Food-Tonic Quickly Restores Strength

After a serious illness, ordinary food should be supplemented by a strengthening tonic. For this purpose is recommended very highly. In its preparation the disagreeable flavor of the natural Cod Liver Oil is entirely removed, while its well known nourishing and tissue-building qualities are retained. Then we add Hypophosphites to build up the nerves. Extract of Wild Cherry for the Lungs and Bronchial Tubes, and Extract of Malt (a food itself) which aids in the assimilation of other foods.

NA-DRU-CO Tasteless Cod Liver Oil Compound

Children in particular enjoy the pleasant flavor of Na-DrU-Co Tasteless Cod Liver Oil Compound, and quickly regain health and strength when Nature is aided by this natural food-tonic. Your Druggist has it in 50c. and $1.00 Bottles.

AVIATOR KILLED

Eugene Ely Fell Distance of Fifty Feet.

Macon, Ga., Oct. 23.—With ten thousand people looking on, Eugene Ely, the aviator, fell to his death at the State Fair grounds this afternoon. When he struck Ely was terribly crushed, and died eleven minutes later. He regained consciousness long enough to mutter: "I lost control; I know I am going to die."

Ely was killed while making his second flight of the day. He ascended about three o'clock and circled the fair grounds at a speed of fifty miles an hour. As he was competing the circle he made one of his spectacular dips. The machine sputtered with great velocity, and the spectators cheered, thinking Ely would rise, as he had done before. But Ely, when 75 feet from the ground, evidently lost his grip on the lever. He rose from his seat, then he jumped and almost cleared the aeroplane as it struck the ground. The machine was shattered, bits of wood and metal flying hundreds of feet. Ely himself struck with terrific force, and was partly caught under the wreckage of the machine.

The broken body of the aviator was removed to his hangar and physicians summoned, but they could do nothing. Ely had a premonition of disaster before he ascended this afternoon. He told his assistants he felt that something would happen, and asked them to notify Mrs. Ely, at the St. Marburg hotel, 164 West Fourteenth street, New York. The body will be sent to New York to-morrow.

Ely left his wife in New York two weeks ago to come to Macon to fly at the Georgia State Fair. He had been making spectacular flights for eight days. To-day he offered to fly at night, painting his aeroplane with phosphorus so as to make it glow. The offer was declined, for the reason that he wanted a thousand dollars, and the association thought the sum too large.

Ely was the first man to alight on the deck of a warship with an aeroplane. He flew from land and alighted upon the deck of the cruiser Pennsylvania, which was anchored in the San Francisco bay. He also attempted a flight from the deck of another warship, which was anchored in Chesapeake Bay. He was born at Davenport, Iowa, in 1885.

VIOLET SMITH

Young Teacher's Body Discovered in River.

Parry Sound, Ont., despatch: The veil which for the past ten days has surrounded the disappearance of Violet Smith, the young Toronto school teacher, who disappeared from her boarding house in Kingston on the 9th instant, has been at last lifted by the discovery of her body in the Shelabushong river to-day. Mr. Brock Batten, of Collingwood, who married a sister of the deceased girl, and who has been one of the most persistent searchers, had about five o'clock on the 23rd returned to Parry Sound, and yesterday afternoon he was informed by a fisherman that he should return and would be successful, and so he went back to the scene of her disappearance, followed the trail leading to the river, about half a mile from her boarding house, and with a pike pole began to make investigation, and after a short time and about 11:30 this morning he found the body near the bank at the point where the trail strikes the river. Without waiting to remove the body from the water he, with assistance, attached it to the bank and without making any examination at once started for Parry Sound to relieve the anxiety in so far as it was possible to do so, by the news of the certainty of the fate of the unfortunate girl.

Dr. Davis, coroner, Crown Attorney Haight and others, will go early to-day to examine the body, and the body, a most searching enquiry will be held, and everything that can be done to clear up the mystery will be done.

Parry Sound Coroner to Hold Investigation.

Parry Sound, Ont., despatch: The veil which for the past ten days has surrounded the disappearance of Violet Smith, the young Toronto school teacher, who disappeared from her boarding house in Kingston on the 9th instant, has been at last lifted by the discovery of her body in the Shelabushong river to-day. Mr. Brock Batten, of Collingwood, who married a sister of the deceased girl, and who has been one of the most persistent searchers, had about five o'clock on the 23rd returned to Parry Sound, and yesterday afternoon he was informed by a fisherman that he should return and would be successful, and so he went back to the scene of her disappearance, followed the trail leading to the river, about half a mile from her boarding house, and with a pike pole began to make investigation, and after a short time and about 11:30 this morning he found the body near the bank at the point where the trail strikes the river. Without waiting to remove the body from the water he, with assistance, attached it to the bank and without making any examination at once started for Parry Sound to relieve the anxiety in so far as it was possible to do so, by the news of the certainty of the fate of the unfortunate girl.

MAD DOG

Five Cases of Rabies Under Treatment in Toronto.

Toronto despatch: Rabies has made its appearance in Toronto and five cases are now under treatment by the Provincial Health officers. One dog, which upon examination was found to have suffered from rabies, is responsible for four of the cases. The animal belonged to a family in Admiral road, and when it began to show alarming symptoms a veterinary surgeon was called in. While handling the dog he was bitten. He at once had it killed and the head sent to the Provincial Analyst.

The examination showed that rabies existed and the surgeon went to the Western Hospital to take the Pasteur treatment. Two children in the house and their nurse, who had been playing with the dog, are being given the treatment as a precautionary measure.

The fifth case comes from Roncesvalles avenue, where a boy was bitten by a dog suspected of rabies. The report on the animal's brain has not been received, but the boy is being treated at the Western Hospital.

$2,000,000 SURVEY

Boundary Between Northern Canada and U. S.

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 23.—J. D. Craig, Chief of the Canadian Boundary Survey, here from Alaska to-day, says the past few months have been devoted to running a line along the 141st meridian from Mt. St. Elias to the Arctic Ocean. The survey started this year at the Arctic Circle and completed the line to within five miles of the Arctic Ocean. The work consists of cutting paths twenty feet wide through the dense timber, putting up bronze monuments at average distances of three miles apart, and mapping the country. The expedition consisted of 30 men and 200 horses. Canadian surveyors composed about half of the joint party.

The survey of the boundary between the northern possessions of the United States and Canada, is costing the two Governments jointly about $2,000,000. The work has been going on for the past four years, but will be completed probably next year. Work on the 141st meridian has been under way for the past five years. With the extension of the line to the Davidson's Mountains where it was left this year, to the Arctic Circle, the entire survey will have been completed. The Davidson Mountains are about 8,000 feet high and are very rugged and inaccessible.

STRUCK BY ENGINE.

Toronto despatch: Richard Grey, a farmer 60 years of age, from Beeton, Ont., was reported to be dying in the Western Hospital at an early hour to-day, a fracture of the spinal column being the result of his having wandered into the street trunk yards at the foot of John Street early in the evening. He must have been forcibly struck by a locomotive and rolled along the ground for some distance.

Mr. Buggins—Even when I wear a de-collette gown you never notice what I have on. Mr. Buggins—No, I'm too busy noticing what you have off.

AGED MINISTERS

Methodist Church Superannuation Fund is $400,000.

Toronto despatch: With Rev. Dr. Carman presiding, the annual meeting of the superannuation fund of the Methodist Church was held in the board room of the Wesley building yesterday afternoon, with the following members present: Rev. Carman, Dr. German, Dr. Griffin, Toronto; Dr. Williamson, Niagara Falls; G. W. Henderson, Peterboro; Alfred Brown, Goderich; Dr. Griffin, M. S. Modol, Napanee; W. J. Robertson, St. Catharines; J. C. Hay, Listowel; and H. S. Lovring, Coldwater.

In addition to the business of a personal nature to the ministry transacted, was the adoption of the financial report of Treasurer Griffin.

The report showed that the permanent fund amounted to $412,018, and the special reserve fund to $107,776, of which $89,068 had been transferred to the permanent fund, leaving a balance of $48,710, which, with the surplus annual fund of 1910-11 makes $76,582. Investments amounted to $93,000, less $5,000 deposit loan from the church and personal aid fund.

Receipts during the period from July 15, 1910, to July 31, 1911, were $188,578, an increase of $10,090. The chief amount was $90,623 for circuits and missions.

Expenditures came to $160,713. There were 230 ministers' claims amounting to $94,248, and 291 widows' claims, reaching $56,170. The surplus transferred to special reserve fund was $27,864.

NERVOUS DEBILITY

OUR NEW METHOD TREATMENT will cure you and make a man of you. Under its influence the brain becomes active, the blood purified so that all pimples, blotches and ulcers heal up; the nerves become strong as steel, so that nervousness, bashfulness disappear; the eyes become bright, the face full and clear, energy returns to the body, and the moral, physical and mental systems are invigorated; all drains cease—no more vital waste from the system. You feel yourself a man and know marriage cannot be a failure. Don't let quacks and fakirs rob you of your hard earned dollars.

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT THREATENED WITH PARALYSIS

Peter E. Summers relates his experience:

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay in bed for weeks and was unable to do any work. I was very despondent and didn't care whether I lived or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me gazed at my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loss, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Dr. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so."

A 'CROSS COUNTER TALK

Customer: "How do you know the colors in Sherwin-Williams Paint, Prepared, are durable?"

Dealer: "The colors in S.W.P. are durable and lasting because of the high qualities of raw materials used, the care taken in manufacture and the skill employed in mixing and grinding. The S.W. Co. has its own dry color plant and produces dry colors second to none for brilliancy and strength; operates its own linseed oil mill and manufactures all pure linseed oil for S.W. Products; has its own lead and zinc mines, and employs a large staff of chemists to maintain the standard of all raw materials and finished products.

"With materials of such quality, combined with the thorough assimilating they receive in mixing and grinding, is insured the most permanent and durable colors it is possible to manufacture. S.W.P. wears as long as any paint can wear and retains its brightness and freshness for the greatest possible time."

$11,000 IN PRIZES AT WINTER SHOW IN OTTAWA

There is probably no exhibition in Canada which is making more rapid growth than the Eastern Ontario Live Stock and Poultry Show, the great educational show held each January in Ottawa. In recent years the attendance has been increasing over fifty per cent annually, while the gain in the number of exhibits has been almost as great. This result is largely due to the generous prize list which is sufficient to bring out very high quality exhibits in large numbers. The different departments and the total of prizes offered in each are as follows:

Horses$3000 00
Dairy cattle 1400 00
Beef cattle 1600 00
Sheep 850 00
Swine 850 00
Poultry 2750 00
Seeds 550 00
Total$1100 00

There are in all 148 sections in the prize list representing 197 breeds and varieties. The individual prizes are large and in a great many cases more than one prize may be won by the same animal.

A new feature of the prize list this year is the introduction of several classes open only to exhibitors who have never won a first prize at exhibitions held at Ottawa, Toronto, London or Guelph. These will offer special inducements to new exhibitors as they may also show in open classes.

The dates for the next show are January 16 to 19, 1912. Our readers may secure prize lists by sending a request by post card to D. T. Elderkin, Secretary, Ottawa, Ont.

HUNTED BY A WALRUS.

The Big Bull Got Quite Scoble Before He Was Done For.

In George Borup's "A Tenderfoot With Peary" appears an exciting incident of walrus hunting. During a raid upon a herd of fifty walrus asleep on a pan "it was blowing some, and the choppy waves made the shooting look as if the guns had spiral barrels." The ineffective target practice produced these hair raising developments a few seconds later: "Suddenly a giant bull rose out of the water just along side of Wesharkoupe. He threw his harpoon, but as the barb came off he might as well have heaved a lead pencil. The walrus gave a derisive grunt, dived, and a second later shot out of the water on the other side, deluged us with liquid and came down slap bang on the gunwale of the boat opposite me."

"By this time Wesharkoupe was high in the air and out for an altitude record. Instead of throwing his harpoon he threw his soul into his yell and just spat in the brute's face. The other huskies were trying to back water or hit him over the head with the oars, nearly sideswiping me and incidentally short circuiting their cusping at Wesharkoupe, the walrus and everything is general.

"All this time the walrus was sitting alongside of me, asking if there were any more at home like Wesharkoupe. It was easier to pull his whiskers or smash his mug with my fist than shoot. If I held the gun to my shoulder the muzzle would stick beyond his head, so, firing from the hip, I gave him the entente cordiale."

GETTING THE FACTS.

His Second Story Probably Differed From the First One.

Long experience as a consulting attorney has given Mr. Mooney a judicial habit of mind. He never accepts the facts at par value, but always leads those facts into the rear office and drops acid in their eyes. The other day a friend rushed in, warm and red.

"Mooney," said the friend excitedly, "I've been insulted. Hinks just met me and called me all sorts of names. We've had trouble over that partition matter, you know. He said I was a pettifogger and a thief and a scoundrel and a perjurer and a wire haired thing."

"Um!" said Mr. Mooney, sitting farther down in his chair and looking at the speaker over his glasses. "Um! And what do you propose to do about it?"

"What do I propose to do about it? Why, I was so astounded at the moment that I could make no reply at all. But, now that I have somewhat recovered myself, I have determined to go down to Hinks' office and knock his block off. I'll beat him to a quivering froth."

"Um!" said Mr. Mooney, slipping down a notch. "Um! So would I if any one called me the names that Hinks called you. But before you go suppose you sit down with me for a moment."

The indignant friend took a chair. "Now," said Mooney, ganging his eyeglasses, "what are the facts in the case?"—Cincinnati Times-Star.

No Caste in Snoring.

The cause and cure of snoring concern all classes, says the London Chronicle. We have record that both the house of lords and the workhouse have suffered from it. There was a former Duke of Norfolk who fell into the habit of sleeping audibly in the lords, and it happened that he was hard at it on one occasion when a bill concerning the parish of Great Snoring, in Norfolk, came before the house. The roar of laughter with which the bill's title was greeted awakened the duke and relieved his fellow peers. At the other end of the social scale we have the poor law commission minority's commendation of the ingenious workhouse master who divided the old men at night so that the snorers and the deaf men slept in one ward and the rest in another.

Johnnie Knew.

A teacher in an uptown school was giving her small charges a lesson in politeness the other day.

"Now, when," said she, "should you say 'Excuse me, please?'"

There was a moment's silence, then a very small boy put up his hand.

"Well, Johnnie?"

"Please, ma'am, you should say 'Excuse me, please,' when you sneeze at the table and don't turn away your head quick enough."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Fish and Brain.

The saying that fish is the best brain food comes of an old long tongue windbag years ago saying: "Thought is impossible without phosphorus." So a Swiss chemist, knowing that fish contained phosphorus, put two and two together, and brought forth a saying that will never die.

She Knew All Right.

"You don't know what that's a picture of, John?" said Mrs. Lasping in a tone of reproach. "You ought to read your ancient history more. That is the temple of Dinah at Emphasis."—Chicago Tribune.

Usually the Case.

The husband may be boss of his own house, but his wife usually conceals the fact from his knowledge until he forgets about it.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The best preparation for the future is the present well seen to, the last duty well done.

THE DAIRY TEST AT THE EASTERN SHOW

The prize list for dairy cattle at the Eastern Ontario Live Stock and Poultry Show, Ottawa, January 16th to 19th, 1912, provides large prizes for Ayrshires, Holsteins, Jerseys, Short-horns, Guernseys and Grades. There are three sections for each class—cow, 48 months and over; cow, 36 months and under 48 months; heifer, under 36 months. The total amount of prize money for the dairy cattle is $1400.00. There will be a production test extending over 72 hours beginning at 9 p.m. on Friday, January 12th. Awards will be made according to the following scale:
25 points for pound of fat.
3 points for each pound of solids not fat.

1 point for each 10 days in milk after the first 30 days; limit 10 points
At one of the recent shows a pure-bred cow competed in the Test. The owner valued her $150.00 before the test but after winning first prize and $50.00 in prize money he sold the cow for $500. This illustrates the value to a breeder of competing in this dairy test. Full particulars regarding the rules, classification and prizes will be found in the prize list which may be secured from D. T. Elderkin, Secretary Ottawa.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON V.—OCT. 22, 1911.

A Psalm of Deliverance.—Psa. 85: 1-13.

Commentary.—I. Gratitude for Deliverance (vs. 1-3). I. Lord—Jehovah, the all-sufficient, the self-existing One, though has been favorable—Here is a hearty recognition of God's power, authority and interest in the affairs of men, and an acknowledgment of his goodness in all his dealings with Israel, thy land—It was the land which God had provided as a dwelling-place for his people, from which they had been driven because of their sins, and to which they were being restored through the divine favor.

2. Forgive the iniquity.—The Hebrew words describe sin (1) as depravity or moral distortion, (2) as a wandering from the way or missing the mark; and forgiveness (1) as the removal of a burden, (2) as a covering of the offense, which would otherwise meet the eye of the judge and call for punishment.—Cam. Bible. The Jews in captivity had humbled themselves before the Lord, and the burden of their guilt had been removed, covered all their sin—Christ "is the propitiation for our sins" (1 John 2:2). The atonement of Christ covers the sins of all who in the evangelical sense believe. "The Lord has put it so completely away, that even his omniscient eye sees it no more."

3. A sign to elevate the voice.—"A change of note," "A musical note," "Up, my soul!" "An appeal, or summons, to Jehovah." It seems to have been used to give some direction as to the way the portion of the psalm should be sung. 3. All thy wrath.—The severity of the punishment had been let loose upon the nation because of sin, but now it was withdrawn, and the people were rejoicing in the divine favor, fierceness of their anger.—The sin of Israel was the occasion of God's displeasure, and now that the sin was removed the divine displeasure ceased. The severity of the punishment inflicted was the measure of the fierceness of God's anger. Punishment less severe would not have been sufficient to meet the demand. "Lord, thou hast been favorable unto thy land," is explained and enlarged by the subsequent expressions in verses 1-3, each indicating a particular point in which favor has been shown. Underneath all these expressions is a current of thanksgiving and rejoicing.

4. Turn us.—Although much had already been done in the nation's restoration, much still remained to be done before they could enjoy full national prosperity. The captivity had been turned, but as yet only a small proportion of the Jews had returned from Babylon to Jerusalem. The expression means "convert," and was applicable to Israel as a nation and as individuals. 5. God of our salvation.—This was a fitting acknowledgment of God's power, that God was their sole hope and help. The prayer included in this hope is expressive of penitence, need and faith in God's mercy and power. 6. Wilt thou be angry... for ever.—We have already suffered much, and long; our fathers have suffered, and we have succeeded to their distresses. Draw not out thy anger against us from generation to generation.—Clarke. The desolation visited upon Jerusalem and the land of Judah when the nation was taken into captivity was great, and conditions there grew worse during the seventy years of exile; consequently the process of restoration was slow and arduous. It was more than twenty years after the decree of Cyrus authorizing the return that the temple was restored, and nearly one hundred before the walls of Jerusalem were rebuilt. Sin works ruin and its consequences are likely to be long-lived. 6. Revive us again.—Wilt not thou return and quicken us, restore our national life according to the promises of the prophets.—Kirkpatrick. "Each increased as the petitioner proceeded with the request. The need was great, but application was being made to the right source, and confidence was growing strong. The same prayer was offered by Habakkuk (iii. 2) when he foresaw this sad condition of Israel. "But thy people may rejoice in thee—A manifestation of the divine presence and favor is a rejoicing. The prayer indicates that the restoring work is to be in the restored empire, city, nation or harvest, but in the Lord. Multitudes recognize in worldly prosperity the only ground for rejoicing, while the spiritually-minded followed of Jesus finds his real joy in the Lord. "If God is the fountain of all our mercies, he must be the centre of our joys."—Henry. 7. Show us thy mercy. There had already been a large manifestation of God's mercy to Israel, yet there was a need for a constant exercise of that mercy. When a sinner realizes the enormity of his offences against God and what his rebellion truly deserves, his most natural appeal is for mercy, and such a prayer is not disregarded.

8. Hear what God the Lord will speak.—There was a well-grounded expectation that the Lord would answer. Too often people who pray, and then go their way without listening to hear what "the Lord will speak," will speak peace.—God's anger was turned away from Israel because of their changed attitude toward him, and in response to their prayer of faith he would speak peace to them. His saints—Those who had set themselves apart for God's service. Let them not turn again to folly.—In the past the Jewish nation had been unstable. They had repeatedly turned to the Lord and had as often forsaken him. "Those who would enjoy conscious communion with God must avoid all that would grieve the Holy Spirit; not only grosser sins, but even follies," Spurgeon. It is the height of folly to turn to sin after one has known the Lord. 9. That glory may dwell in our land.—In that time of Solomon there was great prosperity in the nation, and the glory of the Lord was manifested in the temple at Jerusalem. "The glory" here is especially used in reference to the ark of the covenant, as formerly containing the holiest symbols of Jehovah's presence and favor.—Wheaton.

10. Mercy and truth are met together.—God's words concerning Israel had been proved to be true, and his mercy had been shown in the nation's restoration from captivity. Israel had repented, and mercy had been granted in keeping with God's word of truth. Mercy and truth are inseparable. Righteousness and peace have kissed each other—There can be no peace in the highest sense, but upon the basis of righteousness. Justice had been meted out to Israel, and in consequence of that, peace was bestowed. The elements of God's kingdom of grace are "righteousness, and peace, and joy" (Rom. 14: 17). 11. Truth shall spring out of the earth.—There had been a period of spiritual death, but the truth of God would prevail in the hearts of men as a consequence of their turning to the Lord. Doubtless reference is also made to the time when Christ should appear on earth to establish his kingdom through his ministry and death. Righteousness... from heaven—A figure showing the prevalence of righteousness in the time to come when Israel should become prosperous, possibly looking forward also to Messianic times. 2. Our land shall yield her increase.—Because of Israel's sin the land had become barren, but with a return to righteousness its fertility would be restored, as an indication of God's favor. 13. Righteousness shall go before him—As a herald to prepare the way. In the way of his steps.—The blessings promised are enacted only by those who follow in the ways of God. PRACTICAL SURVEY. Topic: True intercession. I. Based upon God's past mercies. II. Based upon God's present needs. III. Based upon God's ideal for man. 1. Based upon God's mercies. "Thou hast been favorable." The favor of God is the fountain of happiness to nations as well as to individuals. There is more in God to give cheer than in circumstances to cause distress. Though Cyrus had proclaimed deliverance to the Jews they recognized God's hand in it, and in their restoration were assured of divine forgiveness for all past sins. In their captivity God had marked all their tendency and knew when they were healed of their tendency to idolatry. Then was he merciful and extended his power to bring them out of the land of captivity to their own land where they could again enter upon free and open devotion to God. The thought of all their sins and the boundless love and mercy of God filled the mind of the psalmist as he approached the Lord to ask for his special help in their new life in Canaan. He desired that they might realize the full blessings of restoration. The public interests lay upon the psalmist's heart, and his prayer was for the great congregation. His sense of their present afflictions did not obscure the remembrance of former mercies. II. Based upon man's present need. Though a representative number of the Jews were settled in their own land, they were surrounded by enemies and many evidences of their weakness were manifest. They were in a state of deep distress, such as is described in Ezra and Nehemiah. For them the psalmist sought forgiveness and consolation and prayed for a revival. His prayer expressed his dependence upon God, his confidence in God and his importunity with God. He looked to him alone as the source of reviving power and grace, since he only can speak true peace to the soul. III. Based upon God's ideal for man. When the psalmist reached the height of his pleading, his soul grew quiet in the presence of his Maker and he felt constrained to silence before him. A patient, attentive, obedient disposition possessed him and he waited in holy expectancy, until he was enabled to grasp the ideal, the plan of God for his needy people. The very approach to a true revival was conditioned on a covenant not to "turn again to folly." As God was the fountain of all their mercies, he must be the centre of all their joys. God had thought of peace in relation to his people and faith, but always in harmony with his righteousness. When mercy, truth and righteousness have a sovereign influence on men's hearts and lives all good may be expected. Mercy and faithfulness blend together in all God's dealings with his people, and righteousness and peace are inseparable in their spiritual experiences. The divine purpose is to reverse the moral state of things so long prevalent among mankind. The psalmist foresaw a spiritual revival, a new realization of God, when doubt and weakness should give place to confidence and strength, when truth should cover the earth as righteousness clothes the heavens, when earth and heaven so long alienated in sympathy and character should be one, when man should bear the image of God and earth should be the reflection of heaven. A spiritual revival begins as a personal matter and the same standard must reach from individuals to nations. What a delight to discover, instead of a world of rebels against God, a world of loyal subjects! The earth quickened by the seeds of truth and watered by the rains of righteousness shall yield her increase. Truth shall spring up and flourish and so clothe this lower world as to make it the counterpart of that upper one. As the psalmist waited before the Lord he grasped the thought of fellowship and companionship with God, a peace of safety for all who walk in the "way of his steps." There was revealed to him a higher standard for his people than any previous experience had reached. His vision embraced the dispensation of the gospel. The possibility of divine life grew bright before his prayerful soul. T. R. A.

Pimples So Bad He Was Ashamed

Tried Everything but Did It No Good. One Box of Cuticura Ointment Took Pimples Away.

"About seven years ago pimples broke out all over my face and neck. When they first came out they would be big and red, then after a while they would turn white, and matter would come out. Sometimes they would itch so I could hardly sleep. I was ashamed to go down street. My face looked so bad. I went to several doctors and got medicine, which did me no good, and bought ointment, salves and patent medicines, but none of them would cure my face and neck. A friend advised me to use Cuticura Ointment. I got one box and it took the pimples away before I had it all used up. I can say it is a wonderful remedy. Any sufferer who has pimples should use Cuticura Ointment if they want a sure cure. I never had any more pimples since." (Signed) Mrs. Bobbie Mathers, Parkhill, Ont., Dec. 24, 1910.

Sores All Over Baby's Body

"When my baby boy was six months old, his body was completely covered with large sores that seemed to itch and burn, and cause terrible suffering. The eruption began in pimples which would open and run, making large sores. His hair came out and finger-nails fell off, and the sores were over the entire body. I was giving little or no sleep for baby or myself. Great scabs would come off when I removed his shirt. We tried a great many remedies but nothing would help him, till a friend induced me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and in a short time before I could see that he was improving, and in a few days he was entirely cured. He had suffered about six weeks before we tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and had seen several other things and doctors too. I think the Cuticura Remedies will do all that is claimed for them, and great good more." (Signed) Mrs. Bobbie Tubman, Dodson, Mont., Jan. 28, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. Send to Potter-Drug & Chem. Corp., 56 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A., for liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. booklet.

Frederickton, N. B., dispatch: News of a fatal shooting at Penniac, York county, late yesterday, reached here to day. Howard P. Christie, aged 14, was accidentally shot in the head by Thomas Wade, aged 8. The boys were out gunning. The boy died twenty minutes later.

A BOND

IS A FIRST MORTGAGE

A bond is a first mortgage split up into denominations of one hundred dollars and upwards. Bonds are a comparatively modern form of investment. Previously a corporation or undertaking desiring to raise money against their assets was required to place it in one or several large mortgages.

Nowadays an issue of bonds is made instead.

Bonds are a convenient form of mortgage, and those bonds which we offer are thoroughly investigated to determine that the payment of interest and principal is absolutely assured.

We have literature more fully describing bonds in general as well as specific issues, which will be glad to send upon application. Send for it.

HOW BEST TO BLEED POULTRY.

Aside from the common and most objectionable method of bleeding poultry, that of chopping or wringing the head off, two methods are followed by those who place the poultry on the market dressed. One method is the dissection of the neck and allowing all the blood to remain, and be sold with the bird; the other is that of bleeding in the mouth, leaving the head on the bird with every appearance of being unharmed.

In the practice of these two methods, the former has been the more common. There is some objection to it. The bird killed by this means are unightly about the head and neck when dressed, and sometimes discoloration of the whole neck, and in evidence. There is a growing favor towards dressing poultry that has been led to the United States, the pure food laws compel the bleeding of poultry. One needs only to see birds killed by each of these methods to decide in favor of that which has been led. The sooner the blood is removed from the neck, the better it will be for the industry.

Before the new method now recommended as the best, the birds are hung up by the legs for a few minutes before being bled. This method is made with a small knife, which severs the jugular vein. The blood, for the most part, is almost entirely removed, and is caught in a small tin, which is kept under the bill of the bird. The blood is then inserted into the upper part of the mouth and the bird lets the feathers go and they then come away readily.

When the time is to cut the jugular vein, wait a minute until the blood is out, then turn the knife and drain the bird. The blood is then inserted into the little quiver on the knife being inserted into the brain, one knows that he has touched the brain, and the bird will "moo" in the body relaxes, and as feathers are held by little muscles, they naturally fall down, one up and one down and one up on either side of the breast; the same on the back, legs and neck, and the feathers are practically all out.

When plucking it is well to let the bird hang down for a little while. Then when it is taken down, give it a little snap; there will be a little gurgle and the blood will come away and the bird will be perfectly clean.—Farm and Dairy.

Sweet Miss Margery

She moved to a chair, and, flinging herself into it, buried her face in her hands, while he stood as he was, hardly realizing what it was that caused the sudden glow within his breast, the unspoken happiness that possessed him. In a moment, however, Margery rose; pride had come to her aid. She looked at him steadily, her two small hands clasped.

"You have accused me of deceit," she said, "spoken words insulting to a true woman; but it is in what I should have expected from the man who trampled on a girl's heart, her life, as you did on mine. Ah, how wrongly I have judged you! I thought you a hero, a king; you proved yourself mean, dishonorable, despicable!"

She drew a quick breath, then went on, not noticing that his face had grown as pale as her own.

"I was only a village girl, a plaything of the hour, sufficient to amuse you when you were dull, a toy to be tossed aside when I had given you all the amusement you wanted. It was nothing to you that might come to me. I served your purpose. In my foolish ignorance I gave you all my heart; I let you see how deeply I loved you, and, in return, you went back to your cousin, your equal, and laughed at my foolish weakness as a good joke. You talk of deceit! I lie, you who offered me such insults, sending me money through her—money, Stuart, when my heart was breaking!"

She paused, her hands pressed close to her heart, which beat most painfully. Stuart moved nearer to her; he put one hand on her arm.

"Insults—money!" he echoed, in a hard, quiet voice between his clenched teeth. "What do you mean?"

"What do I mean? I mean the humiliation you offered me when you sent that cruel, beautiful woman, your cousin, to me, with cold, insulting words and an offer of money as a cure for all I might suffer!"

Stuart's head tightened on her arm. "Vane offered you insults—money!" he said, incredulously.

"Yes," replied Margery. Then, as he turned away with a groan, she added, hurriedly: "You did not send her, Stuart?"

"Send her? Great heavens! you ask me that?"

The girl drew back, frightened by the agony in his voice, and he moved to the fire place, leaning one arm on it for support, with his face turned from her.

"Tell me what happened," he said, after a brief pause.

Margery drew a quick breath, and then in a low, sad voice, she spoke of her sorrow at Mary Morris' death, her trouble because of his accident, her meeting with Sir Douglas Gerant, and the words he had spoken. Then she told him of Robert Bright's proposal, and of the horror and agony of Vane's visit, the result of which was that she determined to leave the village at once, and to that end sought the help of Miss Lawson. A few sad words told of Vane's death and her marriage.

Stuart never moved during the recital; his heart seemed turned to stone. He dared not think of his love—the misery of his loss maddened him; it was of the treachery and cruelty he thought; and his brain whirled at the memory.

"And you believed that of me?" he asked, almost mechanically.

"It seemed so true," murmured the girl, wistfully, then, pressing her hands together, she whispered, "And it was not."

"It was false from beginning to end!"

Their eyes met, and a shudder passed over each. Margery felt her heart grow cold as ice, a lump rose in her throat, and she was speechless.

"Yes," she said, faintly.

"Forgive me, oh, forgive me!" she cried. "How I have wronged you!"

Stuart clasped her hand with his own, then dropped upon his knees at her feet, and pressed his lips to her fingers.

"Forgive you?" he said, passionately. "Is it from your forgiveness and love, my dear, that I still kneel at your feet till you have pardoned me, and I may be a man?"

"Oh, Stuart!" she whispered, "Forgive you? Yes, a hundred times! Indeed, it is all forgotten now, forgotten and done with."

"Forgotten?" cried Stuart. "Ah, no!"

"We were brave in words that day, Stuart," said Margery, gazing at the fire. "But the life we lived that day, the battle would begin that very moment, the fight be so long! We were so happy, and now—"

"And now," he said, hoarsely, rising to his feet, "life is ended forever! You are not free. I find you and lose you forever at the same time. What have we done that fate should be so hard, so cruel?"

Margery felt the gladness, the triumphant joy, die out of her heart; her senses grew numb and heavy, she came back from the happy past to the present, she remembered all.

"Stuart," she said, slowly and impressively, "it is too late to speak of that; we must part now, never to meet again."

"Never to meet again!" he repeated, raising his head from his hands. "Oh, no, no, that is too much! Let me see you, hear you speak. If you are taken from me now, the darkness will be too terrible. Ah, Margery, have some pity! Think of our love, our dream; do not send me from you!" He seized her hands in his, and half drew her into his arms; but, as his eyes fell on her pale, troubled face, he bowed his head, and, standing upright before her, said rapidly, "Yes, I will go—I will go to the uttermost parts of the earth—to death—if only you will tell me that you love me, have ever loved me, and me only!"

Margery buried her face in her hands. She was silent for a few seconds, and then she looked up.

"I am a wife, Stuart," she replied, slowly, drawing her breath as if in pain; "at the side of a dead—dead I took upon me the most solemn and sacred vows. My husband is good; the depths of his nobility and generosity you could never fathom. To speak such words would be dishonorable, would be a sin. I can say no more."

Stuart's head fell forward on his breast; the soft, red tissue touched his usefulness to the core.

"Forgive me!" he said, huskily. "You are right—we must part; I will leave Court Manor as soon as possible."

"It will be best."

The words fell almost softly from her lips; her eyes were closed, in pain, her face was pale and drawn. She paused an instant, then moved slowly from the fire, from the proximity of the man bowed down by his despair. She seemed almost overwhelmed by the magnitude of this new sorrow; but, though she looked so frail and delicate, she possessed unusual courage. Her pride and honor supported her in this worst of all her troubles. The future, with its bitterness, stood before her; she had to face life—

"If that may be called life—
From which each charm of life has fled—
Happiness gone with hope and love
In all but breath already dead."

And brave the struggle she would, though it broke her heart.

At the door she turned. The sight of Stuart's grief struck her painfully; she held out her hand, urged by an uncontrollable impulse.

"Stuart!" she said, faintly.

"He was beside her in an instant."

"If you value what I say," she whispered, as he clasped her hand, "you will be brave. Do not speak of your life as ended, both have duties. We have been tried, but Heaven has been very good, for the clouds of doubt and suspicion that hung over our hearts have been dispelled. To know the truth is happiness and comfort—let us be grateful and not murmur. Now, good-bye."

Their eyes met, and he bent his head till his lips touched her small, cold, trembling hand.

"I will remember, cousin," he responded, "good-bye."

The curtain was moved aside, then fell back again to its place, and Stuart Crosbie was alone.

"Then came the bitter hours, and he broke
Thy heart from mine away,
And tearfully the words we spoke
We were so loath to say.
Farewell, farewell, world so fair!
Farewell, joy of soul!

"Farewell. We shall not meet again
As we are parting now;
I must my beating heart restrain,
Must veil my burning brow.
Oh, those are tears of bitterness
Wrung from the beating heart.
When two, his in their tenderness,
Must learn to live apart!"

Stuart stood by the fire alone, heedless that the embers were slowly dying, heedless of the dusk that filled the room, heedless of all save his burden of misery. He was too weak to grapple with his sorrow—too prostrate, from the freshness and poignancy of his grief, to overcome it. At last he roused himself, he had to act, not think. He raised his head, he looked round in a dazed, troubled way, and, with a weary step, went slowly from the room.

As the sound of his footsteps died away, the door of the inner room was opened and a man approached the fire—a man whose face all joy and happiness had fled, in whose dark eyes a world of speechless agony glowed, a world whose mouth dwelt the desolation of hopelessness. He stood erect for an instant, then with a deep groan buried his face in his hands and sunk into a chair.

It was Margery's husband—Nugent, Earl of Court.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Bustling March had come round, and gossip had worn to a thread the story of Lady Court's romantic birth. It had seized on the history of Sir Douglas Gerant's long-lost daughter with avidity for it was not often that society's faded appetite was regaled with a delightful morsel. Many things had happened since the dull November, but foremost among them were two events. Lord and Lady Court were abroad, to the great annoyance of society, as it was thus debarred from beholding her ladyship in person, and the engagement between Stuart Crosbie, jun., heir to Crosbie Castle, and Miss Vane Charteris, his cousin, came to an abrupt and strange termination just as the congratulations were pouring in. Many reasons were given in strict confidence to this unsatisfactory affair. It was averred that Miss Charteris had quarrelled with her aunt, Mrs. Crosbie, and that Stuart, like a dutiful son, had espoused his mother's cause; that cold, beautiful Vane refused to become her cousin's wife when she discovered that Beecham Park had passed away from him; and that Miss Charteris had grown tired of her affianced husband. These and numerous other explanations were whispered; but no one knew the truth—none but three people—the cousins themselves and the mistress of Crosbie Castle.

Stuart had not reproached his mother; but his mental suffering caused her much uneasiness and also genuine shame. She never knew what took place between Vane Charteris and her son, for Stuart was silent, and her niece left town with her mother for Cannes immediately after the rupture. She felt that Vane must be suffering disappointment, but she could never guess the humiliation, the sullen revenge and anger that were gnawing at her niece's heart. So when she would, at every turn Vane had Stuart's contemptuous face before her, heard his bitter words, saw herself again as he had shown her, in her true light, dishonorable and depreciable. That the marriage should have been broken off was acute disappointment; but the odium she had brought on herself in his eyes was even harder to bear. The malicious spite she felt toward Margery deepened now into actual hatred; it galled her to desperation to know that the village girl should have become a great person, her equal in birth, her superior in marriage. Poor Lady Charteris was overwhelmed with sorrow at the abrupt termination of her daughter's engagement, and fretted herself to a shadow because of Vane's irritability and peevishness. She lavished all her heart's tenderness on her daughter, hoping and trusting to see her regain her spirits; but it was weary work. Vane, crushed by her own deceit and wrong-doing, was rapidly changing into an envious, sour, miserable woman.

Mrs. Crosbie was ignorant of the whole of Vane's cruel falsehoods and insinuations; and, knowing this, Stuart accepted as truly genuine her proud words of sorrow and vexation for her share in the matter. It had been a startling disclosure to Mrs. Crosbie when she found that Margery had become the Countess of Court; but, when surprise had died away, she felt unconsciously gratified that her new relative should hold so high a social position, and was even disposed to be friendly toward her, although she had deprived Stuart of Beecham Park. She wrote a courteous note to the young wife when her excitement had cooled, welcoming her as her kinswoman, and offering her warm congratulations.

Margery was in Rome when this letter reached her. She read it, folded slowly, then, with a faint smile, it took it and put it away. It was not in keeping with her generous nature to bear malice, so she replied to Mrs. Crosbie's epistle with a few words of acknowledgment written in a kindly spirit. Margery received another letter at about the same time which brought a flush of sincere pleasure to her face. It was written by Miss Lawson in the name of the villagers of Hurstley, offering Lady Court warm expressions of affection, respect, and esteem from all her old friends, and at the head of the list of names were the signatures of Farmer Bright and his wife; Miss Lawson's own letter explained everything. Just after the news of Margery's marriage was made public in the village, a letter came from Robert Bright in Australia, from which his mother gathered how unjustly she had wronged Margery in her hasty suspicions; and, eager to make amends, the good woman had headed the village letter with her name. Robert spoke of returning almost immediately, so Margery's heart was lighter on that score.

Miss Lawson's words of joy at her dear child's prosperity and happiness brought tears to Margery's eyes, but they were tears of gratitude and affection, not of pain.

She was strangely peaceful and content now; the memory of Stuart's supposed deception and insults, which had rankled so long in her breast, was gone; she remembered only that his love for her had never faltered. Her girlhood was buried in her short love-dream; she was a woman now, brave and determined to fight the battle of life gallantly to the end. She looked to her husband as a guide and a comforter and he tended her with more than a husband's care. A great, true affection had sprung up in her heart for him; he was so tender, so good, so manly! In her gratitude for all his thought and care she vowed always to keep a smile on her face, while the secret of her love should be locked from his sight forever. Sometimes she would sink into a reverie, then wake, to find his eyes fixed on her with such intensity, such an agony of love and pain in them, that it would startle her; but as she looked the expression would fade and the smile would come, the tender, grave smile that she knew so well. When Mrs. Crosbie's second letter came, begging the earl and countess to pay her a visit, it was he who replied; and, as if divining her secret thoughts, he wrote that his wife regretted that she was unable to visit Crosbie Castle at present.

They had left the Manor almost immediately after Stuart's departure. Lord Court suggested a short tour on the continent, and Margery eagerly agreed; so they crossed the Channel, and, before long, as the winter slipped away, it occurred to Margery that she should visit her inheritance, Beecham Park, so, bidding farewell to the dear blue skies and the world of delights that had been opened to her, they returned to England.

Beecham Park was a huge, gloomy mansion, so deserted and solitary-looking that, as they drove up the magnificent avenue of chestnuts, Margery involuntarily shuddered. Sir Erlwin Gerant had neglected the estate, and, splendid though the building was within, it did not bring the pleasure to its owner that Court Manor had.

"Are you disappointed, my darling?" asked the earl, one morning, after watching her carefully.

"No, my dear! I am very glad! The grounds and woods are beautiful, but it is not home," she answered, with a sigh.

However, there was much to be done; for they found that the steward, who had had sole control of the estate, had neglected his duties most disgracefully—so, placing all authority in the hands of her husband, Margery turned her attention to the village near, turning all her untiring work on behalf of her tenants.

It was a weary trial at times, for, although she had courage, her strength would occasionally fail, and her heart would yearn for the love she had lost; but none knew of this struggle but herself—she had learned to control her emotions and smile when the burden was heaviest.

"'Tis strange with how much power and pride she can forgive me!"

The softness is of love allied,
How much of power to force the breast
To be in outward show at rest,
How much of pride that never eye
May look upon its agony.

Of all the burning heart can feel!"

Of Stuart she heard nothing, but she had faith in his courage and manliness, and knew that, once the cloud which overshadowed him had passed, he would fulfill his word and face the world. He was once more her ideal, her hero, and she felt he would not fail in this duty to himself.

Engrossed in her thoughts and daily tasks, she did not notice the change that seemed to be coming over the earl. His tenderness never failed, his courtesy and love were never lacking, and she had grown so used to all his thoughtful care that it seemed but the adjunct of every-day life. But she was suddenly awakened from this existence.

The Squire of Crosbie Castle had been one of the first among her new relatives warmly to welcome Margery. He had loved her father, and for his old affection's sake had opened his heart to the young girl; when therefore he learned that the Earl and Countess of Court had returned to England and were staying at Beecham Park, he wrote immediately, expressing a great wish to visit them. To this Margery and her husband replied with genuine pleasure,

"EVEN IN YOUTH NEVER STRONG"

Now the Rich, Happy Possessor of Good Health Which Was Restored by

Dr. Hamilton's Pills

"Even when I was young I was not robust and healthy like other girls. I suffered from headaches and had sort of blue feelings that deprived me of the joyful spirits and pleasures other girls seemed to get. After I married I found I could not throw worries off like other women, and those dull feelings of despondency and weariness made me very unhappy. There was no cause to feel so, and my doctor said my liver was sluggish and this accounted for my poor color, my tiredness, languor and despair. The pills the doctor gave me were too purgative, made me weaker because they were too active for my constitution. Dozens of my friends recommended Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and they were so mild and healthful. Well, I never used a pill that acted so quietly as Dr. Hamilton's. They were so comfortable to use I was afraid they might not help. But in a week I knew they had been actively engaged in cleaning up my system. They did the work of a tonic and blood medicine combined. I improved to a marvellous degree with Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I now maintain the most perfect kind of health by using them just once or twice a week."

It is Mrs. E. V. Erlanger, the wife of Capt. Erlanger, well known at Gloucester, who relates the above experience. She proved what you and all other men and women can prove—that Dr. Hamilton's Pills are best for restoring health and best for keeping the system in perfect running order. Don't be misled into using anything but Dr. Hamilton's Pills, sold in yellow boxes, 25c. All dealers of The Catarthozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

begging the squire to come as soon as possible.

Margery found a warm love spring up in her breast for Stuart's father, and the earl and the squire soon became good friends. It was the squire who called Margery's attention to Lord Court's quiet manner and worn appearance, as they were talking together one morning. Margery listened with a sense of regret and remorse at her blindness, and, making some excuse, she left the squire in the grounds where they had been sauntering and hurried back to the house. It was a glorious spring day, the sunshine illuminated the old mansion, darning in golden shafts through the long narrow windows. Margery crossed the hall, above which was seen a massive dome and round which ran the gallery leading to the upper apartments and bedrooms. Several servants were hurrying to and fro, and, asking for the earl, she learned that he was in the study, busy with the new wardrobe.

Without hesitation she made her way to the room and opened the door. The earl was alone, leaning his head upon his hand, reading some papers which lay on the table.

"This lease is wrong, Robins," he said, not looking up as the door opened.

Margery moved forward softly, and then knelt at his feet.

"Nugent," she said, with a little catch in her breath as she noted his pale worn face for the first time.

The earl turned with a smile so sweet and tender that it made Margery's lips tremble.

"My darling!" he exclaimed, gently, "You here?"

"Nugent, you are ill—worried! Ah, I have been blind not to see it before! Oh, forgive me, forgive me!"

AS GOOD AS A DOCTOR IN THE HOUSE.

Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in every home where there are little ones. They are as good as a doctor; are absolutely safe and can always be relied upon to drive away any malady arising from derangement of the stomach or bowels. Concerning them, Mrs. O. G. Wheeler, Northlands, Sask., says: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets an invaluable medicine. I live twenty miles from town and doctor, so am glad to have so reliable a medicine at hand. I consider the Tablets a real necessity in the home and shall never be without them. They have kept my baby well and have made him a bonnie baby." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE BOY'S SLING.

A great hulking boy with nothing to do Was trying his sling with a hard stone or two,
And thought it good sport to shoot down and kill
Our sweet feathered songsters upon the green hill.

A dear little bluebird, perched up in a tree,
Was singing the song of the happy and free,
With a pretty mate by him, how happy were they,
In God's blessed sunshine, that beautiful day.

In the midst of his song came a stone from the hand
Of that cowardly boy, skulking there on the sand,
And the bird's note of joy broke in a faint cry,
As he fell on the roadside to struggle and die.

A bright life thus ended and laid out of sight,
A helper destroyed, who well earned his right
To a share of sunshine and his place in life,
His pride in his nestlings and his dear little wife!

His song had been hushed, but was to the heart
So cruel and so mean as to act such a part!
Oh, never, dear children, thus sully your hand
By killing for sport the sweet birds of our land.

WOMEN OF THE FUTURE.

(Gentlewoman.)
The woman of the future is undeniably the woman who thinks, and the feminine type whose sole ambition was to be passive and pleasing has already been relegated to the limbo of "far-off-forgotten things."

RECIPES

OX TAIL SOUP.

Chop two fresh ox tails in small pieces and put them into one gallon of cold water; add salt—not too much—and remove scum that rises with the boiling. When the meat has cooked thoroughly remove it from the liquor and add to this one bunch of celery cut fine, two small onions, four carrots, four cloves and black pepper and salt to taste. Cook till the vegetables are tender; then remove meat from the bones and put it back into the soup. If there is too much grease skim this off before putting in the vegetables.

PLAIN DOUGHNUTS.

One and one-half cups sugar, three eggs, one-half cup butter (soaked), two cups milk, two spoonfuls baking powder, flour enough to roll out.

BREADED MUTTON CUTLETS.

Have eight lamb chops cut from the ribs, scrape the bones and trim the chops French fashion. Broil the chops, leaving them a trifle underdone, and let them become cold. Have ready a sauce made of one tablespoonful of butter, four tablespoonfuls of flour, half a teaspoonful each of salt and pepper and one cup of cream. Into this stir half a cup of cooked ham, chopped fine. When the chops are cold and the sauce is cool, but not too firm, season the chops with pepper and cover both sides with mixture. Let stand on a buttered plate till firm, then "egg and crumb," and fry in deep fat till nicely browned.

TONGUE SALAD.

Cut cold boiled tongue in thin slices and arrange on a platter. Make a dressing of a small onion, six anchovies and six sprigs of parsley all chopped fine. Add half a cup of French dressing and when mixed pour it over the tongue.

CUBAN SAUCE.

Cook two tablespoonfuls of chopped ham in one-fourth of a cup of butter; when ham is well browned add one-fourth of a cup of flour and half a teaspoonful of salt and stir until frothy; then add one cup and a half of stock or water and one cup of tomato ketchup or chili sauce, and stir until boiling; let simmer ten minutes, strain and serve.

WORTH KNOWING.

Even when there is cream in the coffee, spilled on the delicate silk or satin gown, pure glycerine rubbed over the spot and afterwards rinsed off with lukewarm water, then pressed on the wrong side, will eliminate all traces of the offending liquid.

Salt mixed with vinegar is excellent for cleaning copper vessels.

If bureau or pantry drawers stick, rub the edges with damp cloth.

Almonds chopped fine and browned in sugar make delicious ice cream.

To test beef, press it down with the thumb. It rises quickly, the meat is good.

Oil of lavender, sprinkled about in the book shelves, will prevent books from mildewing.

Potato parings, dried in the oven, are good to kindle fires, as they light more easily than wood.

A pair of scissors is infinitely better for trimming off the rind from ham or bacon than a knife.

Grease on top of a hot stove can be quickly rubbed off by putting salt on the scrubbing brush.

Half a lemon placed in the water in which dish towels and kitchen cloths are soaked is said to sweeten them wonderfully. However, after a thorough washing a good hot sun will do wonders.

RELIGION AND SHORT RATIONS.

"I suppose," said Collector Loeb, "that in the past a good many people looked on a strict observance of the customs laws from a selfish and worldly point of view. They are like Aunt Mary Persimmons."

"Aunt Mary called one day on the village lawyer.

"Well, old lady," he said, "what can I do for you?"

"Ah! wants to divorce mah husband," said Aunt Mary.

"Divorce old Uncle Bill," cried the lawyer. "Good gracious! Why?"

"'Cause he's done got religion, dat's why," said Aunt Mary, "an' we ain't had a chicken on de table fo' six weeks!"

HE COULD NOT SLEEP AT NIGHTS

Till he found relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Fred Swanson, of Saskatchewan, Sends a Message of Cheer to Those Who Feel the Weariness and Discouragement That Comes From Broken Rest.

MacIn, Sask.—(Special.)—Those who suffer from sleepless nights and get up in the morning feeling tired and discouraged will find renewed hope in the statement made by Fred Swanson of this place. He could not sleep at nights. He discovered the cause. It was Kidney trouble. He discovered the cure. It is Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"Yes," Mr. Swanson says in an interview regarding his case, "I was troubled with my kidneys for over a year, so bad that I could not sleep at nights. After using one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills I found great relief. Four boxes removed all my pain and now I sleep well and I am as strong in my kidneys as any man."

If the kidneys are wrong the blood becomes clogged with impurities and natural rest is an impossibility. Strong, healthy kidneys mean pure blood, new life all over the body and that delightful rest that is the sweetest thing in life. Dodd's Kidney Pills always make strong, healthy kidneys.

A TALK ON RHEUMATISM

Telling How How to Cure This Painful Malady.

This article is for the man or woman who suffers from rheumatism who wants to be cured, not merely relieved—but actually cured. The most a rheumatic sufferer can hope for in rubbing something on the tender, aching joint, is a little relief. No lotion or liniment ever did or ever can make a cure. The rheumatic poison is rooted in the blood. Therefore rheumatism can only be cured when this poisonous acid is driven out of the blood. That's why rubbing and liniments and outward applications are no good. Any doctor will tell you this is true. If you want something that will go right to the root of the trouble in the blood every time, take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They make new, rich blood which drives out the poisonous acid and cures rheumatism to stay cured. This is a solemn truth which has been proved in thousands of cases, and the following is a striking instance. Mrs. W. H. Elnor, Sarnia, Ont., says:

"I feel it my duty to recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as they completely cured me of rheumatism after I had been almost an invalid for three years. I doctored with two skilled doctors and took electric treatment, but without benefit. On going to a third doctor he recommended mineral baths as the only thing that would help me. After taking this treatment for some time I felt that I was really growing worse instead of better, and I began to think there was no cure for me, and that I was doomed to be a helpless sufferer. For some months I discontinued all treatment and then I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After taking a few boxes I could notice a distinct improvement, and I continued taking the Pills for several months when the cure was complete. That is some two years ago, and I have ever since been perfectly free from the trouble. I would therefore advise anyone afflicted with rheumatism to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as they certainly made a remarkable cure in my case."

These pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A FEW REMARKS.

When a pugilist quits training, his body usually becomes as fat as his head was in his palmy days.

Times really change less than the old people who talk about the excellence of those that are past.

Springing the boom at the logical time also has much to do with determining the logical candidate.

A piano contains a mile of wire, and the young lady who practices on it travels the distance too often.

Incidentally you are doing a friend a favor when you add a little bit to your savings bank deposit.

People never begin to prepare for winter until they are too cold for comfort in their summer clothes.

Family quarrels shouldn't be staged so early in the mornings as to disturb the beauty sleep of the neighbors.

A poor man's notion of a joke is to hear a rich man talk about the burdens and responsibilities of great wealth.

More women look wise when they examine a piece of goods than are able to tell the all wool article when they see it.—Atchison Globe.

Reduced a Hard Swelling.

Mr. Gus E. Gosox, writing from Pembroke, tells how he was injured in a lumber camp. "A heavy log rolled against my leg and I was laid up with stiffness and a hard swelling. When I applied Polson's Nervine I got relief. A few rubbings with this good liniment cured me." In the bush, Nervine is indispensable; it cures neuralgia, colds, rheumatism and internal disorders, too. No person can afford to be without Nervine. Useful for all internal and external pain. Large bottles, 25c, all dealers.

BUSINESS IN A PROPOSAL.

"George," said the beautiful girl, as she knelt close to him, "the last time you called, you proposed."

"I did, sweet one."

"And I accepted you."

"You did, love?"

"I presume, George," she went on, in her most fascinating manner, "that you upon me merely as a thoughtless, foolish girl, but—but—"

"How can you think so, pet?" he interrupted.

"Well, she went on, in a more businesslike way, "I have something of the business instinct of the new woman in me—and—and I shall have to ask you to repeat the proposal again to-night. The last time you called it was Sunday, and contracts made on that day, I learn, are not legally binding."

A NOBLE SON.

(From the Chicago Record-Herald.)
Harold, aged nine, came home one day so bruised and dirty that his mother was thrown into a state of marked perturbation.

"Mercy!" she exclaimed, in horror, "how on earth did you get your clothes and face into such a dirty state?"

"I was trying to keep a little boy from getting licked," was Harold's virtuous, if hesitating, reply.

"Well, that was fine," said his mother, proud. "I am proud of you, sonny. Who was the little boy?"

"Me."

MADE HIS WIFE WORK.

Michael Leslike, a farmer, is to be brought before the united charities to explain his conduct. His wife, an able-bodied, 28-pound woman, complains to the authorities that her husband has been making her drive the horses and pitch the hay into the barn, while he loafed and smoked his pipe in a shady spot, and that when she rebelled he beat her with a pitchfork.

She said that in addition she had to do the housework, cook the meals, milk the cows, feed the stock, hoe the garden, and perform other duties.—Wilkesbarre Dispatch to New York Herald.

ENGLISH JOKE FOR TO-DAY.

Archie—I've been takin' a course of memory training. It's a wonderful system. Doubled my memory power in a month.

Friend—Really? What's the name of it?

Archie—Oh—er—dash it, it's slipped on my memory. But it's near—er—you know. What's his name in the gymnasium street?

The hen that is going to do the heavy laying the coming winter was hatched early last spring. During December and January pullets usually lay about four times as many eggs as an equal number of hens. One of the United States experiment stations made a year's laying test, beginning with pullets and one and two-year old hens, giving each of the three lots equal advantages. The pullets laid about twice as many eggs as the two-year-old hens, while the second lot had a record about halfway between. In rare cases a hen may pay for her keeping after she is two year old.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Who pays the enormous expense of those show-rooms in our towns and cities? Is it not the people who buy pianos there?

Why buy from them when you can get just as good, and in many cases better, from me, delivered Free from the factory to your door? This is one of the reasons I can sell you a piano for less money than you pay at any show-room.

All kinds of instruments taken in exchange. We defy competition for the money in all grades. Get my prices before purchasing, for they are certainly very low for strictly high grade pianos.

Also agent for Raymond, New Will iams, and New Home Sewing Machines.

P. S.—Pianos sold on instalment plan when wished.
