GENETEMER—I am 71 years of age. Have been afflicted with sick headaches most of my life, which developed into Dyspepsia of a mild type about twenty years ago, and has continued to grow worse...

In the fall of '92 I concluded to try a bottle or two of your medicine and such were its effects that I continued it until now I can drink cold water or milk without any inconvenience. Those dizzy pains are all gone and my mouth is sweet as a baby's.

POETRY.

Courage.

If the day's brief pain and passing care Have seemed too much and too hard to bear;

If under its trivial press and instant Thou hast added in temper and lost in heart;

If the discouraged, journeying man, As it sinks to its rest with its travail

Leaves thee all spent with trouble and sorrow—

How shall thou face too hard to-morrow?

If the things that thou dost do, How shall thou deal with an unknown foe?

If conquered by every passing day, How shall the dross of thy soul?

To stand and shiver on the brink Of each recurrent task, and shrink, Will never harden thee to abide

The waves of the turbulent Jordan tide.

Never a tear but brims and fills By the aid of unnumbered slender rills.

Never a strength but has grown and fed With the force of a weakness conquered;

Never a day but is ruled and shaped By the power of a yesterday occupied;

And never a human soul that grew By a single resolve to its stature true.

Winter is now ready for the spring By months of struggle and suffering;

And the victory won from the mortal strife Strengthens the fibres and pulse of life.

How if the earth, in its chill despair, Felt that the fight were too hard to bear?

Where were the bloom and the vintage then?

Where were the harvest for hungry men?

So, if the now seems cruel and hard, Endure it with thoughts of the clearly- And be sure that each task that is clearly set

Is to brace thee for other tasks, harder yet.

Train to the great manœuvres of thy will In the daily grapple with daily ill.

Thou, strong to wrestle and firm to abide, Thou shalt smile at the turbulent Jordan tide.

SELECT STORY.

GOOD BYE!

BY JOHN STRANGE WINTER.

The supreme misery of the moment almost overwhelming her—she uttered and would have fallen if she had not caught at a heavy chair by which to steady herself.

"Won't you sit down?" Adair asked very politely.

She shook her head. "I don't want to sit down," she said in an almost inaudible voice. "I—dare say you are surprised to see me."

He made a gesture deprecating and vague, as if he might have done to a stranger whom he wished to see at ease. Mrs. Adair went on, more bravely this time.

"First, I have brought you the keys of the safe and of my desk," she said; "I have taken away nothing that I gave me—only the few trinkets I had before—before I ever saw you. You will perhaps go to Grosvenor Street and see the servants—and tell them what to do."

"But you have not left the house," he said. "What are you going to do? Where are you going to live?"

"She looked up at him steadily enough. "That is no longer any concern of yours," she said coldly. "It is sufficient for you that I am not going to live on the money of a man who believes me to be what you have made me in the eyes of all the world to-day, I came—and perhaps I was a fool to do it—because I wanted to tell you, though it is too late now to undo what you have done."

"What I have done," he echoed bitterly.

She drew a step nearer to him. "Dik," she said, in that same old tender voice, she voice which still thrilled his thoughts and through, "it is too late now to undo any thing, and you may never learn the truth in this world, but I swear to you solemnly that you have wronged me utterly and absolutely. Every word I spoke in the Orestes day was true, wholly true."

"And the letter," he broke in. "How do you explain that?"

"I cannot explain it," she answered; "it is all a mystery to me; but I swear to you, Dik, on the word of a woman, who is heart-broken beyond the need or desire of lying, that Captain St. John never said one word of love to me in all his life; he is no more to me than—" she looked round for some simile by which to express her indifference—"this—this table! Think! Do you suppose that I should have written to you day after day protesting my innocence—praying, begging, imploring you not to do this thing, if I had been the guilty woman you thought me—that—bitterly—you think me still? Just think a moment if you have not thought of it before. If I had loved him better than you, why should I have cared if the whole world knew the truth? I have no children to hold back half my heart while the other half was pining to be away—what then was there to keep me? Not money—he is far richer than you are! My good sense?—do you think I should have valued that so highly if my heart was black enough to betray you? Oh! Dik, think!"

"But Adair was in no wise touched by her passion. "It sounds all likely and plausible enough," he said, asserting a little—"but you have been found guilty by a jury of impartial men and—"

"Are men ever impartial to women?" she cried. "No, a thousand times no; they were all against me, judges, jury, lawyers, all excepting Sir John Wigram—"

"Who was paid for thinking otherwise," Adair put in bitterly.

"Oh! Dik!" she burst out—"Oh! Dik! for shame, for shame, it is not like you! Three months ago—"

"Three months ago"—he broke in pitilessly—"I believed in you. I am not the same man I was three months ago."

She was silent for a moment struggling to keep back her tears. "I see now that after believing in me for five years, you should be turned utterly against me by the evidence of such a woman as Rosalie!"

"Not at all on Rosalie's evidence," he broke in sharply, "but on the evidence of a letter addressed to you which I opened with my own hand."

"And at whose instigation?" she asked.

He put out his hand with a gesture of admission to the implied point. "That is all beside the question," he said. "St. John wrote the letter, and—"

"He denied it—"

"Oh! yes."

"Dik, he gave you his solemn word, his word of honor," she exclaimed.

"Oh! yes—but the word of the most honorable man does not count for much when it concerns divorce questions," he said more bitterly than ever.

She looked at him with all her heart in her eyes and he went on speaking.

"You said just now that I was not like myself—well, I am not myself. I am a new Richard Adair, a miserable devil without a hope in the world or faith in any man or woman. My new experience has done it, and I do not relish the new state of things at all. It is your work, Hope, all your work, and you need not be surprised that I am not as smooth and complacent as I should be if I were in the blind paradise of my ignorance. Few men, I fancy, would be just the same if they had had my change of circumstances—I am not going to pretend that I am so."

She looked at him steadfastly, a whole world of love, yearning, hungering love in her face. "I will go," she said. "I have said all that I came to say. Some day, Dik, you may find out the truth, and this will all come back to you. God help you then, Dik, when you realize what you have done."

She turned away half blinded by her tears—her only desire at that moment was to get out of the room, out of the house, without breaking down and showing the full extent of her weakness; he opened the door for her ceremoniously enough. "Have you a carriage? Allow me to take you down to it."

"No," she said coldly—"oblige me by remaining here."

So he held open the door until he had passed out of sight—and then he went back to his chair before the fire, where he sat till the glowing embers sank down and down until not a single spark of life remained therein.

And oh! what hard and bitter thoughts the man had! A vision came to him of how he saw her first, walking along a Rover-bordered lane in her father's Devonshire parish—he recalled the simple white gown she wore and the innocent shining eyes and brilliant coloring shaded by a larger hat, and he sickened as he reminded himself that his eyes were innocent no longer, and that the brilliant tints had faded in the fierce glare of discovery.

It was well that the old rector was dead, more than well; but what a wailing his had been, with never a tiny cloud to mar its sunrise—he groaned aloud as he thought of that glad golden summer-time.

"If only she had been honest," he cried—"if only she had been true enough to be honest with me—to say 'Dik, I was tempted, forgive me, take me a way and help me to be better.' But no, she was false all through, false to the very end—beyond the very end."

But Adair was wrong there—he was not the man to forgive such a wrong, though at that moment he thought truly enough that he could and would have done so, nor dreamed that the end would have been just the same as it had been that same cruel winter day, when he had let his wife—his wife who had been—go out into the darkness alone, without so much as a single word of parting.

CHAPTER III.

Well, it was all over! As Adair sat by the burnt-out fire in his lonely room that dismal night, he said those forlorn words over and over again—it was all over, Hope and he were no longer one but two now, and the happy time of his life had come to a miserable and shameful end.

For thirty years he had lived in the sunshine of what had seemed to be unending good fortune. He had had neither cloud nor care, excepting two little children who had been born of him but had been no frail in their hold upon life, that they had quietly faded out of the world but a few hours after they had struggled into it. And now—now he was quite alone; he might go on living for twenty, thirty, nay even for forty years before he reached his allotted span—and his was not a short-lived span. What wonder that the man groaned as he sat before the empty grate!

At last the quiet young man who had conducted Mrs. Adair upstairs knocked gently at the door, and receiving no answer, knocked again and finally opened it. He did not usually knock at all, but like all the rest of the world he knew what had happened to Adair earlier in the day, and he felt a certain delicacy in entering the room without some warning, for he pitied the crushed and lonely figure in the big chair with all his heart.

CONTINUED NEXT WEEK.

FIRST DAY.

The council met on Tuesday in the Court House at 10 a.m. Present: Warden Ross, and all the councillors except Councillor Harris, of Ward 12, who was excused on account of serious illness.

The minutes of the special meeting of Council, held July 5th and July 31st and of the regular April session, were read and approved.

In order to remove any possible doubts as to the tenors of Clerkship under the recent statute a ballot was taken resulting in the reappointment of L. De V. Chipman as Clerk, the Treasurerhip being vested Mr. B. H. Dodge was unanimously appointed to the office. The other officers were then appointed.

After some discussion as to the desirability of abolishing or reducing the bounty on wild animals, the Regulations hitherto in force were by resolution continued without change.

The Warden then called up unfinished business as follows:

1. The notice of motion for consideration of resolution amalgamating the three poor districts. Motion for consideration carried on division as follows: For, Councillors Balcom, Gault, Reid, Anderson, Bishop, Patterson, Ross, Lyons, Against, Cook, Pince, Curry, Morse, Kinsman, Steele and Rand. The report of the Auditors on the accounts of the supervisors of public lands was read and passed on motion.

Report of the surveyors of Highways was read and a resolution was passed relative to the failure of surveyors in many cases to secure performance of statute labor.

After discussion, resolved, that in the event of any surveyor being unable to recover costs in suits against delinquents in respect of road service the council shall pay such costs when property touched.

Resolved, that a copy of the foregoing resolution be written by the Clerk to the Surveyors and that they be notified that they will be prosecuted for dereliction of duty if incomplete returns are made.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JAN. 19, 1894.

The Young Men.

An intensely practical subject was brought forward in one of the union services last week which demands thought and work as well as prayer from the members of the different churches. It is felt by many that the churches are scarcely doing their whole duty to the young men of this town. Many young men walk our streets on summer evenings and perhaps find worse employment during the winter nights owing to the absence of any more congenial company than they find there or of any more welcome resort. They may be invited to church services; but the churches are not homes to them. They may be asked to join a temperance society, but it only affords entertainment for one evening of the week. It seems absolutely necessary if these young men are to be saved to usefulness in society and the church, that some effort be made to provide for them a healthful environment, a welcome resort to which they may go every night of the week, where they can engage in wholesome games, read elevating literature and breathe a religious atmosphere not made offensive by cant and pietism. One hour a week in prayer meeting can do very little for young men who are compelled to associate with the irreligious and to meet temptation at every turn throughout the rest of the week. The entertainment provided by our temperance societies only means temporary help. Papers on scientific temperance read in the Union never can save those removed from the influences of home. United effort is necessary to provide a hall or number of rooms; to furnish them with good reading matter and attractive games; to secure a number of popular addresses on literary and religious subjects; and to have an interesting Bible class for Sunday afternoons. In short, a young men's association with all the appliances which a town such as ours can easily afford is the crying need. When we do our part, then prayers for Divine blessing will be in order. Until we do our whole duty, prayer is a mockery. Man's extremity is God's opportunity.

College Y. M. C. A.

On Sunday evening last, after the close of the services in the various churches, Rev. W. F. Parker, of the Memorial Baptist church, Truro, addressed a large audience composed of students and townspeople in College Hall, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. The text was I Cor. 2:14. The following is an outline of the excellent sermon delivered.

The natural man has not the capacity to receive spiritual truth. The scientist, however intellectual, who is not spiritual, whose mind has not been enlightened by the Holy Spirit, cannot in his researches find God and spiritual truths. His denial of these is worth nothing—disproves nothing, for he cannot know them; they are only foolishness to him, because they are spiritual, and not intellectually much less sensuously discerned. Him that hath ears to hear, let him hear. Only he who has eyes—spiritual vision—can see divine things; to the spiritually blind the things of eternity are simply invisible. The sneer of materialists at Newton read "Paradise Lost" and asked contemptuously "What does it prove?" Darwin confessed that he had lost all relish for poetry; his spiritual nature religious experience and christian claims, need cause us no alarm. Blind Tom laughed at the description of the sunset; he could not understand it. Sir Isaac had atrophied. Because Blind Tom could not appreciate a glowing description of the sunset, men do not pluck out their eyes. Because Macaulay could not meet Euclid, mathematics was not banished from the universities. Because Newton found Milton a stupid writer, poetry is not thereby proved untrue. To the poetic nature, poetry is true; to the seer only does color exist; to the deaf man music is not. To the natural man, spiritual things have no meaning; he has no receptivity for them; he is spiritually blind, deaf, dead. Only he who has the spiritual ear can hear the sounds from the unseen world; only he who has spiritual sight can see the invisible things of God; only he who is born from above can partake of eternal life. To the natural man the preacher speaks in an unknown tongue. The unsympathetic listener hears foreign and meaningless sounds. What a sad thought! Two men may be working together in the field—the one a natural, the other a spiritual person; two women may be grinding in the mill, the one a natural the other a spiritual person. Sounds of eternity are all about them, but only the ear of one can feel them; visions of the unseen world are there, but to the eyes of one they are not visible. Hence the absurdity of the non-spiritual man pretending to sit in judgment on matters of religious faith or experience. Only he who has a spiritual nature can appreciate spiritual truths. Sensuous organs are necessary to perceive sensuous things. Intellectual organs are necessary to the comprehension of intellectual truths; spiritual organs are required for the understanding of spiritual realities; and the organ of spiritual knowledge is obedience to the Will of God. He that is willing to do His will shall know the doctrine which the Father has revealed, and the things of the Spirit are spiritually discerned. Get the Spirit; be regenerate; come to Jesus; and then you shall be able to appreciate the beauty, the truth of Christianity.

Dodge, late Treasurer of this Municipality, and wish to record their appreciation of his official services, always performed with courtesy, exactness and unusual satisfaction, and that this resolution be entered upon the records of this Municipality.

Resolution re surplus C. V. R. Resolved, That the surplus of $163,407 arising from the assessment of the Railway tax be appropriated in reducing the County rate assessed on the different Wards of the County, in the same proportions as the Railway tax was levied in the first instance.

Motion: That an amount equal to the cost of collection in each Ward be added to the amount assessed upon that Ward, but notice of reconsideration given.

Moved, seconded and passed. Whereas, It has become a lamentable fact that there are a great number of useless dogs in the County of Kings and whereas they have become so destructive to sheep in the County that this branch of farming is fast becoming a thing of the past:—

Be it therefore resolved that a tax of one dollar and fifty cents be levied on the owner of any dog in the County of Kings and that such tax be collected in the following manner. That a collector be appointed for each Ward in the County to collect the tax on all dogs within the said Ward, and that he receive a commission of fifty per cent. on all sums collected and that said collector shall make a return of all monies collected and deposit the balance remaining after paying all charges and commission with the County Treasurer to be used for payment for sheep destroyed by dogs at the rate of $2.00 per head on proof of such destruction, and further resolved a Committee be appointed to secure legislation that will enable the Council to pass a resolution ordering the destruction of all dogs whose tax has not been paid.

Resolved, That the salary of the Warden be at his instance reduced to $40.

In the matter of payment of Assessors. Resolved, That Assessors be allowed 10 cents a mile, for delivering Schedules, not to exceed the maximum number of miles, not to exceed the total length of roads in the Ward, and that a further allowance of $1.50 per day be made for each day actually used in making up the assessment book, a statement of the same being attested to by assessors; and further resolved, that the Councillors submit a statement of the number of miles of road in their respective wards.

J. Rufus Starr appointed pound keeper in Town Plot.

Resolved, That the sum of $10 be allowed the Overseers of the Poor of Horton for clothing Miss Bush, an insane pauper.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Electric Lights.

To the Editor of the ACADIAN. Nearly a year ago Wolfville was agitated with the question of incorporation, which was decided in the affirmative by a small number of votes. An analysis of the votes, so far as known, gave to the majority considerable more of the assessable property than is held by the majority. Following this decision a Mayor and six Councillors were elected. As if to allay the apprehension of an increase in taxation under the new system of government, more than one of the candidates for these positions intimated that in their opinion, it would not be wise to make any sudden or radical change in the conduct of town matters; but move along cautiously and gradually accustom the people to the changed condition of things. This policy tended, in a measure, to conciliate those who conscientiously and upon what seemed to them sound principle, opposed incorporation, and commended itself to the judgment of most all of sound business habits and training. Now that we have had some experience under one town council and under town rules, I wish to call the attention of all interested to the matter of lighting our streets as indicating the trend of our town business. I have no inclination to cast a single reflection upon the council. (I regard them as personal friends); but I do not agree with their policy and in all frankness refer to the matter under consideration as one I, or any other citizen, has a right to discuss. In the first place then while the council had the power to do what they have done, and undoubtedly proceed legally to arrange for lighting the town, I am not the only one who thinks, in the expenditure of so large a sum annually, as it will take to light the town, it would have been courteous, to say the least, to have consulted the rate payers in the matter. The present council was not expected to make this expenditure and as another election is so soon to follow no interest would have suffered in waiting till that time, and it would have been a good subject upon which to consult the wises of the people. If the people want the electric light for the streets and are willing to pay for it, it would be well to let them say so, and say how much of it they want and what parts of the town shall be lighted and what parts shall be left in darkness. This kind of treatment will satisfy most people better than to have the light thrust upon them and to be told they have it to pay for, whether they want it or can afford it or not. The times are extremely straitening and the outlook is not at all encouraging and the present seems the most inopportune time to incur any debt that can with any degree of reason be avoided. There are many in Wolfville to-day who feel they cannot afford such a luxury as the electric light simply because they do not see how they can pay for it. If one is compelled to admit the need of lighting the streets now, it is not quite so easy to see that the way in which it has been done is either equitable or just. As reported, Councillors Geo. Borden, Starr, Sawyer and C. H. Borden favored it and voted it upon us. The Council also decided that 45 lights were needed. The committee have put most of these in the business part of the town. To look at them one is puzzled to know whether the speaker, once or the real need is what caused the committee to put them so close to each other. If it was the aim to ornament a small portion of the town, it has been done; and the committee should have credit for ornamentation. But to say that fair play or justice had been done in the matter would be an insult to the intelligence of the town. Where lights were least needed they are put thickest, and where some were needed most there are none. I have heard no one charge Councillor Starr, who has three lights at his place, with neglecting his own interests, in fact none of the Councillors have had this fault attributed to them. Under the present status of this new town, and the depressing times, twenty lights might have been placed so as to have been of some benefit to a good many people and more could be added as the town increases, but where they are clustered together to benefit individuals or classes, in a small part of the town and the rest of the town left in darkness, except as to the amount of taxes, they are expected to pay, it is any wonder that the cry of fair play should be heard. To light the town throughout as begun, will cost from $2000 to $10000 annually, and we cannot afford it. But to leave it as it is, in justice, those who have the lights and are benefitted by them, should pay for a large part of them. I fear mistakes are made in regarding this as a great town, because we have made a fair advance in building for a few years, but we have not the elements of rapid growth, however much we may desire them. To introduce all the improvements of modern rapid growing cities, is simply to go in advance of the growth of the town and prevent us from ever attaining the size and prosperity we might expect by living within our means. I have doubtless given these views of one important item of town business and shall be willing to discuss this or other town matters with any one who will write over his own signature as I have done. COLIN W. BOSCOB.

To the Editor of the ACADIAN.

MR. EDITOR.—I notice in the last ACADIAN a communication from "Citizen" asking for information in regard to town matters. I would like to supplement his questions by the following: Why was there no auditors appointed until Jan. 18th; thirteen days too late? Could there not be found two rate-payers in the town competent to audit the books of the town? Is there any legal case in the town for which legal expenses to amount of $71.90 should be taxed? What services did E. Sidney Crawley and A. deW. Barrs perform to earn $17.56? Why was Water street not included in the recommendation of the street lighting committee as one of the streets to be lighted as well as Keen street and College Avenue extension? And why has there not been appointed a Reading Officer and a Poll Clerk before this? Answers to all or any of the above questions will be thankfully received by QUIN.

On our fourth page will be found the address of Warden Roscoe, delivered at the opening of the County Council last week. It contains a number of good suggestions.

The worst snow storm experienced for a number of years occurred on Friday and Saturday of last week. Traffic on the railway was interrupted and the roads in all directions were blockaded with snow.

A pleasant time is promised at the rink this evening. The Wolfville band will be in attendance and furnish a good programme. The ice is in excellent condition, the roads good and a crowd may be expected.

The Convention of Bee Keepers held yesterday afternoon in the town was fairly well attended and the meeting was one of profit and much enjoyed by all. An extended report of the proceedings will appear next week.

Mrs. Howard Bars and child, have arrived here from Rochester, N. Y., and are residing at the home of Mr. J. W. Bars. Mrs. Bars' friends will be glad to know that her health has greatly improved since her return home from India.

There was a good attendance at the Congregational Concert in College Hall on Monday evening and the lengthy programme given was much enjoyed. In many respects the Congregates are the best musical organization that has ever visited Wolfville.

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be dispensed at St. Andrew's (Presbyterian) church on Sunday afternoon next. The preparatory service was held on Wednesday evening, when an appropriate sermon was preached by Mr. W. R. Foote, of the College.

The first lecture of the B. Y. P. U. course was delivered in the Baptist church on Tuesday evening on the subject of "The Preparation of the World for the Gospel of Christ." The lecture was very interesting and much enjoyed. A lengthy report is to hand too late for this issue.

To Let.—Dwelling House situated on Main street. Apply to O. H. Borden, P. O. Box 223.

On Monday evening "Lily of the Valley" Division, of Fort Williams, paid a fraternal visit to Wolfville Division. A goodly number from both societies were present. The entertainment of the evening was furnished very largely by the visitors, and was much enjoyed. A pleasant and profitable evening was spent.

To fortify the system against La Grippe there is nothing better than a good Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil combined with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. We have such an emulsion in bottles holding from 25 to 50 per cent. more than other emulsions and the same price, 50c. Try a bottle next time.

All men covet perfect health but very few have it, because of the wide-spread prevalence of dyspepsia. K. D. C. is the cure for dyspepsia. Try it!

We notice from the Messager and Vie that Mrs. H. H. Saunders has been cordially welcomed to her new home at Elgin, N. B. The Baptist congregation of that place, over which Mr. Saunders is settled, gave a very agreeable surprise to their young pastor and bride on their arrival from their wedding tour, in the form of a donation party. Many valuable presents were given, accompanied by kindly wishes for their happiness and prolonged stay at Elgin. The Baptist Church of Elgin are to be congratulated on the advent of two such earnest workers among them.

Fatal Accident on the W. & A. Railway.

The most fatal accident that has ever occurred in the history of the W. & A. Railway was that of Sunday last, in which two young men were killed, one instantly, and the other only surviving a few moments after the fatal catastrophe.

On the afternoon of that day, a snow-plough which had been sent to Annapolis on Saturday, was ordered to return to Kentville, and when near the Gibbon's bridge at Wilmet, from some known cause, the plough jumped the track, and ran some 500 yards before it reached the bridge, the rest of the train remaining on the rails. When the bridge was reached the plough capsize to the northward, and in doing so produced such a tremendous weight as to cause the engine and tender to crash through the structure, a distance of some 20 feet, instantly killing the driver, O. B. Paddy, and so injuring the fireman, Frank Smith, that he never regained consciousness, expiring some half hour afterwards.

The bridge where the accident occurred is probably 45 feet wide and 20 or 25 feet deep. It is the general conclusion that the collapse of the bridge was caused through the heavy weight of the snow-plough which crested over one side of the gulch and displaced the timbers. The locomotive was literally demolished, in every part of the machine that could be broken has been destroyed.

Roadmaster Edward Brooks, of Paradise, was in charge of the train, and had as an assistant, Mr. William Muir, of Middleton. Fortunately, the car in which these gentlemen were standing, did not leave the rails, though they were badly shaken, up and bruised by the terrible crash.

The Fruit Growers' Social.

The annual meeting of the Fruit Growers' Association was brought to a close by a social on Wednesday evening in College Hall. There was a large and representative attendance from Wolfville and the surrounding country, and a thoroughly enjoyable evening was spent. The Wolfville band furnished a choice programme of music which was well received and highly appreciated. Under the instruction of their new leader the band is making rapid advance. Mr. Adams also rendered a selection of his own composition on the piano, which showed him to be a skillful performer on that instrument as well as a thorough musician. A good display of apples was exhibited, tastefully arranged on tables. President Bigelow announced that the fruit on one of the tables was all from one orchard, which we learned to be that of Mr. A. C. Johnson, of Wolfville. The collection was a very pretty one and was greatly admired. During the evening the fruit was passed around and was much enjoyed. The social was voted by all to be a most pleasant affair and reflected the greatest credit on those who had the arrangements in charge.

Warden Koscoe's Address.

AT THE OPENING OF COUNCIL LAST WEEK.

Gentlemen, Councilors of the Municipality of Kings County.

It is with much pleasure that I meet with you again to assist you in the transaction of your respective duties.

As I am not able to offer any resolutions in reference to County affairs or in general way to speak to motions before the Council I embrace this opportunity of the opening of the Council to submit certain general propositions for your consideration and to afford what information I possess on some matters which will necessarily come before you for consideration.

The first of these in the amalgamation of the Poor Districts of the County and the acquisition or erection of suitable buildings for the care of the Poor, and the maintenance of the County Asylum for the Poor there are several elements requisite to a proper solution of the problem necessary to be considered.

Together this no doubt is a difficult question to deal with. Of this I am certain however that we will approach the matter with a determination to set once and it seems to me for all in the highest interest of the county no less than in the interest of the unfortunate class with which the genius of our institutions makes us chargeable.

I wish again to draw your attention to the question of payment of our assessors although we have largely reduced the costs of assessing the county it is still too high considering the method by which it is done and not only so but there is no scheme by which the persons who perform that service shall be paid according to the work done.

Another matter in this connection forces itself upon us. We are one by one losing from our Municipal Council the larger centres of population in our county. The system of allowing any given area with a specific population to become incorporated has been taken advantage of first by Kentville and later by Wolfville and I see no reason why we shall not expect Canning and Berwick to follow.

I wish to make one more reference to payment of our officials—the time the salaries of our officials. I think the time has arrived for a reduction in the amount paid them. I will begin at myself and assent to a reduction of one-fifth from the amount paid me, making the sum of forty dollars instead of fifty dollars and I think a like reduction should be made in the salary of the Clerk and Treasurer.

W. H. Hogaboam, Ogode Station, writes:—"It is with pleasure that I will state the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. My wife was run down and weak, and has been so for six years.
