CHAPTER XIII
AN ACCEPTED OFFER.

"Really," he said, "there is nothing I can think of asking you to do excepting to pass the wine, and that does not entail much sacrifice."

"I was not jesting, sir," said Lord Neville, gravely. "My offer was made in all sincerity."

"Really? Dear me, I wish I could think of something. Ah!" He stopped and looked at Lord Neville's attentive face keenly, sarcastically. "What do you say if I ask you to go over to Ireland for me?"

Lord Neville's face grew grave, and the marquis leant back and laughed with grim satisfaction.

"You see! Gratitude's a very fine thing—to talk about!"

Lord Neville flushed.

"You misunderstand my silence," he said, quietly. "If you mean by going to Ireland for you I'm to take sides with the landlords"—he stopped—"I could not join in the oppression of those poor people, my lord, even to prove my own sincerity."

The marquis tried with his fruit-knife.

"Charmingly put, my dear Cecil; quite fit for a political platform. But you misunderstand me. I know nothing of the question, and care less; I hate and detest politics; they bore me—they always did. All I want is this: I am told that my agent is a rogue, who has made himself rich by grinding down the tenants. I am also told that he is the most merciful and upright of men. I'm rather curious to know—well, scarcely curious, perhaps—which account is true. Will you go and find out. I don't think you can call that oppressing the people."

Lord Neville looked up with quiet eagerness.

"Certainly I will go, sir," he said. The marquis inclined his head.

"Mind, I don't care a brass farthing whether you go or refuse; I don't care about anything; and it is very likely that after you are gone to-morrow morning I shall have ceased to remember what you have gone about."

"To-morrow morning?" said Lord Neville, almost inaudibly. To-morrow morning! And his appointment with Doris, his interview with her guardian!

"Yes," said the marquis, carelessly, but shooting a glance, half-scornful, half-amused, at the grave face. "If you go at all, it must be at once. Someone should have started to-night. The man will collect the rents in a day or two. He should be stopped—or the other thing."

"Yes," said Lord Neville, absently. Go without seeing Doris! Without gaining her guardian's consent! His heart throbbed with a dull ache.

"Yes, of course you see that. The early train would enable you to catch the Irish mail at Sandstone Junction—Ah, I see," and he laughed mockingly. Lord Neville looked up inquiringly.

"You want to see Miss Barlow—"

"Marlowe," said Lord Neville.

"Pardon. Marlow. To tell her that the wicked uncle has proved less black than he is painted?"

Lord Neville smiled.

"Is that unnatural?"

"By no means; but permit me to suggest that you can write to her. I merely suggest it."

Lord Neville rose with a quite air of determination.

"What time does the early train start, sir?" he said.

The marquis shrugged his shoulders.

"Parkins will tell you," he said, carelessly. "You mean to go, then?"

"Yes," said Lord Cecil.

The marquis laughed.

"Will you kindly give me that despatch-box?" he said.

Lord Cecil brought it to him, and the marquis took out some papers.

"Here are the papers," he said, languidly. "I haven't read them all. You can bore yourself over them in the train. And will you favour me by accepting this towards the expenses," and he laid a roll of uncounted notes on the table.

Cecil took them up and examined them.

"There is more than enough here," he said, quietly.

"There is never more than enough money," said the marquis. "If you think there is too much, you can distribute the surplus amongst the poor people with whom you sympathise."

"Yes, I can do that—and will?"

"As you like. I will say 'good-night,' by the way, I should say 'good-bye,' for you may be shot," he added, as calmly as if he were saying "It may rain."

"I am not coward enough to be afraid of that, or fool enough to think it likely," said Lord Cecil as carelessly. "Good-night, sir," and he held the door open for him.

As he did so the marquis raised his eyelids and shot a glance at the handsome face; then, with a bow and a cold smile passed out.

Lord Cecil went up to his own room, and, lighting a cigar paced up and down, thinking deeply.

It was marvellous that the marquis should have acted as he had done. Double his allowance! He would be able to marry at once instead of waiting. Marry Doris at once! The blood beat in a tumult at his heart; then a dull weight seemed to fall upon him as he remembered his debts. But he thrust the incubus from him; something might be done respecting them, some arrangement made. At any rate, he would have an income large enough to marry on, and Doris— He puffed at his cigar feverishly, and called up a vision of the lovely face, and tried to imagine the expression the deep, dark, melting orbs would wear when he told her. Then, as he reflected that he should not see her on the morrow, he sighed.

"It almost seems as if my darling had some presentiment that we should not meet," he said to himself. "What will she say when she finds that I am not there, and goes to the stone for the letter?"

Then he sat down to the table to write it. It was not easy for he wanted to say enough to cover ten pages; but at last he wrote a few lines only:

"My Darling—While you are reading this I shall be on my way to Ireland—will my heart in Barton meadows. I can't tell you in a letter all that has happened, only this, that, as he himself put it, the wicked marquis is not so bad as he is painted. Doris, when I come back it will be to ask you to be my wife—not in a year or two, but soon—soon! I'm a bad hand at writing letters, and I could not, if I tried, tell you how I love you or how I wish I were near you, to see and hear you, my beautiful angel!"

"Ever yours,
CECIL.

P.S.—I owe my uncle something, for he has behaved with unusual kindness, and this journey to Ireland is the only way in which he will let me pay him. I will tell you all about it when I come back."

He sighed over the unsatisfactory epistle and closed it; then reopened the letter and caught up his pen to tell her of the loss of the ring and ask her to look for it; but he hesitated and put the letter back in the envelope with the sentence unwritten. Then he put on his coat and walked to the meadows. The night was dark, and he had to light a match to enable him to find the stone beneath the trees; but he found it and concealed his letter, and then, after standing for a few moments and looking round him dreamily, calling up the vision of Doris, he turned and made his way back to the Towers.

The marquis had gone to his room, as was customary with him; his valet exchanged his master's dress-coat for a velvet dressing-gown, and the old man lay back in the chair looking at the fire with half-closed eyes.

The room was magnificently furnished, but rather a subdued tone, which was rendered almost sombre by the heavy curtains that screened the window and a greater portion of the walls.

Against the deep purple of the hangings the clear, sharp-cut face, with its distinct pallor, looked almost like that of a dead man's, and only the steel-like glitter of the eyes spoke of the vitality which lingered in the body, and burnt in the spirit of the most honourable, the Marquis of Stoyle.

Presently there came a soft tap at the door, and in response to the marquis's "come in," Spenser Churchill entered.

If anything, his smooth, innocent face looked more benevolent and charitable than usual, and the smile he bent upon the hard, cold face upturned to him was like that of a man whose sole delight is in doing good to his fellow-men.

"Well?" he said—or rather purred.

The marquis waved his hand to a chair, and Spenser Churchill dropped softly into it, and leant back, his eyes on the ceiling, his fat hands clasped on his knee.

"You were right, you spoke nothing but the truth. The fool is in earnest."

"Dear Cecil!" purred Spenser Churchill.

"He is so much in love that he bore all the insults that I could heap upon him— No, I wrong him. He struck home once," and he smiled a strange smile.

"And he means to marry her?"

"Yes," said the marquis, with a cruel sneer; "he is even fool enough for that."

"Dear Cecil!" murmured Spenser Churchill again. "How delightful! how refreshing it is, in this practical, stupid life, to find—"

"And he will marry her unless this scheme of yours answers," said the marquis, breaking in upon the smooth voice.

"And you doubted his income?"

"I did," said the marquis.

"And he will go to Ireland? To-morrow?"

"He will, to-morrow," said the marquis, watching the sleek, false face.

"Now, that's very good of him," murmured Spenser Churchill. "Very good; most charming and nice. To go to Ireland on the very day he has arranged a meeting with that beautiful girl. Now—"

"Is she so beautiful?" asked the marquis, who seemed to take the unctuous words as meaningless and not worth listening to. "I suppose she must be. He has seen many pretty women, many clever ones. What has caught him? What is she like?"

Spenser Churchill shot a sidelong glance at him.

"The usual thing, my dear marquis," he said, softly. "Just the usual thing. They make those face-powers wonderfully well now—wonderfully!"

The marquis smiled grimly.

"The fool, to be caught by a painted vixen old enough—I suppose she is old, eh?"

Spenser Churchill shrugged his shoulders.

"Ah, yes, of course. A young girl wouldn't have had tact to catch him so easily. And he had written to her, I suppose?"

"Yes," said Spenser Churchill; "and gone to post his letter under the stone. The romance is simply charming! Charming!"

New Relief For Constipation, "LES FRUITS"

Physicians agree that with the modern habits of living, constipation is likely to be always with us. They also agree that the constant use of any drug for the relief of constipation is exceedingly unwise—unwise for two reasons. First, a drug constantly used loses its effect and requires a constantly increased dose. Second, because the constant use of any drug is bad anyway.

So the cry is constantly going up from the constipated, "What can we do?" It will be interesting to a great many to know that an answer has been found in the re-discovery of a method which was used with great success by our Forefathers, and in Arabia far back in the twelfth century. The food is called "Les Fruits" because it is composed entirely of figs, dates, prunes, raisins and the leaves of each with the substitution of the Alexandra leaf for the raisin leaf. The taste is pleasant, if not to say delicious, and the effect is exceedingly satisfactory. Try it and be convinced.

HEINZE STARTING AND LIGHTING SYSTEMS FOR FORDS.

THE ONLY RELIABLE AND BUILT-IN STARTER MADE.

I have been using one on my own car for the past twelve months, both summer and winter, and can honestly say it has never failed me once. You have splendid bright lights for driving, dimmers for passing other cars, fitted with lock so you can leave car safely and no person can monkey with lights or starter. Having thoroughly tested the above and found it absolutely satisfactory, I can now offer it to the public with a guarantee of satisfaction.

Obituary.

BERNARD PARSONS. Mr. Bernard Parsons, one of the most highly respected citizens of St. John's, passed away at that place on Tuesday afternoon last after a brief illness. Deceased who was a blacksmith by trade, is survived by four sons—Victor, Ephraim and Arthur in Harbor Grace—and George in British Columbia—and one daughter, Mrs. Webber, in the U.S. Mr. Parsons took a very active interest in the doings of the Methodist Church in Harbor Grace during the last half century and for forty years was Supt. of the Sunday Schools there. He was a man of rare ability, a splendid conversationalist with a perfect knowledge of local affairs, and truly honest in all his dealings. In his passing the Methodist Church of Harbor Grace loses one of its most prominent members, and the dominion one of its best citizens. Just two short months ago, Mrs. Parsons passed away, the shock of her death, no doubt precipitating the demise of her husband. To all the relatives and friends, the Telegram proffers sympathy.

Church of England Educational Campaign.

(IV.)

Whoever inspired this Educational Campaign is to receive public thanks. It would be difficult to locate the party. The Education Committee of the Diocesan Synod has had some share in it, I should judge, for during the past ten years it has again and again forced to the attention of succeeding Governments the need for greater attention to our educational work and has proposed many important additions to our educational system. The Methodist people have certainly shown us how to organise the Campaign. Every encouragement has come from His Grace the Archbishop of St. John's in any move in the direction of improving the means of education, and His Grace has made same very important public announcements on the subject. I have little doubt that the war has stirred us all to recognize more fully than before the vast importance of education to every phase of life—private and public, individual and social. Be all this as it may, our Campaign is on and we want 350,000 dollars—more if obtainable.

I concluded my third lot of notes by emphasizing how essential to welfare higher education is and that if a University cannot be reached then our Colleges must be expanded and uplifted. I propose in this set of notes to deal briefly with the history of the Church of England College.

The Church of England College originated in 1850, partly out of a private school maintained by Bishop Feild and partly out of a General Academy, which was started in 1846 and maintained by the Government. Its existence was due to the efforts of the great Bishop who, previous to his appointment to the Newfoundland See, had already in England made a reputation as an Educationist: Bishop Feild was a man of the finest character and his life in the Colony should ever be an inspiration to every lad who attends the College he founded.

For some time the work was conducted in part of a house called Avon, on Forest Road. In 1858 the present spacious and central site was secured and the substantial building forming the centre and west wing of the present suite of buildings was erected. In 1876 the plain wooden structure to the rear of the main building was added, and in 1894, owing to a large increase in number of students, the handsome extension on the East and North was made.

In 1877 the Synod Girls' School was made a part of the institution but did not come under the complete management of the Directors of the College until 1916, when the Synod directed that this should be done.

From 1850 to 1892 the institution was known as the Church of England Academy. By the Education Act of 1892 it was styled the Church of England College, and in 1894 the boys' side was named Bishop Feild College and, a year or so later, the girls' side Bishop Spencer College.

In 1918 the present Feild Hall was opened as a residence for boarders attending Bishop Feild College, and

In January of this year the British Hall property was acquired for the purpose of Spencer College. In 1912 a large house on Church Hill was purchased for boarders attending Bishop Spencer College.

From its start the institution has enjoyed the patronage and protection of the several Governors of the Colony, and the care and oversight of the several Bishops of Newfoundland. Consistently the effort of the institution has been to afford to the boys and girls attending it not only such knowledge as would fit them to take up their positions in life, but such training as would lead them to fear God, Honor the King and love the Brethren.

The lives of the boys and girls as they have passed into manhood and womanhood have amply proved that the seed sown at the College has borne good fruit. Dealing with the boys only, let us pause for a few moments to think of some of those who received their early training in, or who were otherwise closely identified in life with, the institution. It is not claimed that the College is entitled to all the credit for the lives of those to be named, but it is claimed that it did in some measure—who shall determine how great—mould their path. In the list that follows no particular order has been attempted; it is only claimed that they are in some degree products of the fine institutions, to amplify which the campaign has been inaugurated. Here are the names of a few of the "Old Boys":

Police Bring Prisoners

The S. S. Ingraham arrived here early this morning from the Labrador with six prisoners, who are alleged to have been implicated in the Flat Island affair of a couple of weeks ago. The names of the men are, Aaron Ralph, John Hallet, Lewis Ralph, Reuben Ralph, Edward Morgan and Thomas Butt. On arrival they were taken to the police station.

THE SUBMARINES AND BOVRIL

During the War food supplies were greatly restricted in the United Kingdom owing to the submarine blockade, and Bovril was so indispensable to the soldiers, wounded, and the people that it had to be retained in the British Isles, where it is made, or sent to the fighting fronts.

Fresh supplies of Bovril have now arrived and there is no longer any need to make shift with substitutes which lack its unique vital and energizing properties.

Bovril is the food whose body-building powers have been proved by independent scientific experiments to be from 10 to 20 times the amount taken.

Remarkable Values in Silk & Cotton Goods

Latest quotations show a steady advance in nearly all Dry Goods, and especially is this advance noticeable in such goods as Silks, Cottons and Mixed Fabrics; and latest advices point to still higher prices. We have on hand a large stock of Silk and Cotton Fabrics which were purchased during the "Slump" in the markets, and we are therefore enabled to offer them at prices much below present values. A careful perusal of these items offered below may be of benefit to you.

TAKE THIS INTO ACCOUNT.

One of the easiest things the average person does is to condemn the employer for paying as small wages as the traffic will bear.

If he (or she) were an employer, he is sure he would pay his men just wages. But would he pay any more than he had to?

How many people do pay more than they need to for anything?

She Would As Soon Trample On Her Hat.

I know a woman who is always talking about the duty of the employer. This woman sometimes has a helper come in to work by the hour. And never did I hear anyone make any more fuss about anything than when the price went up from 20 to 25 and even 30 cents. Yet during that time the cost of living has surely gone up enough to justify that raise. As for paying more than the market wage, well I can as easily imagine her taking off the new hat she just bought and trampling upon it! She is acting exactly as the employees of labor whom she is so incensed against, act.

We Are All EMPLOYEES OF Labor.
We are all employees of labor. Even if we do not actually hire anything done in our homes, we employ labor when we send things to the laundries, when we have ice delivered at our door, when we buy a commodity in the shop. The cost of all these things is the cost of labor. Yet how often do we refuse, for example, to go to the shop which cuts prices by holding down the salaries of its employees?

Let me tell you a little story which was recently told me. There was in a certain town an excellent store which charged a fair price and paid its clerks unusually well. There came into that town a cut-price store in which the clerks were wretchedly paid. The first man did not get customer help. Instead, he tried to hold his trade by service and courtesy and reliability and by cutting

IN THE WOODS.

I wandered to alleys of pines; day in the wonderful woods, a forest majestic and grand, where solitude silence, and similar goods are spread with a liberal hand. Afar from the hurry and noise of the town I journeyed thro' myself down and write you some soul-searching lines. The forest is noble, impressive and sad, as poets have wotted and weened; but I was rejoiced to get back to the grad, and sit in a room that is screened. The forest is full of unusual bugs, which bite in unusual ways, and I am anointing my system with drugs, to soften the swellings they raise. The forest's mosquitoes are larger than hens, they're hungry and active and mean; the spots where they bite me are looking like wens, and I am a sight to be seen. The woods are the homes of malevolent ants, which thrive in the shade of the trees; they crawl up inside of the wanderer's pants, and eat all the flesh from his knees. The town has its faults; it is wild for the cash, it's swarming with callous-souled men; but if you would urge me to chase to the brush, I say to you, "Never again!"

Eastern English.

A volume might be collected of innocent but barbarous perversions of the English language. The latest comes from the projectors of a new Siamese newspaper, who have distributed the following notice:

The news of English we tell the latest: Write in perfectly style and most earliest. Do a murder git commit, we hear of it and tell it. Do a mighty chief die, we publish it, and in borders of somber. Staff has each one been college, and write like Kipling and the Dickens. We circle every town and extortionate not for advertisements. Buy it. Buy it. Tell each of you its greatness for good. Who Won the War?

(From the New York Herald.)
Who won the war? The millions who lie sleeping in the soil of France; the millions who, dead or living, contributed their part to the conflict; Americans, French, British, Canadians, Italians, Belgians, Japanese, Serbs, Roumanians, Australians, patriotic Russians—all who gave their courage and strength to the cause of human liberty. History will generously give praise to the Allies and their associates. All "won the war."

TALK AMERICA.
Talk nothing but America henceforth and evermore. Let's place the glorious Stars and Stripes above each humble door! Let's sing our songs of freedom till they echo from the hills! And every sluggish pulse of doubt with love of freedom thrills. Let's make ourselves one family, north, south and east and west, Devoted to America and working for her best.

Let's seek the truth beneath the flag for which our sons have died. No greater happiness for man can alien flags provide. He that would grow to be a man, erect and strong and true, May reach the heights of splendor 'neath the red, the white and blue. Let's dedicate ourselves once more unto the land we love Till all who live beneath its folds salute the flag above.

What more can mortal man desire on earth the while he lives Than Freedom's opportunity? and that our country gives. Here none is stifled by despair, nor fettered by the strong. Ours is a flag that guards the truth, but never shields a wrong. If greater glory is to come 'twill need no banner new, But will have birth beneath the red and white and starry blue.

Talk nothing but America, united let us stand. Against the alien who would spread vile doctrines through our land! Let Terror never stalk by night on Freedom's thoroughfares, Let's grow to be one family where each the glory shares. Beneath our Flag all good can come to cheer the life of man. So out with him who cannot be a true American!

This is to certify that fourteen years ago I got the cords of my left wrist nearly severed, and was for about nine months that I had no use of my hand, and tried other Liniments, also doctors, and was receiving no benefit. By a persuasion from a friend I got MINARD'S LINIMENT and used one bottle which completely cured me, and have been using MINARD'S LINIMENT in my family ever since and find it the same as when I first used it, and would never be without it.

Wake Up, Newfoundland!

The possibilities of Cold Storage have yet to be developed in this dominion. True there have been several plants erected for this purpose in connection with the export of fresh fish, but even these have not gone far enough, and if we may judge by the results, not half the business has been done that could be carried through.

The little trade done hitherto between Newfoundland and Canada, in fresh fish exports, has been confined to the South and West Coasts, the shippers there having erected small plants containing cold chambers, for their own benefit and capable of holding only such a quantity as each one considers it wise to purchase.

These local refrigerators are also used for keeping bait, the freezing process being that produced from a mixture of ice and salt, held in iron or galvanized cylinders which pass through the space in which the fish are laid. These local refrigerators have proven highly successful, but as their capacity has necessarily to be limited, it stands to reason that no big ventures in frozen fish can be made.

It is justly claimed that the installation of a chain of cold storage plants at places on the South Coast, where the fishery is carried on the whole year round, would give a big impetus and encouragement to a venture, the success of which would revolutionize the fishing industry of Newfoundland. Some years ago, one of the promises made by a political party, which was elected to power, and promptly forgot all about it, was that, if given the popular mandate, its leaders would begin the erection of a number of such plants at points most contiguous to the fishing grounds.

sums paid them are scattered broadcast over the public accounts.

It is high time now for us to wake up and make use of the resources with which nature has bountifully endowed us, by calling in the aid of practical fishery scientists and experts in all things pertaining to the conservation and care of our vast water wealth. Cold Storage is essential. The world is looking for greater supplies of fish food and asks for it in its fresh condition. In supplying this ever-increasing demand, Newfoundland must take part. The future depends upon our being able to export fresh fish of all kinds in large and ever-increasing quantities, year in and year out, but in order to ensure our ability to do this, the first thing to be accomplished is an up-to-date cold storage service, capable of holding such a quantity of frozen fish as would be sufficient to meet any order for shipment to foreign countries. People are eating more fish. The late war taught them that as a food, fish has no equal. Newfoundland has the opportunity now to get into the world's fresh fish trade. Can advantage be taken of the prospects which are being held out, the inducements that are being offered?

C. of E. Campaign. Very Special.—Will the Campaign workers be good enough to be in their respective seats at the luncheon to-night in the Methodist College Hall at five minutes to seven?

Meteorological Officers Leave. Lieut. L. J. Clements and Air Craftsman E. E. Wilson, R.A.F., Meteorological experts who have been here for 5 and 6 months respectively on Air Ministry work in connection with supplying Meteorological reports to the airman attempting the Transatlantic flight, have finished their work here, and a communication received from headquarters this morning orders them home first chance. They will consequently leave very soon. Seen by the Telegram reporter this morning they say, they were very enjoyable, and that their work had made since coming, records of which will be preserved by the Air Ministry. Their stay, they say, was very enjoyable, and that they had enjoyed the weather, too much weather, perhaps he is right.

Alcock's Local Relatives. A rather interesting fact—one which is not generally known—is that Sir John Alcock, pilot of the successful Vickers-Vimy aeroplane which crossed the Atlantic Ocean by air has several relatives here, meeting some of them when he was staying in the city. They are Magistrate Mark Alcock of Gt. Gt. Street, his uncle, and Mrs. Crocker, of the city, his aunt, and the sons and daughters of both his cousins. Mrs. S. H. Butler, wife of the West End Shipwright, who was formerly an Alcock, is also his aunt, and her children, by a former marriage, his cousins, Magistrate Alcock, and his two sisters, Mrs. Crocker and Mrs. Butler, are brother and sisters of Sir John Alcock's father. And yet there are those who bemoan the passing of romance!

Police Court. Two men were charged with cutting trees on the property of another man. The defendants pleaded not guilty to cutting growing trees, stating that they had only cut dead wood. The complainant stated that this wood was valuable to him as he owned a mill and used the wood for lumber. The defendants had to pay costs.

Hymeneal. GOSLING-KENNEDY.

Solemnized at the C. E. Cathedral at 3 o'clock this afternoon by Rev. Canon Bole, the marriage of Miss Frances A. Gosling, daughter of Mayor W. G. and Mrs. Gosling, and Lieut. Com. E. H. N. Kennedy, R.N., took place. Mayor Gosling, father of the bride, acted as father giver, while the bridesmaid was Miss Dorothy Harvey, and the flower girls Miss Helen Colville and Miss Helen Campbell. The best man was Capt. Penn, of H.M.S. Briton. From the Cathedral the bridal party drove to the home of the bride, where the marriage banquet was enjoyed. At 5 o'clock this afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy motor to Topsail, where a honeymoon of a week being spent. Thence they will leave for London. The Telegram joins in extending congratulations and best wishes for matrimonial happiness and bliss.

McMurdo's Store News.

THURSDAY, July 24, 1919. Among toilet powders of moderate price, none is better known or more highly esteemed by a large class of users than Woodberry's Facial Powder. To be had in White, Flesh and Brunette, it is designed to suit all complexions. It is absolutely non-injurious, being made of the finest materials. It is faintly but sufficiently perfumed. Price 45c. a box. Woodberry's Facial Soap is perhaps our finest complexion soap—at least multitudes of pleased users prefer it to any other, and this is no doubt the most certain guarantee of merit. Price 45c. a cake.

Personal Mention.

Messrs J. and R. Roberts of Change Islands, are on a visit to the city and are registered at the Crosbie. Mr. and Mrs. J. M. "Earn and Give."

A WORD TO THE SCHOOL-CHILDREN AND THEIR PARENTS. To-morrow the intensive campaign to raise funds for the Church of England schools will commence. This campaign will continue for a week, and no doubt all will be anxious to avail of the privilege which is being extended of contributing to so important an object. This "drive" will not be confined to adults alone, but includes within its scope every child who is able to earn and so to give his or her mite. It is unnecessary here to indicate the many ways of earning this trifling sum. The teachers who have undertaken to procure pledges from their pupils and parents, in accordance with suggestions, should any be required. Finally, there are a number of children at present out of town on their holidays, although they will not permit of a personal appeal, will be anxious to do their bit. If these will will communicate with Mr. Alex. Waters, Chairman of the "Earn and Give" Committee, Bank of Nova Scotia Building, he will be glad to see that they are provided with pledge cards which can be returned within the week. This is a unique opportunity for the children to become interested in their own educational advancement, and we feel sure that the teachers will meet with a ready response from children and parents alike.

Ingraham's Report.

Working But No Settlement.

LONDON, July 23. The day of the great coal miners strike brought no signs of a settlement. Almost 25,000 men have laid down their tools. Ten thousand went out to-day in Nottingham and Derby, while ten thousand men in Monmouth, and 7,000 Lancashire workers went back to save the mines from destruction, but coupling with their return a strong protest.

Chaos in Shipping Circles.

200 Ships Tied Up at Liverpool---Lancashire Miners Will Return to Work --- An Eight Day Armistice---Fresh Disorders in Berlin.

STRIKING MINERS WILL RETURN
 LONDON, July 23. The Lancashire miners at a mass meeting to-day protested against the six shillings advance in the price of coal and endorsed the action of their leaders. They adopted a resolution however to return to work to-night or to-morrow.

LENINE GETTING NERVOUS.
 LONDON, July 23. Lenine offers to cede Bessarabia to Rumania on conditions that Rumania shall prohibit Ukrainian citizens and bands of Admiral Kolchak, the head of the all-Russian government at Omsk from crossing through the Rumanian frontier. An armistice to last eight days has been concluded on the Bessarabia front.

STRIKE CONSEQUENCES.
 LIVERPOOL, July 23. The strike among the dockers which broke out here this week has resulted in bringing about chaos in the arrangements for handling more than over two hundred ships at this port, their sailings being cancelled or indefinitely postponed. The steamer Scotian with two thousand passengers was ready to sail for Montreal yesterday, but was unable to leave. The Adriatic due to leave on Tuesday for New York, and the Orduna scheduled to sail for New York on Saturday have had their sailings indefinitely postponed. It seems unlikely that these two liners will be able to leave on time and perhaps not until the strike is settled. There were no apparent prospects to-day of any speedy settlement of the difficulty.

WELSH MINERS WILL STICK IT.
 LONDON, July 23. The most hopeful feature of the coal strike situation to-night was the decision of the Welsh miners at conference at Cardiff not to join the Yorkshire movement. There was no great accession of strength to the strike movement to-day. The men on strike total two hundred and fifty thousand, Yorkshire, Derbyshire, Nottingham and Monmouth being the counties affected.

BACK TO THE WOOD PILE.
 AMERONGEN, July 23. The former Emperor has entirely recovered from his recent indisposition and has begun to resume his former monotonous daily occupations. The former Empress is also well.

POLISH CABINET RESIGNS.
 BERLIN, July 23. The Polish cabinet has resigned in consequence of want of confidence in the Ministry of Labor and Public Works, according to the Warsaw Gazette. The cabinet will be reconstituted when Premier Paderewski returns to Warsaw.

BOLSHEVICS OFFER PEACE.
 LONDON, July 22. A Bolshevik delegation has arrived at Kishineff with an offer of peace to the commander of the Rumanian Dniester troops on behalf of Nikolai Lenine, the Bolshevik premier, according to a Berlin government wire.

BLOODSHED IN BERLIN.
 BERLIN, July 22. Ten persons were shot during disorders which attended the breaking up of a majority socialist meeting by Communists and Spartacists here yesterday. Those attending the meeting which was held in the Trades Union building, attempted to lynch a man who fired shots, but he was saved by hospital helpers who were in the building. Government troops had to quiet rioters in the other halls. The Berlin press is indignant at the uproar.

DOOMED TO FAILURE.
 PARIS, July 23. The meeting of the National Committee of the Federation of Labor which ended yesterday, brought out statements appearing to indicate that the general strike which had been proposed for July twenty-first, but which was called off before that date was abandoned because it was doomed in advance to failure.

THE CAUSES OF THE STRIKE.
 LONDON, July 23. Andrew Bonar Law, the Government's spokesman, told a questioner in the House of Commons yesterday that as far as the Government was aware there was no particular person behind the miner's unrest, and that the movement seemed to be a protest against the increase in the price of coal, against the dearth of living, against military interference in Russia and conscription. The strikers, however, appear to be in rather a bad mood and seem to fear that troops will follow the naval men in an attempt to break the strike.

FRENCH ELECTIONS FORESHADOWED.
 PARIS, July 23. The indications are that the renewal of the Clemenceau Government's lease of life by a vote of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies will be followed quickly by tangible evidence of the Government's intention to arrange for the holding of elections as soon as possible. This evidence comes in the form of a bill introduced in the Chamber reducing the number of parliamentary districts in the department of Seine, palpably in anticipation of parliamentary elections.

U. S. TO SIGN TREATIES.
 WASHINGTON, July 23. The United States will sign treaties with Bulgaria and Turkey it was announced to-day at the State Department.

Concert on Shipboard.
 While the Portia was detained by fog at Branch the passengers held a concert on board which was of more than usual merit. The promoters were Malcolm Parsons and Clarence Scott. At the close of the entertainment, a collection was taken up and the sum of $22.00 realized for the Jensen Camp Fund. Rev. Mr. Adams of Fortune, very kindly acted as Chairman and the following programme clearly evidenced the high talent of those who took part. Chairman's remarks—Rev. Mr. Adams.

Amplified Spelling.
 (From an Exchange.)
 "Spell your name!" said the court clerk sharply.
 The witness began—"O, double T, I, double U, E, double L, double—" "Wait," ordered the clerk. "Begin again."
 The witness replied—"O, double T, I, double U, E, double L, double U, double O—"
 "Your honor," roared the clerk, "I beg that this man be committed for contempt of court!"
 "What is your name?" asked the judge.
 "My name, your honor, is Ottiwel Wood, and I spell it O, double T, I, double U, E, double L, double U, double O, D."

In Prince Charlie's Day.
 The chief association of most Southerners with Harris is the tweed clothes that reek of peat-smoke and are called by the name of the place. However, it has a more romantic connection with the Young Pretender when he was "in the heather" after Culloden.
 He was once nearly captured by the Rev. Aulay Macaulay, great-grandfather of the Whig historian, who was minister of Harris, and had a keen eye on the Government reward of £20,000.
 During his wandering among these islands Prince Charlie excited the admiration of his faithful followers by his skill in shooting grouse flying and also, alas, for a drinking capacity which could see their stoutest "bowlsmen" under the table.

POPULAR FISHING POST.—Several fishing parties are encamped at Hodge-water, the famous inland fishing centre, this side of Whitbourne. Others will be going there shortly.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES COLDS, Etc.

Met in Russia.

What must have been an enjoyable meeting for both parties concerned was that of Rev. George Hewitt and Captain Harris Oke which took place at Archangel, North Russia, a few weeks ago. Mr. Hewitt, who is Chaplain on one of the Royal Navy Ships there, writes that it was when stepping from a street car that he noticed the familiar face. The two had many topics in common over which to talk, they having both gone to Bishop Field College together. Captain Oke joined the Nfld. Regiment as a private, winning his way up. After leaving the Regiment he enlisted in the Regular Army, being sent in the Relief expedition to Russia.

Miraculous Escape.

Last evening while playing near an open window, the two year old boy of Mr. and Mrs. Reg Tuff, 15 Feild St., in some way fell out through, striking the street a distance of fifteen feet below. For a little while the child was dazed by the fall and considerably shaken up, but beyond the shock, no physical injury was done, and a few hours later the little chap was as active as ever. His escape from instant death was most miraculous, but the Providence that guards and watches over children was present in this case, to the great delight of the parents.

"The Letters of Mayo-Lind."

In "The Letters of Mayo-Lind," Robinson & Co., publishers, the reader of literature will find a mine of very readable letters from the scenes of war as seen by the gallant Newfoundland Regiment. Pte. Frank Lind, unfortunately killed in the Great War, wrote very fluently and well, and his powers of description and abilities in word painting are too well known to all who read his letters as they appeared originally in the columns of the Daily News, to need mention here. We believe that the only thing required to have the little book sought is to state that it is an excellently gotten up collection of Frank Lind's letters written from the war fronts on which he fought. His style is vivid and his tone cheery and optimistic and the book will repay careful perusal.

Universities Must Go to the People.

(By H. SANDERSON FURNISS, Principal, Ruskin College, Oxford.)

The universities, and especially the older universities, must become in the near future the centres of light and learning—not of a class, but of the people, and there are signs that Democracy really is finding a way, although slowly, even into "The Home of Lost Causes."

Modern subjects are occupying an increasingly large space in university curricula, the number of men and women who are studying economics at Oxford being already larger than it was before the war, while a School of Agriculture has recently been granted to women by Oxford and Cambridge, but the most famous of English universities can hardly lag much longer behind their younger sisters.

The universities of the future, however, if they are to keep in close touch with the life of the nation, must extend far beyond the boundaries of the cities in which they dwell. They must be something more than a cluster of buildings, whether ancient or modern.

It will be long before the great mass of the men and women engaged in our industries all over the country can have the privilege of residence in a university, but the universities can and must go to the people. The future will almost certainly see an enormous growth in the University Extension movement, and there must be university tutorial classes by the thousand. The universities can rightly claim more generous treatment by the State than they have received in the past, but let them support their claim by their desire to satisfy the demand which undoubtedly exists throughout the land for extramural teaching, and their case will be doubly strong.—London Daily Mail.

Lonely Lewis.

The excitement afforded to Lloyd's signalman at the Butt of Lewis by the news, picked up from a passing vessel, of Mr. Hawker's safety, must have been very welcome, as his life is a singularly dull and monotonous one.

The Butt of Lewis, the northern point of the Hebrides, lies out of the track of all shipping except vessels bound from Scandinavian ports to America, or the reverse, and ships from North British ports such as Leith and Dundee which have taken what seamen call the "north about" route instead of passing through the English Channel.

The signalman logs thirty or forty vessels a year—an average of one every ten days, as against one every ten minutes at Dover!

JUST RECEIVED: 1,000 bottles of Wampole's Oil. DR. F. STAFFORD & SON.—June 23rd.

British Sea Fisheries.

An official return of sea fisheries for England and Wales in May shows that 817,333 cwt. of fish were landed, as compared with 305,752 cwt. in the corresponding month of last year. The value of the catches was £1,476,123, as against £1,121,737 in May, 1918.

The landings included 216,832 cwt. of haddock, 197,237 cwt. of cod, 65,778 cwt. of plaice, 67,761 cwt. of herring, 66,228 cwt. of mackerel, 59,097 cwt. of hake, 16,682 cwt. of whiting, 5,360 cwt. of turbot, 4,253 cwt. of soles and 1,261 cwt. of brill. The return also shows that 1,289,542 crabs, 140,917 lobsters, and 368,673 oysters were landed.

For the first five months of the year the quantity of fish landed in England and Wales was 2,385,958 cwt. compared with 1,211,812 cwt. in the first five months of 1918. The value of the fish was £6,217,411, as against £5,374,337.

True Courage.

(From the St. John Telegraph.)
One may be afraid and yet be courageous. Soldiers who have won the Victoria Cross and sailors who have remained on duty until their ship sank beneath the waves, will tell you that. And the reason that men do not fall in crises like these is that physical courage is under the control of the mind. That is why we should study self-control. True courage knows no favorites and should be cultivated by every one. Without it we must fail. It is the real foundation of all great achievements.

What's in a Name.

Naming a plant or flower after a celebrity is a delicate compliment, and one that no doubt at times adds something to the market value. But there are exceptions. That beautiful variety of the lobelia, for instance, known as "Emperor William," would perhaps hold up its imperial head a little more proudly just now if it had had a more fortunate christening.

Stray thoughts on these lines may have been flickering in the mind of a vendor in a London market-place as a likely looking buyer, while examining a box of the old favorite, asked what variety it was. Without deranging the muscle of an eyelid the coster (and she was a "lady," too) replied: "Douglas 'Aig'! Four-and-a-tanner a box."

Names.

(A ship launched in America is named Quistconck.)
The sea winds whisper, soft and low, names beautiful and sweet, Of white-towered ships whose loveliness the Dawn God rushed to greet—
Tall ships with beauty burning high, sea queens with pride afore, Their names are borne upon the winds to the islands of desire: Queen of the Seas, White Wings, Sea Foam, Heartsease and Halcyon. Their music and their beauty now with Helen's lure are one. And through the old, sweet cadences the roaring hammers sing: "Way there, way there, O fiddle ghosts, for the Quistconck's clattering."
The rainbow dreams of old Romance still drift upon the seas. And names of old endeavor float in whispering symphonies: Rose, Pelican, and Golden Hind, Mayflower and Morning Star, Hermione and Waterwitch, Dream and Castlebar. Snow-white were Ariadne's wings, cloud upon the blue. Adventure shone upon the flag, the Lady Jocelyn flew. Their names are perfumes in the dusk that lead in memories, Sweet bells that slowly, softly chime the charm of all the seas; But through the twilight's magic breaks the racking siren's call—"Quistconck! Quistconck! Conck-Conck-Conck-Conck!" in Beauty's funeral!

You Can't Afford to Have Wet Feet

YOU know how important it is to keep your feet warm and dry. Then why don't you wear "Hi-Press" Rubber Boots and Shoes?

They're made a new way—IN ONE SOLID PIECE—they simply CAN'T leak or peel. But the big thing you notice from this new way of making footwear is the added WEAR.—Fishermen everywhere tell us that "Hi-Press" outlasts ordinary boots two and three to one.

You know, in your class of work, that the best is always the most economical. Wear "Hi-Press"—and you will never be satisfied with anything else.

A Few of the Reasons, Why?

Coupon Gold Notes of the Nova Scotia Tramways are an excellent purchase because they are issued by an enterprise which has been in successful operation for 24 years.

The purpose of this issue is to provide additional rolling stock and extensions and betterments of the lighting, tramway, power and gas system in Halifax, made necessary by the rapid though conservative growth of that city.

These Notes are issued for three years, yield full 7 p.c., and both the principal and interest are payable in New York, as well as in Montreal or Halifax. This provision is of substantial advantage in view of the high rate of premium ruling on New York funds and the early maturity of the Notes.

This issue of Coupon Gold Notes has been authorized, sanctioned and approved by the Board of Commissioners of the Province of Nova Scotia. They are a direct obligation of the Company and rank ahead of the preferred and common shares.

In view of the fact that the Company operates a service indispensable to the public, an unusually stable base is afforded to these securities. During the industrial reconstruction period following the war and while conditions are becoming normal and the trend of trade and industry is being established, an investment in the 3 year Coupon Gold Notes of this public utility, at the attractive yield of 7 p.c., is strongly recommended. These Notes will probably cover the uncertain period of world-wide readjustment and reconstruction, and yet their comparatively early maturity, June 1st, 1922, should stabilize their market price and course, and make them readily saleable at any time desired. Our suggestion is therefore to invest meanwhile in sound, conservative securities which should not be affected by commercial conditions, and it is for this and other good reasons that we regard Coupon Gold Notes as a highly attractive offering, particularly at this time.

Stone and Webster, who are experienced and expert lighting, tramway, gas and power operators, are the general managers of the Company.

The attention of careful investors is particularly directed to this issue. Full particulars on request. To ensure allotment, applications should be lodged immediately.

PLAGIARISED AND OTHERWISE.

CAN HE!

Fans are wondering if O'Leary can "come back" to-night and keep the haughty "CUBS" from ascending another rung on the Pennant Ladder. In the last two games his support was not all that could be desired, but his team mates are practising at every opportunity under the direction of that master strategist, Manager McGrath, and promise to have several surprises in store for their opponents. On the other hand the CUBS have a particularly well balanced team, full of pep and cannot be held too cheaply. Hall is in great form and each game shows an increasing number of strike-outs to his credit. The probable line-up to-night will be as follows:

Cubs.		B.L.S.
Hall	pitcher	O'Leary
Cluston	catcher	Brazel
Murphy	1st base	French
Duggan	2nd base	O'Reilly
Canning	3rd base	O'Donnell
Manning	shortstop	Delaney
Phelan	centre field	Wallace
Driscoll	right field	Connolly
Umpires—	Mr. Chesman, Chief; H. Power on bases.
Scorers—	Messrs. Channing, and Merner.
	Play Ball, 8.30.

from Grand Falls in reference to the proposed series of seven games, but from other sources we learn that the paper men are likely to make the trip during Peace or Regatta Week. Visitors who have returned from the inland town claim that several of their old players have returned and such able players as Charley Smith will find it difficult to make the team. So far nothing has been done towards selecting a City Team and we would suggest that the Selecting Committee arrange for two or three exhibition games between the first and second City candidates so that they will have an opportunity of playing together. Fans would also like to see the New City Uniforms which have just been received. It is also likely that Bell Island will compete and no time should be lost in assembling the City's representatives.

Bag and Baggage.

Present and immediately past conditions in Turkey are contrasted by a traveller familiar with the country both before and since the armistice. Before the armistice every article of food and clothing was at least forty per cent dearer than before the war, and these prices were artificially created by government corruption. "Requisitioned" for the army, every article of food and clothing found its way into the hands of friends of the government, who then profiteered by selling to the civilian population. New laws were passed to further this profiteering by the Turks, and thus completely destroyed any remaining commerce of the Christians; whilst every reported German victory was made an affair of compulsory celebration. News of such victory set the Turkish police in motion from house to house, and presently the entire city would apparently be rejoicing. With the Christian population the rejoicing came when the news of the armistice reached Turkey. The Turkish power to prosecute was broken, but the Christian in Turkey is now likely from day to day to receive anonymous missives reading, for example, "Oh, vile Christians, these things will pass; you will remain in our possession again, and we shall massacre you." "Bag and baggage" does indeed seem to be the only remedy.

A Great Irishman.

The latest attempt to find a solution of the Irish question has this at least in its favour, that it comes from an Irishman who is honoured wherever the thoughts of men are occupied with Ireland. Sir Horace Plunkett is one of those who have not been able to avoid fame. Seeking nothing for himself, he has won the sincere praise of all conditions of men on behalf of Ireland for thirty years, and what Ireland thinks of him was shown when the Irish Convention assembled and he was unanimously elected to its chairmanship. That nation, which is as delicate in compliment as it is fervent in abuse, could have paid him no higher tribute. If you meet him in the street you would, I suppose, pass him by without a second glance. The people who are really great are so often so securely disguised. There is just a little grey man of 65, with an untidy grey beard, with none of the outward tokens of distinction. And when he talks his words are slow and hesitating, with no touch of splendour in the framing of them. But presently you realize that the little grey man is burning with great purposes, and behind the stammering words there are visions which begin to reveal themselves, and your wandering attention is fixed and held.

When Etton and Oxford had done with him, Horace Plunkett went cattle-ranching in Wyoming, and he has kept up his connection with America ever since, and has indeed a house in California. But in 1888 he came back to Ireland and set to work on the redemption of the rural districts. He saw in agricultural co-operation the great hope of the future, and in 1894 he founded the Irish Agricultural Organisation Society, whose marvellously clumsy name has been the banner of an increasing hope for Ireland ever since. For consider what that society, with its thousand branches and its numberless kindred organisations, has done. It is not only that it has shown the Irish farmer the way to prosperity—though that in itself is of the highest importance. But, beyond this, it has shown the Irish people how possible it is for men of violently divergent political and religious faith to work together in harmony for the good of Ireland. "One of our best men is a Presbyterian minister," he told me, "and another is a Catholic priest. And they get on famously."

All this, of course, is an old story, but it is well to remember it at this time, when the man who set these quarrelsome people working in unity is making his greatest appeal for unity to his countrymen. "There has been so much muddled thinking about Ireland," he says, "and the Irish themselves have done a great deal of it. But forced to think clearly, Republicanism is impossible, and so is the Ulster programme. The question is, What can we find that is possible?" He believes that he has found the answer to his own question. What Ireland and the world in general will think of it remains to be seen. But it is at least certain that his convictions are based on the most honest and thorough consideration of all the facts as he knows them.—London Daily Mail.

The Crime Supply.

(By BARRY PLAIN, in London Daily Mail.)

"I'm reading," said Purbright, "some exciting stories in a monthly magazine about an amateur detective. His name's Stanton, or Wilborough, or something like that. He's a perfect gentleman with a natural taste for poking his nose into other people's affairs. "Well, this chap goes to stay at a country house. Mark what happens. On the night of his arrival the duchess's pearl necklace is stolen. Following on that, two valuable hunters are poisoned. And this month a beautiful girl is found dead in her bed with her throat cut and the letters L.O.U. branded on her forehead. And yet the detective—this Stanborough—is still staying on at this house."
"Well," I said, "what about it?"
"Just this. If I were his host I should go to him and say, 'Look here's Wilton, old man. I hate to be superstitious, but you seem to bring a train of events with you. And, talking about trains, the up express goes at 10.35 a.m., which will give you nice time for breakfast before you catch it.' And I should be justified."
"Why, how much crime does the ordinary man encounter? I'm getting on in life, and there's never been a murder in any house or hotel where I've been staying. I was once given five-pence short at a booking-office. I detected twenty minutes later, partly by one of these flashes of intuitive genius and partly by counting my change. Some years later my wife said that a frowsy charwoman whom we then employed stole a bar of soap every time that she came to the house; but it's my belief that soap was the last thing that woman would have touched. After another interval of years a gardener of mine got into trouble for abstracting the lead from the roof of a disenting chapel. And last week my parlourmaid was fined because the lamp on her bicycle went out. And that little list represents crime as I've experienced it."
"I doubt if you've done much better. I'm positive you're not up to the level of the magazine detective. He lives

Savings Multiply by Investment.

Mr. G. M. Reynolds, President of the Continental and Commercial Bank, Chicago, says:
"Nobody can make a fortune by saving money from salary or wages. I think I have never accomplished anything big in my life that my friends have not urged me to take a different course."
You get a start by SAVING—but we can multiply it by judicious investment. What we have accomplished in the way of profit and growth for some 600 clients, we can do for YOU, if you only give us the opportunity.
Right now, we offer to invest for you, at a net profit of 18 per cent. per year, any amount from $100 to $5,000. Isn't it only fair to yourself and to us to compel us to prove to you HOW we can do it. Just ask us to lay all the details before you.

cover the criminal. But detection's nothing—dogs have been trained to do it. Where those detectives are really lucky is in their constant supply of crime. They must have cornered the crime market."
IMPETURABLE GRIEVE.
Concerning Commander Grieve, who navigated for Hawker on his Atlantic flight, the last named tells a good story.
"We were in mid-Atlantic," said Hawker, "running the engine red-hot and wanting water badly. We came down low to look for a ship. Then I turned and saw that Grieve was asleep. At any moment the engine might have given out."
"After a very anxious search, I heard a tired voice saying: 'I say, old man, have we found a ship yet?'"

Caught a Devil Fish.

One of the largest devilfish ever caught in Florida waters—the largest but one in the memory of Captain Charles Thomson—was landed recently by a party headed by the captain aboard the L'Apache, owned by James A. Ollison, of Indianapolis.

The party was cruising in the neighborhood of Bimini, in the Gulf Stream about fifty miles from Miami when Captain Thomson, whose customary place is at the bow of the boat with a harpoon in his hand, sighted what appeared to be a mass of submerged wreckage a short distance ahead. It was a huge devilfish drifting along near the surface of the water, his great black bulk darkening the water for many feet around.

Cautiously Captain Thomson ordered the yacht to proceed, and slowly manoeuvring within striking distance launched a harpoon that landed squarely in the centre of the monster's back. The next instant there was a tremendous commotion in the water and the line attached to the harpoon went hissing over the gunwale at a speed which frightened and hurt the fish started out to sea.

The business of letting the fish run and hauling him in again was repeated several times, so that finally he had five harpoons in him, two in the right wing and two in the left, in addition to the one originally implanted in his back.

Measuring the fish he was found to have a span of 15 feet 6 1/2 inches from tip to wing tip and a length of 14 feet from the extremity of his headfins to the end of his tail. His hide when removed from mounting weighed 350 pounds, and his estimated weight when alive was 3,800 pounds. — American Paper.

Hypnotized by Criminals.

MURDERERS WHO MESMERIZED WOMEN.

What is the secret of the fascination which murderers and criminals of the worst type have for certain women? Not their looks, for more often than not they are as ugly as their deeds. Look at the pictures of Landru, the "Paris Bluebeard," who is believed to have made away with at least eleven women, and posed as the sweetheart of seventy-four others. It is not easy to imagine women being attracted by his Svengali face.

Female Fascinators.

Neill Cream and Dr. Palmer, the arch-poisoners; Henry Wainwright, who was executed for the brutal murder of Harriet Lane; George Joseph Smith, the "Bluebeard" of 1915—the "husband" of seven wives and murderer of three; S. Klosowski, alias Chapman, the Wandsworth murderer; Douglas, of mere and criminal; the "Rev." Hans Schmidt, the sham priest, who during the day performed marriage and funeral services, and at night became the hyena of the streets;

Henri de Tourville, the French writer and naturalized Englishman, who made a business of the wholesale murder of women; and Franz von Volheim, who killed one millionaire, blackmailed another, and made a speciality of robbing women with money—all had an extraordinary fascination for the female sex, in spite of their sinister features, shifty eyes, and the brutal temperaments they betrayed at times.

Crimes Planned in Church. "The only explanation," said a well-known criminologist to the Tit-Bits man, "seems to lie in the fact that such men hypnotize women. Charles Peace always found women ready to help him. As one cynic says: "If ten eligible men, one of them a known blackguard, were placed in the marriage market, a pretty woman would invariably choose the blackguard."

Irresistible Attractions. It will never be known how many poor women Nell Cream, the perpetrator of the Jack the Ripper crimes, according to many authorities, disposed of with his poison capsules. He was a murder maniac, but one who had an irresistible attraction for any woman he met.

Smith, the "Brides in the Bath" murderer, mesmerized domestic servants. They could not resist him. Under his directions they would obtain situations and commit robberies. They entrusted their money and jewelry to him, made their wills in his favor, married him and loved him, only to be deserted, or, if they proved too troublesome, murdered by being drowned in a bath.

The Arch of Marcus Aurelius.

Tourists who hereafter visit Tripoli can see the arch of Marcus Aurelius, erected 1700 years ago by the emperor when Tripoli was still known by its Phoenician name, Oea, and restored by archaeological work which was continued and completed during the war. After the arch was built a medieval city grew up, century by century around it; houses pressed close to its walls, the street surface rose in front, and by the seventeenth century, when the Turks came into possession of the town, the Arch of Marcus Aurelius was so well hidden that even its site had been lost to memory. Books on Roman archaeology still mentioned it, but where it had stood remained unknown till 1909, when it was rediscovered by the American archaeologist, Richard Norton, the upper part of the arch having been converted into a moving picture theatre. In 1913 plans were made by the Italian superintendent of antiquities in Tripoli to restore the arch, and although the work was interrupted by the beginning of the war, it was presently resumed and has been brought to a conclusion. One looks down from the street level into the ancient forum of Oea, now a sunken court paved with the tiles over which Romans walked in the time of Marcus Aurelius, and sees the arch that the Proconsul Servius Cornicatus, as says the inscription sculptured on the architraves, dedicated in the second century

The Log of the Victory.

(From the Manchester Guardian.)
The log of the Victory, containing the record of the Battle of Trafalgar, made by Thomas Atkinson, master of the ship, was bought at Sotheby's recently by Sir James Buchanan for £5,000. It was announced at the sale that the buyer had generously presented it to the nation. It was the property of the late Mr. T. J. Barratt, who bought it at Sotheby's in 1911 from the descendants of Atkinson. Atkinson was wounded in the action. His description of Nelson's death is very sailor-like—"When a victory having been reported to the Right Honourable Viscount Nelson, K.E., he then died of his wounds." It is good to know that this historic document will rest with Nelson's memoranda of Trafalgar in the British Museum. The tragedy of Nelson is that his letters were not buried with him in St. Paul's Cathedral. His letters to Lady Hamilton appear and reappear in the salerooms almost as regularly as the seasons, and all their intimate exchanges, fond and foolish like the love letters of lesser people, are handled and re-handled and passed from one rich man to another to fortify the belief that the weakest and looest of us are to the same stuff as Nelson. A sensible restriction of the war would have been to put an embargo for all time on the sale of Nelson's letters.

Gallant Fishermen.

In acknowledging the freedom of Yarmouth, the great English fishing port, recently conferred upon him, Admiral Sir David Beatty paid a glowing tribute to the fishermen, who made up the bulk of the Royal Naval Reserve, which during the war did valuable work with the auxiliary patrol.
From the earliest times, Admiral Beatty said, the fishermen of Britain at peace were the defenders of Britain. During the late war those fishermen proved to be a magnificent addition to the naval personnel. Without them it would not have been possible for the Navy to achieve that rapid expansion which was necessary to deal with the outrageous submarine campaign of the enemy and the equally outrageous mining policy. "I take this opportunity to express my gratitude to those gallant fishermen who returned their fishing knowledge to good account, who fished for mines instead of fish, and kept the paths of the sea clear for the ships under my command. Their knowledge, skill, and hardihood stood the Empire in good stead, and they will have the immense satisfaction in returning to their more peaceful calling in the knowledge that they have performed a great work."—Morning Chronicle.

Circus at Camp.

SCOUT CAMP, Manuels July 23rd. To-day is the first rainy day in Camp. The tents are standing the weather well, however. Bearing in mind the Scout Rule, "A Scout smiles and whistles under all difficulties," the Campers are showing a good spirit, and no grumbling is heard.

Yesterday was the day of the great camp circus. All the Scouts on the grounds took part. The performance began at 7 in the evening with a side-show in each tent, and considerable ingenuity was displayed in contriving these attractions. In one tent, the "Beavers," was found Prof. Lanukin, the famous mannikin. This diminutive man with his feet on a barrel-top, went through quite a performance of dancing and reciting while a chorus of minstrels, "Holy Mose," the blackest negro in the world, and another "My Word" with the bandmaster in charge danced and sang around him. In another tent, the Wesley Scouts told the fortunes of patrons while a wild man with tattooed breast crouched in the darkness and struck terror to the hearts of incomers. The Otter Patrol reproduced the Willard Dempsey "Prize-fight," and also furnished a show called "Tony, the Skeleton Dog that barks." A scout, with the skeleton in his arms, grieved over the death of his favourite pet and called on him, though dead to bark, which he did in a very life-like manner. In another tent, that of the "Caribous," there was a two headed calf. In another tent, visitors were shown the camp plant. This was the tent of the Seals and Owls. In another tent, that of the Bull-Dogs, were a company of pirates, very wild and fierce-looking. In the Eagles' tent one could have shots at "Wobbles" the black Scout through a barrel.

Following the side-shows was the main performance. In the procession were an elephant, a lion and a giraffe. Two funny clowns performed all sorts of tricks and antics, and one of them went through a surgical operation, which was interrupted by the arrival of the Devil, before whom the clown acting as Doctor took to flight into the woods. Assistant Scout-master Francis acted as Ring-master, and looked quite the real thing in riding-breeches, frock coat, top hat, armed with a long whip. He introduced his wife, Mrs. Snow, and they engaged in an encounter with the gloves, the poor bandy being brutally treated by her merciless husband. There was also a chariot race, and some cock-fighting. The Wesley boys sang some choruses, and performed the Crow dance. Ham and Butt were there. The acrobats tumbled and jumped. There was a grand cavalry tournament and the performance closed with the Scout Yell, and "God Save the King" sung at full salute. Wesley, the Beavers and the Otters tied for best side-show at the circus.

Yesterday two hours were given to instructions in the Proficiency Badges. The Poultrymen's the Fireman's, and the Missioners' Badges were prepared for. So far 38 badges have been captured. To-morrow, Thursday, the Scout Tournament will take place. There will be fire-lighting, knot-tying, signalling and first aid work done. Camp closes on Saturday morning--Com.

Prospero Arrives.

The S. S. Prospero arrived from the northward yesterday afternoon. After a fairly quick trip. The Captain reports making all ports of call coming and going as far north as Quirpon. There is no drift ice on the coast, but the ship had to lie up at night owing to so many icebergs being around. The Captain also reports that the fishery north is practically a blank. There is a sign at Jacksons Arm. Captain Ford getting 40 qtz last Friday. There is a good sign at Change Island. The following passengers came by the ship:-- Messrs. Nash, Hawick, Heddington, King, Redman, Manucl, Matmond, Capt. Thomas Magford, Rice, Roberts (2), Dr. Smith, Earle, Hawkins, Chaffey, Lockyer, (2), Harnott, Tiller, Gage, Revd. Burton, Master Burton, Lodge (3), Goff, Fearn, Commander Rendell, Butler, Morris, Brown (2), Murrell, Meaney and House; Mesdames Redman, Ashbourne, Blandford, Coulton (2), Kean, Tiller, Burton, Samson, Miffles, Rendell; Misses Jardine, Coulton, Middleton, Pilliman, Looney, Oxford, Boyde Reed, Roberts, Halley, Chown, Winsor, House, Harding, Hunt, Eagan, McCarthy, Snelgrove, Bishop, Whiteshire, Rendell, Tibbs, Parker, Tobin, Ploughman, and 55 in steerage.

Methodist Educational Campaign

Contributors are notified that for their convenience it has been arranged that payment of Pledges will be received and receipts given at any Bank in the City, viz:—

- The Newfoundland Savings Bank.
- The Royal Bank of Canada.
- The Royal Bank of Canada, West.
- The Bank of Montreal.
- The Canadian Bank of Commerce.
- The Bank of Nova Scotia.

The Committee is anxious to finalize the first installment of Pledges immediately and are convinced that the assistance of the Banks will greatly facilitate all concerned. The Office of the Campaign is still located in the Board of Trade Building, Rooms 3 and 4, where payment may also be made. Motto: DO IT NOW.

Increased Dividends To Policy-holders

That is remarkable in view of the heavy burdens that have fallen upon Life Insurance Companies during the past four years. It is possible only where investments are non-speculative, the management is economical and the practice is to make full provision for emergencies such as epidemics.

The LONDON LIFE INSURANCE CO'Y,

Head Office: London, Canada, is paying profits in 1919 65 per cent. greater than the original estimates at present rates.
