FAREWELL TO DEPARTING CITIZENS

This week Watford loses two highly esteemed citizens in the persons of Mr. F. O. McIlveen, for the past seven years local manager of the Sterling Bank, and his charming and estimable wife. They left on Wednesday, the former for Montreal where he will enter upon his new banking duties and Mrs. McIlveen and children for her former home at Auburn where she will visit for a short time before settling in their new home. It was only natural that citizens as highly regarded as Mr. and Mrs. McIlveen should receive some public mark of appreciation before departing from town and this was demonstrated in several ways. The Presbyterian church choir, of This week Watford loses two high-was demonstrated in several ways.

The Presbyterian church choir, of which Mr. McIlveen has been leader for some years, together with representatives of the congregation, met at the home of Mr. J. F. Elliot on Tuesday evening and presented him with a handsome reading lamp. This gathering was followed by a well-attended meeting of representative citizens at Dr. J. McGillicuddy's office where Mr. McIlveen was presented with a well-filled purse on behalf of, the business, men of the town as a mark of his popularity as a citias a mark of his popularity as a citi as a mark of his popularity as a citizen and an appreciation of his urbanity and ability as a business man. The meeting was an exceedingly pleasant affair, short speeches, grave and humorous, being delivered by and humorous, being delivered by nearly everyone present, all expressing good will to Mr. and Mrs. McIlveen and while regretting their removal from town, wishing them prosperity and happiness in their new home. Still later in the evening, Havelock Lodge, A.F.&A.M., presented Mr. McIlveen with a Past Master's apron in acknowledgment of his enthusiasm as a Mason and the deep interest he has manifested in the welfare of the local lodge.

THE EAST LAMBTON FAIR

The management of the Fair this year are busy arranging details, and with favorable weather conditions a large attendance is anticipated. Thursday will be devoted to arranging goods in the buildings and the judging of those articles. On Friday at one o'clock the band will lead the way to the fair grounds and everything will be in full swing soon afterwards. This year there is a revised and enlarged prize list and the entries are expected to be numerous in all departments.

entries are expected to be numerous in all departments.

According to the advertising matter issued by the directors two hundred and fifty dollars will be awarded in the speeding events. A ladies race, baby show, school drills, plat Pace, Maby snow, school drills, platform entertainers, Scotch Pipers and Dancers and other fun is also promised. On Friday evening a concert will be given in the Music Hall for which some good talent is being secured. The committees in charge are ondeavoing to make the Frist this cured. The committees in charge are endeavoring to make the Fair this year better and more attractive than ever. It is hoped all concerned will get their coats off and boost for their own fair, which after all, is the most inportant of all the fall fairs to the people of Watford and district.

THE SCHOOL FAIR

School Fairs are now on in differ ent parts of the province. Watford school fair will be held next week in conjunction with the East Lambton Fair. At these school fairs there are no special attractions, but there is the one attraction which never fails to draw—the children themselves.

All summer the children themselves.
All summer the child must be interested if he is to compete. The preparation of the soil, the planting of the seed, the unfolding of the first leaf, the blossom, the formation of the vegetable or the flower. With what new interest the child regards it all when here the child regards it all when, because of the Fair, he becomes a producer. And as he folows Nature's processes intelligently year by year and learns how Moth Earth rewards the faithful toiler the child learns to love the work and to find pleasure and satisfaction

Then when the great day of the Fair comes and he places the product of his toil on display beside the exhibits of his playmates he adds many valuable lessons to those learned at the school. There may be a small the school. There may be a small money prize, but the children's Fair was intended to be educational and it still adheres to that purpose.

Standard Headstones Will

Be Used in War Cemeteries For All the Dead Heroes

 UDYARD KIPLING has rebuked the relatives of British soldiers killed in the war who have been protesting against the action of the Imperial War Graves Commission, of which Kipling is a zealous member, in deciding that the headstones in Britain's war cemeteries must be standardized, and refusing permission to individuals to erect tombstones of their choice. What he has said will be of intense interest to the thousands of Canadians whose loved dead

The subject was raised in Parliament in connection with a vote of $4,955,000 for the Imperial War Graves Commission. Winston Church-ill, War Minister, stated that Bri-tain's war cemeteries number 4,000 and that half a million tombstones must be erected.

lie in France.

"The work will occupy ten years in any event," said Mr. Churchill. "If individual choice in the matter of headstones is permitted, it will take a generation." Sir James Remnant agreed that there should be limitations with regard to the cost and size of monuments, but declared that, within these limits, the relatives were clearly entitled to say what type of headstone should be erected.

Mr. Kipling's letter was then read. It is as follows:

"We have no grave to go to. Our boy was missing at Loos. The ground is, of course, battered and ruined beyond all hope of any trace of him being recovered. I wish some people who are making this trouble would realize how more than fortunate they are to have a name on a headstone in a known cemetery.", Mr. Burdett-Coutts, also a member of the Imperial War Graves Commis-expressed his agreement "Those who act for the nation," he said, "ought not so to act that a mourning woman in cottage or tenement can say to herself, 'My man made the great sacrifice, died the same death for the same cause; why should he not have as beautiful a monument?"

Mr. Asquith made a speech in support of standardization and was followed by J. H. Thomas, the Labor leader. The latter told of a visit to a battlefield cemetery where he saw the grave of an unidentified British soldier between those of Raymond Asquith, eldest son of the ex-Premier, and young Tenner, the proof. and young Tennant, the poet. He plucked a leaf from the grave and after he had mentioned the episode at a public meeting he received a letter from a blind woman in Leicester who said she believed that this grave was that of her son. Thomas had, he added, the melancholy pleasure of sending her the leaf, and an assur-ance concerning the position of the

Amid these remote fastnesses, far from human habitation, will rest side by side for all time the two "Makers of South Africa," the twin graves marked by a huge pillar of unchiselled native grante chosen by Rhodes during his life-time.

Similar hill-top interments are not altogether uncommon. Robert Louis

Probably the loftiest grave in the world is that wherein reposes the body of Wilson Everitt, the famous mountaineer, who on his death expressed a wish to be buried as near as possible to the summit of Orizaba, the loft's Andean peak which he had the lofty Andean peak which he had been the first to scale. Prior to the introduction of machinery, "hackling" was a process carried out by hand, the "hackle" being an instrument consisting of a wooden base, into which a large number of steel pins were fixed at short distances from each other, projecting about four inches through the wooden base, somewhat after the style of a hairbrush.

The "hackler," or "heckler," held the flax material firmly by the hand, drawing it the requisite number of through the hackle pins, times through the hackle pins, thereby straightening and splitting the fibre and at the same time removing the loose fibre, which is called "tow." Nowadays this process is done by machinery, but the political application of the word is "heckler" very soon finds out what a candidate is made of, and that, too, often in a much more rough-and-ready fashion than efiquette allows. in a much more rough-an fashion than etiquette allows.

Airmen Knighted.

The following is a list of the avia-tors who were knighted by King George for accomplishing trans-atlantic or other long distance atlantic or other long distance flights to or from the British Isles: Capt. John Alcock and Lieut. Arthur Whitten Brown (K.B.E.), for first transatlantic non-stop flight, first transatlantic non-stop flight, Newfoundland to Ireland, June 14-15,

Sidelights on Borden

IR ROBERT BORDEN, who has just retired from the Premiership of Canada, has been accused of slowness in making decisions. Political enemics have gibed at him at times as "Robert the Unready." A story which he tell: himself would seem to indicate that he realizes a certain ponderousnes in his mental make-up. Once as boys he and his brother, Hal, were in bath-he and his brother, Hat, were in bathing. Robert got into difficulties in the water. As he declares himself, "after going down the second line I decided I had better remove my coat." If he had not taken on his coat the recent history of Canada might have had to be rewritten.

The Prime Minister is looked on as wealthy, but he is generally credited with being careful in money matters. He invited a newspaperman to dine with him at the Rideau Club in Ottawa fust after the Conservative defeat of 1996. Several Conservatives were at nearby tables celebrating their defeat. Champagne was flowing at hand and the newspaperman was thirsty. He wondered if he was not going to be asked if he would like a little wine, but Borden gave no sign. When the desert arrived the scribe had abandoned hope, it revived though when his host leaned over scribe had abandoned hope. It revived though when his host leaned over very confidentially and began in his low deep voice—"They make excellent deep apple pie here."

Sir Robert Borden was never seen to read a newspaper. In the House he would sit for the most part of recent years apparently wrapped in thought even when his colleagues all round were rustling through the thought even when his colleagues and round were rustling through the news of the day. The day after he was howled down in Kitchener during the 1917 election campaign he told the 1917 election campaign he told a newspaperman that he never reads a newspaper.

Another characteristic of his was his habit of hitching an invisible lawyers' gown when making a speech. This habit has persisted to the present day as has his other of fapping his eyeglasses on his hand. His speeches were very simple and very logical and generally effective—his speech at the opening of the first war session was very fine—but of recent years he developed a bad habit of reading documents and often dull documents to the House. Many a lively debate has received its quietus when the Premier got busy.

lively debate has received its quietus when the Premier got busy.

Sir Robert Borden never carried his goods in the show window. He is for example one of the finest German scholars in Canada but never proclaimed it. In 1907, when touring the West he spoke at Humboldt, Sask. The greeting of the schoolmaster there ended with a few lines from Schiller. Sir Robert began where he left off and ended

He is a wide reader and very closely acquainted with classical literature, yet he has seldom been known to make a quotation in his speeches. this regard he is like Parnell, who was said to read little. After his death his books, however, were found death his books, however, were found with many marks and notes. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is said to have been not nearly so widely read as Sir Robert Borden, and yet he seldom spoke without bringing in some apt quotation, frequently from the Bible. Sir Robert has been always rather stiff and wooden to his own followers. Whether it was due to short sight or absent-mindedness he often passed them without recognition. But they had a good deal of affection for him. In the earlier years of his leadership there was always a certain amount of jockeying to get him out. In 1911 just after the ways a certain amount of jockeying to get him out. In 1911 just after the election campaign had opened, a Conservative caucus went in favor of exchanging him for either the late Sir Richard McBride or Hon. Robert Rogers. Borden behaved with wile. He invited them all to a banquet. Rogers proved himself the poor speaker he always has been. McBride was off color. Borden made one of the best speeches of his life. The boom exploded and the last real insurrection against his leadership died in infancy.

Although thus lacking in the quality of being approachable Borden was always easily accessible both to followers and newspapermen. It was perhaps one of his faults that he gave up too much time and attention to detail. He signed hundreds of letters which might just as easily have been attended to by a secretary. A curious thing about him was that his intimate friends were never intellectual men. Some were inclined to call them rather stodgy fellows. There is no need to mention their names. names.

The Brooke Women's Institute met last Friday afternoon for its September meeting at the home of Miss Mary Harrison, where twenty-five ladies were present. The day was ideal for an out-door gathering. Roll call was answered by "What a Woman Can Do." After the business session was completed a varied and profitable program was given, including an essay, "Our Fall Fair and Why We Should Exhibit" by Miss M. Fisher, a solo by Miss Daisy Whitehouse and a paper by Miss B. Hair on "The Possibilities for Institute Work Among Our Girls." A dainty lunes was then served by the hostess at small tables nicely decorated and arranged on the lawn. THE PERFECT HOUSEKEEPER

By JANE OSBORN

(6), 1939, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) Three times within the two blocks that Doctor Andover had walked down College street from his house had he greeted with the smiling congratulations of some neighbor or other. If he had not already been sure of his blessing in having secured the services of Mrs. Hildegarde Taylor as housekeeper he could not but have been after these felicitations.

"She is such a perfect housekeeper Professor Ogden's wife had cooed. "Up to the day he died old Mr. Morgan had her tea biscuits every day of his life. He couldn't get along without them-and such ples!"

"Yes, indeed," agreed Doctor Andover, somewhat embarrassed but duly grateful to providence for having showered such abundant blessings on his shoulders.

"And she's so economical, too," Mrs. Partridge had said after offering the young bachelor president of the college her felicitations over the advent of Mrs. Taylor in his home. cause for your complaining now over the high cost of living."

"No, indeed," smiled Doctor Andover and, as he neared the corner where dwelt old Doctor Forbes, dean of his faculty, the fragrance of juicy beefsteak broiling in the Forbes kitchen came to him. He had had supper that night from tea biscuits, tea, sardines in jelly and prune whip. That as nearly as he could remember was all there had been to it.

Helen Forbes, not extraordinarily young or extraordinarily slender, but radiant and magnetic, only daughter and housewife for Doctor Forbes, opened the door for the young professor. The rest of the college town had got used to Helen. Of course, she was quite a beauty-but, then, she was only Helen Forbes.

Nice girl, too, and a few years before freshmen every year had gone quite silly over her; but she was a little too old for students now. But Doctor Andover had not quite got used to the radiance of her, and there were times when he would have more eager-ly gone to spend an evening with old Doctor Forbes in discussing college plans and policies had it not been for Helen. She was a little disturbing. She didn't quite seem to belong to the little old college town.

On this occasion, however, it was necessary that he consult with Doctor Forbes. The tempting aroma of beefsteak grew even more tempting as Helen Forbes opened the door for him.

An apron protected her light summer frock, and she led Doctor Andover rather breezily into the dining room. "We are having dinner late," she said. "Dad's been working on examination books and didn't want to be disturbed until seven. Now, it's planked steak supper. Dad's so fond of it. You don't mind coming right-out, do you? And perhaps we can tempt you to have some."

Doctor Fonbes had appeared and Helen had disappeared, to return presently with the plank on which was laid the smoking steak with the tempting border of mashed potatoes and various vegetables.

"We must congratulate you," said Helen, as she laid the plank on the rather informally set table. "I don't suppose anyone can tempt you to meals, now that you have got the wonderful Mrs. Taylor. You certain-ly were lucky in these days, to get a perfect housekeeper like that. And you know she was with old Mr. Mergan twenty years-stayed till he died -and she was saying today that she expected to do the same for you." "Why, that's very kind, I'm sure."

It was then that there loomed before Doctor Andover an image of Mrs. Hildegarde Taylor, with her thin-lipped and rather acrid smile, as she sat behind the coffee things at breakfast and the tea things at supper, for she was one of those housekeepers who never fail to take their places at meals with their employers.

She had sat like that before Mr. Morgan twenty years, and then he had died. How would it be to see that face for twenty years? Her coffee was clear and doubtless good, but she was sparing of the coffee, and she regarded cream as an extravagance.

Doctor Andover was wendering whether he would have to drink coffee every morning for twenty years, just like that, or whether he would have courage to ask to have it stronger-and with cream.

"She really is wonderful," Helen Ferbes was going on. "I only wish I could manage the way she does. I don't suppose you could be tempted to take a little of this planked steak?" She had put quite a gererous piece on the warmed plate and the names it

"But, daughter," suggested Doctor Forbes, kindly. "If Doctor Andover has had dinner, it will only be doing him an unkindness in forcing more upon him."

But Doctor Andover mumbled some thing about "rather light supper," and for the next few minutes joined the Forbes household in the delectable task of eating a perfectly broiled planked steak.

After that, though it was sometimes a little difficult for Doctor Andover to walk right up to the front door of the Forbes house when he knew he would he met there by the disconcerting Belen Forbes, it was even more difficult to stay away. Sometimes he would definitely decide not to call. His own evening repast was early and this seemed to add to the desirability of a short after-dinner walk down Col lege street.

But despite his decision not to stop at the Forbes house, he would stop. Sometimes he was tempted even further by the tantalizing aroma of dinner, huckleberry pie or roasted lamb or fresh aromatic coffee. Mrs. Taylor's coffee could never be smelled that way when it cooked. Doctor Andover remembered that she had once told him that the way she made it she kept all the flavor in the coffee pot and that was what made it taste so

It was the test of good coffee, she said, not having the smell of it escape from the pot. But Helen Forbes' coffee always smelled all the way round to the front of the house, and to Doctor Andover it was perfection in the

So it happened that quite often, without exactly intending to do so, the young college president shared some of the good things that Helen had prepared for her father's dinner and al-ways when he did there was the evidence of the greatest pleasure on the part of the hospitable old professor. who, though he may have worn his coats until they were shabby, certainly did not curtail himself on the good things of the table.

"Of course, though," said Helen once when Doctor Andover had come out with an enthusiastic bit of praise of her cookery, "if I were a perfect housekeeper like your Mrs. Taylor I could set a better table on much less money. She must be quite remarkable. Why, just today she was telling us at the missionary society that she can make a pound of coffee go two weeks and the meat bills aren't $3 a week. Of course, she said she couldn't manage that way unless she felt a real interest in you. You really were mighty lucky to get her. Really, it was quite amusing.

"Professor Partridge's wife told Mrs. Taylor that if you never married it would be her fault, and then Mrs. Taylor said that at any rate you'd never marry for a good home and a good housekeeper. I thought that was so sweet of her—"

"Yes. I am sure it. joined Doctor Andover. He recalled then that he had fried cornmeal for supper, although he had begged the perfect housekeeper to omit commeal for a few weeks. He had never liked it anyway, he said, but he didn't say what he felt, that he had been corn-mealed to death since her arrival. Of course it was because of the economy in using cornmeal that she persisted, and Doctor Andover did eat it because he had a healthy young appetite and he had to eat something.

"But, then," continued Doctor An-"a man doesn't marry for a home or for a good cook. If the wom-an he loves happens to be a good housekeeper and all that sort of thing it is just an added blessing, I sup-

Dector Andover was preoccupied after that. He tried to discuss the new system of student grading with Dean Forbes, but his thoughts did not seem to collect. At a quarter to nine he rose to leave. Nine was the dean's habitual bedtime.

He bade the dean good night rather hurriedly, and then as he turned to Helen he looked very intently at her, so intently that the radiant Helen dropped her eyes. "I'm coming back at half past nine. See me alone on the veranda."

It was a rather chilly spring night to be philandering on verandas, but there was a soft, radiant moon and Helen had swathed herself in a soft weelen scarf and was waiting when Doctor Andover returned.

"I want to talk to you down here in the garden," he said, ascending only one step of the veranda, and Helen slowly went down to meet him.

"It's about marrying you that I want to talk, Helen," he said when they had reached the dark shelter of an eld had reached the dark shelter of an eld lilac hedge. "You have always been the kind of woman Ed want—a real weman, magnificent and radiant and beautiful. It's the kind of woman I've always dreamed about. But, hang it all, I don't want you to think I'm asking you because you are such a won-derful cook and housekeener. I'd has marry a woman for a housekeeper. You know it is you, Helen, that I want? I've feared there wasn't chance you'd have me." It's funny how gossip goes in a little college town like that. A week later when Helen and Doctor Andover's engagement was announced there wasn't a professor's wife in town but had known it for weeks. Helen, they said, had always been setting her cap for the new president For a time they said it seemed as if he might have preferred Mrs. Hildegarde Taylor, in spite of the slight difference in age. And it was such a pity he didn't, for Mrs. Taylor was such a good cook-such a perfect housekeeper.

Not His.

One day as I was out in the back yard I noticed my neighbor's washing anging so low on the line that it was dragging on the muddy ground be neath. Just as I was debating whether should go and tell the laundress or telephone her the man of the house came out of the back door and hurried through the yard. As he reached the gate I called to him: "Hey, your clothes are dragging in the mud!" He started, blushed a rosy red, glanced down toward his feet, and then blurted "Wh-wh-what do you mean?" -Exchange.

KORESHANS.

Strange Religious Cult Found In London, Ontario.

Of course, you say, everybody knows the earth moves around the sun. Don't be too sure of that. London, Ontario, has long been rated as the home of more unusual religious cults than any other community in America with the possible exception of San Diego, Cal., or Boston, Mass., but only recently the strangest of them all appeared here, namely the Koreshans.

Now the remarkable thing about

Koreshanity, as it is called, is its peculiar doctrine of cosmogony which teaches that the sun, instead of moving around the earth as the ancients believed, or that the earth moves around the sun as most moderns believe according to the conception of the universe framed by Galileo and Copernicus, is in reality the centre of a great, hollow sphere, that this hollow sphere is the earth and that the mountains, oceans, trees, forests, louses, cities, all the landmarks of the old world, are on the inside of the earth instead of on the outside. Only a little group of Koreshans has appeared in Ontario, but in view of their strikingly unusual ideas of cosmogony, a very few of them are creating no end of interest by the propagation of their doctrines. Most of them are recent converts and as soon as they become more thoroughly immersed in their new faith, they will, in all probability, leave for sunny Florida, where at Estero, in Lee County, is already gathered the nucleus of the citizenship of a new Holy City they propose to build. For a time a colony existed at Englewood as appeared in Ontario but in view a time a colony existed at Englewood in Chicago, where the Koreshan faith first attracted attention, as far back as 1886, when street meetings were held and literature extensively distributed. But in 1903 the Chicago Koreshans removed to Estero, and an edict went forth that no more permanent colonies were to be established elsewhere than at Estero, which place had finally been selected by the leaders as the one location for the city of the Messiah. The Estero colony was founded in 1894 ony was founded in 1894.

Dr. Tyrus R. Teed, born in Utica, N.Y., in 1839, was the founder of the new faith, and the name Koresh, which is Hebrew for Cyrus, was adopted by him as his title as the Messiah of the new cult. According to the Koreshan interpretation of a scriptural passage in the 45th chapter of Isaiah, "Cyrus" is referred to as the Messiah." To his followers, Dr. Teed came to be known as Koresh, the new incarnation of the Messiah." siah.

The divine mission of the Koreshan movement is the building of "the Church Archtriumphant." The Koreshans believe that "the Bible is a column erected to the memory of transcendental literary genius." It is "the product of the Word of God; the Word of God is its genius; the Word of God is its Author."

Communism is held to be "the very foundation of the social life of the followers of the Lord," and the colony at Estero, Florida, is conducted on a communistic basis of wealth and labor.

RAPE AS FIRAGE CROP

IT MAKES IDEAL PASTURES FOR SHEEP.

Nothing Equals This Food for Ewes and Lambs During Nursing Period-It May Bo Sown at Successive Intervals During the Year and Always Proves a Quick

Rape is the ideal forage crop for sheep. It not only lends itself admirably to intensive systems of sheep farming but it yields more and better green food to the acre and at less expense than any other crop in the long list of succulent summer foods. It tides the flock over the dry, hot season, when grasses are dead and fields brown, and it continues to grow and furnish luxuriant grazing late in the fall. It is extremely feasible to sow rape for fall pasturage and turn the flock on to the succellent plots when the common succulent plots when the common pastures are exhausted or destroyed by early frosts. Nothing equals it for the ewes and lambs during the for the ewes and lambs during the nursing periods, and for weaning lambs it is incomparable, carrying them from mother-milk to self-sustaining lambhood with scarcely a sign of shrinkage. Rape is unexcelled as an autumn food for starting muiton sheep and lambs on the profitable road to full grain feeding.

The feeding value of the rape cannot be too highly exploited; it is not a feed of week or month, but may be sown at successive intervals so as to provide continuous pasturage from early June until bleak December. One acre of rape feed in con-from early June until bleak December. One acre of rape feed in connection with a limited grain ration will produce as many pounds of mutton as two thousand five hundred pounds of corn and oil meal. Growing lambs and breeding ewes make greater gains in live weight on less appropriate grain feed when passing the property of grain feed when passing the greater gains feed when passing feed in connection with the product of the passing feed in connection with the passing feed in connection with a limited grain feed in connection with a limited grain ration will be produced the passing feed in connection with a limited grain ration will produce as many pounds of mutton as the passing feed in connection with a limited grain ration will produce as many pounds of mutton as the passing feed in connection will produce as many pounds of mutton as the passing feed in the passing feed in the passing feed when passing feed in the pas supplemental grain feed when pas-tured on rape than similar lambs and ewes on clover pasture.

A field of rape and sufficient portable fencing to provide the flock with fresh grazing as the occasion demands will be of great value in maintaining the breeding ewes and conditioning the lambs into that desired quality and excellent condition so important on the market. The portable fences permit of frequently changing the ewes and lambs that are being conditioned to new that are being conditioned to new areas of the rape fields as soon as the crop is consumed. When first turned in upon a field of rape sheep and lambs should become gradually accustomed to the change and allowed to have continued access to it unless in time of storms, and, when once removed, care must be taken not to put them back upon it when hungry. If the sheep get a moderate amount of grain feed in the morning before they are turned on the rape field the danger of bloat and digestive derangements is to some extent lessened. Access to salt and to other kinds of pasture crops is desirable when the flock is pastured on rape. Two kinds of rape seed are upon the market; one is the summer; the other the winter annual, ls not suitable for grazing, being grown commercially on a small scale as a food for birds. One should insist that Dwarf Essex seed be sup-plied. The usual cost of rape seed plied. The usual cost of rape seed is about eight cents per pound. As a rule, three or four pounds of Dwarf Essex seed per acre, sown in rows twenty-eight inches apart will give the best results. Rape thrives best on a rich, fertile soil and better yields always result on land that is wall manused and fertilized and given well manured and fertilized and given thorough preparation before the crop is sown. If planted in rows and cultivated it will produce a maximum growth of forage.

Rape is a quick, rank grower. If the moisture conditions are favorable. for the seed to germinate quickly the field will be fit for grazing in seven weeks after sowing. Soils having a told, wet subsoil are unsuitable for ape. I find that the crop does best on an easy-working clay loam, well under-drained and rolling enough to prevent standing water in ease of the contract prevent standing water in case of excessive rainfall. Land intended for rape production should be ploughed early and thoroughly prepared before seeding. Newly ploughed land never grows good rape, as the moisture eva-porates too rapidly and the growth, and development of the plants are checked.

Rape can be very successfully grown if sown at the last cultivation of the corn crop. We have seeded one or two acres of rape with corn one or two acres of rape with corn for several years and find that a large crop of forage can be secured in this manner without additional preparation of the soil. Where the corn crop is removed and put in the silo the land is soon ready for pasturing. When the rape plant is about twelve inches high it is ready to turn on to, and if not grazed too closely it will continue to produce forage until frozen down late in the fall.

Rape is an efficient weed destroyer. Where one desires to check the

the same year. Ordinary frosts and the same year. Ordinary frosts and cold snaps will not interfere with the edibility of rape. The sheep may route to pasture a until cold weather comes, sometimes as late as December. To prevent a waste of forage, plans should be made to stock the forage pastures sufficiently to utilize all of the forage possible before weather conditions prevent the flock from remaining outside.

Many corn belt farmers find it possible to fatten sheep and lambs on rape sown in corn fields at the last cultivation. A few years ago I visited a farm on which the owner sowed Dwarf Essex rape on a twenty-acre corn field and turned in a band of ewes that had passed their maternity owes that had passed their maternity isefulness. These ewes made good ains in weight with very little grain eed and returned a fine profit.

DANGER OF WASTE LANDS.

Jultivation Great Aid In Destruction

of Grasshoppers. More than the usual number of complaints of injuries from grass-hoppers have been received this year, says L. Caesar, Provincial Entomologist. In every case investigated, the insects have bred in waste lands or insects have bred in waste lands or old pastures and from these breeding places spread to cultivated fields. This, of course, suggests one of the best methods of prevention—cultivation of waste lands. It has been found that if the eggs are buried five inches beneath the soil, the young grasshoppers from these cannot reach the surface and therefore must perish; hence, as eggs are laid in late summer and autumn. Ploughing in summer and autumn,, ploughing in October or early spring destroys countless numbers of the insects.

Wherever these steps have not been taken or are impracticable and the grasshoppers are present in suffi-cient numbers to cause much loss, they can be successfully combatted without much expense or labor by the use of the "Poison Bran Bait," as follows:

Formula—Bran, 20 lbs.; Paris Green, ½ to 1 lb.; molasses, 2 quarts; oranges or lemons, 2 or 3 fruits; water, 2 gallons. Mix the bran and Paris green dry in a tub or large receptacle or even on a cement floor, squeeze the juice of the lemons or oranges into the water and run the rind and pulp through a meat-chopper and add these also. Pour the molasses into the liquid and mix well. Then gradually add the sweetened water to the ually add the sweetened water to the bran and Paris green, stirring thor-oughly at the same time. Continue the stirring until all the bran is moist the stirring until all the bran is moist and will fall through the fingers like sawdust. This work, to save time, should be done the day before treating the fields. Then in the morning early, between 5 and 6 o'clock, scatter the mixture very thinly around the borders of the crop to be protected, and also wherever the grass-hoppers are present, treating all infested surroundings for about twenty fested surroundings for about twenty rods back to prevent the grasshoppers coming from waste lands. Do not ap-ply during rain and if showers follow an hour or two after the treat-ment, repeat the next morning. Us-ually, under favorable conditions, one treatment is sufficient, but sometimes a second or even a third application is necessary. As 5 lbs. of the poison-ed bran is sufficient for one acre, the mixture should be applied very thin-ly after the manner of sowing grass seed—a single handful covering many square yards. The grasshoppers move about and thus readily find the substance. They are also attracted to it from a considerable dis-

Do not look for results until about two days after the work has been done. There is no danger to cattle or sheep when the bran is applied as directed, but poultry should not be allowed in the field for a day or where bran cannot be obtained, fair results may be secured by using the following substitute:

Sawdust, 20 lbs.: Paris green, ½ to 1 lb.; salt, ½ lb.; water, 2 gals. The sawdust and Paris green are mixed dry, the salt dissolved in the water and the liquid then added to the poisoned sawdust which should the poisoned sawdust, which should be carefully mixed until all is wet. It should then be allowed to stand over night and applied just like the bran, early the next morning. Sawdust will not cover quite so much ground as the roisoned bran, the above amount being sufficient in our experience for not more than about 3 acres, where-as the bran will suffice for four acres.

Lime and Fertilizers.

Prof. H. O. Buckman, of the Soils Technology Department, Cornell University, at the recent Soil Fertility Conference held at the O. A. C., pointed out how the continuous use of sulphate of ammonia tended to de-plete the lime, but where lime was supplied in sufficient abundance this form of ammonia-carrier became very important. The general impression is that acid phosphate leaves the soil acid. However, this is far from correet; indeed, general experience points to the fact that acid phos-phate tends to leave the soil neutral or alkaline. The term acid phosphate or alkaline. The term acid phosphate is a misnomer and gives one absolutely the wrong idea.

There is great need for further advocacy of higher grade fertilizers. Fertilizers well used will cause changes to take place in the soil, but these changes should be for the better and not for the worse. "My conclusion is that rational fertilizing donsists in the adjustment of the composition and the amount of fertilizer to soil and crop in such a way that you should get paying results from your investment, and at the from your investment, and at the rats summary means a number of things—utilizing all farm manure, crop residue, green manure, the addition of lime and the rational use of well-prepared, well-balanced fertilizers to supplement the plant food of the soil."

A Few Words For the Silo.

Twice as much feed can be saved from an acre by using a silo as by cutting or shocking the corn and cutting or shocking the corn and feeding it dry.

The silage-fed steer makes twice as cheap gains as the one fed on dry roughage.

A feed that owners of show cattle are not afraid to use in conditioning their stock for the show ring is not a feed that any stock raiser need be afraid to make big use of; ensilage is

The stave silo, if well constructed, is a good silo, and a good silo is worth a coat of paint and a roof. Dairy farming without a silo means cheating the fields and the cattle.

To Stop Hogs Rooting.

Just as good as a ring in the nose for keeping hogs from rooting is a regular feed supply of a mixture of charcoal, sulphate of iron, sulphur, glauber, salts, sal soda, rock phosphate, limeston, and slack coal, according to a hog raiser who pas-tures his swine entirely an alfalfa.

WALSH-GUERNS

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemized at Our Lady of Mercy Church, Sarnia, on Tuesday morning at eight o'clock, when Madeline Mary eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Guerns, was united in marriage to Mr. Albert B. Walsh, of Detroit. The bride entered the church on the arm of her father and looked charming in an ivory satin dress with cream overlace and large picture hat and carried a shower boquet of Ophelia roses and was attended by her sister, Miss Kathleen Guerns, who looked dainty in an ivory satin dress with blue georgette trimmings and a large picture hat, and carried a boquet of dainty in an ivory satin dress with blue georgette trimmings and a large picture hat, and carried a boquet of sweet peas. The groom was supported by Mr. Oliver Galineau.

The wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, 290 N. Mitton st. after which Mr. and Mrs. Walsh left on the 1.30 train for Niagara Falls, St. Thomas and London, the bride traveling in a dark brown broadcloth suit and hat to match. On their return they will reside at Grosse Point, Detroit.

The presents were numerous and costly, testifying the esteem in which the young couple are held.

The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. Howe and daughter, Irene, of St. Thomas; Miss Margaret Hoffner and brother, Bernard, of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Percy Nicholson, Mr. and Mrs. A. Guerns and Mr. M. J. McCormick, of Watford; Mr. and Mrs. Galineau and daughter, Cecilia, and Mr. Frank DeMars, of Chatham.
