"ADVANCE" OTTAWA LETTER.
Particulars of the Crisis at the Dominion Capital.
OTTAWA, 8th January 1896.—The most startling crisis ever known in Canadian politics was sprung upon Sir Mackenzie Bowell on Saturday last when seven of his Ministers resigned in their resignations, and the Government has since then been in a semi-paralyzed condition, it being almost impossible to say from hour to hour whether Sir Mackenzie would be able to reconstruct his Ministry.

At first it was not thought possible that Sir Mackenzie would withstand the shock and it was considered that the Government would fall, but instead of killing him the blow seems to have put more life into the Old Man and has given him so much renewed strength that it is now believed that with the assistance of Sir Charles Tupper, he will not only be able to pull through but that he may strengthen his Cabinet and get it into a more united condition than it has been since the death of Sir John Thompson. Of course, the "Old Man," as he is familiarly called, may, after all his efforts, find that he is unable to fill up the vacancies in his Cabinet and be forced to resign and allow His Excellency to call in another adviser, who may be Sir Charles Tupper, or Mr. Laurier, or anyone else his Excellency pleases, to form a new Ministry; but, after the weak and inadequate statement made in the House yesterday by Mr. Foster giving the reason (or, perhaps, it would be safer to say "alleged" reason) for the resignation of him and his colleagues it looks as if Sir Mackenzie really has a good fighting chance of pulling through.

HOW IT CAME ABOUT.
The excitement caused by the publication in the "Toronto Globe" and "Ottawa Citizen" on Saturday of the charges that Dr. Montague had been guilty of writing anonymous letters charging his colleague, Sir Adolphe Caron, with receiving $25,000 in connection with the granting of a charter to a railway company (as stated in my letter of Saturday last) had scarcely begun to subside when political circles were startled on Saturday evening by the rumor that seven of Sir Mackenzie's ministers had handed in their resignations to the Premier and that the Bowell Ministry was "burst." The rumor proved true and in admitting its correctness Sir Mackenzie added that the resignations had been accepted by the Ministers who resigned are:

HON. G. E. FOSTER, Minister of Finance.
HON. JOHN HAGGART, Minister of Railways and Canals.
HON. W. B. MONTAGUE, Minister of Agriculture.
HON. A. R. DICKEY, Minister of Militia.
HON. W. B. IVES, Minister of Trade and Commerce.
HON. JOHN F. WOOD, Controller of Sir O. H. TUPPER, Minister of Justice.

The way the resignations came about is this: On Friday a small caucus, mostly composed of Ontario members opposed to Remedial Legislation on the Manitoba School case, was held in the office of Hon. Dr. Montague, when it was decided that Sir Mackenzie Bowell was not able to control and lead the party and that he should be asked to resign and Sir Charles Tupper, Sr., be called on to form a Ministry. Hon. John Haggart and Hon. Dr. Montague were appointed to call on the Premier and convey to him the decision of this private caucus had arrived at.

THE PREMIER REFUSES.
They did so, and it is said that a somewhat stormy scene ensued in the course of which the Premier accused both of his colleagues with acting treacherously towards him, and also said to Dr. Montague that had proof in his desk that he (Montague) had written anonymous letters charging one of his colleagues (Sir Adolphe Caron) with having accepted a bribe, this was indignantly denied by Dr. Montague, and the interview ended with Sir Mackenzie Bowell declaring that he would not resign at the dictation of a small clique, but that, on the contrary, he would be prepared to receive the resignations of any of his colleagues who felt that they could not support him. On Saturday morning the charges against Dr. Montague was printed in the World and Citizen, as already stated, and this seems to have decided Dr. Montague and six of his colleagues to resign in a body, and thus endeavor to force the Premier out by leaving him with only half a Cabinet on the eve of meeting the House, after its adjournment on Thursday. It simply meant an effort to paralyze the Government and force a dissolution, so that these members of the Government and the party who were opposed to Remedial Legislation, to which the Government is pledged, may be spared the disagreeable necessity of either supporting the remedial bill or of voting against the Government. Very bitter accusations of "treachery," "knifing," etc., etc., have been made against the dissident Ministers; but I prefer to take their own reasons for resigning, as given by Hon. Mr. Foster in the House yesterday. I confess that these reasons do not seem to me to be sufficient, and I read very much as if they concealed an antagonism to at least a portion of the policy adopted by Sir Mackenzie Bowell—that is Remedial Legislation—but as it is only fair to the ex-Ministers' should be heard in their own defence I give their reasons as ready by Mr. Foster.

WHY THEY RESIGNED.
Hon. Mr. Foster then read the following statement:
"There is no disagreement between myself and the Premier upon any question of public policy, trade, or constitutional, with regard to which action has been already taken, or in respect to which an attitude has been assumed by the Government under the present Premier."
"We retain our firm belief in the principles and policy of the Liberal-Conservative party with which we are in entire accord and of which we are common with others who will remain exponents in so far as our ability admits."
"We have lost none of our confidence in the sound and healthy condition of the Liberal-Conservative party in Canada, or our belief that it embodies a policy which the majority of the electorate considers essential to the continued welfare and progress of the country or our faith that under firm and prudent leadership it will come back triumphant from the polls."
"Though with many misgivings we finally agreed to enter the government under Mr. Bowell in possession of Sir John Thompson, we have nevertheless unitedly and loyally striven to the best of our ability to make it strong and efficient, and it has been with growing regret that we have seen our efforts result in a majority of success, less than that for which we had hoped and striven."
"We are of the opinion that the Liberal-Conservative party ought to be represented by the strongest Government possible to be secured from its ranks, that the necessity therefore was never greater than under existing circumstances, and we believe that such a government can be formed without delay."
"This we have repeatedly urged upon the Premier, with the result that we found ourselves face to face with Parliament, having a Government with its members incomplete, and with no assurance that the present Premier could satisfactorily complete it."
"Under the circumstances we thought it our duty to retire, and in this manner to pave the way, if possible, for the formation of a government whose Premier could command the confidence of all his colleagues, could satisfy the Liberal-Conservative party that its strong elements were at its head, and impress the country that it had a government which was united and had power to govern."
"We affirm with the utmost sincerity that the action we have taken sprung from no feeling of personal dislike or personal ambition, but has been solely dictated by our own wish to sink all minor considerations in the presence of our great desire that the best interests of our party and country should be duly conserved."
HOUSE AND SENATE.
Of course, it was impossible for the Ministry as left by the seceders to go on with the business of the session; and, therefore, when the House met yesterday to commence the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the Throne, Sir Adolphe Caron, as leader of the Government, read a statement to the effect that the Parliament had met last week seven members had tendered their resignations to the Prime Minister, and they had been submitted to His Excellency, and had been accepted. He hoped that at the next meeting of the House he would be able to make a statement as to the course the Government proposed. It was the gravity of the situation he would ask for an adjournment for two weeks. I do not think this very likely, however, as now that Parliament has met both sides of the House are interested in making the session last over thirty days so that they may draw their whole indemnity of $1000 instead of $100 per day, for the few days the House has been in session, which is all they will be entitled to if Parliament is prorogued inside of motion and it then opens. In the thirty days after it opens, the Senate Sir Mackenzie Bowell made the statement read by Sir Adolphe Caron in the House and added a few remarks which were rather a severe reflection on Mr. Foster and the other gentlemen who resigned, and was followed by Hon. R. W. Scott, leader of the Opposition who was even more severe in his remarks. The Senate then adjourned until to-night.

A CONSTITUTIONAL POINT.
Among the many subjects of conversation in the lobbies yesterday and one which was discussed by several members was on the point as to whether the resignation of so large a proportion of the Cabinet did not of itself effect a dissolution of Sir Mackenzie Bowell's Ministry. It was pointed out that there was a precedent in the case of the government of Sir

CURED BY TAKING AYER'S Sarsaparilla.
"I was afflicted for eight years with Salt Rheum. During that time I tried all the best medicines which were highly recommended, but they gave me no relief. I was at last advised to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and before I had finished the fourth bottle, my hands were as free from eruptions as ever they were. My business, which is that of a candle-maker, requires me to be out in cold and wet weather, often without gloves, but the trouble has never returned."—THOMAS A. JONES, Bradford, Ont.

GRANDMOTHER'S BIRTHDAY.

"I say, grandma," piped a plaintive voice, as its owner entered. "It's pretty rough on a fellow, don't you think so, when he can't find his mother once a week? I wish she were here now."

and how, on another occasion, the starving family had rebelled under the absent-minded Marion's regime, she concluded it would be wise to accept grandmother's offer. "And the birthday," said Willie, anxiously, the day after Mr. and Mrs. Bethel left, looking into grandmother's eyes, which alone showed the hurt her heart felt, for Marion and Evelyn had just received invitations to join a country friend's Thanksgiving house-party, and seeing their eagerness, grandmother had them go.

"You and I, Willie," she began, then turned her face away to hide the tears that fell on her wrinkled face. "It is not," she thought, "that I will have them come unwelcomingly to realize what I am now, and then to remember what I was before the world left me behind. Is it the people cannot learn to step aside gracefully, or that—?" But she was too loyal to her children to finish the thought. "So old, so alone of my generation—nay, there are some few left. Can it be they are so lonely? Do they feel as left out of the life of to-day?" and grandmother mused on.

"I will do it," she said, rising suddenly and walking to the desk. "Do what, grandma?" asked Willie. "There is the Governor, and old Col. Haskins and Elish Galleher still writing poetry at 79, they tell me. And there is Hattie Ann Vanderkirk and Rosanna Pringle and I might ask Mrs. Metcalf, the old Judge's widow. And yes, there is Sallie Briscoe. Who would have thought handsome, witty, courted Sallie would be spending her days in the Old Ladies' Home? Yes, yes, it will be like old times, indeed, to have Sallie—"

"Had her where, grandma?" "You shall have a glimpse of the old-time life and manners, you shall see how grandmother was one regarded. It will all come—once for the sake of old times, they will all come, and I have to go by to send for Celia; she has cooked many a supper for me in years gone by, and I dare say, she is too old to prepare one more. It shall be like the old times, the table shall be groined—and I have two of Albert's checks untouched, and my own China and silver for the table. Hand us my pen, Willie, it has rolled under the chair. They come, I know they will all come."

And come they did, every one! Grandmother, in black silk, with the daintiest of her caps upon her snowy fluffs of hair, and a pink flush on her faded cheeks, received them with the dignity born of her old-fashioned ideas of propriety. With her staidest bow she welcomed the Judge's widow, whose handsome dress was covered with yards of priceless lace and whose hands sparkled with rings, while stout, comfortable Rosanna Pringle, her childhood playmate, now a great-grandmother, she met with outstretched hands.

"Why, what will he do?" "The only thing he can do—stop living!" "Oh, Bab! How horrid of you! Jack, Kixney, the dear, splendid fellow! Has anyone seen him? I wonder what he is doing now," said Sallie. "Walking on his uppers, don't they call it?" said Bab. "Such a shame! And he has lent and given away a fortune to other people. He never seemed to care about money."

"No, indeed; I suppose he has dropped a modest fortune in cards before this." "Why, Bab; with the poor fellow in such a strait. He only does what all the men do." "And he does a great deal that he don't do," said Willie. "I was letting 'em do a Lays rap that he sowed, but Jack made good all the misapprehension—insisting that the next term? And if not, Jack's yacht that went cruising up the Medway, and he had Princes on board for guests, it was his steamer that took those children from Seven Alleys down the harbor every afternoon all the hot summer."

"You always had a special talent for turning a telescope on microscopic subjects," said Bab. "No, thanks. I don't drink another drop of my tea, Felicia, though I declare it does put the spirit in you," said Julia. "Well, just one cup—lemon—yes, as Felicia's jewelled hand suspended the sugar. 'What a perfectly lovely cup. Did you know that one of Dolly Van Ven's engagement cups was a tiny thing of gold, crusted with peridots?'"

LOVE IS BEST.

Dusk had come in the drawing-room, but the lamps were not yet lighted, and the young women in picturesque hats clustered round the little tea table as closely as their huge sleeves and voluminous skirts allowed and sipped their Assam Pekoe between the bursts of confidence proper to the half hour. They had discussed the reigning fashions, touched delicately on the scandal of the week, and were now busy with Jack Rodney's name and money. Alas! he had no money. A decision of the court had given his inheritance to another heir, and then he had gone into Wall street and had been caught on the wrong side of the market.

"I can't picture it," said Sally Littlejohn, balancing her little gold spoon. "What will become of him?" The spoiled darling! Why, he will have to go to work!" "Work!" said Julia. "Mentress. 'With those aristocratic hands! What sort of work?' " "Oh, don't you know what I mean?" said Arabella. "He wouldn't know himself out of his habit. How is he to go without his horses, his club, the opera, his London tailor?" "I don't believe he will try to," said Felicia. "Why, what will he do?" "The only thing he can do—stop living!"

"Oh, Bab! How horrid of you! Jack, Kixney, the dear, splendid fellow! Has anyone seen him? I wonder what he is doing now," said Sallie. "Walking on his uppers, don't they call it?" said Bab.
