WAR NOW ON!

Reported Naval Engagement at Port Arthur.

New York, Feb. 9.—A late despatch from the seat of war says that eleven Japanese warships were sunk in an attack on Port Arthur this morning. Three Russian warships disabled.

LIKE WAR.

Outlook Very Serious in the Far East.

DECLARATION OF WAR

May be Made any Day Now. Both Parties Preparing.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 6.—The Japanese minister, M. Kuroki, is making preliminary preparations for his departure from St. Petersburg.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 6.—The Russian minister, Baron De Rosen, has been notified by the Japanese government by Baron De Rosen, the Russian minister at Tokyo.

JAPAN CONCILIATORY.

PARIS, July 6.—M. Motono, the Japanese minister here, has in the course of an interview, spoken as follows:

"Contrary to the truth there has been attributed to Japan and unbecoming attitude, while, as a matter of fact, Japan has not ceased to be pacific and conciliatory. I know we are accused of cherishing war like designs and wishing for war at all costs, and there has been talk of an ultimatum in a threatening tone. All this is untrue, and I am sure you will not believe it."

production of the documents showing the various phases of these complicated negotiations, as they have been seen on which side the pendulum of moderation. I can assure you that Japan has made great concessions. Each stage of the conflict has been marked by reiterated proofs of our good will.

M. Motono said further that he was not aware of the contents of Russia's reply, but that Japan awaited it with confidence.

RUSSIA THREATENS CHINA.

New York, Feb. 6.—A despatch to the London Standard says: The Russian minister has informed the Chinese grand councilors that in the event of war Russia may be compelled to seize Tien Tsin and Peking, and that if China favors Japan, she should consider the situation thoroughly before declaring her intentions. In consequence of this the Chinese minister fears that Russia will attack China.

RUSSIA HAS SUBMARINES.

New York, Feb. 6.—A Russian officer who has lately returned from the Far East is quoted by Moscow correspondence of the Times to the effect that the Russian Pacific squadron possesses at least two submarines. They were built on the Black Sea, were cas. in sections and fitted together at Port Artyk where they now are. The officer also states that the mouth of the Amur is a river a heavy mine, and that the river is equipped with light craft, also patrolling about 60 miles and carrying light artillery.

VLADIVOSTOK, Feb. 6.—Even the authorities here apparently are without information in regard to the general situation. They receive casual instructions, from which it is apparent that preparations are on the increase to repel a hostile attack, but no comprehensive steps have been taken nor has there been any special allotment of funds. The movement of troops toward Korea has been stopped. The public is greatly depressed by the uncertainty and banking and mercantile operations are at a stand still. If Vladivostok is blockaded the officers of the Ussuri railroad and the law courts will be transferred to Khabarovsk and the administrative office to Nikolsk Ussuri. The Oriental institute and other educational establishments will be closed. It is rumored that all strangers, whether Russian or foreign, will be requested to leave the precincts of the fortifications and the native residents will be required to provide quarters for 8,000 soldiers, with horses, with orders to mobilize the reserves. BAD FIRE.

Baltimore Suffers to the Extent of 200,000.

BUSINESS CENTRE

Complete Ruin. Fire Department Unable to Control Fire.

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 7.—Fire broke out this morning in the wholesale dry goods house of John E. Harst & Co., and has raged with unrestricted fury continuously since it broke out.

Since six o'clock the fire department, although aided by engines from Washington, Philadelphia, Wilmington and surrounding countries and suburbs, has been utterly powerless to make an impression, though for hours 400 streams of water were thrown into the flames. At 7 o'clock the situation was so hopeless that it was decided to dynamite buildings at threatened points.

Subsequently the splendid structure of J. W. Puls & Co., notion dealers, on Charles street, was dynamited and then the Daily Record building, Ross's drug store and others. This heroic remedy delayed, but did not seriously impede the onward march of the fire, and for two hours or more the department has stood by its guns and resources in the face of the raging flames.

At 10 o'clock the fire was absolutely beyond control and all occupants of buildings in the center of the city are quickly removing their valuables.

The city hospital is removing its 21 patients to other hospitals as rapidly as possible. 17 injured were taken to this hospital, most of them firemen. They were suffering from burns, scalds and lacerations.

Nearly every physician in the city is in the fire district.

So far as known at this hour no one has been killed.

At 11:45 the temporary custom house adjoining the post office caught fire.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—A despatch from Baltimore at 2 o'clock this morning says the fire is still raging furiously. The post office building is burning, also the $4,000,000 Court house. The Halliday street theatre has been dynamited and U. S. express offices and Central offices of the Baltimore and Ohio Railway are burned.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 7.—It is officially announced that Count Landorff, the Russian foreign minister, has informed the Russian representatives abroad that Japan has decided to break off negotiations with Russia and withdraw her minister and legation staff from St. Petersburg and that upon receipt of a note to this effect from the Japanese minister, Russia has ordered her minister, Baron De Reuse, and legation staff to leave Tokyo.

BERLIN, Feb. 7.—The Russian embassy has been informed by Count Landorff, Russian foreign minister, that the Russian government does not know whether the breaking of diplomatic negotiations by Japan is preliminary to war or not. Anxiety prevails at the embassy.

TOKYO, Feb. 7.—The severance of diplomatic relations between Russia and Japan appears to be only a step towards war, although when the minister of Russia and Japan withdraw from their respective posts, quick and decisive action is expected. When Minister of Foreign Affairs Komura on Saturday notified Baron De Rosen, the Russian minister, of the Japanese determination to sever diplomatic relations, he is reported to have declared to him that Japan is tired of Russia's delays, evasions and insincerity and has decided to take immediate action for the conservation of Japan's oriental interests. During the

WM ALLISON'S

House on the Northwest Destroyed by Fire.

INMATES FROZEN.

While Walking to Neighbors House in Night Clothes. A Narrow Escape.

What might have been a fatal fire occurred Friday morning about 4 o'clock at the home of Wm. Allison who lives on Union Northwest about 21 miles from Newcastle.

Mr. Allison was in the woods leaving Mrs. Allison, three children, and a friend with a small child and a hired boy about 10 years of age at home. Thursday night they retired as usual. At about 3 o'clock the boy got up and started a kitchen fire then fell asleep. It is supposed that the house took fire upstairs and when the sleeping inmates were aroused the whole upper story was ablaze and they had to leave in their night clothes, with only stockings on their feet. The night was bitterly cold, one of the coldest of the season, and the nearest house was about three quarters of a mile away. Finding the unfortunate people started to walk through the snow and mud, each mother carrying a child, the others walking. Mrs. Allison became exhausted and stopped several times to rest, the others hurrying on for help. Finally when they were all at the neighbors, Mrs. Allison's it was found that all the party were suffering from severe frostbites. A little boy about three and a half years old had his feet badly frozen as had also Mrs. Allison and it is expected that the little fellow will lose his toes and it is feared Mrs. Allison may have to have one of her feet amputated.

There was a good warm barn with cattle beyond reach of the flames, but in the excitement this was not thought of. It was a narrow escape for the family and is one of the saddest cases that has come to the notice of the public.

Not a thing was saved from the building except an overcoat and a trunk with some papers, etc., which was down stairs. The house and contents were valued at about $1000, which was about the amount of the loss.

Dr. Nicholson drove out to the afflicted ones Friday night and again yesterday.

unsatisfactory manner. Japan waited until convinced that it was useless to wait longer and has ended the discussion. The indications are there will be no formal declaration of war. Japan will publicly define its position and purpose and the foreign office has prepared a new statement which will probably be announced today. On Monday will unquestionably see Korea and although Russia has previously intimated that it would not interfere in view of that country's attitude, developments are eagerly awaited.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—The Times this morning asserts that the Japanese demands were of a moderation that will astonish the world when they are disclosed. Japan did not even ask Russia to promise to move a single soldier from Manchuria, or to renounce a single right in Manchuria.

TOKYO, Feb. 7.—Baron De Rosen has arranged to leave Tokyo on Friday, next. He will leave Japan on the steamship Yarra, embarking at Yokohama.

SPRINGFIELD, Feb. 5.—Eighteen steamers from nearly every port in Europe were chartered today by the East Asiatic Company, from April 1. E. Anderson, general manager of the company, said to a correspondent today: "I am ordered by the Russian Government to acquire all the tonnage available to run with provisions, not war material, from the opening of the war from Odessa to the Far East. The Siberian Railway is not capable of carrying European commerce altogether. China will consider a Russian defeat the occasion for reaction against European

BATHURST.

The merchants in town and village are complaining of dull times. The cause is no doubt the state of the weather and bad roads. Gloucester county is noted for the fact that it is perhaps the only country in the province in which the winter roads are always broken single, that is broken by single horses and sleds after a snow storm. The consequence is of course, when the snow gets deep in February of each year there is only a single track, with an annoying slow at every few yards, and when one team meets another on the road, one of them has to turn out. Every year our people promise an improvement and vow that next winter the roads will be broken differently, but when next year comes round the same old thing takes place and the travelling is as bad as ever. Is there no way of forcing the travelling public to break the country roads properly? If the road commissioners in each district would do their duty in this respect, and we consider this a part of their duty, surely this great inconvenience could be avoided. Farmers and others complain that in order to carry out the same arrangements as are done in other places it would be necessary to change the gear of their sleds and sleighs. That they would have to make their sleighs with shifting shafts, and their sleds with frame shafts, but surely if the proper arrangement was once started people would immediately see the great benefit to the winter roads, and we think if it was tried for one winter our people would never go back to the old fashioned rigs in use at present.

The death of the Hon. Robert Young, which occurred at his home in Carleton Place, Ontario, on Wednesday last, removes from affairs of this life a man who during his public career was reckoned one of the shrewdest and strongest politicians in the province. Mr. Young was a good business man, honest in his dealings and looked up to by people of all denominations in his neighborhood, and when he brought to bear on the public affairs of the province his native ability, his strength was always felt. Well versed in common law, although not a lawyer, it is said many of the statutes on the books of the province owe their existence to him. A polished speaker, Mr. Young could always hold his own in debate, and he was ever fearless in expressing his opinions when convinced that he was right. It is doubtful if the North Shore of New Brunswick has produced what might be called a longer headed man than the late Robert Young. He was far seeing and ever anxious to give his aid to anything which he considered would be a benefit to Gloucester county, or the province in general. Taking everything into consideration the late Mr. Young was a credit to his county. He sat in the assembly of the province from 1861 until the Union of the Provinces, after which he was promoted to the Legislative Council. In 1872 he became a member of the Executive and continued a member of this important body until the Hanington Government was defeated in 1883. For several years he was President of the Council and his splendid intellect made itself felt during that time, in fact it is well known he more than held his own with many of the brightest men of the province. When the Legislature Council was abolished Mr. Young practically withdrew from public life and devoted himself to his mercantile business. Mrs. Young, two daughters, Mrs. Fraser, now living in California, and Miss Sybil Young, and three sons, James W., R. H. Lee and Fred T. B., survive.

Owing to the Carleton train not making its usual connection on Saturday a large number of gentlemen from Bathurst who had intended paying their last tribute to the deceased by attending the funeral were unable to reach Carleton.

We are much pleased to see that Mr. George Gilbert, our energetic road Commissioner, has been able so soon to carry out his intention of putting up lamps at the street corners. They are a great improvement, even the few that we have already, and it is to be hoped that Mr. Gilbert can see his way clear to obtain for the town a few more lamps.

two or three tiny ones hidin' under the big ones, an' I seed what he was up to, but I was ready for 'im. "All right," ses I, "you pick 'em." There was two or three loafers standin' round an' they all laughed at me when Mr. Fincher got down over the coop an' finally ketchin' one about the size of a robin an' hauled it out. "Keep on a pickin'," ses I, an' he made a grab for one a little bigger an' handed it up to me. Then he stuck his hands down in his pockets, doin' his best to keep from laughin'. The gang yelled then, but I wasn't done. "Keep on a pickin'," ses I. An' he got down agin. An', sir, I got that coop at about 4 cents apiece less'n he'd paid for 'em. He tried to back, but the gang wouldn't let 'im. It was the cheapest lot of chickens I ever seed. I tucked the little ones out to fatten and made Wilks pay me the market price all round for the bunch. "I'll be bound you made some'n out of it," said Trabue. "Fincher, did you ever heer how that scamp took in every merchant on this street about two year ago?"

"Never heard anything except his own 'em all," said Fincher, with a laugh.

"I could put 'im in the penitentiary fer it," affirmed the lawyer. "You know about that time that was a powerful rivalry goin' on among the storekeepers. They was movin' here an' there to sell their big stocks. Well, one of the spryest in the lot, Joe Gaylord, noticed that Pole was powerful popular with mountain folks, an' he made him a proposition, bindin' 'im down to secrecy. He proposed to give Pole 10 per cent commission on all the goods he'd sell by bringin' customers in the store. Pole hesitated bec'ase, he said, they might find it out, an' Joe finally agreed that all Pole would have to do was to fetch 'em in, give the wink, an' him an' his clerk would do the rest. It worked mighty slick for awhile, but Pole noticed that very often the folks he'd fetch in wouldn't be pleased with the goods an' prices an' ud go trade some'n else. Then what do you think the scamp did? He went to every store in town an' made a secret contract to give 10 per cent on all sales, an' he had the softest snap you ever heard of. He'd simply hang on to a gang from the country, whether he "Is that that little lump gold or not?" knowed 'em or not, an' feller 'em around till they bought; then he'd walk up an' take in his part."

"I got left once," said Trabue, laughin' at the others. "One gang that I seed to all day went over to Melton's, an' bought."

"Well, the merchants caught on after awhile an' stopped 'im," said Trabue. "But he made good money while he was at it. They'd 'a' sent 'im up fer it if it hadn't been such a good joke on 'em."

"I don't know about that," replied Pole thoughtfully. "I was doin' all right, an' if they could afford to pay 10 per cent to anybody they might as well 'a' paid it to me. I drew trade to the whole town. The cigars an' whiskey I give away amounted to a lot. I've got up many a night tellin' them mountain folks to make 'em laugh."

"Well, if you ever get into any trouble let me know," said Trabue as he rose to go. "I'll defend you at half price. You'd be right to get a lawyer. I'll be hanged if I ever seed a better case 'an you made out in the mayor's court, an' you hadn't a thing to back it up with neither."

"The day was unclouded and the wagons driven away. Fincher stood by Pole with admiration. "It's a fact," he said. "You could 'a' made some'n out of yourse'f if you'd 'a' been educated an' had a showin'."

Pole jerked his thumb over his shoulder at Craig, who was standing in the front door looking out into the street. "Everybody don't get a fair showin' in this world, Mr. Fincher," he said. "That man Craig hasn't been treated right."

The jovial expression died out of the merchant's face, and he leaned against the door jamb.

"You are a bit thin," he said. "Good right. He's been mighty unlucky and bad treated."

Pole grasped the hem of his massive hat and drew it from his shaggy head. "It makes me so all-fired mad some times, Mr. Fincher, to hear folks a-runnin' that man down that I want to fight. I ain't no religious man myse'f, but I respect one, an' I've always put him down in my book as a good man."

"So've I," said the merchant, and he looked toward the subject of their conversation and called out, "Craig, oh, Craig, come back heer a minute."

Pole put on his hat and stared at the ground. He made a gesture as if of protest, but refrained from speaking.

"What's wanted?" Craig came down to them. He was smoking a cigar and wore a comfortable look, as if he had been fighting a hard but successful fight and now heard only random shots from a fleeing enemy.

"You ain't a candidate fer office," laughed Fincher, "but nearly all men like to know they're got friends. This chap here's been standin' up for you. He says it makes him mad to hear folks talk agin you."

"Oh, it's Baker!" exclaimed the ex-banker, shaking hands with Pole and beaming on him. "Well, I don't know a man I'd rather have for a friend," he said emphatically.

Pole tossed his head and looked straight into the speaker's eye. "I'm fer human justice, Mr. Craig," he said. "An' I don't think folks has treated you right. What man is that that don't now an' then make mistakes, sir? You've always had me as a friend, an' I've always looked on you as a good man, a law-abidin' man, an' I don't like to hear folks try to blame you for what another man done. When you had plenty, I never come nigh you, bec'ase I knowed you belonged to one life an' me another, but now you are fit of your back, sir, I'm your friend."

Craig's face beamed. He pulled his coat down and said:

"I'm glad there are men in the world like you, Baker," he said. "I say I'm glad, and I mean it."

Fincher had begun to look over the figures in his book and walked to the front.

"Oh, my friendship ain't with nothin'," said Pole. "I know that. I never was in the shape to help nobody, but I know when a man's treated right or wrong."

"Well, if you ever need assistance and I can help you, don't fail to call on me," Craig spoke with a tone of sincerity.

Pole took a deep breath and lowered his voice, glancing cautiously into the house, as if fearful of being overheard.

"Well, I do need advice, Mr. Craig," he said. "Not money nor nothin' expensive. But I've laid awake night after night wishin' 'at I could run on some man of experience that I could ax for advice an' that I could trust. Mr. Craig, I'll be blamed if I don't feel like tellin' you some'n that never has passed my lips."

Craig stared in interested astonishment. "Well, you can trust me, Baker," he said. "And if I can advise you, why, I'll do it with pleasure."

There was a cotton compress near by, with its vast sheds and platforms, and Pole looked at it steadily. He thrust his hand into his pants pocket and kept it there for a full minute; then he shook his head, drew out his hand and said: "I reckon I won't bother you today, Mr. Craig. Some day I'll come in town an' tell you, but I better be goin'."

"Hold on!" Craig caught Pole's arm. Despite his recent troubles he had his share of curiosity, and Pole's manner and words had aroused it to unwonted activity. "Hold on," he said. "What's your hurry? I've got time to spare if you have."

Pole hung his head for a moment in silence; then he looked the old man in the face. "Mr. Craig," he began in even a lower voice, "do you reckon that's any gold in them mountains?" Pole nodded to the blue wave in the east.

Craig was standing near a bale of cotton, and he sat down on it, first parting the tails of his long, black coat.

"I don't know, there might be," he said, deeply interested and yet trying to appear indifferent. "There is plenty of it in the same range farther down about Dolanoga."

Pole had his hand in the right pocket of his rough jean trousers.

"Is there anybody in this town that could tell a piece of gold if they seed it?" he asked.

"Oh, a good many, I reckon," said Craig, a steady beam of excitement in his unsteady eye. "I can myself. I spent two years in the gold mines of California when I was a young man."

"You don't say! I never knowed that," Pole had ready reason of that fact, but his face was straight. He had managed to throw into it a most wonderful blending of fear and overcaution.

"Oh, yes; I've had a good deal of experience in such things."

"You don't say!" Pole was looking toward the compress again.

Craig laughed out suddenly and put his hand on Pole's shoulder with a friendly, downward stroke.

"You can trust me, Baker," he said. "And it may be that I

There was something like an actual tremor of agitation in Pole's rough hand as he drew his little nugget from its resting place at the bottom of his pocket. With a deep, indrawn breath he handed it to Craig. "Is that that little lump gold or not?" he asked.

Craig started visibly as his eyes fell on the piece of gold. But he took it indifferently and examined it closely.

"Where did you get across that?" he asked.

"I want to know of it's the pure thing," answered Pole.

Craig made another examination, obviously to decide on the method he would apply to a situation that claimed all his interest.

"I think it is," he said. "In fact, I know it is."

Pole took it eagerly, thrust it back into his pocket and said:

"Mr. Craig, I know what that's a vein of that stuff twenty yards thick, runnin' clean through a mountain."

"You do?" Craig actually paled under his suppressed excitement.

"Yes, sir, an' I kin buy it, lock, stock and barrel, for five hundred dollars. The feller that owns it ud jump at it like a duck on a dune bug. That's my secret, Mr. Craig. I ain't one dollar to my name, but from this day on I'm goin' to work hard an' save my money till I own that property. I'm a-goin' down to Atlanta next week, whar people don't know me, an' have a lump of it bigger 'n this examined, an' if it's gold I'll own the land sooner or later."

Craig glanced to the rear.

"Come back here," he said. Opening a door at the end of the warehouse, he led Pole into a more retired spot, whar they would be free from possible interruption. Then in a most persuasive voice he continued: "Baker, you need a man of experience with you in this. Besides, if there is as much of—that stuff as you say there is, you wouldn't be able to use all you could make out of it. Now, it might take you a long time to get up the money to buy the land, and there is no telling what might happen in the meantime. I'm in a close place, but I could raise five hundred dollars or even a thousand. My friends still stick to me, you know. The truth is, Baker, I'd like the best in the world to be able to make money to pay back what some of my friends have lost through me."

Pole hung his head. He seemed to be speaking half to himself and on the verge of a smile when he replied, "I'd like to see you pay back some of 'em, too, Mr. Craig."

Craig laid his hand gently on Pole's shoulder.

"How about lettin' me see the place," Baker, he said.

Pole hesitated, and then he met the ex-banker's look with the expression of a man who has resigned himself to a painful impulse.

"Well, some day, when you are a-passin' my way stop in, an' I'll—"

"How far is it?" broke in Craig, pulling his beard with unsteady fingers.

"A good fifteen miles from Leer," said Pole.

Craig smiled. "Nothin' but an easy ride," he declared. "I've got a horse don't mind in the system. What's to hinder us from going today—this mornin'—as soon as it's light?"

"I don't keer," said Pole resignedly. "But could you manage to go without anybody knowin' whar you was found fer?"

"Easy enough," Craig laughed. He was really pleased with Pole's extreme cautiousness.

"Then you mought meet me out thar some'n."

"A good idea, a good idea, Baker," "Do you know whar the backtown road crosses Holly creek at the foot of Old Pine mountain?"

"As well as I know whar my house is."

Pole looked at the sun, shading his eyes with his hand.

"Could you be thar by 11 o'clock?" "Easy enough, Baker."

"Well, I'll meet you. I'm a-goin' to trust you, Mr. Craig, an' when you see the vein of you think that's enough money in it fer two—but we can see about that later."

"All right, Baker. I'll be there. But say," as Pole was moving away, "you are a drinking man and get a little off sometimes. You haven't said anything about this where."

Pole laughed reassuredly. "I never have been drunk enough to do nothin', Mr. Craig, an', what's more, I never will be."

(Liquozone was formerly known in Canada as Powley's Liquidized Ozone.)

We Offer $1,000

For a Disease Germ that Liquozone Can't Kill.

On every bottle of Liquozone we publish an offer of $1,000 for a germ that it cannot kill. We do that to convince you that liquid oxygen does kill germs. Any germ that kills germs is a poison to you and it cannot be taken laterally. Liquozone does what nothing else in the world can accomplish, and that the results are unvarying.

A discovery that could command such a price is something you should know, if you need it. We are doing our part by applying the first bottle free. Will you do your part by requesting it?

Hills With Oxygen.

Liquozone is simply liquid oxygen—no gas, no alcohol in it. It is the discovery of Paul, the great German chemist, who, at 20 years on. His object was to teach an excess of oxygen in staple food into the blood that no germ could live on any membrane or tissue. Oxygen is life to an animal—the very essence of vitality. It is the essential part of its nature's greatest tonic. But it is not a vegetable, and this excess of oxygen—the very life of an animal—is only to vegetable matter. Liquozone gives the blood with such an excess of oxygen that no germ can live where that it goes. We spend 14 days in making each bottle.

We Paid $100,000 for the American rights to Liquozone.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone kills the germs, wherever they are, and the results are inevitable. By destroying the cause of the trouble, it invariably ends the disease, and forever.

RESOLUTION

At the last annual meeting of the Highland Society at Miramichi, the following resolution was passed.

Whereas it has pleased Almighty God, the author of all good social institutions, to call away from our midst two of our most highly respected members, Robert E. Call and John S. Fleming, to join a higher social Brotherhood, where the dim lamp of earthly hope all expire in the clear dawn of a pure glorious and unending social sphere;

And Whereas we must grieve and grieve deeply in the great loss our Society has sustained by their deaths, who were ever intent on promoting the best interests of the Society within view to the benefit of man and the glory of God;

And Whereas we are desirous to record that our Society will long continue to cherish our remembrance of the high many qualities and kindly social bearing which characterized them, and the great loss we have sustained;

Therefore resolved; that we, the members of the Highland Society, express our and feelings in the lamented deaths of our fellow members;

Further Resolved; that our deepest sympathies be communicated to their families in their sad bereavement, and may their loving Saviour comfort and cheer their stricken hearts.

Resolved; that our deepest sympathies be communicated to their families in their sad bereavement, and may their loving Saviour comfort and cheer their stricken hearts.
