Select Poetry.

Why is it so?

Some find work where some find rest,
And so the weary world goes on;
I sometimes wonder what is best;
The answer comes when life is gone.
Some eyes sleep where some eyes wake,
And so the dreary night hours go;
Some hearts beat where some hearts break
I often wonder why 'tis so.

Some hands fold where other hands
Are lifted bravely in the strife;
And so, through ages, and through lands,
Move on the two extremes of life.

Some feet halt while some feet tread
In tireless march, a thorny way,
Some struggle on where some have fled;
Some seek, where others shun the fray.

Some sleep on while others keep
The vigils of the true and brave;
They will not rest till roses creep
Around their names, above a grave.

Interesting Story.

WIRED LOVE.

A ROMANCE OF DOTS AND DASHES. BY ELLA CHEEVER THAYER.

"The old, old story"—in a new, new way.

"But—now really," said Quimby, who sat on the extreme edge of the chair, with his feet some two yards apart from each other; "really, you know, now suppose—just suppose, your mysterious invisible shouldn't be—just what you think, you knew. You see, I remember one or two young men in telegraph offices, whose collars and cuffs are always soiled, you know!"

"I have great faith in my 'C,'" laughed Nattie.
"It would be dreadfully unromantic to fall in love with a soiled invisible, wouldn't it," said Miss Archer, with an expressive shrug of her shoulders.
Nattie colored a little, and answered hastily:

"Oh! it's only fun, you know;" at which Quimby brightened, and Miss Archer inquired gayly,
"Pour passer le temps?"

Nattie nodded in reply, as she took a message from a lady, who had only a few words to send, but found it necessary to ask about fifteen questions, and relate all her recent family history, concluding with the birth of twins, before being satisfied her message would go all right—a proceeding that made Quimby stare, and afforded Miss Archer much amusement.
"Oh! that is nothing!" Nattie said, in answer to the latter's significant laugh, when the customer had retired.
"Some very ludicrous incidents occur almost daily, I assure you. Truly, the ignorance of people in regard to telegraphy is surprising; aggravating too, sometimes. Just imagine a person thinking a telegraph office is managed on the same principle as those stores where they at first charge double the value of the goods, for the sake of giving people the pleasure of beating them down! It was only yesterday that a woman tried to coax me to take off ten cents, and then snarled at me because I wouldn't, and declared she would patronise some other office next time, as if it mattered to me, except to wish she might! And there was some one calling on the wire with a rush message all the time she was detaining me!"

"They think you ought to be harassed with a punch, like a horse-car conductor," said Miss Archer, laughing, and added,
"I wish I knew how to telegraph. I would have a chat with your 'C.' I am getting very much interested in him!"

Quimby twisted his hat uneasily.
"But—I beg pardon, but he may be a soiled invisible, you know!" he hinted, seemingly determined to keep this possibility uppermost.

Before Nattie could again defend her 'C' a woman, covered with cheap finery, thrust her head into the window.

"How much does it cost to telegraph?" she asked.
"To what place did you wish to send?" Nattie inquired.

With a look, as if she considered this a very impertinent question, the woman replied, with a slight toss of her head,
"It's no matter about the place, I only want to know what it costs to telegraph!"

"That depends entirely on where the message is going," answered Nattie, with a glance at Miss Archer.

"Oh, does it?" said the woman, looking surprised. "Well, to Chicago, then."

Nattie told her the tariff of that city.

"Is that the cheapest?" she then asked. "I only want to send a few words, about six."

"The price is the same for one or ten words," said Nattie rather impatiently.

The woman gave another surprised stare.
"That's strange!" she said incredulously. "Well"—moving away—"I'll write then; I am not going to pay for ten words when I want to send six."

"That is a specimen of the ignorance you were just speaking of, I presume," laughed Miss Archer, as soon as she would be sender was out of hearing.

"Yes," replied Nattie, "it's hard to make them believe sometimes that everything less than ten words is a stated price, and that we only charge per word after that number. And, speaking of ignorance, do you know I once actually had a letter brought me, all sealed, to be sent that way by telegraph."

Miss Archer laughed again, and Quimby inquired,
"I—beg pardon, but did I understand that the last came within your experience?"

"Yes," Nattie replied, "and I had a young woman come in here once, who asked me to write the message for her, and after I had done so, in a somewhat hasty scrawl, she took it, looked it all over critically, dotted some 'i's,' and crossed some 't's,' I all the time staring, and wondering if she supposed I could not read my own hand-writing, then scowled and threw it down disgustedly saying, 'John never can read that! I shall have to write it myself. He knows my writing!'"

"Can such things be!" cried Miss Archer.
"But," asked Quimby, from his uncomfortable perch on the edge of the chair, "Isn't there a—a something—a fac-simile arrangement?"

"I believe there is, but it is not yet perfected," replied Nattie.

"Ah, well! then the young woman was only in advance of the age," said Miss Archer; "and what with that and the telephone, and that dreadful phonograph that bottles up all one says and disgorges at inconvenient times, we will soon be able to do everything by electricity; who knows but some genius will invent something for the especial use of lovers? something, for instance, to carry in their pockets, so when they are far away from each other, and pine for a sound of 'that beloved voice,' they will have only to take up this electrical apparatus, put it to their ears, and be happy. Ah! blissful lovers of the future!"

"Yes!—yes, that would be a good idea!" cried Quimby eagerly; then instantly fearing he had betrayed himself, turned red, and clutched at the mustache that eluded his grasp. Miss Archer looked at him and smiled, and Nattie was about to expound further when she heard 'C' asking on the wire,

"N, haven't your visitors gone yet? Tell them to hurry!"

"You wouldn't say so," Nattie responded to him, "if you knew what a handsome young lady one of my two visitors is. We have been talking about you, too."

"Introduce me, please do," said 'C.'

"What are you doing, now?" asked Miss Archer, watchful of Nattie's smiling face.

Leaving the key open, Nattie explained, to Quimby's unconcealed dissatisfaction; but Miss Archer was delighted.

"Oh! do introduce me! Can you any way?" she said.

Nattie nodded affirmatively, and taking hold of the key, wrote, "She is as anxious as you are. So allow me to make you acquainted with Miss Archer, a young lady with the prettiest black eyes I ever saw!"

"Doesn't know a det from a dash," Nattie answered him.

"Then tell her in plain language, that this is the happiest moment of my life, and also that black eyes are my especial adoration!"

"What have you been telling him about me, you dreadful girl?" queried Miss Archer, shaking her head reprostratingly when this was repeated to her. "But you may inform him I am delighted to make his acquaintance, and hope he has curly hair, because it's so nice to pull!"

"With the hope of such a happy occurrence, I will hereafter do up my hair in papers," 'C' replied when Nattie had repeated this to him. "But do not alight your other visitor."

"Shall I introduce you?" asked Nattie holding the key open, and turning to Quimby, who had betrayed various symptoms of uneasiness while this conversation was going on, and who now grasped his hat firmly, as if to throw it at the little sounder that represented the offending 'C,' and answered,

"Oh, no! I—really I—I beg pardon, but it's really no matter about me—you know!"

"He says he is of no consequence," Nattie said to 'C.'

"He!" repeated 'C,' "a, he, is it? Ought I to be jealous? Is it you, or our black-eyed friend who is the attraction?"

Nattie replied only with a ha!
"Is he talking now?" asked Miss Archer, mindful of Nattie's smile, and nodding towards the clattering sounder, at which Quimby was scowling.

"No, some other office is sending business now, so our conversation is suspended," answered Nattie, as much to Quimby's relief as to Miss Archer's regret.

"I shall improve the acquaintance, however," the latter said. "I am very curious to know how he looks, aren't you?"

"Yes, but I do not suppose I ever shall," Nattie answered.

"Then you—I beg pardon, but you never expect to see him," queried Quimby, with great earnestness.

"In all probability we never shall meet. I think I should be dreadfully embarrassed if we should," Nattie replied, as she handed the day's cash to the boy who just then came after it.

"Pass to face we would really be strangers to each other."

Quimby evinced more satisfaction at this time than the occasion seemed to warrant, as Nattie noticed, with some surprise, but several customers claiming her attention, all at once, and all in a hurry, she was kept too busy for some time, to think upon the cause.

As soon as she was at leisure, Miss Archer, with the remark that they had made an unpardonably long call, arose to go.

"But you must certainly come again," Nattie said, cordially, already looking her to be an old friend.

"Indeed I shall," she answered, in the genial way peculiar to her. "You have a double attraction here, you know. Can I say good-by to 'C'?"

"I fear not, as the wire is busy, replied Nattie. "But I will say it for you as soon as possible."

"Yes, tell him, please, that I will see him—I mean, hear the clatter he makes—again soon. You, I shall see at the hotel, I hope, now we have met."

"Oh, yes!" Nattie replied. "I am very much indebted to Quimby for making us acquainted."

"Oh! really now, do you mean it?" exclaimed Quimby, with sudden delight. "I am so glad I've done something right at last, you know! Always doing something wrong, you know!" then hugging his hat to his breast, and speaking in a confidential whisper, he added, to the great amusement of the two girls, "I have a presentiment—a horrible presentiment—I'm always making mistakes, you see. I'm used to it but I couldn't get used to that, you know—that some day I shall marry the wrong woman!"

So saying, and with a last glance of implacable dislike at the sounder, Quimby bowed awkwardly, and departed with the laughing Miss Archer.

Soon after their departure 'C' asked,

"Has Black-Eyed Susan gone?"

"Yes," responded Nattie. "She left a good-by for you, and means to improve your acquaintance."

"Thrice happy I! But about this he? Who is this he? I want to know all about him. Is he a hated rival?"

"Ha! I never heard him say so, but I will ask him if you wish. He lives in the same building with me, and brought Miss Archer, a fellow-lodger, down to introduce her."

"Do you ever go to balls, concerts, theatres, or to ride with him?" asked 'C,' who seemed determined to make a thorough investigation of matters.

"Dear me! No! He never asked me!"

"Do you wish he would?" persisted 'C.'

"Of course I do!" replied Nattie, somewhat regardless of truth.

"It is my opinion I shall be obliged to come and look after you," 'C' replied, at this admission.

"But you wouldn't know whether you were looking after the right person or not, when you were here!" Nattie said, with a smiling face and sparkling eyes turned in the direction of an urechin, flattening his nose against her window-glass, who immediately fled, overwhelmed with astonishment, at being, as he supposed, so smiled upon.

"And why wouldn't I?" questioned 'C.'

"Because I should recognize you immediately, and should pretend it was not I, but some substitute," replied Nattie.

"You seem to be very positive about recognizing me. Is your intuitive bump so well-developed as all that?" asked 'C.'

"Yes," Nattie responded. "And then you know there would be a twinkle in your eye that would betray you at once."

"Indeed! We will see about that, young lady. But now, as a customer has been drumming on my shelf the past five minutes, in a frantic endeavor to attract my attention, and has by this time worked himself into a fine irascible temper, because I will not even glance at him, I must bid you good night, with the advice, watch for that twinkle, and be sure you discover it!"

EDITORIAL NOTES.

That the taxes in this County are increasing from year to year to an alarming extent is a notorious fact, and the ratepayers are beginning to enquire why it is so, yet there seems to be no one, having the ability, willing to enlighten them upon the subject.

The matter of assessment has, for the past two years, been thoroughly ventilated, and no doubt The Worshipful The Municipal Council, when passing upon the instruction recently placed in the hands of the assessors, congratulated themselves that they had provided a remedy which would place future assessments upon an equitable basis, and reduce dissatisfaction to a minimum. How far they have succeeded is patent to every one who has taken the trouble to investigate the matter.

The assessors, acting upon the instructions furnished them, found no difficulty in spending a sufficient number of days to enable them to bring in bills, amounting to, in some cases, $50 and upwards.

In one Ward in this County the sum paid for assessing last year was $20; this year the bill rendered was upwards of $100, and the amount allowed was not much less. Assessors in other Wards have rendered accounts correspondingly excessive, thus increasing the expense of assessing the County from some $400 to nearly $700 without any corresponding benefit.

Take the assessment book of any Ward in the County and compare the several assessments, and it will not be difficult to find just as unequitable an assessment as in any previous year.

There appears a resolution, or by-law, upon the records of the Council to the effect that assessors shall be paid the sum of $10 only for making one assessment; and we believe that the regulation has in the past been honestly observed, why it was allowed to be ignored at the present time and very much larger sums paid, perhaps the Council can explain? Had they the authority to make such regulations as appear in their records and power to enforce them is questioned by many, and it appears to be even doubted by themselves, else why would they have allowed their regulation to be disobeyed and treated with contempt?

Another regulation of Council seems to have shared the same fate, that referring to duties of Overseers of the Poor, which require that all supplies for the poor, including outside relief, shall be supplied under tender and contract. The Overseers of Aylesford it appears followed instructions, and consequently reduced the expenditure in that Township considerably; whilst those of Cornwallis and Horton arrogated to themselves the right of furnishing supplies in their own way, which resulted in a large increase of expenditure over what it should have been had regulation been obeyed.

If any person will take the trouble to examine the accounts of the Overseers for Cornwallis or Horton they will not be surprised that the Poor rate has grown to such proportions; they will find that instead of obeying regulations and instructions imparted to them, they have purchased where it best suited themselves and at prices from twenty to fifty per cent over what they should have paid had regulations been obeyed.

We hope that the Overseers will this year endeavor to act in accordance with instructions given them and purchase no supplies except under tender and contract.

In all this civilized land of ours is there one who was not thrilled by the news from England, of the latest Irish plot—the attempt at wholesale murder, by creatures whose best feelings have long since been annihilated?

Since the time of Guy Fawkes, the world has been startled by many such attempts at human life and property, the advances of civilization, but bringing in its train new helps for the working of fiendish schemes. Instigated of clumsy barrels filled with gunpowder, too large to be secretly stored, the inventive genius of this later age has placed before the public explosives even more destructive while requiring smaller space.

The latest attempt was made on the afternoon of last Saturday, the Tower and Westminster Palace being the sites of operation. As on that day they were thrown open to visitors, many availed themselves of the privilege, and quite a large number of men, women, and children was in the apartments at the time. This fact helps to show the murderous intentions of the conspirators though probably the gratification to them would have been greater had the House been in full session at the time, and the Speaker's Chair been occupied.

Perhaps no place in the world can boast such a fame as London Tower has obtained. Within its walls have been enacted scenes of tragedy, suffering and cruelty, where right has been buried and the strong alone governed.

The foundation was built in the reign of William the Conqueror but being added to from time to time it forms but a small part of the present building. Standing on the left bank of the river Thames, it is surrounded by a moat and occupies an area of 18 acres.

The White Tower, where the explosion took place, is situated in the centre, a massive piece of architecture surrounded by arches of Norman style with turrets at either corner. Being the oldest part of that ancient building it would be thought the ruffians would have spared and held it sacred. But, although not so badly damaged as at first supposed, they have succeeded in shattering a considerable part of it.

The new Westminster Palace, built in 1840 is occupied by both Houses of Parliament. The Lords sitting in the western, the Commons in the eastern. The explosions in the building were in and near the Chamber of Commons. In the Stranger's gallery the flooring was so torn that it was unsafe for anyone to cross. The Peers' gallery was also greatly damaged. The building presented one mass of slates, stone and debris. The chair of Mr. Gladstone was the only one injured.

And is this outrage to be allowed? Will the people of England make no effort to put down such barbarism?

Fortunately the people wounded were comparatively few, but the intent was the same. Next time, if allowed, the damage will be far more serious. Let us hope that the perpetrators may be speedily caught and punished with the utmost rigour of the law.

INDEPENDENCE.

A newspaper as an organ is rarely an enduring success, says some fellow who knows. The reasons are not difficult to discover. An organ is a pronounced pander. It is published to please a certain class. To that effect it highly colors its statements in favor of said class, and blackens all facts unfavorable to them. It ignores truth for policy. It wraps everything in its columns in order to shape it after a fixed and prescribed model. It avoids everything that is supposed to weaken or damage the cause which it advocates. It cares for naught save that which will tickle the palate of its readers, regardless of its wholesomeness or unwholesomeness. In brief, an organ is published to please, and not convince. Hence, their final failure. They are toothsome and sweet at first, but soon clog the appetites of their patrons. And because of their pre-announced partisanship they have little or no influence with the disinterested public.—Warsaw Wasp.

An Irishman called at a drug store to get a bottle of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment for the Rheumatism; the druggist asked him in what part of the body it troubled him most. "Be me soul!" said he "I have it in every houl and corner of me."

—New Zealand has asked permission of the Home government to annex Samoa.

—Canada exported last year $9,705,817 worth of butter, and $6,451,770 worth of cheese.

—P. T. Barnum offers General Grant $100,000 for permission to exhibit his trophies to the public.

—The total circulation of Dominion notes is $16,400,000; and the excess of specie held, $3,544,000.

—Several steamship lines crossing the Atlantic have withdrawn their fast steamers for the winter season.

—Mr. Alex. Gibson, of Fredericton, will cut $30,000,000 feet of lumber in the Nashwaak this season.

—The Princess Louise is modelling a statue in bronze of her royal mother, to be placed in Lincoln cathedral.

It is said that the Local Legislature has been called to meet for despatch of business on or about Feb'y 19th.

—Orders have been given for the building of a fleet of steamers to open up the petroleum trade between the Black Sea and England.

—A deputation of the Montreal Board of Trade has urged upon Sir John Macdonald the urgent necessity that exists for an Insolvency law.

—At the Perpart sale, in Cologne, a cup of the fifteenth century Venice glass brought $5,000, and the whole collection realized about $100,000.

—It is understood in semi-official circles that whenever the emergency arises Italy will send 25,000 soldiers to Egypt to assist in supporting British Authority.

—Mr. Gladstone was 75 years of age on December 30th. He received a hundred and fifty telegrams of congratulation on the event. He is said to look as young as an ordinary man at fifty.

—The Dominion Government has come to an agreement with the Government of Manitoba. The Provinces will receive $100,000 a year and all the swamp lands in settlement of the land question.

—Railway travel in England, according to railway officials, is growing safer from year to year. Last year not a single passenger was killed except as the result of his own carelessness, and only 662 were injured.

—The roller-skate dates back to 1861. The patents ran for seventeen years. Not until the patent rights ran out did it become popular. Now there are some fifteen hundred legitimate rinks through Nova Scotia, and it is the universal and popular craze.

—As an instance of the effect of competition, it may be mentioned that in 1866 the cable rate from New York to London was $5 per word, while now it is forty cents. The present low price is largely due to the enterprise of James Gordon Bennett.

—On Thursday, Jan. 22d, the thermometer registered 50 degrees below zero on Mount Washington, one degree colder than ever before recorded at that station. The nearest approach to it was in March, 1872, when 49 below was recorded. The same day it was 17 below zero in Chicago, and 12 below in New York.

—The Highland landlords have offered the crofters to increase the size of holdings, to grant leases for twenty years when rents are not in arrears, and to permit revision of rents as compensation for permanent improvements; also to urge the government to aid in the development of the fishing industry, and to assist crofters who desire to emigrate.

W. H. Hill Esq., Inspector of Customs, was in Wolfville on Wednesday and Thursday.

WANTED.—1 doz. spring pullets, alive, for which cash will be paid. Apply at this office.

CALDWELL & MURRAY have just received a nice line of Canadian Prints in twelve patterns.

Our thanks are due to the Grand Scribe, S. of T., for the yearly report of that body, for 1884.

Any person wishing to purchase American Top Buggies will learn something to their advantage by enquiring at the White Rock Post Office.

R. D. G. O'Leary.

The united weight of the Inside and Outside Sentinels of Evangeline Division, S. of T., Lower Horton, is 515 lbs. The Division ought to be well guarded.

We are pleased to learn that Capt. W. A. Curry, of Horton Landing, who has been very ill with inflammation of the lungs, is slowly improving and is now considered out of danger.

PROPERTY CHANGES.—Mrs. Coffin has sold her place to Mr. Thomson, of Halifax. Rev. Mr. Day (Methodist) has bought the Cowan property, formerly owned by Mr. Jas. Elder.

We will send the ACADIAN and the Hearthstone, Farm and Nation, a first class monthly Agricultural Journal, for only $1.00 per year in advance, the usual price of the H. F. & N. alone.

PERSONAL.—Our genial friend, Mr. E. G. Woodworth, left here on Tuesday en route to St. John, where he has been offered a situation in the hardware firm of Hayward & Co. of that city. We wish him success.

Why pay six or seven dollars for making a suit when you can get a better fit and better made at Caldwell & Murray's for little more than the price of the cloth. Their overcoats are the best fitting in the market and wonderfully cheap. Dec 12

FANCY SKATING.—An exhibition of fancy skating was given by a local amateur at the Rink on Wednesday evening. Some very difficult evolutions were performed, eliciting great applause from the spectators present. Those who won prizes last year must look to their laurels at the coming tournament.—Com.

We would call the attention of our readers to the adv. of Mr. Jas. Wilson in another column, of house and orchard to let. This is a very desirable place and persons wishing to rent would do well to inspect it before making other arrangements. Also to the farm of Mr. F. Rathbun, of Lower Horton, which he wishes to sell.

Wolfville Division S. of T. has extended an invitation to "Evangeline" Division, of Grand Pre, and to "Maple Leaf" Division, of Greenwich to pay them a fraternal visit next Tuesday night. A good time is expected. Any members of other Divisions who may be in the village on that evening are cordially invited to meet with them.

Rev. J. Williams has been holding a series of meetings at the White Rock Baptist Church during the last week. Some interest prevails and the attendance good. As pastor of this Church he is much appreciated and his earnest appeals and practical discourses are conducive in awakening a religious interest among the people. It has been decided to continue the meetings another week.—Com.

An exciting fox-chase took place on the Grand Pre Dyke on Saturday last, which resulted in the death of Reynard after a run of about two hours.

RINK.—We are informed that Mr. Munro intends furnishing a treat this evening to the patrons of the Rink in the way of a musical programme of violins and cornet. As we are unable to have a band of music in the Rink very often it will no doubt be well patronised to-night.

People are finding out every day that the merchant who gives long time must get long prices. Caldwell & Murray sell for cash or its equivalent and the people save money by buying from them, because there are no bad debts to be made up. Dec 12

We regret to have to record the death of Miss Emma Bowser, daughter of J. B. Bowser, esquire, of Grand Pre, which occurred on Saturday last. Miss B. was a general favorite, and her death will be much regretted by all classes of the community in which she lived. We tender her bereaved parents our heartfelt sympathy.

According to Belcher's Almanac, there are in Nova Scotia, 265 lawyers, 298 doctors, and 468 clergymen. According to this statement every hundredth full grown man in the Province is engaged in one of these professions, one in a little over two hundred being a clergyman. The number of clergymen belonging to the different denominations is substantially as follows: Presbyterian, 115; Methodist, 94; Baptist, 83; Church of England, 81; Roman Catholic, 81; African Baptist, 9; Lutheran, 4.—Halifax Herald.

We have received the "American Agriculturist Family Cyclopaedia," the premium given by the American Agriculturist to each subscriber for 15 cents in addition to subscription price. It is strongly bound in cloth and gilt, contains 700 pages and over 1,000 engravings, and is alone worth fully the price charged for the Agriculturist. We will be pleased to show it to any person who would like to inspect it, and will club the Agriculturist (with premium) and the ACADIAN for only $1.90, in advance, or without premium, for $1.50.

Prof. J. P. Tuck, of the R. R. Palace Photograph Car, has placed with me for collection, all accounts due them for pictures taken in Kentville and Wolfville. All persons thus indebted will take due notice and govern themselves accordingly. J. B. Davison, J. P.

JOURNALISTIC.—We have on our table this week a new paper, bearing the heading, Windsor Courier, and hailing from Windsor, Hants Co., N. S. The editor and publisher is Mr. T. B. Smith, ex-M. P. P. The Courier makes the usual judicious announcement that it is to be political without being in the interests of either party. While we feel sure that Mr. Smith is a man who will try to view things impartially, it is no more than reasonable to suppose that his paper will lean very strongly towards the Liberal party. We wish him every success and hope some day to see two of his pet schemes while an M. P. P. and which we expect to see him advocate strongly in his paper, become facts. We mean a Maritime Union and the Hants Central Railroad.

The annual meeting of the N. S. Fruit Growers' Association will take place at the Court House, Kentville, on the 10th and 11 Feb., beginning at 10 o'clock a. m. All persons interested in fruit culture are invited to attend and take part in the discussions and become members of the Assn., also to assist in supplying the "Question Book" (by sending the Sec., C. R. H. Starr, Esq., previous to the 10th) questions calculated to draw out information upon any subject relating to fruit growing. A full programme will be published previous to the meetings. Excursion return tickets will be issued from all stations on the W. & A. R. to Kentville on the 10th & 11th, good to return on the 12th; and arrangements have been made with most of the hotels for reduced rates.

Found! a Plum Tree that will not Black Knot!

The Masters Plum Tree has stood the test 40 years in Kentville, King's County, Nova Scotia. Chas. A. Masters, of Kentville, found this tree growing on lands now owned by Judge G. A. Blanchard forty years ago, and removed the tree to his garden in the village, where it now stands a healthy bearing tree, and is now owned by me. There are scores of trees throughout the village in bearing from 4 to 20 years old which bear every year, and not a vestige of black knot appears on one of them. The tree is an annual bearer of rapid growth, growing tall not spreading. The Plum is quite large, purple color, and of excellent quality. It is the best preserving plum grown, and sells higher than any plum brought into the market. Last year, while the crop was immense, this plum readily brought $3.00 per bushel, $1.00 more than any other variety offered for sale. We have several hundred first class trees to offer for the spring planting and intend to plant 6,000 root grafts here. That this is the best and most profitable Plum Tree to plant that is grown in the Dominion of Canada, and that it will not black knot we refer the planters of this delicious fruit to F. S. Masters, Barrister, of whom we purchased the original tree; also to Chas. A. Masters, G. A. Blanchard (Judge), J. B. Blanchard, H. B. Webster, M. D., J. E. Mulloney, M. D., Otho Eaton, John Byrne, T. E. Smith, J. A. Shaw.

NO SURPRISE!

THE GOVERNMENT ENDORSES
The American
Agriculturist.

FROM THE TENTH CENSUS, VOL. 3, JUST PUBLISHED.

"The American Agriculturist is especially worthy of mention, because of the remarkable success that has attended the unique and untiring efforts of its proprietors to increase and extend its circulation. Its contents are duplicated every month for a German edition, which also circulates widely"

This tribute is a pleasing incident in the marvellous history

HALF A CENTURY
Career of this recognized leading Agricultural Journal of the world.

What it is To-day.

Six months ago the American Agriculturist entered upon a new career of PROSPERITY, and to-day it is far superior to any similar periodical ever produced in this or any other country. Richer in editorial strength; richer in engravings; printed on finer paper, and presenting in every issue 100 columns of original reading matter from the ablest writers, and nearly 100 illustrations. Dr. George Thurber, for nearly a quarter of a century the editor-in-chief of the American Agriculturist, Joseph Harris, Byron D. Halsted, Col. M. C. Weld, and Andrew S. Fuller, the other long time Editors, together with the other writers who have made the American Agriculturist what it is to-day, ARE STILL AT THEIR POSTS.

WHAT, FREE???

Every subscriber, whose subscription is IMMEDIATELY forwarded us with the price, $1.50 per year, and 15 cents extra for postage on Cyclopaedia—making $1.65 in all—will receive the American Agriculturist [English or German] for all of 1885 and be presented with the American Agriculturist Family Cyclopaedia, (just out) 700 Pages and over 1,000 Engravings. Strongly bound in cloth black and gold.

This entirely new volume is a remarkable storehouse and book of reference for every department of human knowledge, including an Agricultural Supplement by Dr. Thurber.

Send three 2-cent stamps for mailing you specimen copy American Agriculturist, an elegant forty-page Premium List, with 200 Illustrations, and specimen pages of our Family Cyclopaedia. Commences wanted everywhere.

ADVERTISE! ADVERTISE!

Ye men of business, stop this way... Please notice what I have to say; 'Tis simply this, I would advise, Don't you forget to advertise.

THE PRINTER BOY.

About the year 1725, an American boy some thirteen years old found himself in London, where he was under the necessity of earning his bread.

"Where are you from?" inquired the foreman. "America," was the answer. "Ah," said the foreman, "From America! A lad from America seeking employment as a printer! Well, do you really understand the art of printing? Can you set type?"

The young man stepped to one of the cases, and in a brief space set up the following passage from the first chapter of John:

"Nathaniel said unto him, Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip said unto him, Come and see." It was done so quickly, so accurately, and administered a delicate reproof so appropriate and powerful, that it at once gave him influence and standing with all in the office.

OVER A COFFIN LID.

"She was a good wife—to me. A good wife, God bless her!" The words were spoken in trembling accents over a coffin lid. The woman asleep there had borne the heat and burden of life's long day, and no one had ever heard her murmur; her hand was quick to reach out in a helping grasp to those who fell by the wayside, and her feet were swift on errands of mercy; the heart of her husband had trusted in her; he had left her to long hours of solitude, while he amused himself in scenes in which she had no part.

"Come from your long, long roving, On life's sea so black and rough, Come to me tender and loving, And I shall be blessed enough." That had been her love song—always on her lips or in her heart. Children had been born to them. She had reared them almost alone—they were gone! Her hand had led them to the uttermost edge of the morning that has no noon. Then she had comforted him and sent him strong and whole-hearted while she stayed at home—and cried. What can a woman do but cry?—and trust? Well, she is at rest now. But she could not die until he had promised to "bear up" not to fret, but to remember how happy they had been. They? Yes, it is even so. For she was blest in giving, and he in receiving. It was an equal partnership after all!

"She was a good wife—to me!" O man! man!—Why not have told her so, when her ears were not dulled by death? Why wait to say these words over a coffin wherein lies a wasted, weary, gray-haired woman, whose eyes have so long held that pathetic story of loss and suffering and patient yearning which so many women's eyes reveal—to those who read. Why not have made the wilderness in her heart blossom like the rose with the prodigality of your love? Now you would give worlds—were they yours to give—to see the tears of joy your words would have once caused, bejewelling the closed windows of her soul. It is too late. We have careful thoughts for the stranger And smiles for the sometimes guest, But oft for our own The better tone, Though we love our own the best.
