was so littered with papers, many of them still in their wrappers, that on his way between his seat and the door, the reporter kicked over or more into the book. It was in this way, unless an accident happened to be otherwise discernible, that the floor was swept.

In this room were a reference library and an old coat. The library was within reach of the auditor's hand, and contained some 200 books, which the library staff could consult, with the conviction that they would find the page they wanted missing. The coat had hung unbrushed on a nail for many years, and was so thick with dust that John Milton could draw pictures on it with his finger. According to legend, it was the coat of a distinguished novelist, who had once been a reporter on the "Mirror," and had left Silchester unostentatiously by his window.

It was Penny, the foreman in the composing-room, who set the literary staff talking about the new reporter: Penny was a lank, loosely jointed man of forty, who shuffled about the office in slippers, ruled the compositors with a loud voice and a blistering manner, and was believed to be in Mr. Liqueur's confidence. His politics were respect for the House of Lords, because it rose early, enabling him to have it set before supper-time.

The foreman sniggered so quickly from one room to another that he was at the subeditor's elbow before his own door had time to shut. There was some copy in his hand, and he dug it contentedly upon the desk.

"Look here, Mister," he said, flinging the copy upon the subeditor's desk, "I don't want that."

The subeditor was twisted into as little space as possible tearing telegrams open and flinging the envelopes aside with a housewife's peevishness. His name was Protheroe, and the butler he was the more he twisted himself. On Budget nights he was a knot. He did voluntarily so much extra work that Mr. Liqueur often thought he gave him too high wages; and on slack nights he smiled to himself, which showed that something pleased him.

It was rather curious that this something should have been himself.

"But—but," cried Protheroe, all in a flutter, "it's your council meeting; it—it must be set, Mr. Penny."

"Very well, Mister; then that special from Birmingham must be slaughtered."

"No, no, Mr. Penny; why, that's a speech by Bright."

Penny sneered at the subeditor, and flung up his arms to imply that he washed his hands of the whole thing, as he had done every night for the last ten years; when there was a pressure on his space. Protheroe had been there for half of that time, yet he still trembled before the autocrat of the office.

"There's enough copy on the board," said Penny, "to fill the paper. Any more specials coming in?"

He asked this merely, as if of opinion that the subeditor arranged with leading statesmen nightly to flood the composing-room of the "Mirror" with speeches, and Protheroe replied absently, as if he had been caught doing it, "Lord John Manners is speaking to-night at Nottingham."

The foreman dashed his hand upon the desk.

"Go it, Mister, go it," he cried; "anything else? Tell us Gladstone's dead next."

Sometimes about two o'clock in the morning Penny would get sociable, and the subeditor was always glad to respond. On those occasions they talked with bated breath of the amount of copy that would come in should anything happen to Mr. Gladstone; and the subeditor, if he was in a despondent mood, predicted that it would occur at midnight. Thinking of this had made him a Conservative.

"Nothing so bad as that," he said, dwelling on the subject, to show the foreman that they might be worse off; "but there's a column of local coming

POETRY.

Hesperides.

Where night's cool fingers clasp with day
Thro' misty waves in the West grow
And the sun's hot horses plunge in the spray
Beyond the great ocean's utmost rim;
Far from man's track a dreamland lay—
These happy islands old birds had sung,
They knew no winter, no month but May;
That golden age when the Gods were young!
And somewhere, lost in the boundless blue,
There must be—far from the world and wide—
A land of longings at last come true,
And sweet things living we thought had died.
Dead voices call us across the vale,
Dead lips are smiling we once loved best;
Beyond the sunset, where no ships sail,
And the unknown darkness that hides the West.

SELECT STORY.

When a Man's Single.

BY JAMES M. BARRIE.

During the time the boy took to light Mr. Liqueur's fire, a young man in a heavy overcoat knocked more than once at the door in the alley, and then moved off as if someone had relieved that there was no response. He walked round and round the block of buildings, gazing upward at the windows of the composing-room; and several times he ran against other pedestrians on whom he turned fiercely, and would then have begged their pardon had he known what to say. Frequently he felt in his pocket to see if his money was still there, and once he went behind a door and counted it. There were three pounds seventeen shillings altogether, and he kept it in a linen bag that had been originally made for carrying worms in when he went fishing. When he re-entered the close he always drew a deep breath, and if any person emerged from the "Mirror" office he looked after them. They were mostly telegraph boys, who flattered out and in.

When Mr. Liqueur dictated an article, as he did frequently, the apprentice reporter went into the editor's room to take it down, and the reporter always asked him, as a favor, to shut George Frederick's door behind him. This apprentice reporter did the police reports and the magazine notices, and he sometimes wondered a good deal whether the older reporters really did like brandy and soda. The reason why John Milton, which was the unfortunate name of this boy, was told to close the editorial door behind him was that it was close to the door of the reporters' room, and generally stood open. The impression the reporters' room made on a chance visitor varied according as Mr. Liqueur's door was ajar or shut. When they heard it looked on the inside, the reporters and the subeditor breathed a sigh of relief, when it opened they took their legs off the desk.

The editor's room had a carpet, and was chiefly furnished with books sent in for review. It was more comfortable, but more gloomy-looking than the reporters' room, which had a long desk running along one side of it, and a bank for holding coals and old newspapers on the other side. The door that's never been out of his native country.

"He's one of those compositors taken to literature, is he?" asked Umbrage, who by literature meant reporting, pausing in the middle of a sentence he was transcribing from his note-book. "Just as I expected," he added, contentedly.

"No," said the foreman, shewing in the rays of such ignorance: "Mr. George Frederick says he's never been on a newspaper before."

"An outsider!" cried Umbrage, in the voice with which outsiders themselves would speak of reptiles. "They are the ruin of the profession, they are."

"He'll make you all sit up, Mister," said Penny, with a chuckle. "Mr. George Frederick has had his eye on him for a twelvemonth."

"I don't suppose you know how Mr. George Frederick fell in with him?" said the subeditor, basking in Penny's geniality.

"Mr. George Frederick told me everything about him—very thick," said the foreman, proudly. "It was a person that recommended him."

"A person!" ejaculated Umbrage, in such a tone that if you had not caught the word you might have thought he was saying, "an outsider!" again.

"Yes, a person whose sermon this Angus took down in shorthand, I fancy."

"What was he doing taking down a sermon?"

"I suppose he was there to hear it."

"And this is the kind of a man who is taking to literature nowadays!" Umbrage cried.

"Oh, Mr. George Frederick has heard a great deal about him," continued Penny, maliciously, "and expects him to do wonders. He's a self-made man."

"Oh," said Umbrage, who could find nothing to object to in that, having risen from comparative obscurity himself.

"Mr. George Frederick," Penny went on, "offered him a berth here before Billy Tagg was engaged, but he couldn't come."

"I suppose," said Javens, with the sarcasm that made him terrible on Fridays, "the 'Times' offered him something better, or was it the 'Spectator' that wanted an editor?"

"No, it was family matters. His mother or his sister, or—let me see, it was his sister's child—was dependent on him, and could not be left. Something happened to her, though. She's dead, I think, so he's a free man now."

"Yes, it was his sister's child, and she was found dead," said the subeditor, "on a mountain-side, curiously enough, with George Frederick's letter in her hand offering Angus the appointment."

Protheroe was foolish to admit that he knew this, for it was news to the foreman, but it tries a man severely to have to listen to news that he could tell better himself. One immediate result of the subeditor's rashness was that Bob Angus sunk several stages in Penny's estimation.

"I dare say he'll turn out a muff," he said, and flung out of the room, with another intimation that the copy must be set down.

The evening went on. Protheroe had half a dozen things to do at once, and did them.

Telegraph boys were dropping the beginning of Lord John Manners' speech through a grating on to the subeditorial desk long before he had reached the end of it at Nottingham.

The subeditor had to revise this as it arrived in flimsy, and write a summary of it at the same time. His summary was set before all the speech had reached the office, which may seem strange. But when Penny cried aloud for summary, so that he might get that column off his hands, Protheroe made guesses at many things, and, risking, "the right hon. gentleman concluded his speech, which was attentively listened to with some further references to current topics," flung Lord John to the boy, who rushed with him to Penny, from whose hand he was snatched by a compositor. Fifteen minutes afterwards Lord John concluded his speech at Nottingham.

About half-past nine Protheroe seized his hat and rushed home for

Two Agonizing Diseases.

Quickly Banished by Paine's Celery Compound.

Two Thankful Letters that Should Be Read by Suffering Men and Women.

For the effectual banishment of rheumatism, sciatica and neuralgia, Paine's Celery Compound is without doubt the best medicine that human science has produced. This marvellous remedy, devised by Professor Edward Phelps, M. D., one of the ablest physicians that ever lived, has won the hearty praise of millions of people for the wondrous cures it has wrought in all kinds. It is only a medicine with a record of cures that can attain a world-wide reputation. It has saved men, women and children, many of whom have been given up by the doctors. It does its work quickly and well. It eradicates every trace of disease; it builds up, fortifies and makes active every mortal whose limbs have been crippled and deformed by rheumatism, and drives away the terrors of neuralgia.

To-day the ablest doctors are freely prescribing Paine's Celery Compound for torturing rheumatic and neuralgic people. The thankful letters received each year from the cured in every section of Canada would, if published in book form, make a larger and interesting volume.

The following letters will surely inspire all rheumatic and neuralgic sufferers with a new and lively hope of a better and happier life. Mrs. P. McManis, of Thorold, Ont., says:

"I think it my duty to let you know what Paine's Celery Compound has done for my husband. For two years he suffered very much with rheumatism in the back, and became so bad that he could not bend, stoop, or sit in a chair at table, and I was obliged to take his meals to him while he lay in bed. He was treated by various physicians, but received no benefit until he used Paine's Celery Compound. The first bottle gave him relief, and after he had used six bottles he was quite free from the rheumatism. He was troubled with piles for fourteen years, and found great relief from the Compound. He says he feels like a new man just now. We think there is no medicine like Paine's Celery Compound."

Mrs. A. Ashwood, of Montreal, says:

"Two years ago I suffered intensely from neuralgia in the head, face and shoulders. I was in a terrible condition, and often so tormented that I could not rest or sleep. I became very weak and feeble, had giddy and faint spells, and often could not attempt to go out on the street. My appetite became poor and digestion very weak. At night, while in bed, I often had oppressed and smothering feelings; my whole nervous system was run down and very weak."

"I had been under the care of a medical man and used various medicines, but no relief came to me from these sources. I fortunately heard of your Paine's Celery Compound; I decided to give it a trial, and I bless the day I commenced with it. I used it for several months, and my pains have been banished, I sleep and eat well, and find myself a new woman. I heartily recommend Paine's Celery Compound to all who are in need of an honest and true curing medicine."

supper. In the passage he nearly knocked himself over by running against the young man in the big top-coat, Umbrage went out to see if he could gather any information about a prize-fight. John Milton came in with a notice of a concert, which he stuck conspicuously on the chief reporter's file. When the chief reporter came in he glanced through it and made a few alterations, changing "Mr. Joseph Grimes sang out of tune," for instance, to "Mr. Grimes, the favorite vocalist, was in excellent voice." The concert was not quite over yet, either; they seldom waited for the end of anything on the "Mirror."

When Umbrage returned, Billy Kirker, the chief reporter, was denouncing John Milton for not being able to tell him how to spell "deceive."

"What is the use of you," he asked, indignantly, "if you can't do a simple thing like that?"

"Say 'cheat,'" suggested Umbrage.

So Kirker wrote "cheat." Though he was the chief of the "Mirror's" reporting department, he had only Umbrage and John Milton at present under him.

As Kirker sat in the reporters' room looking over his diary, with a cigarette in his mouth, he was an advertisement for the "Mirror," and if he paid for his velvet coat out of his salary, the paper was in a healthy financial condition. He was tall, twenty-two years of age, and extremely slight. His manner was languid, though his language was sometimes forcible; but those who knew him did not think him mild. This evening his fingers looked bare without the diamond ring that sometimes adorned them. This ring, it was noticed, generally disappeared about the middle of the month, and his scarf-pin followed by the twenty-first. With the beginning of the month they reappeared together. The literary staff was paid monthly.

Mr. Liqueur looked in at the door of the reporters' room to ask pleasantly if they would not like a fire. Had Protheroe been there he would have said "No"; but Billy Kirker said "Yes." Mr. Liqueur had thought that Protheroe was there.

Editorial Notes.

The ACADIAN will be pleased to accept and forward any subscriptions for the relief of the Windsor sufferers.

Physicians of Europe send out a warning to inhabitants of this continent that we may expect a great epidemic of grip this coming winter.

The question of manufacturing cheese in Canada, through the month of November, was brought up at a general meeting of the Butter and Cheese Association at Montreal recently.

If parents wish to give their boys and girls, from six to ten years of age, a good start for the penitentiary and for the ruin of their souls as well as bodies they have just to allow them the privilege of running on the streets until late bedtime.

A special meeting of the town council was held on Tuesday evening, to consider the best means to assist the sufferers by the Windsor fire.

The strike of the engineers in England, which was thought to have been settled, has again burst forth in double intensity.

The ACADIAN has frequently referred to the advantages to be gained by our town in the organization of a Board of Trade.

WINDSOR IN ASHES.

The Beautiful Old Historic Town Swept by Flames.

Windsor, perhaps the prettiest town in the lower provinces, is a mass of unsightly ruins.

WHERE THE FIRE STARTED. About 2.45 on Sunday morning near the bridge a fire broke out. At present it is a little uncertain what caused it.

An alarm of fire was given, and after perhaps an hour's work the fire was practically confined to the small and unimportant buildings in which it originated.

The flames broke away from their captors and assailed the Marine Block which succumbed and was soon a huge blazing pile.

A call was sent to Halifax and with all reasonable promptness, considering the hour, the Halifax Fire Department sent a chemical and a couple of other engines up to fight the fire.

By and by the Halifax firemen arrived and about the neighborhood of the Episcopal church the flames began to weaken and eventually the fire was subdued.

Two bodies were taken from the ruins on Monday. They were those of an aged couple named Thomas Kelly and wife.

On Wednesday the skull of a man was found, and was at first supposed to be Ed. Laperriere, a laborer.

Both newspaper offices were destroyed, Mr J. A. Woodworth, of the Tribune, had no insurance on his plant which was of course a total loss.

Shakespearean Recital.

The Athenaeum Society of Acadia University have been fortunate in securing the services of Mr. George B. Williams of New York, the noted Shakespearean delineator, to appear under that auspices, Wednesday evening, October 27th, when this talented gentleman will give a recital of Shakespeare's master comedy, "Much Ado About Nothing," impersonating some eighteen distinct characters by a wonderful change of voice and facial expression, without the aid of any of the stage accessories. The simplicity of the work enables the youth to follow and appreciate the interpretation, as well as the adult. Mr. Williams has met with the greatest success, and has been most enthusiastically received in the Maritime Provinces. He is now returning to many of the cities and towns visited during the summer, and will give a second reading in Truro and Halifax, while in en-route to Wolfville. The following is a notice in part from the St. John Daily Sun, of July 20: "Mr. Williams possesses a fine stage presence, and a full rich voice, under admirable control. He is a student as well as an expert elocutionist. His rendering of the richest of the true comedy parts was exquisite in its lights and shades. Benedict's Soliloquy was a masterpiece of dramatic recital. Mr. Williams has made his mark in St. John as an interpreter of the humor of Shakespeare."

A KINGSTON MERCHANT.

TELLS OF HIS RELEASE FROM THE PAINS OF RHEUMATISM.

It had afflicted him for upwards of Ten Years and Many Remedies were Tried in Vain—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Effectively Released.

From the Freeman, Kingston, Ont. Fifteen years ago Mr. Alexander O'Brien, the popular Prince street tailor, was one of the most athletic young men in Kingston, both as a foot-racer and otherwise. Eleven years ago he commenced business and shortly afterwards was stricken with rheumatism, which caused him much pain, loss of rest and neglect of business. He states that he tried many doctors and many medicines, all to no avail. Over a year ago a friend advised him to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and though he had but little confidence in them, or skeptical medicine of any description, at the urgent request of his friend he decided to give the pills a trial, and according to Mr. O'Brien it was a lucky venture. After the first box had been taken, customers noted the change, and when three boxes had been finished the result was marvellous. His strength had returned, impoverished blood renewed, muscles developed, rheumatism almost disappeared, bearing a slight stiffness in knee joints, which is gradually going, and in the last six months he has done more work in his tailoring establishment, than he had accomplished in the previous four years. A Freeman representative noticing the change in Mr. O'Brien's condition, asked him to what he attributed his apparent good health after such a long siege of illness. Without hesitation he replied, "Well, I have taken no medicine in the past year other than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, therefore I attribute my present condition solely to their use. They had such a good effect in driving rheumatism out of my system and building up my hattered constitution, that my wife, whose health was not any too good also tried the pills. A few boxes remedied her illness, and she, too, is as well in her spirits of them as I am. Many of my customers and friends who witnessed the effect of the pills on my constitution commenced to use them, and they relate the same story as I have told you. I am as well now as ever I was in my life."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure by going to the root of the disease. They renew and build up the blood, and strengthen the nerves, thus driving disease from the system. Avoid imitations by insisting that every box you purchase is enclosed in a wrapping bearing the full trade mark, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

Tennyson's Memorial. For nearly three years efforts have been progressing for the erection of a fitting memorial to the late poet-laureate, Alfred Lord Tennyson. Aug. 5 saw the fulfilment of this effort in the unveiling of a splendid Maltese cross of Cornish granite on the crest of High Down, on the site of an ancient beacon that in stress and storm

Bringing the sailor to his wife, And traveled men from foreign lands. To this old beacon the late poet was wont to bend his way during his daily walks, the distance from his beloved Isle of Wight home, at Frenchwater, being but a pleasant stroll. High Down, in fact, forms part of the Manor Farringford, Tennyson's famous island home, so hidden from the gaze of passers by, with a belt of splendid trees and lovely grazing lands, as to satisfy even the late poet's craving for solitude, complete rest and quiet.

It is fitting, therefore, that the new beacon, for such is the Tennyson memorial, finds its resting place on the very spot the poet so continually haunted with his living presence. It is fitting, too, that Aug. 5, the dead poet's birth day, should have been the date selected for the unveiling of the beautiful memorial cross that has been erected by the friends of the poet in America as well as in England.

SHE WAS A CRIPPLE. But four boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills put her on her feet.

HAMILTON, Oct. 18.—Public interest centers on the startlingly wonderful recovery of Mrs. A. Waldick, 774 Queen Street, N. She was a cripple for four years. To-day, through the agency of Dodd's Kidney Pills, she is sound and well. Her story is short but convincing. "For four years," she states, "I was the victim of kidney disease and lame back. I could hardly move about without the aid of a chair, on which to lean. Herri-ri of the great good done by Dodd's Kidney Pills, I tried them. I used four boxes and can now get along without any help. I am cured, and you may publish this for the benefit of other sufferers."

Teach your child reverence; allow him to hear no irreverent word. Have him reverse all that is sacred, his Maker and the Lord's day, the word of God and the sanctuary where we worship God. You will find this rule to be the scaffolding about which you must build all moral character. No amount of ethical teaching can have any weight where there is not reverence for sacred things.

Convention Notes.

The second annual convention of the Nova Scotia W. C. T. U. was held in Windsor during October 5th, 6th, 7th. Quite a large number of visitors and delegates from the Wolfville Union was in attendance at some or all of these meetings. All reported an excellent convention. The following extracts are taken from the report of Mrs. Jones, which was read at the regular meeting of the Union on Oct. 16th. This report was a very full and interesting one and would be given entire if space permitted.

On the evening previous to the formal opening of the convention a reception was held in Oldfellow's Hall in honor of the delegates, which was a very successful affair. The room was tastefully trimmed with bunting, and Mrs. T. flowers. Mrs. Dimock presided. Mrs. T. B. Smith gave a very pleasing address full of hearty welcomes and kind thoughts. Addresses were also given by the Rev. Avery Shaw, the Rev. Mr. Wright and other members of the Union. In behalf of the honorary members, welcomed the visitors to the town. He also presented to Mrs. Chesley—on behalf of the Y's—a pretty gavel decorated with white ribbon. Dr. Young, an honorary member of the W. C. T. U., being called upon gave an admirable address, and afterwards constituted himself a life member of the Y's by signing the pledge and paying the fee of twenty-five dollars, he having the honor of being the first life member in the Province. Good music was furnished and refreshments served. Delegates and visitors were delighted with this very pleasing reception.

On Tuesday morning at 9.30 the convention was called to order by Mr. Chesley, the president, who conducted the devotional exercises. After some preliminary work the cor. secretary read a letter from J. Hale Ramsay, of Montreal, who is the only life member of the Provincial Union. It contained greetings, good advice and suggestions as to the working of the different departments. This gentleman—some time ago—promised $500 to the Dominion Union if it doubled its membership this year.

In the afternoon the president read her address—reviewing the work done during the past year. Owing to the promised publicity it had been a year of unusual activity among temperance societies. She had great stress on the fact that more publicity should be distributed. The publicity, though deferred, is surely coming. Liquor dealers have organized and called to their aid the tobacco dealers. In view of this the movement of the R. T. is timely and wise, viz, the federation of the temperance forces. They should have our co-operation in this plan. Mrs. Chesley did not agree with those who think that we should take the foremost place in the great conflict, but so long as women and children are suffering from the evils of the liquor traffic, so long as there are mother's sons to be led astray by it, so long is it the duty of every Christian woman to do what she can by voice, pen and influence towards its destruction. She reviewed the work done in the different departments—two having been added during the past year—"Mother's Meetings" and "Patriot meetings." Through the laudable efforts of Miss Smith and others, one union had been re-organized and a young woman's branch successfully formed in Kentville.

It was a matter of congratulation that many unions had secured the services of Rev. E. O. Taylor. Later in the session these lectures were very highly spoken of by those who had heard them. Mrs. Chesley reported that the membership had steadily increased during the year. Forty-two dollars had been forwarded in response to an appeal for the World's Mission and House of Refuge for fugitive Armenians. The treasurer's report showed that the union had made very substantial financial progress during the year. The cor. secretary's report gave a detailed statement of work done in the different counties showing an increased interest, and better results than ever before.

The Methodist church was crowded on Tuesday evening to hear Miss Slack's address on the temperance question. The meeting was opened by the singing of the Jubilee ode by fifteen little girls, a welcome to Miss Slack. Rev. Mr. Wright presided. In introducing the speaker he showed in a marked degree his own interest in the temperance cause. The lecture was an able and earnest appeal in behalf of this great reform.

Wednesday a. m. was devoted to the reading of reports from the different superintendents of departments. The report on Mothers' Meetings was especially interesting. Those who discussed it pleaded for more practical work among mothers, and several books were recommended for their special use.

In the afternoon a communication was read from the Royal Temple of Temperance referring to a prohibition committee. Miss Smith, of Windsor, related a very pathetic story of the little girl whom they had found and adopted and named "Katie Yonanas."

Last winter when Hunter and Crowsley were holding services in Windsor they learned of a man, woman and little child who were living near Falmouth in a most wretched condition, the child being very cruelly neglected. The woman, supposed by many not to be her mother, refused to give her up, and later, when forced was made to do so, it was found they had walked to Kentville, forcing the tender mother's year old child to walk all the way. She was rescued and all the way. She was rescued and all the way.

A man who had been up for an examination in Scripture, had failed at early, and the relations between him and the examiner had become somewhat strained. The latter asked him if there was any text in the whole Bible he could quote. He pondered and then repeated, "And Judas went out and hanged himself." "Is there any other verse you know in the whole Bible?" the examiner asked. "Yes. 'Go thou and do likewise.'" There was a solemn pause and the proceedings terminated. Mamms—Oh, Ethel, you never saw me behave like that. Ethel (aged 4)—Well, I haven't known you so very long.

Minards Liniment is the best.

An old negro, being informed that a member of his race had forged a note in the bank, exclaimed: "Dat's what comes or education. I got 10 children, but thank de lord, not one er dem kin read or write!"

Minards Liniment Cures Colds, &c. "Land is pretty high priced here, isn't it?" asked the tourist. "Well, I should remark," said the native. "We have had such a boom lately that the grocers can't afford to put gravel on their dried carrots."

Minards Liniment Cures LaGrippe "What is your new painting called?" "The Cleaner," replied the artist. "Ah, a young girl with a sickle and a bundle of grain?" "No; an elderly girl with a flat pocket-book and an armful of bargain day goods."

Ayer's Hair Vigor invigorates the scalp; cures dandruff and itching. An elegant dressing. "I don't think much of this kinetoscope business," grumbled Mr. Puer. "Here I've paid half a dollar to see a picture of a train coming toward me at full speed, when I can see the real thing out of doors a dozen times a day for nothing. A man is about the biggest darn fool in creation anyhow."

Minards Liniment the best Hair Restorer. "Is your husband a follower of Isak Walton, ma'am?" "No, sahb, he's a follower of dat every Peleg Johnson, de lazie' coon in Blacktown."

"I mean he is a picatorialist." "Say, man, you better go ax um. You'll find um down in de garden diggin' wums."

When the hair begins to fall out or turn gray, the scalp needs doctoring, and we know of no better specific than Hall's Vegetable, Sillian Hair Restorer. Henry Higgins—"Wot is a pessimist, anyway?" "Weary Watkins—you know Dismal Dawson?"

"An' de other day you heard 'im say that he believed dere would come a time when everybody would have to work. Well, he's one of them fellers."

In many cases, the first work of Ayer's Sarsaparilla is to expel the effects of the other medicines that have been tried in vain. It would be a saving of time and money to experiment with Ayer's Sarsaparilla at first instead of last.

"Perhaps you would like to do the shopping for the family yourself?" she exclaimed. "Yes," he said, "it was the old, old dispute between capital and labor."

STANFORD JUNCTION, P. Q., 12th Aug. 1893. MESSRS. C. G. RICHARDS & Co. GENTLEMEN,—I fell from the bridge leading from a platform to a loaded car of grain. The bridge went down as well as the load on my back, and I struck on the end of the sleeper, causing a serious injury to my leg. Only for the being very fleshy, would have broken it. In an hour could not walk a step. Commenced using MINARD'S LINIMENT and the third day went to Montreal on business and got about well by the use of a cane. In ten days was able to walk. I can sincerely recommend it as the best liniment that I know of in use. Yours truly, C. H. GORDON.

"As," said the politician, "I said I was the workman's friend," he added, "I said the man with calloused hands. 'No—not at present.' 'And you never did any work.' 'That's true. You see, what the workman most needs is work. And I am too much the workman's friend to run any risk of taking work away from him.'"

Two dusky small boys were quarrelling. One was peering forth a volume of vituperative epithets, while the other leaned against a fence and calmly contemplated him. When the flow of language was exhausted, he said: "Are you true?" "You ain't got nuffin more to say?" "No." "Well, all dem tigs what you called me you is."

Special Advice to Ladies Who Contemplate Coloring Cotton Goods. If a merchant or any one else tells you that package dyes prepared for all wool goods will color cotton goods equally well, do not believe him. A person making such an assertion knows little about dyes and dyeing work.

Vegetable flower requires special dye. Such dyes are not made by the mixture of indigo and common package dye. Special dyes for vegetable fibres, such as cotton and mixed goods, are made up by the proprietors of Diamond Dye, and every color is simply perfection.

The special Diamond Dye cotton colors are great chemical discoveries, and confined entirely to the Diamond Dye. The colors are sixteen in number, and immensely popular with export, retail and wholesale everywhere. Cotton goods dyed with these Diamond Dye Cotton colors never fade in sun or washing.

If you are about to dye cotton goods or desire to color rags for carpets or mats, be sure and ask your merchant for Fast Diamond Dye for Cotton and every color is simply perfection.
