CHAPTER VI.

"Alice is a saucy girl," said madame, more indulgently than she might have spoken of any one but such a prime favorite. "And so you saw her, Natalie? Did you like her?"

"Oh, yes! She has such lovely blue eyes!" cried Natalie, with enthusiasm.

"Why," I said, smiling, "that's much what she said of you, Nat—only it was that you had lovely black ones."

"The force of contrast," madame said, with a smile, as she swept out of the room.

I knew that she was pleased with me and with everything. That things should have gone thus far without a hitch was more than I had expected, though, to be sure, madame, fastidious as she was, could hardly fail to be pleased, I thought, looking at the little dark face opposite to me, lighted up by those wonderful eyes.

"Well, you didn't find my mother very formidable, after all, did you, Nat?" I said.

"Oh, no," she cried eagerly. "She is very kind. It was much easier than I had expected. But then everything is, and nicer too."

"That's all right," I returned. "And what do you think of Chavasse?"

"It is lovely—so large and quaint and old! There are no places like it in Jamaica. There, if a place is old, it is all rickety and ramshackle and tumble-down. I more than like it."

"I thought you would," I said, pleased, but not surprised; for, if there is a person capable of saying and meaning that he does not like Mount Chavasse, I should like to have a look at him: "You'll like everything in time, I hope—Chavasse, the village, and the people in it."

"I like the people that I have seen already," she asserted, nodding her curly head at me as she clasped her two slim hands at the back of her neck—"that is, some of them, you know. Let me see—who are they? You first. So far, I like you best of all."

"Compliments thankfully acknowledged," I said, laughing. "Whom do you like next, Nat?"

"Oh, madame, of course! And then—let me see again—that sunburned man with the blue eyes and his hat at the back of his head. Who did you say he was?"

"Roger Yorke."

"Of course—I should have remembered. It is a nice name. And then Alice Deeping, and that old gentleman with the rosy face—when I know him to speak to—and—Dear me, that's all!"

"Not quite. You forget Fraser Froude."

"What—the man on horseback?" she cried, opening her eyes. "Ugh! I

MOTHERHOOD SUGGESTIONS

Advice to Expectant Mothers

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once children there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

don't like him at all, although I'm sure I can't tell why. Does he come here?"

"He hasn't done so yet; he is the new owner of Holmedeane, the place you can just catch a glimpse of from here."

The mention of Holmedeane was as good a diversion as I could have made. Her first shyness gone and her tongue once fairly loosened, Miss Nat could chatter fast enough, I found. She rained upon me a shower of eager questions and answered mine with equal vivacity.

We had been chatting for an hour or more when madame at last came back and I felt as though I had been used to Natalie Orme all my life. She went off to her room accompanied by Mrs. Batterbin, who was closely followed by Valla.

Madame lingered a moment to speak to me.

"What an odd-looking person that is, Ned, my dear!"

"Valla? Rather!" I responded.

"Very! She has caused a sensation down-stairs."

"And all through the village, too! I can vouch for that. I rather wonder that we didn't have some of the population at our heels. Never mind, we'll stand by her for her mistress's sake."

"Then you like her?" said my mother, with some eagerness.

"Rather. Don't you?"

"Certainly; but she is very foreign-looking. I wish she had been fair."

"Can't say I do," I returned, rising and stretching my arms above my head as I turned to the door, for the first dinner-bell clanged out just then.

"Why, mother, those great golden-black eyes of hers will bewitch Whitesford—see if they don't!"

It seemed that I was right, too, for it came to pass that half the inhabitants of Whitesford fell in love with Natalie. No one could resist her pretty ways, her dark, bewitching little face, and above all, her glorious eyes. Madame grew so caressingly fond of her in the course of a month or so that I should probably have been jealous if I had not been fond of her myself. Indeed, before the next month was over I knew that I should have found the Mount uncommonly dull without Natalie Orme. Scarcely a day passed away, the trees began to lose their leaves, and in the park at Chavasse golden-brown and rich red showers fell upon us as we walked, or rode beneath the hanging boughs; while in the preserves of Roxborough Chase guns were popping and partridges and hares were dropping all day long.

CHAPTER VII.

"My dear Natalie, I really think it necessary," madame said, gravely.

Nat shrugged her pretty shoulders.

She sat curled up in a queer little childish way on one side of the wide window-seats of the drawing-room, the blaze of the setting sun shining full upon her. She wore a thin black dress dotted with little gold stars, and had a pale yellow rose at her throat. Very quaint and pretty she looked. Very small and childish, and a little rebellious, too, just then.

"But, madame," she began deprecatingly, and then stopped.

"But what, my dear?"

"It seems so absurd."

"Does it? In what way?"

"I'm too old to have a governess. Why—tossing her curly head—"I'm grown up!"

"You are not particularly formidable," said madame, smiling as she looked up from the lace-work with which her fine hands were busy, and across at the little brown face.

"No; but I am old. Why, it was my birthday last week! I'm older than Ned."

"Twenty-one isn't such an awful age, Nat," I interposed. "And you don't look more than seventeen, you know."

"Neither would you if it wasn't for that baby-mustache of yours," she retorted, leaning forward to pull a flower from outside the open window, and tossing it toward me.

Nat was very fond of bantering me about my mustache, not treating that adornment with any means the respect which it merited; but I was too used to it and too warm and comfortable now to do more than laugh lazily. Madame went on:

"My dear, the fact of your age renders what I say necessary. If you were a few years younger I should not trouble you with the matter yet. You must know that I do not want my little daughter to be a duce."

Wonderfully gentle and kind was my stately mother's manner, very fond and caressing. She had always been affectionate to me, but not in such a tender and loving fashion as she was to our little nut brown maid—I had got into the habit of calling her that—it suited her so well. Nat gave her shoulders another pettish little shrug, and her bright face clouded slightly.

"I suppose I am a duce," she said, rather dubiously; "but somehow I never felt so before. I don't think the girls in Jamaica ever did know much—none that I knew did. No one seemed to expect them to."

"They stare not at the stars from out their attics."

Nor deal—thank Fate for that!—in mathematics."

I interposed, laughing—"eh, Nat?"

"But Nat had not read Byron, and only stared at me. My mother gave me a glance which told me that she would feel obliged if I held my tongue and took up Natalie's last words."

"But you are not in Jamaica now, my love, and you must remember that English notions are different from those that prevail there. You would not like in a little time, I am sure, to find yourself terribly behind the girls of your age in the things which a lady is expected to know. For instance, at Roxborough the other night it must have been very annoying to you not to be able to play your own accompaniment."

"Alice played it for me," said Nat.

"But if Alice had not been there?"

"Then Ned would," said Natalie giving her shoulders another little shrug.

She was a wilful little puss at all times; but she was more so than usual this evening. Madame's suggestion, made but a few minutes before, to the effect that she should have a governess, had put her out—and me, too, for that matter—though to be sure, there was no disputing the fact that she was a most woful little duce. She could read, of course, and read aloud really well; but her writing was the queerest of spider-scrawls. I do not think she knew one rule of arithmetic from another, and I am afraid that her knowledge of geography and history was absolutely nil. She had picked up a good deal of French and a little Spanish and understood the lingo of the blacks; but this last was hardly an ornamental accomplishment from a modern

Household Economy
How to Have the Best Cough Syrup and Save $2, by Making It at Home.

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large quantity of pain syrup. If you take two cups of granulated sugar, add one cup of warm water and stir about 2 minutes; you have as good syrup as money could buy.

If you will then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (60 cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle, and fill it up with the Sugar Syrup, you will have as much cough syrup as you could buy ready made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly. Any housewife can easily prepare it in five minutes.

And you will find it the best cough syrup you ever used—even in whooping cough. You can feel it take hold—usually stops the most severe cough in 24 hours. It is just laxative enough, has a good tonic effect, and taste is pleasant. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

It is a splendid remedy, too, for whooping cough, croup, hoarseness, asthma, chest pains, etc.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in gualacol and all the healing pine elements. No other preparation will work in this formula.

This recipe for making cough remedy with Pinex and Sugar Syrup is now used and prized in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada. The plan has often been imitated, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this recipe, if the genuine Pinex is used. Your druggist has Pinex, or will set it for you, if you ask him. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

point of view. She could not dance, and had not the slightest acquaintance with any musical instrument, although she could sing with remarkable fire and passion—she had a splendid rich singing voice that it was a treat to listen to. Madame was very proud of this one accomplishment of hers, and I brought it forward now in Nat's favor.

"At any rate, mother, all the governesses in the world couldn't improve her voice," I said.

"Her voice? No; but it should be trained properly," returned madame.

"Come, Natalie—do not look so woe-begone, my dear. You love music so much, surely you would like to play yourself?"

"Ned plays for me whenever I like," said Nat. "Oh, madame"—she descended from the window-seat, and kneeling down, put her round cheek carressingly against my mother's hand—"do say I need not have a governess! I have been so happy since I have been here, and a horrid governess would spoil everything."

"My dear child, what nonsense!" Madame spoke with a suggestion of impatience in her clear tones. "You surely do not suppose that I mean to engage some grim woman and send you to school to her! I shall try to find some one not much older than yourself—some one who will be a pleasant companion for you."

"But I don't want a companion," she pouted. "I have Ned and Alice Deeping. Oh, madame"—raising her black eyes beseechingly—"do say that you won't make me have one!"

"If I did, you would be the first to blame me in the time to come, child," madame replied, patting her cheek lightly as she rose. "I can not have my adopted daughter, and an heiress to boot, unable properly to sustain her position, Natalie;" and, with these words, she rustled out of the room.

There had been determination in every word my mother uttered, and, knowing her so well, I saw pretty plainly that a governess would surely come to the Mount. Nat understood it, too. I think, for from where she still knelt on the floor, she looked at me with a little deprecatory grimace.

"Oh, Ned, won't it be awful?" she said dolefully.

When Comparisons are odious.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"When in Rome do as the Romans do," is one of the old proverbs whose invariable wisdom I have sometimes doubted, but I am glad it exists, because it gives me a foundation for a new proverb of my own—"When in Rome, don't run Rome down."

A thoroughly charming woman from a distant part of the country has been visiting in our neighbourhood the last few weeks. That is, we all thought her thoroughly charming—the first time we met her. Later several of us modified our opinions and at least left out the "thoroughly," if we didn't actually eliminate the "charming." For sooner or later with all of us, our visitor seized an opportunity to compare our section of the country with the corner from which she came. And needless to say, the comparison was not in our favor.

Our climate—always the first topic of discussion—and our diet, our amusements and our newspapers, our shade trees and our morals, our architecture and our dispositions, our clothes and our time of going to bed and getting up, were all compared with the vastly superior condition of things that prevailed in that part of the world whence she came.

In other matters she appeared to be a person of taste and tact, but somehow in this one thing she seemed to have lost all sense of courtesy or modesty. Now this girl is an extreme example, but I have known a great many people who have his habit in some degree. They would never think of boasting about their own personal attainments, or belittling other people in comparison with themselves, and yet they are always making an opportunity to praise up their homeland at the expense of that corner of the world where the other fellow lives.

To my mind there is only one habit in worse taste, and that is to run down your own home. The jingoism of the American Abroad is deservedly condemned by our more cultured countrymen; and even though we laugh at the "man from home," who, when confronted with the most beautiful architecture in Europe only says, "But you ought to see the Town Hall in Kokomo," we must admit that this sort of thing is in bad taste. Nevertheless I don't think the very worst case of genuine jingoism is half so bad as the perverted jingoism of the disloyal American who is always running down his own country. The jingoist lacks taste and discretion; the traitor lacks heart and human feeling.

However, one need not choose between these two extremes because one need not go to either. There is, as always, a golden mean between them. When in Rome don't run Rome down or your own country either. Neither is necessary nor in good taste, and neither will really endear you to your host.

How The Body Kills Germs.

Germs that get into the body are killed in two ways—by the white corpuscles of the blood, and by a germ-killing substance that is in the blood. Just what this substance is, we do not know. The blood of a healthy person always has some germ-killing substance in it to ward off the attack of disease. The fountain head of life is the stomach. A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished, and that his whole body is improperly and insufficiently nourished. To put the body in healthy condition, to feed the system on rich, red blood and throw out the poisons from the body, nothing in the past forty years has excelled Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a pure glyceric extract (without alcohol), of bloodroot, golden seal and Oregon grape root; stone root, mandrake and queen's root with black cherrybark.

J. H. MARTIN, Esq.

"My husband was a sufferer from stomach trouble and impure blood," writes Mrs. JAMES H. MARTIN, of Frankfort, Ky. "He had a sore on his face that would form a scab which would dry and drop off in about a month, then another would immediately form. It continued this way for a long time. He tried every remedy that any one would suggest, but found no relief. He then tried Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery which completely cured him. He has stayed cured now for three years, and I recommend this valuable medicine for impurities of the blood."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules.

Fashions and Fads.

Fashion authorities tell us that with the spring will be seen millinery flowers of colored tulle, with tiny pearls and stonies for petals. Bright red or yellow silk roses and chrysanthemums in the shape of a knot on bon or muff are most charming on this season's furs.

The lingerie dresses just beginning to be shown in the shops frequently have the fullness of their skirts taken up in handrum tucks.

A charming combination seen at one of the recent French races was a seal-colored tailored suit, with coat and skirt trimmed with silver fox.

A white gown with silver or gold brocade have a note of bright color in the shape of a geranium-colored, purple or green velvet girdle.

Some of the wonderful contrasts of color this year are bright blue with China pink, vivid green with deep violet, capucine with punch red.

Soft little handmade hats of crepe de chine veiled with net and having brims composed of flowers will be worn at the southern resorts.

Green, purple and dark blue is a combination actually seen in tailored suits, and a charming one, because the green is just right that comes between.

In trimming young girls' dresses a great many small, colored roses—usually of chiffon—are seen. Bright blue velvet sashes, edged with small silk roses, are used for lingerie toilettes.

Already Paris is showing summer coats of tussor summer tannage, lined with figured mousseline or voile. Usually these linings are in bright colors.

For a young girl to wear with a dancing frock a dog collar of carved ivory squares is a very delightful thing. Or the squares may be of gold set with turquoise matrix.

A pretty French trick is the wearing of a bright silk handkerchief in a tiny breast pocket—just enough to give a spot of color matching the flower on the hat.

Odd coats of bright colored croppon sole and tussor have short sleeves and basques appearing below high, draped girdles. With these are worn embroidered toile skirts.

A lovely southern gown is of pastel pink crepe, nixon with an overdress printed in lilac shades, and narrow velvet ribbons in petunia color. The broad hat that goes with this has long streamers of the same ribbon.

A pretty French fashion is to use red, green or blue satin or mousseline on a set of furs—lining the muff or working it into the boa. Such muffs are apt to be smaller and round.

The new tailored suits for the Riviera are frequently made of white satin, supple cloth and white velour. Such suits have belts of sapphire blue or virgin's blue, and sometimes a touch of similar blue on the coat collar.

Heels of evening shoes seem to be made not so much to be walked on as to excite envy! Whether embroidered or otherwise decorated they must fall in with the general color scheme of the gown. White heels are seen on black velvet shoes.

Fascinating mantles made to wear in the sunny south are three-quarters long, of light cloth or broche tissues of the color of the dress. The linings of these are often two shades of tissue, and sometimes they are outlined by quiltings of velvet ribbon.

Attractive small hats for the spring are to be made entirely of roses or other small flowers. Soft straw and mousseline will be so worked that it will be impossible to tell which is straw and which is mousseline or ribbon. The brims of these little hats will be jaunty and narrow.

It is but fair to say, however, that the sex should not be judged by the Indiana girl, who had a man arrested on the charge that he attempted to kiss her.

The Evening Telegram.

W. J. HERDER, Proprietor. . . W. F. LLOYD, Editor. THURSDAY, JANUARY 9, 1913.

Refutation of McGrath's Calumnies.

Yesterday, McGrath afforded the public a means of convincing themselves of his utter unscrupulousness in the fabrication of false charges. The proof is simple but conclusive. We pass by the insult. Here it is. Yesterday the Herald had this: "The Telegram's simperton gleefully proclaimed that he was going to Brigus, next week with Coaker, apparently unconscious that in the past 'going to Brigus' was a polite term for a real big 'drunk'."

"We direct the attention of our readers to the letter of Mr. Coaker . . . in which he makes it known that the fishermen of Port de Grave have invited us over there with him to address them at a public meeting."

These are all the words we used in connection with the matter. We stated simply that we had received an invitation from the fishermen of Port de Grave. We did not even say we had accepted. We did not say whether we were going to Port de Grave or not. Moreover we were invited to the town of Port de Grave and not to the town of Brigus.

The whole insinuation and insult is based on our supposed use of the phrase "going to Brigus." Our readers can see for themselves that we did not use the phrase at all. We did not say we were going to Brigus. We did not even say we were going to Port de Grave. We mentioned merely the invitation. This is a simple and convincing instance of McGrath's fabrication. He is heartless, cruel and fiendish in his insults, and absolutely astute in concocting a charge to injure an opponent. We have shown him up now as a base fabricator of a false charge and a brazen perverter of truth.

Now, we will turn to what McGrath calls "That Strange Rumor Two Years Ago about the Evening Telegram." In reply to our denial that either the proprietor or editor of the Evening Telegram had approached the Morris party two years ago with a view of supporting it for certain consideration, McGrath says:

"It is but natural that Editor Lloyd should deny this rumor. No one would expect him to admit it now, when he is working overtime to try and have the people believe that he never wavered in his loyalty to his leader the past four years. We submit, however, that his mere denial will not satisfy the public, who will want something more than a bare assertion that the rumor is not true. They will want, for instance, some information as to why, during all that time, the Telegram was silent on public issues, printed nothing political, and was supposed by many to have 'gone out of politics.'"

So says McGrath, and as usual overreaches himself. Would it not be unnatural if Editor Lloyd did not deny such a falsehood? But McGrath wants more than a bare denial. He wants proof of a negative against all codes of argumentation. In pressing home his point, he shows the weakness of his hand. He wants to know "why during all that time the Telegram was silent on public issues." The only period of time mentioned by McGrath is the past four years. The Telegram has not been silent the past four years. Within that period we have dealt with every public issue that has come up. We backed Bond during the 1909 elections. We dealt with the American fishery question and the Hague issues. We commented on the Reciprocity issue and the visit of Mr. Pepper, the Washington Commissioner. We opposed the movement to permit the exportation of pulpwood from the Labrador. We supported Sir Robert Bond during the session of 1910. We opposed the Railway Extension Bill and the Loan Bill. We criticized severely the extravagance and picknicking propensity of the Government. We criticized the Canadian Naval plans in which Morris and Watson had apparently not protected Newfoundland in a series of articles entitled, "Under the Maple Leaf." We criticized strongly the slackness which the Government showed as to the Bait Act, in regard to the Corkum business and the Trefethen and Lord scheme. We have been constant in criticizing the waste of money in the appointment of Agricultural Commissioners, &c. We have exposed the granting of large areas of timber land to party supporters and relatives and associates of members. We opposed the amendment of the Crown Land Act, and asked for a Royal Commission to investigate the extraordinary way in which timber land of the Government has been dealt with. We opposed the Sanitoria expenditure. We took a large share in the exposures made in the Morison Memorials. In fact we have been all the time on the watch and dealt with the principal issues as they arose.

If however, McGrath's "all that time" is in reality meant to apply to the part of the past four years, preceding the time of the alleged rumour, which he gives as two years ago, our answer is contained in the last paragraph, for the first part of it deals with issues during that period. If Mr. McGrath contends that we were not constantly and persistently heckling the Government, our reply is that we dealt with all the main issues as they rose, and that our plan of campaign was decided on after consultation with Sir Robert Bond, and that part of the plan was to give the Morris Government rope in the expectation they would hang themselves; and everybody knows that the policy was sound and that the Government has killed itself with the constituencies. McGrath has overreached himself on this reference to the Telegram's criticism, for the course pursued was kept up in close consultation with Sir Robert Bond.

The rest of the McGrath case is even more unsound. He charges Mr. Herder with offering to sell out the Evening Telegram with part consideration, a seat in the Legislative Council. The proof offered is peculiar. It is that Mr. Herder could "fairly claim" it for turning over the Evening Telegram. A delicious tit-bit of political morality. But what a proof! Now for the other side. Mr. Herder denies it categorically. McGrath, however, says this term was originally agreed on. McGrath's logic involves the Government in offering to give Mr. Herder a Methodist seat in the Legislative Council when the Government had not one at its disposal. At that time the Government had not a Methodist seat at their disposal. Does McGrath take Mr. Herder and the public for fools?

Another term which McGrath alleges was agreed on was to give Mr. Arthur Herder the Clerkship of the Assembly. But Mr. McGrath held the clerkship at that time, and held it long after until the Hon. D. J. Green's death made the vacancy which he obtained in the Legislative Council. This part of the case is also unsound. For McGrath unwittingly involves the Government party in having made an agreement to turn him (McGrath) out of the Clerkship and put Mr. Arthur Herder in his place. Does not McGrath see how ridiculous he is making himself?

McGrath next states that Mr. Herder insisted on having the lion's share of the public printing as another part of the consideration. Further, he says this was agreed on. The proof he offers is that Mr. Herder always insisted on getting it from the Bond Government, and further that on one occasion he compelled Mr. Jackman to take out of the Herald Office printing he claimed should go to his office. What a proof! McGrath asserts it was agreed to give the lion's share of the Morris Government printing to the Evening Telegram. If the agreement made was to give the lion's share to Mr. Herder, the only things left would be the jackals' share. Then McGrath's argument involves this conclusion that the Morris party was willing to provide for the Evening Telegram as a lion and for the Chronicle and Daily News as jackals. McGrath should remember the old saying, "What a tangled web we weave, when once we practice to deceive"; for undoubtedly he is badly tangled up. Thanks for the tribute to the prowess of the Evening Telegram. We know it was unconscious, but it is there all the same, and the position is now on record in public print.

He turns next to Mr. Lloyd. He says that we offered to support Morris for a safe seat in the House of Assembly and legal pap. The charge is untrue. The proof offered is of the same flimsy nature as the rest of the McGrath proofs. He says that Mr. Lloyd has been to three districts and has had legal patronage from the Bond Government. What proof is there in that of Mr. Lloyd offering to sell himself to the Morris party? The inference is quite different. As to the seats, Mr. Lloyd has never sought a safe seat. He offered to go and did go on three occasions to fight forlor hopes. He went to Trinity and wrestled a seat held previously by a Tory opponent. He went to Fort de Grave and to Fortune Bay and tried to rescue seats held previously by Tories. In the latter quest his mission was not successful as in the Trinity District. Is it likely then that a candidate who has never asked his own party for an easy mark should ask of it from Morris? Moreover, is it probable that a man who never worried about patronage from the Bond Government would begin to insist on it from his opponents? Mr. Lloyd never offered to support the Morris party and was never willing to support the Morris party.

The harping on the Letter List exposes the poverty of McGrath's case. We refused to barter our independence one jot to retain it. During the time we held it we criticized the Morris party freely and frankly. Sir Edward Morris's testimony is conclusive on that point. He complained at Bonne Bay bitterly that we had pursued him in a way unsurpassed in our political annals ever since he took office. Of that period of three and a half years complained about by Morris, six-sevenths of it, viz. three years, included the time we were printing the Letter List. His leader therefore completely disposes of McGrath's charge that we were on the fence, and it also disposes of the first charge we noticed that there has been nothing doing in the Evening Telegram politically. Whatever McGrath affects to assert for the sake of argument, Morris completely demolishes by his bitter attack on us at Bonne Bay. And further, when the test came we showed what we thought of the patronage by sacrificing the Letter List patronage rather than print the Advocate's apology which the Government asked us to do.

No one knows better than Sir Robert Bond that the statement we made from McGrath's article is an absolute fabrication and utterly untrue. Another fact possibly with a bearing on this matter is that three times last fall when Sir Robert Bond came to town to discuss political issues with his party, he failed to visit the Telegram office or confer with Editor Lloyd, who had to go to the railway depot to speak with him. "Might not this be fairly regarded as evidence that the ex-Premier suspects the Telegram people of having tried to sell him out, and no longer trusts them?" The charge is grossly untrue, for we have been in close touch with Sir Robert Bond the whole of the time referred to.

Castro Declares He is Ruined

New York, Jan. 2.—General Castro this afternoon changed his mind about discussing his plans and received the newspaper men. He said that he did not know whether or not he would return to Paris. "I have no interests in Germany," he said, "and there is no truth in the statement that I am going back to Venezuela to head a revolution backed by German interests. I don't think the Germans make their money so easily as to give it for such a purpose. To use a Latin phrase, 'Verum est id quod est.'"

Castro wrote this phrase on a piece of paper and then translated it. I meant, he said, "The truth is what it is." The Venezuelan wore a skull cap of black velvet trimmed with gold and gold embossed cloth slippers. An interpreter was present and two stenographers. Castro declared he had no intention of visiting Havana. Asked about the money and lands he had lost in Venezuela, he replied: "All my money was taken by President Gomez. I am ruined. He robbed me of twenty-five million francs. It was my capital. He even took my horses and mule, and my house furnishings. This was done after my departure from Venezuela. I left in November 21, 1908, to go to Europe for an operation.

Here, General Castro, with the assistance of his valet, removed part of his clothing and exhibited a long scar on his abdomen. "I have no money interests in Venezuela now," continued the former President. "Everything is lost, even my honor." General Castro said that his wife was on the Island of Tenerife.

Florizel in Port.

The Red Cross Liner Florizel, Captain Smith, entered port at eleven o'clock this morning, in the midst of the storm, after a passage of five and a half days from New York and Halifax. From the latter port boisterous weather prevailed but the ship made good work. She brought a full cargo and passengers. From New York—Dr. J. Richards, F. Canning, Miss C. Johnson, Miss Helen Hawco. Change of Capt.

Capt. J. Keen Leaves Portia
 The S. S. Portia on her return from the westward will be dry docked to receive her annual overhauling. It is understood that Capt. Joe Keen will not go in her again. He will resume command of the Florizel's bridge at the icefields. The post vacated by Capt. Keen at Portia will be filled by a new man, not yet appointed. There will not be any promotions for the sailing captains of Bowring's modern fleet this year following the loss of the Algerine which left her bones in the Arctic regions, as that makes one vessel short. It is probable, however, there may be a few changes that are yet unknown. Except that Captain Yerman goes in the Kite, succeeding Capt. Carroll.

Vandalism.

During the progress of the dance at the British Hall, last night, a mean set of vandalism was committed. Two young men got under the gallery at the side entrance to the building about midnight, and hurled several missiles through two windows, smashed the glass in atoms and also destroying some woodwork. If any person had been passing inside at the time, they would, no doubt, have been badly hurt. On hearing somebody approach the miscreants fled, but the janitor of the hall has obtained their names, and will summon them.

McMurdo's Store News.

THURSDAY, Jan. 9, '13.
 Sanident Tooth Paste is now very largely used throughout the Colony, as its merits are becoming more widely known. Most people who use it, at the recommendation of their friends or of themselves will not use any other dentifice. We feel we have a good thing in Sanident Tooth Paste. We know it to be made of good materials skillfully combined in just the right proportions to form a genuinely good paste, and it can be depended on to do the work of cleansing the teeth and keeping the gums and mouth in a thoroughly clean and aseptic condition with the utmost effectiveness. It is of proper consistency to be used economically, and comes out flat on the brush so that there is no waste. On the whole, Sanident is not surpassed as a tooth preparation by anything of the kind. Use it with the Sanident Tooth Brush. Price, Paste 25c. a tube; Brushes, 35c. each.

S.S. Firemen.

The annual meeting of the South Side firemen took place in their hall last night and the following officers were re-elected.—F. Bursell, Capt.; J. Chafe, 1st Lieut.; R. Rodgers, 2nd Lieut.; S. C. Ebsary, Secretary; A. Euscombe, Treasurer; C. Burridge, Foreman of Branch; N. Healy, Foreman of Hatchets and Guest, Foreman of Ladders; Jas. Barter, Foreman of Hoses.
 A vote of thanks was tendered to the Hon. John Harris for magazines subscribed for by him for the year.

An Insult to Boys

There is a notice, printed in large type, posted on a window at the Custom House, saying "No boys permitted," and there are various criticisms as to why boys should be kept out of that place. The poster does not state what sort of boys it applies to. There are boys who visit there to pass envelopes, and also telegraph messages. The term is looked upon as an insult to boys in general, as already a couple of that gentry, who had business to transact, have been stubbornly refused admittance.

Rare Operation Cures Gangrene.

First of Its Kind Known in Medical Annals.

For the first time in medical annals, according to Louis J. Frank, superintendent of Beth Israel Hospital, New York, a delicate operation has been performed by which a case of gangrene—known to the medical world as angioseclerosis—has been completely cured. To Dr. Charles Goodman, attending surgeon at the Beth Israel Hospital, belong the honor of having performed an operation on Isidor Kaplan, thirty-five years old, of Trenton, N.J., the result of which has restored Mr. Kaplan to perfect health and has opened a new epoch in modern surgery.

Isidor Kaplan, the patient, who went to the hospital to have his right leg amputated, left there after about two weeks without the loss of the limb. He has already lost his left leg because of gangrene poison. His case was turned over to Dr. Goodman, who determined that his method should be employed to save Kaplan's leg and perhaps his life. The operation made it necessary to furnish a new blood supply to the leg which was dying as the result of the poisonous infection.

To do this Dr. Goodman applied the fruits of his study, which showed that when the veins became thickened later than the arteries, the blood stream may be switched from the arteries and made to go through the veins. This operation of switching the blood course necessitated stopping the flow completely, a feat which has heretofore been considered impossible without harm to the patient.

Stopping the blood flow for more than 15 minutes at the point of operation in the diseased lower extremities, Dr. Goodman joined the artery to the vein. The instruments used were very delicate and were made especially for the operation. The needles used for sewing the artery and vein together were as fine as hairs and the sewing material even finer. The effect upon the deadened tissue was almost instantaneous. The lower part of the leg began to take on a natural hue and the patient was almost immediately relieved of the excruciating pain from which he had suffered for weeks. After two weeks in the hospital under the careful surveillance of Dr. Goodman, Kaplan was discharged completely cured. Dr. Goodman has performed the same operation on three other cases in the Beth Israel Hospital and all of the patients are improving, and the operations appear to have been entirely successful.

Won in Eighteen

Los Angeles, January 1.—Luther McCarty, of Springfield, Missouri, shattered the heavyweight championship of Al Palzer, the Iowa giant, to-day. For nearly eight rounds he used the huge frame of the Iowa as a punching bag. The middle of the eighteenth round found Palzer staggering blindly about under a volley of lefts to his battered face, and when Referee Charles Eytan walked between the men and hoisted the right hand of the smiling cowboy pugilist, the decision was received with cheers.
 McCarty's victory following his decisive defeat three weeks ago of Jim Flynn, places him at the top of the list of white heavyweights. McCarty reiterated the statement to-day that he would never fight a negro.
 Palzer, in spite of his superior height, weight and reach, was no match for the cool-headed, agile youngster. He scarcely landed a blow throughout the fight.

McCarty entered the ring at 2.51, after watching the last preliminary from a ringside seat. He was followed by Palzer within a few moments. Ring side betting favored McCarty. Offers of 10 to 8 were greedily accepted by Palzer's backers. Most of the heavy betting was at even money. Palzer's weight was 227, and McCarty's 205.

Have Reached Agreement.

Special Evening Telegram.
PARIS, To-day.
 It is learned here that the Great Powers have practically reached an agreement to advise Turkey to cede on the question of Adrianople, but the Powers are not in harmony concerning the disposition of the Aegean Islands. The triple entente—Great Britain, France and Russia—are inclined to back up desire of allies for cession of Islands to Greece, but the Italy—favor leaving to Turkey those Islands near the Turkish coast, particularly those close to the Dardanelles. Difficulty is being experienced in settlement of the question of Albania, as Austria shows no disposition to modify her attitude. Austria is especially anxious to include Scutari within the limits of the New Albania. It is understood that the Powers will make no representations to the Porte before the end of the week. The impression prevails in France that Austria will not demobilize until all delicate Balkan questions have been definitely settled.

Three Boys Drowned

While Playing Hockey on a Lake in Michigan.
 Olivet, Mich., Jan. 2.—While playing hockey on Pine lake, near here, this afternoon, three boys broke through the thin ice and were drowned, in spite of heroic efforts by their companions to rescue them. The dead are:—George Dewey, 14 years; Clark Morgan, 12; Stanley Lansborough and Dewey, close behind him also went into the hole. Irvin Van Wye, George Lansborough and Ward Keany, in attempting a rescue, also were precipitated into the icy waters. George Lansborough and Van Wye managed to break their way to the shore. Kenney clung to the ice and was almost frozen to death when rescued but the other three boys sank before they could be reached.

Paris, Jan. 2.—For the first time in France a football riot occurred yesterday. It was at the Pere des Printemps, Paris, after a Scottish Rugby team had defeated a French team by a score of 21 to 3.
 The mob broke down the barriers and assailed the referee, J. W. Baxter, with sticks and stones. It required the united efforts of the players, police and mounted officers to break up the disturbance and rescue the official.

On returning to Paris, a large crowd of the spectators of the game paraded the boulevards shouting "Down with the referee." Afterwards they made a demonstration in front of the offices of a sporting newspaper.

Scamp Abroad.

Shortly before 11 o'clock, last night, a gentleman proceeding to his home, on a suburban road, noticed a man of suspicious appearance, loitering about his place. When he saw the gentleman coming, he went out the road and accosted a girl, whom the gentleman had passed, as he came home. The fellow noticing that his actions had been witnessed by the other man (who later chased him) ran across the road and escaped. The man whom he accosted, became weak with fright and was later escorted home by a young man living near her. The prowler has been about the place before and attempted liberties with another female, who, however, was plucky and stopped his pace. He is described as a short, thick set man, wearing no overcoat and an astrachan cap.

 Gentlemen,—I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT from time to time for the past twenty years. It was recommended to me by a prominent physician of Montreal, who called it the "great Nova Scotia Liniment." It does the doctor's work; it is particularly good in cases of Rheumatism and Sprains.

Week of Prayer.

NATIONS AND THEIR RULERS. With the interest manifested in the services so far held, it was only to be expected that the attendance at the Presbyterian Church, last night, should be large and representative; and it is a matter of gratitude that these expectations were realized, and that both people and leaders displayed their interest by their presence.

The service, as is customary, was conducted by the Pastor, the Rev. Mr. Sutherland; and he was accompanied in the pulpit by the Rev. Dr. Rogers, Rev. J. W. Bartlett, Rev. R. Matthews, B.A., and Rev. Mr. Thomas; the latter leading in the opening prayer; and also by the Rev. Mr. Whitmarsh, who was the speaker of the evening to whom was entrusted the address, the lessons being read by the Rev. Mr. Bartlett.

The subject is one that immediately attracts the attention of all classes of persons, even those who may not be very directly interested in church work, but who are keenly interested in the movements of the nations, and in the personnel of the Rulers. Especially is this so at the present time, when war seems to be at our doors, and an indiscreet move may implicate the powers of Europe. This last night's address was interesting from a national and diplomatic, as well as from a religious standpoint; and we are glad to say that Mr. Whitmarsh did justice to the subject, and dealt with these issues of the questions which pertain to the peace of the world. The moment is critical, and therefore the Rulers and those in authority need all the sympathy of the people, and also the prayers of the church, so that the best may be done. The nation's greatest strength is her moral strength, and national prowess is at its best when based upon Truth, and for this end the Church should ever pray.

Mr. Whitmarsh spoke for eighteen minutes, and was very deliberate in his statements, and was listened to with close attention. This is Mr. Whitmarsh's first year in the city in connection with the Week of Prayer, and we feel sure that his effort last night made a good impression, and should certainly be the means of other young men devoting themselves to the work of the ministry. Following he address the usual devotional exercises were carried out, and the singing was heartily taken up by the people; so that all must certainly have felt "it was good to be there." I.C.M.

Bowels Bad, Liver Torpid, Cascarets.

If Constipated, Bilious, Headachy, Stomach Sour, get a 10 cent box of Cascarets—take one to-night.

You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have back-ache and feel worn out. Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels.
A Cascarets to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet; liver and bowels regular, and head clear for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—do good—never gripe or sicken.

Record Trip.

The passage made by the schooner Water Witch, Capt. Moore, which arrived here yesterday, from St. John's to Pernambuco and return is considered one of the best on record at this particular season. After leaving here last autumn she made the run to the Brazilian port in twenty-two days. After discharging, which occasioned a fortnight's delay, she left for St. John's making the trip in twenty-six days. The Water Witch is a staunch vessel and has certainly demonstrated her sailing qualities.

As the visitors from Antigonish are coming here the second week in February the local four-team will soon be picked.

Firemen Meet.

The annual meeting of the South Side Volunteer Fire Company took place last night in the hall when most of the old executive were re-elected. After the meeting refreshments were served and all enjoyed a very good time. The South Side men under their efficient chief, Mr. F. Bursell, have done splendid service at fires on both sides of the harbour in the past, and the presence of such a fine body of men on that side of the harbour always ready to respond when outbreaks occur assures owners of property that their interests are carefully guarded.

The Higher Levels and Water Supply.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Sir—Some time ago the City Council expended a lot of money in laying water pipes on the higher levels, particularly Pennywell Road. So far so good. But although a large sum was spent in doing the above necessary work, yet the service, at this time of the year and in such weather prevailing, is of little or any benefit to the people on the above road. There is no water above a certain point, and people who live on the upper end are put to considerable trouble and inconvenience to get enough of this most necessary commodity for even drinking purposes, and in several instances people had to melt snow to obtain water enough to wash themselves. Surely something can be done to remedy this evil. There is no scarcity of water at its source. The belief is general that owing to the bickering and petty jealousies in the Council, and the domination of the whole show by one or two men, that a state of carelessness exists which tends to demoralize the public service in the city, and the poor unfortunate people of the higher levels have to suffer.

I have been told, sir, that not since the hydrants were placed on Pennywell Road have they been regularly tested to learn the pressure of water in that locality. If this is correct, there should be an investigation.
Hoping this notice will bring home to the Councilors the necessity of attending to the matter.
Yours truly,
Jan. 9, 1913. AQUA.

Wives of Sultan for Red Crescent.

Constantinople, Jan. 2. — For the first time in the history of Turkey its women have done active work of mercy on the battlefield. In the lead were the Sultan's wives, and they are now busy tending the sick and wounded in the lazarettos established in all the public buildings, palaces and churches.
They are under the direction of the Sultan's chief wife and the kadyns, as well as the odalisques, work heroically as nurses of the Red Crescent. The kadyns, nor ladies of the palace hold the rank of plural wives, while the odalisques are their servants. Yet they are not servants in the ordinary sense of the word, for the Sultan may raise them to the state of favorites at any time the fancy seizes him.

The Sultan, too, is most lavish in his contributions to the hospitals, and his private kitchens and tobacco works are working overtime to supply denties and cigarettes for the poor soldiers.

Heroic Death.

Archbishop McCarthy's Former Secretary was a Martyr to His Charity.
Details of the death of Reverend Father Pujos du Condray, former secretary to Archbishop McCarthy, which have been received here, show that he died the death of a hero.
He had been for some time chaplain to the soldiers at Versailles. About two weeks ago one of the soldiers was stricken with a contagious disease and nobody was allowed to go near him. When he was at the point of death, the young chaplain, guided only by his zeal, and in spite of the prohibition, entered the soldier's room and heard his confession. The poor young man was so troubled by the zeal of the priest and so happy in having made his confession he asked the priest to embrace him, which he did. He was seized himself with the horrible disease and died in three days a martyr to his charity.

COLD AND STORMY.—The snow storm of this morning prevailed all over the country, though the fall of "the white" was not very heavy, and the tarins are running without plows. The lines are interrupted west of Bay of Islands. At noon to-day, the temperature was becoming lower, and at Quarry it registered zero. It is evident that a cold wave is approaching.

Kiss Leads to Death.

Kissing Friend on Station, Woman Falls and Is Crushed.

London, Dec. 29.—Lingering to take a farewell kiss from a friend who was leaving Fenchurch Street Station, for Tilbury, Miss Elizabeth Whybrow, aged 25, of Abbey Wood House, West Malling, Kent, was caught between the train and the platform and crushed. The pain immediately rendered her unconscious and when extricated she was dead.

F. Chaplin, a foreman porter, described the accident. "I was turning to signal the driver," he said, "when I saw the young woman running alongside the train, trying to get a kiss from someone in a carriage. She fell and I signalled the driver and the guard and the train was pulled up. "The young woman was dragged about 25 yards, and got so jammed that we had to saw off a portion of the footboard to release her."

Ingersoll's Daughter

New York, Dec. 31.—A seventeen word ceremony was a feature of the marriage of Miss Maide R. Ingersoll, daughter of Col. Robert Ingersoll, the agnostic, who died in 1899, to Wallace McLean Brobasco, of Cincinnati, at the bride's home here yesterday.

The ceremony was one adopted by the Ethical Culture Society and approved by the New York State Law. After an address by Dr. John L. Elliott, a leader of the Society, on the responsibilities of the marriage relation, the groom placed a plain gold ring on the bride's finger and they repeated the ritual: "With this ring I thee wed, in love and truth for life till death us do part." The bride has been active in philanthropic and suffrage work for several years. Mr. Brobasco is a son of Wallace Brobasco, of Cincinnati, and a nephew of the late John McLean, Supreme Court Justice.

A Tea Cup

Contains
Over 1 1/2 Grains of Caffeine.

A cup of Coffee contains over 2 1/2 Grains.
Physicians recognize this drug to be of poisonous effect upon stomach, heart and nerves. Scientists employed by the U. S. Government found, in the famous Rabbit Case, that an amount of caffeine equivalent to that contained in three and one-half average cups of tea or two cups of coffee killed a Rabbit.

What wonder then, if you are a tea or coffee-drinker, that you suffer from indigestion, heart disturbance, headache and biliousness, sleeplessness, or nerve irritation?
Multiply 1 1/2 grains of caffeine by the number of cups of tea or 2 1/2 grains by the number of cups of coffee you drink each day and you will determine the amount of poison you give yourself daily.

Eminent physicians are protesting against the present use of tea and coffee. (Your family doctor can vouch for this.)
The aches and ills of your own body also protest when the burden becomes too heavy.
Doesn't your own common sense suggest that you quit tea and coffee now?

The New Food-Drink,
Instant Postum
offers the easy way.

This charming table beverage furnishes a hot drink of remarkable palatability. It has a rich seal brown color which changes to golden brown when cream is added. With its delicious flavour and rich aroma, it makes the ideal cup for those who want to get away from tea and coffee troubles.

Instant Postum requires no boiling.

It is made "quick as a wink" by pouring hot water upon a level teaspoonful of the powder in a cup and stirring until dissolved. Add sugar and cream to taste and you have a very fascinating beverage.

Grocers sell Instant Postum, 90 to 100-cup tins, 50c; 45 to 50-cup tins, 30c.

Wedding Bells.

DONNELLY—BRAZIL.

Yesterday afternoon Miss Katherine Brazil, daughter of the late Wm. Brazil, Esq., was united in matrimony to Dr. J. Fergus Donnelly. The ceremony took place at the residence of J. Henderson, Esq., Gower Street, the Rt. Rev. Mons. Roche officiating. The bride was handsomely costumed, being attended by her sister, Miss Madge Brazil; Mr. J. Morey supported the groom, whilst Mr. J. Henderson was father-giver. Following the marriage a reception was held after which the bridal party drove to Waterford Hall. They will join the express to-day for Badger to spend their honeymoon and will make their future home there. The Telegram extends felicitations.

RUSSELL—CROUCHER.

A very pretty wedding occurred at the C. of E. Cathedral on Tuesday afternoon when Mr. Harold Russell, son of Mr. R. C. Russell, H. M. C., led to the altar Miss Gertrude Croucher, only daughter of Mr. John T. Croucher, of Baine Johnstone & Co.'s. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Canon White. The bride was attended by Miss Nellie Skiffington, and the groom was supported by Mr. J. Snow. The bride was attired in a pretty navy suit with white hat and was given away by her father. The happy pair with their friends, after the ceremony, attended a reception held at the bride's residence after which they left by the Bruce express for North Sydney where the groom holds an important position with the Western Union Telegraph Co. Both received many handsome and valuable presents. The Telegram extends congratulations.

A Progressive Priest.

The wisdom of Bishop March in appointing Father Murphy to the Parish of Brigus, is manifesting itself daily in and around the R. C. institutions of that town. Although but a few months in office he has already placed two graceful side altars in his church, these were put in position for the Christmas festivities. They are Early English Gothic in design, and were built by Callahan, Glass & Co., from plans furnished by J. C. Barter, architect; they are beautifully carved and painted to represent rare and costly marbles, and will be an adornment to Father Murphy's energy for many a year. The church spire was blown off in a recent gale, the re-construction of which is now under consideration; plans are being prepared by Mr. J. C. Barter, and the structure will be rushed to completion in the spring. The people of Brigus, who, to every call, have been most generous in the past, will, we have no doubt, be equally liberal and enthusiastic now, in all that may aid their zealous pastor in his work.

Perversity.

The lean man longs to put on weight, and eats fat-building foods and after all—so mean is fate—he can't acquire the goods. Eggs, ham and milk and things like those he swallows day by day, and still he lean and leaner grows, until he blows away. The fat man, hoping to get thin and willowily and pink, to sacrifice his double chin and make his waist line shrink, eats things which have no heat or force, and drinks denatured whey; he browses like a cow or horse on slaw and bran and hay. Instead of growing slim and sweet his mighty girth expands, until he cannot see his feet, or reach them with his hands. In vain the living skeleton may gorge himself with grub; he'll still remain, when he is done, the same old fleshless dub. In vain the man who breaks the scales would find of fat surcease; his foolish torturings will fail to rid him of his grease. So let us then be all serene, from idle longings free, and sing and dance; the fat and lean, in joyous ecstasy; and let no foddler be denied when sounds the dinner bell; we'll take the gifts the gods provide, and all is passing well.

Meets With Mishap.

Manager Montgomerie, of the Furness Withy Line, was in receipt of a message to-day stating the Furness Liner Almeriana, Capt. Fairclough, put into Queenstown, Ireland, with her machinery damaged.

The Almeriana was nine days out from Liverpool to this port and must have had a tempestuous passage which caused her mishap.

Four Sons Drown in Father's Sight.

Frankie Parent seeks to rescue, and nearly loses his own life—was on his way to join youths when he heard cries for help—two brothers went to the rescue of the others, but the ice, believed to be thick, crumbled beneath lads as man watched efforts.

Syracuse, N.Y., Jan. 3.—Daniel Kahler, of Croghan, near here, was on his way to join his four boys skating on Beaver River, yesterday when he heard cries for help and ran to the bank in time to see his four sons between seven and sixteen years of age, go through the ice and drown.

While a considerable distance from the river he saw two of the boys go through an ice hole which they had been trying to avoid when he heard their cries for aid. A moment later the two remaining boys plunged through the ice in an effort to save their brothers.

Nearly Lost His Life.

Kahler ran out on the ice and leaped into the water where the ice had broken, and would have lost his own life had not another boy shoved a plank out to him.

Leaving their home on the Mattson farm, the boys—Ray, Roy, Francis and Daniel—went to Beaver Bank, taking their skates and a skid with them. Their father promised to join them a little later. As he approached the river, a half mile from the house and where the ice was supposed to be the safest he heard cries of his sons and hastened his steps.

Two Died in Rescuing.

He saw that two of the boys could have saved themselves, but they chose to try to save their brothers, and as they reached for them the cracking ice crumbled under them and they too, went in.

The two boys were struggling in the water when the father ran out on the ice. As he reached the hole two of the boys had gone down, and he leaped into save the others, but before he could swim to them they went down. He dived for them, but came up without finding them, the current of the river probably having swept them under the ice farther down the stream.

The chill water is believed to have cramped the father's muscles, because he sank again while trying to reach the edge of the ice hole. Albert Leavitt, a boy who had come in response to the cries for aid, was then pushing a long plank out over the ice, and when Kahler came to the surface again he was barely able to grasp the end of the plank and hold on until he was drawn out on the ice and pulled ashore.

Swept Down Under Ice.

None of the four boys re-appeared, and neighbors, who quickly were called began to break up the thin ice and make the bottom of the stream with grappling hooks. With these implements two of the bodies were recovered, but it was believed that the two others, who had been farther out on the ice, were caught by the stream and carried down under the ice.

The boys were good swimmers, but they were weighted with their skates and probably were affected with cramps soon after they fell into the cold water. Unable to use their muscles they went down quickly and before their father had a chance to save any one of them.

Kahler was taken back to his home, where the deepest grief took the place of what a short time before had been the jollity of a happy home celebrating a holiday. He was put to bed and unless pneumonia results will recover.

Cable News.

Special to The Evening Telegram.
LONDON, Jan. 8.
The Commons, by a vote of 311 to 51, sanctioned an important amendment to the Home Rule Bill, moved by Sir Alfred Mond, Liberal, and seconded by John Redmond, providing the introduction of a proportional representation into constituencies which return three or more members, with the object of securing representation for Unionists and Nationalists where either form a minority. The constituencies affected are Dublin City, Dublin County, Belfast and Cork City. The voters will indicate their order of choice of candidates, and the vote for the high man will be distributed among the others in that order. Sir Alfred showed that under the ordinary system Dublin and Cork would send only Nationalists to Parliament, while Belfast would be represented entirely by Orangemen. Redmond in supporting the amendment said that it would be a misfortune for Ireland if her first national election should result in sending no Unionist representative from the whole of Munster, Connaught and Leitster. He therefore felt justified in sanctioning this narrowed and limited experiment. Premier Asquith unhesitatingly accepted the amendment on behalf of the Government as an attempt to deal with a particular case, but only as regarded the inception of the Irish Parliament. A proposal by Sir H. Carlisle that the Irish Senate should consist of 100 members instead of 40 was rejected by a majority of 122. Seven clauses have now been disposed of.

LONDON, Jan. 8.
The Serbian Government to-day reached a most important decision, and withdrew from the Adriatic Sea, a decision which is regarded in all quarters as a notable step in the direction of peace. The European Powers were officially informed of the decision this morning. Announcing that in proof of her willingness to make sacrifices in the interest of general peace, Serbia stated that she had decided to remove her troops from the Adriatic coast immediately. After peace has been concluded, the Serbian government hopes that Europe will take this evidence of moderation into account, and will not ask for other sacrifices, which it would, possibly, be beyond Serbia's power to make.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.
According to his physician, Dr. Chappel, William Rockefeller will never be able to appear before the Puffo commission. The only way he could answer questions would be in writing for speech might result in strangulation. So serious is the condition of his throat, says Dr. Chappel, that William Rockefeller must be silent for the remainder of his life. In the Bahamas, where he is resting, he is keeping very quiet, and it is said that every little wish has to be written.

LONDON, Jan. 8.
The capitulation of Adrianople will, in the opinion of the Balkan plenipotentiaries, take place within a few days, either directly to the besieging forces or through European pressure. Pending some fresh developments the Balkan delegates are keeping in close touch with the Ambassadors, because they are aware some questions they have most at heart depend entirely on the will of the powers.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.
The building of the aqueduct from Catskills to this city, according to figures just published has cost the lives of 600 men, while 3,800 have been injured. The engineering is second only to the Panama Canal, and is still far from completion.

LONDON, Jan. 8.
The marriage of Max Green, Chairman of the Irish Prison Board, and formerly Private Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant, to Miss Johanna Redmond, youngest daughter of J. E. Redmond, took place to-day.

OTTAWA, Jan. 8.

LONDON, Jan. 8.
The C.P.R. will shortly inaugurate an Austro-Canadian steamship service, having a direct line from Trieste to Canada. Montreal will probably be the landing port in summer and St. John in winter.

Hr. Grace Notes.

Mr. W. Gordon, brother of Mr. G. Gordon, of the Postal Staff, arrived from Boston on Saturday and will remain here with his parents for the next few months. Mr. Gordon has been in the States for several months, and his old associates are pleased to see him home again.

The many friends here of Mrs. Charles Hutchings were sorry to hear of the accident that befel her at her home in St. John's on Sunday, when she by falling broke her right arm at the wrist. They all hope she will soon be all right again.

That very valuable old institution, the Conception Bay British Society, held its annual meeting at its hall last night. The Treasurer's report showed that the year just passed had been a hard one owing to sickness and other causes, but still the Society is in a flourishing condition, and each member has the consolation of knowing that he is assisting in a good cause, and that the money he is paying is helping to do untold good. During the past year four members were taken from the body by death, viz. Brothers W. H. Sheppard, George Bradbury, Edward Davis and Charles Martin. The mortality money was also paid for six members wives.

The election of officers for the present year was the principal business of the evening and resulted as follows:—

President—Brother Thomas G. Ford, elected; V. P.—Brother Jordan Sheppard, elected; Treas.—Bro. Albert Heath, elected; Secretary—Brother W. A. McKay, elected. Committee:—Bro. Herbert Andrews, Geo. French, E. Quinn, Lorenzo Sheppard, William Harris, Fred. Snow, L. Stirling, Thos. Fitzgerald, James Garland, Grand Marshal—Albert Wells. Hall Keeper—Bro. M. French.

The retiring officers were good men and did their work faithfully and well, but in nearly all cases retired voluntarily, so as to give others a trick at the wheel. We wish the officers at the present year plain sailing, and that this valuable old benefit society may go on her way with a fair wind, doing good as of yore, and making times now existing continue and increase at each monthly meeting. We think we are safe in extending to all our young men who are eligible to come forward and unite themselves with the body, and while helping others also help themselves.

The Curling Iron.

BY H. L. RANN.

The curling iron is a neat device which is used to insert perishable kinks into straight hair. On damp days these kinks perish so rapidly that a woman has to hang over a kerosene lamp about three-fourths of the time in order to keep from looking like the 1913 model of the Digger Indian.

The curling iron is never effective except when heated to the boiling point. It has two thin legs, referred to in polite circles as antennae, and is usually placed astride a lamp chimney in the graceful attitude of a lean citizen climbing over a barbed wire fence. When the right leg becomes heated to such an extent that it gets red in the face, it is wiped carefully on a powdered rag and plunged with nervous haste into a handful of evaporated puffs.

This treatment results in causing the hair to bulge unexpectedly in a series of parallel ridges, which will stand erect for hours at a time and impart kittenish aspect to the female countenance.

It requires a good deal of practice with a red-hot curling iron to avoid raising an unpremeditated blister in the vicinity of the thorax. Some women are perfectly fearless and jab their and yon while standing on one foot and eating fudge, while others have to make preliminary incision and then are just as liable to land on the lobe of the left ear as anywhere else.

Since the barbers' union began to advocate the pompadour, which calls for a 35-cent hair cut, a great many men are using the curling iron to create that natural waterfall effect which is the triumph of the tonsorial art.

The woman who is trying to wrap one leg of a curling iron around her back hair without throwing her vertebrae out of joint goes through more facial contortions than a near-sighted bachelor trying to thread a needle by moonlight. It sometimes takes a woman several days to get her mouth back in alignment with her eyebrows after one of these exciting encounters.
