Simply Wonderful for Chest Colds Makes 'Em Well Over Night

Nothing Half So Quick to Relieve and Cure as Good Old "Nerviline."

Don't lie awake to-night coughing your throat sore—don't let our chest cold develop further—that's the way to coax on pneumonia.

Be sensible, and, as thousands before you have done, use Nerviline. It sure is a bully fine thing to knock out a cold or bad cough.

After once using Nerviline you'll swear by it for all time to come.

You'll say it's more like a miracle than anything else to feel its warm soothing action upon your tight chest. You'll be amazed at the quick way it cured your cough and broke up your bad cold.

It's safe for even a child to rub on Nerviline. Although five times more powerful than most other liniments, yet Nerviline has never yet burned or blistered the tender skin of even a child.

It's worth while to remember that wherever there is an ache or pain Nerviline will cure it.

Try it on your sore muscles, on a stiff joint, on the worst possible case of rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica, or lumbago. These ailments Nerviline is guaranteed to cure mighty quick.

The mother of a large family can save heaps of work and worry, can cure little ills before they grow big, can keep the whole family well by always having Nerviline handy on the shelf. The large 50c. bottle is the most economical.

THE HEIR OR Lancewood

CHAPTER XXIII.

"But I see it," she said. "You are not likely to thwart me in any way, but Miss Neslie is. My woman's ways have been enough to find out a secret of yours, and I know quite well that in all little arguments, disputes, contradictions, you will naturally enough take Miss Neslie's side. Now I do not intend the serenity of my house to be disturbed by two opponents. I will not have two enemies in my house. I hope that Miss Neslie may marry, but until she does so she must, I suppose, remain here. It will be neither agreeable nor convenient for me; but I cannot help it. Whether you remain or not depends entirely on yourself."

"Will you explain, Lady Neslie?" he said, coldly. "I have not the pleasure of understanding you."

"What I mean is quite plain," replied Miladi. "Miss Neslie and I are sure to disagree; we are sure to be at daggers drawn with each other. Now, if in these disagreements you take her part, if you help her, if you assist her in despite of any wish of mine, then—understand me clearly—you must go."

"I remain," he said proudly, "by Sir Arthur's wish."

Miladi interrupted him: "That reminds me," she said amiably; "I wish to ask you why Sir Arthur desired you to remain here. Do you know?"

"I believe it was because I understand everything pertaining to the management of the estate. I know more of the details of management than did Sir Arthur himself."

"That would make you very valuable to me," she said, "if you keep your place, and do not presume to interfere."

His face flushed indignantly; he was too proud to speak.

"Has your ladyship finished?" he asked, after a moment's silence.

"Yes, that is all," she replied. Then she looked into his face, with the smile that some people thought so irresistible. "You know in your own mind," she said, "although you will not admit it to me, that you would not leave Lancewood for the whole world while Miss Neslie remains here, be wise, and be warned. I shall be glad to avail myself of your services—for I do not intend to work; all work must be done for me. I shall be glad of you to look after Lancewood if you keep to the terms I have laid down."

"I will do my duty honestly," replied Gerald.

"Yes, without doubt," said Miladi, indifferently. "I should suppose that you will allow me to remind you that there is another quality almost more essential than honesty—that is discretion. I have said all I wished to say. Good-morning, Mr. Dorman."

With a bow, and low muttered words on his lips, the secretary quitted the room. He went straight to the open window in the corridor.

"I want a breath of air," he thought, "after that. Sir Arthur, with all his good sense, has deprived his daughter of Lancewood to give it to that woman's son, that false, dainty, haughty woman. Why, she does not even know what principle means. Her words to me signify, 'I know you love Miss Neslie; but if you presume to interfere with me, you will lose the sweet pleasure of her society.' She is no more fitted to be the mistress of Lancewood than I am to be King of Spain."

He was irritated and annoyed; he had gloried in the thought that he should be a shield for Vivien, that he should take her part in every dispute, that he should serve her loyally and faithfully. Now this woman, who undoubtedly had the power in her hands took him quite calmly that if he took part against her he must go. He knew that she would keep her word if once she bade him go. How could he remain?

Once again that morning Lady Neslie sent for him—it was to ask him a question.

"I want you to tell me what that sentence in Sir Arthur's will means," she said.

"What sentence, Lady Neslie?" he asked.

"The one in which, speaking of his daughter, he says, 'I leave the honor of my house in her hands.' It was very absurd. Surely I can take as much care of the family name and family honor as she can. Do you know anything about it, Mr. Dorman?"

"No, I do not," he replied, "but I do know that when Sir Arthur lay dying, he said the same thing."

"Well, it was not very complimentary to me, was it? I am not concerned about it. Family honor and all that kind of thing, are great nonsense."

"I hope your ladyship will not teach little Sir Oswald that," observed Gerald. "Family honor stands second only to religion."

Miladi laughed with a little contempt; she always did so when religion was mentioned.

"I shall teach my son anything I like. But what I was about to say was this—that I hope Miss Neslie will not encourage any absurd ideas from that sentimental decision of Sir Arthur's. I hope it will not lead her to think that she is justified in interfering with me or my son."

"It will be better for your ladyship to discuss the matter with Miss Neslie."

"No," she said, laughingly; "I prefer to discuss it with you. Miss Neslie chills me; I never care to talk to her. If you are her true friend, as I am sure you profess to be, you will give her a hint of this."

"Even at the risk of displeasing you," said Gerald, "I must decline." Lady Neslie laughed again.

"That is a very dignified way of putting it," she said. "I suppose that, like myself, you are very much in awe of her. Well, then, between you you must keep a sharp lookout after this much-vaunted family honor." And again Gerald Dorman left her presence dumb with the force of his wrath.

"I would not serve her or hers," he said—"I would not remain here another day, but for Miss Neslie."

During the first few weeks after her father's funeral, Vivien kept almost entirely to her own room. In losing him it seemed to the desolate girl she had lost all. She could not recover from the blow. During that time she did not come into collision with Lady Neslie, and during that time she made some very firm and very noble resolves.

"The guardian of the honor of my house!" Those words were sacred to her. It seemed to her that no one had ever had so glorious a mission before. It was above all other things that which she most desired—to preserve the name and race she loved so well from evil influence. It was next best to leaving her the inheritance of Lancewood. That was left to another; to her had been left the maintenance of the family honor. "And I will keep it," she said, "unstained and unshaken."

With that object she made many fair and noble resolves; no mean failings, no small indulgence in jealousy or envy, should interfere with her lofty mission. She would devote her life to teaching and training the young heir. She would do her best to make him a good man; and, in order that she might effect this, she must be at peace with Valerie. She must humble herself to conciliate the stranger whose coming had marred her life. It cost her no small effort to make the resolve; but she had a soul of great sacrifices and noble deeds.

She would make peace with Valerie. She would go to her, and ask her to let the past lie buried, to begin again a new and peaceful life. She would try to be her friend. Surely, if she could influence the mother, she might in time influence the son—and Vivien indulged in a day-dream. She saw Oswald a wise and noble man, a true, loyal Neslie, loving the name and race as she did herself. It was a dream that was never to be realized—cruel days had dawned for Lancewood.

CHAPTER XXIV.

In the interest of her half-brother, Vivien had determined to forget all past differences, and to make a friend of Lady Neslie; so one evening she said to her—

"Valerie, if you are not engaged, will you spare me a few minutes?"

"Is the lecturing business about to begin?" thought Lady Neslie. "I will have none of it."

"It is not a very usual thing for you to seek me," she replied aloud. "I am not engaged. What do you want?"

"I want you to walk out into the grounds with me. I have something to say to you."

It was an August evening, and the warm still air was heavy with the fragrance of the tall Ascension lilies. The sunbeams lingered with a golden light on the odoriferous flowers; the roses drooped their heavy heads. Earth and sky looked so fair that Valerie saw no particular reason for refusing; and Vivien led her to her own favorite nook, where the sun-dial stood and the fountains played in the sunlight.

How long was it since that sunny summer morning when she had stood there dreaming of the noble deeds she would do. She lived through the scene again. She remembered her anger, her passion and dismay, when she received her father's letter; she remembered how she had inveighed against his marriage, and how impatient, how worse than useless, all her struggles had been. How long was it since she had sat there in the sunlight?

A few years—as men count time; to her it seemed that a lifetime had passed. And now she had lost all, except the guardianship of the honor of her house. But she was there to plead with the stranger who had supplanted her.

What Are You Doing for that Eczema?

"Nothing; I've about given up trying to cure it."

"That is not wise. Do as I did and you will probably be cured in a short time. I used Zylex and Zylex Soap with it and my Eczema began to improve at once. A couple of boxes cured. You can get Zylex at your druggist's."

"Valerie," she said, "you will not misunderstand me?" But Lady Neslie interrupted her.

"Once for all, Vivien, let me tell you, I will have no interference. I am mistress of Lancewood, and I shall do what I like."

"Do not mistake me," returned Vivien; "I am not about to interfere. I have seen nothing that calls for interference. I was about to ask you, Valerie, whether we cannot be better friends."

Heaven knew the effort it cost that proud girl to humble herself so. She had so heartily despised the woman by her side.

"Let us be better friends," she begged. "We have but one interest in common—the welfare of little Oswald. If we live in peace and harmony, we can act so much better for him."

"What do you call peace and harmony?" asked Valerie, sharply.

"Never disagreeing," replied Vivien.

"I never have wanted to disagree," said Miladi. "It was you. From the very first you always disliked me, you were always jealous of me; you would have sent me away if you could."

The beautiful face flushed crimson with humiliation; but it takes more than the spiteful words of a spiteful woman to shake the resolve of a noble mind.

"There is some truth in what you say, Valerie. I did not like you. I was vexed and sorry that my father had married you. But now that he is dead and we are alone, let it be different. I offer you what I have never offered you before, my hand in true and loyal friendship. Will you accept it, Valerie? Will you let me do my best for you and for little Oswald?"

But Miladi was suspicious. She was too ignoble herself to understand a noble motive. She became suspicious. What did Vivien want? She could not, would not, believe that it was friendship with herself. She turned abruptly to her—

"What is it you want, Vivien? Speak plainly. You must have some design or motive in this—tell me what it is."

Vivien raised her patient face to the clear blue sky before she answered.

"I have no motive, Valerie, but the wish to be friends with you, the wish to help you in the training and education of your son, the wish to help you to make him a good man."

LONDON, Aug. 8.

The Germans continue to make progress. Their efforts are to cut the retreat of the Russian army from the Polish salient. They have commenced an attack on the fortress of Kovno and Ostrowitz, which are among the obstacles they must overcome in order to reach the railway running from Warsaw through Pultusk and Dnestro to Petrograd. They have taken the minor fortress Serok at the junction of the Narw and Bug, and have crossed the Vistula in the vicinity of Warsaw. Further south General Woyrich is advancing eastward, but Field Marshal Mackensen is being stubbornly resisted, apparently making, at the very slow progress. On the whole the daring scheme mapped out by the Germans as the grand attempt to capture of Warsaw the destruction of the Russian army, is unfolding itself slowly as must be the case for its very magnitude. With three ways, besides those built since the war, it is believed in military circles here that the Grand Duke Nicholas will be able to extricate his Warsaw army. Events in the east, however, will continue to rivet the attention of the world on them for some time to come.

The Germans have gained successes in the Arznoy forests where the Army of the Crown Prince has been trying for some weeks to find a weak spot in the French defences, but their effort to recross lost trenches on Lingepok in the Vosges, is declared to have cost dearly.

There has been some rather heavy fighting in the Caucasus between the Russians and the Turks, but official reports from the Caucasus are so contradictory that it is impossible to say in whose favor it is going.

There is much interest in the London negotiations in the Balkan capitals, reports from which indicate that Serbia at last, is willing to accept the Greek Government's proposal to assist, apparently making, at the very slow progress. HYDROPLANES ESCAPE.

PARIS, Aug. 8.

A note made public by the War Office to-night, says: The Germans endeavored to-day to destroy, off Neuport, by means of heavy shells, two Allied hydroplanes. Our artillery promptly silenced the German batteries. Of the two planes, one came back unscathed, while the other was towed into shore undamaged.

GERMAN TROOPS MET WITH JOYOUS RECEPTION.

BERLIN, Aug. 8.

German troops were welcomed to undamaged Warsaw as liberators, according to a report forwarded to Berlin by Karl M. Aral, special correspondent of the Lokal Anzeiger. Telegraphing under date August 5th, Aral places emphasis on the statement that the city was not evacuated without conflict. The forts were protected by barbed wire trenches, pitfalls and mines against infantry attacks. The city is not mentioned as having been damaged. The inhabitants of the Polish capital, filled the streets, and welcomed in marching troops with every sign of real enthusiasm and of rejoicing. The Polish peasants who long ago had been restrained in the city, began leaving early in the morning for their farms, driving live stock, conveying household effects. They greeted the

PARIS, Aug. 8.

A note made public by the War Office to-night, says: The Germans endeavored to-day to destroy, off Neuport, by means of heavy shells, two Allied hydroplanes. Our artillery promptly silenced the German batteries. Of the two planes, one came back unscathed, while the other was towed into shore undamaged.

GERMAN TROOPS MET WITH JOYOUS RECEPTION.

BERLIN, Aug. 8.

German troops were welcomed to undamaged Warsaw as liberators, according to a report forwarded to Berlin by Karl M. Aral, special correspondent of the Lokal Anzeiger. Telegraphing under date August 5th, Aral places emphasis on the statement that the city was not evacuated without conflict. The forts were protected by barbed wire trenches, pitfalls and mines against infantry attacks. The city is not mentioned as having been damaged. The inhabitants of the Polish capital, filled the streets, and welcomed in marching troops with every sign of real enthusiasm and of rejoicing. The Polish peasants who long ago had been restrained in the city, began leaving early in the morning for their farms, driving live stock, conveying household effects. They greeted the

KOVNO EVACUATED.

LONDON, Aug. 8.

A despatch from Copenhagen, says that the Russians are evacuating Kovno. The Governor and his staff and the banks have gone. The population has been leaving for the past week. Kovno is a fortress of the first class and the capital of the government of the same name in North-west Russia.

RUSSIAN REPORT.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 8.

In the direction of Riga the dislodged the enemy from the region between Dvina Ekan and the lower course of Asa. Fighting continues as before, without any essential change, on the roads east of Poniewesch. The enemy attacks on Kovno and Osovetz which were repulsed on the 6th, were not renewed the following day. The enemy continues to deliver vigorous attacks from the Narv line along the whole frontier. Greater forces of the enemy are being directed against Lomza and Ostrov. On the right bank the 7th passed without any engagement of importance. On the left bank, at Vjeprz there have been rearguard actions. In the course of counter attacks we captured some hundreds of prisoners. Between Vjeprz and the Bug there has been no change. On the left bank of the Bug between Touria and Louza we exercised pressure on the ene-

GREAT SOCIAL TRAGEDY AT THE NICKEL.

Nickel patrons should not miss today's performance as it is the best ever shown at this popular house of entertainment. The Nickel programme are always good, but today's selections are better than usual. The great feature is a powerful dramatic tragedy entitled "Till Death do us Part". It's a tragedy concerning valor and weakness in which Kathleen Williams, Wheeler Oakman and Charles Cleary are in the leads. There will be another episode of "Our Mutual Girl" showing Margaret at Newport, and a Keystone comedy—"Fatty's Wine Party". A comedy by George Ade tells the "fable of the fellow who had a friend who knew a girl who had a friend." Forbes Law Russell will sing the ever popular song "You'll Remember Me" from the Bohemian Girl. Whatever else you miss don't miss the Nickel to-day. The pictures are of the highest quality, and the singing and music will be sure to please. Wednesday "The Million Dollar Mystery" will be continued.

Drudgery.

By the adoption of modern gas appliances you may abolish drudgery from your home.

GAS COOKERS eliminate the drudgery of lighting fires, the handling of coal and ashes, and enable you to prepare meals in half the time required with old-fashioned appliances.

GAS WATER HEATERS are indispensable in every well-regulated household.

GAS LIGHTING is best for the eyes and the pocket.

THE PERFECTION GAS IRON is a recent addition to labour, time, and money saving appliances. This Nickel-plated Gas Iron makes a complete with stand and a length of metallic tubing for the small sum of $2.00, and should be in every household.

With the "PERFECTION GAS IRON" a whole day's ironing may be done at a cost of five cents, give better results, and do more work in half the usual time. It is always hot and ready, clean and smooth. Send post card to-day for catalogue and price list.

NOTE—It is important that Gas Cookers and other appliances be kept perfectly clean and free from grease. Use "30-KLEAN" enamel cleanser. It will quickly remove all stains and grease from metal or enamel. 25 cents per packet.—J23.1f

The Eastern Trust Company.

A few reasons why an estate can be better administered by the Eastern Trust Company than by a personal executor or administrator—

1. The Company affords the estate absolute security; it has a paid-up capital of $31,000.00, and a reserve fund of $225,000.00.
2. It has a long experience in the work of administering estates; it is incorporated for this business of acting as a trustee, and, unlike many other trust companies, it does no other.
3. Its existence is perpetual. Your estate, in the event of the death of a personal executor or administrator, must look around for a substitute, and the work of administration is impeded during that time, and the new executor is unfamiliar with the policy of his predecessor, and confusion results. This company's existence is perpetual, and there is a continuity of policy in its administration that the death of its officers does not break.
4. It possesses the confidence of governments, universities and prominent charities and administers their funds.

A number of other advantages which will appear in due course.

U. S. Picture & Portrait Co. GRAPHOPHONE DEPARTMENT.

Newly-commissioned officers are caused not a little embarrassment at times by relatives and others who persist in giving them their full military title in conversation and when addressing letters to them. This, it should be pointed out, is quite contrary to military etiquette, the rule being that military titles below the rank of captain are never used socially, nor naval titles below the rank of Lieutenant. A subaltern is addressed in writing as "Regt.," with the name of the regiment, etc., following. A Lieutenant in the navy is "Esq. R.N."

Not a few people, by the way, may have wondered why a private soldier, when meeting an officer, salutes sometimes with one hand and sometimes with the other. This is because it is correct for the soldier to salute with the hand farthest from the officer, so as not to hide his face in so doing. Thus, if he passes an officer on the left hand side, he would salute with the right hand, and is passing on the right hand side with the left.

MONDAY, Aug. 9th, 1915.

Silver Bullets.

Lloyd George has stated that silver bullets will be the determining factor of the war. An Y. International City Bank says that on July 1st the deposits in the Bank of Germany amounted to 400 million dollars, whereas the deposits in the Bank of England were 1,655 million dollars, and in the Bank of France, 430 million dollars, and in the Bank of Russia 750 millions.

Sir George Parish, editor of the London Statist, says in any great war the question of financial resources is one of immense importance, and the part being played by finance in the present war cannot be overestimated. Germany exerted herself to the utmost to prepare for the war financially, whereas Great Britain made no such preparation.

Prior to the summer of 1914 Germany had pulled her money in from the world as far as possible, whereas Great Britain had sent her money out to almost all countries with the result that immediately after war began Germany found great difficulty in making payments abroad, while Great Britain was able to draw upon her foreign balances in order to buy all the goods she and all she was before.

British exchange in the United States has dropped 2 per cent. against Germany's 14 per cent.

It is now obvious that her supplies of floating wealth in other countries, inciting her investments in the United States, are fast disappearing and that payments for goods imported, if they continue, must drain her gold reserves.

Double Drowning at Placentia.

Clement and Nellie Griffin, aged 13 and 9 years respectively, were the victims of a sad drowning accident which occurred at Griffin's Point, N. E. Arm, Placentia, on Saturday afternoon last. The little girl had been catching perch from a wharf when it is thought she lost her balance and fell into the water. It is presumed that the little boy was drowned in an effort to save his sister. Both bodies were recovered shortly after the accident. The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Griffin, are heartbroken over the tragic ending of their little ones, and to them the Telegram offers sincerest sympathy.

Police Court.

(Before Mr. Hutchings, K.C.)
One drunk was fined $1 or 3 days. Another was fined $2 or 7 days. An assault case was postponed until Thursday next.
Six young men summoned for being drunk and disorderly at the picnic, were represented by counsel, and the Inspector General conducted the prosecution. Two of the prisoners were discharged, one was fined $5 or 14 days, another $15 or 30 days, and two others were each fined $10 or 20 days.
A butcher summoned by the Health Inspector for breach of the law regarding slaughter houses was fined $2 or 7 days.

Boat Picked Up.

Mr. H. W. LeMessurier, Assistant Collector, is in receipt of the following message from the Customs Officer at Harbor Breton:
"Capt. Cox of the banking schooner Francis C. Smith, picked up on August 5th, about 7 miles off Rose Blanche, a small fishing boat and brought same to this port. On board the boat were fresh round codfish."

Britain Stands for What She Is.

Dr. Inge on Our Ideals.
Dr. Inge, the Dean of St. Paul's, writes in the Quarterly Review: "What Britain stands for is what Britain is. We have long known in our hearts what Britain stands for; but we have now been driven to search our thoughts and make our ideals explicit to ourselves and others. The Englishman has become a philosopher malgre lui. 'Whatever the world thinks,' writes Bishop Berkeley, 'he who had not much meditated upon God, the human soul, and the summum bonum (highest good), may possibly make a thriving earthworm, but will most indubitably make a sorry patriot and a sorry statesman.'"

"These words which were quoted by Mr. Arthur Balfour a few years ago, may seem to make a large demand on the average citizen; but in our quiet way we have all been meditating on these things since last August, and we know pretty well what our summum bonum is for our country. We believe in chivalry and fair play and kindness—these things first and foremost; and we believe, if not exactly in democracy, yet in a government under which a man may think and speak the thing he wills. We do not believe in war, and we do not believe in bullying. We do not flatter ourselves that we are the supermen."

"But we are convinced that the ideas which we stand for, and which we have on the whole tried to carry out, are essential to the peaceful progress and happiness of humanity; and for these ideas we have drawn the sword. The great words of Abraham Lincoln have been on the lips of many and in the hearts of all since the beginning of the great contest: 'With malice towards none; with charity for all; with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right—let us strive on to finish the work we are in.' Patriotism thus spiritualized and moralized is the true patriotism."

FIGURES DO LIE.

Prices are only Relative

REGAL ENGINES are the highest priced engines, yet they are the cheapest. They are the highest priced engines because they cost more to build. They are the cheapest engines, because they will last twice as long as any other engine. They are also the cheapest engines because they save your time, and "Time is money."

If you shut your eyes to this real bargain in engines, you will be the sorriest fisherman who ever signed an order. You will lose more money than you can afford to lose, and your oil bills will be twice as large. REGAL ENGINES use less oil, have more power, run with less trouble and give more genuine satisfaction than any other engine on the market. We are, in the near future, going to ask all cash for REGAL ENGINES, so buy one before we make that change, as we intend to make them the "Hall Mark" engines of Newfoundland.

We ship REGAL ENGINES complete with full book of instructions, and when once installed in your boat, any child can run one. REGAL ENGINES are higher priced than other engines, but are the cheapest in the long run, because they run the longest.

Battlefield Surgery.

The award by the Paris Academie des Sciences of the Lecomte triennial prize of $2,000 to Sir Almroth Wright, the great bacteriologist, directs attention to the changes which have taken place during the war in the treatment of wounds. Before the days of Lord Lister, who introduced the antiseptic method in 1865, the number of deaths from blood-poisoning among injured persons and those upon whom operations had been performed was enormous.

Lister proved that this could be avoided by cleanliness and by disinfecting the wounds and everything brought into contact with them. This method (called antiseptic) was adopted in all civilized countries, but during the past few years the use of disinfectants has been abandoned, and surgeons have relied solely upon absolute cleanliness (called the aseptic method). The change was due to the opinion that disinfectants interfered with the natural healing and disinfecting processes of the human body.

When the war started, owing to the dirty condition of the wounds, the surgeons reverted in many cases to the antiseptic method, hoping thereby to render the dirt innocuous. Then Sir Almroth Wright, Mr. Goadby, and other great bacteriologists pointed out that a mixture of dirt and disinfectants impedes the flow from the wound of the lymph, Nature's cleanser, and that, instead of using disinfectants, the wounds should be properly drained by the use of suitable dressings.

Thousands of valuable lives and limbs have thus been saved. Now the bacteriologists are talking about inoculating beforehand and blood-poisoning, just as they do against typhoid. If this idea proves successful wounds will be robbed of half their dangers.

NEW FRENCH AEROPLANES HAVE 12CH AND HALF GUN.

Paris, July 15.—The armed aeroplanes officially reported to have been ordered for warfare at the beginning, had more powerful motors and could distance French machines in an air chase. The French brought out more and more powerful motors protected some of their machines with steel plates and armed them with special guns. These machines, in the hands of civilian aviators, who volunteered for the war and who have specialized themselves in the chase of German aircraft, put an end to the aeroplane raids upon Paris.

Besides, a document published by the General Staff of one of the German armies recently, the superiority of the French aviation corps in criticisms of inefficiency of the German aviators, particularly in directing fire of the artillery.

Recently the Germans announced the appearance of a new machine, supposed to surpass everything yet produced, with four propellers and two motors to each propeller. A letter from a French aviator says regarding an engagement with one of these machines:

"Each time he passed me the machine gun man fired a whole band of cartridges—it was a hail of bullets. Then the machine swung round and came back above me. Four times he repeated the manoeuvre, and it seemed each time I could see the bullets. My passenger and I fired all our ammunition, but the machine was too fast for the manoeuvre, and it seemed the enemy toward our lines. At 1,200 metres he scented the ruse and turned tail!"

As fast and efficient as these new machines may be, the French say their new air engines will further revolutionize this kind of warfare.

DIED.

Britain's Message to the Americans.

(By the Hon. Herbert H. Asquith, Prime Minister of Great Britain.)
 London, Saturday.

"I have been asked to send a message to the United States of America at the end of the first year of the war.
 "The reasons why we are fighting are known in America. The world has judged, and will judge, not our words, but our actions. The question to-day is not of our hopes or our calculations, but our duties.
 "Our duty, which we shall fulfil, is to continue to the end in the course which we have chosen, and to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace."

FIGHTING FOR AN ENDURING PEACE.

(By Sir Edward Grey, British Minister for Foreign Affairs.)
 London, Saturday.

I have been asked to send a message to the United States of America at the end of the first year of the war. The reasons which led Great Britain to declare war and the ideals for which she is fighting have been frequently set forth. They are fully understood in America. I do not feel, therefore, there is any need to repeat them now. I am quite contented to leave the rights and wrongs of the causes and conduct of the war to the judgment of the American people. The United Kingdom, and the entire Empire, together with their gallant Allies, have never been more determined than they are to-day to prosecute this war to a successful conclusion, which will result in honorable and enduring peace based on liberty, and not burdensome militarism.

WHY RUSSIA WILL GO ON AND ON.

(By Mr. Polivanoff, Russian Minister of War.)
 Petrograd, Saturday.
 My opinion in a few words, after one year's duration of this war, unprecedented in the world's annals is as follows:—
 The enemy is strong and cruel, and that is the very reason why Russia and her heroic Allies must continue the war—should it last for several years—until the enemy is completely crushed.

Prospero Here From the North

The S. S. Prospero, Capt. A. Kean, arrived in port from the northward at 8.30 a.m. yesterday, after a quick round trip, despite the unfavourable weather conditions. She brought a large freight and the following passengers:—

Messrs. G. Martin, Ensign Keeping, H. Westcott, E. Parsons, J. Penny, J. Morgan, W. Thistle, Ensign Woolfrey, Rev. Guy, H. Roberts, H. Norman, Rev. Moore, C. Grant, E. Grant, G. Knowling, Dr. Reay, F. Ellis, Master Goodrich, F. Rendell, P. Rendell, J. Evans, L. Jackman, Dr. Grant, Messdames Guy, Winsor, Hiscock, Colbert, Misses Dove, French, Guy, Wright, Hiscock, Phillips, Howlett in saloon and 20 in steerage.

THE FISHERY.

The Prospero reports very little improvement in the northern fishery. North of Fogo very little has been done during the last two weeks. Some of the traps have done well, but the majority have very small catches to date, and the prospects are not at all encouraging. In many of the places the hook and line fishermen are doing fairly well when weather permits them to get to the grounds. From Fogo south practically all the traps were damaged by the recent storm, and very few of them will be able to be used again this season. At King's Cove and adjacent settlements the damage done to traps was not quite so extensive and many of them will be re-set as the prospects are somewhat encouraging. Further south the hook and line men are considerably hampered in their operations through a general scarcity of bait.

Greek Cabinet Guilty of Fraud.

Goumaris Government Has Brought on Discredit, Says Discard.

Milan, July 26.—A violent attack on the Government by Venizelos is considered in Italy to mark a new phase of the Greek situation. The Goumaris Cabinet, he declared, had done everything to prevent the nation giving expression to its will, had stopped the constitutional life of the country and had used the name of the King, but the nation had nevertheless broken through all the obstacles by which it had been neutralized.

"The danger in the situation lies in the fact that the Government, without authority, has plunged into discord," continued Venizelos. "This caused me to decide to return to public life. In vain the present Government, claiming to have the confidence of the King, but not that of the people, has tried to falsify the elections."

"I hope that the King's restoration to health will soon put an end to all the rumors which accuse the Government of planning a coup d'etat, that of the dissolution of Parliament before it even meets."

"There is not the slightest doubt that the internal situation in Greece is rapidly approaching a crisis of the most dangerous kind. The notorious Baron von Schneck is at the head of the pro-German agitation, and his hundreds of agents are working night and day to oppose the return of Venizelos to power and keep active the shipping of contraband into Turkey by Greek vessels and business houses. He also is expending immense sums to subsidize the press, which is trying to create friction on account of the activity of warships in suppressing contraband."

If any further effort is made to adjourn the meeting of the Chamber a critical situation will be created.

WILLIEWAUGHTS.

When corks are popping a and youths are yawning a Lachnan-Han song, the graybeard, relic, old-worn alecks, remark, "They're starting wrong." The voices accous that jeer and mock us, and sing of joy to-day, will wall in sorrow, some dark to-morrow, for chances thrown away. For winter a mocker, a plexus shocker, that ruins nerves and brain, it sets heads aching, and hearts a-breaking, and fills your bones with pain. Strong drink is raging, and when you're aging, you realize this truth; oaths being handy, you curse the brandy and gin you drank in youth. Old age discloses empurpled noses, and hands that shake and twitch, and midnight coughs in alley or in ditch. The gilded fellows whom wassail mellow in gilded booze saloon, some day may grovel in squalid hovel, and pray for just one prune. Where are the singers, the gay humdingers, who with me drank and spiced? In countless numbers they have their stumbers out in the Potter's field. The fellows gifted, who nightly lifted the glass, were, felly died, who might have risen—but died in prison with none to close their eyes!

Entire Prohibition.

Appeal by Temperance Association.

A manifesto has been issued by the Scottish Permissive Bill and Temperance Association, in which it is said: "The Defence of the Realm Act, No. 3 Act has become law, but the problem of the liquor traffic in relation to the war remains unsolved. The Executive of the Scottish Permissive Bill and Temperance Association believe that the nation as a whole should reconsider its position and responsibilities with reference to the deadly menace which the liquor traffic has become to the safety of the country in this time of national crisis. The recent legislation does not meet the deplorable situation revealed by the Government White Paper, and practically ignores the strong representations and demands made by employers of labour engaged in the manufacture of munitions of war, and engaged in work for the Admiralty. The Executive reaffirm their former declaration that nothing short of the entire prohibition of the sale of alcoholic liquor will save the nation in this life and death struggle from the paralyzing effects of excessive drinking. It has been abundantly proved that even in times of peace the nation cannot afford the enormous waste of money and efficiency, and national to the drink traffic. To continue those under present conditions is to commit national suicide. If the situation is what the Government White Paper, Sir John Jellicoe, Sir John French, and the employers of labour declare it to be, then it is for you to declare emphatically that you will no longer tolerate anything that interferes with the full efficiency of the men at the front and of those at home in furnishing the necessary means of offence and defence; that you are not, to quote Mr. Lloyd George, going 'to quail before a lot of enraged distillers and publicans,' and that you will no longer permit the liquor traffic to endanger the national existence."—Weekly Scotsman, June 12.

Grand Reception to S. A. Commissioner.

On Saturday night Commissioner Richards, S.A., was given a hearty reception at the Casino by the local business community.

The building was filled to capacity and addresses were given by Esauq Marshall of the work of the Women's Social Branch; Adjt. (Mrs.) Simmonds, on behalf of the Women Officers and by Adjt. Hiscock representing the men. Brigadier Morehen then introduced the Commissioner who spoke eloquently and at some length on the subject "Jonathan and his armour bearer," dealing mainly with the necessity of co-operation on the part of all, so that the very best results might be obtained from the energy expended in Army work. At 11 a.m. yesterday a public address meeting was held when the Citadel was again crowded. The address by the Commissioner was very inspiring, and dealt with Purity of Life, the need of the formation of such character as would influence and assist those met with in the everyday world to rise to a higher and better life, being clearly pointed out.

COMMISSIONER RICHARDS Of The Salvation Army.

AT THE CASINO.

A most enthusiastic reception was tendered to Commissioner W. J. Richards, the newly appointed Territorial Commander of the Salvation Army for Canada, Newfoundland and Bermuda, who lectured at the Casino Theatre yesterday afternoon. The meeting was presided over by His Excellency the Governor, and with him on the platform were several members of the city churches. The service opened with a hymn followed by prayer led by the Rev. W. H. Thomas, Pastor of the Congregational Church. His Excellency who was introduced by Brigadier Morehen, then addressed the large gathering, expressing his admiration of the good work done by the army, and referred to the founder, the late lamented General William Booth. He spoke of the great good accomplished by great leaders of religious thought right down the ages, and particularly of the human side of the army's work in teaching the brotherhood of man. Commissioner Richards then followed with a lengthy address which was listened to with rapt attention by all present. His stories were most appropriate and were well told, and the end of the discourse came all too soon. Commissioner Richards is a native of Wales, and had been years connected with active work in the army. He has six children all of whom are officers of rank in the army. One son was for six years in Berlin and only recently escaped from that city. In referring to the war, the Commissioner convinced the audience that his patriotism was no less ardent than his zeal for the Glory of God. At the close of the address, Hon. J. Robinson proposed, and Hon. R. Watson seconded a vote of thanks to His Excellency the Governor for presiding and it was accorded by acclamation. During the afternoon the band rendered some pleasing selections, and Brigadier Abdy gave a solo which was very much appreciated.

At last evening's meeting in the Casino theatre the attendance was even larger than in the afternoon many extra seats having to be provided. Fully 100 officers and band members were on the platform. The usual exercises were gone through and the Commissioner preached, his remarks being heard with closest attention by all. It was estimated that almost 1,400 persons were present.

Eton College Cadets.

General's Advice to Future Officers.

Lieut.-General Sir W. Pittcain Campbell, General Officer Commanding Southern Command, inspected the Eton College Officers Training Corps on Saturday. The corps paraded nearly 600 strong, under Lieut.-Col. F. E. Robeson, and was inspected in various forms of drill, outpost duty, and trench-digging.

Addressing the lads at the close of the inspection, General Campbell said that his visit brought back recollections of 42 years ago, when he wore the same uniform. He remembered how proud he was when he walked out of his father's house with the badge of Lance-Corporal. The Provost, Dr. Warren, was captain of the company he belonged to, and the present Headmaster (Dr. Littleton) was a sergeant in the corps. The drill he had seen that day was quite good, the march past was fair, and the handling of arms better than he expected. No doubt many of them would become officers later on. The first thing they should remember was to keep in close touch with their men; see to their food, and the fitting of their boots, and do everything they could to conduce to their comfort. If it came to digging, let them take a share in it themselves. He advised them not to try to go into the army too young. At the beginning of the war they had a lot of fellows coming up who were only 17, but at that age they could not stand the tremendous strain of the hard work, trials, and privations they would have to go through. It was better to wait until they were 18 or 19.

The corps will go into camp on July 27, with Winchester, Marlborough, Charterhouse and Malvern.—Times, July 19.

Training Horses for the War.

France Has 200,000 War Horses.

It is hard to realize what an important part horses play in war, for we are so accustomed to motors in every way, that we think the war horse is like the cab horse, almost extinct.

The war footing of horses is just over 200,000 for Germany, the same number for France, 100,000 for Austria and Great Britain, and over 600,000 for Russia.

A horse, like a man, has to be specially trained. It is the cavalryman's other self, as it were, and unless both are thoroughly trained then the whole cannot work properly together.

The training of man and horse is seen at its best at the great French Cavalry School at Saumur. Here come all the smart French lieutenants to learn horse-riding, veterinary work, and at least something about horse-shoeing and saddle-making. There is an immense practice ground there, and there can be seen dragoons and horses galloping, leaping hurdles and cavalrymen mounting and dismounting their horses at full speed.

The French cavalry recruit has over a hundred different lessons before he is considered fit to ride his horse. The animal is taught to swim rivers, and it must be able to stand all sorts of gun reports, from the crack of a service revolver, to the roar of a great battery of artillery.

After this it is taught to gallop up to a line of infantry blazing away with their rifles, loaded, of course, in practice, with blank cartridges. When it goes into battle, therefore, the animal is the roar of the guns without any difficulty.

It is a curious thing that horses stand the roar and flash and smoke of ordinary powder better than the roar and flash from smokeless powder, though why has not been explained.

Keep Cool!

By RUTH CAMERON.

"The burden and heat of the day" is to me one of the most expressive phrases in the Bible, and especially so at just this time of year. Did you ever realize, by the way, that the Bible is written in imagery of a land of tropic heat? The missionaries to the Eskimos say that they have to translate the Book not only into the language of the Eskimos, but also into the imagery of their experience. What chord would "the burden and heat of the day" or "the shadow of a great rock in a weary land" stir in the heart of an Eskimo? All of which is only by way of prelude to a few words of suggestion as to how to best bear the "burden and heat of the day" in this beautiful but trying season of the year.

Don't scold. It tires you and every one around you. Keep trifles in their place. Don't Starve Yourself. Don't think to preserve your strength by ceasing to eat. The right food eaten in moderation gives you strength to endure the heat. If you are a housewife, don't fail to set the right food before your family. Salads, fruits, fresh vegetables, berries, nuts, milk and eggs, these are some of the foods that keep up our strength in the summer without heating us. Don't Sit Up All Night. Don't be tempted by the lure of the summer night into sitting up two or three hours later than usual. If you do, you will be telling everybody next day that "it may not be so hot to-day, but it's the worst feeling day of the summer."

Take a daily bath in lukewarm or cold water. Also bathe your stomach with frequent glasses of water (preferably not ice water) and remember that it also feels the heat and do not ask it to digest two or three cold egg noggs, college ices and lemon limes in the course of a hot day. And above all keep cool—that is the best way to fit yourself to endure "the burden and heat of the day."

Keeping Cool By Keeping Cool. In the first place, keep cool. How silly, you say? No, not quite so silly as you think it, for I mean "keep cool" in the sense in which we say it to someone in danger. Keep cool, that is, keep calm. Keep your nerves steady. Don't fret. Keep as serene as possible. Hurry, worry and hate are three of the greatest nerve and tissue destroyers at any time, and especially so just now. Shut them all out of your summer programme. Say to yourself "I won't hurry. I won't worry. And I won't even use up my precious energy in disliking people or things." Don't argue—even about the war.

Holiness the Illustrious Benedict XV. We assure Your Grace that no people or Society in this Colony received this intelligence with greater enthusiasm than the members of the Star of the Sea Association of Placentia. This Society has a personal interest in Your Grace not alone from the fact that you are a native of Placentia but also because of the fame of your learning and other brilliant capabilities, on account of which you have been singled out as most worthy of the Ecclesiastical honours conferred upon you.

of which we are capable of re-echoing the chorus of admiration, respect and homage which for many days and from all sides have been pouring in upon you, we, the Pupils of the Placentia School rejoice in this opportunity, right merrily do we ring out words of welcome, gladly do we gather round you to offer you our felicitations and salute you as our Beloved Archbishop. It is our proud privilege to be the very first of the schools outside of St. John's to have the honor of congratulating Your Grace on your elevation to the Archbishopric of St. John's, and our hearts are filled with overflowing joy in union with those of your spiritual Children throughout the Archdiocese. Your presence here to-day fills us with unbounded joy when we realize the fulfilment of our fondest hopes and behold Your Grace clothed with the Episcopal Robes—the insignia of your well-merited and exalted dignity. The event which we celebrate, besides being a Red Letter Day in the annals of this Parish, marks an important epoch in the Ecclesiastical history of our country, and in the coming years we shall proudly recall the high honours conferred on our townsman, Placentia's best and noblest son whom we now lovingly salute as a distinguished Prelate and Archbishop of Newfoundland. We beg Your Grace's Blessing on our schools and we fervently pray that your life may be prolonged for very many years to add lustre to your exalted dignity, and to edify your devoted people by your many gifts of mind and distinguished virtues. The Welsh Coal Strike
The strike of 200,000 Welsh miners continues, and the prospects of an immediate settlement are not encouraging. The Executive Council of the South Wales Miners' Federation who cancelled their meeting with Mr. Runciman on Saturday and returned home, will meet again at Cardiff to-day. The Cabinet will also meet to-day to discuss the situation. Our special correspondent at Cardiff outlines a new offer which the Miners' Executive made to the Government—granting of the men's demands, the men to return to work, and the demands, together with Mr. Runciman's own proposal, to be submitted to arbitration. The strike in Wales, in contrast with the patriotic example shown by the miners of France, is the subject of comment in the French Press. M. Herve describes the action of the Welsh miners as "high treason, not only against England, but against France and all the Allies."

First Chaplin Killed.
Church of England Clergyman Pays Tribute to Father Finn, of the British Fusiliers, who met his Death Trying to Save Some of his Men at Gallipoli.
The first chaplain of the British forces to be killed during the war in Europe was Father Finn, of the British Fusiliers. He met his death trying to save some of his own men in the landing at the Gallipoli Peninsula. The Rev. H. G. Foster, Chaplain of the Church of England, writes the following tender appreciation of the devoted priest—
As I had the privilege and the fortune to be with Father Finn during the same transport, and during the same days on earth, I daresay a few words from me would not be unwelcome to those who are interested in the name which will be held in honor and respect by Christian people all over the world, but I venture to say, especially by the clergy and laity of his own church. His blameless character, the gentleness of his disposition, his tact with him. To see him quietly work among his own men of the British Fusiliers (1st Batt.) gave one a sense of why this courageous priest was so respected and beloved. He was a sympathetic ear for the troubles of his men, and when they were depressed and tired of the war, he was ready with a cheery word, a story, or an amusing tale or a cheery word, much so that among his own men he was known as "Father O'Flynn."
It was on April 8, that H. M. Transport Ansonia sailed from Alexandria for Lemnos Harbor, which was the first transport for conveying the British troops to Gallipoli. On board was a pleasant talker, I had with me, the Rev. Father Finn, and down the deck, and I remember that the day we discussed were many and varied, and included the Oxford Movement, Cardinal Newman, Pusey, the Holy Fathers, and the nature of the war, a hostile shore. His sympathy and kindness to me I shall never forget; he was broadminded, and also thoughtful of others. He collected mess on the fore well-deck benches, his tarpaulin, and always had excellent attendance. The priest's new disposal for my own services, on Sunday mornings, and everything in his power to help me in the last mess was on Saturday morning, April 24, and was attended by a large congregation of his own men. Our ship, the Ansonia, was surrounded by the guns of the Grand Fleet, which were getting ready for the great bombardment early next morning. His words to the men were "Preparation for Death," and little did I hearers think that the speaker's self was to be "killed" by the "friends" before another day had passed.
We had been close friends through out the voyage. It was with regret that I bid him "Godspeed" that Saturday evening, when we

Church of England Clergyman Pays Tribute to Father Finn, of the Dublin Fusiliers, who met his Death Trying to Save Some of his Men at Gallipoli.

The first chaplain of the British forces to be killed during the war in Europe was Father Finn, of the Dublin Fusiliers. He met his death in trying to save some of his own men in the landing at the Gallipoli Peninsula. The Rev. H. C. Foster, Church of England Chaplain to the second R. N. Brigade, writes the following tender appreciation of the devoted priest:

As I had the privilege and good fortune to be with Father Finn on the same transport, and during his last days on earth, I dare say a few words from me would not be unwelcome at this time. Father Finn's name will be held in honor and revered by Christian people all over the world, but I venture to say, especially by the clergy and laity of his own church. His blameless character and the gentleness of his disposition endeared him to all who came in contact with him. To see him quietly at work among his own men of the Dublin Fusiliers (1st Batt.) gave one the clew as to why this courageous priest was so respected and beloved. He always had a sympathetic ear for the trials, temptations, difficulties and troubles of his men, and when they were depressed and tired of the somewhat monotonous life on board a transport, he was ready with an amusing tale or a cheery word, so much so that among his own little circle of Irish "Tommys," he was known as "Father O'Flynn."

It was on April 8, that H. M. Transport Ansonia sailed from Alexandria for Lemnos Harbor, which was filled with transports for conveying the troops to Gallipoli Peninsula. Many a pleasant talk have I had with Father Finn, pacing up and down the deck, and I remember that the topics we discussed were many and varied, and included the Oxford Movement, Cardinal Newman, Pusey, the Cowley Fathers, and our future landing on a hostile shore. His sympathy and kindness to me I shall never forget; he was broadminded and always thought of others. He celebrated mass on the fore well-deck beneath a big tarpaulin, and always had an excellent attendance. He placed this at my disposal for my own service at 7 a.m. on Sunday mornings, and did everything in his power to help me. His last mass was on Saturday morning, April 24, and was attended by a large congregation of his beloved Dublin Fusiliers. Our ship lay at anchor, surrounded by the warships of the Grand Fleet, which were getting ready for the great bombardment early next morning. His last words to the men were on "Preparation for Death," and little did his hearers think that the speaker himself was to "lay down his life for his friends" before another day had passed.

We had been close friends throughout the voyage; it was with great regret that I bid him "Godspeed" on that Saturday evening, when we separated and got on two smaller ships which were to convey us, with the men, to Gallipoli. We steamed with lights out, he on an old collier (the s.s. River Clyde), and I on No. 1 mine-sweeper. At 3 o'clock we lay on the Peninsula, and at dawn commenced the great bombardment. This over, the ship was quickly run ashore, the Turks hardly firing a shot at her on "V" Beach, close to Seddul-Bahr, whereas our men were taken ashore in small ships' boats towed by steam pinnaces, in charge of midshipmen. The latter method of landing proved to be the better, for immediately the men commenced to disembark from the "River Clyde," shells crashed into her from the shore, and machine-guns, many in number, were turned on to the two exits made in her sides from which the men were emerging. Many of the gallant Dublins fell wounded and bleeding into the water, and when Father Finn saw it, he jumped in, and tried his utmost to rescue them. He succeeded in assisting several men, but suddenly several bullets entered his own body, and he fell just at the water's edge. It was seen at once that his condition was serious, and he was carried by some of the men to whom he had ministered so faithfully, into a place of cover. He only lived a few minutes, and his servant knelt by his side. His last words are said to have been "Are our fellows winning?" and then amidst the thunder of the guns on sea and land, he passed.

Thus died the first chaplain to be killed in action in the present war. His life and death are examples for all to follow. I took his photograph only a few days before his death, and then afterwards I took a photo of his grave, and when I return I hope to send copies of each to the press. Father Finn's memory will never fade. He gave his life for his country, and "greater love hath no man than this."

T. A. Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the T. A. and B. Society took place yesterday and was largely attended. The chair was occupied by the President, Mr. W. J. Ellis, who in opening the meeting, addressed the members on the question of Prohibition. He reminded them of the stand they should take when this important question comes before the country. He said the members of the T. A. Society, who represent 400 voters of this Island, are the best judges of what it means to be free from the curse of strong drink, and he would therefore impress upon the members of the largest organization of its kind in Newfoundland, the necessity of co-operating with the other organizations in the overthrow of "King Alcohol." In conclusion he expressed his confidence in the successful issue of the Prohibition campaign. The President then read a letter from Rev. Fr. Gough, of Portugal Cove, who said that he hoped to see a large number of the members at his annual Garden Party at the Cove on Wednesday afternoon next.
The regular business of the Society was then conducted, and six applicants were admitted to membership. The result of the collection for the Aeroplane Fund will be made known during the week. After the usual routine work was gone through the meeting adjourned.

PASSENGER DETAINED.—In accordance with the recently established rules of the port, a passenger who arrived from Barbadoes by the schr. Freedom yesterday was detained on board by the Customs Authorities, pending the presentation of his passports.

Many a Business Man who is careful to protect himself in money matters, is careless about health—his most valuable asset.

For many, tea or coffee drinking silently undermines health, because each cup contains from 1 1/2 to 3 grains of the cumulative, harmful drug, caffeine.

Five to six grains of caffeine will kill a rabbit or a cat, and repeated daily will cripple a man.

How cripple a man? The caffeine, little by little, causes hardening of the arteries and premature old age, showing more in some than in others.

Some of the symptoms of caffeine poisoning are headache, nervousness, biliousness, heart flutter, sleeplessness at night, and "fag" after reaction of the drug in the day time.

The way to avoid all tea and coffee troubles is to leave both tea and coffee alone and use

Lessen Your Living Expenses!

"Be economical," is the cry in England, and this slogan has the same significance in Canada. We all must economize. There is more actual waste in our dress expenses than any other item. When a garment becomes soiled we throw it aside, when for a few cents it could be restored to original freshness and beauty by Dry Cleaning.
A saving of at least 35 per cent. in the expense of dressing is possible by using the processes of Dry Cleaning and Dyeing.

Our agents will gladly give you full particulars.
