CHAPTER XXI.

It was fortunate for Inez that events succeeded each other with such rapidity that she had no time for brooding over her sorrow. The love that she had felt for her husband was changed to a loathing contempt, and gradually gave place to a bitter hatred. Her youth, her happiness, her life itself, seemed dead. She did not know how she dragged on her dreary existence from day to day. But a change was coming, heralded by death.

One morning Madame Monteleone was seized with a sudden and dangerous illness. The doctor who constantly attended her was sent for, and he pronounced her to be in great and immediate danger, and advised her attendants to send for a celebrated physician who resided at Seville.

Doctors and medicine were all in vain. Madame Monteleone had come to the close of her long, sorrowful life. When she heard that she was indeed dying, she sent for her grandchild, and spoke to her as she had never done before. She told her how she had lived but for one object, the restoration of her family; how she had trained her fair young daughter Bianca for that end, and how all her hopes had been wrecked by her child's marriage with the English lord.

"Then Inez," continued the dying woman, "my hopes were centered in you. Perhaps, child, I have wronged you and sacrificed you to my own ambitious views. I begged you from your father with such words of entreaty that he could not refuse my prayer, and I have brought you up as I did your mother before you, but with this difference; from her earliest intancy, I spoke to her of my hopes and plans. I have never mentioned them to you. But for my accident last year, I should this year have taken you to Madrid. I am dying now, and the purpose of my life is unfulfilled,—will be forever unfulfilled,—for you must go to your father in England, and you are the last of the Monteleones."

She then told the astonished girl that her father was a wealthy English nobleman, who lived in a home of stately magnificence; that he had married again, and had another daughter; and that his second wife, too, was dead.

"And I shall have to leave Spain," cried Inez, "and go a stranger to my own home!"

"A stranger," replied Madame Monteleone; "but yet remember you are the eldest child of Lord Lynne, and if my instinct tells me truly, you will be his best beloved daughter. He loved your mother as those calm, cold English seldom love. I have sent to him to-day to say that I am dying, and that you must return to him."

Inez was literally speechless with surprise to think that she, the deserted, lonely child, was the eldest daughter of this rich English lord, who lived in such magnificence in England. After all, it was no penniless girl whom Count Rinaldo had married; and in the first bitterness of her heart she wished that he could know that the girl of whom he had tired so soon would have been of as much value to him as the heiress who had smiled upon him.

If he had been living, how she would have triumphed over him—how she would have spurned him, and wrung his heart by her contempt; dead, she could but despise him the more from the knowledge of what she was.

Madame Monteleone died before the messenger from England arrived. Inez grieved for the loss of the stern guardian who had been her only real friend, but her mind was too much agitated now for any grief to absorb her. When she thought of those unknown relations far away in England she felt something like satisfaction that Rinaldo was dead, and that her disgraceful secret could never be known. What would that stately English father say if he knew that his eldest child had forgotten herself so far? What would he think of her if he knew of those secret meetings, that hurried, secret marriages? Above all, what would he say if he knew how easily she had been wooed and won—to what kind of a man she had entrusted her love and her fair name? Death seemed preferable; she would have suffered any torture, endured any anguish, rather than let her secret be known.

Then the English messenger came, bringing with him a large sum of money, and for the first time in her life Inez had the pleasure of being able to choose rich and costly dresses that suited her taste.

Mr. Brownson had long been a kind of confidential steward to Lord Lynne, and he told the young girl that her father wished her to spare no expense, but to provide herself with everything suitable to her position. The old servants were each allowed a small annuity, and the gloomy old castle of Serranto, once the stately home of the Monteleones, was allowed to fall into ruins.

A new life began for the beautiful Andalusian. Without sorrow or regret, she bade farewell to the gloomy home where her childhood and girlhood had been buried. Never since the night when she found the letter had she visited the orange grove; now she turned her eyes from it as they drove past on the road to Seville.

She would have given the whole world to live the past year over again,—to undo the deed of which she could not think without bitter sorrow and shame. The secret she could never forget lay a heavy weight upon her; it destroyed her youth and her happiness, and she had to bear it with her across the seas, to meet her unknown relations with its burden pressing upon her. There were times when she would have given her life itself never to have seen Rinaldo Montalti.

The novelty of the journey amused her. Mr. Brownson stood in great awe of the regal-looking girl of whom he had charge. He was most devoted to her comforts, but he did not intrude much upon her. He had expected a torrent of questions about her home, but she never asked one, and he did not quite understand her dignified silence; but he was much relieved to find that she spoke English, although her pronunciation and accent were not quite perfect.

As they drew near Lynnewoide, and every moment brought her nearer to the father and sister whom she had never seen, the young girl's emotion showed itself in her pale, quiet face. How different all would have been had no secret weighed upon her! She determined then, and she adhered to her resolution, never to mention that past foreign life of hers,—never to speak of Madame Monteleone, Serranto, or anything connected with her Spanish home.

She was lost in amazement at the beautiful scenery in England,—the tall, graceful trees; the green fields so refreshing to one accustomed only to the bare Spanish landscapes. But she was not prepared for the magnificent home awaiting her. Accommodated to the dreary, half-ruined solitude of Serranto, Lynnewoide was like fairyland to her. When she first saw the stately mansion standing in the midst of a noble, undulating park, a keen sense of the wrong that had been done her awoke in her heart. Why for so many years had she been deprived of the luxuries of such a home? Why had she been deserted, neglected, left to fall an easy prey to the designing Italian, whose love had blighted her life?

Those who watched the young girl descend from the carriage, and wondered at her beautiful proud face, knew little of the thoughts and feelings surging in that rebellious heart.

Inez wondered still more at the number of servants standing in that magnificent hall to welcome her to her father's house, but no sign of surprise escaped her. She walked through the long file of domestics with a stately step, and a half smile of acknowledgment upon her face. Some one—she never knew whom it was—told her that Lord Lynne was in the library, and conducted her there.

A mist swam before her eyes; she could hear counted its pulsations; but her proud step never faltered, her face never relaxed. Then a stately gentleman came toward her, and clasped her in his arms.

"Inez, my own child," he said, "look at me!—you have your mother's eyes."

She saw his face grow pale as he gazed on her own. The pain he had so selfishly shrunk from for many long years, struck him with redoubled force. It seemed to him that his passionately-loved Bianca stood before him again in all the pride of her youth and wondrous beauty. There was the same exquisite Southern face, the dark almond eyes, the rippling Southern hair. But in his dead wife's face there had been a look of gentle repose, of which he found no trace in the features before him. He gazed upon her until large tears rose in his eyes, and he could see her no more. It was as though the ghost of his youth had arisen before him,—the beautiful past that he had tried to bury and forget,—that one year of happiness greater than words can tell. She stood quite silently before him.

Where Women Reign Supreme.

Lady Dorothy Mills, who has recently returned to London from West Africa, after having travelled alone as far as Timbuctoo, says she has discovered a country devoted to women—the country of the Touaregs, in the Central Sahara. She says:

"At Timbuctoo I had the opportunity of studying them. They are a strange people, aristocrats of the sand. Their men—who live by bloodshed and pillage, are the handsomest creatures alive, slim, amber-skinned, muscular, but they hide their aquiline features behind a black or dark blue veil that leaves nothing visible but their bright black eyes.

Their women are very good-looking, though, among the richer classes beauty is measured by weight, and young girls are subject to a fattening process something like that of the Christmas turkey. Often by the time they reach maturity they can only move with the aid of two, or more slaves.

But, rich or poor, they are always and in everything given the priority over men. They have a voice in every family or public assembly; at meals they eat first; their children are exclusively their property, and retain their rank should they marry men of inferior degree.

They alone have the power to ask for a divorce, and no Touareg woman ever dreams of remaining with a husband she does not love. Should she be unfaithful to her husband, the most he can do is to scold her gently.

Married or single, the Touareg woman holds receptions in her tent of little bits of red leather sewn together, after the evening meal, much in the manner of the "salons" of the great ladies of old. She dabbles in politics, is chatty about other women, and dines freely with her numerous admirers.

It all seems to work out well. She is an excellent mother, and an intelligent companion. He is happy with his warfare, she with her social life and her household. And it is said that they never have domestic rows."

Chicago Woman Bandit.
HOLDS UP MAN AND WIFE AS THEY ARRIVE AT GARAGE.

Chicago, June 6.—Eugene Schlig, 31, was arrested on suspicion here to-day in connection with the slaying of Richard C. Tesmer, wealthy insurance man, at his home here last night. The suspect is believed by the police to know the identity of the girl and man who held up Tesmer and made off with his automobile after the girl had shot Tesmer down in the presence of his wife.

After firing the shot the girl snatched commands to her companion, leaped into Tesmer's automobile and drove away as calmly as if she were embarking on a moonlight ride with her favorite beau.

Two hours later the abandoned machine was found near the scene. The slaying, characterized as without parallel in wantonness, was the first committed by a woman bandit in Chicago.

Tesmer was returning home with his wife after a short visit to his sister. Just when he started to back his automobile into the garage the girl and man stepped out from the shadows and commanded the couple, at the points of pistols, to put their hands up, and get out of the car. Her companion stood silently by as the girl searched both captives.

The purses of Mr. and Mrs. Tesmer yielded only a small sum of money. The girl demanded jewellery, but scorned the watch which Tesmer promptly handed over.

As the male bandit struggled with Mrs. Tesmer in an attempt to force her wedding ring from her finger, Tesmer moved, and without a word the girl bandit swung her pistol around and fired the shot. He fell, dying instantly.

Mrs. Tesmer hysterically fell over her husband's body as the bandit pair sped away in the automobile. About ten dollars was obtained by the robbers.

THE BEGGAR.
The beggar meets me on the pike, his tattered, unwieldy epiel; he begs me, for the love of Mike, to stake him for a frugal meal; he knows what famine's pangs are like, he's hollow from his crown to heel. I know he's probably a fake, beneath his clothes are mighty thaws, his wits are keen and wide awake, and stalwart feet are in his shoes, he will wield a hoe or rake, and earn his piece and wholesome stew. And yet I give the fraud a cent, and bid him go and strive no more, and watch him as his steps are bent to Smith & Johnson's Blue Front store; I am not moved by his lament for tearful pleadings are a bore. I ought to say, "The farmers to ply the shaft and speed the plow, and spray the figtree and the dates; there's work for all, you must allow, in each of our United States. Then grithers turn to honest toil, go till the meadow wide and flat, and you will have a goose to boil, a sort of tripe to make you fat; the kerg of spiel you make will spoil the crown and lining of your hat." But when I think how I despise the kind of work that makes me sweat, I lack the nerve to lecture guys and tell them, toll's the safest bet; I'd rather fill them up with pies, while uty shivers with regret.

New Egg Preserving Process.
A new process for preserving eggs has come into operation in the United States and if it is the success it is proclaimed to be will, in due time, probably supersede all other methods. It is claimed that eggs which have been treated by this system come out of storage in much better condition than eggs which have not been so treated.

Owing to the eggs being treated with oils or hot oils mixed with other substances the pores are completely sealed and the bacteria and mold spores are completely killed. As a consequence no infection can penetrate through the pores of the shell into the egg. Also the membrane of albumen which is next to the shell is coagulated without injuring the white thus entirely sealing the egg which prevents evaporation. Another advantage is that foreign flavors cannot penetrate into the egg. Storage flavor is not encountered in eggs that have been properly processed.

Chicago and New York seem to be the points where the process is most practiced so far. A report says that at the present time in New York over 5,000 cases of eggs are being processed a day, and the number is being increased as fast as machines can be delivered and installed. In some of the cold storage houses, companies that are processing eggs are working double shifts and similar conditions are said to exist in Chicago.

Presbyterian Anti-Unionists Will Not Check Movement

Russian Note to Britain--French Disappointment at British Cabinet Deliberations--Passive Resistance in Ruhr Will Continue, Says Cuno

WILL NOT BE CARRIED TO THE COURTS.
PORT ARTHUR, Ont., June 12. The Presbyterian Church Union meeting this morning and one decision was announced that objections would be asked for the courts to check the movement toward organic union. A committee will be named in each province to formulate a policy for the union and the work of finding support and friends of the policy of union of the Presbyterian churches in Canada will be vigorously pursued.

LATEST RUSSIAN NOTE.
LONDON, June 12. The latest Russian note in the give and take exchange between London and Moscow is in the form of a conciliatory reply which Russians here conclude all possibility of a break in trade relations between the two countries. Summing up its contents the Soviet concedes four points to Lord Curzon: the offensive note in regard to the prosecution of Russian ecclesiastics will be withdrawn; the British fishing vessels will be admitted, compensation for repression against the vessels allowed, and pledged non-interference renewed. On two points the Soviet still does not agree with British demands; it will not withdraw its troops in the East until a conference has studied their propaganda, and it will not make compensation for injuries to British subjects.

Assumes New Duties.

REV. DR. GREENE, P.P. WITLESS BAY.

We understand that Rev. Dr. Greene, who has recently been appointed Parish Priest of Witless Bay, leaves the city shortly to assume his new duties. Dr. Greene, who has been attached to the Cathedral Parish for the past 12 years, will be greatly missed. His active work on behalf of the youth is recognized everywhere. From the college boy to the poor lad who had no chance of obtaining an education, Rev. Dr. Greene took the same affectionate interest. It was this that prompted him to establish his night school, where so many have learned to at least read and write. In the church ceremonial and in the pulpit Dr. Greene's place will be difficult to fill. Whilst his many friends in the city will regret his leaving them, Witless Bay has reason to be glad of securing the services of such a distinguished priest.

Realistic Locations in "Love's Masquerade."

TO-MORROW'S ATTRACTION AT THE NICKEL.

"Love's Masquerade," starring Conway Tearle, which has been announced as the attraction at the Nickel Theatre for a three day engagement beginning to-morrow, will attract particular attention because of the novelty of the exterior locations which have been chosen in the working out of the story. Much of the action takes place in a typical little New England fishing village and this atmosphere has been created in a manner which is especially convincing. Director William P. S. Earle, always a stickler for photographic detail, gave the exterior locations a great deal of thought and the screen pictures which have resulted are fully as impressive as the ones he used to create in the best commercial photographic studios in which he worked before he took up the business of directing motion pictures.

Truro Lawyer is Found Guilty in Supreme Court.

CROWN CASE RESERVED MOVED FOR; BAIL DENIED—JOHNSON GIVEN TWO YEARS IN DORCHESTER.

TRURO, June 7.—In Supreme Court this afternoon, after one hour's deliberation, the jury in the case of Henry A. Dickie, of this town, who was charged with an offence against a girl over fourteen years of age and under sixteen years of age, returned a verdict of guilty.

G. H. Vernon, K.C., counsel for the defence, immediately asked for a stay in sentence and moved for a Crown case reserved. He also asked for bail for the accused.

H. O. McLatchey, K.C., for the Crown, stated that Attorney General O'Hearn had left for Halifax, and that before going Mr. O'Hearn had instructed him in the event of the accused being convicted, to oppose the granting of bail at this stage.

His Lordship, Mr. Justice McKenzie, adjourned the case till to-morrow morning and placed Dickie in the care of Sheriff McKim.

Hearing of the case began shortly before three o'clock this afternoon. The only witnesses called were the girl in the case and her girl companions, both of whom left the Maritime Home for Girls, of which they were inmates, on the night of May 15th, and were subsequently located at Halifax and brought back to the Home.

Mr. Vernon, for the accused, and Attorney General O'Hearn, for the Crown, addressed the jury at considerable length, after which his Lordship delivered his charge. At 4.30 the jury retired, returning one hour later with a verdict of guilty.

Rolling Waves no Obstacle to French Surgeon.

Three Serious Cases Operated Upon Off C.B. Coast.

North Sydney—Three operations were successfully carried out under chloroform, during the rolling and tossing of the French Hospital ship, St. Jeanne de Arc, by Dr. Le Cann, during their 21 days' duty on the St. Pierre coast.

The hospital ship, commanded by the general commander, Capt. Beauge, was welcomed into this port recently, after spending 21 days on the fishing banks assisting seamen and sailors of all nationalities and crews.

During her trip to the banks, the St. Jeanne was called upon to assist in many ways, from delivering mails to rescuing shipwrecked sailors.

Twenty-four of the crew from the ship Raymond were picked up by the St. Jean and the Regulus, after their ship had struck an iceberg. A mess boy from the Raymond died from exposure and his companion was badly frozen when located by the St. Jean; and after his toes were amputated he was taken to St. Pierre for hospital treatment. Over 240 telegrams were collected and delivered; 11,700 letters were distributed and collected during the trip.

Over 115 consultations were held during the voyage. After loading coal and supplies at the International pier, the St. Jean will proceed out to Sydney and remain there until Saturday afternoon, whence she will sail on another trip of mercy to the fishing banks.—Sydney Record.

Triangle Was Too Small for Lloyd Smith.

BORROWS MONEY FROM ONE BRIDE TO WED ANOTHER—ALL THREE IN COURT.

Rochester, N.Y., June 7.—Lloyd Smith, chemistry student at the Mechanics Institute here, was held by the police yesterday in a charge of bigamy. All the girls, attractive, were in court yesterday. Dorothy Bull, second mate, comforted him in his cell at police headquarters.

Smith, it is said, borrowed money from his Toronto bride to pay for his wedding to Lila Haberson. The marriage secret became known, it was learned yesterday, when Mrs. Haberson-Smith entered a hospital.

Mr. Baldwin as Man and Politician.

FROM BUSINESS TO POLITICS AND HIGH OFFICE.

As a rule, when a man of business is lifted to a high position in the world of politics, his comprehension of politics proves to be less complete than his knowledge of the ways of the commercial world.

Nobody, however, is likely to pass that criticism on Mr. Stanley Baldwin.

He has sat in Parliament for some fourteen or fifteen years; and he brings to his new task the culture of the University of Cambridge, as well as the experience of an iron-master and of a holder of various responsible political offices.

Political.

Rumour has it that the House will meet to-day to adjourn again for another indefinite period. Some members of the Government are not made acquainted with this fact which was not decided upon at a hurried meeting of the Government members held in the Colonial Secretary's office last evening which was called for the purpose of reading and discussing the Hum-mer Contract. Another meeting will be held at the Speaker's room this evening previous to the opening of the House to deal with the probability of a short session in order to permit the Prime Minister to proceed to London early in July. The debate on the address from the Throne will be continued this afternoon in connection with a series of questions which will be asked. In addition to the Hum-mer Contract and Correspondence which will only be tabled there is a railway agreement to be placed before the Assembly, all of which will not be fully debated in one or two sittings should the Prime Minister insist on causing discussion and seek to antagonize the members of the opposition as on previous sittings and not set forth the business of the House in a business-like manner he will personally be responsible for an unnecessary lengthy session, which, in view of existing conditions, will be detrimental to the best interests of the country.

To-Day's Attractions.

The attractions for this afternoon are the St. Bon's sports and the St. Mary's Garden Party. The latter takes place at 3 p.m. on Lester's Field. The special feature is the three mile road race. Commencing 1/4 of a mile west of the junction of Topsail and Mount Pearl Roads. The competitors will proceed to Lester's Field, via Cornwall Avenue finishing the race with two laps of the 200 yards course on the field. The sports programme containing many interesting items promises to be well contested, judging by the number of entries. The C.L.B. Band will be in attendance.

Allowing Cattle at Large.

Residents of Waterford Bridge Road complain of the number of cattle which are allowed to roam at large over the thoroughfare. Farmers it is claimed have taken the bells off their cows so that when the animals break into a garden during the night they would not be heard. Cows and horses at large do a lot of damage to flower and shrubs besides tramping down fencer and vegetable beds. A stop should be put to this practice of leaving cattle out to roam on the country roads.

CARE OF THE TEETH. Dental authorities, almost the world over, are seeking to bring about a new Dental Era. Few people keep their teeth free from film, few escape decay. Probably millions of people are affected by diseases local or internal which tooth trouble breed. So in modern tooth pastes dental science aims to combat this film, to destroy it or digest it, and in the tooth brush, science aims at effective film removal. Leading Dental authorities have now agreed that Pepsodent Tooth Paste and the Decoster Tooth Brush are the best means for destroying this film. Pepsodent Tooth Paste contains no soap, no chalk, no pumice, nothing to harden film, nothing to scratch enamel, nothing which isn't helpful. The Decoster Tooth Brush massages the gums, penetrates the interstices and cleans the teeth.

Three Females Arrested.

The Royal Stores Glee Club, assisted by the C.L.B. Band, gave another successful concert last night, at the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company's offices on Water Street. Mr. Gordon Christian and Mr. H. Courtenay, also contributed well rendered items to the programme. Numerous reports were received from wireless enthusiasts complimenting all concerned on the excellence of the entertainment provided. After the concert was over, Mr. A. H. Salter, on behalf of the Royal Stores Glee Club, presented Mr. Collins, the general representative of the Canadian Marconi Co., with a souvenir of happy times. The following is the programme:

Shooting Buffalo While on the Jump.

While in a dry, scorchy country in Africa, with bushes about waist-high, Mr. W. Shelley had an adventure with a buffalo which he will never forget. The buffalo derives its name from the fact that every limb has a lot of strong hooks much like fish hooks growing upon it, and when one brushes against the limbs these hooks catch into your clothing. They are so strong you cannot tear yourself loose, but have to wait a bit and unhook them. We had come upon fresh buffalo tracks, and suddenly members of our party ahead started shouting, writes Mr. Shelley. I heard the heavy animals crashing my way. The bush was thick here, so, with Mullie, my black gun bearer, at my heels, I advanced until I came to a small glade where I stopped. On came the buffalo straight toward us. I had my 470 double-barrel express rifle in my hand and two extra cartridges, one between my first and second finger of my left hand and one between the second and third finger—a precaution I always took in hunting dangerous game. My gun bearer stood just behind me with my 350 Rigby Mauser, a six-shooter. I dropped on my left knee and threw the two-pounder to my shoulder as a huge buffalo bull broke cover, a second one close behind him. As the first one jumped into the glade, I fired my right barrel without effect, except that the one in the lead lowered his head slightly and increased his speed. But as his head went down preparing to toss me, I gave him the left barrel at the point where the shoulder and neck joined. It brought him down with a shock only twenty feet away, but he had been coming at such speed that he skidded clear up to my feet. Deserted by Gun-Bearer. The second bull was running so hard he came upon me, his high body plowing my legs to the ground and his front feet beating a tattoo against my chest and face. Frantically I extricated myself and crawled off through the waist-bit, expecting every minute that the wounded brute would be upon me again. But he never stirred, for my bullet had entered between the lower jawbones and crashed through his brain. It must have killed him while he was in the air. Some people imagine that Chinese eat rats. That's nothing, the Chinese imagine we eat dogs. They're so much about hot dogs. Gloucester, N.J. is to have a "Love This Enemy Week." ### Personal.

Sir Robert Bond arrived in the city by train yesterday, and is a guest at The Balmston. Lieut-Col. Nangle, C.F., will be leaving by the next Digby for England, and is not expected to return to St. John's before next spring. It is rumored that Lt.-Col. W. F. Rendell has been appointed Stipendiary Magistrate for St. John's Bay.

Scene at Laundry.

Quite a scene was created at a Chinese Laundry on Cochrane St. last evening when a young man jumped out through a window. It appears that the Chinaman in charge refused to deliver up some laundry which the young man claimed he had left there. Getting vexed the young man closed the shop door, smashed out the window, and, ignoring the opening made, the Chinaman in the laundry gave chase followed by a large crowd of people.

"Useful Women" Aid Bachelors.

"The Useful Women" an organization, which is a sort of league of fairy godmothers, has started operation in Manchester, Eng. Under its guidance bachelors requiring wives, elderly gentlemen looking for some one with whom to discuss politics, brides needing advice about trousseaus or hostesses seeking "fillers" at a dinner party will all be assisted. Mrs. Telly, the daughter of a former Lord Mayor of Manchester, who is starting the scheme, explains that in addition to the duties mentioned above, her "useful women" will be willing to mend bachelors' clothes and darn their socks; look after children, act as guides to country visitors who want to see Manchester, exercise dogs, provide players for bridge parties in emergencies, search for missing relatives, do family shopping, and or try to find vacant houses, teach languages and read books in almost every tongue, arrange tours and do the packing.

Pretty Wedding at Forest Road.

PARSONS-JERRETT. An exceedingly pretty wedding took place at the residence of the bride's uncle, Forest Road, last evening, when Winnie, daughter of the late Mr. Robert S. Parsons, of Harbor Grace, was united in the bonds of matrimony to Harold, son of Mr. W. H. Jerrett, of Clarke's Beach, C.B. The bride and her assistant were appropriately dressed, the former carrying a bouquet of white carnations and sweet peas, and the latter, one of pink flowers of the same kind. Rev. L. Curtis, D.D., M.B.E., performed the ceremony, at which Mr. George Jerrett, cousin of the groom, and Miss Stella LeDrew, one of her most intimate friends acted as bridesmaid and bridesmaid, respectively. Although the invitations were owing to the recent death of the bride's father—confirmed almost exclusively to immediate relatives of the contracting parties, yet the attendance was a fairly large one, more than thirty persons being present. After luncheon the time was occupied with the usual felicitation, etc., till 9 o'clock, when the happy couple left for Holyrood, where they will spend their honeymoon, and then proceed to their future home at Clarke's Beach. They were accompanied as far as Donovan's by the whole wedding party in motor cars. Here their friends again wished them a happy and prosperous journey, not only to Holyrood, but over the whole of life's journey, and returned to the city. The presents were many and valuable, including a handsome gift from the groom.

Shooting Buffalo While on the Jump.

While in a dry, scorchy country in Africa, with bushes about waist-high, Mr. W. Shelley had an adventure with a buffalo which he will never forget. The buffalo derives its name from the fact that every limb has a lot of strong hooks much like fish hooks growing upon it, and when one brushes against the limbs these hooks catch into your clothing. They are so strong you cannot tear yourself loose, but have to wait a bit and unhook them. We had come upon fresh buffalo tracks, and suddenly members of our party ahead started shouting, writes Mr. Shelley. I heard the heavy animals crashing my way. The bush was thick here, so, with Mullie, my black gun bearer, at my heels, I advanced until I came to a small glade where I stopped. On came the buffalo straight toward us. I had my 470 double-barrel express rifle in my hand and two extra cartridges, one between my first and second finger of my left hand and one between the second and third finger—a precaution I always took in hunting dangerous game. My gun bearer stood just behind me with my 350 Rigby Mauser, a six-shooter. I dropped on my left knee and threw the two-pounder to my shoulder as a huge buffalo bull broke cover, a second one close behind him. As the first one jumped into the glade, I fired my right barrel without effect, except that the one in the lead lowered his head slightly and increased his speed. MAY BE DOWN, BUT NOT OUT. Smokers should give heed to that famous saying: "A butt may be down, but it's not always out."

BOTH FOR SEVERAL YEARS. An advertisement appeared in a certain paper for someone to take charge of a church choir and play the organ. Among the replies received was the following: "Dear Sir,—I notice your advertisement for an organist and music teacher, either lady or gentleman. Having been both for several years, I offer you my services."

Gold in the Streets. It is said that dwellers in the Australian cities are seldom surprised when gold is discovered in the streets of prominent country towns. At Gympie, Queensland, the local council for years permitted a large bulldozer to remain in the chief thoroughfare. It was a relic of the early pioneering days. Timber getters and teamsters used it as a resting place. Children played around it. One day a tipsy blacksmith dealt it a blow with a sledge hammer. As a result the boulder split in pieces, revealing rich veins of gold in the seams and crannies.

Turkish Modes for British Women.

WHY DO OUR GIRLS HIDE THEIR FACES!

In court the other day the Judge ordered a witness to raise her hat so that he could see the colour of her hair—an important point in the case. This only emphasizes once again the curiously furtive costume in which the modern woman prepares for walking or driving in town.

First she puts on a close-fitting "little hat" and puts it well down over her ears, the brim in front touching her eyebrows.

When this is on it is impossible to tell whether she has "locks of ruddy gold" or "raven tresses" or just hair.

Then the fell work continues. A fur neck-tie covers mouth, chin and the tip of the nose, so that all that is revealed is one eye—perhaps two. The effect, indeed, is precisely that of the Turkish yashmak—only a little more yashmak.

Is the British girl afraid to show her face? Perish the thought!

I should like to point out that this fashion may lead to embarrassing situations when acquaintances meet in street or park, or anywhere in outdoor apparel. A nervous young man is greeted by this usual muffled-up figure; but how is he to identify the tip of a nose and a bit of pink cheek?

Oriental Fashions. What is the wretched man to do? He dare not say:—"I can't see your face, but your hat is very familiar."

The only way is to give vent to a little innocuous chat about the weather and grope for some clue to the identity of the person behind the nose-tie.

Why do our girls conceal their countenances in this tantalizing way? It cannot be to guard against the cold, because their ankles are only protected—if one can use the word—by the thinnest of silk. Besides, the hairy way in which they wear "pneumonia jumpers" in the bitterest weather disposes of this idea.

The Victorian age was deemed to be more severely conventional than the present; but even then young women did not hide their faces.

Nor did they cover the lower part of the face with the pet of a deceased animal, or a towering storm-collared fur. The only approach to this was a "bea" which floated in the breeze, and occasionally whipped against the face of some innocent bystander.

Earlier in the reign the "pork pie" hat revealed the entire area of the wearer's face; nor, even earlier, did the "spoon bonnet" seek to conceal any of it.

Never till these Georgian days was woman's gear so arranged that we saw so little of our friends' faces. But why not go the whole way, and adopt the yashmak at once? Turkish women are taking more and more to European clothes, so it would only be fair to appropriate their distinctive head covering.

Besides, the yashmak is very becoming.

Such ridiculous tales were common all over the country. Scott makes Mr. Bradwardine in one of his novels rave how once, in Tully-Veolan, he visited an old woman called Janet Gately. She was suspected to be a witch, because she was very old, very poor, and very ugly, and had two sons, one a poet and one an imbecile.

At last it occurred to him that the hare was a witch. He loaded his gun with a sixpence, and fired again. This time he wounded the hare in the hip and it limped away before he was able to reload. He followed its trail, however, to the cottage of a woman who had an uncanny reputation. Entering he found her lying in bed. "Turn down the blanket," said the laird, "I'll get my sixpence out of your hip." The woman returned at first, but afterwards consented, and the laird reclaimed his sixpence, and went away rejoicing.

When Witchcraft Ruled in Scotland.

It is hardly two centuries since the last public execution or witchcraft was carried out in Scotland, according to a writer in a Glasgow paper, who has gathered together a few famous instances of the black art, from which the following are selected.

A Nairnshire girl who fancied herself slighted hired a witch to encompass the death of her faithless lover. The witch made a clay image of her intended victim, and hollowed it in.

When a cow was bewitched, some new pins were put into a pot, and allowed to simmer with a little of the cow's milk. The person who had bewitched the cow was sure to enter the cottage a few minutes later on some "thievish errand," and lift the pot off the fire.

These foolish beliefs were held less than a hundred years ago. And another that was current then was that if a child was ailing, its heart had turned round. To turn it the right way again, a witch was summoned. She brought with her a heart-shaped piece of lead, which she turned round and round and round over the child's bare breast, as if winding up a watch. It was actually believed this ensured that the child's heart was all right, again, and acting in accord with the one she turned round.

Shot With a Sixpence. Witches are even thought by simple people to have had the power of transforming themselves into the shape of certain animals, commonly that of the hare. One of the Lairds of Brodie was out shooting one day, when he saw a hare in front of him. He shot at it several times, says an old yarn, but always missed it; and each time the hare turned round and sat down and gazed at him calmly.

At last it occurred to him that the hare was a witch. He loaded his gun with a sixpence, and fired again. This time he wounded the hare in the hip and it limped away before he was able to reload. He followed its trail, however, to the cottage of a woman who had an uncanny reputation. Entering he found her lying in bed. "Turn down the blanket," said the laird, "I'll get my sixpence out of your hip." The woman returned at first, but afterwards consented, and the laird reclaimed his sixpence, and went away rejoicing.

He followed its trail, however, to the cottage of a woman who had an uncanny reputation. Entering he found her lying in bed. "Turn down the blanket," said the laird, "I'll get my sixpence out of your hip." The woman returned at first, but afterwards consented, and the laird reclaimed his sixpence, and went away rejoicing.

Such ridiculous tales were common all over the country. Scott makes Mr. Bradwardine in one of his novels rave how once, in Tully-Veolan, he visited an old woman called Janet Gately. She was suspected to be a witch, because she was very old, very poor, and very ugly, and had two sons, one a poet and one an imbecile.

At last it occurred to him that the hare was a witch. He loaded his gun with a sixpence, and fired again. This time he wounded the hare in the hip and it limped away before he was able to reload. He followed its trail, however, to the cottage of a woman who had an uncanny reputation. Entering he found her lying in bed. "Turn down the blanket," said the laird, "I'll get my sixpence out of your hip." The woman returned at first, but afterwards consented, and the laird reclaimed his sixpence, and went away rejoicing.

dark secret, only half-revealed to the business men who are backing the enterprise. It is known, however, that a device of engineering, rivaling a dream of Jules Verne, will be prepared for this phase of the task.

It will reach four giant arms and grasp the specic boxes where they lie as the purser left them. These steel fingers will not relax under the weight of sea water which, at sixty-five fathoms, would crush a diver's helmet. The treasure will be lifted to the sea bottom and then raised to the surface. No divers or diving appliances will be used.

The details of this romantic enterprise, which in another day would have exercised the wits of Loonoois, Teach, and every buccanor captain in Tortuga, have been thrashed out by shrewd, up-to-date business men, and work will begin at an early date.

The syndicate are convinced that they will succeed. They have agreed to spend $500,000. When the gold is raised $2,025,000 will go to the syndicate and $2,025,000 to Lloyd's, who met the heaviest loss in the wreck of the Egypt.

An agreement giving effect to these terms has been signed on behalf of the Swedish firm, three British insurance companies, and Lloyd's underwriters.

The syndicate's engineer considers that the work will last over three summers. Neither he nor Lloyd's have the slightest fear that he will fail to bring the gold to the surface.

The sinking of the gold in the Egypt was the greatest single loss ever borne by Lloyd's. It was greater than the loss borne in the case of the Titanic. Yet within three days of the sinking cheques for the whole amount were paid out, $4,000,000 on behalf of the underwriters and $1,500,000 for the three insurance companies.

Lloyd's met the full claim of the gold in the ship. The P. and O. Company carried their own insurance on the ship herself.

Marine underwriters in every part of the world are keenly interested in the enterprise. If it is successful the prospect is opened of raising untold millions of specie now at the bottom of the sea.

London's "Solid Smoke." Only London can boast of a "solid smoke." This is also known as "soot" and some quite unpleasant statistics are made public regarding it in the annual report for 1920 of the medical officer of health in the city of London.

In order to examine the air in the city an apparatus, consisting of a large rain gauge, is mounted upon the roof of one of the corporation's buildings in Golden Lane and the rain water from a known area of surface is collected monthly. This rain water, containing the soot, grit and dust, washed from the air, is submitted for examination to the public analyst, and the results are compared with similar observations made at the Archbishop's Park, Lambeth, by the London Country Council. The total solids varied from month to month, the highest in the city being 18.38 metric tons per square kilometer in September, compared with 23.11 at Lambeth, while the lowest in the city was 7.79 metric tons per square kilometer in August, as against 5.48 at Lambeth. One metric ton per acre, or 2.46 tons per square mile.

This record probably surpasses any possibilities in America though perhaps similar incursions in Pittsburgh might nearly equal this. Nine pounds of dirt per acre, or 24 tons per square mile, is a deposit of "solid smoke" not to be overlooked. The effect on the lungs and other parts of Londoners in general is not taken into account.

Adrift on a Raft Among Sharks.

After being mortally wounded for nearly a week as a dead, sailor, who bears a charmed life, recently appeared among his shipwrecked comrades at Loroño Marquess on the African coast.

He had spent three days and three nights adrift in the sea on a floor wrenched from the wreck, and for a day and night was cast on a lonely beach, with only a small supply of raw shellfish to sustain him.

The man, Andre Delgado, was a freeman on the British steamer Eastway, which was wrecked on Banue Reef, off the East African coast. The ship broke in two, the engine room was flooded, and the second engineer, Bernard O'Brien, of Cardiff, lost his life there.

It was believed that Delgado had shared O'Brien's fate.

When the ship struck Delgado dashed on deck, and made for one of the boats. Whilst trying to launch it, he was swept overboard.

In the darkness of a shark-infested sea he began to swim until his hand touched something solid, and he grasped it, to find that it was a door wrenched from the wreck.

For a time after the sea abated he endeavored to paddle towards the In-yack lighthouse, the beam of which he could see, but he made no progress and had to drift at the mercy of the sea.

He struck shallow water, but was too exhausted from hunger and thirst to reach the shore and the next day once more washed him.

In this plight he spent all day Friday, Saturday, and Saturday night, but on Sunday he was thrown on the beach north of the Incomati River, between Outfield Shoal and the small native settlement of Macaute.

Tormented by thirst, but too exhausted to catch more than a few small crabs, he remained there until some natives discovered him, and put him into touch with civilization.

Seven years ago Delgado was wrecked off the coast of Africa, and during the war he was shelled off a British vessel in the South Atlantic. No sooner had he been rescued by another steamer than it was torpedoed by a U boat.

He got away in a boat, but he feels that his latest escape was the "nearest squeak" of them all.

Indians Start Hunt for Seals.

Members of the far east Maine coast tribe of Passamaquoddy Indians have started their annual hunt for seals. The expert hunters are out in their small, frail canoes of birch bark or canvas in the Bay of Fundy and will remain in the open air for many days until they obtain a satisfactory supply of dead seals for the season.

While late in May is considered the earliest time for shooting or harpooning these sea-dogs in the Bay of Fundy, they are considered of more value in June. The hairs are then softer. Late in the season they become heavier and coarser.

The pelts are tanned by the redmen by stretching them on light frames, hung in the sun for many days to dry. The skins are often sold whole for parlor rugs. Handsome seal skin mittens and moccasins are manufactured by the Indian men and squaws.

The supply is far below the demand every season, as seals are becoming scarce. A few years ago it was possible for this tribe on the banks of the border river, St. Croix, five miles from Eastport, to gather up nearly 300 seals. Now it is considered a satisfactory season if 50 can be killed. Often it is far below that number.

The seals follow schools of herring. So far the first catches of herring have not arrived and none of the eastern Maine sardine canneries have opened. These fish are one of the choice foods of the seal so that they are not considered friends of the fishermen.

Out in the rough water of the Bay of Fundy these aborigines from the Passamaquoddy reservation make long and dangerous trips in canoes.

Ten Days on a Cattle Boat.

After a lapse of thirty-one years, cattle shipments between Canada and Great Britain are once more in full swing. Extra help is generally required on the cattle-ships, and this "help" is generally composed of all sorts and conditions of men. How they fare is explained by one of them in a London paper in the following manner:

I was "broke" in Canada. I wanted to go home. So I dodged the dock police and found myself hired as an extra hand in a cattle boat. The pay was nothing, but I was thankful for 3,000 miles free transport.

When I trooped aboard with a few other nondescript third officer looked us over with a gloomy eye. "Hey, Macdonald!" he shouted down the companion. "Here's your variety troupe come aboard. Show 'em to their dressing rooms, will ye?"

Macdonald was a tough-looking nut. Years with the cattle on the western ranges, years with the cattle at sea, had given him a skin like baked leather, the cold eye of an octopus, and a fat like an iron door. Down below, in the forecastle, we found our quarters. I staked out a bunk claim next a port-hole. It's disconcerting, and I myself hired as an extra hand in a cattle boat. The pay was nothing, but I was thankful for 3,000 miles free transport.

the cattle, and, more important, with the boss cattle-heads—the real, old-time, "bull-punchers."

But it was not too bad. We only worked four hours a day, two watches of two hours each. They went by quickly, and then we "got down to it" on our straw palliasses, smoked, swapped lies, gambled a little—very little, for obvious reasons—and had friendly "mills" with boxing gloves. The cattle gave little trouble. We fed them, watered them, and kept as clear of them as we could. To get inside a steer's stall at sea is to join a suicide club. We had our excitements. Sometimes when watering, amid the clash of iron buckets on steel decks, amid the roar of frightened beasts and the continual thunder of the seas, a crash and a cry would call all hands to find a man thrown down by the pitching of the ship, nursing a torn leg or a bruised shoulder. Bones are broken pretty frequently on cattle ships.

The Worst Job.

The worst job was splitting the trusses of baled alfalfa-grass. Hoisting it out of the hold with the ship rolling like a prampus was rather fun, but splitting the tight bales with the bare fingers was not so pleasant. The actor suffered the most, but the ship's doctor was kind.

So the time passed, and at last the lights of the Lan-o-Cakes came in sight. Loading and unloading cattle are jobs that fall to the regulars; temporaries were free as soon as we could haul a boat to take us ashore after coming to anchor. An hour later, in decent rig and the smell of cattle slightly washed away, I bumped into the chief officer.

"So you got across," said he. "I didn't see you aboard."

"You ticked me off for smoking aft the second watch," said I. "Could you lend me a quarter—a shilling, I mean? I want to write for my fare to town!"

And that's how I came home with the cattle.

Rat-Hunting as a Profession.

In the "Personal" column of a recent issue of the London Times there appeared an announcement, signed by W. Dalton and Sons, offering "1,000 wild rats for sale."

A curious reporter, anxious to see this amazing collection, went to the warehouse of the Messrs. Dalton.

For his pains he was rewarded with the sight of black rats, brown rats, grey rats, long-nosed, long-tailed, long-bodied rats; short rats; plague rats, venomous rats, rats of ferocity, and rats that, with care, he was told, could actually become pets.

They came from all parts of the country. From the docks of London where they are taken to prevent the spread of disease; from the underground tunnels of the City; from farms, where they kill poultry; from mines, stables, and cowsheds.

"But who buys rats?" the reporter asked.

"Buy them!" said Mr. William Dalton, showing the visitor his captives in cages with pride; "why, everybody wants them—furriers, taxidermists, scientists, people who wish for lively household pets, and—anybody. I had an order for 400 this morning."

"Some of them come from Royal estates, some from the homes of the poor in the East End of London."

"Those black plague ones"—pointing to terrible-looking beasts clinging upside down to the roofs of the cages—"were caught on the cables of a liner lying at the London Docks as they were trying to come ashore."

"We have a special net for catching them at the edge of a round metal disc which we fix around the cables."

"Mostly at night-time we catch them with nets and flashlights. M.P.s are not the only people who have all-night sittings. I was out in the dark near St. Paul's recently watching for a herd making their way to a big City warehouse, and caught the majority of them."

"I have a large staff of men busy all over the country, and I believe my profession to be one of the busiest in the United Kingdom at the present time."

"No, there are no edible rats in this country."

A Great Shark Industry for British Columbia.

MILLIONS OF THEM WAITING TO BE CAUGHT AND MADE USE OF—AN ASSET OF GREAT MAGNITUDE AND MANY DOLLARS.—LEATHER, GLUE, FERTILIZERS, ORNAMENTS AND "COD LIVER OIL" AMONG THE PRODUCTS.

The shark is not feared by the Norwegian. He exploits him in every possible manner. After catching him, he works up his head into glue, his flesh into fertilizer, his teeth into "ivory" ornaments, his hide into leather and his liver into "cod liver oil."

Nelson Macdonald, of Vancouver Island, believes that the catching and industrial exploitation of the shark is going to make the fortune of British Columbia. The waters of the province abound in sharks. Mr. Macdonald tells the New York Evening Post, which quotes him as follows:

"There are millions of sharks in these North Pacific waters," says Mr. Macdonald, "and there will never be a shortage of them. The further north you go the more sharks you find, and from Vancouver to Alaska are their feeding grounds. Taking them from the bottom of the sea is automatic. Norway has hundreds of such industries; in fact, the only real hook for catching them works on a swivel and comes from Norway, as does also the so-called 'cod liver oil' which invades the markets of the world and is really shark-liver oil manufactured in Norway."

"In the shark plant, when the huge fish is being turned into so many substances and articles, there is absolutely no waste."

"Business men from Vancouver, Victoria, Seattle, and other North Pacific seaport cities sat around a table in Victoria, Vancouver Island, recently, where a firm from Seattle showed the various processes through which the shark passes, and the results attained in glue, leather, fertilizer, and other marketable and useful products."

Shark Hides Exhibited.

"At this meeting a Seattle company showed a large number of shark hides in every stage of tanning. Many of the men assembled were 'leather men' and they fingered the product carefully and satisfied themselves that the leather business was entering the initial stage of making up goods of which heretofore they had no conception."

"Shark hides run from an inch in thickness in the older fish to the consistency of paper in the baby shark. Soles of boots, leather for the finest suede shoes, a black pigmented product that would make club bags of most lasting quality, uncrackable lengths of leather that outstripped any patent leather ever made, and which the leather shoemaker said was the finest they had ever seen, were among the exhibits, and the thought of all this material right at hand was a revelation to men who had known that there were sharks but thought of them only as a menace to swimmers and destroyers of marketable fish."

"In Seattle hip-boots from shark hides are being made, and one Vancouver bootmaker has been using shark leather for other boots. Finer grades of the tanned leather are used for upholstery; colored and stamped, it is ever-wearing and rich to look upon."

Extraordinary Durability.

"The outer skin of 'shagrin' must come off in the first place and a process has been successfully developed which takes this away. It has the exact properties of sandpaper, of the rough variety. For very fine work on wood polishing, the 'shagrin' of the baby shark can't be excelled. Underneath, a section torn off reveals one of the greatest properties of the shark hide. This texture is woven and interlaced as if by a machine, and its extraordinary durability is not equalled by any leather."

"It takes fifteen days of specialized process to turn out shark leather, and six months of more of treatment to

Noisiest City in Europe.

There is more noise per cubic foot of night in Constantinople than in any other city in Europe.

Independently of a highly varied symphony of "casual sounds," one's sleep is broken by officially organized disturbances due to the fact that for policing the city after dark the municipality maintains a number of watchmen armed with long, thick clubs.

Lying abed in the small hours, one has full cause to recognize their zeal, for at frequent intervals the nearest watchman awakens you by beating heavily upon the stones with his resounding cudgel.

It needs a fire, however, to give the watchman full scope for making night hideous. Constantinople being mainly built of wood and heated by open charcoal stoves, this opportunity comes all too often. As soon as a fire is sighted from the high lookout post on Galata Tower word is sent to every quarter of the city.

Till ten years ago this was done by picturesque red-coated runners armed with javelins, but now it goes by telephone, and, for the night watchman, the real fun of the evening begins. Beating a double volley on the pavement, each in turn fills his lungs to capacity and in a tone of long-winded, lugubrious despair wails out fortissimo at frequent intervals: "Yankhin var!" ("A fire there is!"), following on with an announcement of its situation, and ending with more battering of the flagstones.

As the cry is taken up and from street to street it swells and spalling clamour.

Renewed at Dawn.

With cats, dogs and other "drunks," Constantinople is waked up throughout the dark hours, then, just after daybreak, when it is precious because it is the army of food-peddlers begins the air with clamour.

The Greek housewives of Constantinople are lazy in their own ways, but they are not so in their morning marketing is therefore from the half-opened shutters of their windows, so that by the shrill chatter of haggling and price of fish and eggs begins the company to the diversified hawkers, the hoarse shout of drivers urging over-loaded horse-drawn carriages, the crackling of whips, the rattling of springless carts, the jangling of camel-bells, the constant hum of the Golden Horn, the klaxons of chauffeurs, whose Levantine drivers in the world, and the groaning and screeching of Constantinople's tramway careen round the sharp corners of the row streets.

Gold Prospectors Going to Labrador in Small Aux'y Craft.

BELIEVE SIZE OF SCHOONERS WILL ENABLE COMPARETIVE EAST NAVIGATIONS OF ICE FIELDS—HAVE HIGH CHANCES OF LOCATING VALUABLE AREAS IN THE NORTH—LIKELY TO LEAVE TO-MORROW.

C. W. Berry, of Waterloo, and R. C. Cox, of Kingsport, left out of Halifax to-day, bound for Labrador, in a thirty-foot auxiliary sail craft. They are the first prospectors to leave for the Labrador coast in two weeks. Being small they will have only four and a half days to make the trip.

Small Boat Sailed. The craft in which they will attempt to reach St. John's is thirty feet long, 9 feet beam, and has a net tonnage of six tons. It has two small engines and is equipped with a large power gasoline engine. It will be stocked with three months' provisions and it is expected to have favorable weather and conditions when it reaches St. John's in two weeks.

Berry and Cox were going to Labrador from Halifax on the Petrel, owned by the Labrador Fishery Co., Ltd., and how awaiting at the dockyard, but they had a chance to purchase a boat and they would start their trip on their own hook. Mr. Berry is a prospector of many years' experience in the Cobalt and Porcupine districts, and Mr. Cox was the chief engineer on the Petrel when he made his first adventure as a prospector.

Mr. Berry said that he is satisfied with the "paying dirt" in the Labrador. He was there last October and brought back samples of which when analyzed were found to contain four rivers in the district, which have been staked, taken up, and no more claims registered until new discoveries are made. Under the laws of the Dominion, he is entitled to have his claims registered in his own name. It is Mr. Berry's intention to go to the Labrador to look for gold in a district hitherto unexplored by prospectors. Speaking generally of the gold fields, he said that he did not know how long it will be devoted to prospecting and getting claims registered.

The small craft in which Mr. Berry and Cox will start north, was supplied at Black & Finn's and they expect to start north to-morrow. It is possible that another party may join them before they start. They will hug the coast on the north, and the longest haul will be from Cape North, Cape Ray, Nfld.—Halifax Chronicle, June 8.

Annual Collection.

FOR BELVIDERE AND MOUNT CARMEL CEMETERIES.

The announcement was made in the Roman Catholic Churches on Sunday last that the Annual Collection for Belvidere and Mount Carmel Cemeteries would be taken up at all the Masses on Sunday next, and it is needless to say that our Catholic friends will respond with their usual liberality. Although the energetic Committee have done much during the past years, there is still much to be done. Each succeeding year brings forth extra requirements, and the good work can only be accomplished by the assistance of the Catholic people. Notwithstanding the care and attention of the caretakers, extra help has to be procured during this season of the year, in repainting the walks, beautifying the surroundings and attending to other necessary improvements. We understand that new gates are required at the entrance of Belvidere from Allendale Road, and there is much to be done in both cemeteries as time rolls on. The committee are most energetic in their efforts to beautify the sacred plots in the Cities of the Dead, and the caretakers leave nothing undone to perform their portion of the work. But after all, they would be powerless if they were not assisted by the generosity and liberality of the Roman Catholic people, and this we feel confident will be cheerfully extended to the Committee by the people, as has been so characteristic of them from time immemorial. The good people of St. John's have ever been noted for the care and attention paid to the memory of their dear departed, and when we contrast the vast improvements that have been made during the past decade or more, it is only then that we realize the amount of work performed by the committee, caretakers and people alike, in their endeavors to do honor to the departed. It is probable that large numbers of visitors will arrive in St. John's during the next month or so, and amongst the places of interest, they will visit our cemeteries, and we should have them in such a condition that will give a favorable impression to the minds of the strangers, because, after all, to a great extent, the characteristics of a people may be judged by the manner in which they honor their departed relatives and friends by paying attention to the sacred ground in which they rest in peace. It has been truly said that the sorrow for the dead is the only sorrow from which we release to be divorced. Every other wound we seek to heal—every other affliction to forget; but this wound we consider a duty to keep open—this affliction we cherish and brood over in solitude. Where is the mother who would willingly forget the infant that perished like a blossom from her arms, though every recollection in a pang. Where is the child that would willingly forget the most tender of parents though to remember be but to lament? Who, even in the hour of agony, would forget the friend over whom he mourns? Who, even when the tomb is closing upon the remains of her most loved, when he feels his heart, as it were, crushed in the closing of its portals, would accept of consolation that would be bought by forgetfulness? No—the love that survives the tomb is one of the noblest attributes of the soul. If it has its woes, it has likewise its delights; and when the overwhelming burst of grief is calmed into the gentle tear of recollection—when the sudden anguish and convulsive agony over the present ruins of all that we most loved is softened away in pensive meditation on that it was in the days of its loveliness—who would root out such a sorrow from the heart? Though it may sometimes throw a passing cloud over the bright hour of gaiety, or spread a deeper sadness over the hour of gloom, yet, who would exchange it even for the song of pleasure or the burst of revelry? No, there is a voice from the tomb sweeter than song. There is a remembrance of the dead, to which we turn even from the charms of the living. Oh, the gravel the grave! It buries every error—covers every defect—extinguishes every resentment! From its peaceful bosom spring none but fond regrets and tender recollections. We have no hesitation in assuring that the response to the request of the committee will be readily and heartily responded to, and that the Annual Collection for Belvidere and Mount Carmel for the year 1923, will be equal, if not above, that of any preceding year.

Business Men Entertained.

LUNCHEON ON BOARD S.S. ADVANCE.

A number of prominent business men, including representatives of the city press, were the guests of Mr. Bramm, Manager and Director of the Tri National Steamship Co., Boston, and Mr. A. E. Hickman, Newfoundland representative, on board S.S. Advance at the Company's premises yesterday. The Advance has recently been fitted for passenger and freight service with accommodation for 80 first class passengers, arrived here a few days ago. After going on board the guests were shown through the ship afterwards having luncheon in the spacious dining room. The menu was a credit to the chief steward, Mr. O'Rourke and his assistants. During the meal, Mr. Bramm in a neat speech expressed the pleasure which the opportunity afforded him of meeting the business people of the city. With co-operation he expected that the Tri National service would be at all times found efficient and the management on their part were willing to take and act on any suggestions that might lead to the improvement either of the passenger or the freight service. Mayor Cook on behalf of the guests thanked the management for the excellent hospitality and extended a hearty welcome to the new line. Sir Michael Cashin in a few words endorsed what Mayor Cook had said. Mr. Reginald Harvey for the Red Cross Line and Mr. J. P. Carey for the Furness Withy Co., also extended a welcome to the new steamship company. Before the conclusion of the luncheon, Mr. T. A. McNab proposed a toast to the success of the line and Mr. Calvert Pratt one to the "Advance." Mr. A. E. Hickman responded to the former and Capt. Mitchell to the latter. The guests were agreeably surprised at the splendid appointments of the ship. Commodious and with all modern improvements in the passenger accommodation, the Advance has in the freight space cold storage room equal to 1,500 feet. Passengers are assured of every comfort whilst travelling, and we bespeak for the Tri National Line a liberal share of patronage. The lady passengers will be in the capable hands of stewardess Mrs. E. Martin, which is an assurance of exceptional service in this particular.

Small Boat Sailed. The craft in which they will attempt to reach St. John's is thirty feet long, 9 feet beam, and has a net tonnage of six tons. It has two small engines and is equipped with a large power gasoline engine. It will be stocked with three months' provisions and it is expected to have favorable weather and conditions when it reaches St. John's in two weeks.

Berry and Cox were going to Labrador from Halifax on the Petrel, owned by the Labrador Fishery Co., Ltd., and how awaiting at the dockyard, but they had a chance to purchase a boat and they would start their trip on their own hook. Mr. Berry is a prospector of many years' experience in the Cobalt and Porcupine districts, and Mr. Cox was the chief engineer on the Petrel when he made his first adventure as a prospector.

Mr. Berry said that he is satisfied with the "paying dirt" in the Labrador. He was there last October and brought back samples of which when analyzed were found to contain four rivers in the district, which have been staked, taken up, and no more claims registered until new discoveries are made. Under the laws of the Dominion, he is entitled to have his claims registered in his own name. It is Mr. Berry's intention to go to the Labrador to look for gold in a district hitherto unexplored by prospectors. Speaking generally of the gold fields, he said that he did not know how long it will be devoted to prospecting and getting claims registered.

The small craft in which Mr. Berry and Cox will start north, was supplied at Black & Finn's and they expect to start north to-morrow. It is possible that another party may join them before they start. They will hug the coast on the north, and the longest haul will be from Cape North, Cape Ray, Nfld.—Halifax Chronicle, June 8.

Giant Squid a Dangerous Customer.

OLD SKIPPER NARRATES THRILLING STORY OF LOSS OF SEINE-BOAT, DRAWN DOWN BY THE TENTAACLE OF "THE DEVIL'S SERVANT."

By Herbert W. Markland. "Ever hear about the Great Squid? Probably you never did; ain't many people ashore that have, but the old whaler men of Nantucket and New Bedford feared it—swore it was a servant of the devil and any ship that sighted it was doomed. Mebby that was true, anyway it was the Great Squid that carried down the big seinboat from the old mackerel seiner, Glory Be, while she was cruising after mackerel in southern waters."

Settled for Good. Cap'n Clayt Morris settled the cigar comfortably in the starboard corner of his mouth, puffed out two big clouds of smoke, looked into the binnacle box to see that the man at the wheel was holding true to the course, glanced out at the horizon, to the seaward as if looking for some range to assure him he was headed straight and proceeded with the yarn that always followed some such remark.

The steam trawler Sea Pig was rolling lazily along over the long ground, swells, of the Atlantic on her way from Georges banks to the western bank of Nova Scotia. Fishing had been poor down on Georges and Cap'n Clayt wasn't one to linger long on poor bottom with no sign of fish.

"It was some years ago, when I was a good deal younger than I am now, he begun, "when I was a hand on the old Glory Be. We was down on the southern mackerel grounds, and hadn't had much luck. But this day we sighted a big school and went after 'em. We had 'em well rounded up and was pursuing 'em the seine—that is, the men in the boat, for I was left aboard as a kind of ship keeper. Came up unobserved. The sea was smooth with, only a ground swell runnin'—something like it is to-day, an' just a light breeze blowing. Everybody in the seine boat was busy with their own work, an' a boy that's just busted up their neck and didn't see the Great Squid when he came up.

"But I seen it. It seemed just as if something betwixt and between a gray-white and creamy white as big as a whole down-stee farm had come up out of the water and lay like a blanket on the water jelly like and movin' by an' down on the ground swell. Seemed to spread all over the sea for quite a piece, then up come a whole bunch of arms wiggling an' writting and kind'a groping about as if tryin' to find something to grab hold of. Ugly! Well, I ain't seen nothing in my life more ugly lookin' than that fish or animal or whatever a squid is.

"Them arms moved slow-like, somethin' like th' squirming of big snakes, but all the time seemin' to be searchin' for somethin'. Gave me a start when I seen the thing, but seems though I couldn't take my eyes off it. 'Twas just like a nightmare thing you see in your dreams, an' I ain't ever goin' to forget how it looked.

Some Arms At That. "Th' tellers in the seine boat was too busy to see it even though it wasn't far from 'em. Must's been more'n 100 feet from stem to stern of that fish or whatever you call a squid, looked 'fif it covered most of the Atlantic thereabouts, an' them arms was long enough to wrap right around the Glory Be, and then have some to spare.

"Old whalers've told me this Great Squid was a terror to the whaling fleets, but if a vessel did sight it an' live to tell it, a big sperm whale was shure to be sighted mighty soon after, cause sperm whales live on squid, an' many a squid's arm has been found in a whale's belly when it was cut in the old days. But it's been 40 to 50 years since the Great Squid had reported, an' then clear out in the Indian ocean. "How it came to be in the Atlantic on the southern mackerel grounds I dunno, expect that squid is mighty fond of mackerel. But it must's traveled thousands of miles.

"Well, there it was all quivery like jelly as to body, and kind of horray-like arms a squirming an' groping blind-like out of water. I couldn't see it had any eyes or any mouth, nor in fact anything that in anyway resembled a head.

"But all of a sudden I seen it kind'a double up on the water and hitch itself along, kind'a a cross between th' way a catapillar crawls and a hop toad hops.

"I tried to yell to the boys in the seine boat, but all I got out of my mouth was a kind'a hoarse noise, somethin' like a big grandfather's room, you know them big bull frogs that sound like they was havin' a cross between Quincy sore throat an' a used palate.

"On come that Great Squid hitchin' itself over the coast nearer an' nearer to the seine boat, but my arms seemed frozen stiff, I couldn't move, all I could do was to stand there an' stare tryin' my darndest to make a noise an' gettin' nothin' out but a bunch of croaks.

"Like a streak of greased lightning one of them great snaky arms shoote out an' curts round th' seine boat an' seems to line it tight. I can hear a splinterin' of wood an the shouts of my shipmates, then I went down the count. When I came to there isn't a thing to be seen on the sea except a lot of splintered up splinters of wood. Th' Great Squid was gone an' so was my shipmates. It might's been as if we was sailin' through a bit of wreck-age.

"Well, what say we go below for a mug-up?"

THE LOVE FIG.

What a selfish love again! Her better nature but pain: her growth in full store. As much and more.

I know a woman who is considered by most of the people who know her as extraordinarily selfish. And so she is in many ways. But on the other hand, she is extremely selfless about one thing. Her average sense what it is. Not for jewelry, nor any material thing. Not even about having her hair done. The one thing this woman loves is love. She is absolutely about getting all the love she can.

What call that selfishness? You commendable ambition? I agree with you. I think it is because almost as much unselfish by love greediness as by her kind. And I think this is the case.

Always Love Greedy. I have always been so with her. If I had a friend, she wanted all of my attention. She hated to hear that I was speaking cordially of other people. She hated to have her have a conversation with other friends. She would not only be first in her attention, but second and third as well. She was the same. She was the same sister and she did all that she could to cut that favorite sister out of her family and her own. I don't think she was doing it. But she was and she was eager to do it.

Love greediness causes unhappiness both to the one who takes and the one who receives the demand. To give all the love you can is a beautiful thing. To demand all the love you can get, and to be constantly tearing you aren't getting enough, is very unbecomingly.

The Discovery of Gold on Labrador.

LETTER FROM CAPT. JEFFERY.

During recent months Canadian papers have given considerable attention to Labrador and many articles apparently with the object of discounting Newfoundland's claim to the territory have been given prominence. The possibilities of gold having been discovered on Big Brook River, St. John's Bay, has also been questioned and one company which holds claims there has been severely handled in this connection. The company is known as Labrador Gold Fields Ltd., of which H. C. Bellow is president. The Toronto Saturday Night made charges against Bellow and it is now stated by that paper that he has been forced out of the Presidency of the Labrador Gold Fields Ltd., because of "genitals" made by Ledoux & Company, New York assayers, that they had made assays of gravels brought from Labrador, by Bellow by reason of attractive advertising has gained considerable notoriety and probably has given Newfoundland a black eye as far as the gold discovery on Labrador is concerned but at the same time it must be remembered that there are others interested in the discovery whose standing in the business world marks them as people on whom reliance can be placed. Staking on Big Brook River and filing of Hoeme's claims at the Crown Lands Office was made last autumn by Capt. W. H. Jeffery acting on behalf of Mr. Stanley May and a group of Montreal capitalists. It was reported in the columns of the Evening Telegram, Oct. 7th, 1922, but at the time the discoverers would give very little information for publication. A writer W. J. J. in a recent issue of Toronto Saturday Night now quotes a letter bearing on the discovery which he received some short while ago from Capt. Jeffery. The letter, with the exception of a few introductory sentences, is as follows:

About eighteen months ago Mr. A. G. Fowler Ross of Westmount, Montreal, asked me if I knew anything about "Placer Gold." I said I did, as I had good experience in California, Oregon and British Columbia in days gone by. Ross said he knew of a place where gold had been found in "Black Sands" and it was very rich and asked me if I would go with him and examine the ground. I said, "Yes," but not until last June did he get the backing for the adventure. When I came to Montreal to see his backers, Stanley May and R. G. Saxe of Stanley May & Co., 30 Hospital St., May, asked me if I knew where I was going. I said, "No." Then Ross said "Labrador." I asked why they did not say so before and they asked me if they had, would I have come. I said "No." "Well, will you go now?" I said, "Yes, too much of a Johnny Bull to back out," and I went. Now in the first place, Ross got on to this placer through a friend who told him that one Edwards, a timber expert of Jordan, N.J., U.S.A., while examining timber, pulp wood, etc., found nuggets of gold on Big Brook River flowing into Stag Bay, Labrador, after a very heavy rain in a little gully washed there by the rain waters, and that he, Edwards, had filled a flour sack of sand (50 lbs.) and had taken it to New York, had it panned and gave the residue to Ledoux and Co. to assay and he got nearly four ounces gold, or

Facial Blemishes

Sallow, mottled, roughened or blotched complexion are usually due to constipation. When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication. Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot grip. Try it today.

some $78 or $72, after expenses of assay. This was 2 years ago—Edwards never told Ledoux and Co. where the gold came from—and you know only a darn fool would tell, when nothing had been staked. We got in correspondence with Edwards and he wanted 75% then 51% and all expenses paid for 25 men, a doctor, etc., something like $25,000 total. We refused the offer and started for Labrador getting information as we went and we found Big Brook River without any trouble. We were there only a few days and I panned up and down each bank of this river and got five results in fine gold, and samples of gravel with the larger pebbles taken out gave us $5, $8, $7, $9 and $32.26 gold per ton. We tried to keep all this quiet, leaving the public out, but along comes Bellow with pretty much the same information that we got but claiming that he was the discoverer. If so, why did he not stake ground and not allow us to get in and do the first staking and then locate on to us on map in St. John's? In my young days I was on the Canadian Geological Survey under Sir William Logan. We knew of the Cariboo placers and although wild to go I was too young—I have been mining now for 44 years and have lots to learn, but I will say I firmly believe that there is rich placer gold in Labrador and Quebec. What I got is good enough for me and my associates to go on and spend our money and we intend proving up the ground this year as soon as we can get in there. We are not going wild over it. I guess I am the most sanguine of all connected with our party because I was there and got results, and good results. I would not think of taking the trip again at my age if I felt the least doubt. I heard of a Mr. W. D. B. Scott, 276

Pine Avenue, Montreal, an old Hudson Bay Co. Factor, 73 years ago, who claimed finding gold there 51 years ago. I called on him recently. He told me 51 years ago, when young he accompanied a German Mining Engineer (gave me his name which I forget now) to Big Brook River and other rivers and that they found gold on the surface of gravel beds and on rivers in Labrador and 200 miles inland—and that he, Scott, after this Engineer had left panned in several rivers and up Big Brook (our) River, four, (4) miles and got fine gold on surfaces the same as I did. He did not get down 18 inches, but inland later on he got nuggets at 3 to 4 feet deep and now believes Big Brook contains rich deposits of gold at depth or toward bed-rock which is only natural. Scott sent some ounces of placer gold to Donald Smith, afterwards Sir Donald and Lord Strathcona and he wrote him back that if he considered his job worth anything, leave gold and other minerals alone, they did not want miners and prospectors in their trapping grounds and the only gold they considered was what they got for their furs. Scott is going in again and says he has it rich. He has his 35 year gold medal and 2 bars for 20 year service and 5 years over. I pinned him down for two hours and he knows the ground better than anyone—I believe what he told me because it is just as I found it. Trusting you will forgive this ramble, I beg to remain yours faithfully. W. H. JEFFERY, E.M.
