THE STORY IN THE LONE INN.

CHAPTER XIV.

"Oh, no."

She was sitting gazing at the door, with a look so strained and unnatural that it startled them. Jacinto, too, was white, as if with apprehension, and shrank from the eyes of all. Moment after moment passed—a quarter of an hour went by, but still Mr. De Vere did not return.

"What can detain uncle!" exclaimed Frank. "They can't have done anything to him, can they? Suppose firing and see?"

No one objected, and, seizing the bell pull, he rang a peal that presently brought Reynolds into the room.

"Have those two old tramps gone?" asked Frank.

"No, Master Frank; they're both here yet."

"The dickens they are! Where's uncle?"

"In the morning parlor with Mother Hewlet."

"Oh, sister!" exclaimed the over-joyed Frank "there's a piece of news! Where's Captain Tempest?"

"In the hall, smoking."

"What's there's coolness for?" asked Frank, and gestured for Reynolds to go.

"What's there's coolness for?" asked Frank, and gestured for Reynolds to go.

"What's there's coolness for?" asked Frank, and gestured for Reynolds to go.

Jacquetta! Tell her she is to return with you immediately—immediately, mind! Lose not a moment going or coming. Go!"

Frank started to his feet, more in dismay than in obedience; but there was that in his uncle's face that repelled inquiry, and extorted compliance.

"Just tell her I want her! You need not say who is here. It is as well to take her unprepared," he said, lowering his voice.

"That's so, Mr. De Vere!" exclaimed Captain Tempest, whose keen ears overheard him.

"Silence, sir!" said Mr. De Vere, fiercely. "Learn to hold your tongue when a gentleman speaks!" Then, turning to Frank, he said: "What are you waiting for, sir? be off; and, mind, don't let the grass grow under your feet!"

Frank, so violently astonished that he scarcely knew whether he was walking or dreaming, seized his cap, and darted out of the room. Captain Tempest arose, his face red with anger.

"Do you mean to say, sir," he began, turning savagely to Mr. De Vere, when a hand seized his arm, and he was forced back into his chair.

"Why will you be a fool," said Grizzle, angrily in Spanish; "sit down and wait! Your revenge is coming!"

A moment's silence fell on all. Captain Tempest scowled. Mr. De Vere walked to the window, and stood like a statue, and Disbrowe pulled out his watch, and looked at the hour.

"Time I was off," he said, starting up. "My dear uncle, can I see you a moment in private, before I go?"

"You must postpone your journey for to-day, Alfred!" said his uncle, imperiously. "There is a certain family affair to be discussed here, presently at which I require your presence. Your journey can wait, so sit down!"

"Then I will not intrude," he said; "I will go!"

"You will stay!" interposed Mr. De Vere, sternly. "Sit down, sir; perhaps we may find your presence necessary before we have done!"

The boy turned white, even to his lips.

"I beg, sir," he began, falteringly; but Mr. De Vere turned almost fiercely upon him.

"Sit down, sir! You shall do as I tell you. Perhaps we may make you give a better account of yourself before you go! Sit down!"

The lad recoiled, and fell back into a seat, like one fainting.

Give the children WRIGLEY'S after every meal

A prominent physician says:

"It is surprising how free from decay the teeth can be kept by using gum after each meal."

You know how hard it is to get the children to clean their teeth. By giving them WRIGLEY'S you not only reward them for cleaning their teeth, but the reward is actually the means of performing this important service!

WRIGLEY'S aids digestion, too, and acts as an anti-septic wash for the mouth and throat. Several flavors—all of WRIGLEY quality.

MRS. B. H. HART SICK FOR YEARS

Wants Women to Know How She Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Cornwall, Ont.—"I am now giving your medicine a fair trial and it surely is doing me good and I am going to keep on taking it. I used to feel so tired in the morning that I didn't want to get up, but that feeling is leaving me now. I also sleep better and feel more like working. For seven or eight years I have had headaches, tired feelings, pains in my back and across my body. I read letters in the newspapers saying what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done others. My husband says I quit too soon, but I am not going to stop taking the Vegetable Compound until I am better and haven't an ache or a pain. Isn't that the right way? I have great faith in your medicines. They must be good when those who take them speak so highly of them. I am recommending them to my friends and I will gladly answer letters from women asking about them."—Mrs. B. H. HART, Box 1081, Cornwall, Ont.

Mrs. Hart is willing to answer letters from sick women asking about the Vegetable Compound.

All this time Augusta had cowered in her seat, shuddering, trembling, collapsed. Now she lifted her white face, and rising to her feet, she turned to Grizzle, and gasped rather than said:

"Have you—have you—broken your promise? Have you told—" her voice died away, and she shivered convulsively.

The old, evil smile came over Grizzle's face as she fixed her piercing eyes on the young girl's ghastly face, and quietly replied:

"No, Lady Augusta, I have not told! Your secret is safe, at least for the present; I do not care to blacken my lips just yet by telling it, nor scorch your father's ears by the hearing. Fear not for the present, you are safe."

She sank back, and dropped her white face in her white hands. Mr. De Vere, standing stern and motionless, if he heard, heeded not; and Jacinto, whose emotion was evidently one of intense terror—rather surprising in one who a short time before had fearlessly risked his life to save another—covered down on his seat, and did not dare to look up, while a streak of dark red at intervals flashed across his dark face. Disbrowe, astonished and troubled, yet with a heart thrilling at the thought that he was to see Jacquetta again, looked uneasily from face to face. Old Grizzle, with her gray cloak folded closely around her, sat with a grim, sinister smile glittering in her snake-like eyes, and wrinkling her thin lips.

And Captain Tempest, looting back in his chair, elevated his legs on another, clapping a wedge of the Virginia weed in his mouth, stuck his hands in his coat pockets, and looked the very picture of nonchalance and high-bred self-possession.

And hours passed!

THE GOLDEN DAYS.

The grand old times of which we read, in tales by Scott and Tennyson, when knights went forth on a prancing steed to play his doughty games! The grand old times when kings and queens, bejeweled, heaved their sighs, because they had no window screens to thwart the "dimpling" eyes! King Henry, with his cloth of gold, and velvet rugs outspread, and smoky splendours manifold, with rushlight, went to bed. His palace had a grievous stink, dogs fed on every floor; it had no stove, no kitchen sink, no mailbox by the door. The knight might own a stock of bones, and yet, what could he buy? No radio, no telephones, root beer or whiskers dye. The knight was clad in armor bright that gave a marvellous gleam; but when he would disrobe at night, it was another thing. He had to call a serving wench when reaching his hotel, and she, with as and monkey wrench would ease him from his shell. When I am reading those old tales, with all their brave array of stately dames and fighting males, I sometimes sigh and say: "I would that I with knights might prance, in my large pewter hat! The world is short of its romance—it's dull and tame and flat!" But when I think of hotted pants and shirts of soldered tin, I boost with rapture, to my aunts, the age we're living in.

Dr. A. C. Benson, in one of his pleasant gossip books, cites as perhaps the most pathetic of recorded death-bed utterances that of a certain Bishop, whose last words were, "I have held a great position, and have not been equal to it."

Important Discovery at Jerusalem

A discovery, which may prove of far-reaching importance, has been made near the entrance to the Garden Tomb, outside the Damascus gate of Jerusalem.

Some loose stones were being removed from the ground in front of the entrance of the Tomb in the process of tidying up the garden, when one of them attracted the attention of Miss Hussey, who is in charge of the tomb, owing to the fact that it had markings upon it. She had it removed, partially cleaned it, and reported the find to the Government Department of Antiquities.

A few days after its discovery it was viewed by Professor Brandenburg, who was commissioned by the Berlin Society of Palestinian Research to investigate the rock tombs of Palestine a year ago, and whose reputation as an authority on rock architecture in the Mediterranean is admittedly high.

He immediately, and without hesitation, identified it as "a shrine of the goddess Cybele or Aphrodite (Venus), with the column and tree of Adonis or Attys beside it," declaring that such shrines were found in temples of Venus. A more careful cleansing of the stone further enhanced his first impression for it clearly revealed the fruit on the tree.

The importance of this discovery, writes the Rev. C. C. Dobson, if the identification is correct, as seems probable, lies not so much in itself as in its association with the Garden Tomb. This Tomb is regarded by many as perhaps the very Tomb of the Resurrection.

It is a well-known fact of history that in A.D. 135, when, on the suppression of the revolt of the self-styled Messiah, Barchocheba, the second and more complete Roman destruction of Jerusalem took place, the Emperor Hadrian built a new Roman city, named Aelia Capitolina, on the ruins, and among other things, erected a Temple of Venus over the Tomb of the Resurrection, with the purpose of completely desecrating it. It is evident, therefore, that in seeking to identify the Tomb of the Resurrection we may expect to find traces of this temple.

Outside the Garden Tomb are the distinct traces of a large building which once stood there, as may easily be seen in any photograph of the entrance of the Tomb. On either side of the door are the springs of two arches cut into the rock, and above the door are three columbaria, or recesses, usually found in heathen temples. A stone pavement and a column also exist. Those who view this Tomb as the possible scene of the Resurrection have always regarded these traces as those of the Temple of Venus erected by Hadrian, but it is felt that further proofs of identification were needed.

If the identification of this stone as a shrine of Venus be finally established, it will naturally provide very strong additional evidence for this conclusion. It would, of course, follow that the definite identification of the remains of a Temple of Venus over a large Jewish tomb of the period, which otherwise bears out all descriptions of the Tomb of Joseph of Arimathea, must naturally carry with it a strong presumption that that tomb may indeed be no other than that of the Resurrection itself. This stone may thus be found to be another and important link in the chain of identification.

Not Equal to His Task

Dr. A. C. Benson, in one of his pleasant gossip books, cites as perhaps the most pathetic of recorded death-bed utterances that of a certain Bishop, whose last words were, "I have held a great position, and have not been equal to it."

"A melancholy confession indeed!" says the Times. "Think of all that perhaps had gone to the winning of that Bishopric, only to end in self-condemnation and confession of failure. Those who have not risen high have at least been spared from such self-mortification, and from the verdict expressed in that biting epigram of Tacitus upon a Roman Emperor that he was 'Omnium consensus capax Imperii, nisi imperasset.'"

"The rising unto Place is laborious; And by Paines men come."

Carnation Milk

"From Contented Cows"

What the Red and White Label Means to the Modern Housewife

It means real economy. Carnation keeps—none is wasted. It serves every need for milk. In place of cream for coffee, cereals or fruits, use it just as it comes from the can. For cooking, simply add water as desired. For tea use one part Carnation, three parts water.

It means wonderful convenience! Get it with your groceries. Store it in your pantry. It is always ready, always sweet and pure—always the same dependable quality.

Carnation is just pure fresh milk, evaporated to double richness, kept safe by sterilization. It bears a label the housewife can trust.

Order several tall (16 oz.) cans or a case of 48 cans from your grocer. Test it, critically, yourself.

The Carnation Recipe Book is a splendid collection of 100 tested recipes. A copy of this Recipe Book is ready for you. Write for it today. It's FREE.

RICE PUDDING.—2½ cups water, 1½ cups Carnation Milk, ½ cup rice, ¼ tsp. salt, 2 tbsp. sugar. Wash rice, mix ingredients, and pour into buttered baking dish. Bake two and one-half hours in a very slow oven, stirring every twenty minutes the first hour of baking to prevent rice from settling.

Canadian Bank Involved in Huge
Liquor Deals--Quebec Village
Menaced by Flood.

CANADIAN BANK CHARGED WITH FINANCING LIQUOR DEALS.

BREST, Oct. 1.

One of the strongest banks in Canada has been shown to be financing huge liquor deals negotiated in New York, according to a statement made to the press to-day by Magistrate Fournier. M. Fournier will preside over the trial of Max Jerome Phaff, the German-American who was charged with piracy on the high seas in connection with the looting of the French steamer Mulhouse off the Canadian coast last July. The investigation into the Mulhouse case has developed, Magistrate Fournier said, that huge liquor deals are closed daily in New York. The death sentence for Phaff will not be asked by the Maritime Court, before which the defendant was given his first examination yesterday. M. Fournier announced that the charge of piracy on the high seas will be dropped and instead Phaff will be tried for complicity and organizing piracy on the high seas.

BESCO WILL MAINTAIN STAFF.

SYDNEY, N.S., Oct. 1.

That the present working force of over 1,300 men will be maintained at the Sydney steel plant throughout the balance of the present year was the statement made to-day by J. E. McClurg Vice-President of the British Empire Steel Corporation. Those men are practically all engaged in repair work and when they have completed the renovations we have in hand the Sydney plant will be in shape to take care of any business offered, declared Mr. McClurg.

COLLIERIES EXTEND OPERATIONS.

SYDNEY, N.S., Oct. 1.

The Dominion Coal Collieries, C.B., will operate at almost 90 per cent. capacity during the month of October and the Scotia Mines will be operated to a greater extent than during the month of September, so J. E. McClurg, Vice-President of Besco, announced to-day.

PROTOCOL PRESENTED

BEFORE LEAGUE ASSEMBLY.

GENEVA, Oct. 1.

The amended draft protocol on arbitration and security was presented to the Assembly of the League of Nations for its approval to-day, accompanied by a general report historical and analytical in nature, by M. Politis, of Greece, and Dr. Benes, of Czechoslovakia, the official reporters for the two Commissions which jointly framed the document. Special chapters are devoted to a condemnation of aggressive war, compulsory jurisdiction of the world court of justice, strengthening of pacific methods of procedure, domestic jurisdiction of state sanctions, and reductions of armaments. The conclusion of the report, which filled 20 printed pages, contains observations of a general nature. "Our purpose," says the report, "was to make war impossible, to kill it, to annihilate it. The plan drawn up leaves no loophole, it prohibits wars of every description, and lays down the rule that all disputes shall be settled by pacific means. The peace of the world is at stake, continues the report. The Fifth Assembly has undertaken a work of world wide importance which if it succeeds is destined profoundly to modify the present political conditions. If we succeed the League of Nations will have rendered inestimable service to the whole modern world." Two resolutions were presented to the Assembly, one recommends acceptance of the protocol by member governments, invites adhesion by non-member states, and requests the Council to arrange for a conference on reduction of armaments next June at Geneva. The second recommends that all states accept at the earliest possible moment the compulsory arbitration clause of the World Court, with such reservations as are deemed indispensable to the "interests and progress of international justice."

QUEBEC VILLAGE SUFFERS FROM FLOOD.

BAIE ST. PAUL, Que., Oct. 1.

The village of Baie St. Paul, which was so sorely tried early in September by floods, was again menaced yesterday and over one hundred people were obliged to leave their homes near the Gouffre River and seek shelter in some more protected spot. The river's rise is rapid and barns and houses near its banks have been carried away or flooded so badly that they cannot be used. It is estimated that damage caused during the past month has reached $500,000.

Fishing Crews Returning From Labrador

S.S. Earl of Devon, which was chartered by the Government to bring back fishing crews from the Labrador, returned to St. John's on Tuesday. The steamer went as far North as Venison Islands and brought up about 150 people, most of whom were landed at points in Conception Bay. Capt. Carter, who was in command of the Earl of Devon reports the shore fishery practically over on the Labrador Coast and the balance of the fishermen are now returning south by the Meigler. The Earl of Devon is at present on dock in St. John's undergoing a general overhauling.

How Fast do You Grow?

CURIOUS FACTS ABOUT YOUR HEIGHT AND WEIGHT.

The average baby is nineteen and a half inches in length at birth, and during his first year of life grows nine inches. If he—or she—kept up this rate of growth for seventy years, the result would be a giant sixty-four feet in height.

As a matter of fact, the rate of growth slows down amazingly after the first year. Between the age of one and two a child grows only three and a half inches, and during his third year two and a half inches. After that the rate comes down to an average of one and a half inches for the next thirteen years.

From sixteen years onwards the rate of growth continues to diminish. During his seventeenth year a boy grows one and a quarter inches. During his eighteenth, one inch. The nineteenth sees him grow three-quarters of an inch, and the twentieth half an inch.

Where Girls Beat Boys.

The average young man does not attain his full height until he is 21 years of age; but the rate of increase during the five preceding years is only one-fifth of an inch a year.

The height of a full-grown and well proportioned man should be six and three-quarter times the length of his foot; that of a woman, six and a quarter the length of her foot.

Different parts of the body grow at different rates. The legs double in length by the end of the third year, and triple by the end of the twelfth. When growth ceases they are five times as long as at birth. Before the age of ten the age is shorter than the length of the head; at ten they are equal; after ten the foot is longer than the head.

Boys and girls grow differently. The year of greatest growth in boys is usually the sixteenth or seventeenth. That is to say, the weight increases most during that year. In girls the chief increase is in the fourteenth year.

Girls usually reach their full height at or about sixteen, and their full weight at twenty; boys, as we have seen, are slower in development.

Boys are stronger than girls from birth to the age of eleven; then girls become superior physically up to seventeen, after which age the tables are turned again.

From November to April children gain little, either in height or weight; from April to July they gain in height, but not in weight; while from July to November they put on weight but do not grow much in height.

The Life of A Hair.

Hair grows at the rate of .018 inch a day, but the life of each individual hair is on an average only six years. Then it falls out. If hair never fell out and always went on growing, a woman seventy years old would have tresses nearly thirty-eight feet in length.

Eyelashes grow steadily, but are not long-lived. They last only four to five months, then fall out. Their growth is about one-twentieth of an inch weekly.

Nails grow more rapidly than in generally supposed. The finger nails at birth. When a man is full grown renew themselves in a little over four months. his brain weighs about three pounds one ounce; a woman's, two pounds

The brain weighs nine to ten inches and ten ounces.

THE HEAVY CASUALTY LIST AT STREET CROSSINGS.

The traffic accident record of the past year brings out the rather startling fact, that the largest percentage of collisions have occurred at street crossings, where, during the busiest hours of the day a traffic cop stands to direct the movements of the road. The traffic cops have not been "asleep at the switch," but owing to ignoring their directions and warnings, and going contrary to the rules of the road, a large number of the accidents have occurred. In other cases, the accidents occurred before or after the hours of traffic control. In eleven specific street intersections, ninety-five deaths and serious accidents have taken place. And yet, this number is only 20 per cent. of the bad accidents in this city. The toll of human lives will still continue as long as the speed maniacs or incompetents will be allowed to drive autos and motorcycles.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE PROTESTANT SCHOOL BOARD.

At the annual meeting of the Protestant School Board Alderman J. J. Creelman, K.C., was re-elected Chairman. The other members of the Board are: Rev. Dr. James Smyth, L.D., Rev. R. W. Dickie, D.D., Major H. Leroy Shaw, Rev. James E. Peas, M.A., and Alderman J. N. Drummond. Six Government scholarships were awarded out of 41 applicants. The successful boys are granted four years in high school with tuition fees paid, but they have to buy their own textbooks, which in most cases will amount to a considerable number of dollars.

The financial statement for the year ending June 30, 1924, showed the financial position of the Board to be sound, with assets of $10,000,000.37, against liabilities of $8,999,946.50, leaving a credit balance of $1,000,053.87.

The total income of the Board was $2,370,755.06, with total expenditure for operation and maintenance of the schools (including $522,454.99 for interest on bonds and sinking fund), $1,869,414, leaving a surplus of $275,340.45, transferred to capital account for new school buildings and extensions. During the year $65,000 bonds were redeemed, with a net increase of $36,086.

SIGNALER OF ONE OF THE WAR-SHIPS DROWNED.

Frederic Skinner, aged 23, signaler of H.M.S. "Cape Town," was drowned in the harbour here lately. He had returned from shore leave and on being recalled further leave, was seen to walk to the bow of the boat and lower himself into the water by means of a rope. When the splash was heard a search was made for him, but he could not be located. The body was found floating in the river four days after. The burial took place here.

A few months ago a man bought a house on Grand Trunk Street, Point St. Charles. When he went to examine the place he could not find it, but discovered only the remains of the walls standing in the spot where the building had been. The man wondered who had demolished his house, and who had told the party of parties to demolish. He accordingly reported the matter to the Police Station.

On investigation, the police discovered a second owner of the house in the person of a contractor, who stated that he had bought the place from a man who said it was his property.

The both men claim ownership. The original owner wants his house which is no more. The contractor says the material is his, as he paid for the place. The police are looking for the man who sold the house which was not his. It will probably be a case for the Courts to decide.

TELLS IN BABY ACCENT HOW BROTHER WAS DROWNED.

She was only four years old, and yet she appeared as a witness, the youngest on record, in the Coroner's Court. Speaking in baby accents, the little tot, Marie Rochon, told Deputy-Dorchester Prince how her little brother, Chamblay Rochon, aged 6, lost his life by falling overboard from his father's wood-saw, "William Dobell." The two children were playing on the deck of the craft, where it lay moored at the foot of Lachine Canal, awaiting its turn to pass through the locks, when the boy fell overboard. The baby's screams brought immediate help, but the youngster never reappeared on the surface of the water, and all efforts failed to locate him. The body was not recovered until nearly two days afterwards. Mr. Rochon, skipper of the "William Dobell," brought the family with him from Greenville, Quebec, and within a few hours of their arrival, tragedy added its heavy hand on the party.

A RECORD SEASON FOR TOURISTS.

According to figures issued by the Royal Automobile Club of Canada, the tourists to the Province of Quebec will reach 150,000, compared with 130,000 last season. Possibly 40 per cent. of this number have been of the camping class, who pay no hotel bills.

"Red" Propaganda in South Africa

(By L. F. NEAME, late Editor "South Daily Mail," South Africa.)

From personal knowledge I can testify to the national anxiety which the Daily Mail is performing by revealing the sinister activities which Sovietism is conducting behind a mask of official friendliness. But the campaign is not confined to Great Britain. Indeed it is more menacing to the Empire as a whole than it is to England.

Probably few people are aware of the extent to which "Red" propaganda is carried on in South Africa. Even the people of the Union would be astonished if they knew the anxiety with which some of their own high officials view Communist activities in their country.

The Red Revolt on the Rand in March, 1922, which caused more deaths than the entire campaign in German South-West Africa, is generally regarded as the final flare-up of Bolshevik effort in South Africa.

It was an ugly time, and it only narrowly escaped a horrible Red Russian climax. But it was not, and it not, the most menacing feature of Soviet endeavour in that part of the British Empire.

The mass of white South Africans will never "go Red." The Communists know that in their hearts.

And so the more fanatical of them are striving to reduce the coloured population. What success would mean in a land in which there are four coloured men to one white man can only be realized by those who have seen Kaffir tribes intoxicated by bloodshed. But the strange mentality of the out-and-out "Red" seems able to contemplate even such a race war with pleasure.

Within the last few years there have been many backroom "secret" meetings in the colored areas of Johannesburg, at which two or three notorious "Reds" have instilled Bolshevik poison into the minds of ignorant store boys and mine laborers. Two at least of the Rand "Red" leaders went to Moscow especially to study at the College in which the stirring up of rebellion among the black, brown, and yellow races is taught.

But an even more dangerous movement, and one more difficult to deal with, has recently been discovered out on the veld. Men high up in the Defence Department will tell you privately that an alarming amount of crude Bolshevism is talked in the kraals to-day. The evidence of "Red" propaganda so far from the industrial centres have surprised even officials who know the natives well.

Mysterious meetings are held far out on the veld. Some which appear to be religious gatherings to the passing white farmer are found to develop suddenly into extreme Communist propaganda missions.

No part of the British Empire in which there is a large colored population will thank the British Government for countenancing Bolshevism; for in those lands the real menace of "Red" propaganda is better understood than in England. With them it may be a matter of life or death.

Record Appetites

What is the biggest meal ever eaten by one person?

In the Transactions of the Royal Society, mention is made of a ten-year-old boy who ate 373 lb. of food in six days; while another, suffering from acute hunger, consumed 344 lb. of food in the same period, and when refused further supplies started to gnaw his own flesh!

In the same publication a doctor records seeing a Norfolk farm labourer eat a whole leg of mutton at one sitting. A woman patient in St. Bartholomew's Hospital ate three quarters loaves, 3 lb. of meat, and several pounds of potatoes every day for three weeks.

As for drink, the case is recorded of a child aged three who drank two pails of water daily and seemed none the worse. Glass-blowers have been known to drink forty pints of water a day, while a French physician had a patient who habitually drank fifty pints of red wine a day.

Shasta Slide

Breaks Walls of Canyon and ruins Huge Mud Lake.

Duquesne, Calif., Sept. 19. (United Press.)--A great slide, which roared down the southeastern slope of Mt. Shasta breaking down the walls of Mud Canyon for a distance of eight miles, has formed a huge lake of mud which may burst its barriers and flood the lowlands at any moment, according to word received here to-day.

Fifteen acres of volcanic sand slipped from near the top of the peak and blocked the only natural channel by which the mud from the disintegrating glacier has been reaching the bottom of the mountain.

An aura of panic just which accompanied the slide would be seen for 25 miles and the roar could be heard at a great distance. Mount Shasta in Siskiyou county is 14,380 feet in height, one of the highest peaks in the United States.

FRESNO, Cal., Sept. 23 (A.P.)--Although Sequoia National Park has been a public playground for more than 20 years, new discoveries still are made. A forest ranger recently returned from a three-day trip in the Mount Shasta region and reported a lake larger than any hitherto known in the park. The find has been tentatively named Crater Lake.

The Man You Are

It isn't the man that you might have been.
Had the chance been yours again,
Nor the prize you wanted but didn't win.
That weighs in the measure of men.
No little "if" of poitroon "because"
Can rowel your stock to par.
The world cares naught for what never was—
It judges by what you are.
It isn't the man that you hope to be,
If fortune and fate are kind,
That the chill, keen eyes of the world will see.
In weighing your will and mind.
The years ahead are a charless sea.
And to-morrow's a world away.
It isn't the man what you'd like to be,
But the man that you are to-day.
There's little worth in the fantom praise
Of a time that may never dawn,
And less in a vain regret for days
And deeds long buried and gone.
There's little time on this busy earth
To argue the what and how,
The game is yours if you prove your worth.
And prove it here and now!
—Ted Olson in Forbes Magazine (N.Y.)

Blanching Celery

Celery is blanched to make it crisp. All possible light is removed from the stalks to destroy and prevent any green coloring matter in the heart and stem. Blanching should be done when the plants are 12"-15" high. The stems are first tied up to keep the soil from getting into the heart. Then the soil is banked up, first a few inches and gradually to the leaves. A 4" unglazed tile may be used in place of the earth, one tile for each plant, and left on until ready to cut. Boards (12-15" wide by 15" long and 1" thick) are also used, especially for early celery placed against rows of plants and held by stakes. In small patches individual celery plants may be covered by papers. The first frost will not hurt the tops and stems but continued freezing spoils them.

Mixing the Menu

Apples, it is said, are rapidly out-doing tomatoes in popularity as an accompaniment of fried bacon for breakfast in some London hotels. But this dish is by no means a new one, having long been a favourite in certain parts of the West Country.

Cheese and cold apple tart are familiar items on the tables of Yorkshire country folk, where they are usually served together. In Sussex cheese and jam are often eaten together, though to the unaccustomed palate the mixture is not a specially enjoyable one.

Most people know how good red currant jelly is with mutton, but few have tried prunes with roast veal. This is a common dish in Sweden, where food combinations are carefully studied. Milk with broth, again, seems unappetizing to us, but you will often find it relished in Belgium.

A Man-Eating Tree

"If you can imagine a pineapple eight feet high and thick in proportion at its base," said Mr. Salmon S. Chase, the explorer, when talking about a man-eating tree encountered in his travels in Madagascar, "you will have a good idea of the trunk—with a series of long hairy green tendrils (palpi) stretched out in every direction.

"My observations were interrupted by the natives, who had been shrieking around the tree with their shrill voices, and chanting what I was told were propitiatory hymns to the great tree devil.

"With still wilder shrieks and chants they now surrounded one of the women and urged her with the points of their javelins, until slowly and despairingly she climbed up the stalk and stood on the summit of the cone, the palpi swirling about her.

"The slender palpi quivered a moment over her head, and then fastened upon her in sudden coils round her neck and arms."

A Story of King Charles

"Within the hall of Rufus—Westminster Hall—has taken place every one of the great trials of State, save alone that of Queen Anne Boleyn, in the Tower," writes Mr. Walter Bell in the Telegraph.

"The spot is marked by a brass plate in the floor where King Charles I. confronted his judges, sitting here on a raised dais at the upper (steps) end, as they asserted, 'in the behalf of the Commons assembled in Parliament and the good people of England.'"

"As John Cook, the Commonwealth's solicitor appointed for the trial, read out the lengthy charge, Charles attempted to interrupt him by touching the sleeve of his gown with a silver-headed cane. The head of the cane fell off. The pathetic King, accustomed even in duress to have about him those who were ready to anticipate his slightest wish, looked round in vain for someone to pick it up. His loneliness was brought home to him as never it had been before, and, flushed, he stopped to pick up the silver knob."

The First Locomotive

A very small locomotive, said to be the first ever constructed, reached London recently. Over 140 years old, it was built by the famous engineer, Murdoch, and is 14in. high and 19in. long. It has two driving wheels and a front steering wheel fitted with a tiller handle.

This locomotive ran trials at Redruth in 1784. The first experiment was in Murdoch's own house, and then it was tried on the road, when, according to all accounts, it outpaced the inventor.

One night Murdoch went out with his locomotive to an avenue leading to the church about a mile from the town. The engine started off and the inventor went after it. Soon distant shouts of terror were heard. When he came up to his machine he found the vicar in great fear of the hissing, spitting little demon.

At this time Murdoch was in the employ of the firm of Boulton and Watt, and when they heard of the experiments they feared that Murdoch's energies might be distracted from the business of stationary engines. They persuaded him to drop the project and he never took up the subject again.

Some of the newer tunics end about ten inches above the edge of the skirt, and are worn with coats of the same length.

Fullness may be introduced into skirts at the sides, but the back remains plain and flat.

France's Fiscal Policy Proves Effective

State revenue from all sources in France during the month of July totalled 2,529,693,700 francs and showed an improvement of 407,500,000 francs over the preceding month's collection, according to official figures just received by the Bankers Trust Company of New York from its French Information Service. This improvement was especially noticeable in the yield from normal and permanent taxes which rose from 2,001,200,000 francs in June to 2,420,978,300 francs in July.

For the first seven months of this year, revenue from normal sources aggregated 14,180,511,400 francs, and showed an increase of 3,156,500,000 francs over revenue for the same period last year. This rise in yield can be attributed in part to the recently voted increase of 20 per cent. in all existing taxes.

The above mentioned figures of 2,420,978,300 francs representing normal revenue for last July can be subdivided into the following categories:—

1. Revenue from direct taxation which yielded 275,161,400 francs and showed an increase of 75,867,800 francs over the amount collected in July, 1923.
2. Revenue from state property, 26,983,300 francs, showing an increase of 10,933,500 francs over July, 1923.
3. Revenue from indirect taxes and government monopolies which aggregated 2,119,733,000 francs or 525,418,000 francs more than in the same month last year.

It will be noticed that the general increase of 612,244,900 francs in normal revenue to the treasury during July last as compared with July, 1923 is especially due to the increase of 525,418,000 francs in the yield from indirect taxes and monopolies. This increase is attributed, in well-informed circles, to a general improvement in the economic conditions of the country.

The Industrial Exhibition

Much interest is being taken in the Industrial Exhibition, which will be held in the Prince's and Curling Rinks from November 3rd to 12th. Manufacturers have entered wholeheartedly into the scheme, but unfortunately the business houses generally are not giving all the support possible. There is need for advertising and much could be done in this respect with but little effort. For instance all correspondence to the outside could be stamped with a notice of the Fair and request visitors to attend. The Railway Management has agreed to grant one-way first class fares for the week, and if all interests were to work together it would give a great impetus to business.

"Three Live Ghosts" Still Running

The production of "Three Live Ghosts" is running at the Casino to-night and to-morrow night by the performers in appreciation to Karl S. Trappell for his generous contributions to local concerts and theatricals during the past ten years. The play last night took the house by storm. The reception tendered each performer was indeed enthusiastic, and clearly showed that all enjoyed the performance. Messrs. Delmar, Holmes and Michaels appeared in specialties and were tendered repeated curtain calls.

Big Seizure at Corner Brook

SMUGGLERS CAUGHT RED-HAND-ED.
 Minister of Customs Brings Notorious Deeds to the Light of Day.

(Daily News.)
 For a long time rumour has told of smuggling in the Humber Valley. Evidently rumour in this evidence, has been well founded.

A big seizure of boots, cigarettes, tobacco, liquors and wines has been made at Corner Brook. Two captains were brought before Magistrate Scott and charged with the illicit traffic. Attorney General Higgins directed the prosecution. The accused were fined $400 each. All the goods seized are being brought to the city.

The matter has created quite a sensation on the West Coast, because such an outcome had been anticipated for some time. The Minister of Finance and Customs was the complainant in each case, and personally took part in the seizures.

Doubtless these cases will have a good effect in the matter of better revenue collections, as well as in preventing smuggling, which it is alleged has been for some months all too common a practice in the Humber Valley.

Sir John Crosbie is doing good service and will have the approval and co-operation of the public in his efforts to stamp out any and all methods whereby the revenue is being, or has been, defrauded.

Meeting to Decide Night Hours for Fall Trade

A report is current that the stores will open in the nights, for the Fall trade earlier than usual. We have been informed by the Secretary of the Importers' Association that the matter of opening the stores has not yet been discussed by the association, but a meeting would probably take place early next week when a decision will be arrived at. According to the regulations made at the beginning of the season, "The stores are to close at 6 p.m. until the first week in October when a general meeting would be held to decide on hours for the Fall Trade."

Box Front Competition

FINAL RESULTS WILL BE MADE KNOWN TO-MORROW.

The official results of the Box Front Competition conducted by The Imperial Tobacco Company (Nfld.) Limited, will not be made known before to-morrow. Upwards of 300 entrants and the counting which commenced last night was held under the supervision of His Worship the Mayor, Hon. Tucker Cook, Messrs. C. E. Hunt and J. F. Moohan before a large attendance of interested spectators. During the evening the gathering had the pleasure of "listening in" on the Radio-set which will be awarded as first prize. Amongst the stations picked up were: Springfield and East Pittsburgh. The concerts broadcast were quite clear and all present were quite pleased with the entertainment. At the close of last night's counting, Mr. Frank Moore, son of Mr. P. F. Moore headed the poll with 48,349 box fronts.

Successful Sale of Work at Victoria Hall

The sale of work at Victoria Hall yesterday afternoon was very successful. It was opened at 3.30 p.m. by Sir Richard Squires and at eight o'clock all the goods for sale had been disposed of. At night a very enjoyable concert was held and was attended by an audience that completely filled the hall. The programme was contributed to by some of the city's leading talent and was much enjoyed. The proceeds of the sale and concert will be placed to the credit of the Lodge to relieve needy causes which may come before the members during the coming winter. Under the auspices of United Lodges, L.O.A. and L.O.B.A. a grand concert will be held on Friday night next for another charitable object. The affair which takes place in Victoria Hall will begin at 8 p.m.

Russell Trial Begins October 15th

The Grand Jury resumed session yesterday afternoon and after about an hour's deliberation brought in a true Bill against Alonso Russell, who is charged with the murder of Matthew Wakeham, his step-father, on April 17th last. This morning the prisoner was arraigned and pleaded not guilty. Mr. C. E. Hunt, who appears for the Crown, asked for a day of hearing and a special jury. The hearing is set for Wednesday, Oct. 15th, at 10 a.m. An extra panel of jurors will be summoned. Mr. W. R. Warren is defending the prisoner.

Fire Prevention Week

A meeting in connection with Fire Prevention Week, which begins on Monday next, was held in the office of Inspector General Hutchings yesterday afternoon. Present were the Inspector General, and Secretary the Coughlan; Councilors P. E. Outbridge and Reg. Dowden. Representing the City: Messrs C. McK. Harvey, R. G. Ash and T. Power, of the Insurance Companies. A programme somewhat similar to that of last year was drawn up and finalized.

Home and Barn Destroyed by Fire

On Sunday last a destructive fire occurred at Spanard's Bay, when the residence and barn of Mr. N. P. Dugan, were burnt with all their contents. The fire was attributed to sparks from a defective chimney lighting the roof. The owner had his house partly covered by insurance.

Motor Car and Victoria in Collision

A collision occurred on Duckworth Street last night between a Victoria driven by A. King, Westcott was driven west at the time, and when King was about to pass him from the rear he struck the carriage doing some slight damages. King admitted he was responsible for the collision and promised to make good the damages. Both drivers escaped uninjured.

A Novelty in Stationery

The Royal Stores are now displaying a line of high class stationery known as Parisienne—The Stationery of Elegance. Each sheet of paper and envelopes is beautifully perfumed by Richard Hudnut with the famous Du Barry odor, and is considered quite a hit among ladies who like to associate a fragrant odor with their correspondence.—Oct. 2, 11

Horse Case Concluded

Judgment in the case of O'Reilly versus The Red Taxi Company in connection with the killing of a horse on the Cockpit Road will be handed down by Judge Morris on Tuesday next. The case concluded this morning when the evidence of Mrs. Murphy was taken, this witness viewed the accident from her window.

Deluge of Exports

EFFECT OF DAVES PLAN ON GERMANY.

Berlin.—Professor Gustav Cassel, the Swedish economist, speaking at Lubeck, said that if Germany is to pay £125,000,000 yearly to the Entente according to the Daves plan she must export to the value of £750,000,000. At first sight, it was impossible that Germany would be able to do this, and he added: "It is still more doubtful if the rest of the world will allow such a deluge of German exports."
 Criticizing the Daves plan, he said that it was doubtful whether Germany, under it, would be able to balance her Budget and stabilize her currency.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

CANADIAN PRIME MINISTER ON TOUR.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Oct. 1. Mass meetings in Fort William and Port Arthur were addressed to-night by Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Hon. Charles Stewart, P. J. A. Cardin, Hal McGivern, and Senator Andrew Hayden. These were the first meetings of a tour which is to take the Prime Minister and his party to the Pacific Coast.

EX-CAPT. R.A.F. MURDERS WIFE AND CHILDREN.

OTTAWA, Oct. 1. John Buchanan, aged, forty, ex-Captain in the Royal Air Force, confessed slayer of his wife and two little daughters early this morning, to-night rests in the county jail, under close observation, to prevent any attempt of suicide. Pathetic details of his hopeless attempt to earn a livelihood, incapacitated as he is by war wounds, to support his family, and his final decision to end it all, by putting his family out of misery, and taking his own life by jumping from the Interprovincial Bridge into the Ottawa River, has aroused the sympathy of everyone, including police officials. The autopsy carried out this p.m. revealed that Mrs. Pierce died of hemorrhage of the brain following a blow with a blunt instrument at the base of the skull on the right side. The result of the autopsy of the two children is being withheld by the authorities until after the inquest, which will be held Tuesday evening. It is generally understood, however, that there was an entire absence of any marks of violence upon their bodies, and that the internal examination disclosed that they had both taken, or been given some strong irritant, the presence of which was very noticeable in the lungs. That Capt. Pierce's mental condition had been in doubt before, is evidenced by the fact that for some weeks early in the year, he was under observation in St. Anne De Belletruis Hospital. He was drawing a 40% pension from the Imperial Government, granted mainly because of concussion, which he had received when he had a bad crash almost at the beginning of his flying career. He was also suffering from spinal trouble.

FALL OF LABOR GOVERNMENT PREDICTED.

LONDON, Oct. 2. Talk has again risen of the "imminent fall of the Labor Government" and the probability of a general election before Christmas. It may be recalled that similar expressions have been raised more than once since the Laborites assumed office, without power, but this time the forecast is declared to be the real thing. The crisis, for so it is regarded on all sides came suddenly late last night when notice was given in parliament, of two motions against the Government. One, by the Conservatives, censures the Government's conduct in reference to abandonment of criminal proceedings against James Ross Campbell, Acting Editor of the Worker's Weekly, a communist publication. The motion, by the Liberals, voices disapproval of the Anglo-Russian Treaty, which according to the wording of the motion says "instead of providing a genuine contribution toward dissolving the problem of unemployment, it threatens to divert resources which are urgently needed for national and imperial development, and contemplates that the British tax payer should be made liable for further loans to the Russian State, raised by means of a guarantee of the British Government as a condition upon which private claims or certain creditors should be recognized or met by Soviet Republic."

Lord Carson, Govt. Nominee ON BOUNDARY COMMISSION.

LONDON, Oct. 2. Lord Carson, former Sir Edward Carson, Unionists leader in "Ulster," will be the British Government's nominee as its representative on the Ulster Boundary Commission, says the Daily Express. The newspaper adds that the appointment of Lord Carson will be calculated to give Ulster the greatest possible confidence in the Commission's decision.

Eel Grass

A short time ago the High Commissioner at London recommended that one of our business houses should forward a sample shipment of about 5 tons of eel grass in order to test the market out. It was suggested that £10 per ton f.o.b. London, would be about the price that the shipment would fetch. Since the recommendation was made the Minister of Agriculture and Mines has received several offers from the outside to supply the required quantity. Mr. Thos. Burton of Bay de Leon on the Southern Shore has offered to fill the order for $1.00 per hundred weight or twenty dollars per ton. Apparently there should be a fair profit in the business for some shipper.

Shipping

Schr. Sunset Glow has called from Bellisport for Operto, taking 4,232 cwt. codfish.

Magistrates Court

A labourer, resident of Newtown Head who was arraigned before the Magistrate on Tuesday, charged with stealing the side curtains of a motor car, the property of W. E. Beerna, appeared before court this morning and confessed his guilt. He was fined $25 or in default 30 days imprisonment.

A blacksmith belonging to Bell Island who made his third successive appearance in court, charged with being drunk, was remanded to the lock-up to sober up.

An assault case was dismissed. Two drunks were discharged. The case against a taxi-driver for parking a motor-car on the public street was dismissed.

A man for indecently exposing himself on the public street was fined $1.00 and costs.

A labourer charged with being drunk and disorderly was fined $2.00 or 7 days.

A resident of the Battery summoned by St. John's Municipal Council and charged with building; without first having submitted plans and obtained the necessary permit was given final instructions by the court, and was allowed to go upon paying costs. The defendant stated the building has since been torn down, and further notified his Honor that he had applied for a building permit in the proper manner.

PEPPY BEHIND THE SCENES.

October 1st.—Up, betimes and to the straightening of my accounts and to my great surprise, find myself better off than ever I was in my life, my gettings being much in excess of my spendings, and pray God, will ever remain so. Anon to the Bank of Montreal, where I meet Mr. Pittman, that is Regior of Toppall. He tells me of his sweet corn, which he did grow as an experiment, and is now more than eight feet high. He has from it many cobs, some of them being more than 12 inches in length, and is the first time such corn has been grown in the country. He tells me also how the Bishop will visit him at Toppall on Sunday and will dedicate a memorial window to divers past incumbents of the parish. To the office, where comes Dr. Froehner, and tells me some groll tales of his experiences. We did discuss partridge shooting, and he thinks with me, that it is a great shame the barrens are shot over by people who make a business of selling the birds and do not hunt for the pleasure of it. Talking awhile this day with Mr. Adams, that is newly come from Botwood, he gives me all the news of his place. This night, my wife and I to see Marion Davies, the actress, in "Little Old New York," which is, I think, a mighty good picture, the best I have seen this long time. But Lord, how strange women are, since one that sat behind me did weep through the most of it, to my great discontent.

Had Full Freight

S.S. Silvia which arrived in port this morning from Halifax and New York brought 13,000 barrels of freight.

The S. S. Lisgar County from Montreal and Charlottetown arrived this morning bringing the equivalent of 17,000 barrels of freight, which includes 60 head of cattle. The Lisgar County is discharging at Shea's premises and will sail again on Saturday midday.

Personal

Miss May Fewer, who has been very ill for some time past, is now very much better and it is expected will be fully recovered within a week or two.

CHIMNEY BLAZE.—Last midnight a chimney, in the Army and Navy Hotel, Duckworth Street, took fire, but before anyone had time to ring in an alarm, firemen heard of the blaze and had the blaze subdued with a hand extinguisher.

A Century of Cement

This year is the one hundredth anniversary of the invention of Portland cement. Old records have been discovered showing that in 1850 deposits of rock needed for natural cement manufacture were found in Georgia, and that cement was made in the state before the Civil War.

The discovery of cement rock was made in 1850 at Cement, Georgia, by Rev. Charles W. Havard. In 1857 Colonel George Waring, of Savannah, took control of the plant, and worked it as the Havard Hydraulic Cement Company.

But Joseph Aspin, an English bricklayer, made the discovery of Portland cement itself, and brought out his new material in 1824.

Portland cement is a strictly manufactured product, whilst natural cement is largely a gift of Nature.

No Privilege for the Crypt Chapel

"The Lord Great Chamberlain has given his consent to the christening of the baby son and heir of Mr. Ian Macpherson, M.P., in the Crypt Chapel at Westminster, according to the rites of the Church of Scotland," says the Chronicle.

"It is understood that the Rev. Dr. Archibald Fleming, of St. Columba's, will perform the ceremony."

"When Mr. Macpherson first applied, Canon Carnegie, the Speaker's chaplain, and rector of St. Margaret's Westminster, claimed jurisdiction over the Crypt Chapel, and refused his consent unless an Anglican clergyman officiated."

"Mr. Macpherson then raised the matter in the House, when it was found that the Crypt Chapel was a Royal chapel under the jurisdiction of the Lord Great Chamberlain."

Luxury Motor-Boat

50 MILES AN HOUR AND NO VIBRATION.

VIENNA.—A motor-boat, built on the Danube, at Fischamend, near Vienna, has accomplished its first trial trips with complete success, attaining a speed of 50 miles an hour over a four miles course. It made two trips with 10 and 15 passengers respectively.

Designed by Herr Garner, an Austrian engineer living in the United States, it was constructed to the order of an American, Mr. Charles MacDaniel, and cost $5,000.

It can carry passengers, and develop its tremendous speed can stop within a few yards.

Inside a comfortable cabin conversion can easily be carried on, in spite of the noise of the powerful motors.

The absence of vibration in the cabin astonished the contractors. The vessel draws only a few inches of water and sandbanks can be ignored.

The "KODAK" Store

Sells You Quality and Gives You Speed FREE

Do you get the very best results from your Snapshots all the time? You do if you let the KODAK STORE develop and print them for you, because so exceptionally up-to-the-minute are their printing and developing methods and equipment, so efficient are their assistants (you see they handle far more films than any one else in the city, and they're developing and printing only, all the time) that while they can, and do, give you a 24-hour service, no detail of quality is lacking. Every print from every negative is accurately and perfectly finished. When the KODAK STORE develops your prints it does not sacrifice quality for speed, it combines the two, and gives you—perfection.

TOOTON'S, The "Kodak" Store

Fooled the Fortune-Seeker

THIEVES WHO THRIVE ON PHANTOM WINDFALLS.

Nearly every family cherishes a more or less circumstantial tradition that there is "money for it somewhere," and this circumstance is daily turned to account by a little-known class of swindlers.

These crooks start by writing to the head of an unusually expectant family, who one morning receives a notification that a long-lost uncle or more distant relative has left him a fortune, or that he is entitled to an estate then unclaimed. Sometimes the letter containing the glad news carries its own condemnation.

Recently, for instance, a communication of this kind stated that the testator worked a gold mine he had discovered in New South Wales, and "amassed (sic) a huge fortune." In a letter of the same nature occurred this sentence: "I hope to pay you a visit in the course of a few weeks, and hoping that you will try to appear as respectful as possible, because I may bring with me a few gentlemen friends."

If no such letter is sent to the fortune-seeker, one of the swindlers personally conveys to him the welcome news that his dream has come true.

In either case, an operator calls on the man, and the subsequent procedure depends upon his gullibility and financial resources. If he has no money, he hears little more about the mythical fortune. If, on the other hand, he possesses some means, and is willing to drop the substance for the shadow, he is bled mercilessly.

A common device is to extract money from him for certificates of births, marriages, and deaths, for searching records in London and elsewhere, and for innumerable forms. Affidavit-making also goes on apace. Some years ago a victim was taken to London three times to be sworn upon affidavits, which cost him in all more than $60.

Occasionally, when money is running short, the "legatee" or claimant is provided with bonds for raising cash from friends. Many sanguine people are foolish enough to invest in these bonds, expecting, of course, a good return on their money when the fortune materializes.

This same man continue for a long period. One man was exploited for a whole year, then, becoming suspicious, he consulted a solicitor, who sent a clerk to interview the principal swindler. It happened that there was before the court a case hearing exactly the same name as that on which the swindler was ostensibly engaged, a remarkable coincidence, moreover, a notice relating to the genuine estate appeared in the current issue of "The Times."

Helped By Coincidence.

The swindler consequently picked up a copy of that newspaper, and attended to the notice, with the result that the clerk, completely deceived, reported to his principal that everything was in order. So the swindler advised his client accordingly, and the bleeding process went on.

While another dupe was being robbed a quarrel arose between him and one of the kinsmen, who in the end cast doubts upon his legitimacy. This suited the dispenser of fortunes, because it not only afforded him an excuse to cast off somebody whom he had nearly bled white, but enabled him to attach himself to a fresh victim. This man eventually called a family council, which was the means of putting £200 or £300 more into the swindler's pocket.

The moral is obvious. Beware of "legal" letters and still more of strangers with stories of windfalls.

New Age of Courtesy

"The satirists are having lots of fun with the new keen interest in good manners, but a more encouraging or pleasant sign of the times could hardly be discovered," says Collier's Weekly. "The truth is, Americans realised suddenly and regretfully that something very precious departed with the old-fashioned courtesy. To-day 'gentlemen of the old school' are no longer caricatured, but copied. Children have begun to curtsy and little boys gravely hold their mothers' chairs for them. People genuinely want manners now, and so manners will be acquired."

"Facts wrote wisely in that prayer for my daughter when he exclaimed: 'And may her bridegroom bring her to a house where all's accustomed, ceremonious!'"

Fiona Held in Port

The sailing of S. S. Fiona with a cargo of 200 tons of scrap iron for Sydney, has, we understand, been cancelled for the present. Before the ship is permitted to put to sea she has to undergo the necessary survey. The Fiona has been lying up for the last eight years, and has not been examined, since she was taken over by the North American Scrap and Metal Company and repaired.

London Letter

(By PANTON HOUSE for the Canadian Press.)

LONDON, Sept. 5.—After the Dome of St. Paul's Cathedral and Nelson's Column in Trafalgar Square, probably the first London landmark recognized by visiting Canadians is the Clock Tower of the Houses of Parliament. The title of "Big Ben," affectionately conferred by Londoners on both the tower and its great four-faced clock, properly belongs to the bell, weighing 13 1/2 tons, on which the hours are struck; it was named after Sir Benjamin Hall, first commissioner of works when it was hung. Thousands of Londoners set their watches by "Big Ben" the clock, which is usually so accurate a time-keeper that his rare stoppages are in the nature of a public calamity. Small boys and girls will envy the popular favorite when they know that his four faces are now being washed for the first time in three and a half years; but let them reflect what it must be like to have 3 1/2 years' grime removed at a sitting from four faces, each 23 feet square! The work is being done by a well-known steeplejack, who sits on a plank, slung from a scaffold-pole from the battlements which are just above the clock-face, at anything from 170 to 190 feet above the ground. From this specialist's point of view, the only dangerous element in the job is from the minute-hand, which is 14 feet long and weighs about 200 lbs., and, having an irresistible way with it, is best given a wide berth.

ROMAN LONDON.

Lloyd's—the famous association of underwriters, merchants, ship-owners and insurance brokers, which has occupied part of the Royal Exchange Buildings for one hundred and fifty years—is to move within the next year to fine new premises in Leadenhall Street. The site has been cleared and now that excavations have begun, people interested in London's Roman past are hoping for some interesting discoveries. In the course of fourteen or fifteen hundred years, the level of London has risen by many feet. The surface of Roman London was from 6 to 19 feet below that of our streets to-day.

In 1830, when the site of Leadenhall Market was being made ready, the massive foundations were partly unearthed of a building thought to have been Roman London's great civic hall, probably over 400 feet long. Further traces of this may come to light as the present excavations proceed. In the meantime, visitors from the Dominions may be seen any day, studying the Roman relics in the London Museum and the Guildhall collections. They are perhaps less interested in the statues and mosaic floors than in the sandals, household gear, and beautiful deep-red Samian pottery.

LONDON'S HOLY WELL.

In 1899-1905, one of the ancient and not too reputable streets off the Strand, cleared to make room for the fine new thoroughfare of Aldwych and Kingsway, was Halywell Street. At the same time the well that gave its name to the street was filled in. This was the well of St. Clement, close to the church of St. Clement Danes, which, as every Canadian knows who has ever passed down the Strand, is one of that highway's two island churches. St. Clement's Well is to be dug out again this fall. An official of the London Museum thinks it quite likely that it was known during the Roman occupation (55 B.C.—410 A.D.) and that it was fed by the same waters that served the Roman bath, still to be seen on the other side of the Strand. In any case, there is plenty of evidence that the well was a favorite halting-place for pilgrims passing through London on their way to the shrine of St. Thomas à Becket at Canterbury. Its waters were considered to be medicinal, and especially effective in the cure of skin diseases.

OSTRICH FOR DINNER.

Some Australian visitors in London have just had an ostrich dinner. The bird, 30lb. in weight, and about three feet long, was sent frozen into a

IVORY SOAP
is the most Economical Soap

block of ice, all the way from Australia, and rested on an open spit before an open fire. It was served with potatoes and salad, and, according to one of the diners, tasted like goose.

It was not quite clear why the party selected a South African bird for their feast—one had always been under the impression that the emu was Australia's national bird. But possibly the ostrich, like the camel, has been naturalized in the island continent. It now only remains for a Canadian party to have a moose sent over in ice to make them a London dinner.

THAMES MOTOR SERVICE.

It is understood that another fleet of passenger boats is to be placed on the Thames next year. At present the Londoner and his guests can travel up the river from Westminster to Hampton Court and Richmond, or down from Greenwich to Southend and beyond; and a small launch will take them from Westminster to the Tower of London and back. The new boats, which are to be driven by British built semi-Diesel engines developing 192 h.p., will cover the reaches between Hammersmith and Woolwich. They will carry about 300 passengers each at fares of about two cents a mile.

In its dainty design and new blue and white dress the five cent Ivory Soap makes an instant appeal to ladies of good taste.—adv.t.f

Airman's Daring Feat

FAMOUS DIAMOND SMUGGLED OUT OF MOROCCO.

Disguised as a native, a young American airman, Joseph Stehlin, brought off a daring feat in smuggling out of Morocco one of the world's largest diamonds, the "Sultana," which an American syndicate had purchased from Muley Hand, ex-Sultan of Morocco. When the American syndicate had completed the deal with the ex-Sultan a month ago they selected Mr. Stehlin for the difficult task of fetching it from the ex-Sultan's agents in the desert village of El Ksar-el-Kebir. The ex-Sultan himself is barred from the country, and it was thought that if his agents tried to smuggle out this famous stone of 143 carats they would arouse suspicion. Secrecy was also necessary on account of native superstitions connected with the stone, which, according to legend, would bring disaster upon the country if ever it were taken out of Morocco. There had already been trouble among the natives on account of rumours that it had been sold, and great precautions had therefore to be taken not to arouse suspicion. On landing in Morocco Mr. Stehlin was met by a representative of the ex-Sultan, and disguised as an Arab, was taken to El Ksar-el-Kebir by night marches. At ten o'clock one night the stone was produced in a native house, and, having been examined by two representatives of the American syndicate, was handed over to Mr. Stehlin, who simply put it in his pocket. Accompanied by two Arab guides, and still in his disguise, Mr. Stehlin then rode to Tangier Harbour, where a yacht was in waiting to convey him to Cadix. A racing car then took him to Madrid, where another powerful car belonging to one of the ex-Sultan's friends was waiting to bring him to Paris. From Paris onward the transit risks of the stone are covered by an insurance company.

Training Children's Judgment

One of the most important powers that children should be trained to use is that of choice. They themselves vaguely realise the possession of choice when they utter the familiar words "I want" or "I don't want."
In little acts of choosing lie the training of the power of judgment which will be their sole guide in after life, so that teaching children to exercise their judgment is of the utmost importance.
We are beginning that training when we ask the small people to express in words what they notice. But the child in endeavoring to answer questions correctly is exercising his faculty of judgment, and even in trivial matters the tendency will be noted to say what he wishes to believe rather than what is actually correct. The well-known story of the small boy who announced that there were thousands of cats on the roof when there was only "our cat and another" is an illustration of this tendency.
Significant Exaggerations.

We are apt to smile at the exaggeration of children, forgetful of the significance of it. It is not untruthfulness, but it is just an error of judgment on the part of a child, and it is a very difficult matter for mothers and teachers to deal with and regulate.

Children delight in picturesque statements, and if they are always being pulled up short for exaggeration they will withhold their confidence. More important still, they will hesitate in their judgment.

Most mothers are amused or annoyed, according to their temperaments, by the obstinacy of schoolboys and schoolgirls who persist in their own opinions of companions or even actions, in contradiction to the experienced verdict of their elders.

A rule of a wise mother of a big family was to ask for her children's opinion of pictures, songs, furniture, dress, and so on, and to make no objection when it was directly contrary to her own.

But in questions of right and wrong she would not allow no differences of opinion. "You haven't studied history long enough to be able to judge moral questions," she used to say laughingly.

A valuable exercise in the training of judgment is that of "putting yourself in another's place." It stimulates thought and helps a child to form dependable judgments.

Wives for Sale

The Rumanian peasant who offered to sell his wife for ten bottles of beer valued her at such a low figure that his customer doubled the price. But even he thought her worth more than the husband who sold his wife at Alfreton, Derbyshire, in 1882, for a glass of ale!

It was once a common belief in England that husband could make such a sale legally provided he led the wife, with a halter around her neck, to a public market and there auctioned her. As late as 1887 a man sold his wife at Sheffield for 1s.

In 1917 a butcher put his wife up for sale in Smithfield Market, and disposed of her to a hog-driver for three guineas and a crown. Commenting upon this, and on the sale of an octopus's wife for twenty-five guineas, a daily newspaper of that period said: "We hear there is to be a sale of wives at Christie's. Their price has risen in Smithfield Market from half a guinea to three guineas and a half!"
In 1902 a mixed "lot," consisting of a wife, a child, and some furniture, was sold in Derbyshire for eleven shillings, and in the following ten years wives were sold in all parts of the country at prices varying from four shillings and a bowl of punch to sixpence and a pound of tobacco.

One of the women sold was described as being "from twenty to twenty-three years old, good-looking, but a virago"; another, who could "read novels and milk cows," was a "terrible scold," but she was eventually exchanged for one pound and a Newfoundland dog. A husband who sold his wife for five guineas gave her one guinea to buy herself new clothes, and then went to a neighbouring town and had the church bells rung to celebrate the occasion.
These transactions, which date from the time when a woman became the " chattel " of the man whom she married, were looked upon by the poorer classes as a kind of voluntary separation between the parties.

Indeed, so great was the faith of the poorer classes in the legality of these public sales of wives that when a man was sent to prison in 1887 for trying to sell his wife his case raised a public outcry of surprise and indignation.

FIRPO LOOKING FOR MORE.

Luis Angel Firpo, undaunted by the setback he suffered at the hands of Harry Wills, negro heavyweight title contender, is planning an extensive tour of the country in the event that he triumphs in his difficulties with the immigration authorities. Firpo plans a series of bouts against heavyweights in different parts of the country in an effort to rehabilitate himself and force another bout with Wills. The South American yesterday expressed confidence in his ability to turn the tables on Wills if he is successful in fighting his way to another meeting with the "Brown Panther."

COBB GETS 200 HITS FOR THE NINTH TIME, BREAKING RECORD HE HAD HELD WITH KEELER.

By making his 200th hit of the season in the game with the Yankees in Detroit yesterday Ty Cobb established a new Major League record by reaching that mark for the ninth year during his career. He previously had held the record jointly with Willie Keeler, formerly of the New York, Baltimore and Brooklyn National League clubs.

Keeler made 200 or more hits in eight consecutive seasons, while the years in which Cobb performed this feat did not come in succession. Keeler made more than 200 hits in each of the eight years from 1894 to 1901, inclusive. Cobb reached that mark in 1907, 1909, 1911, 1912, 1915, 1916, 1917, 1922 and 1924. Keeler reached his highest total in 1897, when he collected 243 safeties, while Cobb's highest total is 248, made in 1911. The major league record for the highest number of hits in one season is 257. This record is held by George Sisler of the Browns and was established in 1920. The National League record of 250 was made by Rogers Hornsby in 1922. During his long major league career Cobb has established more records than any other player in the history of the game. He has played in more games than any other American League player, his present total being 2,598. The major league record of 2,785 is held by Hans Wagner, formerly of the Pirates. Cobb is a joint holder with George Sisler of the modern major league batting record for one season. This is 420 hit and is in danger of being broken this year by Rogers Hornsby. The Tigers' own manager recently broke his own American League record by scoring more than 100 runs for the tenth season during his career. He also holds a major league record by leading the league for nine years.

Among Cobb's other records are: the highest individual lifetime batting average, most consecutive years as league's leading batsman, most runs scored during his career, most hits, the most singles, the most triples, the most extra-base hits, the most extra-base hits and the highest total of bases on hits.

Hornsby and Ruth stay in front in races for batting laurels.
(Up To Sept. 20th.)
Rogers Hornsby of the Cardinals is hitting for a mark of .422, according to the latest set of unofficial averages, and is still far in front in the race for the individual championship of the National League. He is fifty-one points ahead of Zack Wheat of the Robins, who ranks second. Ross Young of the Giants is third amongst the regulars with .353. Cuyler of the Pirates is fourth with .367 and Ed. Roush of the Reds is fifth with .347. Leaders of other phases of play follow:

Most runs scored—Frisch, New York, 116.
Most hits made—Hornsby, St. Louis, 214.
Most two-base hits—Hornsby, St. Louis, 41.
Most three-base hits—Roush, Cincinnati, 21.
Most home runs—Fournier, Brooklyn, 27.
Most stolen bases—Carey, Pittsburgh, 44.

Leading pitcher—Vance, Brooklyn; 27 victories, 4 defeats, .871.

Babe Ruth of the Yankees is still setting the pace for the batmen of his league in the race for the individual batting championship of the season. His average is now .353. This is six points higher than that of Stephenson of the Indians, who has taken part in only sixty-four games. Bib Falk of the White Sox ranks third among the regular batmen with a mark of .358. Jamieson of the Indians is fourth with .335 and Eddie Collins of the White Sox is fifth with .354. Leaders in other phases of play follow:

MINARD'S LINIMENT—FOR RHEUMATISM.

Newfoundland Pageant at Empire Exhibition.

By MISS S. KNOX.

Of all the dominions of our Empire, none can be better fitted for the art of pageantry than Newfoundland, and the portrayal of the romance of its discovery and the interest of its evolution, is shown in all its picturesque details in the Pageant of the British Empire Exhibition. Beginning "before the beginning" as an Irishman might say, we see John Cabot setting out from Bristol, with the King's Charter, to find new lands. The citizens of Bristol, a gay holiday crowd, are out to speed Cabot on his adventurous journey. It is an animated and merry scene—family groups with romping children, loving couples, falconers, their birds chained to their wrists, bowmen with their bows and arrows—all making the most of the occasion. Through the crowd in their holiday dresses of blue, russet, grey and crimson rides Cabot, richly garbed, on his gaily caparisoned horse; beside him rides his wife, in the becoming wimple and rich flowing draperies of the day, their two sons following closely. As they near the centre of the vast Stadium a dignified train of City Aldermen in red robes with picturesque black head-dresses, headed by their Mayor with the City mace, advance on horseback to meet Cabot and give him the good wishes of the City of Bristol. In his robes of discovery, from another direction, to solemn and moving strains of organ music, the Abbot of Newland moves slowly forward, a blaze of gold, with his cope, mitre and crozier. In his train, followed by a group of monks in black and white robes, in the background, advancing, the Abbot blesses over the assembled people. The blessing of the Church is added to the sanction of the State. The beauty and impressiveness of this scene is something that will be remembered. The solemn ceremony over, Cabot goes forward to the water's edge followed by shouts of "Growell, Cabot!" and embarks, accompanied by the accompaniments of the waving hands and shouted good wishes of his friends and fellow citizens. As the ship moves across the water and out of sight, the fluttering black-berchief of his wife, sitting motionless on her horse is a symbol of the home he is leaving.

Scene 2 shows the landing of Sir Humphrey Gilbert—a picturesque figure in his red and gold uniform and plumed hat—with his lieutenants and crew. He finds amongst the inhabitants of the island merchants fishermen of all nations—Breton, Biscayan, Portuguese, with cutlasses and pistols at their belts, and a few of the ancient Beothic Indians with their fisher's spears and gay head-dresses. Their chief, a man of noble figure in crimson and turquoise and silver at their head. From the ceremonial tent which has been set up for his reception, Sir Humphrey emerges. The Herald, in his gorgeous medieval dress, reads from a parchment scroll the proclamation. Sir Humphrey Gilbert goes through the ancient ceremony of "digging the turf," and thus takes formal possession of the land "in the name of Elizabeth, by the grace of God, Queen of England, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith." These proceedings are received with loud cheering by the crowds, a salute of guns is heard from the ship in the harbour, and English flags wave proudly over the scene.

Sir Humphrey Gilbert, attended by his English suite, walks off at the head of a brilliantly uniformed guard, whose spears catch the light as they march.

In scene 3 we see the rough and ready rule of the Fishing Admiral—the Captain who had won the race to port and is therefore made Ruler for the year. Mounted on a pile of casks, surrounded by companions who carry out his arbitrary orders, we see a picture of lawless rule. The islanders in their simple but brightly coloured dresses, many of the women wearing becoming white head-dresses with their pink, grey and russet gowns, the children playing with the goats that form such an amusing addition to the crowd—all discontented with the rule of the gang of practical looking fishermen. The scene is one of disorder, rough horseplay, quarrelling, and drawing of swords among the fishermen. Suddenly a company of H.M. sailors marches upon the scene scattering the unruly rulers, and chasing the "Admiral" off the ground. The senior Naval Officer of the station has been appointed Governor of the island, and he comes on at the head of a band of blue uniformed sailors and addresses the people, promising them a just and ordered government from England. The first Naval Governor of Newfoundland marches off with dignity and ceremony to the strains of naval music and the cheering of the crowds, and so order and a settled government were established in Newfoundland.

grace and beauty which is not surpassed by anything in the Pageant. The scene is dressed as a garden at Government House, at one end is a dais for the Governor's party, flowers and music make gay preparations for the crowd of invited guests. The occasion is the visit of the young Prince of Wales (afterwards King Edward VII) to Newfoundland, and the flower of Newfoundland is bidden to do him honour. The ladies, in hooped gowns of delicate hues, primrose, sky blue, mauve, rose pink, flowered and striped silk—the men with peg top trousers, buff and grey, blue cutaway coats, cravats and side whiskers, children in their quaint little Victorian dresses—all make a picture which brings to mind the paintings on an old fan, delicate and charming.

As they move about the gardens of Government House the graceful curtsies of the ladies, the sweeping bows of the gentlemen, the fluttering fans, the waving parasols, carry the mind back to the spacious days before air and graces were crowded out of life.

The Governor, Sir Charles Darling enters with Lady Darling, a charming and gracious figure, and attended by his brilliantly uniformed staff. The young Prince appears, heralded by a salute of guns and peals of bells, and attended by a retinue of blue jackets. He is received ceremoniously by the Governor and greeted with graceful bows and curtsies by the assembly. The Governor's Proclamation is read and the Prince makes an inspection of the green and red uniformed Governor's Guard. Then the band strikes up and the ladies are led out to dance in the great Quadrille. The changing gaily colored groups, the graceful curtsies, the brilliant uniforms, all form a picture the beauty of which cannot be exaggerated.

Scene 5 and last, shows the achievement of our oldest Dominion, and brings us to the wonders of today.

We see the first Cable brought ashore in 1858 and carried to the Cable House, where a message is received on Lord Kelvin's mirror galvanometer. Crowds, dressed in the costume of the period, cheer the inauguration of this link between the Old World and the New.

The wonder of the first long distance Wireless is next shown. Senator Marconi passes down the great arena, with the very men who helped him in those first experiments carrying in their hands the actual instruments used. It is the representation of one of the greatest and most marvellous achievements of modern times, an achievement with which Newfoundland must ever be proud to be so distinctively associated.

Then Newfoundland was the goal of the first trans-Atlantic flight in 1919, and we see a graceful plane, lit by a shaft from the powerful searchlight, swoop low over the crowded Stadium. Twice it circles round, and enthusiastic shouts of "Bravo Alcock!" "Bravo Brown!" Another step forward has been made, another link between Newfoundland and the Mother Country has been forged.

This brings to the history of Newfoundland from the earliest days of Empire building to the present record of worthy achievement, presented in scenes that are never allowed to flag and that hold the interest of a vast audience throughout their performance.

Newfoundland's Pageant takes high place in a presentation of Empire History such as has never before been offered, a spectacle which must fill the heart of every British man and woman with pride and thankfulness.

In the Thanksgiving Finale with which the cycle of Dominion Pageants is completed, the Newfoundland car is beautiful and representative. Decorated with fir trees, and with the Newfoundland flag proudly waving, it carries baskets of gleaming fish, the rich harvest of the sea, and a fine specimen of the caribou. A lady representing the Dominion is borne on the car, in dazzling costume of blue and silver, and her long sparkling train is carried by a group of ladies-in-waiting, the whole forming a brilliant and picturesque tableau.

A great many of the tiny tell tales have feather fantasies placed at one side.

WHEN JOY MAKES FEAR.

A friend of mine knows a man who is the amateur champion of his section of the country in a certain sport.

We were talking about him the other day and I expressed my admiration and envy of anyone who could do a thing so beautifully and come through competition after competition with honors, as he has for several years.

"How proud he must be and how happy," I said to my friend, "to win over all the younger men."

"Yes," said my friend, "he's awfully pleased when he wins, of course; but all the time he's haunted by the fear of losing and knowing that some day, sooner or later, he's got to lose to some one of the younger ones. It's going to be a bitter blow when he finally does lose."

Don't you think that was an interesting glimpse into the mind of a champion?

And through his mind into the universal mind, and the fear of loss that always dwells there in proportion to the joy of possession.

An Old Fashioned Treasure.

I know a woman who had a very remarkable maid for many years, the sort of maid who used to exist and who was known as a "treasure." She was an excellent washer and ironer, clean about her person and the house, a good cook, clever at service and reasonably good tempered.

The employer of this paragon fully appreciated her prize. She would never, she felt sure, be able to stand any other helper after Katie. Last year Katie married, and a few days ago I met Katie's employer for the first time since her loss.

I expected to hear wailing and gnashing of teeth when I asked how Katie's successor was doing, but this is what she said:

Takes More Comfort With Her.

"Oh, no. Mary isn't any where near so good a girl as Katie was, but it's a funny thing I really think I'm taking more comfort with her than I did with Katie. I was always afraid I was going to lose Katie because she was so perfect. I knew I couldn't get another one like her and I worried a lot if I thought she was getting discontented, and put myself out more than I really should have. But now I don't care whether Mary goes or not. I can get another about as good so I don't worry, and there's a certain satisfaction in that."

There is, indeed.

When you come right down to it there are very few luxuries worth more than peace of mind. And the fear of loss is one of the worst enemies of peace of mind.

The higher up on the ladder of any kind of success you go, the further you can fall, and the worse that fall will hurt. Which I know is no way to talk to people who need their ambition stimulated.

The Eternal Compensation.

But there's an awful lot of people who in the nature of things can't get

Fistic Battle in Field

Rural Heavyweights' Fierce Fight—Reminiscent of Old-Time Prize Ring.

Two local heavyweights, Fred Shipp, of Northampton, and Sam Harrison, of Rushden, met in a field near Rushden, Northants, and fought for a purse of £40. Harrison won in the third round, when Shipp failed to rise after heavy punishment on the head and body. Both men have a local reputation in the ring, and the purse was subscribed by admirers in the district. Harrison is a navy, and his antagonist is an agricultural labourer. Neither is in the first bloom of youth, but both looked fit as they entered the 16-foot ring and faced each other with regulation gloves on. The fight was witnessed by a large assembly of sportsmen, and the betting was fairly even. There were heavy exchanges in the first round, but throughout Harrison had the advantage and scored first blood. Shipp showed great gameness and returned Harrison's blows, but not so effectively. More than once both men fell during the fierce encounter, and the battle was more in the nature of an old-time prize fight than a glove contest. Blood flowed freely on both sides, and the excitement among the onlookers was intense. There was more hard hitting than skill, and it became evident that the stress of battle was beginning to tell on the two burly veterans, who certainly put more into their punches than is the case in the much-vaunted "fights" for heavy purses in London. It was while Shipp lay sprawled on the turf that the end came. He rose just a fraction of a second too late and was counted out, but everyone, including the loser, voted it grand sports and parted good friends.

Our Horses' Ancestors

The unrivalled breeds of horses that Britain possesses were derived originally from Arabian stock. Arabian horses are of two types, the Kadischi, whose origin is unknown, and the Kuchlani, of whom written genealogies exist dating back for 2,000 years.

The Kuchlani are kept for riding purposes only, and are said to be descended from Solomon's studs. They can go for long periods without food, being remarkable for their dauntless courage in the face of danger.

Although neither large nor handsome, the Kuchlani are extraordinarily swift. Some types of this breed have a higher reputation on account of their alleged uncontaminated nobility.

Many of the tales told about Arabian horses cannot be believed, for the Arab is naturally prone to exaggeration, and his eyes nothing can be too good for the steed that he loves almost as much as his children.

"In the Shadows of Whitechapel"

SHOWING AT THE NICKEL TO-NIGHT.

Who amongst us that did not sit and enjoy the thrills of the melodramatic successes of other years? How we hissed the villain, cheered the hero and loved the heroine, how we laughed and roared at the antics of the comedian, the realistic fies, train wrecks, horse races and stirring rescues. Shall we ever forget them? Impossible. The old traditions of entertainment must be kept intact and with this end in view and with the facilities for visualizing the big punch scenes in their actual locations in a real and true manner, Hepworth Films of London have produced "In the Shadows of Whitechapel."

Conceded to be the biggest of England's big melodramas, London and the provinces have taken it to their hearts and practically overnight this sensational motion picture production has attained a smashing success. The English press, without a dissenting voice, have endorsed and actually labelled this the biggest of England's big melodramas. The musical settings are a joy to hear. Old familiar music hall melodies made famous by the headlines of the varieties of the Old Country are heard again for the first time in many years. A vivid picture of the slums with their joys and sorrows, love and laughter, their quaint mannerisms and quaint "lingo," which is presented in a true story of life in London. "In the Shadows of

Successful Card Party and Dance

The Star Ladies' Association held a very successful Card Party, and Dance in the Star of the Sea Rooms last night. There was a large attendance, and an enjoyable evening was spent by all. The prize winners in the Progressive Card Tournament were won by Messrs. J. Kennedy, R. Moakler and Mrs. W. Doody. Following the serving of teas dancing was indulged in, and did not conclude until an early hour this morning. The Elimination Dance was won by T. Power and Miss Hann. The music was rendered by the C.C.C. Band.

"Three Live Ghosts"

PRESENTED AT CASINO.

Mr. Carl S. Trapnell in his presentation of "Three Live Ghosts" at the Casino last night made a great hit. It was unfortunate that a larger audience was not present to enjoy this splendid play.

Miss M. Ryall as Mrs. Gibbons played in a capable manner the part of a woman whose main desire in life seemed to be the accumulation of riches, regardless of how they came. Miss Gerie Ryan, appeared as Peggy Woofers, the land-lady's daughter, in a manner that was up to the standard for which she is noted. Bolton of the American Detective Agency was impersonated by Captain O'Grady, whose reputation as an actor is well known.

As Jimmy Gibbons, supposed by the government to have been dead, Mr. A. E. Holmes played the part of a "Tommy" to perfection and kept the audience in good humour. Mr. Jack Callahan appeared as "Wm. Foster (alias Wm. Jones)" and added another laurel to his reputation as an actor. Spooty, a shell-shocked Tommy was impersonated by Mr. Max Colton and the manner in which he acquired things was a source of much amusement.

Miss Kathleen Hayes played the part of Rose Gordon in a capable manner, as did Mr. Karl S. Trapnell, who as Briggs (of Scotland Yard) was true to life. Miss Rose Harrison and Messrs. Sandy Lawrence and R. Diamond played minor parts in a manner that made the play complete.

Between the acts, Master M. Mitchell and Messrs. Dan Delmer and A. E. Holmes, contributed specialties which, with the music rendered by the C. L. B. Band, made the evening one of much enjoyment, for those who were present. The performance will be repeated to-night, and to-morrow night, when other specialties will be introduced.

Will be Tried for Piracy

Brest, France, Sept. 25.—Max Jarome Phaff, a German-American, who gave his address as 20 East 196th street, New York City, has been arrested on a charge of piracy on the high seas, and arrived in Brest yesterday and was lodged in the naval barracks jail.

The charge against Phaff grew out of the boarding of the French freighter Mulhouse off the Canadian coast last July by pirates who held up the crew at the point of revolvers and made off with the cargo of nearly 36,000 cases of whiskey.

Phaff's preliminary hearing has been set for next Friday, but Attorney P. O. E. Gide of the Paris and London Bar Associations, acting for the defence, has requested a postponement until Tuesday, Sept. 30, to have an opportunity to study his client's case before entering a plea of not guilty.

The French law of 1825 still governs cases of piracy on the high seas. The penalty for conviction is death by hanging. There has been no trial under this law since 1871, when a Greek privateer was tried at Toulon, convicted, and executed.

The tribunal that will try Phaff will be appointed by the admiral commanding the Brest region; it will be presided over by a naval officer with the rank of captain, who will be assisted by two lieutenants of the navy, one naval engineer and three judges attached to the civil law courts.

It is the present intention of the defence, after pleading not guilty, to challenge the competency of the tribunal. If this is overruled, an appeal will be offered which will tend to prove that Phaff was in Halifax when the Mulhouse was boarded and looted.

Phaff, it is understood, may admit that he smuggled contraband liquor into the United States and demand a trial before U.S. courts. The defence may also argue that the owners of the Mulhouse are liable to U.S. courts.

The Phaff case, it is said, is likely to develop sensational revelations concerning the wholesale smuggling of liquor into the United States. The defendant declares he is unwilling "to be made the goat" and says he will implicate men "higher up" in the United States as well as reputed reliable firms in Great Britain.

Wolves of the Waters

FISH THAT ANGLERS HATE TO HOOK.

When talk turns upon dangerous fish the first that one thinks of is the shark.

The shark is a greedy brute, but a fearful coward, and not to be mentioned in the same breath with such a creature as the piral or the barracouta. The piral is quite a small fish, but the wolf of the waters. It is found in many rivers in South America, and hunts in packs. Woe be to a swimmer who enters water infested by the piral! He is instantly attacked and literally torn to pieces.

The long, slender barracouta haunts the reefs of the Gulf of Mexico, swift, and as savage as a field, it

Bones of Saint or Prince

FEARS OF SUPERSTITIOUS WELSH

As reported in The Daily Mail, excavators have recently unearthed St. Patrick's Chapel—an offshoot of St. David's Cathedral in Pembroke—where had lain hidden beneath a grassy crest on Whitesands Bay for a thousand years or more. Beside a rude altar of rock was found the skeleton of a man of great stature believed to be St. Patrick, but experts now say that the bones are those of a young man and not of a centenarian, as was St. Patrick, and the skeleton is believed to be that of one of the Welsh princes who fought against the invading Irish kings.

Another skeleton of a man, perfectly preserved, was found in the original foundations of the chapel of St. Justinian, who was St. David's coadjutor—a tiny place of worship built for mariners about 600 A.D. Around the foundations are the ruins of the later St. Justinian's Chapel, built in the 18th century by Bishop Vaughan.

During the week-end Professor Fleure, the anthropologist, of Aberystwyth, examined both skeletons, and interesting developments are expected. Professor Fleure has taken away the skull of the supposed St. Patrick for further examination, and the skeleton found in St. Justinian's Chapel has been covered with melted jellatine to preserve it.

Superstitious People.

Superstitious inhabitants of the district regard the excavations with considerable apprehension. St. Justinian, who was St. David's closest friend and confessor, was slain on Ramsey Island, by his servants, who rebelled against his strict discipline, and there is a legend still perpetuated locally—that the decapitated saint walked across Ramsey Sound to St. David's carrying his bleeding head in his hands.

He was buried in the chapel now being excavated, but his body was later removed by St. David and reinterred in the cathedral, where his bones and those of St. David may still be seen.

Tears were shed by some people who saw the skeletons revealed by the excavators, and many a head was dolefully shaken, but none dared voice his secret fears.—Daily Mail.

Formal afternoon frocks are made of sheer materials in two shades of the same color, aprons, panels and capes being notes of interest.

It is still smart to have that rather "huddled" effect on the street. One's hat bag is tucked under the arm that wraps over the coat.

Give your tooth brush an even chance

Your Pro-phy-lac-tic Tooth Brush does its best work when you give it a chance to dry out thoroughly between brushings. The saw-tooth-pointed bristles tufts chase germs best when they are dry.

Have two. Then each time you brush your teeth you have a Pro-phy-lac-tic at its best. A Pro-phy-lac-tic at its best keeps teeth looking their best—free from decay, white and beautiful.

Shampooed by a Spook

QUEER STORIES OF STRANGE HAPPENINGS.

A lady went into a certain hair-dressing establishment in the West-end of London in order to have her hair shampooed, and was asked to wait a little while till there should be an assistant disengaged.

So she took a seat as requested, and was somewhat surprised when, a few seconds later, a tall girl with red hair entered the room where she was alone, set to work to shampoo her, and afterwards left the room.

Just then another attendant came in and said: "Now, madam, I am ready."

"But I have just been shampooed," answered the customer; and indeed her hair showed, without doubt, that it had been expertly washed. Whereupon the attendant changed colour, and at last, being pressed for an explanation, owned that the same thing had happened before.

There was no ordinary explanation, beyond the fact that a girl with red hair who used to be employed there had committed suicide, and that it was possibly her uneasy spirit that returned at intervals to the scene of her former occupation.

The above is one of many creepy stories of the occult told by Mary L. Lewes in "The Queer Side of Things."

"Parking the Baby"

Babies in perambulators are now "parked" outside many big American stores. An attendant gives the mother a numbered check and takes care of the infant.

Grouping continents into three "north-south" strips is an educative innovation which the inventor holds would help the study of both geography and history.

Babies are now being dressed from birth in hand-knitted woollen garments. At one year old, girls and boys wear the same "woollies"—vest knickers, and jersey.

The first railway excursion to Scotland was in 1840, the journey from Derby to Edinburgh taking about 16½ hours. A previous trip, in 1846, was partly by rail and partly by water.

Paris newspapers, which have run regular "street accident" columns for years, have now extended this to railway accidents, which are of daily occurrence on the various railroad systems throughout France.

Startling to the number of thousands attacked a German swimmer who was attempting to cross the English Sea. The creature, a huge, slimy, and severely that he had to relinquish his attempt after many fruitless efforts to beat off his assailants.

Clock Without a Face

At Lullington Church, Burton-on-Trent, there is a clock with neither face nor hands. It strikes the hours on the church bell, and has carried on in this manner for nearly four hundred years.

It was made by the village blacksmith in the sixteenth century, and is of the crudest type. It is wound up daily by the sexton, the winding barrels being of oak, like the beams in which the iron bearings work.

A clockmaker, who has just put in new bearings and striking pins, declares that there is no reason why the clock, which keeps admirable time, should not continue working for centuries.

Stealing to Win a Wager

A strange story is associated with certain relics of Mary Queen of Scots and Lord Darnley which have been returned to Holyrood Palace more than one hundred years after they were stolen.

So long ago as 1823 an Edinburgh man boasted to an English friend that such was the laxity of the custodian at Holyrood that anyone could purloin articles without danger of detection. A wager was entered into between them.

The Scotsman, proceeded with his task, and accomplished it in safety. He distracted the attention of the old woman in charge, clipped a piece from the hangings of the bed of the Queen, and, waving bolder, extracted a glove of Lord Darnley's from a glass case.

The relics were purchased by a collector of curios in Scarborough, and after his death they came into the possession of his eldest son. On the latter's death his representatives decided to make restitution for the original act of vandalism by restoring the articles.

Bride's Bouquet

Laid on Cenotaph in Memory of Brother.

A wedding bouquet of lilies and white heather was laid on the Cenotaph in St. Peter's Square, Manchester, by a bride.

A card attached had on it, "An affectionate thought in an hour of joy for Fred Jeffrey by his sister Mary on her wedding day."

An Incredible Sea Story

Of the various explanations of the mystery of the Marie Celeste the latest one, published in the London Daily Express on the word of a British naval reserve officer, is the least credible of those that have been seriously put forward, and less interesting than those in which writers of fiction have given free rein to their fancy.

The story, briefly, is alleged to be one that the reserve officer got from a man named Triggs, who claimed to have been a boatswain on the abandoned brig. Triggs said that the Marie Celeste, near the coast of Portugal, fell in with a derelict. Captain Briggs, boarded her, forced open the safe in the captain's cabin took therefrom $17,500, divided it between the members of his ship's company, and then sank the derelict. Becoming apprehensive that they had committed an illegal act, the men of the Marie Celeste abandoned their ship, proceeded in a small boat to Cadiz, and there dispersed.

In the first place this story is fishy because it is based on statements attributed to a man now dead, and therefore beyond the reach of further investigation. In the second place Captain Briggs was not a searubber, but an upright and capable seaman. That he should not have known maritime law is incredible. He would have known that for salvaging the derelict he could have demanded and collected a much larger sum than that said to have been found in gold in the captain's safe. In the third place, the affair of the Marie Celeste was very carefully investigated at the time, and if the story now told were true, certain circumstances would unquestionably have come to light. The arrival of the ship's company at Cadiz would have been noted, and the loss of the derelict at about the same time would have been a matter of record. Captain Lucy's yarn is not so thrilling as Conan Doyle's story of the blood-thirsty Septimus Goring, nor so horrifying as the sea-serpent story of John Heard, Jr., but it is hardly more believable.—New Bedford Standard.

A Referee Who is Cheered

Probably, after the stories told concerning the animosity of players and spectators to football referees, you will be surprised when you hear the rounds of applause which greet the appearance of at least one football referee. Yet to step on to the field amid the greetings of the crowd is the lot of Mr. J. T. Howcroft.

Everybody is pleased to see Jack Howcroft, from the international centre-half to the meanest member of the public on the shilling side. They know that the game will be controlled with the utmost impartiality and tact. Howcroft has been in charge of football matches for a long time, and now that he is middle-aged his figure has become more rotund than it was years ago. However, he keeps himself thoroughly fit, and even at the end of the most exciting contest he can always be seen well up with the ball, in a position where he can obtain the best possible view of every incident. When next you see him in charge, half of a game watch him closely. Note the keenness, the almost boyish zeal with which he enters into the spirit of the play. The raising of that accusing first finger when he catches some player who thoughtlessly has handled the ball, his quick turn here, his rapid twist there, the sudden bending of his body so that he can bring his eyes into a position where they can follow the minutest happening.

A player, over excited, is inclined to be irritable. Howcroft has him by the arm, leading him aside for a few fatherly words. The offender smiles who can help being cheerful with this little, good-natured man? Two opponents are on the brink of blows, but the round, squat figure is between them, scolding them like two naughty schoolboys. There are no angry words, no pleading, and the two shake hands just to please their referee and friend.

Some of the crowd take a dislike to a member of the visiting team and begin to hurl insults at the unfortunate individual. The whistle blows, the game stops, and Mr. Howcroft is leaning against the railings giving the unruly ones a piece of his mind on sportsmanship.

His life is centred in the great winter game and he lives to get the best out of it, to give the players the best possible chance to do their best and to the spectators their real enjoyment which is their share.—Daily Mail.

MINARD'S
KING OF PAIN
LINIMENT

Just Folks.

By EDGAR GUEST.

A PRAYER.

Lord, make me strong enough to bear
My little round of anxious care.
The day returns. For this I pray:
Sufficient wisdom for the day.
Although I may not walk with kings
Let me be big in little things.

Grace me with modesty and teach
Me kindness of thought and speech.
Let me not hurry to be chide
The children walking at my side
And spoil with imperfections slight
The record which the day shall write.

Lord, make me big enough I pray
To triumph in a lesser way.
When petty disappointments rise,
Let me be patient, gentle, wise.
Missing the joy which greatness brings
Let me not fail in little things.

Lord, I would work and neighbor
here
Too big to hate, too wise to snare.
I would be helpful, cheerful, kind,
Gentle of speech and broad of mind.
And though not far my circle awakes,
Let me be great in little things.

Science Baffled by Scents

Science can do marvels for sight, hearing, and touch, but so far it has accomplished nothing for our sense of smell.

Attempts have been made to find the means by which deer and other animals detect a man's presence even though he is a mile or more away and out of sight. It seems fairly certain that the secret lies in a wonderfully keen sense of smell, yet elaborate tests have not proved this.

Civilized man has lost the keen power of smell with which he was originally endowed, but many savage races retain it. A tribe in Northern Japan track game by the nose alone, exactly like a dog. There is also an Indian tribe in Brazil with the same gift.

Occasionally a member of one of the white races is found with similar powers. Dean Buckland, the geologist, could tell the locality in which he happened to be simply by smelling the earth. Once, on being lost while out riding with some friends, he picked up a handful of earth, smelt it, and announced, correctly, that they were near Uxbridge. James Mitchell, the blind deaf-mute, invariably recognized his friends by the odour peculiar to them when they entered his room.

So far from deciding how our olfactory serves work, science has not yet discovered what scent is. A great deal of music, for example, will permeate a room for years, and yet, on being weighed, will be found not to have diminished even a fraction in size.

Purity, mildness and gentleness are three of the pleasing features about every Soap—adv. t. f.

Electricity to Coax
Alaskan Hens to Lay
During Long Night

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Sept. 5 (A.P.)—
The domestic hen in the interior of Alaska, accustomed to take a lay-off during the six months of night in winter, will have to do her steady work at producing eggs, from all incubations. Electricity has come to the aid of the Alaska poultry farmer, the aid of light and heated quarters being made to lay at a time when in the past the egg supply had paid for feed.

Dairymen are constructing a type chicken house with a basement in which a large air-tight heater is located. The coop is wired with electricity, so that it may be lighted during the "daylight" hours.

With a market of $8.00 cases of eggs and prices ranging from 75 cents to $1 a dozen in winter, the poultry business promises to become one of the most remunerative in the government railroad belt.

British Doctors
Disagree as to the Value of Fruit Skins

LONDON, Sept. 12 (A.P.)—London
doctors are now engaged in a controversy in which the antagonists are arguing their places in opposing camps as to the skin-eaters and the noneaters.

The skin referred to is that which covers fruit and the controversy is over the advisability of allowing children to eat fruit, skin
all. The skin-eaters, according to one of their spokesmen, emphasize the fact that the ordinary healthy person requires a certain amount of indigestible matter to keep the bodily functions from impairment. The noneaters contend that the food of little folks must be as digestible as possible. They taboo any such indigestible things as fruit skins.

The majority opinion seems to be that adults and bigger children in health should eat the skins of fruit.
