LORD MORDEN'S DAUGHTER — OR — THE TRAGEDY OF THE CEDARS.

CHAPTER XXIV.

"My poor friend!" he said. "I have expected this, though not quite so soon. It is sad that he should be taken away without one relative near."

He spoke these words to Lady Clare in the presence of the butler: then requested the man to send Peters to him adding:

"I am too upset to look upon my friend's face at present. I am angered beyond measure by the unnatural conduct of his son."

"I have just heard the sad news, Peters," he said to the valet. "When did you find your master?"

"About five o'clock, sir. He was quite cold. He gave me a day off, and it's a wonder I came back so early and I shall never forgive myself for going away at all, while he was so ill."

"You must not reproach yourself, though had you asked me I should have forbidden it. I wonder why nothing was said to me about your holiday. It was thoughtless of you, Peters. What did the doctor say?"

"He promised to come back to-night, or early to-morrow, and instructed me to allow nobody to enter the dead man's room."

"He meant the servants, of course," interrupted the viscount.

"He meant everybody, sir, I take it. I think he suspects foul play, and will bring another doctor with him."

"Ridiculous!" ejaculated the viscount. "I will look at my dead friend presently."

"Not while I am in charge, sir," said Peters, decidedly. "The doctor's orders were imperative."

Melville was inclined to be angry, but on moment's reflection told him that he had nothing to fear.

"I admire your courage in the discharge of what you deem to be your duty, Peters. I will not attempt to interfere with you, and wish you to believe, also, that I have forgiven you for the blow you struck me this morning. I was altogether to blame, but I had been annoyed by my uncle, Sir George, who is somewhere about the house wretchedly drunk. If possible, Peters, keep an eye upon him also."

"Yes, sir," replied the valet, adding to himself: "It will take a better man than you to deceive me, you artful, two-faced villain!"

It now required all the ingenuity of the faithful Peters to devise some scheme for getting his unhappy master out of the house unobserved, and he resolved that it would be best to wait until the lights were all out, and trust to luck for success beyond all the caution that could be exercised.

The servants retired at eleven, when all the lights were shut off at the meter by the butler, unless any of the guests remained up.

To-night there was not much probability of that, for no one could decently indulge in music or cards with the master supposed to be dead in the house.

At midnight Peters considered that it was safe to venture forth, and with Mr. Locksley leaning on his arm, he stepped softly downstairs.

As they neared the library door, it was seen that there was a light burning in the room, but they passed on, silently making their way to the servants' hall, then out into the starlight by a side door.

"It's all right, sir," Peters announced. "Now let the villain do his worst! He's up to something in the library to-night!"

Mr. Locksley did not reply, though his eyes flashed, and he felt a savage satisfaction in the knowledge that Viscount Melville's plotting would all end in thin air.

They continued in the shadows of the trees that skirted the kitchen garden, intending to walk through the fields beyond to the highway.

Suddenly Peters stopped and whispered:

"Hark, master! Whose voices are those?"

They shrank back into deeper shadows, and presently two figures loomed the darkness—one was tall and slight, the other large and heavy.

"Yesh," said the voice of Sir George. "The papers are all right now—he and you got the old man out of the way cleverly, by Jove. We'll share alike—equal partners—hic—by Jove. But where does Edmund come in—hic—by Jove?"

"He had no legal claim, so what does it matter?" replied the soft, purring tones of Melville. "We are not robbing him."

"Right you are—hic!"

They passed on, and Peters whispered:

"One minute, master: I'll just see what they are up to."

He followed the dark figures until they halted within a few feet of the horse-pond. He heard both talking, but could not distinguish what they were saying.

All at once Melville leaped at his unsuspecting companion with the velocity of a cannon ball, and there was a dull splash, followed by a surging cry.

"Let them fight," grunted the valet. "I am not going to imperil my master's liberty by interfering with such carrion."

"All was quiet for a minute, then he saw Melville hurry away—alone!"

"My God!" muttered Peters, "is this murder?"

He walked softly to the horse-pond, but it was too dark to see anything but the murky surface of the water.

Then he heard his master's voice, and ran back to him, his mind in an awful whirl.

"That was Melville—Melville and Moncrieff!" asked Locksley.

"Yes, sir," shuddered Peters, adding: "How deep is the horse-pond, master?"

"Ten or twelve feet. It used to be fenced off. It is a dangerous place!"

"Yes; I nearly walked into it," replied Peters, untruthfully; then he added to himself:

"Sir George Moncrieff is at the bottom, dead, and Viscount Melville has murdered him!"

They reached the fields, and crossed over to the highway. Another half-hour's walking brought them to Streamham railway station, whence they took tickets to Ludgate Hill.

Arrived in London, Peters took his master to Faulkner's Hotel, in Newport Street.

"Newgate street," muttered Mr. Locksley, grimly. "Is it the irony of fate that has guided us here? I, a murderer, am within a stone's throw of the gallows."

"Don't don't, master!" said Peters. "We will go to Mr. Edmund in the morning and he will set matters straight."

CHAPTER XXV.

"My marriage day!" said Edmund Locksley to himself for the fiftieth time, while dressing.

He had risen with the first gleam of sunshine, and watched almost anxiously to see if the day promised to be fine.

The great day-king peeped from the horizon, after sending a thousand arrows to lead the way. Then the sky became dappled with beautiful little grey cloudlets that melted into stuffy down before the brilliant beams of the rising monarch.

"Happy is the bride that the sun shines on," Locksley quoted. "And now I heartily wish it were all over! Dear little Dora! Heaven bless her!"

He went on with his dressing, and wondered if there as another fellow so happy as he in the whole universe!

He knew that no one had such a sweet and perfect treasure as Dora. He knew that no one had a lovelier little home, and as for its past associations—pshaw! It was nonsense to give them a serious thought in passing.

Then he thought of his father, and heaved a sigh. This was the only thorn among the flowery parterre of his gladsome future.

"I will go and see him and take my little wife with me," he said, determinedly. "I will know who the snake in the grass is, and probably I'll kick Melville. I've often felt like it!"

He left Greely's Hotel at seven o'clock in a cab, and made sure of the minister by calling upon him at eight.

"There is nothing wrong about this," queried Mr. Plunket.

"Why should you think so?"

"Well, I am always suspicious of a special license, particularly in a locality like this."

"I have nothing to hide," said Locksley. "My future wife is marrying me hurriedly to escape the attention of an aged lover who is favored by her half-imbecile grandfather. That is all there is about it."

"H'm!" murmured Mr. Plunket. "I hope she is not under age—I mean for your sake and hers."

"She is twenty years old."

"I cannot refuse to marry you, but it would be possible for the relatives of the young lady to set aside such a marriage."

Locksley smiled.

"Then we should get married again," he said.

"It will be on hand at nine o'clock," the clergyman promised.

Edmund did not scruple to go direct to Market street. He had no fear of the enemy now, and greeted Dora with a radiant smile.

"Darling," he whispered, "are you not a little bit dissatisfied?"

"Dissatisfied?" She opened her eyes wonderingly.

Recipe for Old Age

DOCTOR'S HINTS TO PEOPLE OF FORTY.

Speaking on "Food and Fitness at Forty," at the Food Exhibition at Olympia, Dr. Charles S. Thomson, medical officer at Deptford, expressed disapproval of the English breakfast.

To keep the lungs clean he recommended the French breakfast of coffee and a roll. A man of 55 has no right to be bald, deaf, stiff in the muscles, obese, with teeth going and some varicose veins.

When we add to over indulgence in food and drink and strain of social and business ambitions, worry, emotional state, anger and grief, then our errors are followed by structural changes in our organs.

Other points in the doctor's recipe for a green old age were:—

Our whole life and well-being depend upon the proper digestion of food, and we need 32 good teeth and 32 bites for each mouthful of food.

A man should visit the dentist every six months if he wants to live long.

Dinner at night is better than a full midday meal. Eat meat once a day only.

Everybody over 40 should take enough food to maintain the lightest weight consistent with perfect health.

Simple diet consists of wholemeal bread, plain biscuits, plain puddings, vegetables, fruit, some meat, fish, milk, butter, and cheese.

Never take alcohol at night, and take very little of it even then.

Every man of 40 who would live to 90 must become a food specialist; the smooth working of his alimentary system is the key to the door leading to a green old age.

He must eat fresh foods and give up the fancy cooking which wrecks the vitamins. Moderation in eating is imperative. Drink plenty of water between meals, fast for a day from time to time, and take a three-mile walk daily. The speaker recommended a three days' fast at times.

Never take alcohol at night, and take very little of it even then.

Every man of 40 who would live to 90 must become a food specialist; the smooth working of his alimentary system is the key to the door leading to a green old age.

He must eat fresh foods and give up the fancy cooking which wrecks the vitamins. Moderation in eating is imperative. Drink plenty of water between meals, fast for a day from time to time, and take a three-mile walk daily. The speaker recommended a three days' fast at times.

Everybody over 40 should take enough food to maintain the lightest weight consistent with perfect health.

Simple diet consists of wholemeal bread, plain biscuits, plain puddings, vegetables, fruit, some meat, fish, milk, butter, and cheese.

Never take alcohol at night, and take very little of it even then.

The woman who uses LUX need never worry about her hands. LUX is as mild as the finest toilet soap. LUX will leave your hands white and soft.

Take Care You Get LUX which is sold only in packages.

Silks, Cottons, Woolens, Flannels, etc., washed with Lux will last longer. Wash your baby's clothes with Lux. Use Lux for all fine fabrics. Lux will never disappoint you. Before you put your Blankets away, wash them with Lux.

Imagine washing your hands with injurious soap for two hours a day. Yet that is what you do when you wash dishes: no wonder your hands get THAT-IN-THE-DISHPAN-APPEARANCE.

Use Lux for washing dishes, it's quicker and cheaper, a teaspoonful of Lux will wash a pan of dishes, and your hands will remain beautiful.

Stockings washed with LUX will give better wear.

Dissolve a tablespoonful of Lux in a bowl of boiling water, then add cold water to make a lukewarm mixture, draw your stocking back and forth through the suds until thoroughly clean, then rinse in warm water twice, now press them between a towel. Don't wring them, hang up to dry or iron them between a towel.

Minister is Determined to Safeguard
 Industries--Violent Fighting Between Rifflians and French Troops--Violent
 Earthquake Shocks Recorded in Ottawa.

WORKING AT GLACE BAY.
 GLACE BAY, N.S., May 6. The men were active at some of the pits of the British Empire Steel Corporation this morning, but only at a colliery were any of the official men doing maintenance work on entering the plant. The producer between 200 and 250 tons were on duty. Any official of the stature of an underground miner was not allowed to go into the mine with the exception of not engineers, who were not stopped. Some members of the U.M.W. were sent back. District Secretary of the U.M.W., Alexander McKay, said this morning if union officers of the local by circular to officials below the rank of underground manager, said the union had no such instructions. District Secretary McKay of the U.M.W. of Nova Scotia issued the following circular to officials, they said, the union of the executive and instructions with regard to picketing officers and members of local unions.

HUGE RAILWAY DEFICIT.
 OTTAWA, May 6. The House of Commons for authority to antedate the imposition of those duties, Mr. Churchill said to-day replying to a question in the House.

FIERCE FIGHTING IN MOROCCO.
 RABAT, French Morocco, May 6. An official communication reports fierce fighting to-day between French and Rifflian troops, in which the French repulsed violent counter attacks, killing many of the enemy and took some prisoners.

HEAVY EARTHQUAKE RECORDED.
 OTTAWA, May 6. Somewhere there has been a terrific earthquake which, if it occurred in an inhabited portion of the globe, must have caused damage akin to that which was experienced in the terrible Tokio earthquake. This is indicated by earth tremors which were recorded last night and early to-day on the seismograph at the Dominion Observatory. The shocks were of such intensity and of so great frequency that officials at the Observatory have been unable to determine the distance of the epicentre.

NOT A SOLUTION.
 MONTREAL, May 6. Addressing the shareholders of the Canadian Pacific Railway at the annual meeting here this afternoon, E. W. Beatty, President of the Company, declared that although the Canadian Pacific was in favor of a co-operative policy which would eliminate as far as possible duplication of the train service on the lines of that railway system and of the Canadian National Railways, such a policy was not sufficient to constitute a solution to Canada's railway difficulties.

ELECTION DISORDERS IN ALGERIA.
 ORAN, Algeria, May 6. Disorders have again broken out and to-day the streets are patrolled by cavalry. Occasionally revolver shots are heard. A few persons have been wounded and many arrests have been made. The disorder began Sunday night as a result of the elections.

EIGHT BODIES RECOVERED.
 PITTSBURG, May 6. Firemen searching the ruins of three Swissvale buildings destroyed by an explosion shortly after midnight this morning had recovered eight bodies at noon to-day.

ANOTHER WAR ON.
 NEW YORK, May 6. Through the censorship accompanying Uncle Sam's blockade of the rum fleet, there filtered to-day news of increases to the greatest dry Armada ever in action. Came, too, suggestions that the Great Lakes as well as the Atlantic would be the scene of a blockade. Twenty-one boats have gone from New York to watch the liquor fleet, boat for boat, on a fifty mile front on a heavy steaming distance from the shore. Reports from Detroit say a dry fleet of ten craft is expected to be ready by summer for action on the Great Lakes. Later it will be supplemented by another fleet, construction of which has started. Rum Row's finish is foreseen by R. Q. Merrick, Federal Prohibition Director for New York and Northern New Jersey. Already increased activities of the coast guards have cut down liquor importation by ninety per cent, he says. The plan of watching the liquor fleet boat for boat is expected to drive the rum selling craft back to their home ports.

SMYTHE REACHES ROME.
 ROME, May 6. George H. C. Smythe, the Canadian canoeist, paddling from London to Rome, arrived here this afternoon and was greeted by large and enthusiastic crowds.

PRINCE IN OSTRICH COUNTRY.
 GEORGE, Cape Colony, May 6. The Prince of Wales arrived here in the midst of the ostrich country to-day. The entire place was a riot of ostrich feathers, even the engines pulling the royal trains being decorated with them.

FRENCH LOSSES.
 PARIS, May 6. The Temps prints a telegram from Fez, not otherwise verified, giving French losses in one of the recent engagements as four officers and 46 men killed and 160 wounded. The message says the Rifflians' losses were ten times as heavy as the French.

INAUGURAL MEETING OF UNITED CHURCH.
 TORONTO, May 6. Plans for an impressive ceremony in connection with the inaugural meeting of the Council of the United Church of Canada are being prepared. Delegates will be present from all three uniting bodies and from all parts of Canada and the United States, as well as from Great Britain and the Mission fields. The plans call for the representatives of the three Churches marching in bodies to Massey Hall, where the inaugural services will take place. Following the first service, the business of the new United Churches of Canada will be transacted at the Metropolitan Methodist Church, which, it was said to-day, will be the Cathedral of the United Church in Canada.

SPORTS BILL REJECTED.
 THE HAGUE, May 6. The Lower Chamber of Parliament to-day rejected the Bill, guaranteeing one million florins for the 1925 Olympic Games at Amsterdam. The normal value of the florin is about 40 cents.

THRILL FOR HINDENBURG.
 BERLIN, May 6. A thrill that was denied William II of Germany, is being prepared, though against his will, 'tis said, for Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, President-Elect of the Republic. Chered by thousands, he is to enter Berlin triumphantly next Monday, through the famous Heerstrasse, "Army Street," which in a straight line leads through the suburbs of Charlottenburg and Tiergarten, direct to Brandenburg Gate and former Imperial Castle. It is said the former Kaiser, about 1906, built the Heerstrasse, planning to use it as an entry to the city at the head of a victorious army.

ARMISTICE DECLARED.
 LONDON, May 6. Negotiations for an armistice between Emir Issand, leader of the Wahabi tribesmen, and King Ali of Hedjaz, beleaguered in Jeddah on the Red Sea by Wahabi forces, have been initiated here, it was announced to-day.

Dawn of History

GREAT DISCOVERY IN MESOPOTAMIA.

The birthplace of the patriarch Abraham, Ur of the Chaldees, has just yielded to the archaeologists some priceless secrets of the early days of civilization in Babylonia. Their discovery was made in the huge tower of the temple erected to the Moon God by King Ur-Engur 2,300 years before the birth of Christ, and it is a great carving in relief giving portraits of the king and his record of the temple's building and other royal achievements. The new find is recorded in a message from Bagdad, and the account of it is issued by the Director of the British Museum, Sir Frederick Kenyon. It was made by the joint expedition of the British Museum and the Museum of the University of Pennsylvania. "Last Year," it is stated, "we laid bare the Ziggurat of Ur, the huge tower of the Moon-god set up by King Ur-Engur about 2,300 years before Christ. Now we have found, beautifully carved in relief upon a limestone slab, which when complete was 5ft across and nearly 16ft high, the portrait of its builder. In one scene the king receives from his gods the order to build the tower. The god holds out to him the rod and line of the architect, the measuring reed and the flaxen line with which Ezekiel, an Exile By The Waters Of Babylon, planned out the city and temple of his dreams. In another scene Ur-Engur shows his obedience by appearing before the god carrying all the tools of the mason, ready himself to lay the first brick of the Ziggurat. In another we see the construction in progress, with the builders carrying the mortar up ladders which are set against the unfinished walls. In other scenes the king celebrates other of his good deeds. He was a great digger of canals, some for irrigation only, others for trade, that ships might pass up from Ur to the Persian Gulf, and take toll of the Arabian coast. Scenes of sacrifice and of music illustrate the piety and the triumphs of the great founder of the Third Dynasty of Ur." The ruins of Ur are about 100 miles from Basra. The present excavations began in 1922, and several important discoveries have already been announced. The city of Ur was one of the first and greatest Sumarian cities of Southern Babylonia. It was founded probably some 3,000 to 4,000 years before Christ. It was

The Core of the Earth

HIDDEN MYSTERIES OF THE DEPTHS.

(By PROF. ARTHUR THOMSON).
Diverse pictures have been given of the interior of the earth: which of them has most basis of fact? The difficulty is in part the indirectness of the evidence, for the deepest borings are but as minute pinpricks on the skin of an orange, as 1 to 2,500! One of the very deepest mines at Johannesburg takes the visitor quickly down about 6,000 feet to near the level of Cape Town but what is that compared with the earth's radius of, say, 3,950 miles. Until enormously deeper borings are made, our surest knowledge of the earth's interior must be indirect.

Science as science cannot even think of the Beginning, but it knows a little about some of the many beginnings. Thus as regards the earth, if we ask how it began, the accredited answer is that it consolidated from a nebular mass. And if we ask where the nebular mass came from, one of the ingenious answers is that it was drawn off from the once immensely larger sun by the attraction of a passing star! Be this as it may, we must see the young earth as a whirling nebular mass, drawing into its gaseous substance a rich catch of meteor-like bodies and planetesimal fragments, and settling down into a molten sphere great heat being generated by the impact of the contributions that made the earth grow. There is much to suggest that when the earth finished growing it was molten.

Then followed ages of cooling and a gradual zoning into a metallic core rich in iron, like the crucible of a blast furnace, and outside that hundreds of miles of silicate rocks; and outside that again a more siliceous and lighter outer layer, froth fifty to seventy-five miles in thickness. As the cooling continued the outer layer divided into a universal granitic crust above, and a thicker basaltic shell below. The viscous inner shell of lighter basic rock, akin to basalt was called, by the great Viennese geologist, Suess, the "sima," a word made up of the first letters of silica and magnesia, which form a great part of heavy basic rocks. On the surface of the sima, like a sugar crust on treacle, floats a thinner skin of sial, principally composed of silica and alumina, which predominate in acid crystalline rocks, like gneiss and granite. The sima forms the floor of the oceans which, on Wegener's ingenious theory, are due to great rifts in the sial and subsequent drifting apart of immense continental masses.

As for our familiar sedimentary rocks, like sandstone and limestone, so interesting in many ways—as regards scenery, soil-making and fossils—they are the results of the endless scrapping and rebuilding of parts of the superficial sial, and form but an insignificant part of the earth's crust.

Thus we may think of the earth with (1) a dense metallic core, (2) hundreds of miles of heavy silicate rock, (3) the viscous sima, (4) the floating silica, and (5) the sedimentary rocks.

The scientific evidence points to the truth of Tennyson's words: "the solid earth on which we tread, in tracts of fluent heat began." It seems that the earth, like the other planets, passed from a gaseous state to a liquid state by the loss of heat radiated from the outside into space. From the liquid or molten state there was a gradual passage into solidity by continued cooling from the surface. But even after solidification of the crust a long time would have to elapse before the surface became cool enough to allow of the condensation of water-vapor. And only after the water-circulation got going, e.g. in the sequence of cloud, rain, streamlet, river, and sea, would there begin the weathering of the surface and the re-disposing of materials which led to the earliest sedimentary rocks.

There has been considerable difference of opinion among authorities in regard to the present state of the earth's core. It is a fiery furnace full of molten iron and other metals, or is it a relatively quiescent, though very hot, solid mass?

The trend of the evidence is towards the second conclusion. In the original cooling of the earth the first solidification would be a superficial unstable crust, contracting as it hardened and breaking into pieces which sank down again into the molten mass. They would be re-melted; new crust would be formed; and so the process would go on until the surface layers of the internal mass had used up so much of their heat that they could not melt any more. As the cooled crust thickened by contributions from below, as an ice-sheet on a pond from the water, there would be less and less out-passage of heat from the core, and the surface would come to depend mainly on the sun for its warmth. But it is well known that the temperature in deep mines is appreciably high, and at depths below fifty miles the temperature must be not far from that at which the rocks melt.

Still more must this be true of a depth of three hundred miles. But it has to be borne in mind that the compression of the internal regions by the load they bear raises the melting point. Moreover, the students of ideas and earthquakes tell us that the earth as a whole behaves as if it were made of steel, and cannot possibly have a Very tender gingerbread can be made with pastry or cake flour. With the coming of hot weather, less meat is required in the diet.

When eggs are used in gingerbread the texture is improved. Gingerbread muffins require more liquid than a loaf of gingerbread.

Pit cherries with a new stub pen point inverted in the holder. Gingerbread muffins require more liquid than a loaf of gingerbread.

Hot chocolate or lemon sauce is nice served with hot gingerbread. Very handy in the kitchen is a grapefruit knife of stainless steel.

"THAT'S LIFE!" They tell me sin and shame and so are hurt and sad. Some cruel passion unaccounted for, true to life, they state; But as they glorify the base and the vice they find, they hold 'tis human to be clean and man to be kind.

The honest man is true to life, though cynics scoff and sneer. He is the pride of every strength of every strength of every town. Though sin and shame and here, the virtues fine and deserve the critic's phrase "life!" for they are human.

There is a thorn upon the man who missed the love and painted but the happy man and wife. Their children romping round the door, and that I say is "life!" This thing called life is not served for vice and sin. Life is a circle wide which struggling mortals try. And though to err is human, long have understood, it's just as human to be true, and kind, and good.

Mrs. Lillian Langtry
(By P. W. LUCE)

The unofficial announcement Mrs. Lillian Langtry has been stored to royal favor as a woman having written her memoirs with a mark of restraint, has brought a remarkable woman once more into limelight. It is now well over a century since she first started world with her beauty, talent, disregard of established customs.

As "The Jersey Lily" of the day and "Mr. Jersey" of the day Mrs. Langtry has been a public figure for her island in the English Channel, but never enthused over her. There have been rare and wonderful temptations.

Jersey is decidedly common and has not yet recovered the shock it sustained when Lily became an actress. Her father, Le Breton, held the most important office in the gift of the Crown in England in the ancient Duchy of Normandy, and it was incredible a dean's daughter should be a fierce white light that beats on stage.

The last occasion on which Langtry visited her old home about twelve years ago, her time was spent on the catching crabs and fishing. She got up as early as six o'clock in the morning to take advantage of the tides.

During this holiday the actress herself started a career over her age. Some of her were rather tactless and rude, and she signed a reporter to check up Langtry's statements with the records.

This is the story he wrote: "A lady's age is hardly a matter for public discussion, but Mrs. Langtry persistently insisted on this. We therefore sought information from official documents." "At the last moment, however, the reporter had qualms of conscience. He could not bring himself to utilize the birth certificate of Le Breton's daughter. We must accept Mrs. Langtry's word as the present age. At the same time, we must call attention to the fact that the British historian, reporter carefully examined the documents relating to the marriage of Lily Le Breton to Edwin Langtry, and find that this occurred about a year before the lady had reached her birthday—assuming, of course, Mrs. Langtry remembers her birthday correctly."

That ended the discussion.

Proceedings at the Legislative Council

OFFICIAL SYNOPSIS.

WEDNESDAY, May 6.

The Council met at 2 o'clock pursuant to adjournment.

HON. THE PRESIDENT read a message from the House of Assembly requesting the return of the Bills relating to "Crown Lands, Mines and Minerals," "Of Payment of Certain Fees and Charges by Stamps" and "The Operation of Saw Mills." On motion the Council concurred.

HON. PRESIDENT read a message from the House of Assembly announcing the concurrence in the Council's Amendments to the Supreme Court Bill.

HON. PRESIDENT read a message from the House of Assembly acquainting the Council that they had passed the following Bills: "An Act for granting to His Majesty certain duties on goods, wares and merchandise"; "An Act Respecting Certain Retiring Allowances," and "An Act Respecting the Avalon Telephone Company" and asking concurrence therein.

The Bill entitled "Of Certain Duties on Goods, etc.," was read a first and second time and ordered to be committed on Hon. Mr. Shea in the chair. HON. SIR M. G. WINTER regretted that the suggestion he had made earlier in the session regarding the duty on pork and beef had not been acted upon. Whilst the duty is taken off to a certain extent, it is only removed on the higher grades of pork which are consumed by the well to do, but the lower grades, such as pigs heads, feet, jowls and ribs, consumed altogether by the poorer classes, have the duty not only continued but increased. This seemed extraordinary to him. The rich man's pork is free and the poor man's increased. The high class pork, which costs 35 or 40 dollars a barrel, is free, while on the poor class, costing $20 to $25, there is a duty of two to three dollars a barrel. He felt sure that when he first made the suggestion that this was an oversight. He had no idea that this was to continue. If it is found necessary to enlarge the revenue they could have left beef and pork alone. What is the good of taking the duty off these and putting it on necessities like tea and sugar? Take rice, for instance, this is just as necessary as flour. Again split peas which show 100 per cent. increase and round peas which are used extensively by Outport people are increased three hundred per cent. What justification is there for that. Every necessity of life has an addition of duty, more or less. It was incomprehensible to him. If it is necessary to get a revenue get it from the richer classes. The increased duty on yeast will mean an extra ten cents on every barrel of flour. Beans are also increased 100 per cent. This item is used immensely by the poorer classes, over two million pounds being imported annually. Every government that comes into power tinkers with the tariff so much so that the people in business do not know what to do. If a merchant decides to import goods he has to wait and see if the tariff is to be altered, for it may be unwise to order anything. He had understood that last year when the Government came into power that they would go into this matter and endeavour to make a perfect tariff, but this one pleases nobody. Changes have been made and more will have to be made.

HON. MR. MORINE said the present tariff is in the main the report of the Commission appointed by the Government of which Hon. Sir M. G. Winter was a member, and further, more its services were paid for while he was a member. That commission had been appointed by his (Sir M. G. Winter's) Government, and he being one who was greatly interested in the Commission's work should have known as much about its work as anyone in the country. That Commission was a representative one; Hon. Dr. Mosdell was Secretary, Hon. Mr. C. P. Ayre, Mr. Brownrigg, J. V. O'Dea, H. V. Hutchings, F. W. Angel, M. Greene, J. J. McKay and W. Piercy were members who had been chosen because they represented all brands of trade. The present Government had adopted the Report of the Commission appointed. There have been departures from it and these in the main have been a lowering of rates, for duty had been taken off flour, gasoline, pork, beef and kerosene this season, and other changes reducing the burden of taxation would be considered. Personally he felt sorry that the Government instead of accepting the tariff on faith and subjecting themselves to criticisms, just and unjust, had not referred the matter to another tribunal. There was, he thought, a great deal to be said against the confusion caused by the constant changes, and in favour of permanent classification. He agreed also that it is most desirable to have the tariff carefully considered so that changes would be avoided. During the coming year changes would probably have to be made where experience had proved the rates were unfair, so that these regulations might be considered experimental. If the present duties were compared with those imposed before the 25 per cent. was taken off in 1922 he doubted whether the rates in the Bill before the House would be higher than they were at that time. He (Hon. Mr. Morine) was surprised and disappointed to hear a gentleman of Mr. Winter's standing raising the class cry of rich and poor, and saying that the poor man was discriminated against as regards the duty on pork and beef. The rich man will not grow fat on this amount of pork he eats; this article is mainly used by the fisherman and working people. It was hardly fair to put all the blame on the Government when this is the work of the Commission appointed by the honourable gentleman's friends. The cry raised about the rich man and the poor man is all for de roll and of such we have heard too much. Taxes are paid by the producers and the middle classes, and although we might put it in the first instance on the rich men in trade, he passes it on to the poor man. Taxes were put on by previous Governments, and the burden of taxation largely increased. Millions were added to the debt of the country, and their bills have to be met by the present Government, which is expected to sit silent while they are slated by the men who did these things. There is only one way to reduce taxation, that is by reducing expenditure. He believed expenditure could be cut down a great deal, but the trouble is when you endeavour to save a salary by the simple process of getting clear of a man, you are called the worst Government that ever was. It is regrettable that this House has lost its power to deal with bills of this kind, and he believed the Colony had paid a price in the past and will in the future for this Act of 1917. He hoped to see the day when it could aid in financial matters, and aid the Government to govern wisely and well. Hon. Mr. Morine trusted that during the year the Government would endeavour to make such changes as would be necessary in a permanent manner.

HON. MR. WINTER objected to the discrimination made with regard to the higher grades of pork. He could not see why duty had been taken off the higher grades and left on the lowest. It was rank injustice to the poor man. For years and years there have been defects in the tariff, and a Commission consisting of reputable gentlemen of ability, had been appointed to deal with the matter and to present their report to the Government. Hon. Mr. Winter did not consider it the duty of the Commission to make the tariff, that he thought was the duty of the Minister of Finance. It was not fair that the blame should be thrown on the Commission. The Government had acted wisely in appointing such a Commission and when their report was presented it was the duty of the Government to consider the recommendations made, and those approved of should have been adopted, the others set aside.

HON. MR. ANDERSON agreed with the last speaker that the determining of the tariff should be in the hands of the Minister of Finance. In fixing the tariff the expectation of trade should be considered. In some sections of the Bill, tariff on steel was given as 42 per cent and iron 48 per cent. In his opinion, had these percentages been either 40 or 50 it would have saved time. He hoped that during the current year such changes as had been referred to by the Honourable Leader of the Government would be made.

HON. DR. MOSDELL said that he had been associated with the Tariff Commission, as Secretary, for three years, and would like to set right some of the misapprehensions with regard to it. The Commission was given certain duties to perform, first the correction of certain errors in schedule, which was submitted to the Board of Trade for suggestions, and that schedule was returned with practically no alterations made in it. The many different rates of duty were so arranged and simplified as to show one rate and matters so adjusted as to facilitate trade in passing entries. The Commission had instructions from the then Minister of Finance not to set rates and the Commission had no power to fix duties but was to take care that in the revision it did nothing to reduce the revenue below its ordinary level.

HON. MR. MORINE desired to know if these instructions were in writing. HON. DR. MOSDELL did not know, but there were instructions along these lines. When this amended classification and schedule was handed in to the Government of the day, the Commission had only a general idea as to the amount of revenue which would be raised under it. When the report was given the Government, the Minister of Finance of that day said it would be impossible to deal with the recommendations right away, and that it would take a year to give the report full consideration. In regard to the reflections made on the manner in which the Commission had done its work, Hon. Dr. Mosdell said every arrangement in this whole schedule had been put there endorsed by the trade of the country. The Commission acted in a judicial capacity, were representative of all branches of political thought and no particular bias was recognized. The Commission took it for granted that the Government would accept the responsibility of the tariff. If the recommendations showed an excess tariff the hope was that reductions would be made on the necessities of life. The great trouble of the Commission was in grouping together the various items to make a standard tariff.

HON. MR. MORINE said that the reason why the Government of the day did not revise the tariff was because it might be a reflection on the Commission. As a matter of fact the acceptance of the report was an expression of confidence in their work. There was no reflection on the Commission. They were held responsible for the tariff but not reflected upon. The Commission had authority to consult the trade and receive recommendations, but no authority to increase or reduce the revenue. No Commission of this kind can ever make a suitable tariff, because they must first know how much revenue is to be produced, so that it should be done by the Minister of Finance. Mr. Brownrigg, the Minister at that time, was not present during the hearings of the Commission; the membership might be experts in their own lines of business, but not in other lines, or in the finances of the country. They were only considering their own particular interests, and one might concede to the other to gain one's own particular advantage, and the general interests of the revenue and the finances of the Colony would have no representation at all. The Honourable gentleman had said that the report had received the endorsement and support of the whole trade, while as a matter of fact, the Board of Trade was only sent one half of the report, the classification, and not the rates. Complaint is not against the classification but the ratings that were recommended by the Commission. The whole affair should be a lesson to future Governments and parliaments that the responsibility of making tariffs rests broadly on the shoulders of the Government of the day. Hon. Mr. Morine hoped less harm than some people anticipated would come from this report, and that anything improper might be changed next session without too much disturbance to the trade with whom he had great sympathy.

HON. DR. MOSDELL could not see how any Government could appoint any Commission but one representing the trade. He wanted to thank the present Government for the commission paid the Commission by taking such an important financial matter from them. They must have had a great deal of confidence in the Commission, or perhaps the Government had been careless in a very important matter.

The Committee rose and reported the Bill without amendment. It was then read a third time and passed. An order was to be sent to the House of Assembly with a message to that effect.

A Momentous Session Concluded

This afternoon His Excellency the Governor prorogued the General Assembly which had been continuously in session since February 18th.

Few sessions of our Parliament have been more strenuous both for the Government and Opposition alike, few have been so free of the acrimonious disputes and personal invective, and few if any can show such a volume of practical and progressive legislation as has been enacted.

The main feature of the most important measures has been to promote development politically and economically. Of the former, the Redistribution Act marks the beginning of a new era in our political life, by making the franchise of equal value throughout the country, by increasing the responsibility of the individual representative, and by giving him an opportunity to study more closely the needs of his constituents. The Act which enfranchises the women of Newfoundland has placed them on the same footing as their sisters in the other parts of the Empire, and has introduced a new element into the body politic, the beneficial effect of which cannot be overestimated.

No greater impetus can be given to the industrial development of the country than by the promotion of intercourse between its various sections. A definite road building policy has been adopted, which, besides opening up new lands, and consequently new industries, will prove a great incentive to tourists, will provide immediately remunerative employment, and the plan of operation has been devised in such a manner that the money expended will no longer pass through the political channels which formerly robbed it of so much of its effectiveness.

Measures have been taken to safeguard the lobster fishery, to ensure the greater safety and security of those who follow the sea, and to further encourage our chief industry by scientific investigation and other means. An agricultural policy has been formulated and provision has been made to ascertain the value of our mineral resources. In this field the time has come when the potential wealth lying below the surface should be explored, and if it is as extensive as we have every reason to believe it is, every effort should be made to turn it to practical account.

For the first time for years a thorough and businesslike statement has been laid before the public in order that everyone may know the exact financial position of the country. True, it does not reflect much credit on past administrations. It likewise reveals the grave responsibility which the present Government have shouldered, but with such a chart in front of them, it will be possible to avoid the mistakes of their predecessors, and in fact its usefulness has already been clearly demonstrated. In the Civil Service, the system of perquisites has been discarded, the various salaries have been definitely specified, and before next session it is understood a plan of reorganization will be devised.

Prime Minister Monroe has every reason to feel highly gratified at the result of what has been to all intents and purposes his first session as Leader. New to political life, he has quickly acquired an intimate knowledge of statescraft, and his natural ability methods have stood him in good stead in the difficult and responsible task that he has voluntarily undertaken. He has not only made a reputation for himself, but his conduct has been an inspiration to his colleagues, and has welded together more firmly than ever the bonds which unite the Party.

Important as has been the session in the Lower House, it has been one of the most notable ever held by the Legislative Council. Attention has already been called to many of the able addresses which have been delivered in that Chamber since the Opening, and the public have had full opportunity to judge of the beneficial influence exercised upon the various measures which have come within the scope of its authority.

The Council consists of twenty-four members. Of these one has been unable to attend throughout the session, and one or two others have been out of the country for a part of the time. In spite of this, however, as an instance of the close attention which has been given to business, and of the devotion of the members to the country's welfare, it is worthy of placing on record that there has been an average attendance throughout the sittings of three quarters of the total number of members. It is questionable whether that record has ever been equalled.

Fully conversant with every phase of the public life of the Colony, and disposed to take an unbiased view of every issue, the members have the advantage of being able to estimate with a remarkable degree of accuracy the effect which the various measures are likely to have, and in this respect in particular their services to the State are invaluable. It is a matter for regret that some eight years ago the powers of the Council were considerably curtailed. Never has the Chamber shown greater justification for the restoration of its full authority in all matters, and it is to be hoped that it will not be long before these restrictions are removed.

In conclusion, a word of praise is due to the excellent and faithful manner in which the reportorial staff of both Houses have enabled the public to follow closely the proceedings from beginning to end. Their duties have been most arduous, and have demanded judgment and discretion, and both the public and the press are under a great obligation to them.

Kultur!

A decade to-day since the world was shocked by the news of the most ghastly crime ever committed on the high seas, the sinking of the Lusitania by a German submarine with the loss of 1134 precious lives. Were it not for this dastardly act and the other outrages of a similar nature committed by the Germans against harmless merchant ships, the historian might find much to admire in the enterprise and daring of their naval men, but deliberately they blackened their own characters. Now after ten years have passed the world recalls with a shudder those cold-blooded actions, and finds in them the chief obstacle to the resuming of relations on a footing of friendliness and trust.

Accident on Bell Island

It is learned that a serious accident occurred at Bell Island yesterday morning, the victim being Patrick, the 17 year old son of John Doherty. According to particulars received, the young man was struck by two empty cars, attached to a laden car, and had his leg leg badly crushed. He was attended by Dr. Lynch, the company's surgeon.

The Speech From the Throne

At the closing ceremony of the House of Assembly this afternoon His Excellency the Governor delivered the following speech:

Mr. President and Honourable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council; Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Assembly.

At the close of a busy and profitable Session, I am pleased to be able to relieve you of your Legislative duties, and more particularly so at a season when your private affairs urgently demand your attention. The summoning of the Legislature at an earlier date than usual has been clearly justified, so much so that it may be both expedient and convenient to convene you in future at an even earlier date.

The measure providing for the Redistribution of Seats in the House of Assembly is of supreme importance, and the unanimity with which it was considered attests to your conviction that it is not only fair in principle and correct in detail, but also is bound to have far reaching consequences. Equal in importance is the enactment bestowing upon women of twenty-five years and upwards the right to vote and to be voted for, as representatives in the Assembly. The high standard of intelligence of the women of this Colony is adequate assurance that good will accrue to this endowment of equality.

The provision for the creation of a Highroads Commission, the enactment of the Motor Traffic Act, and the confirmation of the contract for the erection of a Hotel in St. John's are steps in a Tourist policy to capitalize the scenic and kindred attractions of this Colony, for the pleasure of the world at large, and for the profit of our people. If the prosperity of Newfoundland is to be increased it is essential that the means for easy and rapid transportation be provided.

In August last, at the close of the midsummer Session of this Assembly, I expressed the hope that our finances would shortly return to the normal. Progress in that respect has been slower than was hoped for. Debts and obligations inherited by my Government have had to be discharged, and the abnormal conditions of past years have proved exceedingly difficult to adjust. The old Customs Tariff required drastic reformation because the classification was antiquated and unscientific. Additional confusion was caused by taxation having been imposed by various amendments which have proved to be unsuitable to present conditions. A new classification has now been adopted based on the report of a Tariff Commission appointed by a preceding Government. Its operation will be carefully watched, and as the result of experience gained you will be invited to correct any anomalies that may be shown to exist.

Last year, as you will remember, my Government placed flour and gasoline on the free list, and you have now abolished the duties on beer, pork and kerosene oil, and reduced the sales tax by half. The Income Tax has also been repealed. Its incidence, although ostensibly paid on profits, was found to be harmful to trade and enterprise, and therefore injurious to fishermen, labourers, and other wage earners who depend on the free exploitation of capital for employment.

The Dry Dock in St. John's was shown on examination to require far more extensive repairs and alterations than had been anticipated, and on expert Canadian advice it has been decided to rebuild and extend it. The work will shortly be begun, but its completion and final equipment will be a matter of many months. Additional public works include the re-railing of the Southern end of the Railway from St. John's to Clarendville, the construction and reconditioning of certain important roads, and in addition the projected erection of the Hotel and a Flour Mill in St. John's.

The outlook for the steady employment of labour is further enhanced by the commencement at an early date of the manufacture of paper at the large mills on the Humber, and by the increase in output at the Anglo-Newfoundland Development Company's works at Grand Falls. It is hoped that the need for able-bodied help will disappear entirely. These various activities should result in the return to Newfoundland of many of her sons who have been compelled through the stringencies of recent years to seek employment far away from their native land.

By the Act for the Encouragement of Shipbuilding and Rebuilding, my Government has recognized the special needs of the fisherman. During the war years the fishing fleet fell into considerable disrepair; later the great cost of material and labour, coupled with the poor prices obtained for fish in the seasons previous to last year, discouraged the fishermen to such an extent that many abandoned the industry. The promise that a bounty would be provided stimulated rebuilding last winter, and the measure fulfilling that promise has now become law. More vessels are about to prosecute the main industry of the Colony than have sailed for some time past. The safety of those who travel by the sea has been immeasurably increased by your enactment for the annual survey of sealing steamers and all manner of passenger carrying vessels.

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Assembly: I thank you for the liberal supplies which you have granted. It has been, and will be the constant effort of my Government to reduce expenditure to the lowest possible point at which the efficiency of the Administration can be maintained.

Mr. President and Honourable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council; Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Assembly.

I desire both to thank you for your labours, and to congratulate you upon the many important measures to which this Session has given birth. I can but wish you, in return, abundant success and prosperity in your personal affairs.

When we review the events which go to make up the history of Newfoundland for this year, we see before us the signs of re-awakening prosperity and we can but feel strengthened in our faith in the recuperative powers of the Empire's Oldest Colony.

United Schools Campaign

HANDSOME SUM OF $94,561.50 IN TWO DAYS.

Following the drive started on Tuesday by the United Schools Campaign workers, when the gratifying sum of $47,692.50 was secured, the teams again met in the Presbyterian Hall last night at nine o'clock to report another most successful accomplishment in full strength. The meeting opened with Mr. Gordon Christian at the piano and went with a swing. After the singing of the Newfoundland Ode and several popular songs the meeting settled down to business checking the returns under the direction of the Treasurer, Mr. H. R. Brooks. The scoring was efficiently handled by the Secretary, Mr. Angus Reid. Each Captain's report was received with cheers. All of the flags changed hands with the exception of team 16, D. Division under Mr. H. N. Burt holds the division flag. Many of the Captains reported voluntary subscriptions from our Roman Catholic and other friends who were anxious to help. The Hon. R. E. Bishop reported for the Initial Gift Committee the splendid sum of $27,400.00. Mr. R. F. Horwood gave a splendid address reviewing the hard work of the United Boards and now the campaign workers and referred to the splendid sum of $27,400.00. Mr. R. F. PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

May 6th.—The weather cold all this day, the wind being still easterly, and I do feel my usual rheum coming on, to my very great discontent. Talking with Mr. D. Baird, who is lately returned from the United States, he tells me of a lecture on Newfoundland by Major Taff, that he did attend in Boston, and was much struck by the great applause which greeted lantern slides of divers places in the island. Each group did loudly cheer the picture of their own home town and vied with one another in comparing their rival advantages. I learn this day how the importers do hold their annual meeting, and, among other things, give two extra holidays in September. At this meeting, they do also arrange the opening hours of the Xmas trade, the shoppes to remain open in the night only from the 14th day of December. The House goes about the ending of its business with despatch and do pass the Street Railway Bill with many modifications. The fare to be 7 cents on the new electric coaches, after the service has been improved. The amendment to the Legislative Disabilities Bill concerning bye-elections, which the Council did send down, is rejected, and upon the Bill being returned to the Upper House, the clause concerning bye-elections is struck out completely. All business being completed, arrangements are made for the prorogation of the House to-morrow. Home all this night, have divers matters of business to attend to, and so, to bed.

IN LOVING MEMORY

Of my dear husband, Laurence Hollahan, drowned at sea with the sinking of the ill-fated schooner Herbert Warren, 1923. Grant him eternal rest, O Lord. We miss you as the days roll on. Your smiling face can see; In memory of the days gone by, Before you crossed the sea.

ANNOUNCEMENT.—Mr. and Mrs. John Mayo, 6 Freshwater Road, wish to announce the engagement of their second eldest daughter, Marion Kathleen to Mr. Joseph McCuskey, of Glasgow, Scotland. Wedding to take place shortly.

To Prosecute the Labrador Fishery

The three-masted Danish built schooner Harriet, is now being outfitted at Crosbie & Co.'s wharf to prosecute the fishery on the Labrador. The Harriet was purchased by Crosbie & Co., last fall from Earle & Son, Pogo, and is said to be admirably adapted for the present enterprise. Capt. Peter Carter goes as master of the voyage with Baxter Barry, as mate. She will carry a crew of twelve or fourteen men. A powerful motor boat in addition to a smaller one will be included in the outfit. The larger motor will be of sufficient power to move the vessel from harbor to harbor as the fishery is pursued. Four traps will be carried and in other respects the vessel is being well found. It is probable she will be ready to proceed early next week. Messrs. Crosbie & Co. are to be congratulated on their enterprise which is a tangible recognition of their faith in our main industry, the fishery.

MAGISTRATE'S COURT.—A man taken in for safe-keeping, was discharged; There were no drunkards appearing before Judge Morris this morning.

MARRIED.

At New York, on May 6th, at the Grace Church, New York City, by the Rev. W. Russell Bowie assisted by the Rev. Canon Bayly, Edwina Hutton Woods, daughter of Walter H. Woods, of Brookline, Mass., to Hubert Francis Rendell, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Rendell, of St. John's, Nfld.

DIED.

Passed peacefully away, at Placentia, on April 29th, Erida, the beloved daughter of Alphonus Sparrow. Left to mourn are father, sister and two brothers. May the Sacred Heart of Jesus have mercy on her soul.

You will be sure to enjoy the Toy Symphony at the Concert in aid of the Child Welfare, on May 14th, at the Synod Hall.—may7,11

Shipment of Rails Arrive

S.S. Lord Londonderry, Capt. Hodder, arrived from Barrow-in-Furness yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, with a shipment of 5,000 tons of rail and accessories for the Nfld. Government Railway. Upon arrival the ship anchored in the stream and later docked at the Furness Wharf premises for orders. It is not definitely known yet as to whether the ship will land her cargo here or Shear's Content. Owing to the ship being heavily laden and slightly too deep to dock at the railway pier, instructions were given last night to have the Dredge Priestman remove some of the silt near the Dry Dock basin to-day. The dredge is now working there, and it is quite possible that after one foot of the mud is removed, the ship will be enabled to dock without any trouble. The rails have been imported from the Barrow Haematite Steel Co., Ltd., London, and will be used for re-railing the eastern end of the railway line. The rails are 33 feet long, or 3 feet longer than the old, and weigh 70 lbs. to the yard, or 770 lbs. to the full rail. The number of rails in the shipment is roughly 16,000. As soon as the rails was sent to the Legislative Council for concurrence.

The House went into Committee of the Whole on Bill respecting Corner Brook Titles.

THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE pointed out that the rights of the Nfld. Government were protected by the wording of the bill.

THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION took occasion to question the responsibility of the Government in the matter of the Dominion Co-operative Building Society.

THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE explained that the responsibility of the Government for the $50,000 guarantee has not yet been decided upon by the Supreme Court. It is, he was informed, not likely that anything near the amount involved will be realized from the winding up proceedings.

The Committee on the Corner Brook Titles reported passing the Bill without amendment. It was accordingly put through all its stages.

Council's Amendments to Legislative Disability Bill, was given first and second reading. On the motion for concurrence, the Minister of Justice made some observations on the provisions, embodied by the Council.

He felt that they were unfair and unwise and there was no necessity for the Legislative going as far as it does.

MR. WARREN, rather than see the amendments go on the Statutes, would have the former practice of members going back for re-election continued. He pointed out that no country in the world required a declaration of loyalty to a party leader. The legislation branded a man as one wanting integrity and one lacking in honesty.

MR. SCAMMELL, and MR. PUDDISTER totally opposed the amendments. The latter thought it would be a sorry day when a man going to the polls would have to sign a declaration of loyalty to a party leader. He thought the same spirit existed in members as existed in 1918 when a tie resulted in a deadlock. He regarded the Council's Amendments as freak legislation, which should not be entertained.

MR. HALFYARD reiterated the stand he took at the last session and thought the objections were overdrawn by previous speakers.

THE COLONIAL SECRETARY said he thought that the amendment presupposed wrong-doing and to pass such legislation would be condemning oneself out of one's own mouth. He submitted that the spirit of the Election Act would be outraged by the amendment and the House should have sufficient faith in its membership to refrain from adopting such legislation. Amendment not agreed to. No. 2, 3, 4, and 5 amendments were not agreed to.

THE PRIME MINISTER, in reply to a question by Mr. Warren, in reference to the purchase of a parcel of 3,000 barrels of herring by parties in St. Pierre, from the fishermen of Port au Bay, explained that every precaution had been taken to ensure that the spirit of the Act would not be violated and as a guarantee had required the parties to sign a bond for $5,000.

The Order Paper was completed at 6:15 and at 6:45 the House adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Big Bill at the Majestic To-Day

Last night Majestic patron tenders Adams & Cheney a right royal reception. The thunderous applause accorded each item is assuredly the best evidence of the excellent of these two artists, who to say the least, are rightly designated "marvels." They certainly lived up to their reputation and recommendations sent in advance. To-night, a complete change of programme is arranged. The feature "Hutch Stirs 'em Up", adapted from Harry Harding's "celebrated novel 'The Hawk of Redde', featuring the dare devil Chas. Hutchinson, provides a thrill a minute. In addition to "Hutch Stirs 'em Up" there is a comedy, which is a "screach from start to finish."

The programme set forth by Adams & Cheney, is as follows:—

- 1.—España Walks Charbrier.
- 2.—Caprice Vennols (request) Krelser.
- 3.—Will You Remember Me? Popular song.
- 4.—"All Alone" and "I Wonder." Popular songs.
- 5.—Sextette from Lucia (request), song.
- 6.—Popular Medley.

Mr. Cheney announced last night that a special programme of music would be offered on Saturday afternoon for the ladies and children, also that the Management have arranged a number of comedy pictures, which will appeal to them very much.

Everyone is talking of the Majestic show, and everywhere one can hear praise of the artistes.

You are just reminded of the fact that on Monday, the feature of features, with 1000 American beauties, will be shown, when William Fox presents "The Temple of Venus", with Mary Philbin and a star cast. Don't forget "The Temple of Venus."

Ranger Enquiry
Continued

In the above, two witnesses were called yesterday afternoon, Mr. Geo. Tuff, who was second hand in the ship, and Mr. John Roberts, the barrel-man.

George Tuff, sworn, examined by Mr. Bradley—Witness was second hand on the Ranger the past Spring. The ship left on March 9th and proceeded down the northeast coast. There was trouble this Spring; it began on March 11th. On that day he saw the Chief Engineer pass from his engine room to the captain's room. That struck him as remarkable, as he never saw it done before. He had been 26 springs to the ice, and 6 of them in the Ranger. Witness was anxious to know what was the trouble but could not find out immediately. After about 5 minutes the Captain came to the witness and told him there was trouble with the boiler, that it was pretty serious and they may have to blow down. A conference was then held, at which there were present the Captain, Chief Engineer, Barrel-man Roberts and witness. He went down in the engine room and was shown where the hole was, and he saw a place that was bubbling. He put up his finger to test the place but his arm was caught before he could touch it, being told he might put a bigger hole in it. After the conference there was a concrete box put around the hole, and this stood until the 31st of March. On this date witness understood that much steam was again escaping and that it was not safe to go on. The ship was then steered north for Groaia Islands where they arrived on April 2nd. There the deck pumps were got ready to keep the bilges dry so as to allow the men to make the repairs. The next time he saw the boiler was when it was cold and the doors were taken off. He saw then, a hole in the spot where he was going to put his finger. Roughly he would say the hole was about 3/4 inch in diameter; it was not exactly round. The thickness of the plate was, he would judge, about 1-16 of an inch. This hole was on the port side. On the starboard side, about the same distance from the door, there was another hole, something similar to the one on the other side. The engineer then got to work and put on patches on both sides of the boiler. This work was completed on April 7th; the boiler was filled by hand and after this steam was got up. They did not leave Groaia Islands that day because as soon as there was sufficient steam got up the patch gave out and the boiler had to be blown down again. There was some improvement made to the patches this time, and after steam was got up again they left on April 11th. After that they went into Conche because, as he heard, the boiler was giving out again. The distance is about 11 miles and the ship proceeded there by low pressure there being about 55 lbs. of steam on at the time and the ship was making about four knots. They then left Conche and the next place called at was Twillingate, which was reached the same night. The next morning they set out again calling at Wesleyville that night, after which they came on to St. John's. Coming there were favourable winds, and the steamer was on. After the box was put on it was the Chief Engineer's opinion that it was too risky to leave it any longer, at any rate that it what the witness understood.

Cross-examined by Mr. McNelly—Witness was first told of the damage by the Captain. He understood from what the Captain said that the danger was not to life, but that the voyage would have to be given up. At the conference the Chief Engineer did not say he would have to blow down. He said nothing about blowing down in the presence of the witness. After the cement box was put on steam was got up, and as a matter of fact the voyage was continued; they were then about 45 miles from the Groaia Islands. The trouble again started on March 31st, and as far as the witness knows it was not decided until April 4th to go into the Groaia Islands. They reached there the same day as they set out to go. The other days were taken up getting seals. Coming some Cape Bonavista was passed at or 8.30 a.m.

Cross-examined by Mr. Winter—Witness had been 6 Springs in the Ranger. For the past two he has been second hand; previously he was barrel-man. He knows the Ranger very well, she was doing alright this Spring as far as going through ice is concerned. The position the steamer was in, was not a safe one in which to blow down; witness would think the proper thing would be to go to port. His twenty-six years of experience does not embrace anything about boilers. Witness could not say what effect it would have if the boiler had been blown down the first day. Probably Twillingate would be reached in a day, but ice conditions at the time were not favourable as far as they knew. You could only judge the distance you could see, and there may have been heavy ice on the side of them which would prevent reaching any port for a long time.

John Roberts, sworn, examined by Mr. Bradley—Witness was at the ice in the Ranger this Spring, in the capacity of barrel-man. There was trouble with the boiler during the Spring, it first took place on March 11th. The captain came to his room which was shared by Mr. Tuff, and told them that the boiler had given out and they would probably have to blow down. They said that conditions due to slob ice would not permit such a thing at the time. A conference was then held. Witness did not take part in this, but it was decided to put on a concrete box. On March 31st, the boiler trouble again developed, and the Engineer ordered the ship to port in order to blow down and they set out for Groaia Islands, which was reached on April 2nd. On the morning of the 4th witness went down to see the boiler and he saw holes in it on the port and starboard sides. The holes were not exactly round, but their size would be about 1 inch or 1 1/2 inches. He felt the plate to see the thickness and there was a feather edge on them. The boiler was then patched, but just as steam was got up the patches blew out and the boiler had to be blown down again. The Engineer said that the steam was got on rather too quickly. Witness did not know or hear of anyone hurrying the Engineer to put steam on the boiler. After they set out the Captain ordered the witness to go in the barrel and keep the ship towards the Horse Islands. After being out some time he felt the ship turn to port, and wondering what was happening he came down from the barrel to see what was wrong, and he was told the patches were blown out again and they would have to go to Conche. After getting there it was decided to abandon the voyage in the Ranger. There was a message received from the owners saying they were going to send down the Viking and that the men of the Ranger would transfer to the former ship. It was found out after, that it was too late, by the time the Viking's seals were landed. There were 70 men satisfied to do this in the Viking, but the balance of the crew wanted to stay in the Ranger if she was suitable. Eventually, however, it was too late by the time the Viking's seals were discharged. They did not come home direct, they harboured at Twillingate and Wesleyville. Coming along about five knots were made; it was a favourable time and all the seals was on. There was a conference about the end of March between the Captain, second hand, chief engineer and witness. The Engineer wanted to have the ship blown down he said it was dangerous as the boilers were too near the sludge hole door, to fasten. The position they were in when the trouble occurred, was not a safe one for blowing down.

He has been 33 years going to the ice and was in the Ranger one spring before. He heard the Engineers say there was a danger of being scalded in the engine room.

Cross-examined by Mr. McNelly—When the Captain came to the room of witness and told him of the trouble he asked them if they thought it a good place to blow down, and they said it was not. There was no suggestion made of going to port. It did not occur to the witness, as if there was any danger except by blowing away if the ship was burnt down. He did not know how serious the damage was, but he was a bit nervous as in a time like that you cannot say but the boiler would blow out altogether. After the first trouble was fixed they went after the seals until March 31st, when the second trouble occurred. They came from Conche to St. John's via Twillingate and Wesleyville. The latter place was left about 4 o'clock in the morning, and they arrived here at 8 o'clock in the evening. The ship's usual speed is about 6 or 7 knots.

Adjournment was then taken until noon to-day, when the evidence of Commander Howley will be taken. This is being done so that Mr. Forbes may have an opportunity of hearing this evidence; he will not be able to be present at any other time as he is going to New York this afternoon to inspect the boilers of the S S. Silvia and Rosalind.

The Ranger enquiry was resumed this morning when Commander R. Howley, R.N., was called to give expert evidence. Witness said he was a marine engineer of the British navy and was an engineer commander since 1918. He was for 29 years in the navy as engineer. Witness made an examination of the Ranger's boiler some time ago. He made an inspection of the top portion of the boiler first. He saw nothing there that could be called particular wear except some short stays behind the combustion chamber. A good many of these had been replaced. He was satisfied that the boiler as far as this portion was concerned was in good condition. Inspecting the lower portion of the shell where it showed signs of pitting, he drilled a hole and found the thickness of the shell 1 1/16 of an inch. The plate originally was 3/4 inch thick.

Tragedies of the Old Bailey

(By CHARLES KINGSTON.)

Few visitors to the Black Museum at Scotland Yard give more than a passing glance to a formidable-looking set of iron chains which, though labelled "Flower Land Pirates," usually fails to recall to their minds one of the most sensational dramas of the sea, and the Old Bailey the world has ever known.

The beginning of the trouble was the indiscriminate recruiting of a polyglot crew, for to man a ship with Spaniards, Greeks, Turks, Chinamen, a Frenchman, a Norwegian and a negro—all of them hard cases—was simply inviting mutiny.

There was scarcely a member of this precious collection who had not in his time committed murder, and its officers quickly realized that the only way to ensure command being obeyed was to accompany it with clenched fist or shining revolver. But to such a sum discipline was more repellent than death, and after some days at sea they formed a plot to murder their superiors and take possession of the ship.

Then followed a drama of the sea which reads like an extract from a novel by Clark Russell. The conspirators having agreed on their plans, four of them entered the captain's cabin on the stroke of midnight and shot him dead. While this was in progress, another quartette of ruffians seized the first mate, who was the captain's brother, and threw him overboard.

A council of war was now held to decide the fate of the second mate, and that officer's throat was not cut only because the crew were so ignorant that none of them could navigate the ship to port. Consequently, the second mate was given this task, a mutineer standing over him day and night with a loaded revolver to see that he did not lead them into a trap.

Careless of Human Life.

To the unfortunate mate it must have seemed like voyage through hell itself. For weeks the ship crawled on the mutineers indifferent to the slow passage of time because they found forgetfulness, and what they considered happiness, in bronching the numerous cases of champagne which constituted the cargo.

These drinking orgies lasted until they came in sight of the River Plate. Then, having scuttled the vessel, they took to the boats and disappeared. The mate, however, in spite of a strict surveillance, succeeded in conveying information to the Brazilian Government, and shortly afterwards seven of the mutineers were captured and sent home to England for trial.

The dock at Old Bailey has never harbored such a collection of villainous-looking cut-throats as the seven murderers when they stood in a double row to have their fate settled by a judge and jury. Whatever signs of terror they had evinced on their arrest, the journey from South America had removed them, and they seemed completely indifferent to their fate.

But any observant person in the crowded court must have read in this callous attitude their contempt for human life, and there were moments when, as the prisoners muttered to one another in undertones, one could almost fancy they had the weapons of murder still in their hands.

After a very careful trial all seven were found guilty and sentenced to death, and then the Home Secretary held another investigation with a view to ascertaining if any of the convicts were less culpable than the others. Eventually he reprieved two, and to the governor of Newgate, in whose custody the condemned were, was assigned the delicate task of acquainting the fortunate couple with the remaining five.

The first of the reprieved yawned when told that he was not to be executed.

"It's nothing, he said carelessly, and resumed his blank stare at the wall of the condemned cell.

"I am not to die! Good!" exclaimed the second man. "Then I can have Antonio's shoes. They fit me exactly."

His Comrade's Shoes.

What an extraordinary insight into the workings of the human mind. It would seem impossible to imagine a man under sentence of death hoping that he alone would be reprieved so that he could inherit the shoes belonging to one of his comrades in crime. But that is exactly what happened in the case of the Flower Land pirates.

When they heard of the efforts being made on their behalf to reduce the number of executions it was Antonio's shoes which was the attraction to one of them—the reprieve was a secondary consideration—and the light of joy in the eyes of the villain snatched at the last moment from the scaffold was not due to relief but to a belief that a certain worn pair of shoes must soon be his.

It had not occurred to him that a benevolent British Government would provide him in penal servitude with better footwear than the wretched Antonio could bequeath to him, and that food and warm clothing would be his until he had served the regulation number of years which, in the jargon of the Law, represents "penal servitude for life."

Successful Treatment
Dr. CHASE'S OINTMENT

But the cautiousness of the criminal with death staring him in the face has been a cause of wonderment from the beginning of the Old Bailey down to the present day.

No Need To Worry.

"Don't blubber—get it over!" shouted a murderer when Mr. Justice Day's emotion made him falter as he was delivering the dread sentence of the Law.

"Now we shan't be long!" shouted another murderer in the year when that vacuous phrase was enjoying a nation-wide popularity.

"I'm afraid it's very cold," said a highly strung prison chaplain to a ruffian who was due to expiate his offence on the scaffold thirty minutes later on freezing January morning.

"Don't you worry about that," was the reply, accompanied by boisterous laughter. "If what you say is true I'll be warm enough in half an hour."

To the sensitive and imaginative person death must always appear more terrible than it is. That is not cowardice; it is nervousness created by fear of the unknown. The brute who murders cruelly and in cold blood is almost without exception a coward, but it is the physical violence preceding death which he dreads.

It is significant that the woman-murderer invariably collapses in the dock on hearing his fate, whereas the author of an unpremeditated crime involving the death penalty calmly listens to the verdict. There have been exceptions of course, but the cowardly murderer is a coward well represented.

It seemed as though all the battalions of the Law had been mobilised to deal with this wretched alien who had murdered four women with as little compunction as though they had been dogs, but the authorities considered it necessary that no risk should be run of Chapman escaping. He was a polisher, and, officially at any rate, the polisher is regarded as unworthy of mercy.

Shortly before his death the late Mr. Justice Grantham told me that he considered Chapman the most loathsome villain he had ever seen, and I reminded the judge that at the trial he had expressed his satisfaction that the criminal was not an Englishman. Certainly it was a fact worthy of emphasis; for if we have plenty of criminals of our own it is very seldom indeed that the Chapman type is found amongst them.

The marvellous thing about it is that Chapman should have committed his crimes with such impunity. His victims were women with plenty of friends and relations, and he did not drag them into the lonely country to dispose of them.

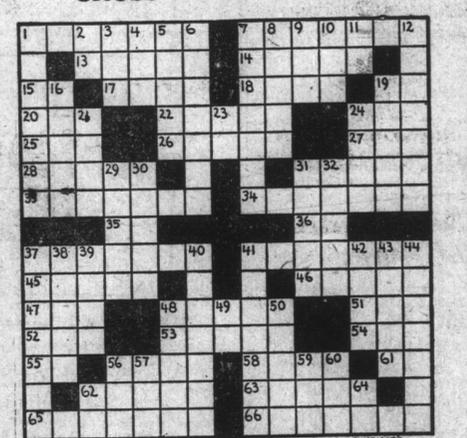

The Dread Sentence.

All his crimes were committed in crowded London, and the business that he followed—that of publican—indicates that publicity was part of his life. He lured women to their destruction by promising them lives of ease and luxury, and he administered poison with a smile, and kissed their foreheads when they were writhing in agony.

Four of them went to their graves before his first trial; but, though he had a lengthy innings, his victims were amply avenged that day at the Old Bailey, in 1903, when, quivering like a jelly, between the two warders who held him by the arms, he listened to the words from the Bench, which meant death.

During Sir Edward Carson's closing speech for the Crown, that eminent counsel occasionally paused to allow a point to get home. Then those of acute hearing could detect the quick intaken breath of the man in the dock, Household Notes.

Use a dye soap to tint discolored undergarments and handkerchiefs. A custard sauce flavored with vanilla is nice with peach taploca. Remember that there is an excellent sherry flavoring on the market. Use prune jam in place of jelly in the regulation rolled sponge cake. Remember that any mixture made with sour requires a little salt. Remember that trappé is not frozen as hard as an ice or ice cream.

as, with eyes glistening like those of a starving animal, he sat in a crouching attitude, one arm half-raised as if attempting to ward off death itself.

The condemned man, completely robbed of the use of his limbs by terror, had to be carried from the dock by the warders, a limp mass of fear, and the last seen of him by those in court was a nerveless hand convulsively picking at his throat as though he felt already the rope which was to send him to his last account.

Evolution or Revolution

Every day or so cable despatches appear which indicate a sharp cleavage of opinion in the British Labor Party with the so-called Communist wing in direct opposition to the older Trade Unionist elements. The divergence was plain in the discussion over the proposed visit of the Prince of Wales to Argentina, in which Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, one of the ablest and most respected of Trades Union Leaders, took a stand diametrically opposed to that of the Communist leader, Kirkwood.

Criticism of Ramsay MacDonald as leader of the Labor Party was uttered by Mrs. Phyllis Snowden at Montreal some weeks ago, and was supposed to voice the views of her husband, so far as personal talents go, the ablest of all the Labor leaders. The opposition to MacDonald apparently arises from the fact that he is regarded by the Trade Unionists as too weak in his dealings with the Communist wing; while the latter holds him to be hopelessly opposed to the aggressive class-warfare which is their aim. It should be said that in the opinion of many sympathetic with the Labor cause the word Communist is grossly abused by the British group. Bernard Shaw calls them "a left wing of young Anarchists who absurdly call themselves Communists."

Light on the internecine warfare that is going on in Labor circles is provided by an article in a recent issue of the "Fortnightly Review" from the pen of G. M. Golden entitled "The International Attack on British Trade Unionism." Of course the shadow of

by David Cory

One morning as Little Jack Rabbit was hopping up the Shady Forest Trail, his knapsack bouncing up and down on his back and his red-striped candy cane swinging from his left paw, a little voice in the treetop shouted:

"Look out, look out! There's danger near. Something will happen quick I fear."

The next moment the bunny boy noticed a long, slim, red-brown body gliding over the dead pine needles. Quick as a wink, and maybe faster, he hopped into the Hollow Stump Telephone Booth, which luckily was close by. Bolting the little door, he peered out through the knothole. Right there in plain sight stood old man Weasel on his slim, short legs, his little pointed nose sniffing the air impatiently.

"Oh, dear and oh dear!" gasped the bunny boy. "I must call up the kind Policeman Dog. Old man Weasel will any moment find out where I am hiding, and then perhaps, and most likely, will dig right into this old hollow stump."

Quickly lifting off the telephone receiver the little rabbit shouted over the wire:

"SOS please come quick, Policeman Dog with your hickory stick."

But, Oh dear me and oh dear you! that good kind protector of law and order in Rabbitville had gone to Lettuemere in the Patrol Wagon. "Now, what shall I do?" asked the poor frightened little bunny boy under his breath. Then peering out through the knothole he saw, to his dismay, Old Man Weasel creeping slowly toward the Hollow Stump Telephone Booth.

Shiver and shake! Shiver and shake! In his knapsack quivered the Angel Cake!

Yes, sir. The little rabbit was trembling so that even his knapsack was bouncing up and down on his back with fear.

Looking down from the treetop Bobbie Redvest, whose friendly voice had a moment before warned the bunny boy, whispered softly:

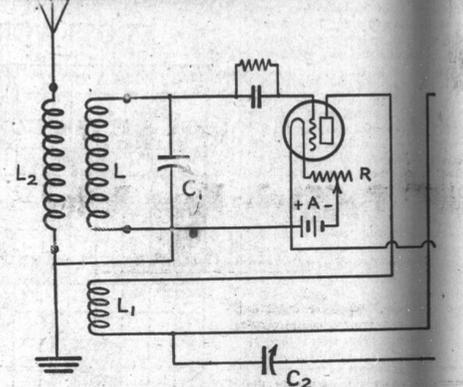

"I'll fly away to summon aid. I'll help you; please don't be afraid," and away flew the dear little bird to where the good Yellow Dog Tramp had a camp deep in the Shady Forest. Luckily he was just boiling his morning coffee in an old tin can over a fire, for it was still early. Oh, yes, very early, and the dew lay on the grass in the Sunny Meadow, making it sparkle

"Help, help!" shouted the little bird. Before the sugar was even stirred in the old tin cup by the good dog tramp. With a wooden spoon that was soggy damp.

"What's, what's the matter?" he asked, almost dropping the old tin cup in the fire. Mighty lucky he didn't spill the hot coffee on his toes nor scald the end of his long, thin nose.

And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Current Radio

Navy Test Receiver Redesigned for Broadcast Work

(Part 6)
EDITED BY JOHN M. CLAYTON.

The diagram above shows the position of the primary circuit. This primary coil consists of 15 turns in a Lorenz type coil, as was described yesterday. It should be mounted on a pair of Eby type binding posts on the hard-rubber base which holds the secondary and tickler coils. As the rest of the circuit is the same as we are not showing it.

Primary coil should be coupled rather closely to the secondary. The correct position will depend on the antenna you have. In general the primary will be from 1/4 to 1/2 inch from the secondary. It does not matter in which way it is connected, or the direction in which it is wound. It will function properly in either direction.

After the set is constructed, the A and B batteries connected and the tubes inserted in the sockets, if no signals or broadcasting is heard, it may be necessary to reverse the leads connected to the coil L1. If these leads are incorrectly connected the tube will not oscillate.

If oscillation cannot be stopped, no matter how condenser C2 is varied, loosen the binding posts holding coil L1 and move L1 further away from the secondary coil L2. There is a position for L1 in which the oscillation control by means of condenser C2 will be smooth and uniform. If the tube does not oscillate on all waves the coil L1 should be closer to L2.

A grid leak of 2 megohms was suggested. If the tube "plops" in oscillation the value of the leak is not correct. Try a leak having a resistance. In general the value will be somewhere between 2 and 2 megohms.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

CANADIAN CANOEIST HONORED.
ROME, May 7. Official Italy was represented yesterday afternoon at the welcome to Geo. H. Smythe, the Canadian canoeist when he completed his paddling trip from London to the Italian capital. The Government was represented by the Minister of War and Navy, of the Naval Affairs while the Mayor of Rome found time from his many duties to attend and present the Canadian with a gold medal.

SIRDAR'S ASSAILANTS ON TRIAL.
CAIRO, May 7. Nine men accused of the assassination of Sir Lee Stack, Sirdar of the Egyptian army and Governor General of the Sudan, last November, were yesterday committed to trial. When arraigned before the committing magistrate, one of the accused described how the murder was carried out.

LORD LEVERHULME PASSES AWAY.
LONDON, May 7. Viscount Leverhulme, the industrial leader, and multi-millionaire "soap king", succumbed to pneumonia at 4.30 o'clock this morning, after a brief illness. He was 74 years of age.

FAR REACHING COMMUNIST ORGANIZATION.
SOFIA, May 7. More arrests have been made in consequence of revelations at trials of those charged with complicity in the Svet Kral Cathedral bombing tragedy. There are now about 3,000 persons in prison throughout Bulgaria, and the authorities state that the Communist organization, which is blamed for the plot, is more far-reaching than was at first supposed.

A LULL IN THE FIGHTING.
PARIS, May 7. A lull is reported on the fighting front in Morocco, where the Rifian tribesmen, under Abdel Krim, after crossing the neutral strip along the Spanish front, are attempting to secure a foothold in the French zone. Advice received here tell of no further fighting since yesterday, but another engagement is expected. French military men said they fully realized that Abd-El-Krim is a foe man not to be despised, due to his experience against the Spaniards, and no chances will be taken by the French commanders.

DEATH AND DAMAGE CAUSED BY A BOMB.
PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 6. At the county morgue to-day, Albert J. Jeremias identified bodies of eight persons who were killed in the explosion in the Swiswale suburb early this morning. All the victims were his relations. The bodies were terribly burned and identification in some instances was possible only by tooth fillings, rings, or bits of clothing. The damage is estimated at from $400,000 to $500,000. Detectives believed the blast was caused by a bomb charged with dynamite or nitroglycerine.

PROTEST HINDENBURG'S ELECTION.
BERLIN, May 7. The social democratic party has officially entered a protest against the validity of election of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg as president of the republic. The ground is taken that many cases of irregularities in the election have been found.

CONCESSIONS TO WHALING CO.
SEATTLE, Wash., May 7. Russia has granted the Vega Whaling Company a fifteen years' concession to operate in the Behring Sea off the coast of Kamchatka, agents for the company announced here to-day. The concession includes territory from the fifth to sixty-seventh degree latitude wherein are Noman-derske Island.

THE ATTITUDE OF THE ALLIES TOWARD HINDENBURG.
BERLIN, May 7. The Socialists protests against Hindenburg does not seem to worry the Nationalists, who say it will be difficult to prove that circumstances were such as to affect the result of a vote in which Von Hindenburg received a plurality of 904,151. With the preliminary details for Von Hindenburg's inauguration on the way, interest now centres in the attitude to be adopted by the Foreign Governments, and especially their representatives in Berlin, as the Field Marshal is on the list of alleged war criminals to be extradited. The Allied Governments must either decline to congratulate him which would be felt as an insult to the nation whose elected head he is, or else tacitly forget that such a list existed, thereby taking a further step in wiping

Obituary
NICHOLAS CHRISTOPHER O'NEILL.
It is with feelings of deep regret that we chronicle the death of a popular young man of the West End in the person of Nicholas Christopher O'Neill, Letter Carrier of the General Post Office Dept., which took place at his residence, Beaumont Street West, on yesterday morning. "Christopher" as he was generally known to all his friends, was the second eldest son of Mrs. Margaret and the late John O'Neill. He was born in this city nineteen years ago. He was educated by the Christian Brothers in the Holy Cross Schools. He entered the Civil Service several years ago as a messenger with the Nfld. Postal Telegraph Dept., where by his kind, retiring disposition and devotion to duty was promoted to the Letter Carriers' Branch of the Postal Service, which position he was filling up to the time of his illness a year ago, when he was obliged on the advice of his physician to have medical treatment. In spite of all that medical skill could do for him, and the loving care of his devoted mother, fortified with the last rites of the Holy Catholic Church, which was administered to him by Rev. Fr. Summers of St. Patrick's Church, he gently breathed forth his pure soul to his Heavenly Maker. Besides his mother, 4 brothers, 2 sisters and a large number of relatives are left. To mention their names and loss, funeral took place this afternoon, interment being in the family plot Mount Carmel Cemetery. May he rest in peace. Amen. J.L.L.

Personal
Mr. P. E. Outerbridge, who was on a business trip to Montreal, is returning by to-day's express.
Rev. Dr. Greene, P. P., Witless Bay is at present in the city.
Mr. Walter Reid, barber, is at present confined to his home suffering from a severe cold.
Mr. D. N. Baird, arrived by yesterday's Silvia. Master N. Baird accompanied him.

Local Broadcasting
Station SLR, (Mr. R. G. Reid, Jr.) will be on the air to-night, Thursday and also on Friday at 10.30 p.m., broadcasting the results of the United School's drive. On Saturday night at 9.30 p.m., the usual concert and the result of drive will be given.

Protect the Bread
Editor Evening Telegram,
Dear Sir,—I would like to call your attention to a grievance Grocers are suffering in connection with the re-tailing of Baker's Bread, and to point out that this article of food—the staff of life is not handled in a sanitary condition as we—as a class are blamed for this state of affairs.
Possibly you are aware Mr. Editor that Bread is not allowed to be sold in Montreal without being labelled and wrapped and I submit that the Bakers here should not be allowed to sell their Bread in this Market unless it was wrapped also.
I wonder with so much talk about "Child Welfare" and "Saving the Babies" that more interest is not taken in some of us who have survived the "Baby" lifetime—and be given a chance to live out our natural lives—rather than being obliged to run the risk of disease or death by using food prepared and sold in an unsanitary condition.
I would like to know for the benefit of the Babies if the teamster delivering the Bread has also to act as groom for the horses before calling on his customers?
Yours truly,
JOSEPH NUGENT,
Grocer.

Want Coastal Boat to Call
Editor Evening Telegram,
Dear Sir,—Please give me space in your paper to make a few remarks concerning the Prospero not making the Gray Island a port of call. We as fishermen of the Gray Island, petitioned the Government, and thought it was arranged in agreement with our wishes. Now that the list of ports is published, we are very much disappointed to find that the Gray Island is not included in the list. As Sir John Croble was interested in the Gray Island last summer, we will request him to intercede for us. It is only a matter of five or six hours to go there, and the people are estimated at about one hundred passengers going too and from the Island. Besides this we have quite an amount of freight and I think we are justified in asking the Government for this favour. Now, Sir John, if you are going to be interested in the Gray Islands this summer, we sincerely hope that you will make the Gray Island a port of call for the Prospero.
Yours sincerely,
GRAY ISLANDER.

Thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills So Says Quebec Lady of Dodd's Kidney Pills
Quebec lady is very enthusiastic about Dodd's Kidney Pills.
Laurel, Que., May 6.—(Special)—Just why Dodd's Kidney Pills are so popular in Quebec Province is shown by the statement of Dame Isidore Beaugard, a well-known resident of this place.
"It gives me pleasure to tell you that we are all quite well since taking Dodd's Kidney Pills. My boy is now enjoying good health and my husband has been much better. His kidney trouble and dyspepsia are nearly gone. I am quite well myself and it gives me pleasure to praise your pills."
Dodd's Kidney Pills have become a family remedy because people have tried them and found them good. They help Rheumatism, Lumbago, Diabetes, Lame Back, Heart Disease and Urinary troubles, because all of these are either Kidney Diseases or are caused by the kidneys failing to do their work.

Protect the Bread
Editor Evening Telegram,
Dear Sir,—I would like to call your attention to a grievance Grocers are suffering in connection with the re-tailing of Baker's Bread, and to point out that this article of food—the staff of life is not handled in a sanitary condition as we—as a class are blamed for this state of affairs.
Possibly you are aware Mr. Editor that Bread is not allowed to be sold in Montreal without being labelled and wrapped and I submit that the Bakers here should not be allowed to sell their Bread in this Market unless it was wrapped also.
I wonder with so much talk about "Child Welfare" and "Saving the Babies" that more interest is not taken in some of us who have survived the "Baby" lifetime—and be given a chance to live out our natural lives—rather than being obliged to run the risk of disease or death by using food prepared and sold in an unsanitary condition.
I would like to know for the benefit of the Babies if the teamster delivering the Bread has also to act as groom for the horses before calling on his customers?
Yours truly,
JOSEPH NUGENT,
Grocer.

Want Coastal Boat to Call
Editor Evening Telegram,
Dear Sir,—Please give me space in your paper to make a few remarks concerning the Prospero not making the Gray Island a port of call. We as fishermen of the Gray Island, petitioned the Government, and thought it was arranged in agreement with our wishes. Now that the list of ports is published, we are very much disappointed to find that the Gray Island is not included in the list. As Sir John Croble was interested in the Gray Island last summer, we will request him to intercede for us. Historic Chain Rock
Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—Please allow me space in your columns to say that I am delighted with the work which the Government are now bringing to a close, namely: the light on Chain Rock. My friend the genial and sturdy member of Marine and Fisheries, Capt. W. C. Winsor, who I believe was the promoter is deserving of the praise not only of our local sea-faring men and fishermen, but of those who are engaged in coming to our shore from foreign lands as well. There are two incidents in relation to Chain Rock which I would be pleased if you would publish, viz: the narrow escape of H. M. S. Basilek, which struck the Chain Rock at midnight in 1857, and of the Niagara, United States steamer, engaged in the laying of the Atlantic cable in 1858. This ship struck the rock on entering the harbor and on leaving it.

Tenor Opens Engagement at Nickel

Mr. DaSilva Possesses A Voice Of Rare Quality.

Mr. DaSilva, Tenor Soloist, directed the Rivoli Theatre, New York, and an engagement at the Nickel Theatre. Mr. DaSilva is the fortunate possessor of a pure lyric voice of sweetness, range, and purity. He has at all times under perfect control and which he uses with admirable taste in the interpretation of songs. Mr. DaSilva rendered numbers, which received the enthusiastic applause of his audience. He speaks for him a very successful attraction at this popular house of entertainment. To-night's programme at this theatre is Hobart Henley's achievement "The Denial," starring Theatre Windsor, Bert Roach and Edna Haines.

Cast was carefully selected and presented in the most successful manner. The play is playing the dominant character of the story, Rena Hucks.

Connelly, cast as her husband, James Hicking; while Claire was chosen to play the daughter. Haines was selected to play Webb, a youth who goes to the Col. Roosevelt's regiment. O'Brien was cast as Aunt Effie; Bickens as Dorothy, and Bert as the important role of Arthur.

The story for the most part is laid out, a time when automobiles and telegraphs were quite a wonder of the world. However there is a prologue connecting the main story with the present day.

The adaptation for the screen was by Agnes Christine Johnson.

Mark's Players in Great Melodrama

"Black Flag." To be played in Casino To-Night.

Mark's Players offer to the public to-night the play "The Black Flag," a wonderful dramatic offering with a story of deep heart interest and containing many stirring climaxes. With strong aggregation of dramatic production will receive correct presentation. See your popular favorite Mark's, in a new role, a play distinctly different from any other he has yet played. You will see Perrin in one of his most important parts—he also guarantees a good laugh, and as a comedian, Mark Chamberlain, who scored his first success in "A Good For Nothing" will be seen in this bill in the great role, Paul Brady and Raymond both have splendid parts. "The Black Flag," in fact, is the number of the cast has a distinctive all its own. Special attention will be given to the scenic equipment, which will give the true atmosphere that is necessary. An entire bill of vaudeville, with the ever popular Scotch Lads and Lassies, in a new review.

Thursday afternoon a special play will be held for the young people of the children along, they will take care of, and they will be the life of their lives. On Thursday the bill will be a strong drama, the kind our people love so well, the title of the play is, "Father Left Home."
