THE AGONY AT CHICAGO.

BEFORE THE GREAT REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

A Lot of Stuff That May be Taken as You Like It—Blaine Still to the Front.

CHICAGO, June 2.—The situation to-day is very much simplified. All the delegates are now here. Negotiations which were carried forward yesterday make it clear that the adherents of Arthur, Blaine, Edmunds, Sherman, Logan and Hawley have made a fair measure of their strength, and deem that the present aspect of the fight warrants them in standing by their men. The most ardent supporters of Arthur and Blaine do not claim for them a majority of the convention.

The highest figure mentioned for Blaine is 338, for Arthur 325. Conventional advocates for each put the figures for both under 300. This is necessary in view of the stand taken by the editors of Logan and Sherman men. The friends of the Vermont senator to-day are in high feather over the possibility of his nomination, and contend that he has developed unexpected strength in the northern and western states, and has even acquired some votes in Missouri. The Edmunds people contend that they hold the balance of power, and can summon the needed votes, which, if their estimates are correct, and the man and Logan men stand by their colors, will throw the convention into a deadlock.

The Logan forces have been instructed to remain by him, and the Ohio men who are for Sherman, numbering more than half the delegation, declare that all overtures which have been made to them have been ignored, and that they will certainly remain by him through unreserved ballots in the present belief that the fight is any man's. This portion of the Ohio delegation has received some assurance of support from Indiana in the event of Greaham or Harrison not being named.

The attitude of Wisconsin, Michigan and Indiana is watched with a great deal of interest, as the combined strength of these states might turn the tide strongly in the direction of a new man. It is believed that a Greaham movement, if properly supported by Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, would probably carry with it the Edmunds strength, and is not thought, however, that Greaham will be named by Indiana. That delegation, it is believed, will present the names of Harrison, but will rally to support him at any opportune time. If Greaham is named, it will probably be by Wisconsin, or by one of the Edmunds states, and the Arthur and Blaine managers appear to recognize the condition of affairs, but confidently claim that they will show sufficient strength against him that given Edmunds to carry the day.

The Indiana delegation met this morning. The Blaine men are anxious to have Harrison elected, but his influence was felt in the meeting where a considerable opposition to placing Harrison in nomination was expressed.

The Arkansas delegation was addressed this morning by Collector Robinson, who said Blaine could certainly carry New York, while there was no prospect of Arthur being able to secure it. The meeting was a stormy one.

Powell Clayton was selected for temporary chairman of the convention. He is for Blaine.

A circular bearing the title, "New York for Blaine," was distributed this morning, calling James G. Blaine to lead to victory," will be given out to-morrow. It is endorsed by twenty of the New York delegates, and is signed by Arthur, Sherman, and the independent or better element of republicans ever since.

Horace White, of the New York Evening Post, in an interview to-day said: "It seems to me that Blaine and Arthur are about evenly matched at 300 to 220 votes each. Blaine has a great deal of support in the West, and a large number of votes in the South. The other candidates are somewhat uncertain."

Senator Mahone says he is sure Arthur will have 325 votes in the first ballot, Blaine 332 on the same ballot, and he predicts Arthur's nomination on the second ballot.

Thomas Wheeler of Syracuse, N.Y., who claims to know whereof he speaks, says that Blaine is in the favor of any one who beats Arthur, and to that extent is for Blaine.

Senator Harrison says he is not a candidate in any sense, and will try to prevent the presentation of his name before the convention.

Senator Douglas arrived to-day and was probably the most eagerly listened to of any among the crowds in the Sherman house rotunda. He said the delegates were being misled by office holders held bound to vote for Arthur, but when a break came their votes would undoubtedly go to Logan.

It is stated that South Carolina at a meeting to-day resolved to vote as a unit for Arthur as long as he is in the field. The delegation will divide between Logan and Sherman.

The crowning incident to-day was the action taken by the Indiana delegation in respect to the candidacy of Senator Harrison. Early in the forenoon he was requested to quit the headquarters and be seated to a room. The delegation then battled through three hours session as to the stand it would take in the event of Harrison's nomination. The majority of the delegates was carried by a fair majority but a unanimous vote could not be obtained, owing to the intervention of friends of Greaham.

It was contended that if Senator Harrison could go into the convention with a solid delegation it would prove a handicap to Blaine in his favor as to come in with an unbroken delegation. These arguments were all wasted on the Greaham side, who refused to come into the line. They agreed that if the delegation was allowed to go into the convention, that neither Blaine nor Arthur could be nominated and any considerable number of votes were cast for either Blaine or Arthur, then Indiana would give her entire vote to the one showing the greatest strength. This was the final decision of the delegates.

It is understood that therefore go with the delegation into the convention. The vote of the state will be given to Blaine and Arthur very equally, with possibly two for Sherman.

The hotels were besieged to-night by a host which jammed the lobbies and corridors to the point of suffocation. It was composed of people aimless in wanderings

HAMILTON NEWS.

Blainbrook Election Case—Patrol Wagon

HAMILTON, June 2.—The magistrate this morning gave his decision in the Blainbrook election case. James Atkins, a candidate for the re-venue of Blainbrook, at the election of 1883, charged William Ptolemy, clerk of the township, with unlawfully supplying ballot papers to Frederick White and Samuel Day, and unlawfully inserting names on the assessment roll. His worship sent the case to a jury.

A meeting of the police commissioners was held to-day. The charges against Detective Doyle were brought up. The commissioners unanimously came to the decision that no case was made out and dismissed the charges. The securing of a patrol wagon for police purposes was considered, and the commissioners resolved that one be purchased. It is not expected that cost of horse and wagon will exceed $300.

John Quirk, who has been a resident in Hamilton for 30 years, and in the employ of the late James Reid for the last 25 years, was presented Saturday evening by a number of his friends, who are still in the employ of the estate, with a gold ring and an address, in which they expressed their regret at his leaving them.

On Saturday evening a meeting of the depositors of the Exchange bank was held at the St. Nicholas hotel. A resolution was passed to join the Montreal depositors in petitioning the government to waive their priority to the depositors.

The Bulletin horse doctors are puzzled over a peculiar ailment which has been pro-claimed meeting with several doctors for the purpose of organizing to-night. Geo. Wm. Curtis was chosen chairman of the delegation. The Edmunds men voted with the Blaine delegates, and having helped to choose four of the eight officials, suddenly changed around and voted with the Arthur men, that combination choosing the remaining four.

As the result of to-night's balloting, Speaker Sheard, who is strongly for Blaine, estimates the delegation will stand: Blaine 27, Arthur 30 to 31, Edmunds 14 to 15.

The Renna vote is estimated as Blaine 46, Arthur 14. Others give Arthur as high as 17.

There is much excitement to-night over the selection of Clayton as temporary chairman. The feeling is confined mostly to the delegates opposed to Blaine, but there are a number of Blaine adherents who express dissatisfaction at the choice. So, indeed, is the feeling on the subject, that a plan is on foot to attempt to defeat Clayton to-morrow.

There has been much quiet talk to-day about the possibility of nominating Geo. Sherman. It is said that a deadlock is likely possible, and that the same time some prominent delegate might present the name of Geo. Sherman, the band of the Ontario striking up Marching Through Georgia.

A second charge of the same nature has been preferred against him by James Roblin, a Belleville cigar man.

Tony Pastor's Show.

There was a good house at the Grand last night to see Tony Pastor and his famous troupe. The program was long, varied, interesting, comic and entirely free from anything objectionable. Tony himself was the only one who was not again and again obliged to desert from sheer exhaustion. He could sing no more. Duncan, the ventriloquist, with his wooden headed family and singing boys created a sensation. Perhaps the best actors in the troupe are Lester and Allen, the two popular song and comedian. They made an instantaneous hit last night and cannot fail to "draw" well to-night. They are original and funny and two of the best black faced comedians now before the public.

The Edward Street Market.

There are not a few persons under arrest in connection with this murder, viz: Hattie Jeffrey, Minnie O'Brien, Georgina Woods, Mary Cross, James Neil, John Falvey and Albert Robinson. The last mentioned was taken into custody on the strength of Esther Hawker, who says he spent the night at Jeffrey's house, No. 118 Edward street. Hawker has already given evidence before the coroner's jury and will be called again to-night. She is now under police surveillance. The theory is that Carr was stabbed in front of No. 118 and that some of the parties in custody are implicated.

WING LEE'S LAST FLIGHT.

He Died by His Own Hand—A Chinese Funeral.

An inquest was held last night at the hospital on the body of Wing Lee, the Chinaman who committed suicide on Sunday last. Samuel Raymond was chosen foreman of the jury.

Wm. Coombs sworn: On Sunday morning about 10 o'clock I went down to Wing Lee's 135 Queen street west, to get my washing. I rapped at the door but got no answer; I rapped again when Wing Lee came to the door, and I attempted to go in, but he said "no washes," and shut the door. He had his arms across his abdomen and I noticed there were blood stains on his clothes. I met a friend outside, and I told him what I had seen, and he said I had better inform a policeman, which I did.

Thomas Lightfoot sworn: I went down on Sunday morning between 8 and 9 to get my washing, but could get no answer to my knock. I saw the woman next door when she came out, and she thought he had gone out. I went down to York street, but could not find him. Between 9 and 10 I went back to his room, where I met Wm. Coombs, and we went in together. We heard a noise in the back room, and we told me that he had seen, and we informed the police.

P. C. Watson, sworn: Two men told me P. C. Jenkinson and myself that they had produced a Chinese man, who they said was something wrong. We immediately went into the house, and traced blood stains to the back parlor, where they led us to the house. We found Wing Lee inside squatting on the ground. He was covered with blood, and manifested some-thing like insanity. I did not understand. He tried to conceal the wound. We examined him, and found that he had several cuts on his head, and one on his forehead. I found the knife in a pool of con-gelated blood in the second room. A knife produced as a witness. P. C. Jenkinson's evidence was to the same effect as P. C. Watson's.

McDonald sworn: I was called on Sunday morning to attend a Chinaman who had been stabbed; found him squatting on floor. Examined him and found several cuts on the abdomen. He was suffering from shock and hemorrhage. I gave him some stimulants and ordered his removal to the hospital.

Dr. Sheard sworn: Made a post-mortem examination in conjunction with Drs. McDonald and O'Reilly. In my opinion death was caused by shock caused by injury to the bowels.

Detective Reid—Examined the clothing of deceased. Found no opium in the pockets. Several Chinamen were then examined, through Fong Ching the interpreter, but nothing material was added to the evi-dence except that he smoked opium, and drank pretty heavily.

The jury retired and in a few minutes returned a verdict, "Cause to be inquired by his own hand."

The funeral will take place to-day from 10 to 11 o'clock, at the residence of Mrs. McDonald, his Chinese wife. A large number of his Chinese brethren will see him start the journey to the flowery land.

Brat Assault on a Citizen.

EDITOR WOOD: I beg to state that I witnessed the assault on J. Shumshon of 53 Wood street by two policemen Thursday night last at the corner of Yonge and Agnes streets, an account of which was published in the Mail of Saturday. The assault was most cruel and unprovoked. With several others I accompanied the injured man, with blood streaming from his face, to the Agnes street police station, to make a complaint. At the station we met with indignity, and all the witnesses were rudely ejected from the building. If these two officers were not added to the list of the inoffensive citizen on his way home from a temperance meeting, it is to be hoped they will get the punishment they deserve. The case is one which demands immediate investigation.

CHAPTER I.

AMID THE FLOWERS.

John Smith stood before a magnificent monument in Greenwood cemetery. It was Decoration Day, and the air was radiant with the fragrance of flowers fresh laid on the grassy mounds which covered all that was mortal of the heroes who had fallen in defending their country.

His left sleeve was empty and his right hand convulsively clutched a cross composed of beautiful buds, while tears rolled down his cheeks.

A few moments before a handsome young lady alighted from her carriage and placed the floral token upon the grave near which John Smith lingered, but she took no notice of the handsome stranger.

After she had gone he grasped the flowers and pressed them to his lips again and again, then held them reverently in his strong right hand.

"Ah, Mary," he murmured, "you little knew when you passed by me so hastily that I was the youth who, many years ago, clasped you fondly to my heart and newly smothered you with kisses; that I loved you with a devotion which time has not dulled nor distance suppressed. Then you returned my caresses, now you coldly pass me by. Yet I cannot blame you. I am poor and humble, you are rich and proud; but some day—ah! I had nearly forgotten my only friend and constant companion."

With that he turned to a hand-organ which he had seen in the distance, and against the headstone bearing the inscription:

"Faded lips charm the soiling heart to fire with love, ambition and a high desire. Here lies the leader of some heavenly choir, shouldering his instrument of torture—the only means of livelihood—he slowly sauntered out of the cemetery. He was not tired of lingering there, but the shadow of a stalwart policeman with a raised club fell across his pathway and he knew it was high time to move. As he wandered on, heedless of the presence of children that followed him, he muttered savagely:

"Some day I'll show the proud Mary Brown that there is an irresistible eloquence in this empty sleeve of mine."

CHAPTER II.

A FULL HAND.

"Good gracious!" exclaimed Mary Brown, awakening from a daze in her charming little boudoir in a splendid mansion on Brooklyn heights; "what strange noise is that?"

Hastening to a window overlooking the street she gazed and listened. Again she heard the sound. It was borne on the balmy breeze from around the corner; it came on the low tops and caused a panic among the sparrows; it clashed against the window panes on the opposite side of the street; it crawled along the pavement, climbed up the facade of her house and assailed her ears with violence.

It was the cruelly mingled air of "Sweet Violets."

"Who—who could be guilty of torturing me with such music?" she mused. "Ah! there comes the wretch!" she exclaimed as she caught sight of an organ-grinder turning the crank of his music-murderer as he hobbled up the street, extorting pennies from those who appreciated the value of peace and harmony.

"If he pauses one instant beneath my window I will slay him," she muttered, her beautiful black eyes flashing vindictively.

Nearer, clearer, deadlier than before arose the wall of the wheezy wind instrument, until it and its owner stopped directly under the window which the dark-eyed dame met. Casting an appealing glance at her he ceased grinding and raised his right hand.

For the moment forgetful of her vow she leaned forward and sternly said:

"Go away, you horrible thing! I don't want to hear your soul-harrowing music. The organ-grinder lifted his hat, made a profound bow and then adjusted the slide of his music-murderer for another tune.

"Some day, some day, some day!" gasped the pipes.

"On, this is too much!" cried the young lady. "Now I will crush him!" And seizing a bound volume of the Congressional Record she hurled it at his head.

But she miscalculated her aim, for the ponderous volume only knocked down a couple of pigeons in the airway and smashed the flagstones in fragments.

In her frenzy she lost her balance and fell head foremost out of the window. Hastily hurrying aside the cause of her anger, the organ-grinder stretched forth his right hand and caught her on the fly.

"Again," he cried, gazing at her senseless form within his grasp, "I have a full hand."

CHAPTER III.

A STRAIGHT FLESH.

The air was heavy with the scent of liniment, cologne and camphor, and the ruby rays of the setting sun streamed through the curtained windows of Mary Brown's boudoir, tingling the frescoed walls with a strawberry ice-cream hue and imparting a hectic flush to her pallid cheeks, as she reclined on her crazy-quilt-covered couch.

"Where am I?" she moaned, opening her eyes for the first time since her involuntary aerial flight.

"Hush!" said the nurse. "You mustn't talk."

"But I will," retorted the patient, petulantly. "I'm better now. What has happened?"

"Why, you had a frightful fall, dear."

"Oh, yes! I remember now. And what became of that horrid—no, I won't say that, for he saved my life. Where is the musician who caught me in his arms?"

"He couldn't have caught you in his arms, miss," said the nurse, "for he has only one arm. Poor fellow! I ought not to have treated him so harshly. He must have been a soldier, then?"

"Yes, I believe so."

"How could I have been so cruel!" moaned Mary. "I am so fond of soldiers. On Decoration day, too. Oh, I cannot forgive myself for my cruelty to a brave man who once fought for my country and let an arm on the battle field!" Then she turned her face to the wall and wept bitterly.

"He left a message for you," said the nurse.

"Where is it? Let me see it!" she eagerly exclaimed, wiping away her tears.

"The nurse handed her a sheet of paper which was written in a cursive hand."

"John Smith presents his compliments to Miss Mary Brown, and hopes she will soon recover from the effects of her rapid descent upon the exponent of popular arts. He would also beg to inform her that the first time he held her in his arms was many years ago, when she was a child. At that time he had the pleasure of meeting her from a watery grave. He trusts to meet her face to face when his circumstances improve, as he has something of importance to impart."

Mary's face flushed with delight as she read the formal note.

"Why, nurse," she exclaimed, "I feel almost well. Of course I remember him now. He was a gardener for my father when we lived in New Jersey, and we always called him Jack. Dear old Jack! "Did he ever save your life before?" asked the nurse.

"Why, certainly. I was swinging at the time and tumbled into a cistern full of water. He fished me out with a clothes-pole. I can just remember his saying that he would like to have me marry him some day."

Here her face turned crimson and she thoughtfully closed her eyes.

CHAPTER IV.

HEARTS ARE TRUERS.

"Never again will I attempt to soothe the savage breast with music," gaily exclaimed John Smith, as he lolled in an easy-chair in his uncle's richly furnished library.

John had a level head and stuck to his resolution. Instead of wandering in cemeteries and strolling along the streets he was now living in clover.

His only uncle had died and left him a snug fortune a few days after the fair form of Mary Brown had dropped into his arms like a bale of hay, and he was in high spirits.

He had received a delightful letter from the young lady's father thanking him for saving her life and offering a position in his store, which offer he politely declined.

When Mr. Brown heard that his former gardener, Jack Smith, had fallen heir to a goodly fortune he at once invited him to call at his house.

"Jack hesitated a long while before accepting the invitation, on account of his modesty, but finally yielded to the instincts of his heart and embraced the opportunity to behold face to face and on equal terms the fair girl whom he had twice rescued from the jaws of death.

One summer evening as they sat side by side on the beach at Brighton Jack said:

"Do you remember, Mary, last Decoration day when you placed some flowers on the grave of your brother in Greenwood cemetery?"

"Certainly, Jack. How did you know it?"

"Why, I was standing near the monument, but you never deigned to look at me."

"I didn't see you, Jack," she replied. "I saw only—"

"Only an organ-grinder, Mary. But that is one of the things of the past."

"But you couldn't help it, Jack. I suppose there are lots of one-armed soldiers who earn their living that way, dearest."

"Soldiers!" he inquired, gazing vacantly at his empty sleeve.

"Yes, soldiers; men who fought during the late war. You were a soldier, weren't you, Jack?"

"Oh, yes; of course. Why, certainly. Phew! the air is stifling here. Let's go up to the hotel and get some beer."

"Poor fellow!" thought Mary, as she watched his armless sleeve flap in the breeze. "He doesn't care to be reminded of anything that might recall his former sufferings."

They are the married now, and are as happy as a pair of turtle-doves when corn is plentiful.

Jack swears that nothing short of divorce will ever compel him to inform his wife that he never smelled powder, and doesn't know the difference between a battle-field and a circus tent.

"Yes, I shall break the engagement," she said, folding her arms and looking defiant; "it is really too much trouble to converse with him, he's as deaf as a post, and talks like he had a mouthful of iron nails. Besides, the way he hawks and spits is disgusting."

"Don't break the engagement for that; tell him to take Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It will cure him completely."

"Well, I'll tell him. I do hate to break it off, for in all other respects he's quite charming." Of course, it cured his catarrh.

Catarrah—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon treatment for catarrah. Out of 2000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefited, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all.

The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King Street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrah.—Montreal Star.

She Took Him For a Debt.

From the North Wales Record.

As to how the late George Lewis became acquainted with Mrs. Hohenack, his first wife, more than forty years ago, the following romantic story is told: He was hard at work chopping wood, when he broke his ax handle. Entering the store of the young widow he purchased another.

His poverty was great, and he told her that she would have to trust him until he got the money to pay for it. The young man who stood before her was fine-looking and handsome, and she was moved to say jokingly: "Oh, I will take you instead of the money. Sure enough she did take him upon further acquaintance, and the fair young merchant widow became the wife of her impetuous debtor.

Telegraphing with Teeth and Eyeballs.

From the St. Louis Republic.

J. T. Norris of Springfield, O., the detective, does a trick that probably no other man in the country can imitate. He takes it on his tongue between his teeth. With his tongue he strikes it against the teeth with the sound of a telegraphing instrument, the opening and closing of the circuit being exactly imitated. Norris used to be an operator, and by means of the coin can telegraph words so distinctly that any telegrapher can easily read the message. In this manner he telegraphed fifty words a minute. A Republican reporter wrote out a message on a Western Union blank and handed it to the detective. The two operators in charge at the Southern took down the words as fast as Norris produced them with the coin. The message was rapidly sounded and written down, and all three copies coincided exactly. Mr. Norris can stand up before a telephone, and in this novel manner telegraph a message which any telegrapher can read with great facility. But the most wonderful thing is to see him telegraph with his eyeballs. The dots and dashes of the telegraphic alphabet he indicates by more or less rapid opening and shutting of the eyelids. In this manner he can converse with an expert without uttering a sound.

—Within the past ten years not a dollar has been lost in purchasing lots in Toronto or the suburbs. On the contrary every dollar so invested has doubled itself in five years, some in three. West Toronto Junction is the best suburb of the city and a few dollars invested in a lot there will soon double itself. Geo. Clarke of the L-I-Queer Tea Co. is offering a few terms that are acceptable to all. An entrance fee of $10, and $2 a week for 182 weeks will purchase a fine lot 50x100 at the Junction, including interest and taxes.
