He got water to wash and put on pondent, was arrested here this morning THE YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOsaid that the heat of the cabin affected him. He got water to wash and put on clean underclothing. I asked what he would have; was anxious to get him something nice. He didn't care for anything, but a cup of coffee, and didn't drink even that. I had no conversation with Capt. Hall when he was sick, except to ask him if he was better, occasionally, or how he was, and such like. He was sick a fortnight, and talked very little. He was perfectly delirious the last few days. I think he was paralyzed on one side. Heard no one say so. It was my own opinion. There was nothing sudden about his death. He was attended by Dr. Bessells and Mr. Morton, who did everything in their power to alleviate his sufferings, but without effect. His illness cast a gloom over the entire company, and was the first discouraging circumstance which had occurred in connection with the expedition. His death made us all feel very sad.

Capt. Tyson, speaking of Capt. Hall's death, says: Capt. Hall was sick fifteen days. At first he was paralysed and then delirious. He was insensible when he delirious. He was insensible when he delirious. He was absent 14 days, and returned on the 24th of October to the ship. On the 8th of November he died and was buried. His grave bore south southeast and about 500 paces distant from the Observatory in Polaris Bay, which was in lat. 81 38, lon 61 44, on the shore. We erected a board over his grave with an inscription cut, giving his name and age (50 years), date of death, and command of north polar expedition. All hands, except the cook, attended the funeral; it was a dark, dismal, cold, windy and disagreeable day. The wind was mournfully howling, and the hearts of all were enveloped in the deepest sadness. NOTICE was a data, this may be agreeable day. The wind was mournfully howling, and the hearts of all were enveloped in the deepest sadness. I held a lantern, and by the light of it the beautiful service of the Episcopal church was read by Mr. Bryant. As the soothing words, "I am the resurrection and the life saith the Lord," fell upon the ears of auditors, there were few dry eyes, and there amid savage desolation of Nature most rugged, the power of Christianity made itself felt by those who had never before acknowledged its influence. Few of those who were present at the burial will forget the deeply affecting scene. Old sailors whose faces had been bronzed by summer suns and frozen in Arctic seas, wept aloud. Capt. Hall was universally beloved, and his death at the time when the enterprise promised so hopefully, was felt by his survivors to be an irretrievable loss. Those thoughts were uppermost in the minds of all, and when the funeral party returned to the ship, there was a hushed silence attending the performance of every duty.

THURSDAY EVENING, May 22d SHARP & CO'S., returned to the ship, there was a hushed silence attending the performance of every duty.

Esquimanx Joe says that Capt. Buddington was quarrelling all the time, and speaks in general disapprobation of him. He says also that Capt. Hall was poisoned, and that the latter so expressed himself to him. The prevailing impression among the unfortunate 19 who were left behind was that Buddington had wilfully abandoned them to their fate. He had been anticipating the breaking up of the ice for some time, and if he had wished to have Tyson and his companions on board he could easily have represented matters to them in such a light that they would not have ventured to be absent at so critical a juncture; but no such intimation was given to the men on the ice. The vessel did not drift away so suddenly that the men could not have been rescued from their perilous position.

Mr. Heron says: I made a rush for the vessel and sung out for a line, but they would not give me one. Chester and Buddington were standing on the gangway and could have thrown me one; I was with four others on a piece of ice that had provisions on it, cracked off and went adrift. We got back to the main floe in a scow or boat which sunk under one of the men but we all got safely back.

Tyson says: I could have got aboard the vessel that night and been there now but would not leave the women and children. My duty was on the ice. I thought he would get back to us next day which he could have done. The breaking away was caused by the floe to which the ship was fastened, drifting in between the land and some ice bergs that were jammed. The jam broke up the floe and the vessel broke away. It was about 9 or 10 o'clock in the night; the temperature was about zero. Cold Brook Rolling Mills Company. ap 12 2m KNOX & THOMPSON. It was about 9 or 10 o'clock in the night; the temperature was about zero. That morning it had been 19 above; we did not save one tenth of the provisions that were on the ice. Capt. Tyson thinks the ill feeling and bad designs of Buddington and a few others who were his accomplices, had continued from the first, on account of Capt. Hall's determination to go as far north as possible, and Buddington's determination from fear or whatever cause that he should not after Hall's death. Most of the others were in favor of continuing and pushing north, and Tyson says that Buddington several times expressed his determination to send Tyson and his party on the road to hell as soon and his party on the road to hell as soon. While admitting the necessity of such an institution, we submitted there should be no monopoly in the classification of vessels; and while it was desirable to have a Dominion Board of Registry for such purpose, yet we strongly urged that it was equally desirable to retain the privilege our shipowners now enjoy, by being enabled to use either Lloyd's Register of London or Bureau Veritas for the classification of our tonnage.

We particularly insisted that whatever legislation might take place, our shipowners should not be subject to any such monopoly as would follow the establishment of only one Board for the classification of vessels, to the exclusion of those offices now existing amongst us.

After disposing of the objectionable sections in Mr. Plimsoll's bill, we then took up the second point, relating to the unfair discrimination in the load line in favor of iron ships, and represented how this section would effect our wooded vessels.
