why so many physicians fail to cure female disease.

This is also the reason why thousands upon thousands of women are corresponding with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. To her they can confide every detail of their illness, and from her great knowledge, obtained from years of experience in treating female ills, Mrs. Pinkham can advise sick women more wisely than the local physician.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I suffered for eight months with what the doctors called prolapsus, which caused great weakness all over my system, with faint dizzy spells. I kept growing weaker and weaker. I tried several medicines which they claimed would cure my trouble, but nothing was of the least benefit until I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and this helped me so rapidly that I could hardly believe my good fortune. I would gladly have paid $25.00 for that first bottle for it started me on the road to health, and five bottles cured me. I am most grateful for my splendid, robust health, and five bottles cured me. I am most grateful for my splendid, robust health, and shall certain v recommend the Vegetable Compound in glowing terms to all my friends and acquaintances, for it is deserving of all the praise I can give it."

When an eminent authority announced in the Scranton (Pa.) Times that he had found a new way to treat that dread American disease, Rneumatism, with just common, every-day drugs found in any drug store, the physicians were slow indeed to attach much importance to his claims. This was only a few months ago. Today nearly every newspaper in the country, even the metropolitan dailies, is announcing it and the splendid results achieved. It is so simple that any one can prepare it at home at small cost. It is made up as follows: Get from any good prescription pharmacy Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half cunce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Tompound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime. These are all simple ingredients, making an absolutely haraless home remedy at little cost.

Bathurst Lumber Co. and Morse Co. Making Changes.

BATHURST, Friday.-T. M. Burns and Wm. Hussey have sold their iron nine property on the Nepisiquit river for a sum in the vicinity of $75,000 This is the news received at a late hour last night. Mr. Burns has gone to Montreal to complete the transfer of the property.

For years Mr. Burns has spent money in prospecting this deposit and that he has at last made a sale will be welcome news to the people of Gloucester. The iron deposit as developed proves to be one of the best in esatern Canada, and that it will be develope and worked there is no doubt. The men behind the enterprise, among whom are George Drummond of the N. S. Steel and Coal Co., know the value of this property and the Morning Graphic understands that a start to work the mine will be made next spring. The local government is offering every inducement to the company to get to work on a large

In conversation with Mr. Burns the Graphic was informed that it is proposed to build a branch to the mine from a point on the I. C. R. near Gloucester Junction, and also a spur line from the Caraquet railway to the Points, when large docks and shipping plants will be erected.

This will be a large industry and hundreds of men will be employed at mine and at the shipping berth BATHURST, Saturday.-The Bathrst Lumber Co., which has already taken over the Summer company's timber limits, and has a large number of men in the woods, making extensive preparations to extend and improve their business. The company is planning on mak ing extensive changes in the mill equipment, which will add greatly to the output. American standards will be cut exclusively, and all goods will be shipped to the American markets All trains run on Atlantic Stan- Spruce and pine alone will be manu factured.

M. R. BENN,

THE PANTOGRAPH.

Will Aid You In Copying B ment that can be used to copy maps or drawings or to enlarge or reduce them is called the pantograph, and you can make one your self with just a little care. You can use four flat pieces of wood, as shown in the illustration, or plain flat rules, which you can buy for a cent apiece. The rules are better, for they have the inches and smaller divisions already marked on them, whereas if you use the pieces of you will have to make those

The four pieces must be so fastened together at B, C, G and H that they can turn freely on each other, and all parts of the pantograph must be sup-ported at the same distance from the table, so that the motion will be an even one. If you use ordinary screw eyes to fasten the joints G, B and H from below they will lift the pantograph to an equal level.

A leal pencil is fastened at A, and a screw eye should be put in from underneath just next to it to hold it level also. At G a steplant is resed of such table when the pantograph rests on the screw eyes. F is fast wood screwed on the table by means of a steel nail, on which it must move freely. It is well to shape this block like K, so that the screws that hold it to the table will not prevent the stick from moving freely on the nail at F. If now you place a map or a picture under C and a piece of blank paper under A and then move the steel nail at C along the lines of the picture the pencil at A will draw a similar picture twice the size of the one at C. If you put the pencil at C and steel nail at A the picture drawn will be one-half the The proportions may be made different by changing the position of the joints G and H, where the pieces of wood are fastened together, but the opposite sides of the figures CG and

HB must be kept equal. You can regulate the size of the drawing by remembering that the line drawn by A will always be as much larger than that drawn by C as the line AB is larger than CH, so that if you wish to enlarge the picture or map to four times its size move the hinge halfway up to C. And since the oppo-site sides of the diamond must be kept equal G must also be moved halfway

If you make the pantograph carefully it will more than repay all your trou-

Happened on Friday. You have all heard that Friday is an "unlucky" day, and many perse have so firm a belief in the superstition that they would not on any consideration begin any work or start on a journey on that day. Here is a partial list of important historical events that happened on Friday; read it and then make up your mind whether or not the day deserves its "unlucky" reputation: The Mayflower landed; the burned: Washington was born: America was discovered; Shakespeare was born; Lincoln was assassinated; Queen Victoria was married; the battle of Marengo was fought; Charles I, was beheaded; the battle of Waterloo was fought; Julius Caesar was assassinated; the battle of New Orleans was fought: Joan of Arc was burned at the stake; the Declaration of Independence was signed—all on Friday. . A piece of silver as large as half a dollar will immediately appear on the plate, and somewhat higher up will be another piece of the size of a quarter.

An Amusing Trick.

Here is an extremely amusing trick:

Place two persons on their knees opposite to one another. Each is to kneel on one knee, with the other leg in the air. Give one of them a lighted candle, requesting him to light that of the other person. This is exceedingly difficult to do, both being poised delicately on one knee and liable to tumble on the calledtest movement.

MONTREAL, Saturday. — Tommy Longboat of the Irish Canadians won the Quebec independent harriers 15 mile road race here this afternoon covering 15 miles of a very muddy road in the wonderful time of 1, 26, 55. It was a great victory for the Toronto and Hamilton runners. The Montreal and eastern men, with the possible exception of Halifax were never in the hunt. Longboat had the lead first, but at five miles Tait and Adams were right on his heels, when the muddy condition of the roads commenced These three had a quarter mile lead on Cumming of the Irish and Homer the Halifax lad, with Goldsboro of the Toronto Centrals, Wolfe of Halifax, Caffrey of Hamilton, Sellers of the Toronto, West Ends and Green two hundred yards back. In flour, for instance. We buy a flour that our grocer recommends. He doesn't know for what particular purpose we want it—aud it sells pretty well—so he sends it our our homes. The flour may be good but perhaps it takes a long time to knead. Or it is ay take more flour to make a batch of read than it ought to. Or we may want to for cakes and pastry and it won't give the pie that we expect. Most of us have tound trouble of this kind.

If we had time to compare one brand. If we had time to compare one brand with another, some household leaks would be avoided, and some household tempers would disappear. There is a big difference in flour. Some flour turns out a perfect aking, seems to do equally well for bread of an inquest.

These promises were obtained after the President had listened to representations of the members of the com mittee and to petition from the national organizations of printers, sterotypers, pressmen and etchers, all of which set forth the evidence of a combination on the part of the manufacturers of paper for the purpose of controlling the output, regulating and greatly increasing the price and otherwise making hindersome regulations governing the source of supply and delivery of paper.

The life of any traveller is always a hard one, but those whose work compels them to take long tiresome drives over rough roads, exposure to all conditions of weather, are in constant danger of losing their health. DOCTORS USING PATENT MEDICINES

The Honest Physician is Anxious to Cure and Uses the Best Available Remedies.

The proposed legislation through the Dominion Parliament for the regulation of the manufacture and sale of patent or proprietary medicines is of the utmost importance, and it is receiving a great deal of attention, not only by the proprietary medicine manufacturers, but also by the leading doctors and druggists. Every manufacturer of reliable and high class remedies welcomes the bill as a step in the right direction. The discussion has brought out the fact that the best physicians in Canada and on the continent approve of and prescribe Psychine in cases of the most difficult character. In a recent instance of very serious throat and lung trouble the patient had been using Psychine. Two leading United States specialists were consulted, in addition to two eminent Canadian physicians. Upon learning what the patient was using, a sample of Psychine was taken and analyzed, with the result that the physicians advised its continuance. They prescribed no other medicine but Psychine, with the result that the patient has fully recovered and is a splendid walking and talking advertisement for the wonderful curative power of a remedy that will "stand up" before the keenest professional criticism and analysis. As a builder up of the system and restorer of all wasted conditions, Psychine has no equal, and the best and most earnest physicians recognize this fact.

With Edged Tools

By HERRY SETON MERRIMAN

Without Tooking toward her, Jack Meredith made a few steps toward the door—quietly, self composedly, with that perfect savoir faire of the social expert that made him different from other men. Millicent Chyne felt a sud-den plebeian desire to scream. It was all so heartlessly well bred. He turned on his heel with a little half cynical

"I leave my name with you," he said. "It is probable that you will be put to nconvenience. I can only regret that this—denouement did not come

"You need not go away; I will do that." some months ago. You are likely to suffer more than I, because I do not care what the world thinks of me Therefore you may tell the world what you choose about me—that I drink, that I gamble, that I am lacking in—honor! Anything that suggests itself to you, in fact. You need not go away; I will do that."

She listened with compressed lips and heaving shoulders, and the bitter est drop in her cup was the knowledge that he despised her. During the last few minutes he had said and done nothing that lowered him in her esti-mation—that touched in any way her love for him. He had not lowered himself in any way, but he had suavely trodden her under foot. His last words the inexorable intention of going away—sapped her last lingering hope. She could never regain even a tithe of his "I think," he went on, "that you will agree with me in thinking that Guy Oscard's name must be kept out of this entirely. I give you carte blanche except that."

With a slight inclination of the head

he walked to the door. It was characteristic of him that although he walked slowly he never turned his head nor paused. Oscard followed him with the patient apathy of the large and mystified.

And so they left her—amid the disorder of the half unpacked wedding presents-amid the ruin of her own life. Perhaps, after all, she was not wholly bad. Few people are; they are only bad enough to be wholly unsatisfactory and quite incomprehensible. She must have known the risk she was running, and yet she could not stay her hand. She must have known long be-fore that she really loved Jack Meredith, and that she was playing fast and loose with the happiness of her whole life. She knew that hundreds of girls around her were doing the same, and, with all shame be it mentioned, not a few married women But they seemed to be able to carry it through without accident or hindrance. And illogically, thoughtlessly, she blamed her own ill fortune.

She stood looking blankly at the door which had closed behind three men, one old and two young, and per-haps she realized the fact that such creatures may be led blindly, help-lessly, with a single hair, but that that hair may snap at any moment. She was not thinking of Guy Oscard. Him she had never loved. He had only been one of her experiments, and by his very simplicity, above all, by his uncompromising honesty, he had out-witted her.

It was characteristic of her that at that moment she scarcely knew the weight of her own remorse. It sat lightly on her shoulders then, and it was only later on, when her beauty bewas only later on, when her beauty began to fade, when years came and brought no joy for the middle aged unmarried woman, that she began to realize what it was that she had to carry through life with her. At that moment a thousand other thoughts filled her mind; such thoughts as one would expect to find there. How was the world to be deceived? The guests would have to be put off, the wedding countermanded, the presents returned. And the world—her world—would laugh in its sleeve. There is y the

"Where are you going?" asked Mer "Home.

"Certainly; I have a good deal to tell you."

They called a cab, and, singularly enough, they drove all the way to Russell square without speaking. These two men had worked together for many months, and men who have a daily task in common usually learn to perform it without much interchange of observation. When one man gets to know the mind of another, conversation assumes a place of secondary importance. These two had been through more incidents together than usually fall to the lot of man; each knew how the other would act and think under given circumstances; each knew what given circumstances; each knew wha given circumstances; each knew what the other was thinking new.

The house in Russell square, the quiet house in the corner where the cabs do not pass, was lighted up and astir when they reached it. The old butler held open the door with a smile of welcome and a faint aroma of whisky. The luggage had been discreetly removed. Joseph had gone to Mr. Meredith's chambers. Guy Oscard led the way to the smoking room at the back of the house—the room wherein the eccentric Oscard had written his great history—the room in which Victor Durnovo had first suggested the simiacine scheme to the historian's son.

The two survivors of the originating trio passed into this room together and closed the door behind them.

tragedies is that they are usually only comedies in disguise," said Jack Meredith oracularly.

Guy Oscard grunted. He was looking for his pipe.
"If we heard this of any two fellows except ourselves we should think it an excellent joke," went on Meredith.
Oscar nodded. He lighted his pipe, and still he said nothing.
"Hang it," exclaimed Jack Meredith, suddenly throwing himself back in his chair, "it is a good joke!"
He laughed softly, and all the while his eyes, watchful, wise, anxious, were his eyes, watchful, wise, anxious, were studying Guy Oscard's face. "He is harder hit than I am," he was

The habit of self suppression was so strong upon him—acquired as a mere social duty—that it was only natural for him to think less of himself than of the expediency of the moment. The social discipline is as powerful an agent as that military discipline that makes a man throw away his own life for the good of the many.

Oscard laughed, too, in a strangely "It is rather a sudden change," observed Meredith, "and all brought about by your coming into that room at that particular moment-by "Not by accident," corrected Oscard, speaking at last. "I was brought there and pushed into the room."

"By whom?" "By your father."

Jack Meredith sat upright. He drew his curved hand slowly down over his face—keen and delicate as was his mind—his eyes deep with thought.
"The guv'nor," he said slowly.

He reflected for some seconds. "Tell me how he did it," he said

Oscard told him, rather incoherently, between the puffs. He did not attempt to make a story of it, but merely re-lated the facts as they had happened to him. It is probable that to him the act was veiled which Jack saw quite distinctly.

Meredith's comment when the story was finished, "that takes the conceit out of a fellow. I suppose I have more than my share. I suppose it is good for me to find that I am not so clever as I thought I was—that there are plenty of cleverer fellows about, and that one of them is an old man of seventy-nine. The worst of it is that he was right all along. He saw clearly where you and I were—damnably blind."

He rubbed his slim brown hands together and looked across at his com-panion with a smile wherein the youthful self confidence was less discern ible than of yore. The smile faded as he looked at Oscard. He was thinking that he looked older and graver—more of a middle aged man who has left something behind him in life-and the sights reminded him of the few gray hairs that were above his own temples.

"Come," he said more cheerfully,

"tell me your news. Let us change the subject. Let us throw aside ligh dalliance and return to questions of money. More important—much more satisfactory. I suppose you have left Durnovo in charge? Has Joseph come me with you?"

"Yes, Joseph has come home with me. Durnovo is dead," "Dead!"

Guy Oscard took his pipe from his

"He died at Maala or investiciness. He was a bigger blackg than we thought. He was a dealer and a slave owner. Those imen we picked up at Maala slaves belonging to him."

"So I concluded," said Oscard in his

"It was Joseph who found it out," continued becard, "up at the plateau. I paraded the whole crowd, told them what I had found out, and chucked up the whole concern in your name and mine. Next morning I abandoned the plateau with such men as cared to come. Nearly half of them stayed with Durnova. I thought it was to confirm come. Nearly half of them stayed with Durnovo. I thought it was in order that they might share in the simiacine. I told them they could have the whole confounded lot of the stuff. But it was not that. They tricked Durnove there. They wanted to get him to themselves. In going down the river we had an accident with two of the boats, had an accident with two of the boats, which necessitated staying at Maala. While we were waiting there one night after 10 o'clock the poor devil came alone in a cauce. They had simply cut him in slices. A most beastly sight. I wake up sametimes own him in slices. A most beastly sight. I wake up sometimes even now dreaming of it, and I am not a fanciful sort of fellow. Joseph went into his room and was simply sick. I didn't know that you could be made sick by anything you saw. The sleeping sickness was on Durnovo then. He had brought it with him from the plateau. He died before marring?

Oscard ceased speaking and returned to his pipe. Jack Meredith, looking haggard and worn, was leaning back in his chair. "Poor devil?" he exclaimed. "Then was always something tragic about Durnovo. I did hate that man, Oseard! I hated him and all his works." "Well, he's gone to his account now."

"Yes, but that does not make him any better a man while he was alive. Don't let us cant about him now. The man was an unmitigated scoundrel. Perhaps he deserved all he got."
"Perhaps he did. He was Marie's

"The devil he was!" Meredith fell into a long reverie. He was thinking of Jocelyn and her dislike for Durnovo, of the scene in the drawing room, of the bungalow at go; of a thousand incidents all ected with Jocelyn. "How I hate that man!" he ex-claimed at length. "Thank God, he is lead, because I should have killed

Guy Oscard looked at him with a pensive wonder. Perhaps he more than Jack Meredith knew himself of the thoughts that conceived those words, so out of place in that quiet room from those suave and courtly lips.

All the emotions of his life seemed to be concentrated into this one day of Jack Meredith's existence. Oscard's presence was a comfort to him. Th sence of a calm, strong man is bet ter than many words.
"So this," he said, "is the end of the

"So far as I am concerned," replied Oscard, with quiet determination, "it certainly is the end of the simiacine. I have had enough of it. I, for one, am not going to look for that plateau again." "Nor I. I suppose it will be started as a limited liability company by a German in six months. Some of the natives will leave landmarks as they come down so as to find their way

"I don't think so!"

"Why?"
Oscard took his pipe from his lips. "When Durnovo came down to Msala," he explained, "he had the sleeping sickness on him. Where did he get it from?"
"By Jove!" ejaculated Jack Meredith.

"I never thought of that. He got it up at the plateau. He left it behind him. They have got it up there now."

"Not now"—
"What do you mean, Oscard?"
"Merely that all those fellows up there are dead. There is £90,000 worth of simiacine packed ready for carrying to the coast standing in a pile on the plateau, and there are thirty-four dead men keeping watch over it." "Is it as infectious as that?"

"When it first shows itself infectious is not the word; it is nothing but a plague. Not one of those fellows can have escaped."

Jack Meredith sat forward and rub-bed his two hands pensively over his knees.
"So," he said, "only you and I and Joseph know where the simiacine plateau is."

"That is so," answered Oscard.

"And Joseph won't go back?"
"Not if you were to give him that £00.000 worth of stuff." "And you will not go back?"
"Not for £900,000. There is a curse on that place."

"I believe there is," said Meredith.

And such was the end of the great similarine scheme—the wonder of a few seasons. Some day, when the great Sahara is turned into an inland sea, when steamers shall ply where sand now flies before the desert wind, the plateau may be found again. Some day, when Africa is cut from east to west by a railway line, some adven-turous soul will scale the height of one of many mountains, one that seems no different from the rest and yet is held will grow secretary by day, and use a human snee will be poorer by the loss of one of those haif instured discoveries which have more than once in the world's history been on the point of raising the anithal called man to a higher, stronger, finer development of brain and muscle than we can conceive of under existing circumstances. Who can tell? Ferhaps the strange, solitary bush may be found growing sleewhere—in some other continent across the ocean. The ways of nature are past comprehension, and no man can say who sows the seed that crops up in strange places. The wind bloweth where it listeth, and none can tell what germs it bears. It seems hardly credible that the plateau, no bigger than a cricket field, far away in the waste land of central Africa, can be the only spot on this planet where the magic leaf grows in sufficient profusion to supply suffering humanity with an alleviating drug, unrivaled—a strength giving herb unapproached in power. But as yet no other simiacine has been found, and the plateau is lost.

And the end of it was two men who had gone to look for it two years be-fore—young and hearty—returning from the search successful beyond their highest hopes, with a shadow in their highest hopes, with a shadow in their eyes and gray upon their heads. They sat for nearly two hours in that room in the quiet house in Russell square, where the cabs do not pass, and their conversation was of money. They sat until they had closed the simiacine account, never to be reopened. They discussed the question of renouncement and after due consideration concluded that the galaxyster. of renouncement and after due consideration concluded that the gain was eration concluded that the gain was rightly theirs, seeing that the risk had all been theirs. Slaves and slave owner had both taken their cause to a higher court, where the defendant has no worry and the plaintiff is at rest. They were beyond the reach of money—beyond the glitter of gold—far from the cry of anguish. A fortune was set aside for Marie Durnovo, to be held in trust for the children of the man who had found the similacine plateau; another was apportioned to Joseph.

another was apportioned to Joseph. "Seventy-seven thousand one hundred and four pounds for you," said Jack Meredith at length, laying aside his pen; "seventy-seven thousand one hundred and four pounds for me. And," he added, after a little pause, Guy Oscard smoked his pipe and shook his head.

"Now," said Jack Meredith, "I must go. I must be out of London to-morrow morning. I shall go abroad—America or somewhere."

He rose as he spoke, and Oscard He rose as he spoke, and Oscaru made no attempt to restrain him.
They went out into the passage together. Oscard opened the door and followed his companion to the step.
"I suppose," said Meredith, "we shall meet some time, somewhere?" "Yes."

They shook hands.

Jack Meredith went down the steps almost reluctantly. At the foot of the short flight he turned and looked up at the strong, peaceful form of his friend.

"What will you do?" he said. "I shall go back to my big game," replied Guy Oscard. "I am best at that. But I shall not go to Africa."

CHAPTER XXIV.

RATHER expect - Lady Can-tourne," said Sir John to his servants when he returned home, "any time between now and 10 o'clock."

The butler, having a vivid recollection of an occasion when Lady Can-tourne was shown into a drawing room where there were no flowers, made his preparations accordingly. The flowers were set out with that masculine ignorance of such matters which brings a smile—not wholly of mirth—to a woman's face. The little used drawing room was brought un-der the notice of the housekeeper for that woman's touch which makes a drawing room what it is. It was always ready, this room, though Sir Jehn never sat in it. But for Lady Cantourne it was always more than

Sir John went to the library and sat rather wearily down in the stiff backed chair before the fire. He began by taking up the evening newspaper, but falled to find his eyeglasses, which had twisted up in some aggravating man-ner with his necktie. So he laid aside the journal and gave way to the weak-ness of looking into the fire.

Once or twice his head dropped forward rather suddenly so that his clean shaven chin touched his tie pin, and this without a feeling of sleepiness warranting the relaxation of the spinal column. He sat up suddenly on each occasion and threw back his shoulders. "Almost seems," he muttered ones,
"as if I were getting to be an old man."
After that he remembered nothing until the butler, coming in with the lamp, said that Lady Cautourne was in the drawing room. The man busied himself with the curtains, carefully avoiding a glance in his master's di-rection. No one had ever found Sir

John asleep in a chair during the hours that other people watch, and this faithful old servant was not going to faithful old servant was not going to begin to do so now.

"Ah," said Sir John, surreptitiously composing his collar and voluminous necktie, "thank you."

He rose and glanced at the clock. It was nearly 7. He had slept through the most miserable hour of Millicent Chyne's life.

At the head of the spacious staircase he paused in front of the mirror, half hidden behind exotics, and pressed down his wig behind either ear. Then he went into the drawing room. he went into the drawing room.

HE RANKED VERY HIGH.

Mayor of London Was a Big Man In Bys-Gone Days.

In Bys-Gene Days.

At a grand entertainment given in the fifteenth century by the sergeants-at-law at Ely place, Holborn, the lord treasurer, Baron Ruthwen, refused to recognize that as the sovereign's immediate representative the lord mayor was bound to take precedence of every other subject within the limits of the city. The hold bad baron sat stolidly, therefore, at table in "the most honorable place," whereupon the lord mayor, instantly withdrew, followed by his faithful aldermen and sheriffs and all the other citizens.

The person of the lord mayor was once held to be sacred and inviolable, and none dare approach his presence in an impudent manner. Men have been hanged for forcible resistance to his authority, and it is on record that one Richard Bayfield, in the year 1479, was fined £50 for presuming to kneel too close to his lordship at St. Erkenwald's shrine. More awe-inspiring still, the lord mayor once commanded the services of a merry-andrew and a poet laureate, whose wit and verse, had they existed now, would have been employed in the show which a month hence is to body forth seven centuries of the city's civic life.

Ben Jonson himself was a lord mayor's laureate, and even his su-hence is to body forth seven centuries of the city's civic life.

Ben Jonson himself was a lord mayor's laureste, and even his supreme talent was not thought equal to the high duty of singing the praises of the common council. Ben must have performed his duties not too graciously, for we know that he wrote a letter complaining of the corporation withdrawing him from their "chandlery pension for verjuice and mustard." Upon which letter a champion of the city made the comment that the pension was "not so chandlery, for it amounted to £33 6s. 8d., a sum which may at least stand comparison with what has been at any time allowed other laurestes of higher degree." It was much more than was allowed even to the king's laureste in Ben Jonson's days, for, till 1630, the pension was but 100 marks—without a sip of canary.

Stories of Mr. Balfour.

Now that the British Parliament has reassembled, a new crop of aneodotes of Mr. Balfour has been harwested by M.A.P., some of which are interesting. Raising his hat to a group of ladies while cycling on his estate, Mr. Balfour managed to fall into a flowerbed. "You did that very gracefully," said a friend. Mr. Balfour, who was a pretty wit, replied: "I always dismount in the presence of ladies." Reverting to the days of his Irish Secretaryship, Mr. Balfour asked Father Healy, "Do the Irish really hate me as much as their newspapers say?" "My dear sir," replied the grim old wft. "if they only hated the devil half as much as they hate you my occupation would be gone." All his Irish experiences were not se bitter. On the first St. Patrick's Day of his tenure of the Irish Chief Secretaryship, a cigar-box was delivered to him at the House of Commons, containing a bunch of shamrocks, "From a sincere Irish admirer." But, to the terror of his secretaries, the box was also found to contain a wickedlooking steel spring, covered with a queer white compound. A chemical expert was called for, and he examined the "infernal machine"—everybody momentarily expecting as explosion. The puzzled chemist, venturing to put a particle of the compound on his tongue, found that it explosion. The puzzled chemist, venturing to put a particle of the compound on his tongue, found that it was simply sugar impregnated with lemon. He then turned the box upside down, and out rolled a rusty corkscrew (the spiral spring) and an old nutmeg-grater. There was also a scrap of paper inscribed: "Buy the whisky yourself; you can then concoct the famous lemonade of Ballyhooley, and drink to Ould Ireland." hooley, and drink to Ould Ireland.

The perils of India.

The perils of living in a country where wild beasts and snakes—especially snakes—are numerous, are strikingly shown in a statistical abstract on India. During the year 1904 no fewer than 24,034 persons were killed, snake bites accounting for 21,880 deaths; while tigers killed 796, leopards 399, wolves 244, and other animals 728 persons. The administration of Bengal supplied the highest figures in each class. The number of cattle killed was 98,582, leopards, with 42,812 to their credit, proving the most destructive. The tigers were a good second with 24,037 victims. Snakes killed just over 10,000 animals. On the other side of the account it is reported that 65,146 snakes and 16,121 wild animals were killed, rewards being paid to the amount of £7,313. Perils of India.

Chirography's Flaws. Alfred Binet, director of the psycho logical laboratory at the Sorbonne, Paris, has been investigating the value of handwriting experts. An expert who was given a specimen of Ernest Renan's chirography said the writer was a person of only moderate intelligence, credulous and garrulous. Vital, a criminal who murdered several wom-en with revolting barbarity, appeared to another expert as "a timid girl, dis-tinguished by moderation."

An Invigorating Drink. "Pusky" is a new soda water foun-tain drink at Eufala, Okla. Pusky was invented by the Creek Indians. Corn that is just hard enough to shell is heated in a pot until it is brown. Then it is broken in a mortar into a fine powder. "Mixed with sweet milk or with carbonated water and sirups, pusky," says an enthusiastic local paper, "is a drink that makes a man carry his wife around in his arms just for

A Cat With Wings. The boatswain of the Caspian, English schooner, brought with him from India on a recent trip a strange animal-bird, which he always referred to as his "Tabby." It certainly looked more like a cat than anything else, but more like a cat than anything the an-it was probably some freak of the an-imal world. It had two pairs of wings, but could fly only with difficulty, a tame duck.
