Farm and Household.

Farm Work in Autumn.

In the successful management of a farm it is important to do the work at the right time as well as in the right way. This essential point is so often overlooked, that the profit which might otherwise be obtained is lost—or at least a great part of it is. If the seasons have changed considerably, as some contend, then it naturally follows that our operations must change also, or they will be out of harmony with nature, which will never produce the best results. The work must be done with the elements, if other circumstances will permit.

In the spring, work generally crowds the farmer to his utmost capacity. To lessen the work of spring, the fall months must be utilized as much as possible. Plowing is an important work appropriate to the fall. Sward land intended for spring crops, derives great benefit from fall plowing. The large amount of grass and roots turned under, have more time to complete the process of decay and become serviceable as food for the future crop. If the soil is of a stiff intractable nature the subsequent freezing and thawing will greatly break down its tenacity, and make it friable by pulverizing and disintegrating its particles. The nitre, which abounds in snow and rain, is a valuable fertilizer, and will more readily be appropriated by soil recently stirred. Removing the manure from the barnyard to the fields is a work usually done in the spring. There is scarcely a day during the winter when the work of hauling manure cannot be engaged in. If thought best, it can be dumped in piles, and spread in the spring at any convenient time before plowing. There are many other things that will suggest themselves to the studious and systematic farmer which are as proper to be done in the fall as in the spring, and doubtless he will find it more profitable. His old prejudices may receive a severe twist, and his moon theories a deep cut, but never mind that. At all events, it will be pleasant and encouraging to start out in the busy spring, and find so much of the new year's work far advanced, if not completed. It will be a start which will be felt through the whole season.—American Farmer.

Feeding Cows.

If the dairyman feeds his cows on cabbage or they get hold of wild onion, how quickly the taste is discovered in the butter! Fresh grass or clover imparts a high, rich and aromatic flavor that everybody likes. This suggests the idea that the quality of butter depends immediately upon the character of the cow's food, and should put the cautious dairyman upon his guard to see that his cows cannot get at any kind of food that will injure the quality of the milk. Hence he should be sure to destroy all the weeds in his pasture even more carefully than he does in his corn-field, and as water, when tainted, will work the same evil as bad food, he should see that only a pure article is within reach of the cows.—Elgin Advocate.

Hon. George B. Loring's Address.

The Hon. George B. Loring in his address before the New England Agricultural Society, showed that the farmers of New England are growing richer. The decline of certain branches of farming, especially of those staples that can be more cheaply produced elsewhere, is attended by an increase of all those products that enter into immediate home consumption; and hence it is that the number of farms has increased, the production of butter has been enlarged, the sale of milk has become an important branch of the dairy, and the aggregate value of the annual products of the soil is greatly enhanced.

Salt and Ashes for Horses.

Those who keep horses should, at least twice a week, throw in half a handful to each horse of salt and ashes. Mix up the salt and ashes by putting in about three parts of salt to one of ashes. Horses relish this, and it will keep them healthy—their bowels open, and their hair soft and fine. It will prevent them from being troubled with bots, colic, &c. A little ground sulphur mixed with the salt and ashes, and given once every two weeks, will also be beneficial. All domestic animals will be benefitted by this. They relish sa't—it is a want of the system—and it is cruel to withhold it.—Ex.

A Large Fleece.

It is said that the largest fleece ever recorded in the United States at a public shearing was taken recently at Lansing, at a meeting of the Michigan Merino Sheep Breeders Association. It was from a two-year-old ram, Diamond, owned by A. T. Short, of Coldwater, was grown in 365 days and weighed forty-one pounds and three ounces.—Ex.

A Texas Cattle King.

Here's another Texas cattle king, who is really a King:—Captain R. I. King has about 85,000 head of cattle, and about 20,000 head of horses and 30,000 head of sheep; his pastures amounting in the aggregate to something over 1,000,000 acres of splendidly watered lands, a valuation in all, land and stock, of something in the neighborhood of $5,000,000.

Characteristics of a Cyclone.

All storms, of any magnitude, that visit the United States, except the tropical hurricanes which sometimes touch the southern coasts, have a common origin in or near the Rocky Mountains. Here the first barometric depression is felt, preceded by a rising temperature, caused by the warm winds moving northward over the sun-heated sands of Arizona, New Mexico and Western Texas. These warm, rarefied currents of air are met by cooler currents passing over the snow-clad peaks of the north; a cyclonic storm is formed, usually small at first, which begins its journey eastward, gradually developing in energy and area as it goes. After leaving the mountain-ranges, there is but little precipitation for the first few hundred miles; as it advances, it usually widens from north to south, but the line of travel of the storm-center can be readily predicted by the Signal-Service observers, and its location at any time fixed by the lowest reported reading of the barometer.

During the journey of the storm eastward or southeastward, the wind in advance of it will be easterly, blowing off an area of high barometer into the low; and the barometer will continue to fall. Toward the north of the storm, the wind will be north; and to the south of it the wind will blow from the south, frequently causing what are known on the Western plains as "sand-storms"; while, if the storm occurs during the winter season, the wind and snow in the northern portion is called a "blizzard." In the rear of the storm the wind will be westerly, shifting to northwest, frequently blowing a gale; the barometer will rise and the temperature will fall, sometimes rapidly, and clearing weather will follow.

Thus it will be observed that the true axis is the "storm-center," and that the storm revolves on this axis as it moves forward in an easterly, northeasterly, or southeasterly direction. This is the true cyclone. It may be only a few hundred miles in diameter, or its influence may be felt from British America to the Gulf of Mexico.—GEORGE C. SMITH, in Popular Science Monthly for October.

A Remarkable Woman.

Death of an Old Female Who Had Letters in the Handwriting of Two Kings.

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 23.—A few weeks ago the newspapers announced the death of an old lady living near here named Margaret Gaunt, who for many years had lived the life of a recluse. From some words dropped by her in a few isolated cases of neighborly confidence it is believed she had a remarkable history, but what it was the most diligent enquiries failed to discover. On her deathbed she sealed up some papers and directed that they be delivered to one Ernest Churchill Gaunt, of Woodin Underedge, Gloucester, Eng., when he should come for them, as she said he would certainly do. Yesterday an Englishman arrived and took possession of the documents. He says they are of the utmost importance for proving claims against the British crown for $2,000,000 which have been pending for over 100 years, and that owing to family difficulties and dissensions the deceased, who discovered the papers of her ancestors, withheld them from the family to gratify her hatred of one who would have been greatly benefited by their production. Among the papers which Mr. Gaunt carried to Europe with him are two letters in the handwriting of King James the Second, three from William the Third, one from the infamous Judge Jeffreys, and papers written by many eminent noblemen of that day. These papers were discovered by Miss Gaunt sixty years ago in an old piece of furniture that had been in the family over 150 years, and the discovery was concealed from the family for the reason mentioned. The poor old woman who died alone and almost friendless had not the remarkable history that rumour credited her with, but she was a great-great-great-great granddaughter of the last woman executed in England for the crime of treason, at whose funeral pyre stood the founder of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania gazing at her as the cruel flames licked her body and scorched and shrivelled her limbs.

—Mr. E. B. Welsh, Paw Paw, Mich., attributes what he is to sheep. "They produce two crops a year; the wool and the increase."

—Mr. James Beal, Antwerp, Mich., attributes his agricultural success to the habit of guarding against little leaks. For one thing, his stock consume or make into manure all his stocks and straw.

—The Connecticut State Chemist is quoted as having found in "Hop Bitters" as much alcohol as would be contained in a mixture of brandy and water, one-third of the former to two-thirds of the latter.

General Informations.

—Some land in the city of London was lately sold at the rate of $3,300,000 an acre.

—For the trotter Jay-Eye-See $25,000 were offered last week; but $20,000 had previously been refused, and probably $50,000 couldn't buy the colt.

—A dog gained access to a Kansas corral of 1,500 sheep one night, and bit one-third of them about the head and face. Within 11 days 300 died of hydrophobia.

—On Tuesday afternoon, 25th Sept., the first through freight train from Portland, Me., to Portland, Oregon, over the Northern Pacific Railroad, started via the Eastern, Albany and Northwestern Railroads. It consisted of ten cars laden with canned corn.

—It is said that the Prince of Montenegro, who some time ago closed all the cafes and drinking shops in the dominion, regarding them as schools of effeminacy, extravagance and corruption, and abolished all titles, so that while formerly every other man in Montenegro was an "Excellency," now even the Ministers have to be content with plain "Mr.," has recently issued an interdict against all "luxurious wearing apparel," including cravats, gloves, walking sticks, parasols and umbrellas.

—The Germans of Iowa are starting a movement to oppose the woman's suffrage agitation. They say that if women obtained the right to vote they would be under the influence of the clergy, and would take an extreme position in relation to beer and wine drinking and the observance of Sunday. It would be impossible to reason with them in favor of moderate and reasonable temperance and Sunday laws, and their votes would establish total prohibition and blue laws as bad as those formerly enforced in Connecticut. Various German journals affect to regard this threatened evil as of a serious and imminent character, and call upon the Germans as a body to take a pronounced position in opposition to it.

A Royal Food Preservative.—Tribune.

"REX MAGNUS"

(THE MIGHTY KING.)

What it is, and What it Does.

IT IS THE

Humiston Food Preservative,

AND, as its name signifies, is a Mighty King, an invincible conqueror. It is safe, tasteless, pure and harmless. Its special field of usefulness is in the preservation of food, such as fish, meats, oysters, cream, etc., either in large or small quantities—and it does it.

Words are cheap, and so is Rex Magnus, in all its several Brands. Every word used by the proprietors of this preparation, in stating its nature, characteristics and effects upon food, is strictly true. Corroborative testimony can and will be cheerfully tendered. The best proof, however, is to buy a box, test its effects yourself, and you too will agree with us. You do not have to buy a "right" or costly "receipt" but get your money's worth.

We herewith append a scientific statement in attestation of the merits of this "Greatest discovery of the Century."

A 35 days test, in a temperature averaging 70°

Prof. Samuel W. Johnson, the well known chemist, and for more than 25 years identified with the Scientific Department of Yale College, furnishes the following report concerning Rex Magnus:

"My tests of 35 days on meats, &c., bought in open market have certainly been severe in daily mean temperature of 70°, and I am satisfied that the different brands of Rex Magnus, The Humiston Food Preservative, with which I have experimented, have accomplished all claimed for them. So far as I have yet learned, they are the only preparations that are effective, and at the same time practicable, for domestic use. At the banquet on 'treated' meats at the New Haven House I could not distinguish between those which had been sixteen days in my laboratory and those newly taken from the refrigerator of the hotel. The oysters were perfectly palatable and fresh to my taste, and better, as it happened, than those served at the same time, which were recently taken from the shell. The roast beef, steak, chicken, turkey and quail, were all as good as I have ever eaten."

Rex Magnus is safe, tasteless, pure, and Prof. Johnson adds in his report, "I should anticipate no ill results from its use and consider it no more harmful than common salt."

The room in which these trials were carried on (January 31 to March 7), has been warmed by a coal stove. Observations generally taken twice or thrice daily, with a self-registering thermometer have shown an average daily minimum temperature of 55° and maximum of 84°, the daily mean temperature having been 70 degrees."

Thousands of Trials.

Such a test, and it is but one of many which have been made, ought to satisfy the most exacting skeptic. Ample corroborative testimony can be furnished.

Rex Magnus is a perfect and reliable substitute for ice, heat, sugar, salt or alcohol, in preserving food, which retains its natural flavor and sweetness, in all seasons and climates, after having been treated with this "Rex."

It is safe, tasteless, pure harmless.

The different brands of Rex Magnus are, "Viandine," for preserving meats, poultry and game, 50 cts. per lb.; "Ocean Wave," for preserving oysters, lobsters, &c., 50 cts. per lb.; "Pearl," for preserving cream, $1.00 per lb.; "Snow Flake," for preserving milk, cheese, butter, &c., 50 cts. per lb.; "Queen," for prereving eggs, green corn on the ear, &c., $1.00 per lb.; "Aqua Vitae," for keeping fluid extracts, &c., $1.00 per lb.; "Anti-Ferment," "Anti-Fly," and "Anti-Mold," are special preparations, whose names explain their uses, each 50 cts. per lb.

How to Get It.

Sample packages sent pre-paid by mail or express as we prefer. Name your express office.

Rex Magnus is cheap, simple in its use, a child can use it, unfailing in its effects and healthful. Try it and you will say so too.

Physicians who will agree to test it can get a sample package free. Please state school of medicine.

Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

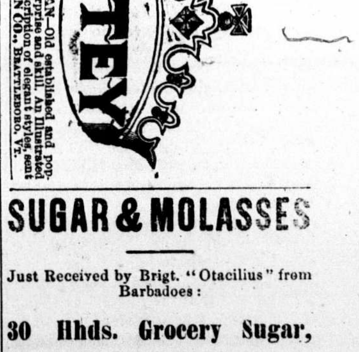

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

Issues in Westmorland.

The reckless partisanship of the St. John Grit press, which stirred into being the Convention at Shediac, is condemned on all sides, and by none more heartily than by the Attorney-General, who visited Westmorland last week, and who openly stated, he declined being held responsible for the utterances of those papers; asserting that his Government intended to persevere in that policy of strict neutrality in Dominion issues laid down at its formation. Westmorland has two candidates; Mr. Killam, who is suspected of having Opposition leanings in Dominion affairs, and Mr. Wells, of opposition proclivities in local affairs. We do not propose to make any invidious comparisons between these gentlemen personally: to deal with the principles they represent, rather then the men, is a statesmanlike course. We heartily approve of the position of one in Dominion issues. We cordially embrace the local policy represented by the other. A writer feels a natural diffidence in instituting comparisons between two politicians who are personally his friends, and who, moreover, both maintain lines of policy which he has advocated. This is our position, but, we cannot forbear stating our belief that the action of the Convention at Shediac was premature, if not ill advised, notwithstanding the exasperating language of the St. John papers. We believe there was no such terrible crisis upon the country as warranted the very few gentlemen assembled there, taking upon themselves the serious step of initiating a Dominion struggle on a local battle-ground. Sir John's majority in Parliament is still continuing to increase. To supply our people with domestic made goods and fabrics, and to create new classes of industries and employments in the Dominion, is a policy, not only not in danger, but is, every day becoming more fixed, as the permanent policy of the country. No apprehension seems entertained that any secret foe menaces the continued construction of the railway to the Pacific. It has already crossed the plains and touched the foot hills of the Rocky Mountains.

It is upon the success of these large measures the Liberal-Conservative party must stand or fall, and it is minifying a great party, and the far-reaching national designs upon which it was formed, to imagine it is endangered by the election of this or that man in a town meeting or even to that highly important institution, a local assembly. Without desiring to depreciate the work accomplished at Shediac, it seems to us, it promotes the colossal objects of the Conservative party as much as a soul-west gust in the Bay of Fundy affects the north star. A political party can be kept together in two ways, either by party organization and strict discipline, the party bosses whipping the rank and file into line and promptly punishing any show of personal independence, or secondly by a party adopting so wise, liberal and progressive a policy as to compel the adherence of fair and reasonable men.

The great Conservative victory of 1878 was one of ideas; independent men inspired by the new cause, everywhere broke loose from the rule of bosses and sundered party claims, to swell the triumphal progress of a revolution. A party elevated by such means into power, cannot be strengthened by a commerce in principles and a purchase and sale of support. The local parties in Ontario, Nova Scotia and Quebec have furnished no real aid to Sir John. In depricating the carriage of Dominion politics into local issues, the electors have nevertheless to face what seems to have developed into a square interest between the two parties. The Grit party will vote with Mr. Killam and Mr. Wells therefore appeals to the Conservatives.

It is to be regretted that the Shediac convention embraced so small a representation of the Conservative party. Had it been generally known that the object of calling the meeting was to select a candidate Sackville, Westmorland and other parishes would no doubt have elected and sent duly accredited candidates, who could have voiced the wishes of the party. The claims of the French nationality for the vacant seat would then have been fully considered, the same as it was at the Sackville convention in 1878, but Messrs. Harris, who appeared there as the moving spirits, seem to have been anxious to preserve the present political front, which could not be accomplished by permitting any nominations, French or English, to be made within the party, that might at the next general elections have created rivals to the Humphrey-Dr. Black alliance. The result is the French are practically disfranchised.

At the next elections, we will have Messrs. Hanington, Humphrey, Black and Wells, neither of whom we presume will find himself called upon to retire. The French are beyond question entitled to a representative in the Assembly by virtue of population Of late years, the common school as well as higher education, has given a great impetus to the social and political status of the Acadian people and a few years more, of such progress will give them standing and position equal to the most favored races. Mr. Landry's personal triumphs are but evidences of the advance of his people. Mr. Blair's Government as a reform one ought to take up this subject, and by proper legislation prevent the recurrence of disfranchisement. This can be done by dividing the county into electoral ridings—the same as in Ontario and Quebec—giving to the French such a preponderating vote in one of them as to ensure the election of one of them.

Sackville Exhibition.

The annual Exhibition of the S. & W. Agricultural Society, held on the 28th ult., was not less successful than usual. The morning was threatening, but excepting a light shower about noon, no rain fell, and the afternoon was very pleasant. The attendance was not quite up to last year, but quite up to the average, and things passed off generally with less friction than usual. While it may be said that the display on Friday was an average one, this is not all we ought to be able to say. Speaking generally of an exhibition, held in the centre of one of the finest agricultural districts in the province, under the auspices of one of the oldest societies, and one which counts on its roll of membership, some of the most intelligent farmers of New Brunswick, it might be expected, under such circumstances, that there would be steady advancement, and constant progress. It is true that the seasons exercise a very potent influence upon exhibitions, and the drought of this summer has told largely and seriously on the condition of the stock exhibited on Friday that had not been stall-fed, and the same cause operated against a first class show of roots.

While making allowance for the unfavorable season in the direction named, and admitting that in the ladies' department the show was excellent, still we think the display, as a whole, was up to the point it ought to be, or might be if the farmers would take hold as they should and bring their animals or articles to the exhibition even if it was some trouble. Nothing can be accomplished in this world without effort, and effort in most instances to be successful must be persistent. We live in an agricultural district, we are proud of our farmers, a very large number of them are prepared to take their stand beside any class of men, either in or out of the profession for intelligence and moral worth. We took no stock in the attempt of our St. John correspondent to belittle the Board of Agriculture and insult the farmers generally, and we are anxious the Sackville exhibition should be the very best local exhibition in the province, and thus it is that we write as we have done.

The exhibit of cattle and horses was exceptionally good. Messrs. Black's and George,s two-year-old steers were ahead of anything ever exhibited, and Mr. Wood's four-year-old steers were equally deserving of admiration, while the row of thorough-breds consisting of some thirty head persuaded the admirer of stock to pause. The horses in the 1, 2, and 3 years old colts were far above the average exhibit and proved beyond a doubt the advisability of breeding from thorough bred stock. In the 1 and 2 year old's the first prize was awarded to colts, bred from the thorough-bred horse Beacon, whose fine points, beauty of form and easy action, were easily traced in these colts. The track not being graded is a drawback to the exhibiting of horses. Want of space precludes the making of honorable mention in the various exhibits deserving them, but a pair of twin one-year steers raised by Mr. Buckley, of Amherst, and H. B. Allison's rare collection of plants deserves more than passing notice.

Mr. Henry Trueman had a very fine pair of draught horses well worthy of a prize, but, for some reason or other, they were over-looked by the judges.

—Farmers in this part of the world have little idea of the possibilities of the honey business. There has recently been held in Toronto a Convention of the North American Bee Keeper's Association, lasting for several days and attended by delegates from all points between Florida and Manitoba. Canada was found to easily "whip creation" in yield of honey, though encountering difficulties in the matter of wintering bees to which more Southern countries are strangers. Some idea may be formed of the extent to which this industry has been developed in the western part of our Dominion by the fact that no less than $30,000 worth of honey was on display at the Toronto Industrial Exhibition just closed! The Toronto Globe estimates that there is scarcely a country in the Dominion which could not be made to yield $100,000 worth of honey per annum, and even if that estimate be regarded as extravagant, it is but too evident that our farmers are culpably negligent in failing to harvest the vast honey-crop which annually goes to waste on their farms. Among other important points brought out at the Convention was the necessity of provision being made for instruction in bee-culture. There is at present but one Professor of Bee-culture in North-America, and that is Professor Cook of the Michigan Agricultural College, who has this year had under his instruction a class of 40 students. We wish that some of the farmers who read the Post would turn their attention to the matter and at the Agricultural Show next fall give us an exhibit of what the noble county of Westmorland can do in the matter of honey.

—In many parts of the Dominion the potato crop has been a failure, and it is thought by some that the coming winter will find potatoes scarce and dear. In the States there has been an increase of 15 per cent. in the acreage of the crop, but it is said the returns will not be proportionately large. Prices at present range from 25 to 50c per bush. and the New England Homestead thinks that the highest prices next spring in Boston will range from 75 to 85 cents.

Westmorland Election.

MR. EDITOR:—The question which naturally presents itself to the vast majority of the electors of Westmorland at the present time is: For whom shall I vote at the approaching Election? The mass of the people can have no possible interest in the result but the public good; and the paramont duty of the elector is to vote for the man whose character and political creed is best calculated for the general benefit of the Country. There are now two gentlemen asking for your suffrages, and it is proper in considering the question asked, to cast a hasty retrospect at the politics of the county for the last twenty-five years, their present state, and the position occupied by the respective candidates.

Without saying one word disparaging to the late Sir Albert J. Smith, it is notorious that for years he wielded all the political patronage of Westmorland, and gathered around him followers residing in various parts of the county, who yielded a blind obedience to his dictates. Sir Albert was a man who brooked no opposition, and to those who gave him even an honest and fair opposition, he set a mark opposite their names, and so far from being the recipients of any Government patronage, they were as if they did not exist. Sir Albert became a Grit, and Gritism was the political creed of Westmorland. The Dominion Election of 1878 took place, and R. A. Chapman, Esq., was the leader of the forlorn hope in the attempt to rescue Westmorland from the party which had captured her. He was defeated, but the good seed was sown and in 1882 yielded its harvest. Sir Albert was defeated, and Westmorland was redeemed from the curse of the do-nothing Grits. The local election followed, and the return of Liberal-Conservatives to the House of Assembly confirmed the decree of the people. A petition was filed against their return, and by consent the election was to be run over. Again the people pronounced themselves in favor of Liberal-Conservatism. One would have imagined that after the electors of Westmorland had thus spoken in unmistakeable language, the vanquished would have submitted; this they could not do; accustomed to rule, they believed they could still control the county which had just defeated the leader, who for years had led them on to victory, and accomplish by backstair influence what they could not effect by constitutional means. They have thus, since the advent of the Blair Government, succeeded in securing the patronage of the county at the disposal of the Local Government, and adopted the slaughtering process. R. A. Chapman, Esq., the most prominent Liberal-Conservative of Westmorland, was first marked as a victim; he was denounced, but, from a concurrence of influences the Grits could not control, to their disgust, he escaped their enmity; W. W. Wells, Esq., the Clerk of the County Court, another leading Liberal-Conservative, and a supporter of the Government for the time being, was without notice kicked out of office, and a violent Grit partizan put in his place. Crane Charters, Esq., another Conservative, the Supervisor of Great Roads, was in like manner dismissed, and the life long nominator of Sir Albert J. Smith as a candidate, and the petitioner against the return of Josiah Wood, Esq., to Parliament, was appointed. Thus the Local Government, while proclaiming neutrality in Dominion politics, handed over the patronage of the county to the defeated Grits who carried out to the fullest extent the policy of punishing the supporters of the Dominion Government by removing them from office and replacing them with red-hot Grits. Gritism was scorched, but not destroyed; it had vitality enough by intrigue, to irritate and wound the Liberal-Conservative party, and is now organized and in full activity, determined to recover its lost position, to stamp out Liberal-Conservatism, re-establish their rule under which the county for so many years suffered, and regain the seat in Parliament now held by Mr. Wood. This, the object of the Grits, is to be accomplished by waving the retrenchment flag, elevated by the Blair Government, and drawing to their ranks sufficient Liberal-Conservative voters to turn their minority into a majority. But when it is remembered that while this faction for nearly a quarter of a century had control of the county, they never carried into effect, or even brought forward, any such measures of retrenchment, what confidence can be placed in their professions? On Saturday next the candidates will appear before you, and then you will have an opportunity of questioning them. Mr. Wells, himself a victim of Gritism, will tell you he has no sympathy with that do-nothing obstructive party, and that he will not stultify himself by opposing any measures of reform or retrenchment, calculated to benefit the Provinces, introduced by the Blair Government; and you can ask Mr. Killam "did you recommend the Blair Government to remove Government officials being Liberal Conservatives and appoint in their places active Grits?" He will not, he cannot deny it; and his reply to that question is the answer to the question for whom you should vote.

Liberal-Conservatives, be not deceived, do not be led astray by plausible tales. Germany has its Republicans, France its Communists, Russia its Nihilists, the United States its Know-Nothings, Ireland its Fenians, and Canada its Grits

If needs be, I shall next week give you the names of the leaders of the Grit faction which is producing the present contest.

YOURS, &c.,
A LIBERAL CONSERVATIVE.
Westmorland, Oct. 2, 1883.

The Dominion Exhibition.

Great Success.—Crowds in the City.—Trade's Procession.—Port Elgin Cloths.—Oxford to the Front.—Joggins and River Hebert Coal.—The Model Dairy.

The Centennial Exhibition of 1883 is already almost a thing of the past. The preparations of many months are finished and have culminated in a pageant of industry that can be viewed so rapidly, that in a day or two the multitudes that throng the city and flood the streets, will regard it among the attractions that have ceased to be. It is a great success—beyond anything witnessed in the Maritime Provinces before. So great an exhibit of a people's industry so soon after the great fire had half burned up St. John, is an evidence of the pluck and enterprise of the business men of St. John, that makes them worthy descendants of those Royalists, whose advent it celebrates.

The Trades' Procession this morning was a striking affair, but is said not to have equalled a similar one in 1853, at the turning of the first sod of the E. & N. A. Ry. The various trades' in uniform—bakers, bricklayers, tailors, shoemakers, printers, brass-workers, each with banners and appropriate insignia—and numerous bands of music, with applauding crowds on the side-walks and filling the windows and house-tops, and smiled upon by a glorious sunshine—was a brave sight and not easily forgetten.

The Exhibition building and grounds were crowded to-day, by people from all parts of the Maritime Provinces. Rain came in the afternoon and marred much of the pleasure of the occasion. In the main building Westmorland and Cumberland take a prominent place. One side of an avenue is draped with homespuns and tweeds from Messrs. J. Read & Sons' mills, Port Elgin. It embraces some 70 varieties. The patterns and styles are new and fashionable. While it is impossible to make the finest class of goods from our coarse wools, Messrs. Read are to be congratulated on making cloths that experts can find no flaw in, either as regards design or texture. The Oxford mills make even a larger show than the Port Elgin. Nothing but praise can be said of the samples they show—exhibiting at once the resources of the Oxford mills and the enterprise of their owners. Some of the flannel and tweeds rival the best imported. The Spring Hill Coal Company make as usual a fine display of the various sorts of coal they sell. The Joggins Railway Co., has also erected a stand of coal, embracing steam coal, nut, grate, &c., all of which presents a handsome appearance. The River Hebert Coal Co., makes a most excellent show of coal from their mine—in large masses as well as small for grates. This coal being mined near the surface is slightly discolored by lime. While this somewhat mars the beauty of the coal, it in no way detracts from its commercial value. From the main building, your correspondent wended his way to the drill shed where at 3 o'clock, Prof. Sheldon was to exhibit his model dairy in operation. The room was crowded and such was the hum of voices, he could scarcely be heard. The engine, the Prof. stated, had "levanted," so the dairy was not put into operation. The Professor was flanked by a lot of machinery. There were a series of wooden appliances, rollers, &c., for working butter; a lot of shallow dishes; a number of oaken barrel-like churns to be driven by steam power; milk tanks connected with steam, and also a tubular cream separator. The latter consists of two metal cylinders holding perhaps 10 gals. each, below which is a sort of turbine wheel arrangement driven by steam, with two spouts. The milk is poured in the top cylinder, power put on, and the cream comes out one spout and milk the other. Prof. Sheldon stated it would require great labor and space to take care of the milk of 500 cows by the old process, but by this it could be done with rapidity, ease and economy. He shewed samples of hermetically sealed butter made in Denmark for Southern markets. Only ½ oz. of salt is used to each lb. of butter, yet the butter keeps two years. He thought we could furnish butter for this trade. Referring to the advantage of allowing cream to ripen without souring in order to develop the flavor of the butter, he went on to remark that the best butter makers do not not work butter with their hands at all, because butter is liable to receive emanation from the hands. The Prof. promised to make butter to-morrow.

—Premier Smith, of British Columbia, has not apparently that keen sense of international politeness which should distinguish a man in his high position. Being invited the other day to lunch on board the steamer "North Pacific," with the members of the press that were present at the festivities consequent on the opening of the N. P. railway, he delivered himself of the following among other remarks; "It is a matter of deep conviction with me and many others, who have attentively considered the drift of affairs in the United States, that that country cannot continue undivided. Its elements of population are too varied, the interests of different sections are too diverse, and the day must come when it must go pieces, and when that day comes British Columbia will be glad to take into her arms that fragment of it which is her natural neighbor." We fear that we have here an exemplificaton of the old saying "when the wine's in, the wit's out."

The Rev. J. W. S. Young, in a letter to the "Carleton Sentinel" of a recent date, says:—This is the first time I ever gave a testimonial to a paper in favor of any medicine, but it seems my duty to say I think "W. T. Baird's Cure-All Liniment" the best we ever used in our family for Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, and Pains in the Stomach.

Personal and Political.

—The Earl of Somers is dead, aged 64 years.

—The new Lord Mayor, of London, is named R. N. Fowler.

—Rev. Percy M. Punshon, a son of the late Rev. Wm. Morley Punshon, is on a visit to Canada.

—W. J. Rattray, a well known litterateur and journalisI, died at Toronto on Wednesday night.

—Miss Blanche Grey, reported to be the fattest woman living, was married in New York last week. She tips the scale at 517 lbs.

—Sir Edward Sullivan, the recently appointed Lord Chancellor, of Ireland, is a small man physically, but is withal a fine scholar, an able lawyer, and an eloquent speaker.

—Chief-Justice Coleridge is said to be carefully watched by detectives while travelling in the United States, by way of anticipating the polite attentions of the Irish Invincibles.

—The Rev. Dr. Rice and the Rev. Dr. Carman, the newly appointed General Superintendents of the Methodist Church, will reside respectively in Toronto and Belleville.

—General Luard has got into his annual row—this time with a volunteer officer at Cobourg. The General is said at such times to develop a fine artistic subtlety in the matter of profane language.

—Admiral Baldwin, of the American navy, recently received as a present from the Czar of Russia a snuff-box worth $15,000. Before, however, he can really call it his own, he has to obtain the consent of Congress.

—Mr. Gladstone, in pursuit of his favorite pastime, recently cut down a large oak-tree in Hawarden Park amid the loud cheers of a number of strangers who were present witnessing the exploit.

—Canada contributes the following names to the list of the Vice-Presidents of the British Association for the Advancement of Science: Sir Charles Tupper, Sir A. Galt, Sir N. Belleau, Chief Justice Dorion, Principal Dawson, Prof. Kingston, Prof. Sterry Hunt.

—The cause of Mr. Whitcher's suspension from duty is his communication to the press, pointing out, from official statistics, that fish culture in the Dominion was a failure. Mr. McLelan attributes the cause of Canada not getting first prize at the International Fisheries Exhibition to the course pursued by Mr. Whitcher.

To the Electors of the County of Westmorland.

GENTLEMEN: In compliance with the request of a large number of friends in different parts of the County, I shall be a Candidate for your suffrages, caused by the resignation of the Hon. P. A. Landry. If honored with a majority of your votes, my best efforts will be used to promote your interests. Soliciting your cordial support,
I am, gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE COUNTY OF WESTMORLAND.

GENTLEMEN:—At the request of a large number of the Electors of this County, I offer for the seat in the Provincial Legislature, made vacant by the resignation of Mr. P. A. Landry, who has gone to Kent.
My record when I had the honor to represent the County is before you.
The present Government shall have my support in carrying out the reforms promised by them—some of them so well begun.
The question for the Electors to decide now is not one of a Dominion character, but whether the Electors of this County desire to be in accord with the Government of the day and wish to have a better Administration of public affairs, or not.
If elected I shall do all I can to advance the best interests of Westmorland in particular and the Province in general.
I have the honor to be,
Your obedient servant,

—By an explosion of a steam threshing machine at Asakes Station, Minneapolis, Minn., four men were instantly killed and six others terribly wounded.

—The Washington authorities have asked the Canadian Government for information connected with the working of the Post Office Savings Bank, with a view to its probable adoption.

—The Hochelaga cotton factory has discharged about 100 hands, mostly single men and boys, and Ste. Anne cotton factory, of Hochelaga, will also send a number adrift soon.

—If you are a frequenter or a resident of a miasmatic district, barricade your system against the scourge of all new countries—ague, bilious and intermittent fevers—by the use of Hop Bitters.

—Judge Smith, on the opening of the Supreme Court at Windsor, N. S., some days ago, was presented by the sheriff with the customary pair of white kids, there being no criminals for trial.

—There is no remedy known to medical science that is more positive in its effect, to cure Cholera Morbus, Colic, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Cholera Infantum, and all Bowel Complaints than Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

—It is a fact that Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has more well earned testimonials of praise for its virtues in curing Cholera, Colic, Cholera Infantum, Dysentery, etc., than all other remedies of that class combined. It will stand investigation.

—Rheumatism is the most painful and most troublesome disease that afflicts humanity. It comes when we least expect it and when we have no time to be interviewed by it. The only reliable remedy that we ever found is Johnson's Anodyne Liniment.

—Election matters make little stir. Mr. Killam opened his side of the campaign with a meeting at Rockport, on Monday night. Mr. Wells, meanwhile, is stumping Botsford.

—The Union Freestone Co. have purchased from Mr. R. Stevenson a quarry property for $3,000, which they are about commencing to operate.

—A public opening of the new pipe organ presented to the Methodist Church, Dorchester, by Alexander Black, Esq., will take place on Friday evening, Oct. 12th, at 7 p. m. Prof. C. E. Cranz, of Sackville Academy, will give an organ recital, and various selections will be sung by his choir. The instrument is a credit to the builders, (Messrs. Paine & Co., St. John,) and competent judges speak very highly of its tune and general capacity. A silver collection will be taken up on the occasion to be applied towards paying off the debt on Church.

Baie Verte Items.

—Barque "Hiawatha" sailed on the 22nd ult., for Belfast. The Captain's wife and family accompany him.

—W. W. Wells addressed a meeting last Monday evening in the Temperance Hall, on the political issues of the day. People, as a general thing, do not take much interest in the present political contest.

—Mr. Hiram Oulton, of Baie Verte, was seriously injured by being thrown out of his wagon the other day, the same having come in contact with another. His head was badly cut, his wrist unjointed and his thumb put out of place.

—Commissioner Silliker's court room was crowded a few days ago to listen to, as supposed, important criminal cases, but the spectators were disappointed. Augustus Gooden and Obadiah Gooden, on the complaint of Henry Gooden, were arrested and brought before the above named Commissioner, for having, on the 15th of last month, assaulted said Gooden. On trial it was clearly shewn that no assault had been committed, and the accused parties were honorably discharged; the weight of evidence went to shew that the complainant was acting the aggressor.

FROM PUGWASH.

—No further developments in the short line railway matters.

—Two barques, "Sarah" and "Niard," sailed on the 28th Sept. and the "Wirjem," on 2nd Oct., all deal laden for England.

—The late rain will afford great relief to the cattle all about the country, that were suffering for water, and will change the hue of the fields and pastures from gray to green.

—Mr. Hutton, with some of his pupils from the Halifax Institute for the deaf and dumb, gave an entertainment for the benefit of the institute, on Monday evening. It was very interesting.

GROWTH OF A LARGE INDUSTRY.—Such has been the growth of the business of WM. KNABE & Co., piano manufacturers, that even their immense factories have not been large enough for them. To accommodate this increasing business they have leased a large and convenient building just opposite their factories. The building was formerly used as a tobacco factory, and its size suits well for the purposes to which it will be put. The building is on the southwest corner of Eutaw and West streets, fronting 155 feet on West street and 45 feet deep, with an engine house 40 by 45 feet. It is four stories in height, with a basement. By this extensive addition, the firm will be able to increase its production to 70 pianos a week.—From the Baltimore American.

A Fearful Tragedy at Moncton.

Mrs. McMonagle Shot Through the Neck.

Yesterday morning a little after 8 o'clock Mrs. McMonagle, or Mrs. Marshall, who lives on Wesley street, was shot, perhaps fatally, by her husband, from whom she had been separated and who came to Moncton a day or two ago. Marshall is a reckless, dissipated character with whom the victim of this tragedy found it impossible to live after their marriage, and in consequence she came to Moncton a year or two ago and has since lived on Wesley street, supporting herself and family. The principal facts are that Marshall entered the house yesterday morning and asked her to go and live with him, which she refused to do, and thereupon he aimed his revolver at her and fired. He then left the house and ran up Wesley Street. The ball passed through the neck in a slanting direction. Drs. Ross and Covey were immediately sent for.

The Popular Science Monthly for October, 1883.

The high character of "The Popular Science Monthly" is vigorously sustained by its October issue. Of its fifteen articles there is none which will not repay careful reading, and from which something new and valuable can not be learned. The present state of thought in regard to the nature of life is well reflected in the first article, by Paul R. Shipman, on "Matter Living and Not-Living." Dr. Bayard then takes a hand in the conflicts of the medical schools, to show "Homœopathy" is a "Science." Dr. Abraham Jacobi has an elaborate and most interesting article on "The Historical Development of Modern Nursing." "Clothing and the Atmosphere," by Radau; "The Chemistry of Cookery," by Professor Williams; and "The Alcohol-Habit," by Dr. Oswald, in his series on "The Remedies of Nature," are papers of great practical worth. Those of more purely scientific interest are "Cyclones and Tornadoes," "The Colors of Flowers," "Vegetating Animals," "How the Earth was Peopled," "The Liver-Fluke in Sheep," "The Savings of Science," etc., etc. There are a portrait and biographical sketch of the celebrated hygienist of Munich, Dr. Max von Pettenkofer, and a large mass of criticism and miscellaneous information in the editorial departments. The October "Monthly" is a kind of scientific book that will be permanently valuable, and this is wherein it differs from most of the other magazines.

Every Spring.

HOW AN AFFLICTING ANNUAL VISITOR WAS DRIVEN FROM A WEARY WOMAN.

Pain and simple mechanisms are not liable to get out of order. Complicated watches, intended not only to keep the time of day, but to mark the movements of the moon and stars, are certain to need frequent repairs. Husbands and fathers often fail to see their wives and daughters are more delicately organized than themselves, requiring corresponding care when they are well and assistance when tney are ill. Yet much better for woman's fine system is a trustworthy medicine, ready at all times for use, than a deal of tinkering by semi-educated local practitioners.

"Every spring," said the wife of a well known employee of the Grand Trunk Railway, Montreal, "I have been for some years past troubled with nervous debility and weakness. It was the burden which so many women are called upon to bear, although none the lighter for that.

"Advice and dosing, to be sure, I had in plenty; still, on each returning spring my sickness came as regularly as the buds and blossoms.

"'You seem better now.'

"Oh yes; I consider myself almost or quite well, and it came about in this way: A lady living on St. Catherine street, this city, commended to my attention Sulphur and Iron Bitters, and it gave me strength and life. My sister, living in Brockville, whose disease was nearly the same as mine, was equally benefited by the same thing."

Sulphur and Iron Bitters, prepared by the Climax Chemical Co., Montreal, is for sale by all druggists. Price, 50 cents.

In the Whole History of Medicine

No preparation has ever performed such marvellous cures, or maintained so wide a reputation, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which is recognized as the world's remedy for all diseases of the throat and lungs. Its long-continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it universally known as a safe and reliable agent to employ. Against ordinary colds, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders, it acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering, and often saving life. The protection it affords, by its timely use in throat and chest disorders, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. From their knowledge of its composition and operation, physicians use the CHERRY PECTORAL extensively in their practice, and clergymen recommend it. It is absolutely certain in its healing effects, and will always cure where cures are possible.

—The comet of 1812 has made its appearance and is hastening rapidly towards the sun. Soon after it was seen by the telescope it suddenly blazed up into fifteen times its previous brightness, undergoing at the same time very singular and rapid changes of form. Astronomers can account for these phenomena only by supposing that it has collided with some other body drifting through space. We are justified, therefore, in supposing that, when it "swims into our ken" so as to be seen by the naked eye, it will present a very striking appearance.

Odds and Ends.

—Mr. Cobb married Miss Webb; he knew that they were intended for each other as soon as he spider.

—Some one who believes that "brevity is the soul of wit" writes: "Don't eat cucumbers. They'll W up."

—"Why did you marry such an ugly, disagreeable man?" asked a pretty bather of another at the sands of Boulogne. "Why, did you see, my dear," replied the young wife, "in marrying the monster I was sure not to lose my admirers."

—"What's your occupation?" asked a Judge of a "drunkard" that came up for inspection in the morning. "I am a calker, sir," was the reply. "A calker!" exclaimed the Judge; "what an inaptitude of language; I should say you were an uncorker. Give him sixty days." "That's a 'corker,' surely," was the victim's retort.

—On the sands at Boulogne. The breakfast bell sounds. "Come, countess," says one of the guests in a sepulchural voice as he offered his arm to the lady, "let us eat some dead fish." "Oh, the horrid things!" she exclaims. "How, madame! Are you in the habit of eating fish alive?" is the naive response.

—In a certain Arkansas dance house and saloon there is a reversible motto hanging against the wall. At the opening of the festivities the motto reads: "God Bless Our Home." But as the evening wanes, and knives and pistols flourish in the air, the proprietor flops the motto over, and it reads: "What will the harvest be?"—Texas Siftings.

—Hooray for Matthew Arnold, the poet with a pension! Don't let it make you idle, Mr. Matthew! Don't lie on your back and repeat yourself, singing, "I'll spend the goodly treasures I have got." Don't with a pension be a pen-shunner. Remember that though we have just now an only general, yet the laureate is not our only poet.—Punch.

—Even in the making of a will, these little peculiarities will occasionally present themselves: "I give and beqeath to my beloved wife Bridget the whole of my property without reserve; and to my eldest son, Patrick, one-half of the remainder; and to Dennis, my youngest son, the rest. If anything is left it may go, together with the old cart without wheels, to my sincere and affectionate friend, Terence McCarthy, in sweet Ireland."

—"You want something to eat, do you?" inquired a man of a lame tramp at the back door of his residence. "Ave you plase, sor." "What made you lame?" "It wus the earthquake, sor." "An earthquake!" "Yis, sor. Ye see, I'm an Italian from the island of Ischia, an' whin the earthquake shuk up the surface av the planet it sprung me knee, an' I'm unable to wurk, which the same I'd be plased to do if I was able." When the bulldog made a rapid exit through the gate, he was preceded by the Italian earthquake sufferer.—Texas Siftings.

This Woman's Deaf and Dumb.

I knew a woman wondrous fair—
A model woman she—
Who never runs her neighbors down
When she goes out to tea.

She never gossips after church
Of dresses or of hats:
She never meets the sewing school
And joins them in their spats.

She never beats a salesman down,
Nor asks for pretty plaques;
She never asks the thousand things
Which do his patience tax.

These statements may seem very strange—
At least they may to some.
But just remember this, my friends—
This woman's deaf and dumb.

CONTINUED.

"Is there any other spot you can think of where a flower might lodge?" he went on, for Sibyl's touches about the house were always reminding him of a breezy day when scarlet whiffs of poppy-leaves kept flitting through his blind and dropping here and there about his room. Somehow the world had seemed warmer for every gleam, and he had half a mind now to set his door open, and see if she wouldn't let some bright thought blow over to his side. But he didn't quite dare to try; he had better be contented to warm himself at her poppies wherever she chose they should grow.

"Yes," answered Sibyl, laughing; "there is just one more. Do you see that dark old chimney-piece in there? I know it's very fine, with the Arnsden heraldry carved. and all that; but it's dark, and my fingers ache to run a trail of wild roses up through the fretwork of each of those brown old jambs! Only give me leave, Penelope! There are roses on the Arnsden shield, you know; Lancastrian, I suppose, but I promise you these sha'n't be too gay. They shall hide behind their leaves with the veriest Puritanic grace."

The next day Sibyl stood at her work, palette in hand, and with Philip looking on at her side.

"Do you like wild roses?" she asked as the first blossom peeped out from under her brush. "What stem would you choose as the divining rod of your life?" she added, as she raised her eyes to his.

"Witch-hazel," said Philip, stooping to shoot back a quick look, till the misty hair almost brushed his empty sleeve. Then Sibyl looked down, Philip looked down and Miss Penelope looked up; and then neither of them moved or stirred while a separate thrill, followed by a separate thought, ran through every one of the three.

"Forty years old, at least,—very possibly more," said Sibyl to herself.

"But she hates old things," was Philip's thought, rousing him, like a little shake, out of a dream.

"But she hates anything with a nick in it," was Miss Penelope's as she glanced, half triumphant, half wrathful, at an empty sleeve. But the next moment Philip started suddenly, looked at the sofa where Miss Penelope was sitting, walked hastily over to it and sat down.

There was nothing especially like Robinson Crusoe's island about that sofa, but they both felt that a great wave had for one moment almost swallowed them up, and that they were thrown back again now, hand in hand, on their mother earth once more, a little shocked and bewildered, but flat and safe, and never to drift out to sea again.

Then Sibyl looked up, and swept a swift glance over the sofa for herself. She had read "Robinson Crusoe," too, and one look was enough to show her the lay of the land. "Were there ever three such blind moles under one roof at once?" she exclaimed under her breath, as she turned quietly back to her work.

On swept the days, recklessly still, till the fires the frost had kindled in the woods had burned themselves out, and the ashes, strewn to the winds, lay cold and dead under foot, with only a red spark glancing here and and there. But the fields were cleared, the harvests were reaped, and it was time to make merry in the house, with thanks for the year that was gone.

"Next week?" said Miss Penelope. "Yes, Thanksgiving-day comes next week. I did not thing it was so soon. Sibyl, how would you like to have been at the ball our Great-grandmother Arnsden gave in this house, on the night of the most famous Thanksgiving-day ever ordered for the States? Revolutionary, remember, dear,—people, and costumes and all; there is a record somewhere of all the officers and great folk who were here. If we had but some sorcerer's spell to bring back a vision of that dance for us next week! Though that day was really so near Christmas that we might put it over to Christmas Eve if we preferred."

"What do you want of a spell?" cried Sibyl, starting up with shining in her eyes. "There is one Blue-Beard trunk upstairs you have never opened for me yet, and I'm sure half the dresses of that very night are lying in it still. Why shouldn't we choose what would suit us best, send for the Van Ransackers, and scour half the country beside, and see if the ghosts of that very hour can't flit about here again, when the time comes, in real, warm flesh and blood?" Only give me the key of that trunk! There'll be no red stain, if I happen to drop it, I hope!"

But the key did not drop; the lock flew back, and there lay the gay procession of the past,—damasks and satins and silks, petticoats, knee-breeches and high-heeled shoes, paste-buckles and yellowed lace; it was a reveling hour for Sibyl's white hands as they shook them, one after another, out of their overlong naps, without the slightest ado.

"But what is this?" she cried, as a broad sheet of net-work, heavy with goblin flowers and frost, fell open in one uncut fold.

"Neapolitan lace," answered Miss Penelope; "the Countess of Somewhere gave it to a great uncle of ours, when he was a young man abroad, to make his bride a dress. But the fair bride died, poor thing! and it has lain folded away here ever since."

"And has not that been long enough?" asked Sibyl, with a tender touch in her tone for the long-dead bride; "it is just what I want to make a drapery for that old window down-stairs!"

The last red spark had died out from the ashes in the woods, and the first light whirl of snow had flown across the sky, not as if it were anything that meant to stay, but only as if some white, migratory flock were hurrying past; and so the centennial day had come. A gray, lowery day outside, but merry with crackling fires within; and now there was to be a real Revolutionary little tea in the parlor, before it was time to think of such a thing as evening guests. But the evening dress was to appear in full, and there was to be only "antiquayted speeche,"—Sibyl had declared that, —and the tiny, three legged stand, with its carved stem and its top ready to tilt upright whenever it was not in use, stood where the lights and shadows from the chimney could frolic over it best.

"It pleases good Master Philip to tarry rather late. I wonder if he has right excuse?" said Sibyl, as with her hair drawn back over a cushion of monstrous height, she stood tapping the hearth-rug with one of Grandmother Schuylkill's tiny slippers that peeped out from under her brocaded petticoat, a perfect fit. "And this is not the first character in which it hath pleased him to defer somewhat overlong!" she added silently, with a little frown of the impatience that had been gathering ever since her discovery on Robinson Crusoe's land. "I know well that Penelope hath placed fresh candles in his room for the one readiness; but for the other, I think he hath surely most strange and total need of light. I am well purposed to set it before him, as opportunity may first; and, indeed, my cousin Penelope's eyes seem set with equal strangeness from perceiving her true estate," and the tiny Schuylkill slipper tapped the rug again spicily with the suddenness of her resolve.

Miss Penelope glanced up at her where she stood, as the fire-light just touched her rose-colored damask gown, with its long bodice, its looped tournure, and its lace-ruffled sleeves that fell back from the elbow with a dainty grace, while more of the same priceless lace turred the corners of its Pompadour front and lay shyly on her breast.

"Truly, sweet cousin, I cannot say," she answered; but the placing of the bee upon your cheek is altogether well chosen, and adds much to your dignity, as I think."

"More than the star above my eyebrow? It is always a delicate matter to decide; but I am well pleased if you can praise it, though I believe if Master Philip—or Colonel Philip, as I suppose his dignity behooves me to say—would grant us leave, I am quite as much minded to think on a cup of tea."

Miss Penelope wore her patches, too,—a minute carriage and pair resting on her cheek, just where its jetty blackness made the most striking contrast to her faultless skin; while her dark hair, powdered with a sudden snow, had even a statelier building than Sibyl's own, and her cream-colored silk, heavy with bright brocaded flowers and sprigs, fell over its petticoat in noiseless folds. Old lace was as becoming to Miss Penelope as to Sibyl, too, and rose and fell on her breast as it might on a queen's; while the short drapery of her sleeve let a fan of enormous length hang from her elegant arm, and a diamond buckle flashed from her high-heeled shoe.

"I suppose an officer of so high a rank must be granted fair excuse, even though there be scant pleading to contrive it from," said Miss Penelope; but at that instant the door opened, and Philip was there to answer for himself—tall, erect, and his dark eyes shining strangely under his heavily powdered hair.

"I hope I have not need to entreat your grace, fair cousins," he said, with a stately bow that scarcely stirred the ribboned cue from the monstrous collar of his gold-laced coat, and stepping across the floor, he raised Miss Penelope's hand to his lips, while his diamond-hilted sword rattled at his side, a medal of colonial stamp shone on his long-lapped waistcoat of flowered white silk, and jewelled buckles flashed from his knees and shoes.

It was a merry little tea-drinking, spite of its stately grace; and the bumble-bee cream-pitcher was there again, and such tiny cups that Miss Penelope begged Colonel Philip to feel no "prickings or compunctions" if she filled his many times, for had not good Mistress Thrale often poured thirty-seven such for a certain famous guest? And when it was over, Miss Penelope rose and stood at one corner of the fire, Philip leaned against the chimney-piece at the other side, and Penelope swept a glance around the room. The Naples lace, draped on two crossed swords with gleaming hilts, lighted and shaded the deep old window at once, the sliding shelves held the Dutch sugar-bowls crowded with asters still, the bamboo-hung saucers were dripping with scarlet vines and the cabinet was crowded with Schuylkill flagons, brilliant with hot-house flowers. Great logs burned on Cadwellington andirons rescued from long neglect, and the wild roses climbed shyly up toward the Ansden shield, while a peep into the hall showed the wind-mill arms of the old reel holding a pearl-colored satin cloak Penelope had thrown aside, the red-seated chair contrasted with a stately gleam, and through the half-open dining-room door the long, spindle-legged side-board was seen holding the Oldthrope punch-bowl, heaped up with purple grapes.

"Sweet Cousin Sibyl, said Miss Penelope, unfolding her vast fan with a queenly smile,—only a genuine Cadwellington smile, however, after all,—"how may it seem to your imagining? Does there not yet continue any old thing that your fair fingers might, to so great advantage, bestow in a new place? I am minded to think not."

"Yea, truly, Penelope!" answered Sibyl, with a sudden leaping of her eyes quite over to where Miss Penelope stood, "there remains, verily, one more; and yet, so far from being counted the last, it might, indeed, long ago have been first and most honorably placed." And, springing from her chair, she stepped lightly to where Philip stood, took his right hand in hers, and leading him across the room, joined it in Penelope's own.

"Nay, what!" said Miss Penelope, but Sibyl had vanished from the room, and then the two stood speechless with a far deeper thrill than that of the other day, for no torch, flaming in a Robinson Crusoe cave, ever flashed longer darkness into more sudden and bewildering light. But the shock of the first glare abated, and the thrill, deep as it was, began to go strangely deeper still, till it settled into a glow that left the Cadwellington andirons and the fire altogether out of sight.

"Gentle cousin—Penelope," said Philip, stooping his powdered wig for a closer look, "how would your sweet heart answer, if, to my entreating, it might be even so?"

There was silence for a moment, and then Penelope spoke:

"Truly, I should be forced to confess it—Revolutionary, at least!" she said, with a quick smile flashing out of her eyes, and there was no need of anything more. Was there any other word that could mean so much as that?

What Have You to Say, Sir?

Mr. Jenkins had an eye to the beautiful, and when his wife brought into the domestic economy a real pretty house-girl, Mr. J. began to scout around for game. Mrs. J. had her eyes open, and one day caught her lord unsuccessfully trying to kiss the girl.

"Well, sir," said she, with frozen dignity and unutterable scorn, "I've caught you, have I?"

"The indications would warrant such a conclusion, my dear," he replied coolly.

"What have you to say, sir?"

"Well, my dear, it isn't exactly in order for any lengthy remarks, but I should say if it was as hard to kiss you as it was to kiss that girl, I don't really believe I could stand the racket oftener than once in ten years." Then he mopped his prespiring brow and took a long breath, and his wife sent the girl away and hired a colored woman.
