Anxiety Over the Situation in Africa-French Forces Advancing Toward the British Legion -The Latter Prepared to Fight-A Wretched Duke—Tempers Tried at the Queen's Reception -Sir Frederick Leighton's Recovery Assured. ~~~××××

was questioned in the House of Commons several times last week respecting the Anglo-French situation in Africa, and the replies have been cautious to the point almost of mis-statement. Parliament and the public have been led by this official reticence to assume that everything is going on well, whereas all trustworthy news from the spot received in London and Paris shows that the state of affairs is serious, if not actually dangerous.

There are really two areas of disturbance, one in the Niger region and the other north of Uganda, on the Upper Nile. The former is within reach of the telegraph, and if the English and French and their native allies should come to blows the fighting could be stopped before it assumed dangerous proportions. But orders take a month's time to reach the Upper Nile region, and the English might wipe out the French, or vice versa, and establish their predominance long before the news could reach Europe.

Nobody whose duty it is to make inquiries at official quarters can fail to be struck with the anxiety which prevails there. The lovers of peace take comfort from the fact that a civilian has just been appointed Governor of Uganda; but the history of British India shows that ambitious, masterful civilians can become very military indeed, when occasion requires, and in any event there are several young English officers now in Uganda in various capacities. The forces at their command are far from dispicable. Emin Pasha's little army of Soudanese soldiers formed a good foundation for the English officers to work upon, and native warriors have been enlisted and sedulously drilled. Moreover, the British have machine guns and plenty of arms and ammunition generally, all collected ostensibly for use against Arab slave raiders, but really for the set purpose of maintaining the British position in the Upper Nile region against all in-

When the curtain was last lifted, two French expeditions were moving steadily toward the country, for the retention of which these young Uganda officers will fight as long as they have a cartridge left, well knowing that that is what is expected of them, no matter what their nominal instructions may be. Their guns and well-drilled men would give them an immense advantage over the Frenchmen, and they would win easily, and their victory would cause such a prodigious pother in France that the diplomats would require all their skill and patience to keep the two nations from coming to blows. That is the real situation, and that is why the great men of the earth, who recoil with dread from the bare prospect of a war between England and France, have their eyes anxiously fixed upon Egypt and Central Africa.

A WRETCHED NOBLEMAN. The late Duke of Hamilton had estates in four Scottish and English counties, comprising perhaps hundreds of thousands of acres, and with a tenantry of probably two score thousand souls or more. The power for good or ill of a great country landlord over the happiness, morals and physical progress, and, in fact, almost every detail of the daily life of his tenants is almost il-To this vast responsibility there succeeds today a young man of 33, a remote cousin of the late nobleman. What are his habits, his character, his antecedents, his views of life and of his responsibility, and the probable use he will make of it, not only in respect to his tenantry, but in his successon also to his hereditary legislative duties, are questions of obviously momentous importance to this realm, yet not a single London newspaper tells us anything more of this young man than that he was born in 1862 and was once a lieutenant in the royal navy. The great Times gives two lines to him, the Telegraph four. Imagine an event of this character occurring with us, and how instantly and adequately the American papers would respond to its great import.

The story of the late duke's wretched and useless life should be used to point a moral of the utmost importance. He seemes to have had no comprehension of his duties or responsibilities. His reckless life once brought hm to the verge of bankruptcy, which was averted only by the shrewdness of his business agent, and his tenantry were probably, therefore, the severest sufferers. He had for years almost abandoned English society, shunned London, and was only seen occasionally at the Newmarket races or on his yacht at Cowes.

Among the many wild exploits of his youth I am told he was concerned in a night broil in the London Haymarket, which resulted in the death of a police-Some time since he developed symptoms of heart disease, and placed himself under a noted specialist for the treatment of his corpulency, as he had been advised that his only chance of prolonging his life was to reduce his The specialist ordered him to stop all drink beyond a half pint of wine, whereas the duke had been accustomed to take seven or eight bottles of the finest claret daily. H could not stand the specialist's regime, and reverted after a few weeks of abstinence to his former habits, and had a renewed and acute attack of gout, which went to his heart and killed him. The Duke of Hamilton was a noted gourmand, and the story goes in London society that he and Mr. Wilson, the husband of the sister of the Duke of Fife, who was divorced from her husband, Adrian Hope, were wont to sit down together to a roast sucking nig and a large suet pudding, both of which they invariably finished. The Duke of Hamilton was a miserable man, and he was given to lamenting that though he had six palaces he had no home. His sister was married in 1869 to the Prince of Monaco, but in 1880 the Pope annulled the marriage on the ground that it was procured by duress by the agency of the Empress Eugenie. The Duke of Hamilton had squander-

IN HONOR OF VICTORIA. Next Friday Queen Victoria will have reached her 76th birthday, and all over the United Kingdom preparations are being made for an appropriate celebration of the event. It is noteworthy, however, that in the midst of the rejoicings over the continued life of the venerable sovereign there is a looking toward the future, for a London poet has improvised an additional verse to the National Anthem, which will be sung at all the school children's celebratons throughout the country. It runs this way:

When at some future day Albert this isle shall sway, God grant us that he may Rule like our Queen. May he defend our laws, And ever give us cause To sing with heart and voice, God save the King.

equivalent to presentation to the Queen herself, there was much grumbling among young women who had spent days in practising how to bend low and kiss the monarch's hand with the minimum amount of awkwardness. Then, following upon a week of warm, summer-like weather, drawing-room day was cold and cheerless, with a high wind which drove dust through the most carefully closed carriage windows, spoiled dresses, ruined complexions, and caused an amount of untimely sneezing that was distressing to witness unless to brutal, scoffing spectators. The number of presentations was comparatively small, but the Princess was ten minutes late and there were several waits and hitches which, had the Queen been present, would have got the court officials into serious trouble. The general verdict was that the Marchioness of Londonderry, who presented the Dowager Duchess of Marlberough on her remarriage, were the finest diamonds, and that one of the most striking dresses was that of Lady Jane Lindsay, the material of which had been sent all the way to China to embroidered with sprays of strang

CYCLING DRESS FOR WOMEN. Profound interest is caused by the announcement that some beneficient genius has at length invented a perfect costume for lady cyclists which gives all the freedom of male garments without detracting from the natural grace of the lovelier sex. The woman, declares the proud inventor, may henceforth ride about the country without fear of exciting the flippant remarks of townspeople or the coarser jests of yokels, and cycling will receive an immense impetus out of which the manufacturers of machines will make fortunes. As far as is known the new costume has not yet been placed on the market, but from information received, the New York Sun reporter is enabled to say that the leading feature of it is a weird arrangement of straps, the manipulation of which will, apparently, convert the riding garb into an ordinary walking dress. The reporter is unable to say what will happen if any of the straps go wrong when the conversion is in LEIGHTON'S RECOVERY ASSURED Sir Frederick Leighton's recovery at Algiers now seems assured, and no news could be more welcome to the profession he adorns or to the public of London, who rightly regard the president of the Royal Academy as not only great painter, but as the personification of all that is elegant and accomplished in English polite society. Sir Frederick would have been eminent in any calling. In addition to being a great draughtsman and a fantastic colorist, he is a scholar, an orator, a linguist, a man of business, a man of the world, with a "speaking acquaintance" with everything that embellishes life. Like the American Roscoe Conkling, his admirers see in him a strik-ing personal resemblance to Apollo— Apollo in a swallow-tail. His hyacinthine locks-time is thinning them a little-have furnished inspiration to many a cartoonist, and moved the artistic nature of many women to tears.

HIGH JINKS AT WARWICK. The historic glories of Warwick Castle have been revived this week by the present Earl of Warwick and his wife. The latter will be easier recognized by her former name, Lady Brooke, a friend, as all the world knows, of the Prince of Wales. The castle has been full of brilliant company, including his Royal Highness, and the highest of high jinks have been going on. The Prince and Princess of Wales left London within an hour of each other, but the Prince went west for Warwick and the Princess proceeded east for Sandringham, which was exactly what the world expected. For a lady usually so amiable as the Princess of Wales, it is truly remarkable how often and how striking she manages to let the people know there is no love lost between her self and the Countess of Warwick, formerly Lady Brooke. THE AMERICAN DUCHESS. The fact that the Duchess of Marlborough was again presented at court this week was because of the invariable rule that a second presentation must be made after the marriage of either a maid or widow. When she was first presented after her marriage with the Duke there was much discussion be-cause of the warm friendship between the Queen and the duke's divorced wife. But the Dowager Duchess of Marlborough came forward as sponsor, This time the duchess was presented by the Marchioness of Londonderry. The presentation would have been made by one of the late duke's sisters, but they are still in mourning for Lord Randolph Churchill. Though a duchess retains her rank and title in society when she marries a person of lower rank, she is recognized at court only by the name of her new husband. Thus the court presentation card of the Duchess of Mariborough set forth her title as "the Lady William Beresford, formerly the Duchess of Marlborough."

is shortly going on a visit to the duchess at Deep Dene and, in fact, the Churchill family lost no opportunity of testifying their continued regard for the duchess since her marriage. She entertains a large party at Deep Dene for Derby week, after which she acvisit his brother, the Marquis of Water-ford, at the family seat, Curraghmore, in county Waterford in county Waterford.

STANLEY'S LATEST BOOK. Two books which are bound to attract attention here and in America are Mr. Stanley's "My Early Travels and Adventures," just published, and Mr. Escott's "Life of Lord Randolph Churchill," which will be published in the course of a few days. Since Mr. Stanley's failure to get himself elected to Parliament at the last general election, he has kept in comparative retirement. His method of occupying a large part of his time is now apparent. His first volume deals chiefly with his early experiences as a special correspondent among the American red men; the second recounts interesting details as to his earlier missions to Africa. Mr. Stanley ought now to give us an account of his brief excursion in Spain in 1869 and then the circle of his publications would be complete. The present work is beyond doubt one of the most notable autobiographical works of the year. Its style may lack the firmness of his "How I Found Livingstone," but there is greater spontaneity and perpetual charm.

KISSING THE MONARCH'S HAND. The debutantes at last Wednesday's drawing room had a good deal to try their temper. The Queen shirked her work, with the result that the Princess of Wales had to take it in hand almost at the last moment, and although presentations to her Royal Highness were by the royal command considered

THE CURRENCY QUESTION. English politicians and financiers are watching closely the progress of the free silver discussion in the United States. This is considered to have far more important bearings upon the early future of British and American trade than disputes as to Hawaii and Nicaragua or the situation in the Asiatic coast. The conflict itself is variously accounted for-by some as a mere partisan controversy, by others as the resul of a rivalry between the interests of the Eastern and Western States, by a few-and only a few-as a serious struggle between the friends of a sound system of currency based upon laws that cannot be ignored with impunity and the mistaken advocates of a free silver system that is false in theory and would prove highly pernicious in

The advocates of monometallism are just now very active. They are planning a demonstration in London, he date to be fixed when Sir William Vernon Harcourt shall have appointed day for receiving their deputation The latter, it is said, will consist of the governor of the Bank of England, several private bankers of great authority in the financial world, and a dozen members of the House of Commons who outspoken monometallists. The Chancellor of the Exchequer is believed to be preparing for that occasion an important speech on the necessity of maintaining the present system of

EARTHQUAKES IN ITALY.

Great Destruction of Property in Flor ence, Attended by Loss of Life.

Florence, May 19.-The population of this city was thrown into a state of panic last night by a series of earthquakes that did much damage here and in other places. People who were in their houses when the first shock came ran terror-stricken into the streets, and their wild cries could be heard everywhere. The shocks were so violent that houses swayed like ships in a seaway, and in a number of cases roofs fell in, injuring persons who had not sought safety in flight.

The wildest scenes were at the thealters, where performances were going on as usual. The first shock caused those in the audience to look wonderingly at each other. Then the earth swayed, and amid shouts of "Earthquake!" the crowd made wild rushes for the exits. Mad with terror, no respect was shown for the women, weak or aged, and in the crush many were badly hurt. Upon reaching the streets the crowds from the theaters met those who had fled from their dwellings, and the excitement that ensued made the confusion worse confounded. At Grassina, a suburb of Florence, the shocks were very violent. The extent of the earth movement may be judged from the fact that a loaded omnibus was overturned. Twelve residents of Grassina were hurt. A number of persons refused to re-enter their houses during the night. They remained on the streets until after daylight this morn-Many of thtm took shelter in

After the first severe shocks there were repeated lighter ones. The seismic disturbanc s were felt at Lucca, Pontedera and generally throughout Tuscany. The center of the movement was at Florence, where for many years nothing similar has occurred. Around Florence a number of houses were destroyed and four persons killed. At the time of sending his dispatch full details are wanting, but it is believed that there has been a considerable number of lives lost.

As further reports of the earthquake come to hand, the extent of the disaster widens. At Lappagi, a village near Grassina, no less than 40 houses were thrown from their fortifications and completely wrecked. An investigation was made today by the municipal authorities of Florence, who estimated that 3,000 houses were damaged. Shocks were felt at Siena, Pisa, Pilacentia and Bolognia concurrent with those in this city.

A HORRIBLE DISCOVERY.

Valparaiso, Ind., May 20.-A horrible discovery was made by Editor Bowser, of Chesterlin, and Emerson Bowser, of this city, yesterday afternoon on the beach of Lake Michigan in the northern part of this county. They found parts of the remains of a woman and a little babe. The bodies of both were nearly gone, having been eaten by fish. Numerous pieces of flesh were found along the beach. Half of a dress and a hat were picked up. The remains were gathered up and taken to Chesterlin. Within half a mile of the spot a half dozen mysterious murders have occurred in the past few years, none of which has ever been unraveled.

Bitter Cold Weather, With Snow, in Central Italy.

Anomalous Condition of Political Parties in Great Britain-Grand Trunk Affairs - Hon. Edward Blake's Plans.

PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS BURNED. London, May 19 .- A dispatch from Buenos Ayres states that a telegram received from Santiago De Chili, announces the destruction by fire of the Parliamentary Buildings in that city. The Government archives and the valuable congressional library were burned.

HON. EDWARD BLAKE'S PLANS. London, May 19 .- A rumor of unknown origin which has crossed the sea is that Hon. Edward Blake intends to resign his seat in South Longford to enter Canadian politics and devote himself to his profession. It is learned here that there is positively no foundation for such a story.

WILDE AND HIS WIFE. London, May 19.—Oscar Wilde will appear in court on Monday for his new trial, very much improved in health. His wife joined him immediately after his release, and since that time both have been staying in seclusion at Kensington, seeing only the few friends who still believe Wilde more eccentric than guilty. It is said that he is ropeful of acquittal.

SENSATIONAL CONFESSION.

London, May 19 .- The People publishes a sensational statement by the Tichborne claimant which is the virtual confession of his fraudulent attempts to obtain the Tichborne estates and title. He admits that he is Arthur Orton, the son of a butcher of Wrapping. The statement is accompanied by a sworn affidavit by the claimant attesting the truth of his confession.

SNOW BLOCKADES IN EUROPE. Berne, May 18 .- Several of the Swiss mountain railways have been compelled to suspend their recently opened summer services owing to the heavy snowfalls. The carriage roads and the passes are blocked with drifts. The cold is moderating now.

Rome, May 18.—Bitter cold weather accompanied by snow prevails in Central Italy. The people are suffering much from the unseasonable weather. GRAND TRUNK AFFAIRS.

London, May 19 .- Diligent inquiry here has failed to confirm the rumon which it seems has gained currency in Canada, viz., that the Canadian headquarters of the Grand Trunk Railway would be transferred from Montreal to Toronto. Nothing is apparently known at the G. T. R. offices here of any such change, and when the question was put to Mr. Jos. Price, one of the directors, that gentleman stated that it was the first he had heard of it, and certainly such a thing had not been mooted among his colleagues so far as he was aware.

POLITICAL PARTIES IN A QUEER MESS.

Ballard Smith cables from London to the New York World: The English political situation at this moment is peculiar. The Government majority, in consequence of the loss of Walworth, is reduced to nine. Under ordinary circumstances it would be the obvious policy of the Opposition to bring forward a vote of censure and thus force a dissolution. But the Opposition is paralyzed by acute differences in its own ranks-between Mr. Chamberlain and the old Tories-and it cannot face general election in the present condition of things. Mr. Chamberlain's efforts to take the leadership of the Opposition out of Mr. Balfour's hands have resulted disastrously for himself. and there is strong feeling in the Tory ranks that if the general election is deferred Mr. Chamberlain will have so completely destroyed his reputation as a tactician that he can be kept out of the next Unionist government. The bulk of the Tories are frantic with anger because he supported Lord Selborne in his attempt to remain a member of the House of Commons after his accession to the peerage, that action being an obvious blow to the continuance of the House of Lords, whereas Mr. Chamberlain fancied that he would be accomplishing a great stroke for the peers if he could establish for them the right of option of sitting in either house.

DISSOLUTION RUMORS AGAIN. London, May 20 .- The delay of the de parture of the Queen for Balmoral and the return of Lord Rosebery to London are associated in the public mind with the known differences among the Ministers on the question of dissolution A Cabinet council has been summoned for Thursday.

THE BELL COMPANY WIN. Boston, Mass., May 19.—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday handed down a decision in the Bel Telephone-Berliner case declaring the Berliner patent valid. This is a decisive victory for the Bell Company.

Evangelist Yatman was a very busy man on Sunday. At 9 a.m he addressed

At each of these services Mr. Yatman spoke to large audiences, especially so at the afternoon gatherings. The interest now shown in the New York evangelist has spread from one end of the city to the other. People are even coming from the country to hear him, and a great revival is confidently looked for. An audience of 2,000 men was ex-

When Mr. Yatman appeared he stepman may become better and every bad man become good. I do hope great good will come to all classes. An insatiable desire takes hold of me to help men at this hour. Do you know that God mants to take the darkness more pleasing to God than the opposite.

THE SOUL'S QUEST FOR GOD. Rev. Charles Smith, pastor of King Street Methodist Church, preached yesterday morning in Knox Presbyterian Church a very effective sermon, which gripped both head and heart, from the words: "Oh, that I knew where I might find him." Job xxiii., 3. His topic was "The soul's quest for God." Men desired many things, but his supreme need was God himself. Thrice blessed the man who placed this object first. Job admitted his ignorance and expressed ardent desire to know. All similarly minded are in a hopeful state. Job's solicitude was wrought up to white heat. His "Oh, that I knew," breathed the burning intensity of his desire. Such seekers always win by finding. Mr. Smith then said: "God can be found in a variety of places. God can be found in nature.

'The meanest pin in Nature's frame Reveals some letter of God's name." "God can be found in the Bible, even God in Christ reconciling the world unto himself. God can be graciously realized in providence, in fruitful seasons and in sanctified adversities. God can be found in the sanctuary. When Joseph and Mary lost the boy Jesus 'they found him in the temple.' That was a parable of history often fulfilled. Many find Jesus in these modern temples, in psalms and songs, in prayer and sacrament. To find Christ was better than to find a treasure trove. Find Christ now, no matter what it costs. Find Christ! Find Christ!"

The Serap Bag.

"We were stopping at a shop door," said a lady of some distinction and knowledge of life, and while one of us went inside I sat in the carriage and was tormented by a tiny kitten, a lean little unlovely creature that insisted upon amusing itself by going in and out be-tween the spokes of the wheels, so that a sudden move of the horse would have crushed it. I asked a person passing to take the little thing away, but he did not hear me; then I spoke to a young girl going by, but she only looked silly and giggled and went on without doing anything. If I had taken the whip to the cat it would have started the horse, and he might have made some destructive movement had I tried to leave my seat. I was very uneasy, when a young man came along, and, without seeing me, stopped and lifted the little clinging, scratching thing, smoothed its fur a moment, called it 'poor puss and 'pretty kitty.' and left it inside the shop and went his way. 'Well,' said I to myself, 'there goes a man who will certainly make some one a good husband. One is not so kind to a miserable little unattractive kitten in order to be unkind to anything else. That man will neither browbeat, abuse, insult, nor tyrannize over any member of his fam-He will be indulgent, thoughtful and foreseeing, and the probability is that he will be generous, too; at any rate, wherever he is, there will be gentleness and affection. If I were a girl I should certainly try my various lovers with a spindling little kitten or mangy pup in difficulties!"

There is method in Kitty's madness, although she does buy very beautiful silk skirts-for she saves having her summer muslins lined with silk-which is a cruelly costly item in any one's dress acccount, although the lovely organdies, with their cream and yellow grounds, and roses and blossoms, are undeniably lovely and altogether worthy of the silk underlining. Kitty bought two silk skirts the other day. They were quite full, reached within three inches of the ground, and had three deep frills one above the other. When questioned Kitty blushed and shyly admitted that they cost $16 apiece, while she said: "Of course they are great bargains. And you know what I am going to do with them? Why, use them for lining under my white organdies. Saves me dressmaker's bills, don't it? Don't you think I am a sensible, thrifty soul?" And of course we said so.

There is one thing we admire about Columbus, though we forgot to say it poleon. Grous-set's plan, which, it has been an-The pressure of the superincumbent nounced, has been approved by the management, is to dig a series of eight vertical shafts, each 00 feet in length, one beginning where another leaves off. Two pasenger elevators are to run in each shaft, and there are to be galleries or stations at the end of each elevator journey, where refreshments will be served under the blaze of electric lights. We are told that the excavation will be thoroughly ventilated, by what means has not yet been made known, and that the traveler who descends to the lowest gallery depth will be 4,800 feet below from where he started. The estimated cost is $2,500,000, which, one would think, is quite moderate for so large an undertaking.

The projector says he hopes to throw new light upon the question of the increase of temperature as greater depths with the earth's core are attained, and upon other subterranean problems. One thing is quite certain, and that is, that the men who dis this prodigions hole will not be involved in the predicament that defeated the Russian merchant in Yakutsk, Siberia, about 60 years ago. The Lena River water was not good enough for him, and so he decided to dig a well. His men had only excavated a few feet with pick and shovel when they declared that they had struck solid rock.

It was only frozen earth, however, and so the merchant kept his men poking away, expecting every day to get through the stratum of frozen earth. He was a little surprised when the summer season ended and he was still in solidly frozen soil; but the next spring he courageously began work again, and did not stop until he had dug his way through 105 feet of earth as hard as a rock. Then he covered the hole with boards, and decided to use river water a while longer. The Academy of Sciences in St. Petersburg heard the story, and thought it would be a good thing in the interest of science to carry on the work. The academy, however, wearied of paying the bills when its diggers had reached a depth of 382 feet and were still in solidly frozen ground. From the temperature at the bottom they estimated that the ground was probably frozen to a depth of over 600 feet. The big hole, with its frozen walls, still exists, unless some one, in quite recent years, has taken the trouble to till it up.

There is reason to doubt that M. Grousset's proposed big hole in Paris will add much to our present knowledge of subterranean problems, as he seems to hope it will. Borings have now been carried about 900 feet nearer the center of the earth than it is proposed to extend the underground pleasure route in Paris. It is probable that the deepest boring yet made is that at Schladebach, between Leipzig and Merceburg, Germany, where a distance of about 5,740 feet from the surface has been attained, with a temperature at the bottom of 56.6 degrees centigrade, a little more than half the way between the freez-ing and the boiling point of water. Nobody can tell yet whether the passengers at the Paris Fair will be made very uncomfortable by the heat at the bottom of the shafts. Such a thing as a uniform rate of heat increase apparently does not exist in the subterranean regions. Mr. G. K. Gilbert says that the rate of increase varies in different places, ranging from degree Fahrenheit for each 150 feet of descent to 1 degree Fahrenheit for each 30 feet. The general or normal rate is. perhaps, 1 degree in 75 feet. There are many local causes that greatly affect the increase of heat. For instance, in some of the lower levels of the Comstock mines in Nevada, though not more than one-half as deep as the boring at Schladebach, the men could work only three or four hours at a time owing to the terrible heat. This was caused by scalding water forced up from lower depths, which raised the temperature up to 120 degrees Fahrenheit.

It does not quite follow that because the Paris tourist will descend nearly a mile into the earth that he will find there almost intolerable heat. But then again he may. As this excavation is to be by no means the deepest on record, and as we have no reason to believe that anything out of the common will be found, it will not be surprising if about the only scientific interest attaching to the enterprise will be the revealing of the subterranean conditions underlying Paris.

The work will be quite sure, at least, to tell us how thick is the formation of chalk which underlies Paris; for we know that the same formation that shows itself in glittering whiteness in the cliffs of Dover is spread far over France and that Paris is built above it. We often hear the erroneous statement that the temperature of the earth increases as descent is made from the surface into the crust. A moment's reflection would tell anyone that usually the temperature decreases until a point is reached where solar and atmospheric influences no longer have a particle of

In this latitude the line of perpetually even temperature is believed to be gained at a depth of about 60 feet. Below that line no influence from without penetrates, and the increase in heat begins as the thermal influences below assert their sway. But the Paris shafts will not reveal to us the line of even temperature in that neighborhood, for it has long been known. Perhaps a few visitors may be admitted to the excavation under the mous thermometer that has not been removed from its place for over 100 years, and, registering steadily 11.82 degrees centigrade, it has never recorded in all that time a variation of over 2-100 of a degree. In other words, it hangs practically on the line of unchanging temperature which is found everywhere within the earth's crust at a greater or less distance from the surface, according to the environing con-

It is not likely that the great hole of the Paris fair can present many special attractions for visitors. Perhaps the novelty of the descent a considerdistance into the earth will fill the elevators. HONEST CHEESE SALES. We are at a loss to know why any dairy man professing to have the interests of the cheese industry at heart should object to having his product branded so as to fix the date of its production and insure honesty on the part of his competitors and home and foreign buyers and sellers. If a law is passed to this effect we are satisfied that the dairymen of Middlesex and the west will hold their own, both in Canada and in the foreign markets. Something must be the matter with the German Emperor's head, or he would not have exposed himself to his recent rebuff from his Parliament. The bill defeated was, briefly, a measure to suppress all criticism, all free speech, no matter what the Emperor or his Ministers might do. No United States President would dream of such insufferable egotism or attempted despotism. But it must be admitted that the atmosphere of adulation in which all royalties habitually move is little conducive to seeing themselves as they really are-whether the monarch be modern Kaiser William or ancient King

FREE TRADING WITH HIGH NA-TIONAL SPIRIT.

Britain's free trading tendencies and commercial acuteness are not incompatible with the possession of pluck and high spirit when these qualifications are needed. Says the Boston

"The bitterest enemy of England is constrained to admire the readiness with which she springs to the rescue and defense of her citizens and demands indemnity in case they suffer assault in person or estate. While Mr. Bull has just been wringing the neck, so to speak, of Nicaragua for the arbitrary expulsion of an English citizen an expedition has reached Chitral to call down and punish the mountain chieftain, Umrah Khan, for holding English officers and men prisoners. Tradition has it that no matter where in the then known world a citizen of ancient Rome found himself he had only to exclaim "Civis Romanus sum," and his persecutors dropped him like a hot poker. England has had many an expensive foreign war and expended great piles of money for the defense of her citizens in far distant lands. Whatever be the glories or shames of England there is but one view to be taken of her zeal in the defense of her citizens."

TOMMY WILLSON AND HIS VALU-ABLE DISCOVERY.

About 85 years ago there was born in or near the hamlet of Princeton, in Oxford county, a child who grew up as Tommy Willson. His grandfather some 80 years ago was a member of the Upper Canada Legislature, and about that time he brought in and carried through a bill to provide for a system of pub-Mc school education in this Province. Hon. John Willson died in the same year in which his grandson was born. but the school system which he did so much to found is full of vigor, is steadfly growing in influence, and has done perhaps as much as all other agencies combined to make the Canadian boy a useful man in the world.

Tommy Willson got a good training in the schools, mostly in Hamilton, and early in life showed a taste for chemical and electrical pursuits. For the last fifteen years or so he has been in New York city, and a short time ago he made a name for himself as discoverer of a cheap process for producing an illuminating gas has twelve times the brightness of our city gas. The materials used are quicklime and carbon in any form-peat or coal dust will doand when treated in an electric fur- stories and poems.

nace they are converted into carbide of calcium.

Saul went out in search of his father's asses and found a kingdom. Thomas Willson was not looking for carbide of calcium when making his experiments, and the fused mass which ran out of the furnace was thought to be so useless that he threw it into a tub of water. But just then he made a discovery which promises to be one of the most useful of all the discoveries made in this inventive age. The moment that the product of the furnace charge touched water it began to give off large quantities of gas, and upon applying a match the gas burned with a luminous flame.

This gas is known by the name of acetylene. It is not a new thing, but until Willson's experiments were made with an electric furnace its economic production was not thought to be possible. But with water power to generate electricity, and coal and lime supplied at a moderate figure, it is believed that the cost of calcium carbide need not exceed $20 per ton. This is a revolutionary figure, if attainable, for one ton of calcium carbide will evolve 11,000 cubic feet of acetylene gas, whose illuminating power is equal to 137,000 cubic feet of coal or water gas. The discovery is very important in other respects besides light, because it leads the way to the cheap production of benzol, the aniline colors, and all the other hydrocarbons so useful in the arts, and if the half of what is promised for light and fuel purposes is realized, an invaluable boon has been

We believe that Mr. Willson has already made arrangements for the use of his patent in Canada.

MR. MCGREEVY AND RECENT NOTABLE HAPPENINGS.

It is amusing to read the following statement in a recent editorial in the Toronto Mail-Empire:

"No new blood has come to the fore on the Opposition side in recent years except Mr. Tarte, and possibly Mr. Mc-

It is a funny thing to find our Conservative contemporary reading Mr. Mc-Greevy, the bosom companion of several cf the Conservative leaders in recent gigantic frauds on the Dominion taxpayers, in as a member of the Liberal party. When counted in by a friendly judge at Quebec, Mr. McGreevy was introduced to the House by Mr. Frechette, the Conservative whip for Quebec, and by Mr. Taylor, the whip of that party for Ontario. This ostentatious display was purposely undertaken so as to emphasize to Mr. McGreevy the satisfaction of the men in power that despite the fact that he had for a time been made him the guilty agent of their raids on the public treasury. he had steadfastly rethe facts that would have shown him to be the least criminal of the lot. Mr. McGreevy was practically ruined by his connection with the boodling politicians. He cannot be very comfortable among them, but they are most exceedingly solicitous to have it known in the House that he is one of them.

Our Toronto Conservative contemporary should recognize, too, that since the death of Sir John Abbott its friends have not won a single seat in the country, whereas the Liberals have captured the constituency represented by Sir John Thompson, the late Conservative leader, and have in the person of Hon. Mr. McIsaac, the new member, a distinct acquisition to its ranks. Mr. Mc-Isaac resigned his post as a member of the Nova Scotia Government to contest the constituency, and he has already made his mark in the House.

In view of the facts, how ridiculous becomes our contemporary's state-

MR. BALFOUR'S OPINIONS

On Newspaper Advertising-Value of the Press-Comments by the New

(New York Sun.) Mr. Balfour showed true discernment when he remarked in a speech before the English Newspaper Society the other evening that the newspaper "in its capacity as an advertising agent is, after all, of the first importance to any civilized society, inasmuch as it brings together those who have something to sell and those who have something to The general news and comment and "all the other machinery of com-municating information to the public," he added, "really are not of more importance to the community at large than the power of communication by advertisement.

It is not too much to say that the development of modern civilization has been assisted by no agent so powerful as the newspaper; and the progress of all trade, enterprise and invention, which has distinguished this century, and more especially the last generation, has been accelerated by no means more effectual than newspaper adver-The advertisement brings totising. gether the seller and the buyer, the supply and the demand, as in former times, and to a comparatively limited extent they were brought by the fairs and market days. By thus facilitating and vastly increasing their means of communication, it has helped to reduce prices, to stimulate the competition and emulation from which comes improvement in production, and to multiply the demand for the materials and the appliances which contribute to the advancement of civilization. The advertisement carries immediately to the remotest regions information formerly obtainable only by the few and near, or which slowly extended by hearsay from the great central markets. With the assistance of improved means of fused to break the compact and reveal transportation and communication, largely dependent on it also for the publicity necessar to their prospe ity, it has changed the whole face of modern society, given uniformity to its dress and its wants, and opened up to the inventor, the manufacturer, and all producers a market which is worldwide. The sign of the merchant is no longer confined to his immediate place of business. He puts it in the newspaper for all men to see. Information equisite for everybody is obtainable by the great mass of the public from the advertisements only. Only by means of the advertisements can they both supply and make generally known private wants upon which their welfare depends. They serve as a labor exchange, a directory, a bulletin, a price list, and a means of obtaining distinction otherwise impossible for traders and producers. The benefit that comes to a great newspaper from its advertising is infinitesimal as compared with that received by the advertisers themselves and by the public. The opportunity to purchase the publicity it afterwards affords is a privilege which, as Mr. Balfour says, is one of the most important conferred on society by the growth and development of the newspaper. Whatever tends to increase the circulation and to deepen the respect and confidence in a newspaper inures directly to the advantage of the advertiser. The newspaper also gains in its power to serve the interests of the public in extending the range of its information, and elevating the quality of its intellectual ability by thus serving the interests of the advertiser. All the public profit by the profit it receives as a means of communication between the buyer and seller. Without publishing the advertisements it would be deficient in some of the most useful in-formation of the day. Without its other contents, maintained at the highest standard only by the assistance of advertising support, it would be valueless to the advertiser. Practically every department of trade in New York which has grown to great activity has been fostered, first of all, by advertising. Merchants, not many years ago unknown beyond a narrow neighborhood, have by this means pushed their names and their business into a distinction which extends through the Union and even throughout the world. Little shops with a petty trade have developed rapidly into great bazars under the stimulus of advertising. New methods of business which have been inured to the public profit have been made possible by its means. As the dealer's market has been thus extended, he has been able to reduce prices and yet make a larger gain because of vastly increased gains.

The use of the advertising advantages of a great newspaper is really only in the beginning of its development. So far it has harely touched trade as compared with the extent to which it will be carried as business sagacity learns to appreciate its advantages, unequalled by any and all other methods of inviting patronage for nearly every department of business. The art of preparing advertisements so that they shall attract attention and provoke interest is also greatly improving at this They are beginning to be constructed with really admirable literary Their typographical appearance in the newspapers is much better than formerly, especially for the advertiser. The advertisemests have become more than ever a principal feature of interimportant information. Their value to the advertisers is greater than ever, while more than ever the public are looking to them as guides in making their purchases and indications of business enterprise by which they can profit. As a rule, in the retail trade more especially, but also to a wide extent in wholesale production also, the larger the advertisers the larger is the volume of trade and the greater the sum of profits.

THUMB PRINTS OF CRIMINALS.

Dr. Francis Gelton's English system of taking impressions of the thumbs of criminals as a means of identification will shortly be put in use by the bureau of identification of the Chicago police department. W. W. McClaugh-ry, son of ex-Superintendent McClaughry, has just returned from London and Paris, where he went in search of in-formation for enlarging the scope of the local bureau, which uses the Bertillon system. The use of the thumb-points was first made practical in London, and Mr. McClaughry was so impressed with it that he recommended its adoption to Superintendent Badenoch. A lengthy report on methods of criminal identification for use in European system, and particularly on the Bertillon system, with several recom-mendations for its improvement, has been made to the chief by Mr. Mc-Claughry. A number of minor changes are likely to be made in local operation in consequence.

THE SEASON OPENED.

With decidedly uncomfortable weather, and a somewhat one sided exhibition of baseball, the season for 1895 was opened in Tecumseh Park Saturday afternoon. Though the temperature was chilly and rain threatened to fall every minute the same old grand stand and the same old bleachers held about the usual number of cranks, who, however, owing to the tameness of the match, had very little opportunity to whoop 'er up. The teams were the Balmorals, organized in connection with the Balmoral Pleasure Club, and who promise to make a close fight for the city league pennant, and the Alerts. The Balmoral's club includes a number of young players who have before appeared on diamonds, but in slower company than their Saturday opponents. Their uniform was of gray tweed, with no attempt at gay colors for trimming and it looked rather nobby. The Alerts included a lot of new blood, only four of last year's team being in the field—Hiscott, Burton, Farnsworth and Ball. The new players were, Fred Woods, Rooks. Tierney, and the two batteries Miller. Umpire—McDonald. Rooks, Tierney, and the two batteries mentioned elsewhere. "Doc" Sippi's smiling face, long form and long slides were absent, and this fact was regretfully noted on all hands. In "Doc's" place, ho wever, the management have secured Rooks, form erly of the Inter-State League. Rooks is short of statue, has the appearance and movements of a good ball player, and did fairly well with the stick. Two new batteries were tested by the Alerts-Wilson and Sharp, and Turner and Thorpe. They succeeded in holding the Balmorals down to one hit, but the ball playing proclivities of the new blood cannot be fairly judged until London's team is pitted against a league aggregation. As a te-t Saturday's game was no criterion. The coaching of the Alerts was inefficient—in fact very little was done-and if Captain Burton does not realize the importance of this branch of the game, the best results cannot be expected from the team this year.

The match was begun at 3:30 with the Alerts first to bat. For four innings, the contest dragged slowly on, the Alerts doing all the scoring, mostly on costly errors by the Balmorals. In the fifth inning Turner only had to pitch three balls. The first was sent away over left field by Coles, and the Balmoral friends yelled until Ball gathered it in after a long run. Pierce landed the second in the same direction, but Ball was again on hand and prevented a home run. The third was hit so hard by Tolton that Rooks was staggered, but Fred Burton got the ball before Tolton got the bag, and the side retired and Turner made a brilliant catch in left field, and was vigorously cheered. Trudell made his first appearance as a league umpire. On this account probably, he was slightly rattled, for some of his decisions were severely criticised. His "calling off" is also too slow. Score: ALERTS VS. BALMORALS, the Trial of the Ninih Day of Evidence for the Crown All In-Another Ruling that Favors the Prisoners.

Toronto, Ont., May 19.-Yesterday, the ninth day of the Hyams trial, witnessed the completion of the case for the crown. The greater part of the day was taken up with the testimony of surgeons for the prosecution, all of whom testified that the injuries to the head showed evidence of having been made by well defined lines of force. It was also proven that there was no obstruction in the weight shaft.

His Lordship decided that the evidence of character put in by the defense did not go to the extent of entering into the general reputation of the prisoners, and therefore the crown could not go into evidence as to bad character. Dr. W. H. B. Aikens, who thought that the death of Wells was not a subject for inquest, spent on uncomfortable half-hour in the witness box. He had been called by the defense, but ununder the fire of Mr. Osler's cross-questioning made some very damaging admissions. Adjourned till Monday.

City Relinquishes the Proviso on the "Option" Clause.

Now the Company Want a Fresh Concession,

And They Have Opened Anew the Bridge Question.

Want To Be Allowed to Appeal to County Judge Instead of the Council, in Case of Dispute as to the City Engineer's Awards.

It was indeed a Herculean task that the aldermen assumed when they undertook to smooth out all the difficulties and differences existing between the railway company and the city, and to frame an electric railway bylaw satisfactory to all. Like Banquo's ghost, the objections will not down. At least, they haven't at the present writing. On Thursday night the "only" difference was the proviso to the "option" clause, binding the company to accept any new offer in its entirety, and not in part. At the meeting on Saturday night the arguments of the street railway people were strong enough to result in the throwing out of the proviso, and the majority of the 250 spectators went home satisfied that the bylaw had gone through.

But such was not the case. The company is now dissatisfied with the "appeal" clause, and has also opened anew the bridge question.

Sub-section 5, clause 49, gives to the city engineer power to decide whether or not the terms of the franchise are being fully carried out. Early in the deal the company held out for power to appeal from the engineer's award, and were apparently satisfied when the committee agreed to an appeal to the City Council. Now they want to be allowed to appeal to the county judge in case of dissatisfaction. The bridge matter is a minor one compared with the question of appeal, but both will be definitely, and, no doubt, satisfactorily settled tonight, when the third read-ing of the bylaw is in order. The Radial Railway Company cut quite a figure in the meeting of Saturday night, but only succeeded in losing every point contended for. After making the sole control of the Springbank line by the city company a basis of agreement, the aldermen could not give the radial company competing powers for Springbank traffic, especially over the company's own line, without wrecking the franchise and allowing all their work to go for naught. However, the city company agrees to bring the radial cars of the Delaware line from Springbank to the city.

If the bylaw is finally passed tonight -as there is every reason to believe it will be-London will have one of the best electric bargains in Canada, compared with existing franchises. She will have nine tickets for 25 cents for three hours in the day, and a 31-2-cent fare, with transfers, for the balance. The company agrees to supply all necessary material and labor, and pave or repave as the city does all that portion of the street contained in the track allowances. These extend eighteen inches beyond the outside rails. This will be a saving to the city of at least $10,000 a year. Again, all bridge alterations are made at the company's expense, and the company will have a half proprietary interest in the new structures. Work will be commenced within two weeks if the bylaw goes through. This was the point in Mr. Break's remarks which elicited the most applause from the large number of auditors. Dundas and Richmond streets will then be electrified by Fair time, and the balance of the work done this year, if possible. The whirr of the trolley wheels would mingle with the roar of the Springbank pumps in exactly six weeks. The composition of the crowd in the hall was very different from that which generally congregates there. Usually it is made up of contractors and those who are interested alone in the expenditure of municipal dollars. The night was very wet, but for all that between 200 and 300 business men and mechanics found their way to the chamber. Of course, "grand stand" speeches from aldermen were frequent, and all unconscious the crowd applauded railway sentiment until at times it required the combined commands of a "bobby" and the mayor to restore order. When the council convened and the third reading was moved, Ald. Weld, on a question of privilege, accused the cause he had been on his feet when the final vote was put, early on Friday morning, and failed to gain recognition. The mayor gave him to understand that there would be full and free discussion on any clause, and the council proceeded to business.

Seated within the chamber were a number of gentlemen interested in the radial railway company. Their presence was explained when a petition was read from the provisional directors of that company. It protested against striking out the city solicitor's proviso to the "option" clause, and also strongly urged that an amendment be made to the clause respecting Springbank traffic so as to give them power to compete for Springbank traffic. They also made an offer, if the city company wished to be relieved of the Springbank road, to build the road within a year, provided the city guaranteed them an entrance into the city. The signatures attached were of W. M. Spencer, R. W. Puddicombe, M. Masuret, W. M. Gartshore, C. W. Leonard, John Bland, J. S. Pearce, D. M. Cameron, C. B. Hunt, C. H. Elliott and W. J. Reid.

Mr. Judd spoke for the petition. He laid stress on the fact that the radial gentlemen were all citizens, and argued against allowing the city company exclusive privileges. "If Mr. Ivey is sincere in that he wants to give up this Springbank line," said Mr. Judd, "we are ready to take it. There is the document to prove it. We are ready to build it and ready to occupy it."

Ald. Jones, in reply, pointed out that in framing the franchise it had been accepted as a basis of agreement that the sole control of the Springbank traffic should be allowed the street railway company. As a matter of honor he asked the aldermen to keep their word.

The first division occurred on a question of routes. The company asked to straighten out Central avenue by building from Adelaide street direct to Richmond street, instead of stopping at Waterloo and proceeding to Pall Mall and thence to Richmond. It carried by a 12 to 6 vote, although Ald. Powell protested that the line would imperil the lives of children playing in cent rate during the rest of the day. In railway company instead of the city. portion of the road being built by Fair "I call for the yeas and nays," said he. "We want to show up some of those 'stuffed' aldermen."

Another change was made by strik-ing out the line along Bathurst street from Richmond to Clarence street, and on Clarence, from Bathurst to Horton street. Instead of this the line will be extended from Clarence to Richmond on Horton. The building of a number of extensions was made permissive instead of compulsory. Ald. Garratt objected to the changes, and wanted to know who gave No. 1 committee authority to change the clauses. Ald. Skinner also accused the committee of doing some "blindfold" work. Ald. Jones held that the term "blindfold" was identical with "hoodwink," and he warmly declared that the committee was not attemping to hoodwink anyone. Ald. Jones and the mayor both explained that the changes were made because the company would not agree to anything else, and the committee endeavored to meet them. When the "radial road" clause was reached Ald. Jones moved its adoption as framed by the committe. Ald. Weld moved an amendment in effect that the radial company be given competing powers for Springbank traffic. Ald. Pritchard seconded. In the exhaustive discussion which followed it was shown that the present company was perfectly willing to bring in the radial company's cars from Springbank. Those who avocated the adoption of the clause laid stress upon the council's word of honor, asking the aldermen to stand by the deed of the council by which the company was given control of the Springbank line. "We have heard a great deal of talk about honor," said Ald. O'Meara, "but if an alderman has got any honor he had better leave it at home if he wants to maintain his rights in this council." (Laughter.)

Ald. Weld's amendment received only three supporters. Ald. Pritchard moved a similar motion, the wording of which drew the exclamation from Ald. Jones that the best thing the company could do would be to build a road, equip it, and hand it over to the radial company. He pointed out also that even at the present time the company had an option over every street in the city.

Ald. Pritchard's amendment was also lost and the clause adopted. Mr. Judd then pressed the radial company's offer to build the road to Springbank, as Mr. Ivey had expressed a desire on Thursday night to throw up that undertaking. Mr. Ivey said that he had been mis-understood. What he said was that he was perfectly willing to be relieved from the responsibility of building the road if the city cared to invalidate the rest of the agreement hinging upon it, and which had been wrung from the company in consideration of the Spring-bank line.

Mr. Judd remarked that the radial company had made the street railway company take down their bluff. After this Ald. Pritchard moved the elimination of the Springbank clause altogether. Ald. Garratt seconded.

This was hotly discussed and lost. Claue 43 referred to the option. It was to a proviso of this clause that exception was taken by the company. They stated that they were perfectly willing to throw over the deal if the rider was insisted upon.

Ald. Carrothers moved the adoption of the clause, proviso and all. Ald. Armstrong in amendment moved the elimination of the proviso, holding that the main clause had the same meaning without it.

Ald. Parnell spoke strongly in support of the amendment and pointed out that it would place the company in the position of dealing with offers that might chair of shutting off the consideration be made every few days for the purpose of being bought off. It would also deter the company from floating bonds to raise money to build the road. In response to a request by Ald. Pritchard, the city solicitor's opinion, advising the retention of the proviso was read by the mayor. He stated further that the company took this position: There was no rider on the original clause in the charter, and they would not agree to curtail any of their existing rights.

"Knock off the 'rider,' and the horse may go where it likes," said Ald. O'Meara, as he vigorously opposed the exclusion of the proviso.

Stating that it was "the last peg upon which the radial company could hang," Mr. Judd spoke strongly in favor of the retention of the proviso. "They tried to play the bluff on us, and didn't succeed," said Mr. Judd. "Don't let them play the bluff on you."

Ald. Jones explained the position of affairs, and the effect of the retention of the proviso. It either was retain 'he proviso and have horses and mules for 30 years to come, or throw it out and have an electric system. As one of the aldermen who granted the original charter, Ald. Powell took the part of those much berated individuals. He placed much reliance on the city solicitor's advice, but he was willing to see it set aside when it came to the question of electic road or no electric road. In reply to a question by Ald. Jones

Mr. Break said: "The London Street Railway Company cannot take the bylaw with the rider; and will not. And in doing that we don't wish to dictate to the members of the council. But you all understand what that clause means to us, and if any of you gentlemen were in the position of the company tonight you would do just the same thing."

Ald. Jones stated briefly what the city would gain by the passage of the bylaw. The city now furnished the material to keep the road in repair. The company agreed to furnish that material and supply the labor. This would be a saving of $10,000 a year to the city. Then they had nine tickets for 25 cents for three hours in the day, and had a 3 1-2 the park. Ald. O'Meara accused some case the bylaw passed that night the New York Engine aldermen of representing the street citizens could calculate on the main Thursday night.

time and the Springbank road being ready in six weeks.

Mr. Break then referred to the fact that the proviso would preclude the company from borrowing money. "We stand ready," said he, "to begin work within two weeks, and we hope to have Dundas and Richmond streets electrified before the Fair. If the bylaw had been passed a few weeks ago the whole system would have been completed this year. I dare say the system will be built this season if we can get things in shape now." The city solicitor spoke in a non-committal manner, laying stress on his position merely as an advisor to a bargain. It lay with the council to make what bargain they saw fit, ouside of his opinion, after he had given it. He also pointed out that his advice had not always been carried out in drawing up the franchise, and it was a question of interpretation of law whether or not the clause meant the same as the rider. If it did, he thought there was no harm in saying so. "When a man is sick and has a doctor he takes his medicine like a man,' said Ald. O'Meara, "Now let the city take the medicine the solicitor had prescribed like a man." (Laughter.) The proviso was stricken out on the following division: Yeas—John Heaman, O. Brener, J. W. Jones, A. B. Powell, Wm. Heaman, Geo. W. Armstrong, A. Callahan, John Nutkins, E. Parnell J. W. It was Saturday night and after 11 o'clock, and the council shortly adjourned; but not before London West's protest against relinquishing Oxford street bridge was read. For washing Dishes, there's nothing like Pearline. Why don't you begin the use of it in that way, if you're one of the timid sisters who still think that Pearline "eats the clothes?" Then you can soak things in it for a year or two, and test it in every way, until you become convinced that Pearline can't do any harm. But it won't eat your dishes, that's sure. It won't clog up the sink pipes, either, as soap does. And that cloudy effect that you've probably noticed on cut glass and china when it's washed with soap—that won't be there if you wash it with Pearline.

The week closed in wheat with a scene of wild exceenset, prices running away from buyers. During the early part of the se-sion it large lines of wheat being sold out to realize profits; but the market was again as deceptive as it has been at all times during the present cerate, becoming very sore. Ointment stops the itching an ing, heals ulceration, and in memoves the tumors. At drug by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. S. Son. Philadelphia, Lyman, Son. Philadelphia, Lyman, Son. Son. phenomenal rise. Frost predictions for Western States aroused the country to renewed visor in buying, while the local crowd was equally as bullish as the public. The demand absorbed enormous lines of wheat, and prices kept on going higher, no one atternating to oppose the rising tendency. Co.n, however, cast wheat into the shade for excitement and erratic action. At about 11:30 prices shot up 4c so quickly that traders lost their breath, and from sheer astonishment found it utterly impossible to follow the rapid motion of the market. Part of the advance was lost equally as fast as it was made, but the nervous tension lasted until the close.

Estimated receipts for Monday: Wheat, 26

LONDON, Saturday, May 18.—Buyers, sellers and cheese were in plenty at the meeting of the London board today, but no sales were effected. The make offered was all colored, and comprised the last few days of April and the first two weeks of May. Buyers were eager to purchase, and readily offered 6c, 6k and 6k, the latter figure only on a few choice factories. Holders, however, held out for higher prices. "We cannot pay a better figure," said a well-Holders, however, held out for higher prices.

"We cannot pay a better figure," said a well-known buyer, after the market had closed.

"The demand from the Old Country is good, but the cable has dropped Is a day for several days until now it has reached 43s. We have to govern ourselves accordingly." The factories boarded were:

A LIVELY RUNAWAY. A lively runaway occurred on Richmond street just after 1 o'clock today. Mr. John McMechan, of the London Soap Company, left his horse untied while he went into Smith Bros'. Something scared the animal and off it went. It turned east on Dundas and collided with a telegraph pole about the center of the block on the north side. Here the wagon was upset and smashed, and the horse took to the sidewalk. The flying shafts broke a plate glass win low in Mrs. Martin's store, the property of Mr. George Hiscox. The horse continued up the flagstone sidewalk until Wellington street was reached, and many pedestrians the position it should in the field of had very narrow escapes. It was caught a sports. little farther on.

SHALL CURFEW RING? The Ministerial Association met this morning in the Y. M. C. A. parlors. Rev. W. J. Clark, president, was in the chair and there was a very large attendance. The petition of the Children's Aid Society, praving for the establishment of a curfew bell, was presented for the indorsation of the association. As printed in the "Advertiser" of a day or so ago, it asks the mayor and city council to exact that the bell shall ring at 9 o'clock p.m. in summer and 8 o'clock p.m. in winter, and that after that hour all children who are found on the streets shall be taken in charge. The question was fully discussed and the association finally concluded to lend its aid to the movement and the names of the president, vice-president and secretary were inscribed on the petition. A resolution criticising the action of the license commissioners in extending the hour for the closing of bars was then taken up. It was still under discussion when the association adjourned at 12 30. The matter will be followed up when the association convenes again at 3:30

HER : CURLING TONGS.

The Effort to Heat Them Causes a $750,000 Blaze

In a Vermont Town-The Lamp Upset-Hundreds Homeless.

St. Albans, Vt., May 20 .- A woman was engaged in heating her curling iron over a kerosene lamp in the home of a French family near Fonda's lumber yard yesterday, when the lamp exploded and scattered the flames over the carpet, which immediately caught fire. Thus was started the most disastrous fire that ever visited a Vermont town, Marriage Licenses issued at above | and which, before extinguished, had burned over 75 acres, sweeping away the heart of the business portion, destroying property valued at $750,000, and wiping out 40 business places and 100 tenements—all in three hours' time. Five hundred people are sheltered in the churches and schools. Before the hose companies could reach the scene of the conflagration the lumber sheds and storehouses were a mass of flames. A high south wind prevailed at the time, carried the blazing brands far to the north, setting the roofs of the buildings on fire haif a mile off. The -W. R. Callaway, district passenger flames spread with great rapidity, and agent of the C. P. R., and J. H. Duthie, a dozen buildings situated in different parts of the town were on fire at the same time. Many merchants lost their entire stocks, and most of the families saved nothing. The fire baffled the efforts of the firemen, who fought galthe work of destruction on Foundry -The Misses Lillian and Beatrice street, near Kingman. The postoffice 24, and will take part in a concert in the establishment of the St. Albans' Messenger Company, publishers of the daily and weekly Messenger. The Government building and Messengr blocks destroyed every building on Kingman street and swept up to Goodman street, where it spread in both directions, destroying property valued at $100,000

Meanwhile business blocks 200 yards west, on the main street, were burning, and the east side of Foundry street was a mass of flames. Onword swept the fire, consuming tenement houses like tinder boxes, and driving the inhabitants out into the streets, where they were compelled to stand and witside in Woodland Cemetery, conducted both sides of this thoroughfare. Hoyt than an hour became a desolate waste. Still further to the north the work of destruction went on, burning houses twenty rods from the burning business blocks.

A Lost Gem

When she was a little calmer she noticed that she had seen her uncle's letter drop to the floor, where it lay crumpled and half unread. She brought herself at last to make the effort of picking it up; and when she had smoothed it out she sat down listlessly to read the last page. It was a dangerous thing to do at that moment, for she was in a keenly susceptible state, and Ralph Kingscott's suggestions were apt to fall upon susceptible minds like lightened matches upon tow.

The matter has become a sore point with him altogether, more particularly as the fact of your husband's previous engagement to Mrs. Moncrieff"-Molly now read on with interest-"has but lately been made known to him. He is anxious and uneasy concerning some letters that Mrs. Moncrieff once wrote to Jack. If you want to do us a service, my dear, you had better get Jack to send them back. Your father will know no peace until they are destroyed, for he cannot bear the thought of their existence. He will be much more likely to forgive your husband if he gets those letters away from him. But perhaps they are destroyed already. Could you not ascertain this and let me know? You can write to me as soon as you please. I still hope to soften your father's heart towards you. Your affectionate uncle,

"RALPH KINGSCOTT." Kingscott had probably counted upon the effect that his letter was likely to produce, and worded it so that it should have a perfectly innocent and friendly sound. He had no reason for wishing to sow dissension between Mr. and Mrs. Hannington, but he wanted to keep Molly away from home, he wanted to separate Alan and Stella, and he particularly wanted to retain his own powerful position. To set Molly searching for Stella's letters, and to get them into his own hands, would be to secure two very desirable results. Molly rose up from the reading of that letter with her brain on fire. Jack had letters from Stella Raeburn -now Stella Moncrieff, her father's wife-and would not give them up? What did that mean but that he still, in spite of his denial, loved Stella and cherished her memory. Molly set her teeth and pressed her hands closely togther as she considered this possibility. And then there came an overpowering desire to see for herself the letters of which her uncle spoke. She had no thought of making use of them for her own or Kingscott's ends; she only wanted passionately to see them. Did her husband keep them still? If so, had she not a right to find them and read them, as if they were her own?

Poor Molly was not of a bad disposition; she would never develop into a wicked woman; but she was utterly untrained and uncontrolled. Stella's influence had been exerted for too short a time to retain its power over her; her father's authority had been authority simply, and had not made her reflect in questions of right and wrong. She was a spoilt, passionate child—that was all; but she was in a position where the indulgence of her impulses was likely to have disastrous results for other people.

It was with a face in which the hot color burned like two red flags of defiance, with cold and shaking hands, and limbs that trembled under her, that she left the snug little private sitting room at last and made her way into Hannington's dressing room. Here she looked round hopelessly. Where should she begin to search? He was not likely to leave his private papers in any place where she could find them. They were probably in that brass-bound desk of his, or in the dispatch box-both safely locked and put away in a big trunk. And the keys would probably be in his pocket. Molly could not imagine herself picking a lock, although the moral guilt of doing so might not be greater than that of reading another womans' letters to her husband. She sighed and almost gave up her scheme in that moment of discouragement.

But what did she see upon the dressing table, as if on purpose to tempt her to do amiss? Her husband's keys laid there in a little heap; some half-dozen tiny glittering things on a steel ring which he generally carried in his pocket, and seldom, indeed, forgot. John Hannington was a rather careful man in small matters; it was rare indeed for him to leave things lying about. Molly hesitated for a moment only, and then stized upon the keys. Her heart beat violently as she opened the trunk and took out the dispatch box; her hands trembled so that she could scarcely turn the key. If her husband came in while she was so engaged she guessed that his wrath would be something terrible. But she was too excited and eager to be timid. Until she had found what she wanted or given up the search in despair the reaction was not likely to set in. In the dispatch box she found many bundles of letters and papers, for the most part neatly tied up and docketed in a severely methodical manner. She tossed them over with hot, trembling fingers; she saw none in the handwriting that she had learned to know so well when Stella was her governess. She almost relinquished the task in despair. Then, at the very bottom of the box, her eye fell on two slim papers tied together with a bit of black ribbon; one was black-edged, both were covered with the fine and pretty char-leters that betokened Stella's hand. my dear; he is a member of Congress. covered with the fine and pretty char-

Molly drew them out. She had found what she wanted, then, at last. Two; were there only two. She turn-ed over the other papers, but could find no more. She looked into the desk, into the other boxes and drawers, but her search was unsuccessful. At last she reluctantly turned the keys, and, resolving to put back the letters when she had read them, she crept into her own room and seated herself at her own dressing table to examine them. Only one seemed to be of any length or importance. The first was the letter written by Stella soon after her father's death, begging John Hannington to come to her. The next—ah, this was what froze Molly's heart as she read it-the next was that outpouring of girlish tenderness which Hannington had found so embarrassing, so difficult to answer. Not knowing exactly how he had answered it, not knowing what had preceded it, but imagining all sorts of vows and protestations and caresses on his part, Molly worked her-self up to a state of indignation and fury, in which it seemed as though every softer feeling had deserted her.

"And he could ask me to be his wife after all this!" sht exclaimed to herself. 'And she could come among us with her soft looks and pretty ways, and pretend that she never cared for any man before! I know she pretended that, for I heard old Miss Jacky talking to papa one day and solemnly assuring him that 'dear Stella' had never cared for anybody in her life-except himself! She was false false all round. I may have deceived papa for a time," thought Molly, beginning to cry at the remembrance, "but I never, never deceived him as much as Stella Raeburn did when she consented to be his wife. And I was deceived, too. Deceived by her, deceived by Jack! Oh, what can I do to punish them? They deserve punishment! they deserve it!"

She sobbed tempestuously for a time, her tears falling on the letters as Stella's had fallen when she wrote them years before. When her sobs at last ceased she had grown quieter and gentler in feeling; she had come to the point of excusing her husband even if she could not forgive Stella. Towards Stella her thoughts were of unmixed bitterness. Odd contradiction of feeling as it may seem to be, she was angry for her father's sake as well as for her own. He ought to have known-and she was sure that he had not been told before his marriage even if he had heard the truth later. The remembrance of her uncle's letter came back to her, and brought a strange gleam into her eyes. "No wonder they want to get these letters back! Has Jack ever shown them to anyone, I wonder He shall not have the chance. I shall send them to Uncle Ralph; he says that papa wants them, and I am sure papa has a right to them. We will see what Madam Stella will say to that! And if Jack dislikes it-so much the better they had no business not to tell me.' She rose from her seat and began to look for writing materials. She put

Her Views of the World's Metropolis-Decidedly Flattering to Englishmen-Something About the Appearance of the Great City-The Streets of London - Fine Type of

If one could take an aerial car and make a voyage to the milky way, where stars are innumerable, and then undertake to describe his journey or what he had seen, it would be little less difficult than it is to undertake to describe the city of London. There are over 4,000,-000 of people in the city, as many as in all the State of Ohio, crowded into 122 square miles, being fourteen miles in length and about eight miles in breadth, which would be substantially the distance from Rocky River on the west of Cleveland to Euclid on the east and Bedford on the south. There are 7,800 streets, which, if laid end to end, would make a distance of 3,000 miles, and within this space there are 554,000 buildings. The annual increase in population is about 75,000, and there are 106,600 paupers. Within the city there are more Scotchmen than in Aberdeen, more Irishmen than in Dublin, more Jews than in Jerusalem, and more Roman Catholics than in all Rome. It is estimated that there are 15,000 Americans living in London, while more than 100,000 visit the city every year. Since 1888 the city has been governed by a body known as the London County Council. The city is divided into 26 wards and 108 parishes, has a separate administration and jurisdiction of its own, and is presided over by the lord mayor. The common council consists of 137 members, nineteen of whom are aldermen selected by the council itself.

There were no free public schools in London up to 1891. Now there is a school board consisting of 55 members elected by the city and the ten other districts into which London is divided for educational purposes. The annual income of the school board is £2.000.000, or $10,000,-000. There are 440 schools provided by the board sufficient to accommodate 433,000 children out of the total of 700,-000 who are entitled to public instruction within the city.

There is no census of the population of London reaching back over 200 years. In 1700 the population was about 700,-000; in 1800, 900.000, and in 1821, 1,300,000. The original city of London, which was then a walled city, covered a space a littie more than one square mile. This. by the addition of territory and by the natural growth, has been expanded to over 120 square miles and to a population of over 4.250.000 people.

THE STREETS OF LONDON.

To a stranger coming into this immense city, wonderful in its history, its growth and its power in the world, beside the great public buildings that stand out as landmarks, the streets themselves present a most interesting and unique appearnce. The great rivers of humanity flowing along the crowded streets in such masses as are found nowhere else in the world, command your attention, and you wonder where they come from and how they can live. As far as the eye can reach either way on any of the great streets of London, the sidewalks will be filled with people on foot and the streets with omnibuses and carriages seemingly unbroken from one end of the street to the other. The omnibuss are a peculiar and distinctive feature. They are double deckers, and every seat nearly, on top as well as inside, will be occupied, while every available space on the outside of these om-nibuses is occupied by advertisements, signs of things for sale, quaint and curious writings and pictures so as to attract attention. The sidewalks seem to be a flowing mass of shiny stovepipe hats. Almost every boy from 14 years old upward, and at least two-thirds of the men, wear tall hats. Looking down upon them from the top of an omnibus, which is the best possible way of seeing the people and seeing the streets, this sight is peculiarly interesting to an American. Then, too, all carriages and omnibuses turn to the left instead of to the right as they do in this country.

RESPECT FOR AUTHORITY. It is wonderful to see how the city is under the control of the police. There is never any jar, never any jam, never seemingly any hurry. At every center where jams would be likely to take place, as they used to, for instance, about Fulton street, New York, police-men are stationed, and the lifting of his hand stops every carriage and 'bus instantly, and the whole street of carriages stands still. Then, by a like motion, he directs the procession so that no jam or trouble take place. Every where the majesty of the law is manifest. A finer looking body of men than the policemen of London as to size, height and dignity of bearing, it would be difficult to select. PAVEMENTS.

The streets are admirably paved, and every little while you see a boy with what looks like a large dust pan in one hand and a short broom in the other collecting all the filth and dirt, which he deposits in a barrel or tank by the side of the road in his beat, and this is hauled away and used as a fertilizer. Thus the streets are kept comparatively clean all the time. Five of these boys can be employed for the wages of one man in this country, although I notice that in some portions of New York men are employed in the same way to keep the streets clean. I was somewhat surprised to see that most of the pavements that are put down on the best streets are made of wooden blocks, and the same is done in Paris. It is claimed that these blocks will last nearly as long as the asphalt pavement, and are not as neisy nor as slippery for the horses in wet weather. Horses are not permitted to be shod with calks, and most of the hansoms, I might say nearly all of those of recent makes, have rubber tires.

MANY NAMES FOR THE SAME STREET.

There is one more fact that is peculiarly strange to an American, the streets change their names every little while just the same as though we should take Euclid avenue and call it Euclid avenue from the square to Perry street and then the name should be changed from Perry to Sterling avenue, say to Avondale, then from Sterling avenue to Madison, to St. Jerome avenue; then from Madison avenue to East Cleveland or Doan street, to East End boulevard, and from Doan street to Lake View Cemetery to Cemetery road. Take for instance the Oxbridge road on the north of Hyde Park, which s the same continuous street, becomes Oxford street after leaving Edgewater road just at the east line of Hyde Park; pass on until you come to Tottenham Court road and the same street becomes New Oxford street; then Newgate street, and a little further on it becomes Cheapside; after passing King William's street it becomes Cornhill, and then a little farther it is Leadenhall street, and the same street changes its name half a dozen times more before it has passed to the east end of the city. THE PEOPLE.

I was peculiarly interested in the character and faces of the people of London. I know not how I carried it in my mind for so many years that the Londoner was a thick-necked, broadbacked John Bull, as we have had him pictured to us, but I suppose my mind, like many others, has been influenced by caricatures and by samples of men that I have met. I was agreeably surprised and delighted to find that the mass of business men in London were of medium height, not thick-necked, not brutal in expression, but refined, clean shaven and fair. I do not mean by this that they are light-haired and blue-eyed, but that they are of clear complexion and good Teutonic blood. I always admired the type of men that used to fill the streets of Boston; they were clean cut, sharply defined and of marked individuality. They have fine faces, good heads and beautiful features, and they used to be in the older and better days of Boston the Athenians of America. No such type of manhood now fills the streets of any one of our cities. We are more cosmopolitan. Such men are scattered about and are found in individual cases all over the United States. They have become the molders of public opinion, as they are themselves by nature leaders among their fellow-men, leaders in education in invention, in mechanics, in trade and commerce and on the forum, and in every place where nervous energy and high intellect and character predominates. If one could take a piece of London as it was 200 years ago, and might almost say as it is today, and float it across the Atlantic and into the Massachusetts bay it would be another

These Englishmen, these Londoners are our ancestors; they are our people; they are the same stock of men out of which a large percentage of Americans have sprung. You see it in their walk, you hear it in their language, you see it in their faces and you feel it in their resence as you talk with them and look into their eyes. No wonder they are the rulers of the sea, thy are rulers in commerce, in trade, and they are masters in finance, and they never let up on what they believe to be for the gain of England. They are loyal to the backbone to their native country. A great lesson can be learned and should be learned by Americans. An American has no right to be a sycophant; he does not descend from a race of sycophants. An Englishman expects an American that stands up for his rights and for his country, and we may be certain that as fate is fate that unless we stand up for our own government, for our own business, for our own system of money, England will quietly, steadily and surely conquer and rule us. STAUNCH AMERICANISM.

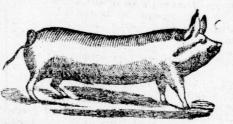

What may be good for England, situated as she is on an island, needing all the products of the world in a raw state for her workshops and all the world as a market for her products and those products for freight for her ships, may not be good for America. It does not because London is the exchange of the world, and it is for her interest to have dear money, that therefore it is for the interest of America to have dear money.

Nothing is gained by aping foreign countries. We respect an Englishman because he moves on in his own way, because he is independent, because there is a certain amount of staunch manliness about him, and we shall never respect ourselves until we do the same and become distinctively American in policy and principles.

Castoria.

Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

Dr. G. C. OSGOOD,

Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves.'

TO MEASURE FOR PAPER.

Measure the length and height of each wall in feet and multiply. Add together the number of square feet of each wall, getting total number of square feet. Divide this total by 36, which will give you the number of pieces required for the side walls. Allow one-half piece of paper for each door and window. To allow for waste in matching, it is safer to divide by 33 instead of 36. To find the number of pieces required for ceiling, multiply length by width, in feet, and divide by

Suppose a room to be five yards long by four yards wide, which nets 18 yards around the room. This is equal to 36 half-yards or breadths of paper. For each door or window allow two breadths. Our example room, having two doors and one window, we allow six breadths, which brings us down to 30 breadths. The room, being nine feet high, we divide by five, which gives us a result of six double or twelve single pieces. For a room seven feet high, divide by six; a room eight or nine feet high, divide by five; a room ten or eleven feet high, divide by four,

Numerous cases are on record of such things having happened.

MRS. BARNES FINED $80

And Costs-She Admits Selling Liquor and Keeping a House of Ill Repute-Assault Costs Thomas Murray $30 or Two Months.

Mrs. Esther Barnes, of Rectory street, this morning told P. M. Parke that she was keeping a disorderly house at the time of her arrest on Saturday night, May 11. She also acknowledged having sold liquor without a license, and both offenses proved very costly.

"What do you say?" asked the police magistrate when the first charge was "Guilty," Mrs. Barnes replied. "Well, I will offer no evidence against Robert Barnes, her husband, charged with being an inmate," said Assistant Crown Attorney McKillop.

The charge of selling liquor was subsequently taken up, and as Maud Scott, a former inmate of the Barnes house, stepped into the box to give evidence, Mr. Love entered a plea of guilty. "The first offense will cost you $30, and that of selling liquor will cast you $50. You will have to pay the costs in both cases, too," said the magistrate. Thomas Murray, a carpenter, was charged by the Scott girl with an aggravated assault, by scriking her on the side of the head with a hammer. The complainant has for some months been an inmate of Mrs. Barnes', and Murray was a frequenter. In fact, he spent a great part of his time there. Recently, however, Miss Scott went to Hamilton, and, returning last week, she stopped with a Mrs. Flood, of Van street. While there on Friday, Murray came and took her valise and started off with it. On her interrupting him she was struck on the head with the hammer and stunned. This story was corroborated by John

Newell and John Young, two boys, who were across the road and saw the row. In the face of this Murray went into the box and claimed that he got a note from the complainant to go to Flood's, where they had a keg of beer. He was merely carrying the valise to another house, when Miss Scott interfered and called him a very bad name. He struck her with his open hand. To disprove the latter part of Murray's story, the two previous witnesses were recalled. "The offense will cost you $30, or two months' imprisonment," was the decision of the court. "I cannot take Murray's word against that of the other three witnesses."

A charge of disobeying a summons, entered against Maud Scott, was drop-
