This Real Estate Man Has Changed His Mind

Government sale in Winnipeg has been "hard on business" instead of helping it—he won't vote wet again—see page two.

Some people are inclined at present to favor government sale of liquor because they have been told that it will bring prosperity and reduce taxes. But the facts in provinces where government sale has been tried destroy that theory.

In Winnipeg, The Advertiser's representative met a real estate man who had favored government sale. This is what he said: "I like a glass myself, so I suppose I am inconsistent, for I certainly think our system of government sale is hard on business. It could hardly benefit it when millions of money is spent in such a way that it might just as well be poured into the sewers. There is nothing tangible to show Another real estate dealer in Winnipeg pointed out to The Advertiser that "instead of government control reducing taxation the province imposed for the first time a provincial income tax six months after they knew what revenue to expect from the government sale of liquor.

Study the real facts of government sale in actual operation before you believe in hopes of what it may do in Ontario. Today, the sixth article of the series reporting investigations in Manitoba, Alberta, British Columbia and Quebec appears on page two. It was 425 Henry avenue, the Manitoba liquor control commission's per day. Mr. Waugh told him that headquarters and warehouse, that I he thought the provision already talked with Chairman Waugh, who s charged with the task of directing he sale of liquor in Manitoba. their bottoms. Chairman Waugh Explains.

Mr. Waugh was upstairs. He eadily explained the system and its peration. He said there were nine places in Manitoba where the government took orders for spirituous liquors. Five of these were in Winnipeg, the other four being at Brandon, Portage la Prairie, Dauphin and La Pas. There were five warehouses from which the government distributed the liquor it sold. Only one of these was in Winnipeg, the one at headquarters. The others were in the outside places where they had combined order offices and ware-

Mr. Waugh said that until the day I saw him the breweries had been free to sell up to any amount of beer to an individual. Persons who bought in large quantities re-sold to the hotels and to other parties who retailed in an illicit way. It was in an effort to stop this practice that the commission had recommended that the individual citizen be limited to 48 pints per week or 120 pints per month. He hoped this would have a salutary effect when combined with the discontinuance of the use of kegs and barrels. All liquors hereafter must be distributed in bottles by the breweries' own employees and no commission be paid. He said he believed bootlegging or the illicit resale, as he prefers to call it, would be stopped if the order-in-council announcing the new restrictions

The treasurer pointed out that the brewers keep all the beer profits. The whiskey profits come from stores in only five municipalities, but will be distributed among all the municipalities of the province on the basis of assessment. I have some ground for thinking that the gross revenue will be around five millions, and that the commission aimed at a 25 per cent profit. Mr. Black felt that the government had done well in handling the finances of the province. When it took hold in 1922 things were in a bad way. The net expenditure, leaving out interest charges, in 1921, had been $6,800,000, which the new government reduced by $600,000 in 1923. But in spite of these economies and the liquor revenue a provincial income tax was a clear necessity.

Effect on the Homes.

The manager of a large real estate firm on Main street on whom I called because I had noticed his business card in the newspapers, told me how he thought government control affected the building of homes and the thriftiness of the people.

Few pages of any popular novel or latest best seller are as interesting or as full of character as the register list of a big hotel in a city which has the company of translater of the company of the c its share of travellers.

On one single page you will find the signatures of singers, lecturers, men of business, cranks, corporation lawyers, visiting divines, actresses, civil engineers, travelling members of for-few weeks there have been, besides well-known members of the church of England in Canada, an author, a singer of renown, a secret service man from the United States—who, by the way, did not register under his own name—a president of a large British corporation, and a number of lesser lights of commercial life.

The signatures in themselves are interesting. As they are all written with the same hotel pen, they have some value as representing the characteristics of their writers. A clergyman with a name of erudition in matters of doctrine and theology, leaves his mark in small neat letters, in a very scholarly style. An artist signs with careless independence in large free letters. There is nothing cramped about his style, There is almost a definite defiance of conventionality in this signature.

Then there is the strong heavy-lined name of the Britisher, the president of the corporation, a rather gloomy affair with heavy cross lines at the top of the letters, and just as heavy ones underlining it. An actress is next on the list, and she takes up twice as much room as the president. Space is nothing to her, but she leaves out the lines and punctuation. Perhaps she thinks veryone knows her name, and that it doesn't need underscoring. The secret service man wrote his nom-de-guerre in a back hand, probably the result of a desire for increased secrecy. A European lecturer took two lines to get his name in. He must be somewhat of a pes simist, for he started at the top of one line and fell down to the foot of the line below. But he may have been tired after a long journey, and the trip from Montreal may have left his powers of concentration poor.

A journalist has left his impression

Family Happiness Is Often Measured by Attitude Toward Money.

BURDEN TOO GREAT

"Keeping Up With the Jones' Often Ends in Domestic Tragedy.

By JULIA HOYT.

A certain young woman I know, of very moderate means, is one of those who are popularly called rare specimens of happy wife. What is more, her husband is a happy and contented man. She is not particularly goodlooking, nor is she witty and brilliant, and though very pleasant and kind. I must confess to having sometimes wondered what was the reason for his quite evident complete satisfaction in her as a wife. The other day I discovered what I feel sure is the reason and, on thinking it over, I elieve it is worth writing about.

Living Beyond Means.

Living Beyond Means.

The tendency of many young married couples today is to live beyond their means. They think themselves miserable if their friends. Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, can possess or do something which is beyond their means. Consequently, in order to keep up they assume two terrific burdens; first, of owing money, and second, of having to continue to do so—for once in they feel they must continue.

Into debt to acquire the desired article are laying up untold unhappiness. And they will soon have their hearts set on something new beyond their reach.

The young couple mentioned at the beginning of this article have worked out their budget in an intelligent manner and stick to it. If the wife wants some luxury that is beyond her means—for example, a course of study she took one year—she earns it by sac; if ficing something for it. Says It Is No Worse Than Other Gambling Games—Elect Mrs. May R. Thornley.

The W. C. T. U. declined to ban mah jong at the annual convention of the Ontario branch in St. Catharines yesterday. The suggestion that the members of the W. C. T. Charms for Beauty Dorothy Dix

How the Plain Girl Can Make Herself as Attractive as the One Whom Nature Has Favored.

A young girl writes to me: I am an ugly duckling. My good fairy was off gadding somewhere when the good looks were given out, and I didn't get my share. Nor did 1 solation prize in being endowed with an extra supply of brains. m just an ordinary, homely, common-place girl, who is foreere to paper the wall at parties and hang on with her teeth popular girls.

"I am not willing to meekly accept this fate. Is there any way to avoid it? Is there any way a plain girl can take the curse off of her plainness and make herself persona grata with the crowd of young people who do things and have a good time?"

Surely, my dear. It is not to be denied that beauty is a girl's trump card, but there are other cards in the deck that, skillfully played, will take the trick and win out. It is much to have been dealt a good hand, but it is more to learn how to make the best of the hand you have got.

Do not mourn as one without hope because nature neglected to hand you out a peaches-and-cream skin, and Mary Pickford curls, and a willowy We snap our fingers in Mother Nature's face in these days when hand-made complexions put the real article to the blush, and there's a permanent-wave shop on every other corner, and any girl can have a straight-front figure who is willing to cut out chocolate creams and take plenty of exercise.

Of course, every girl wants to look like a living picture, but did you ever stop to consider that the thing that first catches our eye about a pic ture is the frame? Now the frame of a living picture is made of frills, and furbelows, and fripperies, and these are obtainable by the homely girl as well as the pretty girl.

When we speak of a woman as being good-looking we mean that she gives us an impression of beauty, and not one person in a hundred ever disassociates her face from her clothes. She has merely registered in our minds as something that was easy to look at, a delight of harmony, of color and line, and we couldn't tell to save our lives whether she had a Greek nose and a Cupid's bow mouth or almond eyes or not.

Therefore, if you are homely, make a cult of clothes. Wear such beautiful and stunning things that your glad raiment will so focus the attention of the beholders that they will never notice your face. Plenty of women have the reputation of beauties who have only good dressmakers and milliners. You can camouflage homeliness with an imported frock with men every time. More than that, hostesses like to have well-dressed women at their affairs. It gives eclat to the occasion.

Your first play is to dress well, and thereby appear 50 per cent better looking than you are, instead of going dowdy and looking 75 per cent homelier than you are, as most plain women do. Your next play is to learn how to do things.

Especially learn how to dance. Spend time and money and energy in cultivating your heels. In these jazzy days it is better or a girl to have a pair of nimble feet than to have the beauty of a Venus or the wit of a Sappho.

The girl who can float over a ballroom floor like thistledown and who can adapt her step to any partner's will never lack for attention, no natter how plain she is. She will have men breaking in on her every nce, while pretty girls who step on their partners' toes or who have to lugged about like sacks of meal are left lamenting on the sidelines.

Also learn to play a good game of bridge, and of tennis, and of golf. It is skill and not beauty that counts in sport, and no girl looks good to the partner whose ace she trumps or who gets him beaten at his favorite game.

And if you have the slightest musical talent, learn to play the piano at least enough to play accompaniments for sing songs and a little jazz for others to dance by. The accommodating girl who helps to make a party go is never left out of things. Just remember that if your face isn't a card of admission you can make your hands be one.

Your third play is to make yourself charming. Most homely women let their lack of pulchritude make them disgruntled, and envious, and cattish. They are always saying little spiteful things and clowing back so they bring the blood at every opportunity, until they are about as comfortable to be with as a fretful porcu-

This is a fatal mistake. The woman who has no beauty with which to attract must draw people to her by her personality, and she cannot do this unless she is pleasant and agreeable.

Nobody can, of course, give you a recipe for making the big medicine that we call charm, but mainly it consists of sympathy and interest in the affairs of those about you. The one burning topic of interest to every individual alive is himself or herself. If you can listen with a wrapt expression while a man spends hours telling you the story of his life, and all the details of his business, and all the minutiae of his golf game, and if you can enthuse over his dog and his gun, and his automobile, he will go away believing you to be one of the most gifted conversationalists on earth and a woman possessed of the most profound intellect, although you may not have opened your mouth to say anything except to exclaim, "How great and wonderful you are!"

Charm also consists of being vital, in being interested, in being enthusiastic, in being adaptable, in being able to enter into everything and put pep and ginger into it. Therefore, keep yourself elive. Keep yourself keyed up. Read. Have something interesting to talk about. Even the beauty cannot afford to be dull and a bore. For a homely girl to be tedious is suicidal.

No ugly duckling need despair. She can turn herself into a swan-or synthetic swan—that is just as good as the real article if she has the gift and the wit to do it.

Farmer Brown's Boy Promises To Get Jimmy Skunk Out of the Barn

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Inside of Farmer Brown's barn stood Farmer Brown himself, as far back as he could get. Outside in front of the open barn doors, stood Farmer Brown's Boy. Between them in the middle of the barn floor stood a barrel. "Well, son," said Farmer Brown and his eyes twinkled, "it seems to me that Possum must have changed me that Possum must have changed his coat after he was caught. I don't know what you think about it, but it looks to me as if we have a barrel of trouble. And it is right here in the barn. It seems to me that, as you brought it here, you should be the one to get rid of it. What are you going to do about it?"

"No, I think I'd rather let him go."

"Why not kill him and so get him out of the way altogether?" Farmer Brown asked.

"Kill Jimmy Skunk! I guess not!"

"All right, son," replied Farmer Brown." I was just trying to tease you. I don't want Jimmy Skunk killed. I'm glad you feel the way you do. But I don't want Jimmy hout of the way altogether?" Farmer Brown's Boy indignantly. "I guess not! Didn't I tell you that alway, or pretty good friends, and I thin! kin him pretty well.

"He probably is feeling rather out of sorts now over the way he's been treated, and I can't say that I blame him much. But he'll soon get over it. Then I'll slip up and put something over that barrel and we can thing over that barrel and we can the farm. I know, because I've seen where he has and dozens of places where he has and let him dake it outside the barn, and let him go."

Premier King and the Senate.

Premier King, speaking at Port Arthur, outlined in general a measure that will be brought before the House of Commons to ask for such changes in the constitution as to limit the veto power of the Senate. In so doing he has folby the Commons for the third time becomes law regardless of the action of the House of Lords.

The effect of this is to prevent hasty decisions or hot-headed action. The Commons, like an individual, stands in danger of coming to decisions at times that do not look quite the same third time.

As far as it goes the idea is sound, but it does not move toward cutting down the number of senators, which at present is out of all protime-curb the powers of the Senate and reduce attitude of a number of the dignitaries attending the gathering can probably be accepted as fairly representing the attitude of the majority. The belief seems to prevail that the church and homes should teach temperance to the people, and that in this way, rather than by provincial enactments of prohibition, should the matter be handled.

Quite the reverse was the general tenor of the discussion regarding trading in narcotics; some of the delegates were prepared to go the extreme limit, and make the use of the lash part of the penalty for those found guilty of participating in the traffic. It was not considered that teaching in the homes and by the agency of church instruction would be sufficiently strong or effective enough to strangle the traffic. The synod did not pass a resolution urging the lash for drug peddlers, because more time was thought necessary to develop details, but the feeling of an oil company of the old registry office on the the delegates was undoubtedly that some such corner of Talbot and Carling streets. step should be taken by the law. The utter destruction of the traffic by striking at the base of supply also met with favor.

A Tip For Mr. Ferguson.

The London Free Press finds pleasure in the political discomfort of the Oliver government in British Columbia and speculates as to the cause. The Free Press should consult its senior oracle. the Toronto Mail and Empire.

In a simultaneous editorial the Mail and Empire says: "The Oliver government has earned shop. defeat through the grossest mismanagement, waste and extravagance. The London Free Press, as a friend of Premier Ferguson, should now muster courage to forward to Mr. Ferguson crying out for a board of arbitration. this warning of the political perils awaiting a government which engages in the business of selling liquor.

The Tendency Toward Centralization.

In looking over the proposed amalgamation of the Standard and Sterling banks there are two conflicting currents brought into action: (1) the fact that the stronger banks can offer better security and thus secure more business, and (2) the question whether this continued situation.

The tendency in banking is toward centralization, and that in turn calls for rigid inspection and fearless action on the part of the lowed British precedent where a measure passed government to stop any abuse of the larger powers growing from amalgamation.

THE GROWTH OF THE CITY

The growth of any city seems to be under the control of a power not of itself.

No one can tell how it is going to grow or in which direction it is to grow. There would be much profit in real estate if one knew It seems strange that most of the repairs in the roads of a city appear to take place at the time when they are being used the most. In London, for instance, during the summer when the city should have been at its best for its thousands of visitors, and just at the time when travel was at its highest peak of the year, street work seems to have been feverishly active. Going along its main streets from the Marble Arch to Ludgate Circus, one is confronted by a continuous series of hold-ups where workmen, indifferent to the traffic about them, are digging up the road.

One relates a good story which has been heard lately. A young man was entertaining his mother-in-law at the height of the summer season. In order to impress her deeply with the wonders of London he hired a motor car for an afternoon's drive. They went to all the interesting parts of the city and wherever they drove they were met by the usual red barriers which held them up for several minutes. Finally on the way home, along Regent street, they discovered that every other building was covered with scaffolding for remodelling. When they arrived home the young man said: 'Well, mother, what do you think of London?" After thinking for moment the old lady replied: "Well, my boy, I think it will be nice when it is done.'

Continual alterations are being made in the great capitals of the world. Fifth avenue in New York, and the Champs Elysees in Paris, are being invaded by shops, and there are those who prophesy that soon they will cease to be residential districts. It is a curious thing that the underworld, or the tenderloin or whatever you call it, meaning the disreputable portion of the city, is usually to be found between the business and the residence

The reason for this is that the people of this kind are usually very transient, do not like long leases and are very temporary in their stays.

More and more the residence portion of any city is being thrust out into the suburbs.

Washington, Oct. 2.—Great oaks from little acorns grow. John D. Rockefeller once was a lowly clerk, Charlie Schwab drove the inter-village stage, and Stanley Raymond Harris was just a breaker boy in the Pennsylvania mines. Fate has been kind since those lowly days. John D. is worth a few billions, more or less. Charlie is the steel wizard of the world, and "Stan" at 27. is about to go to bat in a world series as the only pilot who ever brought the Washington baseball team home a winner.

In "Bucky" Harris, as he stands to day, dizzy at the peak, there is no envy of the Rockefeller millions; no hankering after the corporate power of Schwab. In his chosen profession he has gone as far as any of the rest. There is one supreme effort before hin. And the man who stands athwart the path to the ultimate pinnacle 's a grint and grizzled warrior, who snaps and snarls "he shall not pass!"

But Stanley Harris is not afraid. Outside his window he sees the beanstalks rising to the skies. Saturday afternoon he begins his climb and in four or five trips to the mystic castle he hopes to bring home the Giant's gold, the Glant's little brown hen that lays the golden eggs, and last of all the magic harp which sings the most wonderful songs in all the world. For Stanley Harris is dreaming dreams. He sees himself as Jack the Glant Killer. He has drunk of the cup of success. Destiny rides beside him as he fares forth to conquer the world in what Kitchener, Oct. 2.—Captain Tom Seagram of the champion Waterloo cricket club of the Western Ontario cricket league was touight tendered a banquet at Wagner's hotel. Bridgeport, by his teammates, and presented with a goldheaded cane in appreciation of his efforts in the interest of cricket locally. He has been one of the most ardent supporters hereabouts.

The cricketers also presented Governor Cook of the local jail, who is the club's umpire, with a pipe.

Baseball critics agree that Harris will use Johnson in the first game and then likely again in the fourth or fifth, depending upon the aspect of the series. It is against McGraw's policy to shoot his "ace" at his opponent's "ace" and because of this it is figured that McGraw will not use Nehf on Saturday, but will likely save him for a Sunday shot.

London and Sarnia To Continue As Two-Team Groups In Intermediate Series

R. F. U. squad for Saturday's game here against London, and there will likely be more than 20 players from whom to pick the 18 that will go the route against the visitors. The best news of the week is that Red Cowan is out and is practically certain to operate at quarter. Perry claims he will be out Friday and he ready to go Saturday, but his injured finger will not likely allow him to go the route even if he does get in for a time. Houston is taking treatments for a sprained shoulder.

K.chardson's shoulder is all right again, and Gray's ankle and Karn's back are all right again. Karn, however is an unlikely starter. Sarnia's back field Saturday will probably be Perry, Wilson and Gray, with Houston flying wing, Cowan at quarter, Richardson snap. Manore, Stonehouse and Bently ends, Blaikie, Pollard and Bossenberry insides, and Smith, Everingham and Wilson middles. There is a raft of other players for half line and quarter back positions, including Lyte Smith, Jackson, Mulligan. Millad, Hewitt, Reece and Fitzgibbon.

Those who are the players They alone the quasition are the players. They alone in position to properly gauge the qualities of a leader.

So, resorting to the copinions of players, the answer was supplied. It is not surprising to discover that John J. McGraw is selected as the best manager in the National league, but it will come as a surprise to those who follow base-ball to discover the choice in the American league is William Carrigan, who managed the Boston Red Sox. And yet the vote for Carrigan is as solid in the American league as the vote in the National is for McGraw, if not more so.

Carrigan's uncanny instinct on pitchers is best flustrated in an incident that "Dutch" Leonard relates Carrigan developed Leonard into one of the leading lefthanders of baseball. The incident was a way. Says and the ready to play the the vote for Carrigan is as solid in the American leag

To stab putts is bad practice on any kind of a green, especially on slow or rough greens. A putt hit with an overspin is always easier to control. On a rough green the putt with an overspin will keep its line better, tending to roll right over the bumps and keep a straight course, while a stab putt is hit with more of and Kitchener in a new circuit, it was announced last night by officials of the L. A. A. following receipt of advice from the O. R. F. U. executve that no other arrangement could be made. It was explained that as Ktchener has been advertised to play in Dundas tomorrow and Galt in Hamilton, it is now too late to arrange a new grouping. The locals will go to Sarnia for the opening game of the series tomorrow, with the Tunnel City outfit returning here a week from this Saturday. In case each takes one, another two-played. In the event that a tie still in case each takes one, another two-played. In the event that a tie still exists at the conclusion of this, a sudden death game will be played to decide the group championship.

J. D. Isaacs chairman of the transportation committee, announces that the local intermediates will make the trip to Sarnia Saturday in automobiles, leaving here at 11 a.m.
Last night's practice was the best staged yet, with every candidate out in harness and putting his every energy into an effort to make the team a more smoothly working machine. Gerry floodman was elected captain of the team by a vote of the players.

In case the group winner is decided in the first two games, the London twelve will bring several senior or intercollegiate teams here for exhibition games, thus assuring football fans of the city a full season of top notch rugby.

St. Thomas. Oct. 2.—St. Thomas baseball fans are still stirred up over the result of the final Galt-St. Thomas game in London, and many suggestions for a new baseball association in this part of the province are heard. One ian in particular has very definitely expressed his opinion on the matter in the following proposition:

That a senior organization be formed to be known as the Western Ontario baseball association, the western group to be composed of St. Thomas, London Orients, Lucan Strathroy, Sarnia, Blenheim, Dresden and Chatham, and the eastern section to include Galt, Guelph, Treston, Kitchener. Stratford, Woodtock and London A. A.

He further suggests that the games art on May 16, and the first series lish early in July, with the second lies closing Aug 31. The league y-offs would start on Labor Day, of a fitter, and finish before the end the month. In conclusion, he prosent that standard admission be ged by all times at all parks.
