

The commander of the carabinieri was... "So many could not be held responsible... "Yes," murmured Vella. "I quarrelled yesterday with Ortonello. He wanted to take my job away—take the bread and butter from my wife and children. He threatened me with a gun."

When Ortonello was brought to trial for the killing of Vella many honest witnesses attempted to aid him. Pietro Milone, a police officer, tried to bring in court evidence clearing Ortonello. One night as he was walking home he was murdered and the assassins were not apprehended.

Giuglia Milone lived directly across the street from the spot where Vella was killed. Later she admitted that she saw Morello shoot the captain of the Milan Guards. She was intimidated and later came to New York, where her cousin Domenico Milone conducted a business store, which served as the headquarters for the distribution of the counterfeit money.

Ortonello's son was tireless in his efforts to have his father freed, and was several times warned by the Mafia to cease his efforts. He was not to be intimidated, and one night three rifles were fired at him, all of which, however, went wide of the mark.

LABOR BULLITEN IS ISSUED BY THE DEPARTMENT

Slight Increase in Trade Disputes Throughout Canada During May.

[By Special Wire to the Courier] OTTAWA, Ont., June 18.—There was a slight increase in the number of trade disputes reported to the department of labor during May. Ten new disputes were reported, twenty-six less than in the corresponding month of the previous year.

Wholesale Prices. The department's index number of wholesale prices stood at 130.2 for May as compared with 126.8 in April, and 124.5 in April 1913. Hogs, sheep, dairy products, fish, metals, fuel and some kinds of lumber were lower in price, but grains, cattle and beef, fruit and vegetables, wood and jute showed important advances.

STEERING GEAR WAS WRONG, IS CLAIM MADE

Lawyer for the Storstad Introduces a New Feature in Enquiry at Quebec Today—Lord Mersey is on the Job.

[By Special Wire to The Courier] QUEBEC, June 18.—The suggestion by C. S. Haight, New York counsel for the owners of the Storstad, that the steering gear of the Empress of Ireland was not in proper order and his promise that evidence will be called in this connection formed the most important phase of this morning's session of the Dominion enquiry into the sinking of the C.P.R. liner on May 29 in the St. Lawrence.

Mr. Haight made his suggestion when directly interpolated on the point by Lord Mersey after he had made a number of unsuccessful attempts to get corroborative testimony from Robert Liddell, third engineer of the Empress, but who knew nothing about the matter because though he had been connected with the steering gear at one time, he had had nothing to do with it for the past eight months.

Lord Mersey, when Mr. Haight announced his suggestion immediately inquired why questions about it had not been put to Captain Kendall when he was on the stand, and Mr. Haight said that the information had only come to him during the past 12 hours and Edward L. Newcombe, K.C., who is appearing for the government, had promised that the witnesses should be called and examined about the theory.

For the rest of the session this morning witnesses were introduced who substantiated the C.P.R. claim that the Empress was first of all ordered full speed ahead then stop and full speed astern and then stopped, and that she was stationary when struck by the Collier Storstad. This information was supplied by Robert Henry Brennan second engineer, who had charge of the port engines, and Robert Liddell who had charge of the starboard engines. George B. Smart and John W. Black of Ottawa, passengers, also testified, the former giving it as his opinion that the Empress was stationary, or almost so, and that there was no panic and that the passengers treated each other with "remarkable tenderness."

With that punctuality which has marked his appearance in the court, where the Empress of Ireland enquiry is being held, Lord Mersey this morning appeared promptly at ten o'clock. He at once asked Edmund L. Newcombe, K.C., appearing for the Dominion Marine Department, to prepare plans for the construction of the two vessels in the collision, as well as get evidence ready on the question of the equipment of the ships and on the life belts, rafts and lifeboats on the Empress. Butler Aspinall, K.C., for the C. P. R. promised to place Messrs. Hillhouse and Grace of the Fairfield shipping company, which built the Empress, and Capt. Walsh, marine superintendent of the company's ships, at the disposal of Mr. Newcombe. Mr. Newcombe then asked permission to call George Smart a passenger on the Empress. Lord Mersey after saying that he doubted whether the passengers could tell much about the wreck, allowed Mr. Smart to be called.

Mr. Smart said he had a cabin on the dining room deck on the starboard side and about midships. He was first awakened around two by the Empress' siren, and sat up. As he did so, there came a crash. He ran out into the passageway and saw the bow of the Storstad to his right. He thought it was so close that he believed he could touch it, but could not swear to the proximity exactly, as he might be exaggerating. He put on an overcoat and as the ship had a big list, crawled upstairs to the upper deck. He sat on the rail till the ship keeled over. He went down twenty feet twice and then grabbed a chair from which he understood he was saved. Mr. Smart said the people rushed about on the deck after the collision, but there was no panic. The good feeling manifested by the passengers towards one another was remarkable. He said they treated one another most tenderly.

Mr. Newcombe asked if the Empress was moving and the witness said his impression was that she was stationary or at the most moving very slowly. Lord Mersey—"When you put your head out of your port hole were the ships then in contact?" Witness—"They were not touching each other." Lord Mersey—"The collision had taken place?" "Yes." Mr. Haight—"You felt the jar before looking out of the port hole?" "Yes, the vessel then seemed at right angles, but the stem of the Storstad was clear." He could see men on the Storstad. "How far was she away?" "I would not like to say." Lord Mersey—"And you are quite right in not saying. I dare say it seemed an eternity while you were sitting on the rail." The impact, he said, reminded him of a rough car coupling—a rude jar. Before he went into the water he sat on the railing. "What is your business?" Lord Mersey interrupted here saying such a question was irrelevant and that he was anxious to save time. The witness added that he was in the service of the Dominion Government.

Passenger's Evidence. John W. Black, a second cabin passenger on the Empress of Ireland, said he was awakened by the crash of the collision. His cabin was on the starboard side of the ship. It was 2.15 by his watch. He jumped out of bed and saw two deck stewards running upstairs. He got his wife. He asked a sailor if it was serious and he said it was nothing. He climbed over the side with his wife and took to the water when a lifeboat was lowered and he got his wife into it. There was an explosion then and some of the wreckage fell on the lifeboat and wrecked the boat. Three quarters of an hour later they reached the Storstad. The Empress was standing still, he could discern that from the objects on the water. No one wished to cross-examine the witness. Lord Mersey—"I don't think it will increase our knowledge of the accident to call more of these witnesses. They tell the same thing." Mr. Newcombe—"Mr. Black's wife is here." Lord Mersey—"I don't think it is necessary to put a lady to the pain of coming here." Second Engineer Examined. Examined by F. E. Meredith, K.C., Montreal, Robert Henry Brennan, second engineer on the Empress gave an account of the signals received on the telegraph from the bridge. He said soon after leaving Father Point

A NERVY LAD, THIS

Calls at the Police Station to Have Talk With His Chum. "You fellows can't catch us if we want to get away" declared Dasko Guralnyz a boy of 14, as he marched into the Police Station yesterday and said he was the other boy who was helping to break into the sealed car on the Grand Trunk Railway and who escaped when his companion, Louis Caneck was caught. It transpires that he had visited the station and getting round to the back, had been in communication with his brother in trouble and the result of the confab was that he walked in and gave himself up. He was given the comfort of a cell over night and was not brought before the bench this morning, but will appear with Caneck on his next arraignment. Both boys hail from Buffalo, and are of foreign descent, Caneck being a German and Guralnyz being a Polack. Some years ago the latter lived in Brantford and left with his parents to reside in the American metropolis. The Chief is making investigations through the Buffalo force. STEAMSHIP ASHORE. WEYMOUTH, Eng., June 18.—The Steamship Buelow belonging to the China Line of the North German Lloyd went ashore to-day during a fog near Myrledene to the West of Portland. The Buelow, a vessel of 3,031 tons net, was on the way from Yokohama, when she sailed on May 29th for Hamburg. She called at Seuz on June 3. The St. Thomas team seems to have got going properly. Maybe the Red Sox will too.

ENTRANCE EXAMS

Over 200 Candidates Are Busily Engaged in Writing Their Papers.

Some 240 candidates are busy writing the entrance examinations for the high schools at the Collegiate Institute. While the new regulations adopted by the high school entrance board are being given a trial in other centres just now, Mr. E. C. Kilmer, Inspector of public schools, stated this morning that the methods which governed the examination in past years would obtain locally until the success of the new method is assured.

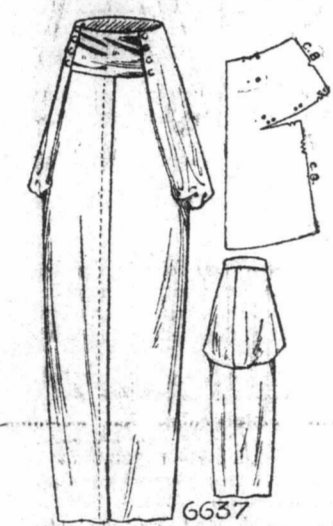

The new method, which was adopted by the Department of Education at the close of the last session of the legislature is to do away entirely with the written examination and pass students on the recommendation of the principal of the school, as to their daily work throughout the year. This is being tried for the first time in Toronto and Ottawa but Hamilton and Brantford do not adopt the new measure this year.

In regard to Brantford's case, Mr. Kilmer stated that certain preparations had already been made here for the holding of the written examination and perhaps next year the new method might be tried, although many teachers think that the method in force here to-day, that of a written annual examination with special reference to the daily work and standing of the students is the best.

King and Queen To Visit Colonies

(By Special Wire to The Courier) MONTREAL, June 18.—A London cable to the Daily Mail says:

Ever since the King's accession it has been generally understood at court that the King and Queen would, at the earliest opportunity, make a tour of the overseas dominions.

His Majesty has, indeed, promised both the Australian and South African Governments that he would do this, and now the visit is expected to take place in the autumn or early winter of next year, the route being out by the Cape and home through Canada.

The Colonial Office and the Governments of the Dominions have already discussed the details.

King George particularly desires to attend the official founding of the new Australian federal capital at Canberra.

Wedding Bells

BENSON—THOMAS The marriage was celebrated on Wednesday of this week of Mr. Chas. H. Benson of this city, and Miss Florence Thomas of London, England. The wedding was performed at the parsonage of the Congregational Church by Rev. Mr. Kelly.

MORRISON—BUTLER On Tuesday there was celebrated in the Alexandra church, parsonage by Rev. D. E. McClintock, the marriage of Adeline Florence Morrison and Oscar Roy Butler both of this city. The ceremony was a quiet one, only a few intimate friends of the bride and bridegroom being present.

MITCHELL—CROSS PARIS, June 17.—A very pretty wedding took place in the Church of the Sacred Heart this morning at 7.30, when Eva, fourth daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luke Cross, was united in marriage to Mr. F. Robt. Mitchell of Brantford, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Mitchell. Rev. Father Cassidy officiated. The bride looked sweet and girlish in her beautiful gown of white satin, trimmed with pearls, and carrying white roses, and also wearing her mother's wedding veil. Miss Doty, cousin of the groom was bridesmaid and wore a becoming dress of yellow satin, large black hat and carried pink roses, while Mr. Gordon Mitchell assisted his brother, Miss Bella Cahill, organist of the church played the wedding march and was presented with a pearl pin from the groom, while the bride received a handsome pearl necklace; bridesmaid a dull gold bracelet; best man gold cuff links. After the ceremony, the guests returned to the bride's home where a delectable breakfast was served, the room being decorated with pink and white carnations. After the usual toasts, etc., the happy couple left on their honeymoon trip, which will be spent at Toronto, Buffalo, Boston. He bride travelled in a Copenhagen blue suit, with hat to match.

Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell will reside on Chatham St Brantford, where they will be at home to their many friends. The bride received many handsome and costly presents, showing the high esteem in which she was held.

WARD—ANNIS A very pretty house wedding took place yesterday at 5 o'clock at the residence of Mrs John Jewell, 29 Port street, when her sister, Miss Anna M. Annis became the bride of Capt. Geo. A. Ward, of this city. The bride, beautifully gowned in white silk crepe with shadow lace overdress, and carrying a shower bouquet of bridal roses, entered the drawing room, to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Mrs J. J. Liddy; her brother-in-law, Mr. George Hicks of Palmerston, giving her away. Little Jack Wedlake preceded the bride carrying the wedding ring in a quaint little basket of moss roses. The ceremony, performed by Rev. J. J. Liddy, of Wesley church, took place before a bank of palms and ferns. After congratulations had been extended to the happy couple, guests numbering about thirty-five, adjourned to the dining room where dinner was served. The table decorations were pink roses and orange blossoms, the color scheme of pink and white being carried out throughout the house.

Amid showers of rice and confetti Mr and Mrs Ward left on the 8.19 train for Toronto, Rochester and other points, the bride travelling in a tailored suit of navy blue and little tailored hat to match.

The wedding presents were costly and numerous, showing the esteem in which the bride and groom were held by their many friends.

Guests were present from Toronto, Galt, Palmerston and Listowel.

GUILTY OF MURDER. CALGARY, June 18.—Affancy Sokoloff, Max Manelick and Joe Smith, Calgary Russians, were found guilty of murdering Paymaster Wilson of the Canada Cement Company, at Eschaw on May 22nd, and sentenced by Justice Walsh to be hanged at MacLeod on August 26. The jury recommended mercy on Manelick's behalf.

Women's Institute

The Brantford Women's Institute held an interesting meeting in the Sunday school room of the Baptist church on Saturday afternoon, May 30th when the ladies were addressed by the Institute delegate, Miss McTavish, who gave a splendid talk on "Saving Steps in the Home and Garden." A recitation by Miss Evelyn Hartley was much appreciated by the ladies present. After the meeting lunch was served and an enjoyable social hour spent. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Herb McIntyre on Tuesday, June 30th. Will the officers please attend.

Paris News

PARIS, June 18.—On Tuesday evening Mr. N. S. Ives held his annual recital in the school room of the Presbyterian church. A splendid programme was put on by his pupils, in various grades of advancement showing the splendid work done by them during the past year. After the recital the pupils all adjourned to Mr. Ives home where a pleasant time was spent by all.

The following standing is the result of the recent examinations held in Toronto which speak well for all the Paris pupils who have attended the High School here. Mr. Lorne Redder took second honors in second year commerce and finance; A. Bell, first honors in chemistry and mineralogy; Bert Kerruish, secured her faculty of education; Max Kerruish passed in political science; Miss Kate Appleby and James Kingsbury, passed in their general course, second year; Miss Ada Maus captured third honors in household science; Miss Olive Cale passed first year general course, and John McCosh his first year medical.

The engagement is announced of Miss Maude Norris, daughter of 312 St. Mrs. Wm. Norris, Banfield St. to Mr. Robert H. Riddell. The marriage will take place quietly this month.

Much sympathy is extended to Mr. and Mrs. John Lloyd Thompson, in the death of their infant son.

THE COMPOSER VERDI

Wherever, whenever and however popular music is known, the composer who must be accorded universal laurels is Giuseppe Verdi, born near Parma, Italy. His true name was Francesco Fortunio. He received his musical education from the chapel master of the cathedral for whom he composed marches at an early age. His first opera was presented at the La Scala, Milan, in 1838 and a few years later on the pronounced success of "Ernani" made him one of the popular operatic composers of the day. The arias from "Il Trovatore" were sung and whistled upon the streets whenever opportunity offered and where rendered wherever and however one might desire music, whether in opera, symphony, oratorio, concert, or street hand organ. In every collection of songs touching the heart, a number of the arias from Verdi's operas will always appear. He died at Milan in 1901 at a mature age. The musical career of Verdi is one of the notable chapters in the history of music of all time.

Several of Verdi's most famous operatic airs appear in "Heart Songs." This unique volume contains a treasury of songs for a half century past, now offered by the Courier.

SAGE TEA DARKENS HAIR TO ANY SHADE

Don't Stay Gray! Here's an Old-Time Recipe That Anybody Can Apply.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grand-mother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and abundant. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded, or more was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Weych's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" you will get this famous old recipe which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and abundant. Agent T. George Howles.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Public Building, Brantford, Ont." will be received at this office until 4:00 P.M. on Wednesday, July 8, 1914, for the work mentioned.

Plans, specifications and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at the office of Mr. Thos. A. Hastings, Clerk of Works, Postal Station "B", Yonge Street, Toronto, Ont., at the Post Office, Brantford, Ont., and at this Department.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent. (10 per cent.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering declines to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fails to complete the work contracted for. If the tenderer has not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

ON THE FENCE

N. W. Rowell was recently challenged to defend his position in the matter of bilingualism. Here is the substance of his statement:

"In every school in the province it is the duty of the state to see that every child receives a good English education; and consistent with that, if the French-Canadian parents desire that their children should also in the schools study their own language, so that they might acquire a facility to use it efficiently and well, I can see no ground of objection on the part of any citizen of the province."

Does that look to be straightforward? It has been declared impracticable by Bishop Fallon and others with our public school facilities, that both languages can be taught.

Mr. Rowell, who spoke at Cornwall, was looking for French votes, and political advantage, and not for the good of Ontario. In this, as in other matters, he is not to be trusted.

YOUNG MEN AND NEW WOMEN

There are very many of you who on Monday, June 22nd will cast your first parliamentary vote in Ontario. Weigh all the issues at stake.

Consider the record of the two parties in the Province and ask yourselves whether the people can afford to dispense with the services of such efficient and honorable men as Sir James Whitney and his colleagues who have proved themselves.

The people some nine years ago rose in their might and turned out, neck and crop, the most dishonorable administration with which any British territory was ever cursed.

So rank was the condition of affairs that even the Toronto Globe (chief Liberal organ) said during the course of an editorial:

"The secret of it all (the terrible condition of affairs) is in the discredited election methods sometimes resorted to and the activity of POLITICAL PARASITES, who make party services a means for PRIVATE GAIN."

"There is but one thing open for the Liberals of Ontario, and that is the first and most pressing duty. The BARNACLES on the ship must be treated with an IRON HAND. 'HALF MEASURES WILL NOT AVAIL.'"

Nothing was done, for the very simple reason that the "political parasites" above spoken of had the Liberal Government by the throat.

And Mr. Rowell, he it remembered, was one of the leading supporters of and speakers for the Administration under which these things occurred.

Your duty is a plain one. It is by your first ballot to say, by voting for either Brewster or Westbrook, that the old order of things shall not be restored, and that you believe with regard to a Government, as well as with regard to an individual, that square and honest dealing is worthy of support.

GOOD PROSPECTS.

With only eight working days remaining before the election it is safe to affirm that the prospects of Conservative success in the two Brants are exceptionally bright.

This statement is not made in a haphazard way, but as the outcome of a careful computation with regard to results of the canvass in both ridings.

Last time Mr. Brewster carried every ward in the city, as follows: No. 1 40, No. 2 106, No. 3 120, No. 4 171, No. 5 154.

There is no indication of any falling-off in any section.

Fluctuations there are, of course, but these affect both sides.

In Brantford Township Mr. Brewster had a majority of 148 against him, and in Oakland Township 59. These two sections have always been Liberal in tone, but as the years progress somewhat less so.

In North Brant Westbrook carried Paris by 96. He will do better than that on this occasion. Good old Onondaga Township is as solid as ever, and looks as if the lead of 80 in 1911 will approach the 100 mark. Brantford Township came to the fore with 50 for Westbrook last time, and it will likewise do better this. The overflow from "Tory Brantford" is in a large measure responsible for that prediction. Burford Township gave Westbrook 58, and should do as well on the 29th. South Dumfries Township is the one section in which the Liberals are sure of anything. It gave them a lead of 108 in the last fight.

For reasons of personal service and ability, and the fact that they are carrying the standard of the best and cleanest Government Ontario has ever possessed, both Brewster and Westbrook can be regarded as sure winners. This is all the more the case because each have at the back of them a band of willing and thoroughly well-organized workers.

ENGLISH IN THE SCHOOLS Mr. Rowell, the Liberal leader in the present fight, is in a very equivocal position with reference to bilingual schools.

The Whitney Government has very properly taken the stand that English must be the language used in Ontario schools.

This is resented by some of the French-Canadians, who reside in the province, and who think that their own language is good enough.

Last year, English-French separate schools in Prescott and Russell refused to comply with the requirement in the respect named with the result that the education department withheld $3,200 of the usual grants.

Where is Mr. Rowell regarding this important matter?

The Toronto Globe, in his behalf, pleads that the subject is "not an issue" but that won't do.

Rowell is either for English in these schools or against it. He should say which.

Meanwhile his attitude has raised hopes in the breasts of French-Canadian residents of the province, and Le Temps of Ottawa, published in the interests of the race, says, during the course of an article:

"Mr. Rowell has done better than to create an excellent impression. He has gained the esteem and support of all the French-Canadians who are truly sincere and patriotic. Whilst a heavy struggle is waged against us, whilst the provincial Conservative party, and the ministers themselves, such as Mr. Foy, are officially declaring war against us, wishing to deprive us of all our privileges, wishing to gag and assimilate us by depriving our children of their right to learn their mother tongue, the chief of the Liberal party has recognized with pride in his program the necessity for bilingual schools, and it is with frankness and sincerity that he yesterday demonstrated to the French-Canadians that they have in him a friend and protector."

English must be the language of Ontario schools, no matter what Mr. Rowell may think to the contrary.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Adam Beck and fair play for the people of Ontario.

As the Lloyd George of Ontario, Rowell is proving a dismal failure.

The province will again support Sir James Whitney. Let both Brants be in line.

Four more years of honest government under Sir James Whitney. It is up to you.

Sir James is in the battle to win vigorous as ever, with the same old rugged honesty.

The English language for our schools, and Whitney is the man to see that we get it.

Local Option or Scott Act will abolish the bars, then why handicap the province by electing Rowell.

Brantford is interested in Hydro radicals, and Brantford should support Whitney and Beck, who are working out the scheme.

The Ham workers apparently are willing to make any old kind of a statement at all to get votes, temperance, anti-temperance or otherwise.

The old adage that religion and politics don't mix, is becoming more evident every day, and Ham canvassers are finding themselves up against it.

The statement of a member of Mr. Rowell's family that he is ready to drop his partisan temperance policy is easily understood in view of the lack of support he has received.

There are more Liberals deserting their party in Brantford right now than Conservatives. They have no use for the policy of hypocrisy and cant which they are expected to swallow.

According to history the entire aim of the Liberal party has been to separate church and state. It is hard to reconcile Liberals of the old school with present day performances of the Rowell opportunists.

It has taken nine lean years out of office to impress Mr. Rowell that a mandate for prohibition. Nine more lean years might make Rowell and his friends a little more sincere.

Mr. Rowell's announcement that the statement by a member of his family that the abolition of the bar policy would be abandoned after this election, was not authorized, but Mr. Rowell doesn't deny the situation. The admission anyway is one of defeat.

The Dragons registered as absenteees were appealed by the Grit machine before they ever returned to the city. The wish was shown here to keep these soldiers off the voters' list, although doubtless nearly every one of them were known to have the qualifications necessary to entitle them to vote.

The Expositors says Rowell was not a member of the Ross Cabinet which rejected the prohibition mandate of 1902, but Rowell was the chief orator on behalf of Rossism up to the very last minute before Ontario smashed Rossism. Was it a $50,000 legal fee which prevented Rowell from having the courage of his convictions in those days?

THE WHITNEY GOVERNMENT AND TEMPERANCE.

It is plainly revealed as the campaign advances that the Rowell candidates are pinning their sole reliance for support to the banishing-the-bar policy. They hope through this policy to stampede the electorate into forgetting the fact that without the aid of the Opposition a large portion of Ontario is even now barless as well as shopless, and they hope that in the excitement of the election they got to forget about the Whitney Administration has done for Ontario in moral reform and honest administration during the past ten years.

The scheme should not succeed, the hypocrisy of a great deal of the Rowell policy is quite apparent, even if temperance was the only important question involved in a change of Government. There are other important matters in which the welfare of the Province is involved: Hydro electric and radials, the Prison Farm, workmen's compensation, moral reform, good roads, the development of agriculture, careful financing—in all these the Whitney Government has borne a noble part and has the right to expect consideration.

Capable as has been the Government's record with regard to the general management of the Province's affairs, it can appeal with equal force on its temperance record. Year by year the Liberal Government has borne a noble part and has the right to expect consideration.

Capable as has been the Government's record with regard to the general management of the Province's affairs, it can appeal with equal force on its temperance record. Year by year the Liberal Government has borne a noble part and has the right to expect consideration.

What was done in 1913? Holders of tavern licenses were restricted to sales for consumption on the premises, so that no liquor bought in a tavern can lawfully be removed from the licensed premises.

The consumption of liquor was prohibited in any livery stable or other building in which the public are in the habit of resorting.

The hours of selling were reduced, so that liquor cannot be sold until eight o'clock in the morning, instead of six.

Both tavern keepers and purchasers were made guilty of an offence if liquor is removed from the premises. There was additional legislation during the past session, and so it will go on every year as the need for changes arise and the public asks for it.

The Administration has provided a true friend of temperance, has been found firm and inflexible in the enforcement of the law, and as a result the law is respected where before it was ridiculed. And always let it be remembered that the right to abolish the bar is fully maintained.

Rests with the people who have the right to say whether the bar shall remain or go. If they pass local option the bars and the shops automatically disappear. We are not afforded the silly pretence of advancing temperance by cutting off the bar on one corner of the street, while across the road the shop is running full blast delivering bottles of liquor to their thirsty customers.

THE RETURN OF TARZAN

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS CHAPTER XXIII. The Castaways. CLAYTON dreamed that he was drinking his fill of water, pure, delightful draught of fresh water. With a start he regained consciousness to find himself wet through by torrents of rain that were falling into the open boat upon his body and his upturned face. A heavy tropical shower was beating down upon them. He opened his mouth and drank. Presently he was so revived and strengthened that he was enabled to raise himself upon his hands. Across his legs lay the body of M. Thurian. A few feet aft Jane Porter was huddled in a pitiful little heap in the bottom of the boat—she was quite still. Clayton thought that she was dead.

After infinite labor he released himself from Thurian's pinioning body and with renewed strength crawled toward the jungle, by the snug little cabin of Tarzan of the Apes, while further up the coast, a few miles beyond the cabin, in a crude but well built shelter, lived a little party of eighteen souls—the occupants of the three boats from the Lady Alice from which Clayton's boat had become separated.

For some time there was no sign of returning animation, but at last his efforts were rewarded by a slight tremor of the half closed lids. He chafed the thin hands and forced a few more drops of water into the parched throat. The girl opened her eyes, looking up at him for a long time before she could recall her surroundings.

"Water?" she whispered. "Are we saved?"

"It is raining," he explained. "We may at least drink. Already it has revived us both."

"M. Thurian?" she asked. "He did not kill you. Is he dead?"

"I do not know," replied Clayton. He raised his eyes from the body of the man, and as they passed above the gunwale of the boat he staggered weakly to his feet with a little cry of joy.

"Land, Jane!" he almost shouted through his cracked lips. "Thank God, land!"

The girl looked, too, and there, not a hundred yards away, she saw a yellow beach, and beyond, the luxuriant foliage of a tropical jungle. They set about reviving Thurian, but it required the better part of half an hour before the Russian evinced sufficient symptoms of returning consciousness to open his eyes. By this time the boat was scraping gently upon the sandy bottom.

Between the refreshing water that he had drunk and the stimulus of renewed hope, Clayton found strength to stagger through the shallow water to the shore with a line made fast to the boat's bow. This he fastened to a small tree which grew at the top of a low bank.

Next he managed to stagger and crawl toward the nearby jungle, where he had seen evidences of profusion of tropical fruit. His former experience in the jungle with Tarzan of the Apes had taught him which of the many growing things were edible, and after nearly an hour of absence he returned to the beach with a little armful of food.

For a month they lived upon the beach in comparative safety. As their strength returned the two men constructed a rude shelter in the branches of a tree, high enough from the ground to insure safety from the larger beasts of prey. By day they gathered fruits and trapped small rodents; at night they lay covering within their frail shelter while savage denizens of the jungle made hideous the hours of darkness.

Paris, June 18.—The "anaesthetic pistol" devised by city chemists at the time of the siege of the notorious automobile bandits was used successfully last night in the capture of a mad woman. Mile. Maignan, an artist, in a fit of mania, shut herself in her apartment in the Avenue de Neuilly and threatened her neighbors from a window with a revolver.

The police, who were summoned, fired several shots at the woman, but without effect. The anaesthetic pistol was then brought into service and the woman was stupefied with gas and removed to an infirmary.

They slept upon litters of jungle grasses, and for covering at night Jane Porter had only an old ulster that belonged to Clayton, the same garment that he had worn upon that memorable trip to the Wisconsin woods. Clayton had erected a frail partition of boughs to divide their arborial shelter into two rooms, one for the girl and the other for M. Thurian and himself.

From the first the Russian had exhibited every trait of his true character—selfishness, boorishness, arrogance, cowardice. Twice had he and Clayton come to blows because of Thurian's attitude toward the girl. The existence of the Englishman and his fiancée was one continual nightmare of horror, and yet they lived on in hope of ultimate rescue.

Jane Porter's thoughts often reverted to her other experience on this savage shore. Ah, if the invincible forest god of that dead past were but with them now! She could not well refrain from comparing the scant protection afforded her by Clayton with what she might have expected had Tarzan of the Apes been for a single instant confronted by the sinister and menacing attitude of M. Thurian.

A scant five miles north of their rude shelter, all unknown to them and practically as remote as though separated by thousands of miles of impenetrable jungle, lay the snug little cabin of Tarzan of the Apes, while further up the coast, a few miles beyond the cabin, in a crude but well built shelter, lived a little party of eighteen souls—the occupants of the three boats from the Lady Alice from which Clayton's boat had become separated.

Over a smooth sea they had rowed to the mainland in less than three days. None of the horrors of shipwreck had been theirs, and, though depressed by sorrow and suffering from the shock of the catastrophe and the unaccustomed hardships of their new existence, there was none much the worse for the experience.

All were buoyed by the hope that the fourth boat had been picked up and that a thorough search of the coast would be quickly made. As all the firearms and ammunition on the yacht had been placed in Lord Tennington's boat, the party was well equipped for defense and for hunting the larger game for food.

Professor Archimedes Q. Porter was their only immediate anxiety. Fully assured in his own mind that his daughter had been picked up by a passing steamer, he gave over the last vestige of apprehension concerning her welfare and devoted his giant intellect solely to the consideration of those momentous and abstruse scientific problems which he considered the only proper food for thought in one of his erudition. His mind appeared blank to the influence of all extraneous matters.

"Never," said the exhausted Mr. Samuel T. Philander to Lord Tennington, "never has Professor Porter been more difficult—er—I might say impossible. Why, only this morning, after I had been forced to relinquish my surveillance for a brief half hour, he was entirely missing upon my return. And, bless me, sir, where do you imagine I discovered him? A half mile out in the ocean, sir, in one of the lifeboats rowing away for dear life. I do not know how he attained even that magnificent distance from shore, for he had but a single oar, with which he was blissfully rowing about in circles."

"When one of the sailors had taken me out to him in another boat the professor became quite indignant at my suggestion that we return at once to land. 'Why, Mr. Philander,' he said, 'I am surprised that you, sir, a man of letters yourself, should have the temerity so to interrupt the progress of science. I had about deduced from certain astronomical phenomena I have had under minute observation during the past several tropic nights an entirely new nebular hypothesis which will unquestionably startle the scientific world. I wish to consult a very excellent monograph on Laplace's hypothesis, which I understand is in a certain private collection in New York city. Your interference, Mr. Philander, will result in an irreparable delay, for I was just rowing over to obtain this pamphlet.' And it was with the greatest difficulty that I persuaded him to return to shore without resorting to force," concluded Mr. Philander.

"Land, Jane!" he almost shouted. "Thank God, land!"

The girl looked, too, and there, not a hundred yards away, she saw a yellow beach, and beyond, the luxuriant foliage of a tropical jungle. They set about reviving Thurian, but it required the better part of half an hour before the Russian evinced sufficient symptoms of returning consciousness to open his eyes. Lady Cyclist Injured. A young lady named Bridget Leavy, Curragh, Ardee, has been admitted to the Dundalk infirmary suffering from fracture of the skull as the result of a cycling accident.

Leavy was endeavoring to negotiate a dangerous turn on the incline of a very steep hill at Dundalk workhouse when she lost control of her machine which dashed against the kerb and she was thrown to the ground with considerable violence.

At a party meeting of Mrs. King's yesterday, some 50 ladies gathered and a very interesting discussion on the foreigners in the Dominion was held. Mrs. Chrysler gave a did address on the subject, describing the situation as one of the greatest problems of the nation.

Good Hay Crop. Farmers of the Township District have commenced haying and are ing a good crop and some of the day are hauling in their first tons. The average yield is two tons per acre and the prospects are that second and third cuttings will be twice of good crops per acre.

Fire Hall Brightened Up. The interior repairs to the fire hall are now well under way. They are certainly a vast improvement, Chief Lewis' sanctuary has been repapered and painted, and the carpet was tacked down to-day, smoking room and lavatory, both being freshly papered and the thing presents a clean and fresh appearance.

Roughs in an Auto. A young girl was walking a Brock street late last night when big auto coming up behind her throttled down and she was asked to ride home with the driver. She replied that she had never been introduced to the speaker and declined the offer of kindness and was met with the remark that if she felt badly about it could walk, and the car sped on. Girl reached home safely and her parents are indignant at the conduct of the autoist whom they regard as roughs carrying around in a motor for the sake of having young women away.

Commander William Balfour Macdonald, R.N., who was appointed to the command of the Canadian cruiser, Niobe, in 1910, was born in Victoria, B.C., forty-three years ago.

He entered the Royal Navy as a cadet on the nomination of Princess Louise in 1882 and rose to considerable distinction. His decoration a few years ago with the Order of the Crown of Prussia recalls an interesting incident. During a visit of the German Emperor to England, the Emperor's squadron was lost in a thick fog off the Isle of Wight. The present King, then Prince of Wales, set out in a destroyer to locate the Emperor, but failed in his quest. Lieutenant Macdonald also went in Admiral Rossmore's barge and had better luck. He boarded the Imperial yacht and advised its commander of his position. The Emperor came on deck and ordered the young Canadian officer. Taking him to the chart room, he related to a map. "Your ship is here," he said. "Your ship is right," replied Macdonald. "What do you think of that now?" asked the Emperor proudly. "I think Your Majesty is a good sailor," was the answer. It was on account of this little adventure that Commander Macdonald was decorated. Also born today:—

Nationalists Get Ammunition

[By Special Wire to The Courier]

DUBLIN, Ireland, June 18.—Large quantities of rifles and ammunition were landed during the night on the Connemara coast in the west of Ireland for the Nationalist volunteers. The consignments are supposed to have been brought by mysterious vessels which had been sighted cruising along the coast for a week past, but had refused to reply to any signals. Torpedo boats have been ordered to patrol the coast to prevent further gun-running. The rifles are said to be of the latest American pattern.

OLD-TIME LIBERAL, JOHN GALBRAITH, DESERTS ROWELL

Declares That Opposition Leader is Out of Touch With the Party.

TORONTO, June 18.—Mr. John Galbraith, 91 Cronyn avenue, Toronto, Liberal candidate of 1911, in tendering his resignation as a member of the Ontario Reform association, has addressed the following letter to Mr. W. F. Summerhayes, secretary and organizer of the Ontario Reform Association, Toronto:

"Dear Sir,—I place in your hands my resignation as member of the Ontario Reform association. My reason for doing so are as follows:

"I believe that the Liberal platform or policy of Ontario on the temperance and other questions should have been adopted or ratified by a Liberal convention of properly chosen delegates from all parts of Ontario, and not by a coterie of inner circle Liberals, who are not in touch with the various portions of the province.

Progressive Policies.

"Some 17 years ago I wrote a social reform pamphlet (now out of print) and now I find the Hon. W. J. Hanna and Hon. Adam Beck putting into practical operation what I advocated on Pages 109 and 137-138 in prison reform and extension of hydro-electricity for the use of the people and not to enrich a few at the expense of the masses. Now, to be true to the convictions of my former years, I am in hearty sympathy with Hon. W. J. Hanna and Hon. Adam Beck in these two great reforms, which are overshadowed in this election. While Mr. Rowell advocates tax reform, yet with the public, this is only an ambiguous platitude, for he does not explain explicitly what form it will take and many electors are in a quandary on this point.

"Does he propose to give to the municipality local option in municipal taxation, or does he propose taking a percentage of the unearned increment of each sale of real estate, as is done in the Province of Alberta, or what does his tax reform mean?"

"Again on the great important question of the teaching of the French language in Ontario public schools, often miscalled bilingualism, his stand is hazy and obtuse, for the average elector does not know whether he intends to increase or lessen the amount of English taught in the Ontario public schools. This important question must be settled in a constitutional way sooner or later by either political party in Ontario.

Discards Liberalism.

"In this election Mr. Rowell has discarded the true principles of Liberalism of the late Sir Oliver Mowat in dealing with the liquor traffic by local option, and adopted an expedient plank of abolition of the bar to catch the unthinking ministers and church members, who have not studied the legal constitutionality involved in this question, as Sir Oliver Mowat did in the past, which they ought to do so on important a question.

"Sir James Whitney is at present carrying out the improved Liberal policy of local option of Sir Oliver Mowat worked out from the basis of the Crooks Act, and that is why Sir James has the support and sympathy of many of Sir Oliver Mowat's followers in this and past elections on the temperance measures.

"What surprises me is the innocent credulity of Mr. Rowell in believing that resolutions of churches carry with them all the votes of the churches, knowing that the day is gone forever, and adopted an expedient plank of abolition of the bar to catch the unthinking ministers and church members, who have not studied the legal constitutionality involved in this question, as Sir Oliver Mowat did in the past, which they ought to do so on important a question.

"At this election the Liberals of Ontario are offering Rowellism sugar-coated with Methodism, instead of having a platform adopted by a convention of which several others and I do not agree with and I hereby tender my resignation as member of the Ontario Reform Association, and hope it will be accepted.

"Yours, etc., JOHN GALBRAITH."

THEY TURNED UP

Two Brantford Boys Who Gave Their Parents Considerable Worry.

Two boys, Clarence File and Hercules Reeves aged 12 and 15 respectively caused their parents considerable anxiety on Tuesday when they were found to be missing at night after they were supposed to have attended the King Edward School, Wednesday passed and still the boys did not show up and the police were informed. They had been roving round the country and had intended to go to Hamilton but found the road too arduous and their stock of cash which amounted to $1.00 too slender. It was not at any time thought that anything serious had happened to them and it was supposed that they had run away to a farm to work as they were tiring of school life. The boys were gladly welcomed back by their parents who had been worried greatly over their disappearance.

CALGARY CRAZY OVER OIL BOOM

Story Gets on Street About Well and Trading Starts Along the Curb.

[By Special Wire to The Courier] CALGARY, June 17.—Black oil was struck in the Monarch well yesterday at a depth of 80 feet. The oil is believed to be in quantity and the company's geologist ordered the drilling stopped until a special cap can be put over the mouth of the well. The head driller made the statement that a charge of nitro-glycerine would unleash the oil and start a gusher that would blow the derrick. The news got out on the street about ten o'clock last night and curb trading was active. The stock sold as high as $40 before midnight.

Part of the afternoon was to be spent on the water with a banquet at an Ottawa Beach hotel to follow the boat ride.

MAN'S LIFE IS SAVED BY POOR MARKSMANSHIP

A Narrow Escape Feud Over Rural School Breaks Out Into a Affray.

NORTH BAY, June 18.—River Valley, a settlement on the upper Sturgeon River, north of Sturgeon Falls, was nearly the scene of a tragedy, and to the poor marksmanship of Frank Miller, and to his own good dodging, Joseph Robitaille undoubtedly owes his life. As it is his head is marked by a bullet, which clipped a course along his skull. Miller and Robitaille had some trouble of long standing over rural school matters, and as Robitaille and a companion landed from a boat, after crossing the river, he faced a rifle in the hands of Miller, who was standing on the top of the bank. Miller motioned Robitaille's companion out of the way and began shooting at his intended victim, who scrambled up the bank and closed with his assailant, dodging two bullets, and only receiving minor injury from a third. Miller was arrested, given a preliminary trial before Magistrate Bradford at Sturgeon Falls, and while he admitted the shooting elected to be tried before a Judge and jury. He was committed to North Bay jail to await his trial.

CLOSING SESSION OF GRAND LODGE

Canadian Order of Oddfellows Will Meet at Toronto Next Year—Is Making Great Progress

The closing session of the Grand Lodge of Canadian Order of Oddfellows, was held yesterday afternoon in the Assembly Hall at the Conservatory of Music, Nelson street. As the officers had all been re-elected there was no installation ceremony and the chief business transacted was the adoption of the financial report which showed total estimated receipts amounting to $15,000. The Grand Lodge decided to meet next year at Toronto. A vote of thanks was passed Mayor Spence and the City Council in their providing the Assembly Hall to meet in and in the general consideration shown toward the delegates. A vote of thanks to the local press was also passed for the publication of the Grand Lodge reports. The lodge was brought to a close at 5 o'clock in due form and the delegates took their departure from the city on the evening trains.

FOR TERRACE HILL

Pumping Stations With Booster Pumps Will be Established Right Away.

The City Water Commissioners met this morning in Mayor Spence's office. A short session was held but very important business was transacted by the commissioners with regard to increasing the pressure in the mains on Terrace Hill. It was decided to erect a pumping station at the foot of Terrace Hill in which booster pumps will be installed to increase the pressure on the hill both for fire and domestic purposes. This sub-pumping station will be operated from the central pumping system and will effectively deal with the low pressure sometimes experienced by residents on the hill. Work will be started immediately on installation of the pumps.

Rousing Rally At Cainsville For Westbrook

A large number of the residents of Cainsville turned out at the Orange Hall to hear an address by Mr. J. W. Westbrook, M.P., and other Conservative speakers last night. It was a great rally and was a demonstration of the popularity of the Conservative party.

A. L. Baird was the first speaker, and he outlined the temperance movement since confederation to the present day, and showed that the conservative party had fulfilled all promises to the people, and in his opinion it would be dangerous to trust this great question of temperance to a party which had broken promises in the past, and were coming before the people once again with the temperance issue, which was simply a party game by which they hoped to get into power.

Mr. Westbrook upheld the policy of the Whitney Government and dealt with the question before the people. The attitude of Mr. Rowell on the temperance question in the past and the party game he was trying to make out of this campaign were strongly criticized by the speaker. He also treated the Workmen's Compensation Act and the Hydro-Electric policy and spoke of the past regime of the Conservatives, and he received the hearty applause of the meeting, which was a splendid success and did much to help forward the Tory cause in Cainsville.

City News Items

Mr. B. J. Wade is on the sick list; friends will be sorry to hear.

Softball. The Clerks softball team will play the Ham & Nott team to-night at Recreation Park. Woolmans and Ritchie will form the Clerks' battery, and Simmons and Sears for the H. & N. team.

Objects to Assessment. J. P. Vermer, manager of the Grand Valley Railway Company, has written Ald. Hollinrake, chairman of the finance committee of the City Council, objecting to his being assessed for $1,200 income, and states that as he is now a householder he should be only taxed on $300.

Fell Into the Lake. An amusing little incident occurred down at the bathhouse in Mohawk lake last night. Many of the campers were waiting for their turn on the launch for their turn on the lake. A canoe was got for them, and Tom Haysgarth, the bathhouse keeper, was holding it by the prow while the girls got into it, and suddenly through one of the fair ones entering the boat heavily, the prow went down and took with it Tom, who went head first into the water and was fished out none the worse for his ducking. He will give up holding canoes for girls in the future.

Baptists Lost Game. The First Baptist baseball team were defeated after a great game by the Massey-Harris office staff last night at the Recreation Park, the score being 3 to 1. It was a lively encounter, full of dash and fun, which was started when the ball crashed into Fred Battersby's new straw and demolished it. M. H. Dodwell pitched great ball for the M.-H. team, and he tied the Baptists down to four hits. Elmer Peirce, for the churchmen, gave a great exhibition of twirling, but the Machinists were in good hitting form, and Hendershott got three-bagger. Dodwell fanned seven men and O'Connor four. Quite a feature of the game was the brilliant centre field work of S. Vansickle. The battery were O'Connor and Peirce for the M.-H. office staff.

Boy's Shooting Accident. A gun accident which occurred at a gun on Monday night had a fatal termination. The victim, a six-year old boy, son of a Goole laborer, was asleep in a house-boat, and above him was a loaded gun. The father thought it would be safer to unload the gun, but on reaching for it the trigger became caught in something and the weapon was discharged, the shot entering the boy's back. He was treated at the Goole St. Bartholomew's Hospital, but succumbed on Tuesday.

STEERING GEAR WAS WRONG

explained that he had not got his laundry and had stopped over. He had then authorized his chief clerk to give Gołway a letter to Capt. Murray of the C. P. R. Stear Montreal, asking him to give him a position as superintending quartermaster on his eastbound trip. Gołway then complained about the steering gear of the Empress and said it had jammed for five minutes after leaving Father Point westbound. The captain had pointed out that that would be sufficient to send the ship ashore. He told the man, however, if he had evidence to give to go to the C. P. R. lawyers and in the meantime he would be kept by the Company.

Captain Walsh said that Gołway, after the collision occurred, so he had heard, rushed to his room to get his life belt and not to the boats, as it was his duty to do. He was the one man who had failed.

Mr. Haight said he was informed that Gołway went to his room to awaken his companions.

Mr. Haight then said he wanted to get a man named Fournier who had shipped as a trimmer at Quebec, under the name of Harry White. They had been trying hard to get him and had heard that he had left the Blanchard Hotel, Quebec, with a C. P. R. official. Fournier was on the deck when the boats collided and had said that the Empress was travelling fast.

Lord Mersey—"How long have you known this?"

Mr. Haight—"About a week."

Lord Mersey—"Why didn't you ask the Captain about this. Do you think it was your duty to hold this information up your sleeve?"

Mr. Haight—"I conceived it my duty to ask the captain only about the speed of his vessel and not about a man who was not on the bridge, but ait."

Lord Mersey was obviously aggravated and concluded by saying that of course he had no right to ask Mr. Haight questions about the matters, but it appeared that their two ideas of their duty to the court differed.

The adjournment for lunch was taken at this point.

League May Disband

It is rumored to-day in local sporting circles that the Wobbly Baseball League is on the verge of a break-up. Their gate receipts have amounted to practically nothing, and at yesterday's game at Berlin there was only a spoonful of fans present. Duff Slemin played a star game for Berlin yesterday, securing two hits out of three times at the bat.

Brantford Out of The Hard Hitting Acc Gero Pile

TORONTO, June 18.—Gero made a twofold record by winning the last game from the Braves and sending them out of town. He must now stand in for the cellar position.

After the first inning he went to pieces, and three in second, combined with five of the Red Sox six runs.

The boys were out of their skins, and Gero had a hard time to get into a hole in the first. In the fourth, Gero, who had been in a hole since the first, and went to ground on the ball, advanced to third single and was on his way to centre, but tried to cut but was caught at the plate, who went to ground on the get out, scored when Liza to left.

Brantford got six in the Galm was a wilder thrower of the sixth. The Red Sox two corners in the fourth, Ivers and Dolan. One of was made by Denney, who ed first on a fielder's choice, home with Graham's hitting. Another run was made in hits by Ivers and Gero, possible. The Braves's batting rally in the sixth and two. Myer who was part-hitter struck out. The last made in the ninth when Ives

PUBLIC NOTICE

TAKE NOTICE that the Council of the Corporation of the City of Brantford intends to widen Chestnut Avenue by adding to the westerly side thereof a strip of land six feet in width extending from Spring Street to Kerr Avenue and being the easterly six feet of Lots Numbers 7 and 8, Springvale, according to the registered plan of the City of Brantford, as a local improvement and intends to specially assess the whole of the tract upon the land abutting directly upon the said work and upon the following land which is immediately benefited by the work, namely: The lands fronting on the easterly side of that portion of Chestnut Avenue to be widened as aforesaid.

The estimated cost of the work is $180.00, the estimated special rate per foot frontage is ten cents per annum; the special assessment is to be paid in fifteen annual instalments.

Persons desiring to petition against undertaking the work must do so on or before the 18th day of July, 1914.

Dated at Brantford this 18th day of June, 1914.

H. F. LEONARD, City Clerk.

Brantford Won Two Out of Three From The Toronto Beavers

Hard Hitting Accomplished the Result While Gero Pitched a Good Game for the Red Sox.

TORONTO, June 18.—Brantford made it two out of three yesterday by winning the last game of the series from the Beavers by a score of 10 to 4. The win by the Red Sox puts them one place above the locals, who must now fight it out with Peterboro for the cellar position.

After the first innings the Beavers went to pieces, and three nuffs in the second, combined with five hits worked the Red Sox six runs. The work of Schultz at first was particularly bad, his nuffs of two or three low throws being greatly responsible for the number of runs scored. Burrill in left field was away off his game and dopped a couple of easy flies. These misplays shattered the whole team and they never recovered.

The locals opened up strongly enough. Although Galm got himself into a hole in the first, he managed to wriggle through without any tallies being scored, while the Beavers in their turn secured two. Trout hit, and went to second on Burrill's sacrifice, advanced to third on Ort's single and home on Killlea's sacrifice. Ort tried to make home, but was caught at the plate. Killlea, who went to second on the play to get Ort, scored when Isaacs singled to left.

Brantford got six in the second and Galm was yanked in favor of Graham, who was in turn relieved at the end of the sixth. The Red Sox secured two counters in the fourth on hits by Ivers and Dolan. One of the runs was made by Deneau, who had reached first on a fielder's choice. He stole home with Graham holding the ball. Another run was made in the fifth, hits by Lacroix and Gero being responsible. The Beavers started a batting rally in the sixth and scored two. Myer who was put in as a pinch hitter struck out. The last score was made in the ninth, when Ivers hit the ball into the right field bleachers for the circuit. The score:

What You Don't Read On The Score Boards

Ottawa dropped three out of four to St. Thomas. The Red Sox slook pretty good against second class pitchers.

Brantford gained a full game on Ottawa, Erie and Hamilton, yesterday. In fact we are tied with the Ambitious City.

Wilkinson for St. Thomas has developed the winning habit again. Last fall he won seven straight for the Saints.

Deneau is determined that he won't play the outfield himself. He wired President Nelson yesterday "Will get an outfield which can hit."

Dick Eacrett who accompanied the Brantford team to Ottawa is authority for the statement that London is the best looking team in the league. Their position in the race justifies the opinion.

"Just because we have won two games at Toronto is no reason why we should think we have a winner," said President Nelson last night. Apparently the Big Boss is determined to strengthen.

stuff. The staff however is not what it should be and it is pretty certain that when the champs return next week they will have a new boxman or two with them.

Frank Fox is playing short for Peterboro and the lowly ones are doing better on defensive. Outside of being a bone he is a pretty fast fielder.

Canadian League Notes

(Ottawa Free Press.) Louie Cook, who managed the Ottawa team in 1912 and last year had charge of Guelph, has resigned the management of the Asheville club in the Carolina Association on account of discussion among his players and the fact his team has been losing consistently. Cook's easy going method of dealing with his players is mostly responsible for his poor showing.

Ottawa fans will be glad to hear Umpire Jocko Halligan is back in the Canadian League. Last year he was one of the best arbitrators, on the team.

It's about time some of these clubs showing at home checked up London Ottawa has played five games with the Cocksneys this season and won four. All the other teams are falling down bad. Erie particularly, when backed up with the Cocksneys on home dirt.

Thoughtlessness is sure having his troubles worrying over pitchers. Duke has so far failed to win a start although he looks a good mound-sitter. Hill cannot pitch a game without walking eight or ten and beating a couple more. Shockcor is a good winner. Kubat is going pretty good and Peterson shows fairly good

OTTAWA AGAIN DEFEATED BY SAINT THOMAS

London Won From Erie and Hamilton Took a Further Slide.

St THOMAS, June 18.—The Saints continue to win, beating Ottawa yesterday 5 to 2. Both teams played good ball, but the Saints outshined the Senators, and won easily. Lill did the heaving for Ottawa and was wild, and hit hard. Wilkinson, for St. Thomas, pitched great ball after the fourth inning. Craven, Hadley and Kustus all featured with their heavy slugging. Gillespie showed up well at third again.

PETES MADE IT THREE STRAIGHT.

The Tail-enders Took Hamilton Into Camp by 4 to 1.

HAMILTON, June 18.—The tail-enders made it three straight from Hamilton by taking the last game of the series here yesterday. It was clean baseball, with plenty of clean hitting on the part of the visitors and good pitching on the part of their twirler, Schettler. He allowed the locals but three hits, Jack White getting two of them and Harry Corns the other. He had the locals at his mercy at all times and was seldom in danger. Yates was on the mound for Hamilton but although given good support was touched up for ten bingles.

LONDON BEAT ERIE

ERIE, June 18.—London made it three out four from Erie yesterday crossing the winning tally in the ninth inning. The visitors fought a tough uphill battle after Erie scored six runs in the fourth. But they were equal to the occasion, hitting Brown and Dorbeck in the benches, and finally nosing out ahead. The hitting of Behan and the fielding of Walste featured.

BALTIMORE NOT PULLING OUT

Although International Club Has Been Fighting a Losing Battle Against Federals

President Ed. Barrow last night wired to the effect that there is no truth in the rumor that the Baltimore Federal League team will be transferred to Richmond, Va., to escape the Federal leaguers in the Oyster Town. He also denied that Manager Dunn of the Orioles would sell any of his players to make up for losses incurred by small attendance.

At the same time reports that the Orioles are in a shaky condition continue to emanate from Baltimore. Dunn has fought a plucky but losing fight and has earned any assistance the league can give him. He made the statement last night that he is ready to sell if his club is not wanted in Baltimore. Evidently it is not.

President Gilmore of the Federal league boasted yesterday that he could wreck the American and National leagues from a playing standpoint within thirty days if he took over all of the organized players who have applied for Federal League positions. Assurance by a lawyer that by giving a club ten days notice of a desiring to leave it a player could abrogate his contract, has led more than forty major leaguers to apply for Federal league jobs, where the pay is big and money guaranteed.

Never eat a hearty meal when you are tired and hungry. A cup of hot milk with flavoring of sugar and nutmeg, or even a pinch of salt, taken with a cracker, will have a satisfying and restful effect.

WAGNER AND HONECK ARE RELEASED--NELSON IN THE GAME TO-DAY

Immediately on arrival last night from Toronto, Manager Deneau handed releases to Clarence Wagner and Honeck and the infield of the Red Sox to-day will present a changed appearance. Johnny Nelson will play third, Forgue shortstop, Roth second and Ivers first. Manager Deneau himself will play centre field. Just what other changes will be made in the team is hard to say at present but it is believed that Deneau is getting ready to go into the box himself as a pitcher and take his regular turn. The Rubie announced last night that he intended to carry only three pitchers. The work of Dolan, who is a high-priced outfielder has not been considered satisfactory. He has fielded well but his hitting has been weak. Wagner's hitting became so bad on the road that Deneau had to bench him at Toronto. In fact, some of the players were accusing Wagner of quitting. He has fallen off 100 per cent. from last year's form. Rubie is angling for a new pitcher but he has no lines out for outfielders. The management of the club, however, is insistent that hitters be secured. The Brantford manager last night said the team should have had four out of five of the games on the road. Errors were responsible for all the defeats except that of Sunday at Hall when Gero was hit hard. Word has been received from Mickey Barney that he will be unable to report for a few days owing to illness.

Football Coose Wins Another Game

BERLIN, June 18.—Woodstock defeated the local W.O.B.L. team here yesterday by the score of 7 to 2. Coose pitched for the visitors and held Berlin down to five hits. "Wild Bill" Baker was in the box for the locals, and although he lacked control in the early stages of the game he steadied down and pitched clever ball until the ninth when the Berlin holding department fell to pieces. While stealing second after making a two base hit, Ernie Dinsmore, captain of the local team, accidentally broke his leg near the ankle, and will be out of the game for the balance of the season. In the ninth, Schaeffer, Berlin's third baseman was struck on the back of the head with a pitched ball and was rendered unconscious.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

Mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. S. O. E. Won Protest, P. S. A. Lost Theirs

Football Executive Held Meeting Last Night When Contentious Matters Were Settled.

The principal business of the executive of the Brantford-Paris league at their meeting last night, was the dealing with two protests, that of P. S. A. against the result of their match with Scots, and the S. O. E. against the result of their game with the Duffs. The former protest was not upheld, while the latter was.

Protests P.S.A. The P. S. A. complained that a goal allowed to the Scots was off-side while a goal they claimed was not awarded them. The referee's evidence was against the P. S. A., and he said he was in a good position to judge both causes of complaint. A scrimmage which the P. S. A. claimed occurred in the net, he decided was two paces outside and he did not allow a goal. The protest committee, advised by the referee's evidence, and the protest was dismissed.

S. O. E. The Sons of England had much reason to cause to resent the ruling of their game with the Duffs, and although the referee was not present, the evidence was heard, and it showed that the referee's watch had stopped during the game and he had consulted linesmen with regard to the watch right. S. O. E. witnesses proved that the second half had lasted 68 minutes, which was alleged to be much in excess of the time necessary in spite of casualties, and during the extra the winning goal for the Duffs was scored. A previous goal of the Rifles was disputed and the committee decided that there was good reason for the protest, which they upheld and ordered the game to be replayed.

Censured J. Anderson and J. Richardson of Cockshtuts were censured for leaving the field in an unwarrantable manner on Saturday last, and a warning is issued that players similarly offending in the future will be severely dealt with.

The only transfer effected was that of D. Richardson of the Tigers to the Wanderers.

W. Wilnot, asked to be considered as a referee, and he will be asked to attend next Wednesday's meeting.

Referees. The referees for Saturday games in the Conter Cup are as follows: Tutela vs. Cockshtuts, A. Clarke. Scots vs. P. S. A., C. Smith. Wanderers vs. Tigers, Darlington. S. O. E. vs. Paris, A. Mears. The meeting then adjourned.

Tigers Purchase a New Ground The Holmedale Tigers will hold a practice on their new ground at West Mill street at 7 o'clock to-night, when all players are asked to turn out.

BOTH CAPTAINS WERE ON STAND AT THE ENQUIRY

Examination of Storstad Captain—Captain Kendall Cross-Examined.

COURT HOUSE, QUEBEC, June 18.—The examination of Captain Andersen of the Storstad was continued as follows, yesterday afternoon: "Could you have done anything more to keep the bow in the wind?" "I could not. When the Empress disappeared in the fog he blew continuously, but got no answer. He thought at the time that the Empress was leaving him, he did not know she was hurt. "What do you think was the heading of the Empress when the ships hit?" "North or northeast, something like that. "Is it in your judgment that at the time of the collision, she was heading N 72 east?" "Impossible. "What did you do after the collision?" "I sent the mate to sound the hold. "You suggest the Empress changed her course?" "She might. "Why?" "I might think that when the fog set in she was trying to get farther off shore. He sounded the hold and ordered the life boats out at once, while he blew the whistle. He turned his ship inshore when he heard cries from the passengers from the port bow. He hauled the ship off from shore towards the Empress. He got about 1.8 ship lengths from her and turned round and backed up until some one said "Don't go any closer." We were so near that the Empress passengers could swim from the Empress to the Storstad. I saw them do it myself. "Did you see the outline of the Empress before she sank?" "I did. Her bow was heading out from land. One boat made three trips; another two. The boats kept going until nothing but dead bodies remained. "When the Empress crew said the boat was too heavy for them, he sent out the collapsible manred entirely with Storstad men. They did everything they could for the people. He gave them his clothes and his wife's. The survivors were in their night dresses. "If my ship had been going full speed with the weight that was behind her she would have gone clear through the Empress," said Captain Andersen to question about the impact. "Captain Anderson thought with Mr Aspinall, that the first officer might have called him earlier, though he did not think it would have made any difference. He was positive that he saw the Empress's bow on the water's surface until he saw the Empress. Lord Mersey remarked that if they had been reversed before the calamity would not have happened. "Witness also agreed with Mr Aspinall that if the Storstad had ported her helm after going into the fog that would have brought her into a position to strike the stationary Empress, but contends that this was not done. "To Mr. Newcombe, acting for the Dominion Marine Department, Capt. Andersen said 28 Empress survivors were brought aboard the Storstad. Answering questions about the Storstad's condition, the captain said that when she left Sydney she was a few inches above the veritas or plimsoll mark, but this was due to the extra water for her boilers. The ship steered easily when under way. The adjournment for lunch was taken at this point.

Kendall Cross-Examined. The cross examination of Captain Kendall by C. S. Haight of New York, counsel in chief for the owners of the Storstad, the statement to the court by the captain that the Storstad changed her course after the fog in which the Empress of Ireland was rammed, enveloped the two ships and the counter hypothesis of Mr. Haight that the collier kept straight on, but that the Empress herself stopped herself across her bows were the salient contributions to the enquiry into the disaster when it was continued yesterday afternoon in the court house here. Captain Kendall in answer to the questions of Mr. Haight said he dropped his pilot at Father Point a little over a mile from the deck there. When he started again he steered north by 47 east magnetic. After he sighted the Storstad he changed his course to north by 72 east magnetic. When the fog came between them he stopped. The change would tend to take him nearer to the Storstad. He heard the whistles of the Storstad and thought he could rely upon his opinion that they came from the starboard because there was no wind. Mr. Haight asked how it came about that when he saw the great light of the Storstad and the Empress was showing her a green light he stopped. Captain Kendall said that when he saw the fog coming he thought it duty to stop as a safe-guard. Had the weather remained clear he thought the Empress could have safely crossed the bows of Storstad. The collier radically changed her course. Captain Kendall was then asked by Lord Mersey to give his theory as to how the Storstad came to change her course and said: "Her helm was ported because the Cocks Point buoy was mistaken for a buoy marking a shoal. Mr. Haight said no such change was made in the Storstad's course, according to witnesses. His hypothesis was that the Empress' wheel was ordered ported by one man on the bridge and subsequently ordered starboarded in the belief that the big fast steamer could cross the Storstad's bows. Mr. Haight then took Captain Kendall through his evidence in the morning about the distance that the Empress could be pulled up in, his questions seeming to show his theory was stationary when hit could not be pulled up in two ship lengths, as the captain had testified, but the witness stood unwaveringly by the results of a test he said he had made off the Welsh coast on his first trip in the Empress. The captain also denied that the Empress steered hard and said he never heard that her rudder had been changed because of this. In answer to questions by Lord Mersey, Captain Kendall said that at least three of the water tight compartments must have been exposed to by the collision and expressed the opinion that the Empress was rammed in the boiler room because following the impact a tremendous sheet of flame came from there. Reverting to the controversy which took place between Captain Kendall and Captain Andersen when the former reached the Storstad, Mr. Haight asked the Empress' master whether he did not say in answer to the charge that he was going full speed: "I wish to God I had been going faster."

Synod Discusses Votes For Women at Session

Poor Argument Against Privilege is Deplored by Mr. John Ransford, Clinton, Who Introduced Motion.

LONDON, June 18.—All day yesterday the gallery at Crornyn Hall was filled with women. They had heard that the question of votes for women was to be taken up by the synod and they were going to be on hand for the expected flow of eloquence. All through the morning and nearly all through the afternoon they waited, and then the most of them, disappointed, went away. Only for a passing moment during the afternoon were their flagging hopes revived. That was when J. D. Noble of Petrolia, arose to move the suspension of the order of business that the question of the enfranchisement of the ladies might be taken up. But their hopes were rudely shattered when in resonant tones Bishop Williams announced "It shall not be done."

Then it starts. Finally at a quarter to 6, just before adjournment, Mr. John Ransford of Clinton was called upon to present his motion. Mr. Ransford, who acknowledged that he had been caught napping when the matter was brought up on Tuesday night, deplored the utter lack last year of any argument whatsoever against the ladies being enfranchised, and hoped that this year the debate would bring out at least something worth while from the other side. The whole question, Mr. Ransford declared, was whether, owing to the accident of sex, an individual was to be debarred from the privilege of the vote. The speaker noted that their ex-dicta debar women from forming 7-10ths of the congregation and of the Sunday school teachers, etc. The debate will be continued this morning. At the commencement of yesterday afternoon's session the first order of business was the consideration of the report of the committee on the civil census, which consisted of an imposing array of figures, proving, beyond argument, that the Anglican church had been making great strides forward during the past decade. According to the report, the Anglican church is the only denomination to show an increase in ratio to the population during that time. In Ontario at the present time there are, according to the figures of the committee, 489,704 Anglicans, an increase of 121,513 over the estimate of 10 years ago. In the Diocese of Huron the number of Anglicans is 109,496, or 12,063 more than there were in 1901, this despite the fact that in that time the population of the diocese has decreased 977.

Some discussion was raised owing to the discrepancy noted between the civil and synod census returns for the diocese, the synod returns showing a total of only 69,487, as against 109,496 for the civil census. At the suggestion of Bishop Williams a motion was passed directing the various rural deans to inquire as to the cause of the discrepancy and report their findings to the chairman of the civil census committee, Rev. R. S. W. Howard, of Chatham. Huron College Fund. The report of the committee on the Huron College jubilee fund, presented by Ven. Archdeacon Richardson, showed a cash balance of $16,434.94, with $7,319 promised. It is hoped to have $20,000 on hand by August. The report of the committee on religious instruction was next heard. In the absence of the chairman, Canon Davis, of Sarnia, Rev. S. F. Robinson presented the statement, which told of the proposed scheme of Dr. Seath, superintendent of education, to introduce religious instruction in the public schools. Briefly, the plan of Dr. Seath is to offer a bonus to those schools who pass examination in certain Scriptural readings. The plan, if approved of by the various denominations, will be tried out at the entrance exams, next summer. The synod gave its approval of the proposal, Bishop Williams feeling that although the measure was unsatisfac-

FREE OF ALL THREE DISEASES

"Fruit-a-lives" Brought Him Perfect Health

AVON, ONT., May 14, 1913. "I am younger since I have been taking 'Fruit-a-lives'. I was troubled very badly with Piles, Constipation and Stomach Disorder, but I found 'Fruit-a-lives' was the panacea for the whole three. Now I am free of all these diseases and enjoying perfect health, and able to work whenever I like. Five years ago, I started taking 'Fruit-a-lives'. I took two every night and they worked wonders for me. No other medicine I could get was so good and I took lots of different remedies before I found out how good 'Fruit-a-lives' were. I keep 'Fruit-a-lives' on hand all the time, and am never without them. I even take them with me when I go motoring, so I can have them handy. 'Fruit-a-lives' are worth every good word I can say about them. The fact that they cured me of Piles, was something to be everlastingly thankful for!" GEORGE LATHR. Young People's Work. The committee on Anglican Young People's associations reported that this branch of the work was in a very flourishing condition. Mr. R. M. McElheran, of London, raised a slight flurry when he charged that in the case of one A. Y. P. A. he knew of card playing and dancing having been indulged in. Mr. McElheran said with no support in his charges, several delegates voicing their opinions that the society was doing excellent work. They also stated that they had never heard of any card playing or dancing in connection with the A. Y. P. A. in the diocese and they were sure none existed. After listening to the report of the committee on interdiocesan reciprocity funds, the synod decided to memorialize the general synod approving of the principle of the movement, without committing the local synod to any definite scheme of action. The report of the committee on Sunday schools showed an increase in membership during the year of 1,338 and an increase in the number of schools of 8, making 245 now in operation in the diocese. The Orphan Farm. "I have been informed by a prominent local physician that if I go ahead with this orphanage scheme of mine I will anticipate 200 infant murders in London in a year," was the startling declaration of Rev. T. B. Clark, at yesterday morning's session. The statement was made during the course of a discussion as to whether the synod should give the scheme its support without having further information as to its working out. A number of speakers thought that conditions in London could not be so bad as Mr. Clark painted them. W. F. Cocksbutt, M. P., for Brantford, doubted it, and thought that he could support his doubt with facts, if necessary. The upshot of the matter was that the synod decided to make no recommendation at the present time. A clause in the report of the committee on the bishop's charge to the effect that recommending the holding up of the synod's grant towards incumbent's stipends, in case of failure to forward returns to the synod, was the cause of some hot argument. Rev. C. R. Gunne was particularly annoyed at the legislation proposed and remarked, "No committee has the right to bring in a clause in its report intended to befool this synod. The

GIANT LINER IN COLLISION IN THE ENGLISH CHANNEL

Kaiser Wilhelm II Is Struck at Right Angles by the Incemore.

SOUTHAMPTON, Eng., June 18.—The North German Lloyd steamer Kaiser Wilhelm II, which left Southampton shortly after noon yesterday, bound for New York, with 1,000 passengers, lies at anchor off Netley, three miles to the southeast, with a big hole in her side amiships, caused by a collision with the Liverpool grain steamer Incemore, bound from a Black Sea port for Antwerp. The Incemore, a much smaller craft of 3,000 odd tons, is in dock here with her bows badly damaged. The collision occurred in the English Channel, 13 miles south of the Nob lightship, in a dense fog. Just how it occurred, and on which vessel lies the responsibility, cannot be ascertained at the present time. Officers Slient. The officers of the Kaiser Wilhelm II, have permitted no communication to be held with anyone on board, and they themselves have refused to give out any information whatever. Such scant details as have been obtained came from the Incemore. That vessel, it is stated by those on board, had virtually come to a stop because of the danger of continuing under way in such a thick fog, when suddenly there loomed up just ahead of her the huge bulk of the Kaiser Wilhelm. Both captains did their best to avert a collision, but the short distance separating the two vessels rendered their efforts ineffectual, and the Incemore struck the liner on the starboard side amidships. The force of the impact crumpled up her own bows and tore a big hole in the Kaiser Wilhelm's side. Both Stood By. The two steamers stood by each other until it was ascertained that neither needed immediate assistance; then both started slowly for Southampton. A statement given out by the London office of the North German Lloyd Company last night said that the Kaiser was rammed at right angles, but the watertight doors in the bulkheads kept back the water, which leaked into one compartment. Directly the fog came on Captain Dall had closed his water-tight doors to be ready for any contingency. The Kaiser Wilhelm II, has a hole below the waterline nearly amidships, but the extent of the damage has not yet been ascertained. The Kaiser, which will return to Bremerhaven, carried 152 first cabin passengers, 188 in the second cabin and 700 in third, with a crew of 640.

Peter's Adventures in Matrimony

By Leona Dalrymple

The truth about "the girl in the case" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with interest.

No. 92. A Bane of Bundles.

OF course, I appreciate the spirit in which Mary's people and mine shower us with gifts, but I must say I don't enjoy carrying bundles home every night. I have been thinking of this for some time. Sometimes it's a loaf of bread, freshly baked, and, rather than hurt mother's feelings by rejecting it, I trot dutifully homeward with the loaf under my arm. Once Mary's mother gave me a basket of peaches, and once a watermelon, none of which conduce to the dignity of locomotion.

A few days ago a friend of Mr. Penfield's gave him a crate of Florida oranges, and, with his usual kindness, he telephoned me as soon as he got them.

When the Bag Burst.

"Stop at the house, Peter," he said, "and I'll give you some to take home. You'll like them, they're sweet and awfully good eating."

Generosity made his vague "some" into a great many more than Mary and I needed, and certainly more than I wished to carry. Now, on this particular night, I had been thinking of the bag of oranges and they began to roll wildly about in all directions.

Starting inward, I watched them shoot down the aisle and up the aisle and into cross seats. Everybody laughed at my predicament. Who would? I ventured a sickly smile, though I shall never forget my humiliation when people began to return the oranges.

"By Jove," roared a friendly fellow in the corner, "here's another, Peter. Hold your hands."

I fixed him with a malevolent glare. Quite in vain. He threw the orange to me, went on a hunt and found three more.

Still "the Camel."

Here's three, he bawled to my increasing discomfort. Wait a minute, Peter. If you haven't any more room in your pockets I'll put them in your hat. Oranges look so appetizing from all sections of the car. They were passed on with a running fire of humorous remarks to me. Indeed, it was the funny centre of all eyes. How many oranges there were in that infernal bag I shall never know, but by the time I was ready to leave the car my pockets were full and another fellow who got off at my corner had lent me the use of his pockets.

"Well, Peter," he said good-naturedly, after he had laid his fruit cargo one by one on my porch, "that was a mess for fair, wasn't it? You didn't look as if you were enjoying it. You had so many other bundles, though, you'd busy carrying things back and forth, didn't you? No wonder the fellows call you 'The Camel.'"

"The Camel!" I strode into the house in a towering rage.

"Mary! I burst forth indignantly, unloading oranges rapidly from all my pockets, whence they proceeded to roll about the floor. Do you realize that I am laughing stock to the universe? Do you realize that people call me 'The Camel' because I'm always the heaviest burden from your house and mine out here here? Do you realize how I felt in the car tonight, when your father up to this instant and tell him I carry no more bundles home. I'll call up mother and she'll tell you the same story."

I rebelled, but I still carry bundles. And they still call me "The Camel!"

MERMAIDS

Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Printing Service, Inc. Great Britain Public Relations.

It doesn't do to be too sure that there are no such creatures as mermaids. You may have a private opinion of certain men who claim to have seen them—generally near the equator, where the water is ladylike—but reserve your judgment. Something startling may happen to YOU. In fact, there are circumstances under which it is extremely difficult to say, offhand, whether certain creatures are mermaids or not.

Day-a-Week Vacations

By LUCREZIA BORI
Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York.

Special arrangements have been made with Senorita Lucrezia Bori, the famous prima donna soprano, who has created a wonderful impression in Europe and New York on account of her remarkable beauty and artistic attainment, to write for this paper a series of articles on beauty. There is probably no authority her equal in giving the latest and most approved methods of attaining and preserving "the divine right of woman."

HOW is it possible for a woman with a growing family of children and a husband who is over-worked earning money to support a family to get away for the beauty vacation you write about? Leaving out the beauty, which I have never seen, what can a woman think about?

LUCREZIA BORI: "You tell me how to get a vacation. I have written you a letter sent to me. It will take me out of the straight line of beauty discourse to which I am going to do it, for it may add a bit to the happiness of some woman, and happiness is the greatest of beauties."

Will you permit me to say that, in my opinion, Americans are very busy. You work too hard, and they don't know how to play. When one has a large and growing family, for which the father has to earn money outside the home and the mother has to care for inside the home, there is the very time when the spirit of play should be cultivated. No women in the world need a vacation so much as the busy mothers. They need it as much for the good of the family as for themselves.

Vacation does not necessarily mean travel into a far land, there to do nothing but loaf and change your clothes. It means taking a play-sleep. Rest means simply a change of action. Vacations may be gained by letting the reins of routine, if only for a day.

A very poor and busy woman once told me of a wonderful vacation she had enjoyed for two days. "Where did you go?" I asked. "Oh, I didn't go away at all," she said. "I stayed home and sat in the rocking chair by the window and ate bread and milk, so I didn't have to take a day of sleep to keep the wrinkles out of one's face."

Play as hard that one day as you would the other six. If you fall asleep the day passes in dreams, that is the vacation you most need at the moment. Besides, it is a popular beauty tip to take a day of sleep to keep the wrinkles out of one's face.

Pack a big basket with plenty of wholesome and simple food, dress the kiddies in clothes that can't be spoiled, turn the key in the home door and board a trolley car and set out into the green country where there are pure, sweet air and fields of waving grain.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

How to Save and Improve Your Children's Eyesight

By DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSBERG
A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

A YOUNGSTER'S eyes should receive attention the very minute it is born. This is because there is always a chance that they may harbor a few germs of the terrible disease known as ophthalmia neonatorum. In adults, though they often make a lot of trouble, they seldom invade the eye, but in new-born babies this organ is their favorite abiding place.

In two days, or maybe three days, the baby's eyes grow red and begin to discharge a creamy pus. The upper lids swell and fall over the lower ones. By and by the infection extends to the eyeball and the child's sight is permanently impaired, if not entirely destroyed. A generation ago nearly half of the blind people in the world had lost their sight in this way in infancy. Today it is possible to cure ophthalmia neonatorum before it is fairly set in. The method is very simple and consists solely of dropping two drops of a 1 per cent. watery solution of silver nitrate into each eye of the new-born child. The silver nitrate is a source of this child is always pushed beyond the limit of safety. The child with defective vision is not a normal child, and should have its studies arranged accordingly. Instead of being sent to school at the age of 6 or 7, it should be kept at home until it is 12, and its period of book study should be short.

Washing the Eyes.

The child's eyes need constant attention for several weeks after birth, but the services of a physician are not necessary. Perfect cleanliness is the end to be attained, and frequent washing with the hands and face with plain water, it is best to use a solution made by dropping a teaspoonful of boric acid (not common kitchen borax) into a cupful of water that has been boiled and then permitted to cool till lukewarm.

Before washing your baby's eyes, cleanse your hands thoroughly with soap and warm water, and after that dip them in a basin containing a quart of water, peroxide of hydrogen in half a pint of water. Then tear off a bit of sterilized absorbent cotton, dip it into the boric acid solution and tenderly mop the baby's eyelids. Never touch a child's eyes with anything but the cotton. Indeed, absorbent cotton should be used instead of towel and rags whenever it is possible.

In early infancy an infant's eyes are exposed to the twin dangers of neglect and over-stimulation. See to it that neither direct sunlight nor strong artificial light shines into your baby's face, awake or asleep, but do not make the mistake of shading it too much. The eyes of all children, in later life, must take their share of the sun. The eyes of a child who must be trained to bear the burden of the world, the strain upon its eyes begins to grow serious. If it is of an alert, inquiring mind it will tackle an alphabet very early, and sometimes it is necessary to apply to the spirit always pleases parents vastly, but it is well to discourage a child under 5 can derive nothing but harm from money, since it is very largely a means

Common Eye Maladies.

Stray germs and flying dust cause most of the minor eye malades from which children suffer. Typical diseases of this sort is conjunctivitis, or "pink eye." It is caused by the lodgment of germs in the inner lining of the eyelids and its symptoms are familiar to every one. Inasmuch as there are many varieties of germs capable of producing it, it is very common, and frequently occurs in epidemic form. At a mild stage it is a simple infection which may clear up after a few days. At its worst, when it is caused by streptococcus, the ailment of diphtheria, it may be extremely serious. The treatment is entirely different, and irrigation with a drop of washes, administered with a dropper, is essential. It is necessary to apply the washes frequently, and to keep the eyes easy to master the art of reading. This germ with strong ducts in such cases, of course, a physician must be consulted, since it is very largely a means poring over books, even when the type is larger and the pictures are alluring. (Really should be permitted to strain effort relief. The time should be kept in a darkened room until the pain ceases.

Get Needed Glasses.

I sometimes believe that the kindergarten and baby classes to be found in every city and town are the greatest of all enemies of Young America. They drag little life-stuff, classroom youngsters who should be exercising their lungs and legs in the parks, and into the interior of a building where they are subjected to this sort of pedagogical vivisection. It is no wonder that many a child grows restless or stupid. Nine times out of ten a physical examination of the backward or timid child will reveal enlarged tonsils, massive adenoids, bad hearing or faulty vision. "Hemorrhoids, demon, or I'll denounce you," was the final remark of an unworldly educationist who served as a subject for this sort of pedagogical vivisection. A very pallid child is caused by the stopping up of the ducts which carry the tears from the eyes to the nose. When the ducts are not working normally, just enough tears are secreted to lubricate the eyeball. The child in the case is blinking, spreads them over the eye, and the waste runs down the nasal ducts to the nose.

What "Sniffing" Is.

When dust irritates the eye, or some powerful mental impression stimulates the tear-making glands, tears flow in extraordinary quantity and the eyeball is suffused. They come so fast, in fact, that the nasal ducts can't carry them all off, and they run down the cheeks. But, all the same, the ducts do their best, and so, when a child weeps, a part of its tears escape by way of its nose, and it "sniffles."

If these ducts, by accident or disease, are clogged up, the tears needed for the ordinary lubrication of the eyeball run over the lower lid and the patient has "watery eyes." To remedy this a series of probes through the ducts, best, and ending with one as fine as a needle, is necessary. This will clear and stretch the ducts and restore them to their normal condition. The surgeon is needed, too, to correct the defect of vision that cannot be permanently corrected.

The curriculum of the average public school is planned for the normal child, and its drain upon the

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

Dear Annie Laurie: Every Sunday night when we girls go walking, two special boys follow us on the streets. We do not like them, but they insist on going with us. Would you go with them? We are both 16 years of age, and are high school students.

Do you think it proper for girls of 16 to get married? I wonder if you girls really think think what you say you think, when you write letters.

If you two girls do not like those two boys, keep away from where they are. Why should you go with them? Now, girls, you know well enough that you're only pretending about those boys; if you didn't want to see them you'd choose some other time besides the very hour they're sure to be out on that special street for your special walk.

Great Novels in a Nutshell

Victor Hugo's NOTRE DAME
Condensed by AUGUSTA SHELBY

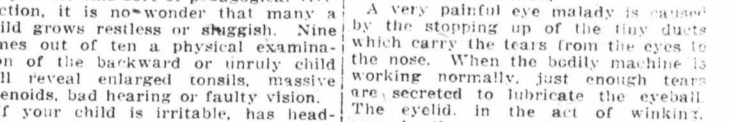

GRINGOIRE, a threeshore poet, despatched by the Pope of Pools, Esmeralda, a gypsy girl of winning beauty and luscious grace; Claude Frolo, a priest; Quasimodo, the bell ringer of Notre Dame, a hideous monster, a red-haired, crooked hunchback of horridness; Frolo, watched her entrance. She had strength, Capt. Phoebus, demobart and handsome, and Gaudule, the recluse nun, are, in order, the principal characters of Victor Hugo's immortal drama, "Notre Dame."

The scene is laid on the 15th of January, 1482, in Paris, in the Place Greve. The celebration of the "Day of Kings" and the "Feast of Pools," the great popular holiday of the year, was drawing to a close. Gringoire, the poet, was looking for food and shelter for the night. In the centre of the Place de Greve, in the flickering light of a bonfire, Esmeralda, with a white goat at her heels, was dancing.

Her bare shoulders, her golden corselet, her multi-hued skirt, and her wavy, nymph-like grace made her appear like a beautiful vision. The priest, Frolo, watched her entrance. She had strangely fired his heart. She caught sight of him, mimicked the prechord of the Maitre Chanoine, and when Frolo murmured "Sacrilege," she made him disappear in the crowd. That night she was attacked by Quasimodo, Pope-elect of Pools, and one of his companions. Gringoire tried to save her, but Quasimodo threw him aside. Phoebus de Chateaupers appeared and saved her to safety into the saddle of his charger. Whereupon she thanked him, slipped to the ground and fled.

Gringoire was left in the worst part of Paris, where no man's life was safe. The Traudis, denizens of the section, put a rope about his neck and dragged him to the market place to hang him. It was said his life would be spared if one of the Traudis women would swing her to safety into the saddle of his charger. Whereupon she thanked him, slipped to the ground and fled.

Esmeralda met Capt. Phoebus in secret. Frolo spied on them. As the lovely girl threw her arms about the captain's neck and told of her love, a strange livid face appeared before her. Again and again she would hurl insults and curses at the innocent Esmeralda from the window of her cell.

Esmeralda Rescues Gringoire.

Esmeralda. They hated all rivals in this latter love. Sister Gaudule, emaciated recluse, in her cell, watched the gypsy girl with hatred. Twenty years ago she was a beauty. Her life was ruined and her baby girl was stolen by gypsies and the horrid hunchback Quasimodo left in her place. Again and again she would hurl insults and curses at the innocent Esmeralda from the window of her cell.

Then came the soldiers to arrest Esmeralda. The mother fought in vain. The walls of the cell were beaten down, and Esmeralda again was taken to the gibbet. Gaudule followed. She sunk her fist in the neck of the executioner. He flung her back. She fell—dead.

As the white form of the unhappy Esmeralda was carried up the ladder leading over the parapet to watch, a grim smile on his face, Quasimodo leaped to his shoulders, and the priest, priest visited her. He told of his love, murmuring as he jumped, "Oh, all that I have ever loved."

BILINGUALISM IS A BIG ISSUE IN EASTERN ONT.

Little Attention Is Being Paid to "Abolish the Bar" Proposal.

OTTAWA, June 18.—Bilingualism not "abolish the bar" is the big issue in the Eastern Ontario ridings.

candidate. However, Laverdne, who is vice-president of the Ottawa Conservative Association, is a vigorous campaigner and will put up a lively fight.

In Prescott, bilingualism is also the issue. F. A. Senecal is the Liberal candidate, though Gustave Eventuel may jump into the fight.

In Glengarry also bilingualism rather than "abolish the bar" is likely to be the chief issue.

When Greek Meets Greek. Mr. Howard Ferguson in Grenville is putting up a most vigorous campaign against Champagne and the Whitney Government entirely on the grounds of bilingualism.

In Russell, the present Liberal member, Mr. D. Racine, is again a candidate, though he had a tight for his convention.

Mr. W. D. Black is again the Conservative candidate in Addington. In 1911 he had an acclamation. There is no Liberal opponent in sight and it would not be surprising if he had another acclamation.

In the two Lanark there is little doubt of two Conservatives being re-elected. Hon. Dr. Preston has this election an opponent, but the opposition is not regarded as very serious.

Anything to W.L. The two Renfrews are regarded as fairly safe seats for McGarry in South Renfrew and Dunlop in North.

To sum up as far as Eastern Ontario is concerned there are no signs that the Conservatives are losing ground or that the Liberals are gaining strength.

Mr. A. E. Donovan is again the Conservative candidate in Brockville, winning out over Mayor Donaldson in the convention.

IS THE BAR POLICY MERELY A FEELER?

Hon. Mr. Hanna Calls Upon Mr. Rowell to State His Position.

POINT EDWARD, Ont., June 18.—"One dose to Mr. Rowell has said that should Mr. Rowell not come in to power he will abandon the abolish the bar policy."

Winding up a sweeping denunciation of the attempt the Liberal leader and his supporters were making to make the people of the province believe that the issue was one between temperance and intemperance.

liquor interests and an opposition championing the temperance cause, Hon W. J. Hanna, in addressing a gathering of Lambton electors in Oddfellows Hall here last night challenged Mr. Rowell to come out into the open and say whether the veiled threat to the temperance people that he would abandon the "abolish the bar" policy if he did not receive endorsement misrepresented his position.

Mr. Rowell's efforts to carry out the advice of one of his supporters in the memorable caucus of three years ago "to get into the temperance boat and force the Whitney Government into the arms of the liquor interests."

"The impression is sought to be given," he said, "that the Conservative party is the party of intemperance and the Liberal party the party of temperance."

The Minister in contrasting the progress of temperance in Ontario under the present government with the lack of progress under the old administration met the Opposition criticism that local option and not the Government had extended the area by pointing out that the local option law had been on the statute books for many years before the Whitney Government came into power.

"If local option has done so much in the past nine years," he said, "it is because of the administration of the license law which because the people know what they go to the poll that the law will be enforced and that the Government has done."

Mr. Hanna also devoted himself largely to the new Workmen's Compensation Act, reviewing the great issue that the new legislation would bring about in ensuring the injured workmen compensation for his injuries.

The development of the health system of the province and of the extension of sanitary and engineering aid to municipalities in constructing waterworks and sewage systems, etc. were also mentioned.

The meeting was also addressed by Mayor Pagan and ex-Mayor Watson of Sarnia.

Tales of the Red Lot Team

WHEN "CURLY" BLEW UP

HERE was gloom indeed that afternoon in the ranks of the Red Lot Baseball Team. Even "Bud" Allison, the Captain and star-stop of that crack nine, showed a certain gloominess, usually he was the boldest on the field, but now he sat on the end of the players' bench moping and moping in his gloom regarding the hole in his glove and pretending to be interested in it.

"Rip" Dugan, the doughty catcher and as red-haired and freckled as any boy in the world—sat on the ground, with his legs crossed and his hands on his knees, and he was looking at the ground with a gloomy expression.

The Three Boys Sighed Simultaneously, As Well They Might.

Turk-fashion under him, and pounded the earth with a bat in a listless, disconsolate manner. And as for "Patty" Henry, the first-baseman, agile despite his weight, well—for once in his life he seemed to have nothing to say and, apparently, had forgotten completely how to laugh.

"Shucks!" exclaimed the Captain. "If that isn't just our luck!"

"Are you sure, Patsy, he's too slick to play—sure he's in bed with the doctor right there with him?" asked "Rip."

"Humph!" snapped out the First Baseman of the Red Lot Team. "Foolish question number nine-million-and-ninety-nine! You know just as well as I do, 'Rip' Dugan, that nothing short of a doctor and a twenty-mile team could keep 'Smoke-Ball' out of the game this afternoon. He's in bed, I tell you, and the doctor's afraid it's going to be typhoid fever."

The three boys sighed simultaneously. And well they might, for here it was the afternoon of the great game with the Superbas and "Smoke-Ball" Thompson, their crack pitcher, flat on his back with a doctor bending over him gravely fighting off the threatened fever.

Nowonder the three comrades, who had reached the Red Lot—a large clay field just on the outskirts of the town and from which they had taken the name of their team a full hour in advance of the game, felt that the world and all was slipping from under them.

Now the Red Lot Team was an organization of hustling unformed athletes who had beaten nearly every team they had played so far, while the Superbas, who came from the little town of Connellsville, a few miles distant, were the acknowledged champions of their vicinity. And the game this afternoon was to decide the long-argued question of supremacy.

"Who you going to pitch, Cap?" asked "Rip."

"Bud" looked up slowly and seemed to be considering the matter gravely. "Well, since poor old 'Smoke' is out of it, I'll send 'Curly' Graves to the rubber and I want you fellows to give him every bit of support you've got in you. Do you get that?"

"But, Cap—," began the catcher. "That's enough, 'Rip,'" commanded the Captain. "I know all you're going to say—only you're not going to say it. I'm captain of this team and what I say goes, or you fellows will have to get another captain!"

Even "Rip" himself felt the censure was just and made no reply to it, for if there was one thing the Red Lots prided themselves upon it was their discipline—a necessary adjunct for any successful ball team.

"Now, 'Curly,' isn't 'Smoke-Ball,'" went on the Captain, "but he's a good pitcher all the same and if the team stands right behind him and backs him up you'll find he won't go up in the air at all. And you fellows know as well as I do that so long as 'Curly' doesn't get rattled and lose his control not even 'Smoke-Ball' has a better curve. Of course he hasn't 'Smoke's' speed but—well, 'Curly' is going to pitch this game for us this afternoon and—"

"Hey, Cap, is that right? Is 'Smoke-Ball' sick in bed?" The interrupting voice came from little Ned Williams, the star second-baseman of the Red Lots, and his usually smiling, happy face as he came running up, followed by several other members of the team.

By this time, "Bud" had gotten hold of himself again, as every captain must if he hopes to be a real leader, and broke the sad news to the players, as they arrived by twos and threes. Then he gave them a talk straight from the shoulder, showing them that if they went into the game off. Now, in this the most critical time of all, they felt sure "Curly" would "blow"—though, of course, not each inning, the Red Lots, deep down in their hearts, were sure that "the balloon ascension" would come off. Now, in this the most critical time of all, they felt sure "Curly" would "blow"—though, of course, not

THE NEWSPAPER FLEET

COME, out, my brave young sailors,
The wind is blowing free,
And down the hollow meadow
The rain has left a sea.

Put on your caps and rubbers,
Each bring your paper boat;
We'll see which sails the farthest
And longest keeps aloft.

Here's Nelly's jaunty cutter,
And Tommy's splendid ship,
With Baby's tiny shallop,
All ready for the trip.

Now launch away, my hearties,
Let's off in gallant style;
Alas! poor Nelly's cutter
Strands on a grassy isle.

And Tommy's ship turns over
And sinks to sail no more;
Hurrah! the Baby's shallop
Has reached the other shore.

"Ball three!" called the Umpire, and there was a trace of surprise in his voice, for the last one had not come within three feet of the plate.

"Wow!" yelled the Superbas rosters. "Wow! He's up in the air! He's blown! We've got his goat! We've got him going!"

"Bud" Allison walked over from his position at short-stop and placed his hand on "Curly's" shoulder.

"Brave old man," he said encouragingly, "you can do it. Let him hit it—we're all behind you and two men are out. Those yaps think they've got you rattled—but they haven't! Show them!"

Of course the crowd could not hear what the captain of the Red Lots said to his pitcher, but they howled derisively, suggesting that somebody call the ambulance and that he get loose from his "balloon" and come back to earth in a parachute—and other similar remarks well-calculated to take the nerve of any pitcher in such a tight place.

Then, it was seen, "Curly" was talking earnestly to his Captain, who presently, grinned, nodded his head, slapped the pitcher on the back and trotted back to his position.

Something was about to happen. There was some plan on foot.

"Bat" Mulligan, standing at the plate, took a tighter grip on his bat and grinned. Then he chuckled to himself. "Curly," he felt sure, would put the next ball right over the heart of the plate and he—well, what he would do to that ball would be a shame!

"Curly" wound up and let the ball fly. It struck the ground before it reached the plate!

"Take your base—ball four!" shouted the Umpire.

A howl of delight went up from the Superbas and the friends of the Red Lots groaned aloud. "Curly" had certainly "blown higher than a kite."

"Bat" Mulligan threw his bat high in the air with a shriek of mingled delight and derision as he trotted down the base-line to first.

"We've got his goat, fellows, we've got his goat!" he called out. "Come on, Dick, he's easy! All you got to do is stand still and let him walk you!"

The Ears That Were Saved

EDITH approached Uncle Jack and climbed on his knee. Little Johnny rode his foot. Uncle Jack laid down his paper and pulled their ears.

"It seems to me you have itching ears," he said.

"Mamma washed mine," was the story-telling that he understood the value of what is known as suspense. He took the children both on his lap, and composed himself comfortably before he began.

"You children ought to have been born in Japan," said Uncle Jack. "Why?" asked Edith.

"Oh, because there are so many children there and they treat them so well. On the street corners there are men who are employed to tell them stories, and in the thickly populated country the children gather by the hundreds to hear them. They are sort of Father Ganders as it were."

"What's that?" It was Edith speaking.

"Father Gander is the husband of Mother Goose. He can say more silly things that please more children in an hour than we in America can think about in a year."

"Tell us about Japan," said Edith.

"Yes, tell us 'bout 'pan,'" echoed Little Johnny.

Uncle Jack cleared his throat and began:

"It is one of the stories that the men who stand at the street corners tell the children. Imagine—"

"What is 'agine, Uncle Jack?" Johnny wanted everything made clear as he went.

"Oh, just think. Think about the fellow in curious clothes with a whole lot of children standing around. Most of the little girls have babies strapped to their backs, for that is the way they carry the babies there, and the children have to take care of each other. It is a good deal like when an organ grinder and his monkey appear in the streets of some American town. Only there, when the crowd of children has gathered, instead of playing some air on the organ, the man tells a story. This is the way—"

And Uncle Jack proceeded in a squeaky voice which made the children giggle and wiggle in such a way that he knew they were enjoying it.

"Once upon a time—that is the way to begin stories for children in every country in all the world—a peasant—that is, a farmer—died and went to heaven. The first thing he saw was a great pile of human ears. He didn't understand it, and supposed they were there to be sold. So he asked a little Japanese angel who stood by:

"What are these? Are you going to make soup out of them?"

"Didn't he mean soups?" asked Edith.

"No. They don't have soups in Japan."

"Course not," Johnny assented, and Edith collapsed before the wisdom of the two. Then Uncle Jack continued:

"The Japanese angel replied: 'No. These ears belonged to people who when they lived on earth, didn't do what they heard. The people themselves couldn't go to heaven, but their ears did. But all they got out of it is the sound of beautiful music.'

"The man who had gone to heaven walked on a little farther, and then came upon a great pile of human tongues. He knew that they did eat tongues in Japan, even the tongues of humming birds, as small as they were, and felt sure he would have something good for dinner when he asked another Japanese angel about them."

Edith interrupted. "Do Japanese people eat each other's tongues?"

"No," replied Uncle Jack. "There are people though, even in America who devour each other with their tongues."

The children were shocked and said, "Oh-h-h!" Just like that, Johnny felt of his tongue to see if it had teeth as Uncle Jack continued:

"No," the Japanese angel explained, "these tongues belonged to people who when they were on earth liked to hear about good things, and to tell others what they ought to do, but who never did the right thing. Their tongues went to heaven, though they themselves were shut out. Now isn't that a great story?"

"Is that all?" asked Edith, visibly disappointed.

"That is all."

"It was a good thing for the fellows in the bad place, wasn't it, Uncle Jack?" she asked. "They couldn't holler when they got burned, and didn't have to listen to the people who screamed."

Uncle Jack was startled at what seemed to him preternatural wisdom. But he said nothing. He couldn't believe that little Johnny was tugging at him to tell him about Banberry Cross and nice stories like that.

SOME DAY THERE'S GOIN' T' BE AN AWFUL MUTINY IN THIS HERE FAMILY BY JINKS!

THE LAW will be enforced and that the government has done."

Mr. Hanna also devoted himself largely to the new Workmen's Compensation Act, reviewing the great details of the new legislation would bring about by ensuring the injured workmen compensation for his injuries. The government had been criticized for delay, but the Act that was now upon the statute books, admittedly the most advanced legislation of its kind, was the answer to this criticism. The minister declared that the Act must yet be brought into force at the beginning of November or December, but under no circumstances would its operations be delayed longer than the beginning of the year.

The development of the health system of the province and of the extension of sanitary and engineering aid to municipalities in constructing waterworks and sewage systems, etc., was a review of the work accomplished in the direction of prison and asylum reform, was reviewed.

The meeting was also addressed by Mr. W. H. Hagan and ex-Mayor Watson of Saratua.

PRINCE OF TECK DEVOID OF 'SIDE'

Has Real Business Capacity and Made Name for Himself in Boer War.

Pluck, business capacity, geniality, and good nature are the chief characteristics of Prince Alexander of Teck, who is to succeed the Duke of Connaught as Governor-General, when the latter's term of office expires in October next.

In the army the "Tommys" loved him because he had no "sides," and knew his business. As a fellow-officer put it, when he went out with the Prince's regiment, the Seventh Hussars, and first saw active service in the Matabele war in 1896, "he was not a military clothes-horse, but one who knew what soldiering meant." He was no shirker "roughing it," and he took risks with the most reckless of our soldiers out there, being on several occasions mentioned in despatches. A striking illustration of his Royal Highness' enthusiasm for soldiering is illustrated by the fact that when the South African war broke out the Prince at once volunteered for immediate service, and within forty-eight hours sailed with the Inniskilling Dragoons, who took part in the operations round Colenso, the routing of General Cronje, the relief of Kimberley, and the march to Bloemfontein.

Of one of the Prince's South African fights an interesting story is told. An Australian war correspondent who rode towards one of the khaki-clad regiments was approached by a young unassuming man, who was anxious to hear news from the outside world. "Have you been under fire?" he asked the correspondent. "I should smile," was the reply, "and I don't much appreciate it. Anybody that likes it can have my share." "We have to go under fire whether we like it or not," said the quiet young Englishman.

"At a salary," chirped the cornstalk. The young man shrugged his shoulders and walked away. Then the Australian heard that the unassuming young soldier was Prince Alexander of Teck, and he went back in the direction from which he had come. That, however, was just the Prince's way. Says one who met him during the war: "I once travelled half a day with him, not knowing who he was. Then I learned how earnest a soldier the Prince is, and how thoroughly wedded to his profession. He is a good talker, and a good camp man, too."

As a boy, before he went to Eton, the Prince spent his days at Kensington Palace, where, with his two brothers and sister, Queen Mary, he romped and ran like a merry sand-dog. He was her Majesty's favorite, and it was a black day when he first went off to school—a "preparatory" for Eton, for, in spite of the seven years' difference in their ages, the sister and brother were constant companions.

At Eton the Prince was known as a good-tempered, jolly fellow, very fond of games, a reputation which he has always maintained.

The business enterprise and capabilities of Prince Alexander were displayed when he carried on the task of raising funds for the Middlesex hospital, begun by his brother, the late Prince Francis of Teck, four years ago. In this work he was largely assisted by his wife, Princess Alexander, who devoted a great deal of time to practical philanthropy. Indeed, few big charitable enterprises have been launched in which she does not have a personal interest.

A daughter of the late Prince of Wales, and a sister of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg, the Princess Alexander of Teck married when she was 21 years of age.
