POETRY.

Dying.

"Calm is the evening, Ailie dear,
No sound but the night wind's sigh;
Open the window wide, beloved,
That I in peace may die.
In saddest hours the calm of night
Has stilled the aching heart;
So would I lie and fondly gaze,
Till I from earth depart,
How sweet the moon's soft radiance falls!
How sweet the flood of light!
The heavens are canopied with stars,
How sacred all, how bright!
I hear the nightingale's sweet voice,
Those notes I love the best.
Ah! sing on sweetly, bird of night!
Sing! sing my soul to rest,
That I may gently pass away,
Hearing that sad, sweet tone,
Forgetful of all earthly ills—
Ills thou hast never known.
The weariness, the restlessness,
The joys and woes of life,
The wishes never satisfied,
Such, such is earthly life.
I cannot see the flowers below,
Yet wafted on the air
Are gentle odours, oh, so sweet,
That tell me they are there.
And so with me, my Ailie dear,
When death like night comes on,
I would my presence thou might feel,
Even when I am gone,
And know I'm watching over thee,
Guiding thy steps aright,
And think that I am near thee still,
Though absent from thy sight.
Thy soft blue eyes, I know, so oft
Will moisten with a tear—
Oh, Ailie, best, beloved one,
Thou never wert so dear!
Farewell! farewell, my darling girl!
And when the nights are fair,
Gaze, gaze on yonder spangled heavens,
And think that I am there!
Hark! hark! there are spirit voices,
And star-crowned brows I see!
Wings of shiniest seraphs now
Are beckoning unto me!
The dying eyes then gently closed,
Breathed was the last sad prayer,
A heavenly smile was on the face,
But life—no life was there!
The mystic veil of life was drawn,
The soul had found its rest,
Gone from this world for evermore,
Gone! gone to join the blest!

EXTRACTS.

Old Bachelors.—What more miserable object can there be than an old bachelor? And who attracts so much disagreeable attention from those who behold him? People in general do not know whether to compassionate or condemn the poor fellow, and so they adopt a compromise and laugh at him. There can be no doubt about this fact—that the life of the old bachelor is a sorry one. If he is poor, he is snubbed by mankind in general; if he is rich, he is pampered and petted, but it is rendered evident, at the same time, that, as a whole, people are only making much of him in the hope that he will remember them in his will. He is considered, by numerous nephews and nieces, and a large circle of acquaintances, as a legitimate object for plunder; and never are such better pleased than when they have compelled him to disgorge some of his wealth.
As a rule, he has to take up his residence with people who allow him to remain with them on sufferance only; and the general impression appears to be that he is a species of social reprobate, who ought to be made as miserable as possible. Many persons make a point of openly jeering at him when they do not desire to obtain anything from him, while others pet and coax him when there is anything to be gained thereby.
Besides, a long life of bachelorhood develops a number of objectionable characteristics which are calculated to induce people to place themselves in antagonism to him. He has for many years no one to care for but himself; no one's comfort or convenience to study but his own. This generates selfishness, which in time becomes chronic. Further, every service which is rendered him being paid for in some way or other, he deems himself privileged to snap and snarl if things are not exactly to his liking. He grumbles, for instance, when they invade his territory and leave his door open; and grows still more bitterly when those around him make a noise. In short, he becomes fidgety, irritable, and intensely selfish; and yet, though this is the case, he is placed in such a helpless position that he must perforce allow himself to be plundered, and bullied, and played upon generally by those with whom he comes in close and familiar contact.
Many a young life is rendered one of intense anxiety and caution by the close proximity of an old bachelor, and not a few exuberant bursts of innocent mirth are checked by his acrid interference. It is not surprising that, under these circumstances, the old bachelor is avoided to a greater or lesser extent and regarded in the light of an affliction. Though indisposed to relinquish his privileges, it is aggravating to him to notice that this is the case; and he is often grieved to find that he is almost incapable of securing the love of any one: He hates himself because of his foibles and crotchets, but it is too late in the day for him to reform, and so he continues to cherish them and indulge in eccentricities of dress, manner, speech, and in many instances, thought.

Cured with Licorice Water.

—There is a man in this town who is so affectionately fond of his wife, that he is jealous if a man looks within forty-five degrees of the direction in which she may happen to be. The other day a gentleman spoke to her and he immediately threatened suicide. His wife was dispatched for a bottle of poison which she had put up at the druggist's, consisting of a little water colored with liquorice, and a glaring poison label outside. When he threatened to take some of it, and actually poured it into a wine glass, she screamed for help and ran into another room, where she could watch through the key-hole, and saw him coolly open the window and throw it out. She then rushed back, apparently frantic with grief, and implored him not to do the rash deed. He merely pointed at the glass, and laying down on the floor, began to kick out his legs like a jumping-jack. She told him she was determined to share his fate, and swallowed the rest of the liquorice water, whereupon he became really frightened, called the neighbors, confessed that he only shammed, and said that if she only survived he never would trouble her again. Then she explained the ruse, and he was so mortified he tried to buy up the silence of the neighbors, but the story was too good to keep.

Three Things.

—Three things to love: courage, gentleness and affection.
—Three things to admire: intellect, dignity and gracefulness.
—Three things to hate: cruelty, arrogance and ingratitude.
—Three things to despise: monopoly, parsimony and self estimation.
—Three things to delight in: beauty, frankness and freedom.
—Three things to wish for: health, friends and a contented spirit.
—Three things to like: cordiality, good humour and cheerfulness.
—Three things to avoid: idleness, loquacity and flippant jesting.
—Three things to cultivate: good books, good friends and good humour.
—Three things to contend for: honor, country and friends.
—Three things to govern: temper, tongue and conduct.
—Three things to think of: life, death and eternity.

A Jewish Legend.

—According to Jewish and Mohammedan tradition, King Solomon, who was wise beyond all other men, knew the language of animals, and could talk with the beasts of the field and the birds of the air. A rabbinical story is told of him, which is in this wise:—
One day the king rode out of Jerusalem with a great retinue. An ant hill lay directly in his path, and Solomon heard its little people talking.
Here comes the great king, he heard one of them say. His flatterers call him wise and just and merciful, but he is about to ride over us, and crush us without heeding our sufferings.
And Solomon told the Queen of Sheba, who rode with him, what the ant said.
And the queen made answer—
He is an insolent creature, O King! It is a better fate than he deserves, to be trodden under our feet.
But Solomon said—
It is the part of wisdom to learn of the lowest and weakest. And he commanded his train to turn aside and spare the ant hill.
Then all the courtiers marvelled greatly, and the Queen of Sheba bowed her head and made obeisance to Solomon.
Now know I the secret of thy wisdom. Thou listenest as patiently to the reproaches of the humble as to the flatteries of the great!

The Sailor and the Actress.

—When I was a poor girl, said the late Duchess of St. Alban's, working very hard for my thirty shillings a week, I went down to Liverpool during the holidays, where I was always very kindly received. I was to perform in a new piece, something like those pretty little affecting dramas they get up now in our minor theatres; and in my character I represented a poor, friendless orphan girl, reduced to the most wretched poverty. A heartless tradesman prosecutes the sad heroine for a heavy debt, and insists on putting her in prison, unless some one will be bail for her. The girl replies:

Then I have no hope, I have not a friend in the world.
What, will no one be bail for you, to save you from prison? asks the stern creditor.

I have told you I have not a friend on earth, was my reply.
But just as I was uttering the words, I saw a sailor in the upper gallery spring over the railing, letting himself down from one tier to another, until he bounded clear over the orchestra and footlights and placed himself beside me in a moment.

Yes, you shall have one friend, at least, my poor young woman, said he, with the greatest expression, in his honest sunburnt countenance. I will go bail for you to any amount. And as for you, (turning to the frightened actor,) if you don't bear a hand, and shift your moorings, you lubber, it will be worse for you when I come athwart your bows!

Every creature in the house rose; the uproar was indescribable; peals of laughter, screams of terror, cheers from his tawney messmates in the gallery, preparatory scraping of the violins in the orchestra; and, amid the universal din, there stood the unconscious cause of it sheltering me, the poor distressed young woman, and breathing defiance and destruction against my mimic persecutor. He was only persuaded to relinquish his care of me by the manager pretending to arrive and rescue me with a profusion of theatrical bank-notes.

The Duke of Edinburgh's Marriage.—That some reflections of a political nature should be suggested by the satisfactory tidings which were enabled to announce on Saturday would seem to be but natural; and for a considerable period to come, we may expect to hear a variety of ingenious speculations whispered in the bay-windows of London clubs, or elaborated by the "well informed" correspondent of foreign newspapers, predicting all kinds of momentous effects as likely to arise from the marriage between the Duke of Edinburgh and the Grand Duchess Marie Alexandrovna of Russia. But we may dismiss all these speculations as idle, baseless guesses. It is enough for us at present to know that the union between the English Duke and the Russian Grand Duchess, whose acquaintance his Royal Highness first made at St. Petersburg when he was a midshipman, is one of affection; that it bears no signs of being the offspring either of dynastic or diplomatic intrigue; and that the nobility of the match must be equally gratifying to the legitimate pride of two ancient, powerful and imperial nations. It is fitting that an English Prince of the Blood Royal, who ranks next in gentiture to the heir of our Throne, whose dual title proudly reminds us of the indissoluble union between England and Scotland, should mate with a Princess whose country is as puissant, and whose surroundings are as splendid, as his own. The great Duke of Moscow was a potentate in the days when the Plantagenets were reigning over us. It was through the nautical and mercantile enterprise of Englishmen that the hands of the two great Powers of the North and the West of Europe were first clasped in amity; those friendly relations have, in the course of four hundred years, very rarely been disturbed; nor, taking title for prestige, can there be either with bride or with bridegroom one iota of derogation in this eminently well-assorted marriage. Cloth of frieze, ere now, has been warned not to be so bold in wedding with cloth of gold, but in this happy instance, the Russian Princess and the British Prince approach the altar pari passu. In grandeur and dignity they are peers and equals.

Leaving future and problematical political "combinations" to take care of themselves, we look at the personal aspect of the union. It is pleasing to learn that the matrimonial engagement is no outcome of statecraft or Ministerial policy. No such considerations have to do with the marriage of the Grand Duchess Marie Alexandrovna. She weds, with the full consent of her illustrious parents, a Prince to whom she is strongly attached; and, apart from the fact, his Royal Highness, at a glance at the "Almanach de Gotha" will convince the most sceptical, happens at this moment to be, matrimonially speaking, the most eligible parti in Europe. Never, since Sir Robert Peel gracefully remarked that Louis Philippe might boast of a family of which all the sons were brave, and all the daughters virtuous, has there been a Royal family more fertile in brilliant scions than that of England. The Duke of Edinburgh has been five years past essentially un jeune homme a marier. He has seen more of the world than is usually seen by ninety-nine princes out of a hundred. His frank and genial manners have made him universally popular, and the English public is pleased to know that he is soon to take his proper place among our Princes in all the functions of an English home, and in all the festivals of peace.

We cannot expect him to be continually going round the world, or visiting strange potentates in far-off latitudes. Young as he is, he has seen more of men and cities than Ulysses ever dreamt of; and pending any active exercise of his professional duties, he cannot be better employed than in fulfilling the duties of a husband, dividing his time, as we presume will be the case, between the Courts of London and St. Petersburg. And, touching the two Courts, it is probable that, until a definite official programme is published, the greatest excitement and the most conflicting opinions will reign, not only in fashionable circles, but among the public at large, as to the date and the whereabouts of the Royal Imperial wedding. Will it take place in the Cathedral of St. Isaac, at St. Petersburg, or in the Chapel Royal, at St. James's, or at home? Will there be a dual marriage ceremony, seeing that the Duke is a Protestant of the Church of England and the Princess a member of the Orthodox Greek Church? Precedents will of course be consulted, and the unbending laws of etiquette rigidly obeyed. In English hearts, nevertheless, there will, we apprehend, spring up a strong desire that the marriage so far as its anglican side is concerned should take place in the ancestral home of our Princes—in the chapel of St. George at Windsor. The Cross of St. George is their most coveted military distinction. It glitters on the breast of Tottlebein. In the old fane, with the banners of the Knights of whom he is one, above him, with the best of all that is noble and beautiful in England around him—there, so most loyal men will think, should the Duke of Edinburgh give his hand to the Grand Duchess Marie.

It is stated that perfect anarchy reigns in Bosnia! that in the district of Gradiska alone within the last six months 270 Christians have been murdered, the perpetrators remaining undiscovered. The outrages are said to be due to the fanaticism of Mahomedans.

HARBOR GRACE, AUG. 2, 1873.

By the arrival of the S. S. "Panther" at St. John's, yesterday, we are gratified to learn that the rumor concerning the loss of the Revenue Cruiser, "William Stairs," is entirely false. We are indebted to the Hon. Henry Renouf, Chairman Board of Works, for the subjoined despatch in reference to the matter:—

"St. John's, August 1st, 1873.

"Steamer "Panther" just arrived from Labrador. Revenue Cruiser, "William Stairs," and all on board safe and well."

CRICKET.

A WELL-CONTESTED and highly interesting match was played at Alexandra Park yesterday, between an "eleven" of the St. John's cricketers and the same number of the Harbor Grace and Carbonear "teams." The day being cool and the weather fine, large numbers of spectators were early on the ground. At half-past eleven o'clock the wickets were pitched, and the Harbor Grace "team," having won the toss, sent their opponents to the bat. The St. John's "eleven" played with skill and determination, and when the last wicket fell, showed the handsome score of 118 for the first innings. After a brief rest, the Bay "eleven" went to the bat, but met with poor success, all the wickets going down for 38 runs. Refreshments were then partaken of; after which the Bay "team" returned to the stumps, and succeeded in scoring 125. The St. John's "eleven" again went to the bat; but retired with remarkable rapidity. Messrs. A. Rendell and Clapp were the only two who made any stand, and the second innings closed for 40, leaving the victory with the Bay "eleven" by 5 runs. Our St. John's friends took their defeat in "good part," although it is but reasonable to suppose that they were greatly disappointed. In the evening they amused themselves and the public with exhibitions of their efficiency in the "art" of playing "leap-frog" and other athletic games, in front of the "Hotel de Toussaint." The following are the scores:—

WE deem it necessary to call the attention of the Road Board to the very bad state of Water Street, from Lime Kiln Hill to Courage's Beach. Numerous large stones, protruding two or three inches above the level of the street, render locomotion somewhat difficult and uncomfortable to persons residing in the upper part of the town. There is another nuisance in the neighborhood referred to that demands immediate attention. We allude to Sampson's Brook. This rivulet, swollen spring and fall by heavy rains, often overflows, making the public road from Water to Harvey Streets impassable without the aid of a boat, and causing the people in the vicinity to sustain considerable loss by washing away their fences, fuel and other articles. In fact, many a time children are prevented from reaching the school-house "hard by" in consequence of the road leading to that useful edifice being flooded with water, and thus are many of our youthful aspirants after knowledge not only obliged to incur the displeasure of the much-dreaded "Dominie," but also to forego the advantages of a good education. All this "sea of evils" could be removed by the expenditure of a few dollars in making a drain sufficiently broad to carry off the water. We respectfully submit the matter to the favorable consideration of the Road Board with the hope that they will do something in the way of remedying the evils complained of. And, by the way, we would here remark that we are highly pleased with the conduct of the Board during the past week; indeed, the "inspector" would seem to have recently received the power of ubiquity. Well, "better late than never!"

A CODFISH was caught near Island Cove, a few days since, in the mouth of which was found a piece of salt pork and five cents in silver.

THE "Great Eastern" left Hearts Content yesterday.

WE would remind the 'illustrious' and 'unconquerable' editor of the St. John's "Times" that we "owe him one"; but, as our time has been occupied in "putting the above in type," we find it impossible just now to attend to one of the "FOURTH ESTATE."

Cricket.

A friendly contest was played at the Alexandra Park to-day between the Bay eleven and the same number from St. John's—the day being all that could be desired. The wickets were pitched at eleven o'clock, and the Bay eleven took the field and had some very hard work with the first few batters, as Clapp made a good stand for 12, Prowse 48, and Kennedy 17, which gave them plenty of work for the first hour and a half; however, after that the wickets began to fall a little faster, and at the conclusion of a two hours' innings, they succeeded in disposing of the lot. The St. John's eleven took the field with A. Rutherford and Sprague at the bat, but as there appeared to be a want of confidence in the Bay players, they all very soon had to retire, some of them without even breaking their egg, which made it appear that the match was going to be too one-sided; and the St. John's eleven, probably feeling confident that they were going to beat us by an innings, sent us again to the bat. They, however, soon found that they had rather tougher mettle to contend with than they thought, as, in the second innings, the Bay eleven showed some fine play—A. Rutherford scored 24, Paterson 28, and Quintin 10—making the handsome score of 125 in the second innings. The St. John's eleven again went to the bat and, showing the same want of confidence in their second innings as the Bay eleven did in their first, were quickly disposed of for 40, leaving the Bay victorious by 5 runs. It may be said, and truly, that it was one of the best contested matches ever played in the country. The wicket keeping of Jarvis for the Bay eleven and Rendell for the St. John's eleven was remarkably good, and the batting of Prowse, A. Rutherford and Paterson deserves especial mention. Hoping that we will soon have a return match in St. John's,

ONE OF THE BAY ELEVEN.

SOME of the prettiest and most romantic Summer resorts in the world lie along the banks of the Hudson River.

M. THIERS has addressed a letter to an inhabitant of Nancy, in which he says:—"I have retired from public life because I have a strong conviction that party government, in a country which is so sadly divided as ours, was a mistake, and could but add to the existing division. A Government acting energetically against all disorder, and moderately, amicably, and peaceably toward all parties which are not factious is the only government capable of appeasing political passions and of restoring to France a certain amount of union and well-being. Consequently I have preferred to retire rather than pursue a policy which was not my own, and which in siding with the majority of the country, I return to the repose of my books and to my friends, desiring nothing but the restoration of France." It appears, however that he still gives attendance in the Assembly.

THE Seal fishery, which is engaged in by the Canadians and New Englanders, is one of the greatest lotteries of the ocean. Vessels are equipped and sent out on sealing expeditions, and it was one of these vessels that rescued the "Polaris" survivors lately. The great prize of the seal fishery this season are said to have been secured by the "Neptune," a new vessel, that in two trips captured 44,000 seals, valued at $183,000. Of this the owner gets a two third share, which, it is said, will much more than cover the original cost and outfit of the vessel. It is useless, therefore, to preach against the risk of the seal fishery, when such splendid prizes are to be drawn. On her second voyage the "Neptune" discovered in one place a large herd of seals hemmed in by ice, and the entire crew engaging in the contest, in about three hours eight thousand seals were slain. It took a much longer time to get them on the vessel.—[European Mail.]

ROTTEN SHIPS.—A foreign consul at a British port writes to Mr. Plimsoll that some notorious shipowners are trying to put their rotten ships under foreign flags to evade the British law, keeping the ownership under a fictitious transfer. "A notorious ship owner applied to me," he says, "to authorize a subject of my nation to purchase one of his ships, and requested me to give a provisional foreign nationality to it. I, knowing the character of the ships, was doubly on my guard. As inquiry satisfied me this was not a 'bona fide' transaction, I formally refused the request."

THE Tichborne claimant arrived in Leeds on Saturday morning from London. An immense crowd cheered him as he passed from the train to a carriage that was waiting for him, and proceeded to the grounds of the Junior Gun Club. Several thousand persons assembled at the Royal Park, as it was expected the claimant would make a short speech. At about half-past eight he appeared on the orchestra, which was already crowded, and when coming to the front the floor gave way, and with several of his friends he fell the depth of seven or eight feet into a cellar. The tumult that followed is indescribable. Great fears were entertained that the claimant was killed. In a few minutes all who had fallen were rescued, none the worse, except for a few bruises. The claimant afterwards addressed the assemblage.

THE Berlin correspondent of the "Times" says it is regarded as probable that the Posen Clerical Seminary for the education of priests will be shortly closed by the secular authorities. The payment of Government subsidies to the Posen and Palerborn Seminaries has been discontinued. The Bishop of Fulda will not allow his seminary to be inspected by Government commissaries. The Rev. Dr. Martin, has resigned because he disapproves his bishops' resistance to the new ecclesiastical laws. The charitable society of Catholic Maltese Knights in Silesia have demonstratively deposed the Duke of Ratibor, their president, for signing the address of the loyal Catholics to the Emperor. In consequence of this proceeding, a number of noble knights have seceded from the society. The Supreme Consistory of the Prussian Protestant Church, after long and stormy debates, have determined not to confirm the sentence of expulsion passed by the Brandenburg Consistory against the Rev. Mr. Sydow for denying the miraculous birth of Christ in a public lecture. Mr. Sydow who was ordained many years ago, when his opinions were very prevalent in the Prussian Church, will be only reprimanded.

THERE has been an appeal to the Code of honor in Louisiana, between ex-Judge William Cooley and R. Branwell Rhett, Jr., of the New Orleans "Picayune," an appeal in which doubled-barrelled shot guns, loaded with balls were the instruments, and with which the parties stood at the convenient distance from each other for decisive work of forty paces. The ex-Judge submitted in this case to a fatal ruling, for the editor brought him down and killed him at the second shot. This moral of this horrible affair is this—that in a community where a distinguished ex-Judge and a leading newspaper editor can find no other method for the settlement of a personal quarrel than an appeal to the bloody code the community itself must share in the disgrace of the barbarous practice; and the lesson suggested is a law into Louisiana and in every Southern State which will put an end to this relic of barbarism by making all parties directly concerned in a death on the so-called field of honor subject to the penalty of murder.

A LETTER from Boghari in Algeria says:—The locusts arrived the other day in such a body as to intercept the rays of the sun. At an early hour when those terrible insects were still benumbed by the dew, the population the police, and the Arab gnomes, under the conduct of the mayor, set out and commenced the chase, which did not terminate until five in the afternoon. More than 25 quintals (221 lb. each) of eggs and larvae were buried in the earth. What remained of the winged battalion took its flight towards Medeah, where it appeared two days after.

A CORRESPONDENT of the "Farmer" gives the following receipt for Mouse-proof mortar:—I have found stiff mortar, composed of nine parts to one of wheat flour, wet up with warm water, effectual in stopping the holes of mice in plastered walls, when common lime mortar was insufficient.

A QUAKER having sold a fine-looking but blind horse, asked the purchaser. Well, my friend, dost thou see any fault in him? No, was the answer. Neither will he see any fault in the said old Broadbrim.

Every Day.

Oh, trifling tasks, so often done,
Yet ever to be done anew!

The restless sense of wasted power,
The tiresome round of little things,

The boulder in the torrent's course
By tide and tempest lashed in vain,

We find the lion in his lair,
Who tracks the tiger for his life,

The steady strain that never stops
Is mightier than the fiercest shock;

We rise to meet a heavy blow—
Our souls a sudden bravery fills—

The hearts which boldly face death
Upon the battle field, and dares

And even saints of holy fame,
Whose souls by faith have overcome,

Ah, more than martyr's aureole,
And more than hero's heart of fire,

The Bright Side.

There is many a rest in the road of life,
If we only would stop to take it

Better to hope though the clouds hang low
And to keep the eyes still lifted;

There is many a gem in the path of life,
Which we pass in our idle pleasure,

Better to weave in the web of life
A bright and golden filling,

And to do God's will with a ready heart,
And bands that are swift and willing,

And sit, and grieve, and wonder.
