A Child of Sorrow.

CHAPTER XI.

Mr. Carrington was as changed in outward appearance as Carrie. In place of the regulation city suit he wore a cut-away coat of dark green, a waistcoat with brass buttons, and breeches and gaiters, all made by first-class tailors, who were accustomed to dressing country gentlemen. Even Mr. Spinner had bowed to the spirit of the country, and was attired in a tweed suit; but it was a question which man looked most incongruous. Mr. Carrington gave one the impression of a man who found his gaiters too tight and his coat too loose, and Mr. Spinner's suit had as much an air of masquerade as a fancy dress costume at a Covent Garden ball. On Mr. Spinner's face shone a smile of satisfaction, but on Mr. Carrington's was a furtive expression of doubt and watchfulness.

"Well, girls," he said. "Going for your drive? Quite right, quite right, eh, Mr. Spinner?"

He appealed to Mr. Spinner with a glance and a wave of the hand, as if he had grown accustomed to appealing to and relying on that gentleman, and Mr. Spinner responded with light-hearted promptitude:

"Quite right, Mr. Carrington. Proper thing to do. Always take a drive in the afternoon; see the country and show yourselves; that's the correct thing. I've news for you ladies. Lord Heroncourt is staying at the Court."

"Oh!" said Carrie. Maida made no response, but stood by the hall door, still looking at the view.

"Yes; he came down with Lord and Lady Glassbury last Tuesday. Lord Heroncourt and the Glassburys are great friends."

"Glassbury?" said Carrie. "That is the name of the lady at whose house you recited, Maida."

"No need to remember things of that kind," said Mr. Carrington, with suppressed irritability.

"Why not, father?" asked Maida, in her low, penetrating voice. "They were all very kind; it was—a success."

Mr. Carrington struck his leg with the hunting-crop which he carried.

"All that sort of thing is past and gone, my dear Maida," he said, with a curious mixture of nervousness and pomposity; "and I beg you will not allude to it."

"I'm bound to say that Mr. Carrington is right, quite right," put in Mr. Spinner, showing his teeth. "All that is past and gone. Eh, Miss Carrie?"

Carrie nodded, but swung round from him.

"Yes; but all the same Maida has a right to be proud of it. Is Lady Glassbury a great friend of Lord Heroncourt's, Mr. Spinner?"

Mr. Spinner sidled nearer to her. "A very old friend," he said. "She has known him since they were boy and girl; they are the closest of friends. I met them just now walking together in the village, and had the pleasure of a little chat with them. Her ladyship looked in the best of health and most absurdly young."

"Made up, no doubt," remarked Carrie. "I'm told that no one in society ever gets old, but younger and younger every year. Isn't it true, Maida?"

Maida smiled for reply; and Mr. Spinner, with his head on one side and his eyes fixed on Carrie's face like some pale tropical bird, went on: "Lord Heroncourt was also looking very well. They were strolling about, just like two—ordinary mortals—"

"How kind and condescending of them!" put in Carrie. "I wonder they weren't being carried in a palanquin by two retainers."

"Followed by a number of dogs—really, I never saw such a quantity; and I must admit that I was—er—slightly nervous, especially at one huge beast—I think he was a mastiff—who would insist upon sniffing at my legs. Oh, you may laugh, Miss Carrie, but I assure you that it was most trying, especially as his lordship was asking me questions—where I was staying, and so on."

"And of course you told him that you were staying at Marston Towers?" said Mr. Carrington, with a barely concealed eagerness.

"Of course, of course," assented Mr. Spinner, blandly. "I told him that you had recently come into a large fortune, and that you had purchased the place and were living here with your two charming daughters."

Mr. Carrington nodded with an air of satisfaction and approval; but Maida's face clouded and she moved a little away from the group.

"His lordship—and I think her ladyship, too—were much interested. I shouldn't be surprised if they were to call," said Mr. Spinner.

Mr. Carrington nodded again, and tried to look indifferent; but Carrie said with naive eagerness:

"Oh, do you think so? I hope so!" "Though the Carringtons had been at the Towers for nearly a month no one had called excepting the rector and his wife. The neighbors were all families of rank and position, and were in no particular hurry to call upon persons who belonged to the newly rich, and who might very possibly be as vulgar as they were 'new.' Mr. Carrington had subscribed with rather too lavish a generosity to the various local charities; but though the parson was grateful, the resident gentry were not impressed. Indeed the principal lady—the old Duchess of Seaford—had remarked, with a shrug of her thin shoulders, "The parvenue is always good to the poor, and liberal with his subscriptions."

"They can please themselves," said Mr. Carrington. "If they call, we shall be glad to see them; if they don't we shall be able to get along without them; Eh, Carrie? Lord Heroncourt is a great swell in his way, no doubt; and he's got a very beautiful place—though it's let, isn't it, Spinner, and he's down here as a kind of visitor?—but I don't think it's larger than the Towers, and I desay I could buy him up."

Mr. Spinner smiled and nodded. "Of course, of course, Mr. Carrington," he assented. "His lordship's poor, as you say; but it's a tremendously old family, and the Heroncourts are the principal people in these parts, barring the Seafords; and I fancy the people—the farmers and so on—think more of the Heroncourts than the ducal family. Yes, the place was let to Lord Raymond, but he's gone off as an ambassador to Constantinople again, and has given up the Court to his lordship; otherwise he couldn't afford to live in it!"

The carriage came up to the steps and Mr. Spinner bounded forward to assist the ladies into it, Mr. Carrington standing on the top steps, with his hands in his pockets, surveying the brilliant equipage with an air of proud complacency.

"This is even better than a hansom cab, isn't it, Maida?" said Carrie, as she leant back with a sigh of contentment. "Isn't it delicious to roll along with these pneumatic tires, as if you were on a cloud! And to think that it's our very own, carriage and horses and servants! How strange! Lady Glassbury should be down here! I should like to see her. Do you think they'll call, Maida?"

It is not very likely," said Maida. "Not yet, at any rate. They will want to know something about us; and though we are very rich, we are not of the same class—"

"And this is the twentieth century of Christianity!" said Carrie, indignantly. "As if we were common adventurers, or some kind of dangerous animals that might bite them!" "I thought all that kind of class-prejudice had died out, and only existed in second-rate novels. Not a soul has been near us excepting the clergyman, and he came to beg; and because it was his duty, I suppose."

"Why do you mind?" asked Maida, soothingly. "I thought you were so happy, dear."

"So I am," retorted Carrie; "but what's the use of being happy, if there's no one to see that you are? It's like wearing diamonds in a dark room. But there! I don't mind, really. I daresay her ladyship would give herself airs, because we weren't born in the purple, and that Lord Heroncourt would be as dull as ditch-water—perhaps half an idiot; most of the nobility are, aren't they?"

Maida laughed. "Like yourself, I know so little about them," she said; "but anyway, Lady Glassbury would not be ill-mannered. Don't let us think any more about them. Let us be happy in our own way, Carrie, dear."

Half an hour later Lady Glassbury and Lord Heroncourt stood on the terrace. He was smoking a cigarette and leaning against the stone balustrade with an expression of something like contentment on his handsome face. Lord Glassbury had gone to fish the trout stream which ran through the valley at the back of the woods. He never by any chance caught anything; but his lack of success did not appear to upset him, and he always returned with an empty basket and a cheerful countenance.

"You find it good to be here, Byrne," said the countess, tilting her sunshade so that she could look at him.

Heroncourt nodded. "Yes; singularly so. I grow more fond of the place every day."

He turned and looked along the front of the house with its innumerable windows framed in ivy and clematis, its Tudor porch, and time-worn carvings.

"You'll find it hard to leave it," she said.

He frowned slightly. "Yes; I suppose so. But sufficient for the day is the evil thereof. I've got some months yet."

"And all sorts of things may turn up before Lord Raymond wants to come back," she remarked. "By the way, Byrne, wasn't it rather odd meeting Mr. Spinner? He is an odd-looking man. One would think him rather foolish, I thought."

"He's not by any means such a fool as he may look, though he has acted foolishly enough in lending me that money."

"I'm not so sure," she mused. "You never can tell what that kind of man has up his sleeve."

"What can he have up his sleeve in respect to me?" said Heroncourt.

She did not reply, and was silently thoughtful for a moment or two. Then she said:

"Do you mean to call on these new people at the Towers—these millionaires?"

He shrugged his shoulders. "Why should I?" he replied, indifferently.

"They are your neighbors; the man has bought the place. Mr. Spinner spoke very highly of them."

"He naturally would. They are immensely rich, didn't he say? Why should I call? I am only here for a short time."

"So far as you know," she said. "I think I should like you to call."

"I know that," he remarked, with a smile. "Your artfulness is always thrown away upon me, Ethelreda. And if you want me to call, I suppose I shall have to do so."

"Let us go now," she said, after a moment or two.

He laughed shortly. "I would point out to you that it is very jolly here on the terrace, and that presently I propose taking you for a drive in a dog-cart; but it wouldn't be much use if you've made up your mind. We'll walk over when I've finished this cigarette," he said, resignedly.

The countess laughed softly. "Yes, I'd made up my mind while Mr. Spinner was telling us about them. But it won't do to just walk over. That sort of people would be offended by such an unceremonious proceeding. We must have the big carriage, Byrne."

ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND

Mrs. Britannia

to Mr. Sam.

AN ACCOUNT MONEY CANNOT SETTLE.

"Nine-tenths of the fundamental means of making munitions—the measuring devices used in British shops—came from America."

Thus comments the 'American Machinist' upon the terrific effort made by American engineering firms to supply Great Britain and our Allies with munition-making tools.

That effort did not begin on the day when the United States entered the war. It began nearly three years ago. Its result is seen in the preponderance of Allied voice in that thunder that is rolling on the western front to-day. America "came into the war" when the engineers of the United States, mobilized in the autumn of 1914.

Only the factory masters, their managers, foremen, and "hands" know what that effort was. The cynic may say that it was made for gain, but the man of affairs knows that business men study conservation of energy. No business man takes on more than he can "chew." But idealism made these men do more than any chink of dividends could have tempted them to do. Not dollars alone, but sheer idealism, must have been behind the driving belt of every machine shop of the United States in that nerve-racking hustle whose account for "goods delivered" Mrs. Britannia can never fully settle with Mr. Sam save with the coin of gratitude.

Here is a picture, from the American Machinist, of that stress of output:

"Pick a farm hand who has never seen the inside of a shop, one endowed with strength from the neck down and a fair amount of initiative ability; give him three days' training in the half-dozen motions that will comprise his world of action for all time to come; pay him from five to ten times as much as he ever received before—and call the job finished. Compared with the task of training a machine-tool building mechanic, the making of a munition worker is a kindergarten accomplishment."

had to train—against time—those machine-tool mechanics in their peculiarly expert work to cope with the rush that came upon them. Here is another picture:—

Coincident with the demand for shells came the demand from abroad for American machine tools on which to make them. Upon the shoulders of American machine-tool builders was placed the gigantic burden of responding with an unheard-of expansion in their industry in an incredibly short period. Orders were veritably forced upon them—delegations from abroad combed the United States in search not only for existing machine-tool builders but for shops that could be persuaded to build machine-tools.

... This tidal wave of foreign demand for machinery, flooding the shops in which machinery is built, spread to the sources of supply of raw materials, overwhelming them also. A hundred manufacturers, having promised quick delivery in response to urgent pleadings, rushed to the steel mill and the iron furnace, to find that the multiplication of demands had divided the quantities available to fill them. And even the steel mills and iron furnaces passed on the demand, and with it the delay—back to the coke oven and the mine. Transportation facilities, as necessary for raw materials as for finished product, were overtaxed to the extent that food became scarce in crowded centres dependent on rail supply. Labour, even the most unskilled and crude, was in demand at unheard-of wages.

To meet the demands of those across the water in dire need of their products, the machine-tool builders were compelled to double and triple their working forces in the face of an unprecedented labour shortage. They were forced to devote multiplied energy toward securing supplies, in the face of unparalleled material shortage. Through absolute lack of physical plant—energy many were forced to sublet work to shops hundreds of miles distant.

In the face of these difficulties American machine and tool builders did this:

They supplied 90 per cent. of the gauges, micrometers, and measuring devices in use in our munition workshops, without which standardization of product and quantity are impossible. Nine shells out of ten produced in British shops owe their accuracy to those instruments. The Belgian Government's munition factory in France, employing 12,000 workers, has close upon 90 per cent. of its machine-tool equipment "made in America." Almost the same proportions obtain as regards the machine-tools in our own workshops. The great American "hustle" for civilization supplied them, and it is justly that the American Machinist asks, "What would have happened if this 90 per cent. had been lacking?"

HAPPY ANYHOW

WALT MASON

I know not how the weather man may run his old machine; I'll be as happy as I can, and keep my mind serene. Man cannot change the course of things by looking grim all day, so he is wise who whoops and sings, and says, "Hip, Hip, Hooray." When'er I am inclined to whine, I murmur to my soul, "No fierce protesting words of mine will lift things from the hole. The weather sharp will not dispel the gray clouds overhead, because I stand around and yell, and wish that I were dead. So let the clouds, all wet and gray, continue to collect; I still shall cry Hip, Hip Hooray, or words to that effect." Thus, as I go about my biz, I cheer up other gents; they say, "Great Scott, how blithe he is!" and borrow forty cents. Some droop and mope because they think our war with Kaiser Bill will put the country on the blink and all fair prospects Kill. But moping will not help to slay a single foe, that's flat; far better cry "Hip, Hip Hooray," and let it go at that.

American Consul

Relates Story of Vile Sub Horror—Almost Unbelievable — Deliberate Murder.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—"The submarine war grows more barbarous every day. It has now reached the plane of deliberate murder for every ship sunk and will so continue to the end. It is not the fault of the Germans that every torpedo does not produce a Lusitania massacre."

This is the Kaiser's unrestricted submarine warfare in the words of the man who probably knows more about the human side of the sea tragedy than any other—certainly more than any other American.

He is Wesley Frost, American Consul at Queenstown, the port on the southwest coast of Ireland, where all the Atlantic ocean lanes to Britain come together. Off the shores near Queenstown the thousands of ships which feed Britain pass by day and night.

Mr. Frost is in Washington for a rest. For over two years he has been in attendance at the funerals of merchant ships struck down by the underwater terror. It has been his task to collect the evidence as to sixty-five sinkings in which Americans were imperilled or slaughtered. He has seen the cemeteries on the Irish hillsides dotted with fresh mounds.

He has heard the shrieks of mothers for their murdered babies, seen men stark mad with the tortures of hunger and thirst, brought in from days and nights in foodless life-boats.

It is with difficulty that he can be induced to talk, but when he does, the full-throated indignation of this clean-cut young American is almost terrible in its intensity.

German Guilt Double.

"The German guilt is double," said Frost to-day. "In the first place, no civilized Government would have resorted to such methods, even when it was possible to sink ships occasionally without murdering non-combatants."

"Now that the arming of merchant ships and the effectiveness of the patrols make it impossible for the submarines to risk giving warning, they would drop it if they were 'white'."

The sporting word he uses explains much of the sort of man Frost is. Born back in Oberlin, Ohio, his life has been that of the sturdy young American who makes his way in the world by hard work and fighting fair. It is not strange that he has no use for the sophistries of "frightfulness," and calls murder by its real name.

Now that the submarines have been driven to attack ships submerged—the "murder roll" is bound to grow, Frost explained. Most ships, when struck by a torpedo, go down in two or three minutes, which gives no opportunities of escape to those below decks. Recent sinkings which came under his observation since the beginning of the ruthless warfare show this conclusively.

A freighter loaded with iron ore and convoyed by a destroyer went down in two minutes. Eighteen of her crew of twenty-six were drowned.

Another sunk in two minutes after being struck. She was hit in daylight, but the submarine was not seen. Twenty-eight of her crew of thirty-two perished. The Abosso sank in three minutes and thirty women and children died.

"Sinkings of this sort from now on will be the rule—not the exception," said Frost.

Larger Ships Sink Slower.

Only the large passenger ships will remain afloat long enough to launch the boats and get off the crew and passengers; and those will not float so long if struck in vital spots or by more than one torpedo.

The submarines are now so fearful of exposing themselves to the deck guns of slowly sinking ships that they seldom come up to question the escaping crews of passenger ships. Out of six passenger ship sinkings investigated by him, this happened in only one case—that of the Laconia, which was sunk near midnight.

Hidicous as this assassination from ambush is, it does not equal the wanton crimes committed in the days before "unlimited" warfare—when the submarines came to the surface and attacked with gunfire.

Black as Dirt About the Eyes

Liver Was All Upset and There Was Pain Under the Shoulder-blade—Two Interesting Letters.

Toronto, Ont., June 21st.—So many people suffer from derangements of the liver that we feel sure these two reports, just recently received, will prove interesting reading and valuable information to many readers of this paper.

Mrs. F. L. Harris, Keatley P. O. Sask., writes: "I was suffering from liver trouble—had a heavy pain under the shoulder-blade, the time, and was nearly as black as dirt around the eyes, so I concluded to try some of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I did so, and before I had taken one 25c. box the pain had left me and I commenced to gain in flesh, and by the time I had taken two boxes I was completely cured and felt like a new person. My trouble was caused by heavy work out-of-doors, and, of course, heavy eating and constipation. I would advise anyone suffering from kidney or liver trouble to give Dr. Chase's Pills a trial."

Mrs. Charles Terry, Tweed, Ont., writes: "Before I was married I was troubled with liver trouble. My liver became so enlarged that you could detect the swellings on either side, and it was only with difficulty that I could get my clothes on. A friend advised me to get Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and take them. I commenced this treatment, and used nine boxes, which cured me at that time. Then, about two or three years afterward I was troubled again with the swelling, but only on my right side. I secured some more Kidney-Liver Pills, and took them, which finally cured me. I have not been troubled in this way since. I can cheerfully recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to anyone having kidney or liver trouble."

"We have also found Dr. Chase's Linseed and Turpentine excellent for coughs and cold. In fact, any of Dr. Chase's medicines which we have used have been good."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25c. a box, 5 for $1.00, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

A Trick Wager.

"I will wager a fresh egg that you will descend from that chair before I ask you twice."

"Done," said the other man, who seemed determined not to obey the summons so obediently.

"Come down."

"I will not," was the reply.

"Then stay till I ask you a second time."

The man, having no desire to retain his high position till that period, came down from the chair, and his opponent won the wager.

The Hospital.
A letter appears in our columns to-day from Dr. Keegan, in which he explains the circumstances surrounding the case of the girl Arnold, whom we stated incorrectly in a recent issue to have died under the anaesthetic while being operated upon for appendicitis. We express regret for the error, though we can assure the doctor that not the least intention of criticism underlay the item. His account shows that if our report had been literally exact no blame whatever could have attached to the hospital staff. He makes an unnecessary apology for the length of his letter. We would gladly give many times the space to so important a subject and such valuable advice as he gives. No one, particularly in centres far from the hospital, should fail to read carefully his instructions for first treatment of this too often fatal malady.

Nor will anyone be disposed to question Dr. Keegan's claim, which he can justly be proud, for the efficiency of the surgical department of the hospital. While the most important, this is also the most satisfactory branch of an institution admirable in almost every other respect. Apart from the "figures" always the best test, we have had frequent testimony from outside observers, acquainted with the most up-to-date operating theatres in foreign hospitals, of the excellence of its equipment and of the work done in it. But it is not sufficiently understood that it is not easily the most important, and needs demands which should always have precedence of all others. It is a tribute to the hospital that it is continually overcrowded, but the overcrowding is not always unavoidable. The hospital is not an invalid or Convalescent Home, and cases such as the one which Dr. Keegan specifies, of the man of 78, should not be allowed to occur. The cause and the remedy would seem to rest mainly with the out-patients, who should exercise far more discrimination in recommending cases and should remember that the hospital has to fill the needs of practically the whole country. The sovereign treatment of the difficulty of course, is other hospitals, or at least another hospital. That is another question, however, though it is one which the outpatients would do well to consider. They would consider it better if they could free themselves of the national obsession, as we might call it, that everything that needs to be done should be done by the Government. The matter of hospitals is one which more than most furnishes a subject for private concern and enterprise.

AN APOLOGY.
We have received a complaint that that Most Useful Gentleman known as the Bat-Boy has been sadly neglected in our column. We hasten to offer our apologies, and herewith offer the following dedication to appease the wrongs they feel they have suffered:—

THE BAT BOYS LAMENT.
Aw, gee, this waiting time is tough. I gotta wait for Mitt, the grocer; And carry eggs and other stuff. I tried to quit but dad says, "No, sir, No loafin' for you, on the sly. You'll work or else I'll know the reason."
I guess my dad don't know that I Was regular bat-boy all last season.

THE BAT BOYS LAMENT.
Gosh darn it all, I hate this gim. It almost makes a fellow bleary. It old Mitt knew I talk to TIM And got a big league ball from CA-REY.
He wouldn't make me sweep the store And carry cheese to folks and scold me.
But you just bet if I got sore This grocer's job won't never hold me.
When next week comes I'm gonna stop This rotten job. You'll see me stay-in.
Around the ball park where the cop Can't even stop me when they're playing.

Deluge Sweeps Over Suburbs.

About 1.30 p.m. yesterday the heaviest downpour of rain ever experienced by the oldest residents of Portugal Cove and St. Phillips poured from the heavens in one great deluge. Cabmen belonging to the former place say that while passing Windsor Lake the rain fell in drops as large as marbles, making the water appear as if it was one mass of boiling foam. Several dwellings situated at the foot of inclines or hills at both places mentioned were flooded out. At Pouch Cove, Torbay and other places the rain was exceptional, but not so severe. The rain fell in a belt extending from Signal Hill to about 100 yards outside the water front at Portugal Cove. So heavy was the down-pour at that place that fishermen feared the roofs of stages would break in. Some slight damage was done to fishing property, while the public roads are in some places literally torn to pieces.

Wait! Watch! Profit by Our Semi-Annual Furniture Sale.

We have been months preparing for this great event, which will eclipse all other Sales, as we were fortunate in securing large stocks of material ahead and will now give the benefit to our customers and the public generally.

We offer Bureaus from $8.50 that cannot be imported and sold less than $12.50; other furniture in proportion. You ask us why? The answer is: We patronize Home Industry, have goods made for us right in building; anything made to order as required.

Call in and see us. Watch papers for further announcements.

Corner Water and Springdale Streets.

Household Notes.
Vacuum cleaners are not hard on carpets, as is sometimes supposed. A good Sunday morning breakfast dish is fried chicken broilers.
A pleasant drink is made of ice water and sugar with bruised mint leaves.
Plant mint near a waterspout if you would always have plenty of it for mint sauce.
Clean eggs with vinegar. Dip the cloth in the vinegar and rub the soil off the eggs.
Rusks are greatly improved by the addition of nutmeg, cinnamon and currants.
Keep cooking spices in shakers—then they will be much more evenly distributed.

A Man's Privilege.

By RUTH CAMERON.

SOUTH CAMERON

I heard several men taunting another man the other day because he had taken a new stand on some national question. "You don't talk much the way you used to talk," they said. "That's a little right," said he, "I've changed my mind."

"I thought that was a woman's privilege," said they. "It's a woman's privilege to change her mind without any logical reason," said he, "and a man to change it because he has seen good reason to and isn't too pig headed."

"I didn't like his inference that all feminine changes of mind are illogical. That was unfair. But I did like his realizing that it is a man's privilege, not his shame, to change his mind for good reason."

True consistency does not mean keeping true to opinions but to principles. If new facts prove your opinions to have been wrong, true consistency will oblige you to change them.

"Didn't Just Like the Sound of His Voice"

I have read of some great man, I think it was John Fiske, the tribune that "he always said a thing because he thought it was true, never made the mistake of thinking it was true because he had said it."

That is the error into which it is so easy to fall, to say a thing, like the sound of it, pledge your allegiance to it, and go on saying it, whether right or wrong, the rest of your life.

A man's changes of mind, if they are the right kind of changes, are the marks that indicate his growth and progress just as the circles indicate the growth of a tree.

On what subjects have you changed your mind in the last few years?

The Gas Range!

More Than a Privilege, An Honor

Nay, it's far more than his privilege, it's his duty and his honor.

Incidentally he had changed to my side of the fence on this particular question. I wonder if I would have felt the same admiration if he had changed to the other side. I hope so. Or should I have wondered if unworthy motives had influenced him. I hope not.

But whatever personal feelings may intrude themselves, there is no possible doubt that it is a mark of distinction not a disgrace to be able to change one's mind.

It is unlikely if not impossible that one's first convictions on all subjects should be perfectly right.

And so it is unlikely if not impossible that the man who always stands staunchly by his original opinions and makes a point of never changing

The Gas Range means comfort for the housewife; shorter kitchen hours for her, and a cleaner kitchen. It is a great mistake to think that cooking with gas is expensive.

Whenever a woman becomes used to gas for cooking, thoughts of a coal or wood stove fill her with gloom. A Gas range is so much easier to operate, so efficient for all kinds of cooking, and so much cleaner, that the idea of going back to the old style methods is decidedly unpleasant. Yet in winter many housewives think they must use a coal or wood stove, because there is no other way of heating the kitchen. THERE IS ANOTHER WAY AND IT IS FAR BETTER THAN THE OLD. THIRST

Thirst is a condition of the human throat caused by lack of lubrication. Owing to the rapid and pernicious spread of the prohibition sentiment, good, soul-satisfying lubricants are becoming scarcer than sack suits in South Africa.

The most popular thirst in this nation is thirst for knowledge, which drives thousands of our young men to college every year with parched intellects and golf sticks. When a young man becomes so thirsty for knowledge that he is willing to peel potatoes and sleep on a wire cot in the basement of the gymnasium in order to get it, the chances are about fifteen to two that he will absorb and retain more knowledge than the boy who sleeps in silk pyjamas and doesn't peel anything but the pasteboards. The kind of thirst that keeps a good old father back home humped over with night work, sending money to a boy who knows more about poker than he ever will about physics, is poorly rewarded with track medals and charity horses.

The thirst for knowledge drives our young men to college with parched intellects and golf sticks.

One of the most depressing forms of thirst is the deadly thirst for music which has attacked the vocal chords of the willing and unsuspected amateur. One of the most terrifying sights known to the travelling public is that of the self-possessed male vocalist with an unquenchable thirst for ragtime music who camps in front of the hotel piano on Sunday afternoon and throws huge chunks of nasal resonance up the elevator shaft. Why is it that our laws seize upon the inoffensive form of the stray milch cow and place her in gloomy confinement, and at the same time allow the Sabbath to be desecrated by the hotel piano assassin?

The thirst for travel is a very commendable variety which has been considerably reduced in scope by the European war. Prior to the outbreak of the war this thirst took great numbers of Americans to foreign lands and enabled them to part with their incomes in a scientific manner. There is nothing that will make a stout, red-cheeked income look blue about the mouth quicker than a long stretch of foreign travel, unless it is starting a daily newspaper in a bi-monthly town.

Some kinds of thirst are all right to cultivate and leave no regrets or headaches in their wake. When we learn to discriminate in our thirsts, as we do in our neckties, we will have more money in the bank and fewer clothes in our vest pockets.

St. Bon's Reunion.

His Grace the Archbishop will deliver the oration at the annual reunion of St. Bon's Alumni, which takes place on St. Bonaventure's Day, July 14th.

Solemn Requiem Mass for the repose of the souls of the students who "died at the front" will be celebrated by Rt. Rev. Mgr. St. John, Chancellor of Diocese, and the offices will be sung by a picked choir under the direction of Rev. Bro. Fennessy. The Prime Minister will preside and certainly this year's reunion promises to be up to the high standard set by the Association, which it has maintained for several years, and which makes this gathering unique in as much as while it is very edifying, it is also a social meeting of old friends, that revives the pleasantest memories of old times.

Stay the Executioner.

Grand Falls, June 16th, 1917.

Pansy League, St. John's.

My Dear Friends,—I have been a member of your league for only six months, trying to help in the good cause. But sorry to learn you that I cannot be a friend any longer as I am about to be shot. The innocent have to die as well as the guilty. We are charged with injuring people's gardens. Two gardens, I think it was, were trodden down. Of course there should be some allowance. The fences are so low that we can almost walk over them. Majority about 3 1/2 feet high. Now what do you think of that? I think it cruelty to poor house pets to have to die for such a reason. I have only known us (dogs) to have to die for murder, killing of sheep, goats, etc. But such are not in this paper town "sheep and goats". Rather than die I would like to know if there is any one in your League who would like to have me for a pet? I am only eight months old, curly black coat, kind to children. I live with the hens and chicken, my only friends. Also two kittens; we have fine fun.

Would like to hear from you by return mail before I am shot.

I remain, yours truly,
Care A. Noel, Grand Falls.

Country Store To-Night

Don't miss to-night, for all the things must go; there is a wonderful mixed lot of all manner of lovely things, glass, china, Battenburg cloths, Japanese cloths, linen napkins, heaps of things too numerous to mention. On Saturday night the popular Grocery Store, and lots of fun, good pictures and good, clean vaudeville. The Country Store season is drawing to an end, therefore all the lovely things will be given.

McMurdo's Store News

THURSDAY, June 21st, 1917.

That we have just opened a new consignment of the Palmolive preparations will be good news to many. This line of goods is one of the most popular ones we stock, and it is always a pleasure to sell it, as we know that all the different specialties give good satisfaction. We have the Soap, 20c. a cake, Talcum put up in attractive packages, 40c. a tin; the Shaving Soap in a unique metal case, 45c. the Liquid Shampoo Soap, in a dainty bottle, 50c. and several combinations 80c. each. We shall be glad to allow anybody to inspect these fine goods.

AT CONVALESCENT HOSPITAL, Pte. W. J. Sotherton, of Portugal Cove, a badly wounded Gallipoli and Beaumont Hamel hero, who returned some time ago from the front, is now at the Soldiers' Convalescent Hospital, where it is hoped he will be restored to his former health.

For The Country House!

In our Furniture Dept. to-day may be seen some particularly attractive Porch & Garden Chairs.

These Chairs are all-wood, light stained finish, fitted with adjustable leg rests, and can be folded away when not in use.

If you want light yet serviceable Furniture for the Summer House or Garden, you will find it well worth while to see our stock, as we carry a large selection at exceptionally moderate prices.

The Arnold Case.

DR. KEEGAN EXPLAINS AND GIVES VALUABLE ADVICE.

Editor Evening Telegram.
 Dear Sir,—In Tuesday's edition of your paper you published an item titled "Died Under Operation". It referred to the case of a girl named Bessie Arnold of Alexander Bay, who suffered from acute appendicitis and who was admitted to the General Hospital in a moribund state on Monday morning last.

The statement no doubt was inserted thoughtlessly in your rush of journalism, but as it is incorrect and misleading and might easily scare people against an early operation for this highly fatal malady, I shall be obliged if you will kindly permit me to state the facts of the case and at the same time say a few things in reference to the disease that may be of public benefit.

Five days before this girl's admission to hospital she was stricken with a violently acute attack of appendicitis, and suffered intensely. She was far away from a doctor and I think eventually had to be brought to one. She was then ordered on to hospital, and the parents' description of driving the child over a rough road of five miles, from their home to the railway station, in the greatest agony, and her suffering during a thirty-hour railway journey in an accommodation train, was heartrending in the extreme. As a result of the journey the child developed a rapidly spreading peritonitis and was conveyed to the hospital in a dying condition.

Her friends were told there was no hope, but nevertheless I decided on a quick operation and to avoid delay had her clergyman minister to her on the operating table.
 She did not die during the operation nor under chloroform, as your item stated; on the contrary she rallied somewhat and at 2 p.m. was able to take some fluid nourishment by the mouth and talked with her father. The system, however, was overwhelmed with germs of the disease and she died on Monday night. Her life undoubtedly could have been saved by an operation performed forty-eight hours before, or even just before she made the journey, but this is some of the hard luck that a surgeon meets with.

For the benefit of those living far away from a doctor I would like to point out the symptoms of this very serious affection in its acute stage and also to give a little advice. Pain in the lower right part of the abdomen, coming on suddenly, is marked. If this pain is increased by pressing the hand on the part, and if there is vomiting, you probably have an acute attack of appendicitis to deal with and the patient should immediately be put to bed. There are two very important things to be remembered in the treatment, 1st, starvation; nothing should be given by the mouth except water for forty-eight hours. 2nd, no purgative of any kind should be administered; the usual household remedy, castor oil, will invariably kill the patient. Nature attempts her cure by spilling the bowel; art in the form of castor oil destroys this attempt. This treatment will certainly modify and may even stop the disease, but operation is the only safe and sure remedy for the affection.

During the past few years a large number of valuable lives have been saved in this country by the surgical aid we are able to give the public, and as practically all the acute cases of appendicitis pass through my hands I can write with some authority, and I have no hesitation in saying from my personal experience that even in its most acute form 98 per cent. of appendix cases can be saved if operated on within three days of the initial symptoms. Every hour tells add it is therefore imperative to perform the operation as soon as possible.

Looking up the Hospital records for the year 1916 I find we operated on 113 cases. A large number of these were from the outports, many of them of a very acute and virulent nature, yet we only had two deaths. In 1915 the record was even better and I am glad to be able to say that no hospital anywhere can beat this record and few can come up to it.

I regret that more surgery cannot be done in the outports and that the Hospital is always so overcrowded and that in many cases there is delay on this account, but this is inevitable because there is very little discrimination used in the selection of cases, because many cases are sent in a hopeless condition, old men and women who would die happier in their own home. Even to-night, since starting this letter, a man of 78 years of age was sent over from Harbour Grace and conveyed to hospital in an unconscious state. While this condition of things continues it is impossible for us to make room for serious cases that might be saved and as a result some valuable young life has to be sacrificed.

Apologizing for taking up so much of your valuable space.
 Truly yours,
 L. E. KEEGAN.

which they are convinced depends the whole trend of civilization. These are not the fruits of the mission, but the mission gave occasion for their most emphatic expression. If that be valuable we may congratulate ourselves on the results of our efforts.

WHY AMERICAN SOLDIERS SHOULD BE TRAINED AT THE FRONT.

BEHIND THE BRITISH LINES IN FRANCE; CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.—The use of machine gun as a weapon for offensive operations and for indirect fire by elevating the gun so that the bullets will fall into the trenches of the enemy is one of the recent developments of warfare, which convinces the British army that the American Expeditionary Forces should be trained within the sound of the guns at the front. This change in the method of using machine guns has been brought about within a year. It shows, say the British officers, the rapidity with which methods of fighting are being altered and that if capable officers were sent to the front from the United States the systems they learned might be out of date before the troops they were to teach arrived in France. Less than a year ago the machine gun was regarded primarily as a weapon for direct fire, that is, for mowing down the advancing enemy. It was thus used chiefly for defensive methods; its usefulness was limited to rather rare periods when the enemy was actually attempting an attack. But to-day the machine gun, though retaining its importance in this respect, has become still more a weapon of indirect fire, and by far the greater proportion of the machine gun casualties nowadays are caused through the use of the weapon. In one highly valued type of so-called indirect fire, the machine gun is carefully trained by day on a stretch of road or communication which the enemy is using at night for bringing up supplies and reinforcements. The machine gun tripod is carefully adjusted to command this road and stakes are placed so that the bullets can be sprayed over the road. Then at night, although the road is invisible, the machine gun is turned on at intervals of perhaps an hour, sweeping the road clear of any enemy supply columns that may be there and in effect making the use of that road impossible even at night. As in the case of the machine gun evolution is constantly in progress in the use of bayonet, in bombing, in trenching, sapping, in counter attack. Nowhere say the army officers, can the latest developments of each of these specialties be taught so well as in the training camps just behind the trenches, where specialists direct from yesterday's fighting are at hand to instruct the novice. Another valuable feature of a training camp at the front is that the soldier is there brought rapidly, almost unwittingly, into the atmosphere of modern warfare, so that when he is finally directed into the front line of his unit he finds nothing particularly new or strange to him. No matter how well the troops might be trained in the United States they would find the melee of actual battle psychologically very trying, and war experts no longer laugh at psychology. Training the mind for surprise novelties on the battlefield is as important as the physical side of training, say the British authorities.

That 'Suspicious' Craft.

Was Formerly a Hun and was Sold at Auction to Norwegian for £10,000.

The subjoined excerpt from the London Daily Mail concerning the "suspicious" yacht that was here recently, will, no doubt, be of interest, whilst it suffices to disclaim the unfounded and unjust allegations made regarding her. She was formerly the Germania and was re-christened the Ariadne by her new owner:—
 Herr Krupp's steel racing yacht Germania, which is said to have cost £45,000, was sold on the Baltic and Shipping Exchange yesterday for £10,000 to Captain Hannevig, Norwegian, who is a ship insurance broker in London.

"That goes to Norway, and he's the best sport I've met for a long time," said the auctioneer, Mr. Harry Kellock, when he knocked the fine yacht down to Capt. Hannevig after a spirited contest.
 The Germania, the auctioneer said, was built for a sporting reason, to give "a certain crowned head, the owner of the Meteor," in other words the Kaiser, a chance of racing. It was one of the fastest things that ever had keel put on her, and if a man did not want to race it would make a lovely summer home when the war was over. The boat had been overhauled by the Admiralty Marshal, dry docked, cleaned and coated, and was in excellent condition. There was over 100 tons of lead in the keel and ballast. The present price of lead is £30 a ton.

New Yachtsman Owner.
 Captain Hannevig is stated to have bought the Germania for his own use. He was also the purchaser for £1,600 of a 51-ton racing cutter, the Paula III, previously owned by Herr Ludwig Sanders.
 Mr. Frank Dixon, of Harris and Dixon, Ltd., shipowners, bought Lascar II, a steel sailing yacht of 357 tons, formerly owned by Herr Walter von Bruning, for £2,500. The yacht has been all over the world. A fourth German yacht of 29 tons was sold for £570.—London Daily Mail, May 24.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, To-day.
 An official report from British Headquarters in France to-day says: After the failure of three hostile counter attacks north of the Souchez River reported in this morning's communiqué, the enemy made a fourth attempt later in the night to recover the lost positions and was again completely repulsed. The weather was less favourable for flying yesterday, but the work in conjunction with our artillery continued with good results. One German aeroplane was brought down in an air fight and one other was shot down by our anti-aircraft. Two of ours failed to return.

MURDERED CHILDREN BURIED.

LONDON, To-day.
 Sixteen children, only two of whom were over five years of age, victims of the last German air raid over London, were given a public funeral this afternoon. Their bodies were laid in a common grave in an east end cemetery over which a monument will be placed. Seldom if ever in the history of this country have children been accorded such a funeral. The Marquis of Crewe attended on behalf of the Government, while Major-General Sir Francis Lloyd, General Officer Commanding the London District, represented the army. There were messages from King George and the Queen, while the Bishop of London, assisted by the Bishop of Stepney, conducted the service in the church, which was a bower of flowers sent by children from all parts of the country. Most of the floral offerings contained perfumery words of sympathy, but others did not mince matters. These nearly bore inscriptions like "To our children, murdered by the German aircraft."

BALFOUR TELLS OF HIS MISSION.

LONDON, To-day.
 Arthur J. Balfour, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, gave an account of his stewardship in connection with his mission to the United States to members of the Commons in a luncheon to-day arranged in his honor by the Empire Parliamentary Association in the beautiful dining room on the terrace. The guests were members of Parliament and Cabinet Ministers, with American Ambassador Walter Hines Page and a few Colonial representatives as the only outsiders. Ex-Premier Asquith presided in token of the non-political character of the occasion, with Balfour on his right and Ambassador Page and Premier

Lloyd George on his left. Other members of the Cabinet sat at the central table. After a cordial welcome home voiced by Asquith, Balfour said, "I undertook the headship of the American Mission with some reluctance and diffidence, I felt it so easy to do harm and perhaps not so easy to do good. But looking back I feel that no harm has been done and much good. My colleagues performed their various tasks with great skill, tasks which involved the bringing together of the forces of the United States and Britain. The success of the mission was not due to the personal qualifications of your representatives, but to far deeper and more permanent causes which must give us all great cause for gratification, I say nothing of the hospitality of the United States which is proverbial. I need not dwell on the boundless kindness shown us, which was so obviously from the heart. The American people would have given us the same hospitality under any circumstances. What moves me and all British and France too is something deeper, namely the tremendous spontaneous-enthusiasm of America for what is our common cause and the deep feeling of sympathy which manifestly animates the entire American community north, south, east and west. It was not in the power of any mission or any group of individuals to create that feeling. Our mission was merely the occasion for its manifestation, it gave Americans a welcome chance to show what they felt in the cause of world freedom, and this is the greatest and profoundest result of our trip. This is the result of which the value cannot be measured by the mere effect it will have on the present war, but which will outlast many generations. Thus the mission has been the occasion of the most beneficent development of International rights in the history of the world. Most alliances in past history have been based on temporary agreements between nations for the pursuit of certain aims and ambitions and therefore passed with the passing occasion. But co-operation between England and America, because it is not based on the fact that each nation hopes to get something out of the present war but on a deep congruity of ideals, will endure as long as the two nations are content to pursue these ideals, which I pray God may be forever. Our alliance is based on the great moral consideration that we alike do not wish to use war as an instrument of expansion and so we here may be certain that the United States will not leave us until our great ends are accomplished. There is nothing I am more certain of than this, that the United States having put its hand to plow will not turn back. Americans have carefully studied the origin and aims of the war and have come irrevocably to the conclusion that with the victory of the Allies is bound up the whole future of civilization. They will not refuse any sacrifices or effort which may bring a happy fruition like the fruition on which they are convinced depends the whole trend of civilization. These are not the fruits of the mission, but the mission gave occasion for their most emphatic expression. If that be valuable we may congratulate ourselves on the results of our efforts.

And the Worst is Yet to Come--

Looking up the Hospital records for the year 1916 I find we operated on 113 cases. A large number of these were from the outports, many of them of a very acute and virulent nature, yet we only had two deaths. In 1915 the record was even better and I am glad to be able to say that no hospital anywhere can beat this record and few can come up to it.

Opposition Resume Obstruction Tactics

A LIVELY TIME AT THE HOUSE—BUSINESS DONE—NIL.

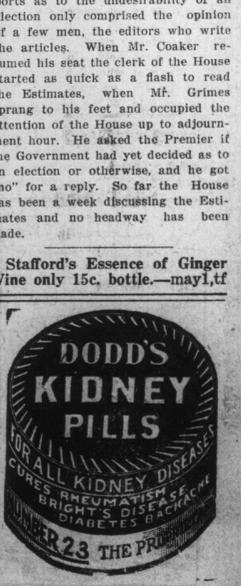

With renewed determination to fight the Government, as challenged, because of no answer being forthcoming from the Premier as to whether or not an election or prolongation of Parliament will take place this year, the Opposition never let the Estimates budge during yesterday afternoon's session! The usual half-holiday attendance of spectators filled the galleries and an occasional round of applause vied with indignation during the really enjoyable thrills and climax worked up by some of the speakers. While the long talks against time went on, there were as many members absent as were present. A social gathering, marked by a feast of "oratory" occurred in the lobby, the junior member for the Southern Shore playing the leading role. Both sides took "watch and watch" on deck in case any vote should be taken, though the Premier held the "bridge" for the whole sitting with his second hand the Colonial Secretary constantly on the "look-out."

Mr. Coaker made a long speech on the Estimates, dealing mainly with the Auditor General's Report and exposing what he considered "graft." He did not see why ten thousand dollars should be given to the District of St. George's as an extra special grant to pay for washouts, and thought the Colonial Secretary was unpatriotic for accepting $1,742 for performing the duties of Deputy Chief Censor. Mr. Coaker also dealt with other amounts amounting to $16,629, paid in connection with censorship and telegraphy of war news. In particular he would like to know what the Colonial Secretary did to earn that amount and other officials in that department who get extras arising out of the war. After some heated debate, Mr. Bennett gave a satisfactory answer to Mr. Coaker. The former wished to inform the latter that he never took a dollar from the Government that he did not give returns for and was not in the Department for what he could get out of it, as he often gave away as much to charity. Continuing, Mr. Coaker hoped to see Mr. Bennett's name down for $1,742 on one of the Patriotic Lists. He next went on to tell how the country had been bled last year by paying $75,000 for Home Defence service; advocated night schools; challenged the Premier to open the Government Districts of St. John's East and Fortune Bay, and have the seats filled, and if he (the Premier) won them he was satisfied to submit to a postponement of the election. The advisability of commandeering a steamer for the Labrador service was next talked of by Mr. Coaker.

Mr. Piccott—"What about commandeering your large motor boat?"
 Mr. Coaker—"Yes, for quarter the amount you paid for the one last year." He did not see why Mr. Piccott did not get a seat in the Upper House, as he was entitled to it, and now that there is a vacancy there, he should be appointed to fill it.
 Mr. Piccott said that sectarianism was the reason he didn't have a seat there.

Mr. Coaker said that he learned the same principle applied to the Central District Court, depriving Mr. Frank Morris of his appointment. It was time, he thought, to cut out sectarian cries. He then lauded Inspector O'Reilly, who he said was the best and most official servant in the public service; made rings around Mr. Devereaux about the lobster fishery and intimated that the press reports as to the undesirability of an election only comprised the opinion of a few men, the editors who write the articles. When Mr. Coaker resumed his seat the clerk of the House started as quick as a flash to read the Estimates, when Mr. Grimes sprang to his feet and occupied the attention of the House up to adjournment hour. He asked the Premier if the Government had yet decided as to an election or otherwise, and he got "no" for a reply. So far the House has been a week discussing the Estimates and no headway has been made.

ITALIAN OFFENSIVE.

ROME, June 20. The Italians resumed the offensive yesterday. The war office announced the capture of Austrian positions on Monte Ortigara and 936 prisoners. The Italian attack yesterday was a resumption of the fighting which began on June 11 on the Trentino front, southeast of the City of Trent, the capture of which is one of the chief Italian objectives. In the first attack the Italians took positions on Monte Ortigara and carried Agnello Pass.

REPORT FROM HEADQUARTERS.

LONDON, June 20. The report from general headquarters issued today reads: Posts east of Monchy-le-Preux from which our advance detachments were compelled to withdraw on the occasion of the enemy's attack against Infantry Hill on Monday morning, have now been re-established. Last night the enemy heavily bombarded our line immediately north of the Souchez River, and delivered three counter attacks against the positions captured by us yesterday in that neighborhood. In each case the attacking troops were completely repulsed.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, June 20. The official statement says: On the Arras battlefield, our troops gained ground slightly during the day south of the Coleval River, where we captured thirty-five prisoners. In addition to the captured already reported, four German field guns were taken by us east of Messines in the course of our recent advance in this area on Thursday night. Valuable work was performed by our aeroplanes yesterday, in spite of unsettled weather. Bombs dropped on an enemy dump caused an explosion. Six German machines were brought down in air fighting, and three of our machines failed to return.

U. S. TO CONTROL EXPORTS.

WASHINGTON, June 20. President Wilson is expected to sign to-day an executive order putting into operation the Export Control Act just passed by Congress.

RUSSIAN OFFICIAL.

LONDON, June 20. The official statement issued at Petrograd says: Fusillades and aerial activities occurred on all fronts.

THE WEEK'S SHIPPING LOSSES HEAVY.

LONDON, June 20. The weekly list of British losses in torpedoes ships, which will be issued to-day, will show the highest total of many weeks, the number of ships sunk being comparable to the worst week since the U-boat campaign began. Week for week for the last three months show that the U-boat activities run in waves, and it is assumed that this week is the crest of the period of superactivity noticed the previous week. Last week included one day which is regarded as a record for the number of vessels lost. The situation, however, is not regarded pessimistically by naval men, who insist that the Admiralty methods of fighting the submarines are constantly growing in efficiency. In support of this they point to the constantly increasing number of boats which escape the submarines. The Germans are resorting to every possible method of circumventing patrols, and submarines frequently change the zone of their operations. Twenty-seven British ships of more than 1,600 tons were sunk, according to the weekly British summary given out to-day. Five British vessels of under 1,600 tons were also sent to bottom. No fishing vessels were destroyed. The foregoing figures of British ships lost as a result of Germany's submarine warfare, show a larger number of vessels than in any of the six preceding weeks. Not since the seven-day period ending April 25 has a greater number of ships been destroyed. During that week 51 ships, 38 over and 13 under 1,600 tons were sunk. The heaviest total since the Teuton submarine campaign was opened in February was registered April 21st when 40 steamers of more than 1,600 tons were sunk, and 15 vessels of smaller tonnage were sent to bottom. Since the middle of April, when the undersea boat activity recorded its highest total, 302 British ships, of which 220 measured more than 1,600 tons, were sunk, the weekly totals being as follows:

Week ending	Over 1600 tons	Under 1600 tons
April 21	40	15
April 28	38	13
May 5	24	22
May 12	18	5
May 19	18	9
May 26	13	1
June 2	11	3
June 10	25	10
June 17	27	5
Total	220	83

WASHINGTON, June 20. President Wilson is expected to sign to-day an executive order putting into operation the Export Control Act just passed by Congress.

ing into operation the Export Control Act just passed by Congress. A plan of organization and general export programme, drawn up by Secretaries Lansing and Resfield, was taken up at yesterday's Cabinet meeting. The Act will be administered by an expert council made up of representatives of State, War, Navy and Commerce Departments, the Food Administration and others to be selected by the State and Commerce Departments. Administrative details will be handled by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce which will be enlarged by the addition of an export licensing division. Matters of international consequence will be decided by the State Department. Food questions will be left to the food administration. Coal and wheat will be the first two commodities to come under the operation of the Act, and a Presidential proclamation specifying these two probably will accompany the executive orders. Heavy grain purchases by European neutrals, it was said, influenced the Government to hasten the putting of the Export Control Act into operation. Alarmed at the prospects that the United States was preparing to exercise the strictest supervision over food shipments, neutrals, it is declared, have come into the American wheat market and obtained contracts for enormous quantities of the cereal. Much of this now probably will never leave the country, and if the food bills pass purchasers can be forced to disgorge their holdings under the embargo clause.

LINER 'RAY STATE' LOST.

BOSTON, June 20. The Warren Liner, 'Ray State', from Boston, May 31, for Liverpool, has been sunk by a German submarine. Advice to the company to-day stated all the members of the crew had been saved. The Ray State was under the command of Capt. Alexander Penton, was armed, and carried a crew of 50. Her cargo was valued at upwards of $2,000,000. The Bay State was a vessel of 5,583 tons gross, was built in 1915.

STEAMER HIT BY ESCAPES.

NEW YORK, June 20. The Associated Press this afternoon carries the following: The passenger steamship Ansonia, 5,153 tons gross register, owned by the Cunard Line, was hit by a torpedo and badly damaged on her last trip from a Canadian port, it was learned here to-day. The attack took place off the Irish coast. Reports said that while the liner was crippled, she managed to make her way into a nearby port, where she is now on dry dock. The Ansonia has been in the government service since June, 1915, except for brief periods, when she was used in the Cunard Line trade out of New York. She was last here in April.

DUTCH STEAMER SUNK.

BOSTON, June 20. The Dutch steamer Pendijk, which left Boston May 13th for Rotterdam with grain for the Holland government, has been sunk, according to advices received by agents here to-day. The first reports gave no details as to the safety of the crew.

BRITISH STEAMER SUNK.

BOSTON, June 20. The sinking of the British steamer Eleje, presumably by a German submarine, is reported in a cable message received to-day by the Leyland Line from Capt. Pierce, the commander. The vessel left Boston June 8th for Manchester, England, with a general cargo. The message made no reference to the crew.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, June 20. Heavy artillery fighting is in progress on the Aisne and Champagne fronts, says to-day's official statement. Early this morning the Germans carried on a severe bombardment of French positions near Launfau Hill and in the region of Mont-Carmelux a German infantry attack was dispersed.

GERMAN RESERVES.

PARIS, June 20. General Raide La Croix publishes in the Temps the result of his study supposedly from authoritative sources, on the present number of German reserves. He estimates that the grand total of German troops of all kinds and classes up to June 1st reached 13,130,000, and that this total was depleted by losses of 3,630,000, 2,200,000 of whom have been rendered unfit through wounds and 1,130,000 resident in foreign countries. General Le Croix figures that Germany has 575,000 reserves with which to cover her losses until November, or 115,000 a month plus 85,000 monthly of those who recover from their wounds, at a grand total of 200,000 a month. The General points out that German losses in April and May have been at least 300,000 monthly, making a debit balance which he says has been met by a shortening of the German front and fewer attacks. The absence of reserves has caused, he claims, an obvious shift from the old tactics of the German general staff.

NORTHCLIFFE SAYS WAR JUST BEGINNING.

BOSTON, June 20. The war, in the opinion of Lord Northcliffe, British Commissioner to the United States, is just beginning. In a communication from him read to a meeting to further the Red Cross Fund, Northcliffe said he based his opinion on the result of much experience at the front.

HOSPITAL PRESSURE RELIEVED.

LONDON, June 20. A despatch to the Daily Mail from the British headquarters in France, says the supply of doctors, anesthetics and nurses has been immensely increased during the last week by the rapidity of the American organization, which already has taken over the complete work in a number of our hospitals free for work near the front. I know of no finer example of American promptitude and thoroughness, the correspondent adds.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

LONDON, June 20. The principle of Woman Suffrage was adopted in the Commons last night by the overwhelming majority of 330 votes, Sir Frederick Banbury's amendment against the proposal being rejected. The entire evening was occupied in debating the Banbury amendment, which called for the omitting of the sections of the Bill giving suffrage to women. The debate, while showing the existence of a still considerable opposition to the reform, revealed no new argument. Many speakers supported the amendment on the grounds that the present Parliament is too stale to possess an authentic mandate to deal with such an important question. Others appeared to fear that granting the vote to women would lead eventually to women being elected to sit in Parliament. The argument that a large body of women were indifferent to the cause was employed by several members, who advocated a female plebiscite. Ramsey MacDonald, Socialist representative, strongly supported giving women the vote, as did Lord Cecil, Sir Joseph Compton Rickett, President of the National Council of Evangelist Researches, said that giving women the vote meant their entrance into Parliament. Government and Diplomatic service, but he urged

MRS. PANKHURST IN RUSSIA.

PETROGRAD, June 20. Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, British Suffragist leader, made an unexpected arrival in Petrograd yesterday. She appeared in the best of health, and at once called upon the Root Commission and discussed at length what might be done to assist Russia in directing all the forces of the new democracy toward the struggle with a common foe. In conversation with newspaper correspondents, Mrs. Pankhurst said she had come to Russia to explain to the men and women of the new republic the attitude of British democracy toward the war.

IN EAST AFRICA.

LONDON, June 20. An official statement relating to operations in East Africa made public to-night, reads: On June 10th, operations were begun by our forces at Lindi (a port in German East Africa) with the object of clearing the enemy from the shores of the estuary of Lukledi River. Aided by the fire of warships a surprise landing was effected in the vicinity of Marwaki on the Estuary. A German detachment which for some time had occupied the place and mounted a naval gun there, was driven towards Metama, 23 miles to the southwest. On June 12 our patrols from the direction of Kilwa destroyed an enemy food supply depot at Utigari.

Negroes Threaten to Cause Trouble.

Quite a number of negroes are now in the city, having drifted here with a rough tide recently. Four of them, burly fellows, who evidently had put many "spots on the crackle," created a scene on Duckworth Street last evening. They apparently had a "bone to pick" though in typical cowardly fashion, with some white man rival, one of them, it was said, flourishing a revolver and another a razor. The yells of the darkies attracted a crowd. They told the police that they were greatly incensed over a remark passed and were determined to have an explanation from the man who made it. Immediately they were dispersed and reminded of the principle of the manly art, that one of them was sufficient to carry on their proposed job, and incidentally given a gentle hint to drop their intentions.

Sergt "Scottie" Allen

Returning on Furlough. Word has been received that Benjamin, better known here as "Scottie," Allen, will be here some time next month on extended furlough. He is a Sergeant and Musketry Instructor with an English Regiment. He offered his services with the Newfoundland Regiment several times and was rejected as often. Then he went to the Old Country, notwithstanding that he had a family here, and volunteered to do his "bit." He was accepted. He entered the ranks of an English Regiment as a private and worked his way through rapidly, being now a Drill Instructor. His many friends here will be glad to welcome him back.

Missing Widow Safe.

Yesterday the Minister of Justice received a message from Magistrate Somerton, at Trinity, stating that the missing widow, Isabella Tippett, of Little Catalina, who had been reported as missing, turned up O.K. yesterday, but gave no information as to where she had been. She is reported as being slightly demented.
