Eczema Covered Arms of This Healthy Child

Mrs. Alex. Marshall, Sprucevale, Ont., writes—

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT
GERALD S. DOYLE, Distributor.

A QUEEN UNCROWNED

—OR—
THE STORY IN THE LONE INN.

CHAPTER I.

"What?" said the child's voice, so close to his elbow that he started; and looking down he saw a little boy, apparently about twelve years of age—the most elfish mite of childhood he had ever beheld—with a small, thin, dark face, precocious beyond its years, and lit up by a pair of the most wonderful black eyes that ever were seen. His dress was an odd affair—a short red flannel skirt under a boy's jacket, and a boy's cap crushed down over a tangled mass of short, thick curls from beneath which gleamed its odd, wild, cunning little elfish face.

"Take the lantern and show the gentleman the way to the stable," said the woman—a remarkably tall, hard-featured specimen of femaleness—as she passed into the room and left him.

The child darted away, and presently reappeared with a dark lantern, and springing out into the rain, seized the horse by the bridle, as if it were quite a matter of course, and led him off, followed by his master, who laughed to himself at the odd figure the child cut.

"What a spicy tiger that same little atom of mankind would make! and what a rig he has on, to be sure! He would be worth a million in cash to ride the favorite at the Derby."

The child led the animal into the stable occupied by another horse, and tied him up, and began unloosening his trappings in a twinkling. The young man assisted him, and when Salatin had been properly rubbed down and cared for, they both left the stable together, and turned toward the house.

"You're quite used to this sort of thing, I see, my lad," he said, glancing in mingled curiosity and amusement at the boy.

"Tying the horses—should think I was," said the child, with something of a chuckle.

"Is this a regular tavern, sonny?"

"No, though folks stay in sometimes," was the reply.

"Who lives here? What's your name, my boy?"

"I ain't your boy! I ain't a boy at all! I'm a girl! and my name's Oriole; but for short they call me Oriole," said the little one, sharply.

"Whew!" whistled the young man; "here's a discovery. I beg ten thousand pardons; but your dress led me into error. What makes you wear boy's clothes?"

"Oh! she makes me wear whatever's handiest!"

"Who is 'she,' Miss Oriole?"

"Why, she, you know—her that let you in."

"Oh! that tall, old woman! Is she your mother?"

"My mother?" said the child, with a shrill, elfish laugh; "no, I ain't got none—never had any. She's only old Grizzle!"

They had reached the door by this time, and the little one darted in, in her quick way, held it open for the stranger, and then closed and bolted it again, in a flash.

"Come along right in here," said Oriole, whose fleet motion reminded him of her namesake, as she held open the door of what seemed to be the kitchen; up the ample chimney of which roared and crackled a huge fire—a welcome sight to our cold and weary traveller.

"Set a chair for the gentleman, Orrie. Sit up to the fire, sir, and warm yourself," said the woman, as she whipped a large pot off the fire, from which issued a savory odor of boiled pork.

The young man looked at her, and thought that in all his life he had never seen or heard a more villainous and repulsive-looking specimen of the angelic sex. It seemed to him, that she imported a sinister character even to the peaceful and domestic occupation of preparing supper.

"Woman, lovely woman!" thought the young man, with a half-laugh, as he looked at her grisly face, almost hideous in its ugliness, now that the hood of her cloak, which she still wore, was thrown back. "What a month for kissing! I wonder if by any possibility anybody could ever have loved that woman, for in her best days she must have been worse than ugly—wicked! Wonder what this queer little kelpie in the bare feet is to her. Old Grizzle! a most appropriate name. A 'poor lone woman,' indeed! It's little she need fear intruders, guarded by the three-headed dragon of Age, Ugliness and Poverty."

The young man arose, and turning his back to the fire, brought his coat tails forward over his arms, and with his legs in the form of a triangle, subsided into that state of tranquil happiness all true-born Englishmen feel in the above position, and sank into a daydream, from which a call to supper awoke him.

The hungry traveller obeyed with alacrity, pulling out his watch, an elegant gold one, set with brilliants, to see the hour. As he replaced it, he started slightly to see the fierce, gleaming eyes of the woman fixed upon it with a greedy, devouring gaze, that was instantly removed the moment their eyes met.

That look was a revelation. Replacing the watch, he sat down in silence to supper, inwardly wondering whether he would not have been quite as safe out in the storm as here, and whether, as the old adage has it, "he had not helloed before he was out of the woods." During the meal, he was assiduously waited upon by the old woman, who made various efforts to draw from him his name and business, which he completely baffled by his evasive answers.

"Your room is all ready, sir, and you can go to it whenever you like," said the woman, as he arose from the table.

"Very well, I will go now. But first," he said, carelessly, "I will look to my pistols lest the printing may have got wet with the rain."

He drew out from the breast pocket of his great coat, as he spoke, a pair of handsomely mounted pistols and examined them carefully. As he suddenly looked up from his occupation, he caught his hostess standing at him with something like a sneer on her repulsive face.

"It is not safe to travel unarmed these times," he said, looking her full in the face, as he replaced them. "A well-primed pistol is about the best thing a man can have just at present."

"Quite right, sir," said the woman, lightening a candle. "This way, if you please."

He turned and followed her up a flight of stairs, and into a large, dark, low-ceilinged room, where a fire was dimly burning. In one corner stood a bed, and in another a table, and this, with a couple of chairs, comprised the sole furniture of the room. Setting the candle on the table, the woman bade him good-night, and left the room.

But, somehow, tired as he was, the young stranger could not make up his mind to go to bed.

There seemed something evil and sinister about the woman, and the place altogether, that banished all desire for sleep. This lonely house, far removed from every other habitation, was just the place for deeds of blood and darkness. All the old tales he had ever heard or read of travellers robbed and murdered in lonesome old houses and never heard of more, came crowding through his mind, until he had worked himself into a waking nightmare. Placing his pistols on the table, he raised the blind and tried to look out, but it was as dark as Erebus, and a perfect tempest of wind and rain was raging. Preferring to risk the uncertain danger of robbery and murder, rather than the more certain one of a complete drenching, he flung himself into a chair before the fire and fell into deep thought. An hour passed and then another, and all was perfectly still. The fire began to burn low on the hearth, and the candle flared and glittered on the table. Rising with a yawn, the young man was about to throw himself, dressed and all, on the bed, when a sight caught his eye that startled him almost as much as the ghost of Banquo did King Macbeth. At the head of the bed, on the whitewashed wall, was the "dark, cloaked mark of five fingers, as if a bloody hand had been suddenly dashed against it. There it was—glittering red and ghastly, and horrible in the dying light of the fire—that bleeding hand on the wall. It seemed so like the realization of his fears, so like a ghost risen from the dead to warn him, that he recoiled in horror from the grisly sight, and gazed on it with pretty much the same feelings as Robinson Crusoe gazed on the solitary footprint in the sand.

All thought of going to bed was now out of the question, and, approaching his door, he opened it softly and listened. The door at the foot of the stairs, opening into the kitchen, was ajar, and through it, plainly audible to his ears, came the subdued hum of several voices—men's voices, too.

The young traveller had stood face to face with death and danger many a time before now, and had plenty of physical courage; and now, as he saw his full danger, his nerves seemed changed to steel, and his handsome face grew set and stern.

TO A TYPEWRITER KEYBOARD.
Here you are, all of you, letters to fashion the words,
Letters for language as sweet as the song of the birds,
Letters for beauty and candor and letters of love,
Letters to picture the dry and the night with God's stars above!
And you spring into life at the impulse of man and reveal
The thoughts of his mind with your swift-flying fingers of steel.

Here you are, all of you, meaningless standing alone,
Servants of good men and bad, having no will of your own;
Yet on your twenty-eight keys lie all of the poems to be.
As in the acorn there lies the trunk and the leaves of the tree;
Deathless the song you could sing, evil you'd crush with your might,
If but the mind of the man pieced you together a right.

Here you are, all of you! Letters for slander and hate!
Letters for courage and faith when the need for such virtues is great!
Letters for mirth that shall drive out of mind every sorrow and care,
What shall men write when we're gone? Can't you guess, it is all hidden there!

Frail little tools of the mind, helpless yet terribly strong;
Lord, let me choose the right words, help me to fashion my song.

BLESSINGS.
I have so many blessings it's sinful to be sore; Dame Fortune's caressings are mine forevermore. I meet the beggar's cry, I hand him out some cash, to buy his Volstead tiple and plate of corned beef hash; and he is bent and aching, his feet refuse to track, and every step he's taking brings a pain to his back. My legs are smooth and queenly, and I am strong and hale, and I'd be acting meanly if I put up a wall. I meet the poor old fellow who's lost his little store; promoters false and yellow assembled at his door; they sold him stocks and leases and oil wells dry as dust; his yard is shot to pieces, he gnaws a beggar's crust. I hear his wailing ravings, his sighings sad and bleak; they got his lifetime's savings, and he is old and weak. And I have lodged the shearer, the fowler and his snare, and as old age draws nearer, I have some bucks to spare. I meet the sad-eyed duffer whose wife has gained divorce; she's made him sigh and suffer, her work was raw and coarse. No more his heart rejoices, as in the days of yore, there are no happy voices to greet him at the door; his loneliness is awful, no useful wife is nigh, to fry the fragrant waffle, or mould the tempting pie. My wife, she stands beside me, my aunts are at my back; no blessing is denied me, and peace is in my shack.

I meet the poor old fellow who's lost his little store; promoters false and yellow assembled at his door; they sold him stocks and leases and oil wells dry as dust; his yard is shot to pieces, he gnaws a beggar's crust. I hear his wailing ravings, his sighings sad and bleak; they got his lifetime's savings, and he is old and weak. And I have lodged the shearer, the fowler and his snare, and as old age draws nearer, I have some bucks to spare. I meet the sad-eyed duffer whose wife has gained divorce; she's made him sigh and suffer, her work was raw and coarse. No more his heart rejoices, as in the days of yore, there are no happy voices to greet him at the door; his loneliness is awful, no useful wife is nigh, to fry the fragrant waffle, or mould the tempting pie. My wife, she stands beside me, my aunts are at my back; no blessing is denied me, and peace is in my shack.

EXCRUCIATING PAINS, CRAMPS
Entirely Remedied by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"Eberts, Ont.—I started with cramps and bearing-down pains at the age of eleven years, and I would get so nervous I could hardly stay in bed, and I had such pains that I would scream, and my mother would call the doctor to give me something to take. At eighteen I married, and I have four healthy children, but I still have pains in my right side. I am a farmer's wife with more work than I am able to do. Have taken three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I feel that it is helping me every day. My sister-in-law, who has been taking your medicine for some time and uses your Sanative Wash, told me about it and I recommend it now, as I have received great relief from it."—Mrs. NELSON YOTT, R. R. 1, Eberts, Ont.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine for almost every ailment to women. It has been used for such troubles for nearly fifty years, and thousands of women have found relief, as did Mrs. Yott, by taking this splendid medicine.

If you are suffering from irregularity, painful times, nervousness, headache, backache or melancholia, you should at once begin to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is especially good to strengthen the system and help to perform its functions with ease and regularity.

No Trace of Locatelli. The Italian Aviator.

Belgium Takes Preliminary Steps to Military Evacuation of Ruhr—Crew of Hudson Bay Steamer on the Ice off Point Barrow.

THE FIRST WORD.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22. The first word to be received by the navy from any of its ships along the route of the world flight in the North Atlantic was a brief message that came this afternoon from the cruiser Richmond reporting that no word had been received from the Italian aviator. "No news of Locatelli," said the despatch. "Think fog after leaving the last station, ship 217 miles off Cape Farewell. To wait better weather."

NO WORD FROM LOCATELLI.

Aboard U.S.S. Cruiser Richmond on Patrol between Iceland and Greenland, Aug. 22.—Rear Admiral Thomas P. Magruder has ordered the United States cruisers Richmond and Raleigh and the destroyer Barry, to make a search east of Cape Farewell, Greenland, for Lieut. Locatelli, Italian aviator, who accompanied the United States round the world fliers. The search will be made by means of the planes carried by the cruisers for scouting purposes and will be continued indefinitely. Admiral Magruder is preparing to send out a general alarm if Locatelli is not found soon. It is believed by some of the officers of the Richmond that the Italian aviator may have proceeded to Triton instead of halting at Fredericksdal.

SCOUT PLANES FIND NO TRACE OF LOCATELLI.

REYKJAVIK, Aug. 22. Scout planes which were despatched from the American warships patrolling the North Atlantic to look for Lieut. Locatelli, Italian aviator, who left here with the American fliers yesterday, but failed to arrive at Fredericksdal, Greenland, were forced by dense fog to return this evening without having found any trace of the missing man. This was learned in a message received here tonight. Although very little news from Greenland was received to-day it is believed here that there is no cause for alarm as to the fate of the Italian, who has not been heard from since he was sighted by the United States war vessels during the early stage of the American fliers' hop from Iceland to Greenland. Since yesterday it is understood that the weather off the Greenland coast has been good, the winds favorable and the sea smooth, and it is believed most likely that Lieut. Locatelli made a landing. The Gertrude Raak, which took up her station at Anngasalik, when it was expected the aviator would fly to that point, reported that she was clear of ice and that she expected to arrive here by Monday.

BELGIUM'S ECONOMIC EVACUATION.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 22. Belgium's economic evacuation of the Ruhr, which is a preliminary step to the military evacuation, began today, when M. Hanecart, head of the Belgian Technical Delegation left for Dusseldorf, charged with the task of liquidating all the Belgian civil services.

PRINCE LEAVES TO-DAY.

LONDON, Aug. 22. The Prince of Wales packed his trunks and bid goodbye to his cronies and with the exception of a few official matters to be attended to to-day, is ready to hand over his tickets to the purser of the Berengaria which will leave to-morrow from Southampton, to take him on his second visit to the United States. The Prince of Wales' trip this time will lack the exclusiveness of his first visit, which was made in a British man of war, for the capacity of the Berengaria has been packed by debutants who, for various reasons are cutting off their European trips to hurry homeward on this particular liner. These marriageable daughters will leave behind several hundred disappointed Americans who have been turned away from the shipping offices in the last four or five weeks, since the liner's accommodation for seven hundred saloon passengers are all taken, and who constitute a long list of expectant ones awaiting possible last minute cancellations. Since the Berengaria arrived in port Tuesday a corps of plumbers, carpenters, painters, upholsterers have been busy redecorating the Imperial Suite which His Royal Highness will occupy. The suite, consisting of two bedrooms, saloon and breakfast room, now is in spotless white and gray chintz covered chairs and draperies, new furniture and fixtures, and other improvements including a tiled bathroom.

MAJESTIC STRIKES SAND BAR.

SOUTHAMPTON, Aug. 22. The giant steamer Majestic, inbound from New York, grounded on a sand bank at the entrance to Southampton water at low tide this afternoon, but was refloated with the aid of two tugs a short time afterwards and proceeded to Southampton.

MCCOY'S CHOICE.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Aug. 22. Death on the gallows or the living death of paralysis and total dementia to-day appeared to be all that was left for Kid McCoy, once dapper hero of the ring, charged with the murder of Mrs. Theresa W. Mors here on Aug. 12th.

CREW ON THE ICE.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 22. The officers and crew of the Hudson's Bay auxiliary steamer Lady Kinderley, are reported on the ice twenty miles northeast of Point Barrow, in the Arctic Ocean, and the American gas schooner Arctic is said to be a wreck five miles south of that point.

Our Dumb Animals

REPORT CHIEF AGENT S. P. A. WEEK ENDING AUG. 22nd. I would like all butchers to remember that according to the law, no person under the age of sixteen shall be admitted or permitted to remain in any yard or enclosure where the slaughtering or cutting up of any animal is in progress and no animal shall be slaughtered within the sight or hearing of any animal awaiting to be slaughtered. Any person violating this law shall be liable to a fine of $25.00. There have been several complaints lately about these matters and I have to see that the law will be followed out. I have warned several teamsters for trotting their horses with loads on. The lady who went away on her holidays and left the cat in the house states she did not know the cat was in the house when leaving, as she could not find it and is very sorry it should have happened. Three horses have been taken off the street for lameness. Quite a number of complaints have been attended to. I attended the landing of 22 head cattle from the Sable I, also 30 head cattle and some sheep, pigs and poultry from the S. S. Lisgar County. All carefully landed in good condition. Attended two sales of cattle and everything very satisfactory. The dog which was run over Wednesday night on Gover St. was brought by the motor driver to Dr. McNair. I received a phone message from the police to go down and look after it. I might say, there were no bones broken and the Dr. said it would come on alright. I tried to find the owner, but haven't yet succeeded in doing so. The license no. is 90 and registered at the Council's office as M. Hunt, Water Street, and if the person will call at Dr. McNair's, New Gover Street, he will get the dog. The horse that was reported last week belonging to Mr. Druken as been suffering from a wound in the leg has since perished. Dr. McNair believed it was shot with an exploding bullet from a rifle. Barbed wire fences are causing unnecessary cruelty to animals in pasture. Barbed wire is not used now by farmers on account of cuts animals get in knocking up against fences and the rusty bars causing blood poisoning. I ask all those interested in animals to pick up rusty nails off the streets and throw them out of harms way.

Meigle's Passengers

S.S. Meigle arrived from Labrador yesterday at 12.30 p.m., bringing four carloads freight and the following passengers:—Mr. J. Moore, Mrs. Moore and three children, Mrs. F. Moore, Miss C. McEldan, Mrs. Ford, D. Duff, A. Love, B. M. Shipman, Miss J. O'Connell, B. A. Brazie, R. Dalton, W. B. Cabot, Major Montcrieff, J. Campagnon, Miss Martin and one second class. The Meigle sails for the North on Tuesday next at 10 a.m.

MINARD'S LINIMENT RELIEVES NEURALGIA.

C. L. B. Cadets

A Small attendance again this week. Only seventy-four on duty. Many of our lovers of athletics were over to see the five mile race at St. Bon's Campus. The Lieut. Col. was on duty with Major Herbert Outerbridge, M.I.E. Brigade Major Williams, Capt. A. S. Lewis, P. E. Rendell, and Harold Hayward and Lieutenants Eric Jarrett, Orderly Officer and W. R. Motter. Several Officers on leave duty in the Armoury last night had the honour of meeting Captain A. E. Nash formerly Captain of A. Company and who commanded that unit in the celebrated battle of Waterford Bridge. All ranks were glad to see one of the pioneer officers of Brigade work in Newfoundland visit the Headquarters of his old regiment. Capt. Nash did yeoman work for the Brigade, particularly in the days of the "King's Road Armoury," now Parsons garage. Joining the Brigade then he was a tower of strength bringing to the Brigade his military training and experience gained in the Governor General's Foot Guards of Ottawa. Captain Nash is looking young and Father Time has gently dealt with him all the years. He left here in 1901 and has been living the past ten years in Halifax and is associated with the Bank of Montreal and is now visiting Newfoundland on inspection duties. He expressed himself as more than pleased with the present quarters of the Brigade and said his old Regiment had made splendid progress since the days he held a commission when Sir Joseph Outerbridge was Officer Commanding and Surgeon Major Herbert Rendell, the late Doctor Fred Stabb, late Canon Cartwright and Major Powry-Kech, Lt.-Col. W. H. Franklin, Captain N. Snow, and others were doing duty. The present Brigade Major Williams was then Lieut. and Paymaster. We were glad to hear from Old Comrade William J. Groves Jr., of St. John N.B. this week enclosing photographs of H. M. S. Calcutta and H. M. S. Constance at the pier there. He hopes to influence the organization of a C.L.B. Company through the assistance of the Rector of Trinity Church. He sends hearty greetings to the best in doing his best to maintain the old motto, "Fight the Good Fight." Captain Lewis Cashier of the 8th Saving Bank Department reports on 31st July with 169 accounts and $3522.30 on deposit. Four percent interest is paid and every lad is asked to open a Saving Bank account with the C. L. B. Bank and receive thrift.

A REQUEST TO MOTORISTS

FOR KIND CONSIDERATION.

It has been brought to the attention of the Newfoundland Motor Association that there are several thousand people in the city who do not own motor cars and who walk to Bowring Park on Sunday and holiday afternoons.

It is a well-known fact that these citizens are deluged with dust in the fine weather and often splattered with mud in wet weather, as however careful a driver may be, it is usually impossible not to raise dust and sometimes it is impossible to prevent splashing when driving through the mud.

The Association has therefore decided to issue a personal request to Motorists generally not to use the Southside Road on Sunday, Holiday and Half Holiday afternoons, thereby affording the many people in the city who do not own cars an opportunity to walk to the Park in some degree of comfort on Sundays and holidays. (This request, of course, does not apply to motorists living on the Southside nor motorists wishing to call at houses on the Southside on these afternoons). This is an appeal to Motorists, not an order nor a demand. A little consideration is all that is asked and the Association believes that Motorists, generally, are considerate.

Issued by the Executive and Road Committee.

Rotary Luncheon

THE CURATIVE EFFECTS OF COD LIVER OIL.

The speaker at the Rotary Luncheon, held at the Hotel Marlborough on Thursday, was Mr. E. M. Johnson who is engaged in research work in connection with our cod liver oil. Mr. Johnson was introduced by the Chairman, Rotarian Angus Reid, and his address, as follows, contains valuable information regarding the medicinal properties of our cod liver oil:

Cod liver oil has been used for about two hundred years for rheumatism, tuberculosis, colic, and as a general tonic, but any probable medicinal value that it had, was unknown. For that reason, it was used more by the layman than the medical men, although there were a few enthusiasts amongst the medical fraternity who stood for it. The cod liver oil of old was had tasted, evil smelling, and of a disagreeable color and was anything but appetizing, consequently people refused it. Finally, however, steamed cod liver oil came into use, eliminating to a large extent, the disagreeable taste and odour and resulting in a more general use of the oil. About this time, medical men began to consider it as an easily assimilated fat, and it was frequently prescribed with other fats, but even then, its medicinal nature, if it possessed any, was practically unknown. Finally, scientists began to study fats of vegetables, minerals, animal organism, and cod liver oil was amongst them. About this time, it was generally conceded amongst dietitians and medical men, that the proteins, fats, carbohydrates, and mineral salts, were the principal food elements which contributed to the nutrition of man, but a Japanese scientist discovered that besides these elements, there was some other fat accessory which played an important role in the feeding of pigeons and fowls, and prevented the disease known as Beri Beri. This accessory factor was later named by Finck as "vitamine," and which was afterwards changed by McCollum to "vitamin."

In due course other vitamins were discovered, and in order to distinguish the difference between them, the terms "A," "B," "C," "D" were used, and there are now, at least five distinct vitamins known. Whilst experimenting with fats, it was learned that cod liver oil showed greater activity in experimental animals than any of the other fats known. The vitamin in cod liver oil is a fat soluble, and there are at least two of these vitamins named by McCollum, vitamin "A" and "D," the latter, sometimes referred to by scientists as the anti-rachitic factor in fish oils. It has been shown on experimental animals that the fat soluble "A" vitamin in cod liver oil, influences growth and cures sore eyes or ophthalmia. Ophthalmia is a disease caused by a diet lacking in the fat soluble "A" factor, but when this missing factor is replaced with cod liver oil, the sore eyes are promptly cured. Failure of growth and ophthalmia are considered as deficiency diseases. Another deficiency disease is rickets. Rickets is produced in rats by feeding the animals on a diet lacking the vitamin "D" or anti-rachitic factor. At the present time, no one thoroughly understands just what rickets is, but we do know that there is a failure of calcium deposition in the bones. In children, rickets may be observed clinically by such signs as bow-legs, beading of the ribs, enlarged epiphyses, cranio-tabes. Often, children with rickets, have enlarged heads, and which would warrant medical examination for the above physical signs. It is generally accepted that experimental rickets produced in rats or other animals such as the dog, is very much the same as human rickets. These animal experiments furnish an opportunity for extensive study with cod liver oil as the curative agent. Cod liver oil was placed in a class by itself when it was discovered that by feeding it to puppy dogs with rickets, it effected a satisfactory cure. Even before this time, some of the old French, English, and German writers mentioned that it cured rickets, but at that time it was not understood that the vitamin of the oil was the active principle which brought about a cure.

Until recently, no standards have been set by retail chemists for cod liver oil. An oil obtained at one end of the town might not be active as an oil, obtained in some other part of the city. Moreover, some preparations of cod liver oil may consist of mixed oils of other livers than the cod fish, as well as mineral oils. In order to standardize the oil, samples were obtained from Iceland, Norway, Shetland Isles, England, British Columbia, California, Maine, Nova Scotia, Japan, and Newfoundland. At the end of a year's experimental period, the Newfoundland oil show the greatest anti-rachitic activity on experimental rats. In addition to this, samples were obtained in the open market. These were of different colors and tastes and activity, and showed some rather wide variations in the number of days, the size of doses, necessary to bring about healing in the rickety bones. This leads to further investigation of the Newfoundland oil on the ground where it is produced in order to experiment at the source and endeavor to determine, if possible, why Newfoundland oil was more active than others. It was found that fresh Newfoundland oil, prepared from new livers, could be fed in such small amounts as one-fourth and one-eighth of one per cent. in the curative diet, and produced satisfactory results in the bones of rickety rats, in five days. Oils produced from lean fish caught in the early season, have also been examined, and compared with that produced from fish caught in the middle season when they are feeding well on caplin and squid. The oil from the well fed fish always showed more activity. It is therefore believed that the small fish such as the caplin and squid and which are consumed by the cod, are large consumers of diatoms and planktons which have been shown by other scientists to contain vitamins. A number of caplin and squid, caught on the Southern Shore, were subjected to a microscopic examination of the stomach and intestinal tract, and a large amount of diatoms and plankton were disclosed. Another reason for the greater activity of Newfoundland oil is probably due to the fact that the fish have completed spawning before reaching the headlands to feed. Nature has provided an abundance of caplin and squid which are available to the cod at a time when this fish is thin and ravenously hungry. Continuous dieting on this food gives the cod an opportunity to recuperate and grow fat, and the liver becomes enlarged and accumulates a considerable amount of oil which is laden with the vitamin obtained from the caplin and squid which in turn, obtains the vitamin by eating various marine organisms dieting on diatoms and planktons. The cod fish therefore stores the vitamins in the liver by an indirect method.

In order not to confine the experiments entirely to rats, a considerable quantity of the Newfoundland oil has been given, gratuitously to a number of infant clinics in charge of competent physicians. The children suspected of rickets were x-rayed at different periods whilst the cod liver oil was being administered, and definite progress of healing has been noted.

Newfoundlanders have taken great steps to introduce cod liver oil by thorough and continuous inspection whilst the fishing season is on. Newfoundland inspectors also give instruction to fishermen as to the correct temperature for steaming the liver, the length of time to expose it to the steam, how to filter it, and barrel it in order to obtain the best results. In addition to this, cod oil should be biologically tested, so that no oil of doubtful potency will be placed on the market. It should be taken into consideration that straight pure cod liver oil is superior to emulsions since these preparations do not contain any more than 30 per cent of oil, and some of them contain as low as 10 per cent. Compare a teaspoon full of straight pure cod liver oil with its tested vitamin activity, with an emulsion containing only ten or twenty per cent and rarely 30 per cent of oil that is not tested and therefore of doubtful vitamin activity and watch the result!

In the past Newfoundlanders have, perhaps, made the mistake of selling the oil in bulk barrels. When the barrel is disposed of the contents immediately loses its identity, and the way for substitution of Newfoundland oil, is made easy. When the oil leaves the Colony as "Newfoundland" oil, it should reach the consumer as "Newfoundland" oil, and no other inferior oil should be substituted. In order to make it possible for Newfoundland oil to secure the high place which it so richly deserves, in the drug trade and amongst the medical profession, it should be advertised. Advertising, of course, is expensive, but Messrs. Mead, Johnson & Co. are prepared to conduct the proper kind of advertising, and handle the oil in such a way that Newfoundland oil will be called for and secured on the prescription of medical men who desire to obtain the best. This entails a considerable amount of educational work for the reason that to-day, some of the medical men have been told that Norwegian oil is the best. Frequently advertisements are seen with the term "Finest Norwegian Oil." The word "finest" of course would lead the unsuspecting individual to assume that this was the most satisfactory oil produced in the world, whereas an oil that is far more potent has been begging for recognition these many years. We propose to use nothing but Newfoundland oil in all our preparations, and also to supply the straight pure, unadulterated oil, because our experiments have proven to our satisfaction that it is the best. Because of its growth promoting factor, fat soluble "A" vitamin, the Newfoundland cod liver oil is a very desirable ingredient of all infant foods. In fact every child should have cod liver oil during the first few years of its life, as a preventive rather than a cure. Medical men will believe that if cod liver oil were used to the same extent as orange-juice is used to prevent scurvy, that rickets in children would be rare.

It is gratifying to note the action of the Newfoundland Government in removing the export tax on cod liver oil. In competing with the Norwegian removal of this tax will make matters easier. Our purpose is to create a demand for Newfoundland oil, and everything should be done towards this end. It is somewhat difficult to make the public believe that a high priced article is superior to one of a lower price especially when the scientific reasons for the high potency of the Newfoundland oil are not yet understood outside the field of scientific investigation. Advertising will no doubt change this opinion.

Another interesting medical fact may be stated. It is believed by some physicians that one of the reasons why the operation known as Caesarian section is sometimes necessary, is due to the fact that the mother in her infancy had rickets causing abnormally formed pelvic bones. If cod liver oil had been used, and rickets prevented, it is believed that few such operations would be necessary.

Five factories are now in operation, two at Bay Bulls, one at Witley Bay, one at Tor's Cove, and one at Ferryland.

Our sincere thanks are due to Capt. Wm. Winsor, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and to Deputy Mr. Alan Goodridge for their kind assistance. To Mr. E. G. Coyne, Chief Inspector, to Mr. W. A. Mann, Mr. Ambrose Heara and Mr. Jerry Williams of Bay Bulls, and to the large number of fishermen who so generously assisted and co-operated with us in our research work, and without whose help our investigation would not have been possible. To Mr. Don Turner in helping out with the experimental rats.

We have found the Newfoundlanders ready to encourage outside capital and industry in their land, and we believe that if several other American firms would invest their capital in cod liver oil factories, the investment would be sound, and the assistance given them by Newfoundlanders would make the venture very successful.

Mr. Johnson was accorded a hearty vote of thanks for his very interesting and instructive address.

Amongst the guests were Mr. R. B. Job, Mr. Godfrey Williams, Mr. Hayes of New Bedford, Dr. W. Roberts, Mr. W. A. Mann, Mr. H. R. Brooks, Mr. W. P. Goodridge, Mr. Avon Goodridge and Mr. G. P. Bowen.

Control of the Road Loan.

We offer no excuse for the frequent references which are made in this column to our need of roads and better roads, because we are convinced that until this country has made the same efforts in that direction as our neighbours we cannot expect to take step for step with them in the march of progress.

Practically the whole of the knowledge that most of us possess about our country is confined to the rugged coast line, which gives little indication of the wonderful beauty and the unlimited opportunities for development that lie within its crusty exterior. These attractions are inaccessible to the lover of nature and to the pioneer unless and until roads suitable for vehicular traffic penetrate these, at present, waste lands. A journey across the country by the railway line does not impress one favourably, because in the first place the route for the greater part follows the "bad lands," and because whatever forest growth was to be observed in the early days has long since been destroyed by devastating fires. To find the attractions mentioned it is necessary to visit our river valleys and the arms which extend inland for miles from the bottoms of the bays. There we are indeed in God's country.

These areas must be made accessible and the only possible way to bring them within reach is by means of roads and bridges. The Legislature has authorized the expenditure of $2,000,000 to provide these utilities, and we have the promise of the Leaders of the Government that the money will be so controlled that neither the importunities of district representatives nor the cajolery or threats of the chairmen of the Road Boards will be permitted to divert it from the purpose for which it is intended. It does not require a wide knowledge of the practice which has been followed in the past to appreciate the strenuous opposition which such a policy will arouse. We trust, however, that the Government will not waver in its decision, or give any consideration to demands which do not dovetail into the plans decided upon by the commission to which the work will be deputed.

We advocated such a policy previous to the introduction of the loan bill, because we felt that so long as road monies were allowed to be frittered away as they had been in the past the Island never could expect to possess roads deserving of the name. Now that the suggestion is an accomplished fact, we are determined, that so far as we can help to prevent it, this loan will not flow away through useless channels, or be robbed of its energy owing to the amount of friction to which it might be subjected in reaching its goal.

The press is perhaps in a better position to help a watchful eye on such matters than any other institution, and with all the papers co-operating, they can jealously guard that fund and make it accomplish the object, which it is unquestionably the desire of all that it should.

The Western Star in its last Issue refers to this very case, and voices the fear that the Government may not get beyond the Avalon Peninsula in their policy. That is by no means, so far as we can learn, their intention, and it certainly does not commend itself to our view. The West offers to the tourist and to the agriculturalist opportunities which are far greater in many ways than those of any other section of the country, and unless they are fully developed side by side with those of the East, both must eventually suffer in the end. This is one country; our interests are the same, and a policy which savoured of discrimination to the detriment of any one part would be deserving of the strongest condemnation. We can assure our Western contemporary that in the Telegram it will always find a staunch ally in a fight against any such suggestion.

The Care of Our Bonnie Babies

In the Baby column which we publish each Saturday appears to-day timely advice on the practical means of preventing what is generally known as summer complaint. It is all too common throughout the country, and there is a tendency to treat it as inevitable during this period of the year. The fact that vigorous measures have been taken elsewhere to combat this disease must impress everyone that it is by no means a complaint to be disregarded, and the success which has followed these efforts indicate clearly that it could be practically eliminated here by the adoption of similar precautions. We are glad of the opportunity to call attention to this timely advice.

Community Singing

Community singing has become popular overnight in St. John's. The Casino last night was filled by people of all classes who were eager to see for themselves the idea of community singing. On entering the hall each person was presented with a programme on which were printed the words of thirty songs, including such old favorites as "Old Black Joe," "Annie Laurie," "Mother Machree" and various others. Promptly at 8:30 the curtain rose and Mr. Richmond Barton, playground director, appeared on the stage and in a short address outlined the idea of community singing. He said it was very popular in the cities of the United States and Canada and hoped that it would become so here and be continued in the future. Mr. Charles Hutton very ably presided at the piano. The programme opened with the singing of "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean" and each number was sung three or four times each section of the audience singing in its turn and then the whole audience singing it. Altogether last night's sing was quite a success and Mr. Barton deserves great praise for introducing it into this country. We hope to see it continued this summer and the next and be permitted to die out. It is Mr. Barton's intention to hold another sing in Bannerman Park next Friday evening, details of which will be made known later. Considerable annoyance was caused last night by children in the gallery, who after each number were invited to assist in loud talking and hand clapping and had to be called to order on several occasions. The sing concluded at 10 p.m. with the National Anthem.

Cape Broyle Garden Party

The annual garden party at Cape Broyle takes place to-morrow and it is anticipated a large number of people from the city will take in the event. Intended patrons are reminded that a train leaves the railway station at 2 p.m. and returning leave Cape Broyle at 10:30 p.m. The committee in charge of affairs have made ample preparations to cater to all so that the weather only is required to make the day enjoyable.

Local-Made Brick Test

Some badly needed repairs to the Museum building were begun this morning. Since its erection about 15 years ago, the walls which are composed mostly of American pressed brick have been crumbling. The local brick has been used in this as well as other buildings in the city, such unnecessary expense would have been avoided. In such erections as the Standard, Angel Engineering, and the Imperial Tobacco Co., Ltd. the local brick have withstood the severe climate for years without showing any signs of disintegration.

Magistrates Court

Two drunks and disorderlies were discharged. A driver of a motor bus was summoned before court charged with not stopping his bus at the Cross Roads while passengers were alighting from a street car. A fine of $5.00 was imposed. Judge Morris intimated that in future he would deal severely with those who do not observe the section of the Traffic Regulations.

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES.

Aug. 22nd—Despatches this day from the American warships near Greenland that Locatelli, the Italian aviator flying the Atlantic, is missing and little hope of finding him which is a sad thing, but do show how there is no safety yet in air travelling. I abroad at noon, and meeting Squibbs to dine with him to Topsail, but Lord, the road in the worst possible condition and unfit to ride over indeed. I was so sorely shaken that my head did not all the day long. Squibbs tells me how there will be a great baby demonstration in September, and is a cause of great grief to him that he has none to take part in it. My wife this day playing at bridge did make a revoke, which did look as if it were done deliberately and caused me the greatest shame, nor shall I be able to shake the wretch to play the game again. I do learn also how there are no official arrangements made by the authorities to welcome the great warships that are due here soon. It is a strange thing, and one that will shame us it ought to be done.

Labrador Fishery Improving

Capt. Burgess of the steamer Meigie, which arrived yesterday from points as far as Hopedale, reports a general improvement in the fishery since last trip. At Battle Hr. the fishermen have done well with hook and line, and with plenty of squid for bait the catch promises to be an average one. At Wolf Islands one man secured 90 quintals in fact have done a little with hook and line. There is no word of the fishers further north, and with the arrival of the Wren at Hopedale within a few days more encouraging reports of the fishery should be available. While the Meigie was at Hopedale the body of one of the Porter brothers, who met death by drowning near Okak some time ago, was expected to arrive, to be brought on here, but the party accompanying the remains did not arrive up to the time the ship sailed. Should the second body be recovered, both will be brought on the next trip. The Meigie's excellent weather prevailed all over the coast.

Word Received Here from the Fiers

A message to Mr. J. J. Collins to-day from Mr. Harold Littlefield, Secretary Press Committee, on board U.S.S. Lawrence, via Battle Hr. and Fogo, states the American word fiers will probably arrive at Cartwright, Lab., on Sunday. Judging by the message there is every reason to believe that the fiers will hop off from Greenland to-day.

Labrador Report

Cape Harrison, Maklovick, Holton, Smeke, Gray, Flat Islands, Domo and Venison Islands report no fish. Battle Harbor reports good holding.

Straits Report

A message from Lighthouse-keeper Thomas, Bell Isle, states that codfish is plentiful at the east end of the island to-day.

PRINCE SLIPS ON BOARD UNSEEN. SOUTHAMPTON, Eng., Aug. 23. Determined there should be as little ceremony as possible in connection with his sailing, his Royal Highness late last night sped quietly out of London by automobile, spent few hours at the Isle of Wight about 20 miles from here, boarded the Berengaria without hardly being noticed and immediately went to bed.

SEARCH FOR AIRMAN UNREWARDED.

Aboard U.S.S. Richmond, Aug. 22. Lieut. Locantelli, the Italian trans-Atlantic aviator who started with the United States word fiers on their Iceland to Greenland hop, was still missing with his companion at eight o'clock this morning. U.S.S. Raleigh one of the searching vessels reports it is too foggy along the Greenland coast to permit the use of airplanes in the search.

at CORNER BROOK is faced with Pelly's Brick. Imported Brick were to have been used, but the promoters saw a car load of Pelly's Brick being unloaded at Corner Brook and, recognizing its superior quality actually secured enough of that car-load to start up this work until further supplies could be sent them by rail.

These big brainy Englishmen have given us such an uplift, that we have scrapped all our old methods of manufacture, and put in a modern machine that will still further improve the quality of our Brick.

DIARRHOEA. This is a word we don't generally like to use but in St. John's it looms up like a great big evil giant and if we don't kill it, it will kill us. It is so powerful that it sweeps millions of little germs that invade the homes of rich and poor. And every year it takes its toll of a certain number of lives, children that should grow up to be strong men and women.

We must fight it and each year it will get less and less until there is none at all.

Other Cities of our size don't have it, why should we? The germs breed in dust bins, waste pails, dirty jugs and pans, dirty bottles, dummies and teats and on stale food especially milk. The germs are carried to baby's food:

- By Files
- Wind
- Careless handling

Using dirty water and clothes for washing up. Be especially careful just now for this "evil giant" is in our midst.

COD LIVER OIL. I don't know whether you have noticed it but there has been quite a lot of talk about Cod Liver Oil in the papers lately. It is quite wonderful to think that we live in the land where the very best Cod Liver Oil is produced. And since it has been found so very important in giving babies strong bones and clear eyes, and preventing two very serious diseases, give baby some every day till he is six years old.

Costly Film is Coming to Star

"HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME" IS CHANGED TO AVOID OFFENDING ANY CREED.

At the Star Theatre Monday night will be held the local premier of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," the pictured version of Victor Hugo's classic which has come down through the ages with unimpaired lustre. Aside from the natural interest in the screening of such a notable masterpiece, there is a general interest to see the production which required more than a year to film and on which more than $1,500,000 was expended. Liberties were taken with the story—being defended on the ground that a production intended for all classes could not afford to offend and particular religion denigration—but while many shook their heads and predicted dire failure as a result, the changes were all approved by the New York critics after the world premier at the Apollo Theatre.

Certainly all the elements of success are contained in the production—Universal had the story, the title, the cast, and unlimited funds. Local verification of the New York opinion will be watched with interest. The selection of Lon Chaney for the title role of "Quasimodo, the Hunchback" was a logical one. His amazing ability to portray characters such as he played in "The Miracle Man," "Outside the Law," and "Shadow," roles which required combination ability as well as unusual dramatic training, is well known. It is claimed that Chaney required four and one-half hours daily to get the make-up of the reformed bell-ringer of Notre Dame.

The Cathedral of Notre Dame was constructed in its entirety at Universal City for the production, as were eight squares of Parisian streets of the period of Louis XI.

THE LAST SEEN OF LOCATELLI.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23. The Army Air Service was officially advised to-night that the United States world fliers had reached Greenland. The information was contained in a message from the cruiser Milwaukee, which said that Lieut. Locatelli, the Italian aviator, who started from Iceland with the United States fliers on their 725 mile hop when last heard of was preceding them by forty minutes. The dispatch which was undated was signed by Lieut. Bissell, of the Army Service, and was filed by way of Louisville, Nova Scotia. It said "Smith and Nelson arrived safely at Fredericksdale. Nothing definite from Locatelli who, when last heard from, was preceding our planes by forty minutes. Details later."

COMMUNIST DEFTS THE REICHSTAG BULES OF ORDER.

BERLIN, Aug. 23. A lone Communist to-day succeeded in defying the Reichstag's rules of order and President Wallra's bell for more than three hours, finally forcing an adjournment of Parliament and compelling the Cabinet members to retire from the government bench without having submitted the government's statement on the work of the International Conference in London. President Wallra's was helpless in the face of the Communist obstructionist tactics as the House rules do not permit of such an expedient as police intervention, and Dr. Schwarz, a graded school teacher and Communist deputy therefore laughed off the president's order to quit the Chamber. Chancellor Marx, Foreign Minister Stresemann, and Finance Minister Luther who were prepared to discuss the London agreement looked on in disgust, while the House committee sought to find a solution to the situation. Chancellor Marx finally left the government bench followed by Dr. Stresemann and the other members of the Cabinet.

LISTENERS IN ON MARS HEAR STRANGE SOUNDS.

LONDON, Aug. 23. An attempt by a British wireless expert to listen in on Mars resulted in strange noises being heard at one o'clock this morning. The source of the noises could not be ascertained by the experts. The attempt was made on a twenty-four valve tube set erected on a hill at Dulwich. Representatives of the Marconi Co. and of London universities were present. Tuning in started at 12.30 o'clock a.m., and at one a.m. on a thirty thousand radius, sounds were heard which could not be likened to harsh rds but they could not be interpreted as Morse code. The noises continued off and on for three minutes in groups of four and five dots.

Forty-Five Years in the Service of the Public—The Evening Telegram.

Building a Skyscraper at Grand Falls

By PHILIP SPAYCE.

The tallest chimney in Newfoundland is being built at Grand Falls for The Anglo-Newfoundland Development Company, Limited. It will be a radial brick chimney, measuring 300 feet in height, and fourteen feet in diameter at the top, inside measurement. It will be skyscraper for Grand Falls, and a landmark for many miles of the surrounding country.

The distinction of having the first radial brick chimney in Newfoundland comes to The Newfoundland Power and Paper Company, Ltd., of Corner Brook. This was completed last week. In point of size, however, their chimney is only a dwarf, compared with that which is being built for the Anglo-Newfoundland Development Company, Ltd. The chimney that is being built here will be one hundred and twenty-five feet taller than the Corner Brook chimney, and almost twice as big in the top.

Work began on this massive chimney a few days ago. It is being built by the Alphonse Custodis Chimney Construction Company of New York City. The building of chimneys is the sole business of this company; consequently they are specialists in the particular line of work. They have the added distinction of having built the largest chimney in the world. This is the chimney of the Anaconda Copper Company's mines at Anaconda, Montana. Here I may tell you that this giant chimney is five hundred and eighty-five feet high, and is about sixty-five feet in diameter, at the top.

The building crew of the chimney at Grand Falls is in charge of Mr. Opal Brown, who comes from the Company's Chicago office. He is considered one of the best men in the chimney building business to-day, and I hear that he has been specially chosen for the job. Mr. B. L. Goodswan, who comes from the New York office, is also here. He belongs to the sales force, and he is remaining in the country for some time, prospecting for future business. His company has heard of the era of industrial development that is in store for Newfoundland, and they hope that the industrial boom will bring them increased business, which will revert to the mutual advantage of all concerned.

The crew consists of first-class masons, a mortar mixer, and an engine. All these men are specialists in their respective lines, and under the leadership of Foreman Brown, they work together as one big chimney building machine. Few people have a proper conception of the perfection of such an organization. It is really astonishing what an immense amount of work can be done by such a labor force in a day. I am told, that with fine weather, the chimney will be built at the rate of about ten to fifteen feet a day.

The size of the chimney has already been stated. The first section of it will have a wall thirty inches thick. The thickness of the wall will be reduced gradually, as the work progresses. The last section of the wall will be eight and five-eighths inches thick. At the top of the chimney there will be eight pointed platinum lightning rods, with two copper cable down leads. The bricks are of different sizes. They are curved slightly, both on the inside and outside, so that the chimney can be rounded properly. In other words, every brick in the chimney is so shaped that it forms part of a circle. This is what is meant by calling it a radial brick chimney.

The work is being done from the inside. The men work on a portable scaffold, which is raised several times a day, as required. All the materials are hoisted in barrels by an engine. The bricks are passed to the bricklayers by a man known in the trade as top man. His job is to see that they are supplied with right quantities and sizes of bricks at the right time, so as to prevent any delay in the work. He gets his supplies from the bottom man, by means of signals. This bottom man instructs the men who wheel the materials to the job, as to what is required from time to time. Since there is only a limited amount of storage space on the scaffold, the top man and bottom man must work in perfect harmony to insure against delays in the work. The helpers who bring along the materials must be alert in giving the bottom man what he wants. When everything is going good, the building of

A chimney proceeds like clockwork. It is a fine weather job, and, for that reason, there must be as little loss of time as possible.

The chimney building is full of thrills. Men working as such great heights need plenty of nerve. Personally, I have no desire to become a chimney builder. Forty feet in the air is high enough for me. Even then I should like to have lots of standing room, and, preferably, something by which I could hold on with my hands. For example, the copper cable down leads, of which I have told you, are put on the outside of the chimney by a man who sits in a boatman's chair, that is suspended from the top of the chimney by a 3-8 inch steel cable. To give you some idea of this feat, I may tell you that a man hanging thus, about sixty feet from the top of the chimney that is to be built here, will look about the same size as a mouse hanging the same number of inches from the highest room in your house. If you do not believe me, just work the problem out yourself. To do it properly, I may add that you will have to lie on your back on the floor of the room in which you try the experiment.

The hoisting engineer is a man on whom a great deal of responsibility rests. Every day he holds the lives of the men in his hands. He must be a cool, level-headed man, and in the handling of the down lead he needs almost as much nerve as the man who does the actual work. Only men of experience are entrusted with this important job. The same may be said of every member of a chimney building crew. It takes three years of training to make a good chimney builder, because every unit of the crew needs to be a specialist in his particular line.

Since the building of an outdoor chimney requires fine weather, I wish the men who are here, ornamenting our landscape, lots of it. I also hope that good luck will attend them to the completion of the job.

Eruptions caused by poison ivy should be bathed daily with solutions of salt or boric acid water. If you wish your roast gravy to be tantalizingly different, use the water strained from boiled onions. When making powdered sugar icing for a cake, try adding the mashed pulp of half of a banana. Serve pats of vanilla ice cream on slices of pineapple, and top with a sauce made with pineapple syrup. In spite of the charm of feed drinks in hot weather, people should beware of chilling their systems too suddenly.

Thin slices of fresh tomato, salad dressing and peanut butter make delightful filling for a picnic sandwich. Cucumbers should be thinly sliced, kept in cold water until ready to serve, then drained and covered with crushed ice. If flannel skirts are washed and rinsed in very hot water and hung up without wringing, they will not require ironing. Never allow any inflammable substances or cooking utensils containing hot liquids to remain in reach of small children. Refrigerators should be washed out inside with cold water and baking soda at least once a week. Wipe dry immediately. When spicing a baked ham, substitute two-thirds cupful of white grape juice rather than the usual amount of vinegar. Buttered crackers can be sprinkled with coconut, topped with marshmallows and heated for a few minutes in the oven. Scoop out the centres of individual cup cakes, fill with ice cream, and cover with marshmallow sauce or flavored whipped cream. A fancy mold can be partially filled with sweetened fruit juice, and then filled with flavored whipped cream. Freeze and serve. Try stuffing onions with finely chopped, cooked chicken, and stale bread-crumbs. Season, sprinkle with buttered bread-crumbs, and bake. Stew deserves a place of honor on the table when the vegetables are out with vegetable cutters and the whole is served on this soft toast. Be sure that in planning the family meals, you include plenty of coarse food. Not only does it regulate the

CHEER UP, IT PROBABLY ISN'T SO!

What a black thing circumstantial evidence can be! No, I don't mean this time in the matter of murder cases, or yet of gossip, but in the matter of believing that something you fear has come to pass, because everything points that way. Something MUST have happened. For instance, you can't see how it can be possible that that auto accident you are always fearing for Jack hasn't come at last. It is three hours after the time when he usually comes and if anything delays him, he always telephones . . . and you know the telephone isn't out of order, because you have called Central to see . . . Something must have happened . . . And then when you are almost in hysterics with alarm, Jack arrives; any you find out that he had to stop in town to dine with some of the firm's guests that he left word with his stenographer to telephone you and she forgot.

A neighbor of mine once had a very vivid experience of that sort. Her husband was to take a business trip to another city on a boat. When the morning papers came they carried the account of an accident to the boat—Life boats had been put off, and one had been tipped over with the loss of several lives. Survivors were being brought to shore in the various ships that picked them up. Naturally my neighbor was wild with anxiety and immediately began to try to get news of her husband from the newspapers and steamship officials.

To Cap The Climax! As usual there was great difficulty in checking up, and she could not get any definite word about him. In a few hours other friends who also had relatives on board the boat, received messages from them that they were all right. And still no word came from her husband. By nightfall all the survivors were landed and still no word. It really began to look black. If he were all right, why hadn't he telephoned. And then, to cap the climax, one of the afternoon papers brought out a description of the unidentified dead, and in one case the description anxieties seemed groundless, of course . . . but before he came she could hardly see any other possibility but that he was among the missing.

So many times when we can't see any happy explanation there is one. Remember that the next time the circumstantial evidence looks so strong you can't see any hope. The chances are twenty to one that before long you will be wondering how you could have felt so convinced.

Kid McCoy in Prison

FACING A CHARGE OF MURDERING A WOMAN IN LOS ANGELES—CLAIMS THAT THE WOMAN SHOT HERSELF.

LOS ANGELES, August 14.—Kid McCoy, veteran of the prize ring, whose fists fetched him fighting renown more than a quarter of a century ago, sat in a jail cell here today, facing the most desperate battle of his career—a fight to free himself of the charge of murdering a woman. The woman, Mrs. Theresa Mors, divorced wife of a wealthy antique dealer was found dead early yesterday in the apartment she and McCoy, whose true name is Norman Selby, had occupied for several weeks as "Mr. and Mrs. N. Shields." In her head was a 32-calibre bullet, nearby was an automatic pistol of the same calibre, and a note signed by McCoy bequeathing all his worldly possessions to his mother. Clamped in the hand and of the corpse was a photograph of the former pugilist.

When McCoy was arrested several hours later, after terrorizing employees and patrons of two fashionable shops and shooting and slightly wounding three persons, he was stubbornly silent for a time. The former pugilist, nine times a husband, and who, common report said, was planning to make Mrs. Mors his tenth wife, in the first hour or so after his arrest, would make only one statement, and that was: "He killed the only woman I ever loved."

Later he talked freely. Mrs. Mors killed herself, he said; the shock and grief "put out his lights" and filled him with an insane rage to kill her husband "who drove her to it," to kill all those who stood in his way, and finally to kill himself.

But fate hid Mors from him, and his plan to kill himself was lost in the swirl of events. "I was going to kill myself," he said explaining the note found in the apartment, "but I forgot."

Police believe portions of McCoy's story, but declare his suicide defence has already received its knockout blow from the Kids' own sister, Mrs. Jennie Thomas, whom they quote as saying McCoy came to her home soon after the shooting of Mrs Mors and burst out with: "I just had to kill that woman."

Late last night detectives called at the Thomas home, but after conferring with the woman's attorney they agreed not to question her further, on the understanding that she would tell the complete story of McCoy's visit and alleged confession to District Attorney Asa Keyes to-day.

McCoy, under re-grilling at the City Hall admitted that he had called on his sister soon after Mrs Mors' death, but "could not remember what I told her or how long I stayed." He clung to his suicide version of the shooting, telling detectives that Mrs. Mors was driven to despair by her troubles with her former husband, that she suddenly cried out that she "couldn't stand it any longer," and attempted to stab herself to death with a butcher knife. When this failed, he said, she took a pistol from a dresser drawer and fired a bullet through her head before he could stop her.

Police declare, however, that what Mrs. Mors really planned was a reconciliation with her former husband and that McCoy's jealous rage over this impending reconciliation led him to kill her and go out seeking to kill Mors.

In his search for Mors he went to the Mors antique shop, where, according to his own story, he planned to shoot Mr. Mors and then kill Mr. and Mrs. Sam Schapp, who operated a shop next door and who recently had made efforts to bring about a reconciliation between Mr. and Mrs. Mors.

What he actually did was to wound Wm. Ross, a patron, who happened to enter the Mors establishment, and six and Mrs Schapp, whom he pursued into their shop when they refused to be lured into the Mors place. None of the three was wounded seriously.

In telling the shooting affray McCoy explained over and over again that he had been drinking, and that he was crazed with shock and grief and out of his head.

Mors was on his way to his shop about the time McCoy entered it, and but for the fact that his automobile broke down, would have reached his place of business in the midst of the former pugilist's shooting ory.

By the time the machine could be repaired, however, newboys were shouting extras whose headline warned Mors that McCoy was amuck. He accordingly remained away until McCoy was safe in a cell at the city jail, charged with suspicion of murder, assault with a deadly weapon, with intent to kill and robbery.

He is satisfied—so will you be if you use

Visit of Mr. W. J. S. Ryall

(H. F. SHORTIS.)

By the Silvia to-day, our former fellow-citizen, Mr. W. J. S. Ryall, brother of the genial "Sam," at Anderson's, who arrived here by the Rosalind, returns to his home in Brooklyn, New York, after having spent a very happy time with his friends in his native city. Mr. Ryall is a frequent visitor to St. John's, and never forgets his old home. Nothing short of his important political duties prevented him from being present at our Annual Regatta on Quidi Vidi Lake on August 6th, in which he has always taken the deepest interest and played such a prominent part in years gone by. But it is needless to say he visited the historic Lake, the scene of his former glory.

Mr. Ryall has always been an enthusiastic and valued supporter of the Republican Party and is fully confident that Coolidge will be elected to the Presidency in the coming campaign. The Brooklyn Eagle newspaper of a recent date has the following reference to the important part taken by our countryman in the public affairs of the Great Republic:—"W. J. S. Ryall, of 214 Lafayette Pl., who, when he is not playing politics in the 11th A.D., runs a clothing store at 232 Livingston St., is one of the spokesmen for Major Allyn. On the Murphy outing to Roton Point last week he made life miserable for some of the other speakers by openly seeking support for his Congressional candidate. Ryall came very near spoiling Murphy's whole day for him, and even John T. Rafferty, who isn't easily upset, didn't enjoy his luncheon as well as he might if Ryall had stayed at home."

"We in the 11th District object to the flagrant manner in which Calder and Murphy treat us, as though we were no one," said Ryall. Senator Calder is supposed to be out of politics, but as far as I can see he's very much in it. Our County Committee, of which Thomas E. Brown is chairman, has endorsed Major Allyn for Congress and "Jimmy" Bly for State Senator. The Major is going into the primary no matter what happens."

It will be seen from the above that Mr. Ryall wields considerable influence in the political field in the land of the Stars and Stripes, and doubtless his early training in the political arena in the days of Kent, Shea and O'Mara, not forgetting the irrepressible Dr. Dearnin when they made their headquarters on the historic Beach, now comes into requisition, and evidently Mr. Ryall generally holds the "five of trumps" and manages to win in the ball of the election of the candidate for Senator or any other public position. Our countrymen always come to the front in the land of their adopt'ed, and I need only mention the high and responsible positions attained in their respective walks of life to prove the truth of my assertion. In telegraphy we have Supt. Thomas F. Foley, Edwin F. Howell and numerous others. In the marine service such competent commanders as Captains Tucker, the three Daltons, Pike, Donnelly, Sullivan, Kelly, Morrissey, McGrath and scores of others. In trade and commerce it was the same, and as artisans and contractors they could not be excelled. In the American Navy they were noted for their heroism, and many of them rose to positions of responsibility. The late Jack McGrath was Secretary to President Roosevelt. Judging from present indications, the Republican Party will win in the coming contest, and that will leave Mr. Ryall sufficient time to take matters easy. I trust he will not be late for our next annual Regatta which President Hiscock and his Committee are determined to make the most interesting and successful ever held on the waters of historic Quidi Vidi. I may add that Mr. Ryall made an important suggestion to me during the visit, viz: that the reporters of the city newspapers should get the names, and publish them, of the ladies and gentlemen who take part in the concerts on board the Rosalind and Silvia, as well as other ships, when quite a handsome sum is realized and handed over to the Marine Disaster Fund. It would create a greater interest in this truly benevolent undertaking, and I am sure would add to the proceeds of the entertainments. It is only natural that strangers would like to see their efforts appreciated in print, and it would also induce others to follow their example in assisting such a praiseworthy object. Anyhow, there is no harm in trying, as those whose names appear will talk matters over with their friends.

Hall Caine's Gigantic Literary Masterpiece

"THE PRODIGAL SON" OPENS AT THE NICKEL MONDAY.

The Nickel Theatre again scores one, and in securing Hall Caine's tremendous story "The Prodigal Son" it offers to patrons of the screen in St. John's something away from the "beaten path" of entertainment. Something that will thrill and entertain. The sort of photoplay you have waited to see for a month.

The grandeur of the authentic scenes in Iceland where the major portions of the action occurs, have not yet been surpassed. Part of the action takes place in England and part around the gambling tables of the Casino at Monte Carlo; these scenes also are authentic. The long frozen expanses of waste lands, so impressively bleak and barren, form an ideal background for the tragic story of "The Prodigal Son." Here are no costly sets, no scenes featuring gorgeous feminine apparel, no artificialities of any sort. "The Prodigal Son" deals only in fundamentals, the fundamental of life enacted against nature's own scenery.

One of the reasons why this feature is so deserving of a niche in the Movie Hall of fame is the fact that the story and all its characters are absolutely true to life. The Prodigal Son is no stereotyped movie villain, but the only too common type of young man who, not wholly bad, but lacking in constancy in his love affairs and moral stamina in all human relationships, brings nothing but sorrow and tragedy to those whose lives are touched by his.

Disease Amongst Horses Thought to be Glanders

What appears to be a serious disease has made its appearance among the horses here. We have been told that some time ago a horse was imported suffering from some trouble, and now the malady has spread to a number of others. It has somewhat the symptoms of glanders in the chronic form, though it possibly may be chronic catarrh, which is sometimes mistaken for the other and more serious disease. However, in view of the likelihood of the disease being glanders, and since that disease is contagious not only to horses but also conveyable to human beings in a very fatal form, we direct the attention of the Department of Agriculture and urge that the Government veterinarian be sent here and make a thorough investigation; and the animals affected (or some of them) should be given the mallein test.—Western Star.

Strike Notices Posted

It was reported last week that another strike would take place at Corner Brook. Notices were posted calling for a strike after the 15th unless the carpenters were given a nine hour day without a cut in pay. No one seems to know by whom the notices were posted. Little or no heed was given to the threat and on Saturday everybody was at work as usual. It was thought by some that the work of posting the notices referred to was a hoax. The threatening of strikes, however, are of too serious a nature to be made a joke.—Western Star.

Last Showing of Harold Lloyd To-Night

"GIRL SHY DESERVES UNQUALIFIED PRAISE."

So seldom does it happen nowadays that a motion picture is seen worthy of receiving unqualified and superlative praise that it was a distinct pleasure to see Harold Lloyd's latest Pathecomedie, "Girl Shy," at the Nickel theatre. Here is a picture that may be recommended to anyone as being the most worthwhile thing that we have had the enjoyment of viewing in a long, long time.

Lloyd is seen as a small town tailor's apprentice, who, bashful to an extreme degree, is trying to make a secret study of girls. And the more he studies them, the more he fears them. He makes the part one calculated to win the sympathies of any audience at the outset.

Besides being one long laugh, "Girl Shy" has added merit of possessing a really dramatic story as its background. The supporting cast, a small but entirely capable one, includes Jobyna Ralson as the feminine lead, Richard Daniels and Carlton Griffin. Fred Newmeyer and Sam Taylor co-directed from a story by Taylor, Ted Wilde, Tim Whelan and Tommy Gray.

Another delightful feature to this bill is a programme of high class songs, rendered by the talented St. John's contralto Miss Marjorie Hutchings on Monday in conjunction with the gigantic photoplay. Miss Hutchings will be heard in an all new bill of popular operatic songs.

The Battle of Jutland.

By FORE TOP in Review of Reviews.

This article is dedicated to the immortal memory of Commander Loftin Jones, Y.C., and the ship's company of the Shark. Great hearts in a little ship.

After one hundred years of scrutiny and analysis the incidents and the conduct of the Battle of Trafalgar are still to some extent a matter of conjecture and of argument. The same fate probably awaits the Battle of Jutland. We have not had the full story yet; we are never likely to get it. The central figures in the battle, Beatty and Jellicoe, are unlikely ever to commit the secrets of their hearts to paper; the records are faulty and incomplete, discrepancies of time and of position exist and cannot be corrected, the mass of data is too enormous to be effectively co-ordinated. For all these reasons much will for ever remain speculative and contentious. But apart from the professional and technical side of the matter, the fact remains that no very satisfactory broad account of the action has yet appeared, and so this article is an attempt to give a general outline of what took place in the North Sea on May 31st, 1916. Let us take a glance at the events leading up to that date.

During the month of May a good many plans of re-distribution of the various fleets and squadrons were being made or under consideration, and consequently the Grand Fleet as a whole cannot be regarded, as being at its highest point of efficiency in view of disturbances caused by all this reorganisation. For instance, the whole of the Grand Fleet destroyer flotillas were being re-grouped and had never been exercised together.

At this time Jellicoe prepared a plan to try to bring the Germans out to fight. By sending some ships to cruise from the Skagerrak to the Sound he hoped to lure out some enemy ships in pursuit which would fall into submarine and mine traps, while our battleships and battle cruisers would be waiting near at hand. By coincidence Admiral Scheer, in command of the German fleet, was meditating a move at the same time. Verdun had just proved a terrible disappointment to the German people and they were calling for the fleet to do something to justify its existence and the money spent on it. Scheer made very bold plans. He would station his submarines and his battle cruisers and then bombard Sunderland with his battle cruisers. When our ships came out to catch the battle cruisers they would fall among the submarines and those which escaped would pursue the German battle cruisers and be led by them into the arms of the German battleships waiting at a certain spot. These plans were frustrated by bad weather, and on May 30th had to be abandoned. The German battle cruisers under Admiral Hipper were, instead, ordered to cruise towards the Skagerrak while von Scheer followed him with the battleships.

The British system of intelligence was so good that by mid-day on May 30th the Admiralty was able to warn Jellicoe that a big German move was afoot. At 5 p.m. it was known that the whole German High Seas Fleet had received orders to go to sea; by 5.40 p.m. Jellicoe at Scapa and Beatty at Rosyth had been told of this, and by 10.30 p.m. the whole of the British Grand Fleet was proceeding to a position off the Skagerrak, the battle cruisers and the fast battle squadron (fifth) under Beatty were proceeding to a rendezvous some seventy miles to the southward of Jellicoe. So far, however, nothing had happened of a nature to indicate that all this was but one more of the numerous false alarms. At 2 p.m. on May 31st Beatty, in his flagship Lion, accompanied by Princess Royal, Queen Mary, Tiger, New Zealand, and Indefatigable, was some fifteen miles away from the rendezvous with his light cruisers eight miles ahead. Unknown to him Admiral Hipper, with the German battle cruisers, was fifty miles to the eastward, while fifty miles behind Hipper the commander-in-chief, Scheer, was following with the German battleships. Both Hipper and Scheer were in complete ignorance of the presence of our ships. It was a situation fraught with possibilities and had all gone well Scheer must have found himself brought to action with the whole of our Grand Fleet and with his retreat cut off. But now see what happened. One of Hipper's light cruisers and one of Beatty's light cruisers, neither of which could see each other, sighted the same steamer, which was steaming in between them. The German light cruiser sent a destroyer to examine this steamer while our light cruiser went herself to do so. As they neared the steamer they sighted each other and the upshot was probably unlucky for us. Beatty, on receiving the signal, which was also passed to Jellicoe, "two enemy cruisers in sight," at once altered course to cut off their retreat, and steamed away from his rendezvous with Jellicoe. It is permissible to believe that had that steamer not been sighted and had the British and German ships remained on their courses, oblivious for some time of the presence of each other, that we might have brought the Germans to action under far more favourable conditions than we actually did. Beatty continued his efforts to cut off the retreat of the enemy which our light cruiser had sighted, but it is important to note that until 3.20 Beatty and Hipper were mutually unaware of the presence of each other and were thinking, as also was Jellicoe, that it was a mere affair of outpost between light forces. But at 3.20 Hipper sighted Beatty's battle cruisers fourteen miles away, and at 3.30 Beatty sighted Hipper. Hipper at once turned tail, hoping to draw Beatty after him towards Scheer's battleships. Visibility was bad; range-finding was difficult in atmospheric conditions which made distances appear greater than they were. Deceived by this Beatty held his fire, so sacrificing the great advantage of our guns of heavier calibre. The Germans must have been greatly relieved by our not opening fire much earlier than we did. Finally, our battle cruisers opened fire at 3.45 at what was believed to be 15,000 yards, but was probably not more than 16,000. We had lost a great opportunity of beginning well, and well begun is half done, as we were to find out.

War is a series of little mistakes leading to missed chances, and another occurred now. Beatty was in a superiority of one ship over his opponent. He ordered two of his ships to concentrate their fire on the German flagship while each of the others fired on one of the German ships. The signal was wrongly understood and for ten minutes the German ship was not fired at all! The range rapidly decreased, but we did very little damage to the enemy, and the German shooting was better than ours at this moment. By four o'clock the action was raging and the German fire was fast and effective. It was at this moment that Lion received a hit by which she would probably have been sunk save for the gallantry of a marine officer, Major Harvey, who, mortally wounded and with both his legs shot off, passed an order to flood the magazines of his turret, and so saved a fatal explosion. For this action he was posthumously awarded the Victoria Cross. At this moment also Indefatigable was struck by three shells, the explosion penetrated to her magazines; in a moment, with her crew of over 1,000, she was gone. The ships were never better than at this time and in the confusion of smoke and flame, with the water roaring up all round the ships as the shells fell, few can have had a clear perception of what was happening. Beatty turned slightly away, until at 4.5 he was out of range of the enemy.

At this moment Admiral Evan Thomas, commanding the fifth battle squadron—the fast battleships, Desham (flag), Valiant, Warspite, and Malaya—sighted Hipper's battle cruisers for the first time and opened fire on them. The shooting of this superb squadron was magnificent, and nothing but the inferior quality of our shells saved the German battle cruisers, for they were hit repeatedly. Praise is, as a rule, invidious, but it would be wrong to withhold it in this instance from the Flag-Captain of the fifth battle squadron, A. W. Craig, an officer of the calmest courage and of the highest intellectual capacities, to whose personal initiative and unremitting energy the unexampled firing of this squadron was due. It was a great loss to the Navy when he retired shortly after being promoted to the rank of Rear-Admiral. At 4.17 Hipper had closed the range and opened fire on our battle cruisers once more. Two of his ships concentrated on Queen Mary, a salvo struck her, and in a flare of red flame and black smoke she disappeared, taking with her a ship's company of 1,266 souls. At this point the Germans had succeeded beyond their wildest dreams: in the short space of half an hour they had sunk two of our battle cruisers and suffered no loss in doing so. But their fire was deteriorating under the attack of the fifth battle squadron. Up to this time it must be recalled that Beatty was in complete ignorance of the presence of Scheer with the German battleships. But now, at 4.32, to his astonishment these battleships were reported in sight. The signal must, at first, have seemed incredible to him, but two minutes later his eyes confirmed it as the vast German armada came into view. There was only one thing to do, and he did it—he shaped course at once, and at full speed, to the northward to join Jellicoe. The fifth battle squadron followed with him; there was a running fight, the fury of which gradually abated until our ships had run out of range, while the Germans followed them up in ignorance of Jellicoe's presence. Jellicoe was twenty-three miles away in his flagship Iron Duke, and had with him, as well as his battleships, three battle-cruisers led by Admiral Hood, as well as cruisers, light cruisers, and destroyers. In addition to the ships of the fifth battle squadron he had twenty-four Dreadnoughts and six super-Dreadnoughts led by Scheer. His gun armament ranged from 12-inch to 16-inch while the German armament had nothing greater than 12-inch. The German torpedoes armament was, as he believed, though it is doubtful, superior, and the German ships enjoyed better protection. These considerations induced in Jellicoe a determination not to come to close range
