PREFACE.

The only grammatical forms which the student need know before beginning this book are the terminations of the first, second, and third declensions of the regular noun; the regular adjective of the first and second declension; the regular verb, active, passive and deponent, together with the irregular verbs esse, ire, and ferre.

No general English-Latin vocabulary is given. The teacher should supply vocabulary only after the pupil has expressed the English idiom in the form required by the Latin.

Each Latin exercise, with the foot-notes relating to it, should be carefully studied for vocabulary, syntax, and idioms, before the English exercise is turned into Latin.

After each Supplementary Exercise, the teacher should assign a connected passage of his own, to be done by the pupil without help of any kind. Some of the Latin exercises, which are for the most part extracts from Caesar's Gallic War, will serve the purpose if turned into idiomatic English. For an example compare Supplementary Exercise XI. with page 25, sentence 12.

LATIN COMPOSITION

BASED ON CAESAR

LESSON I.

THE ACCUSATIVE AND INFINITIVE CONSTRUCTION.

1. After a verb of perceiving or declaring, the English noun clause beginning with the conjunction "that" (expressed or understood) is translated into Latin as follows:

- (a) The conjunction "that" is always omitted.
- (b) The subject of the noun clause stands in the Accusative.
- (c) The verb in the noun clause is in the Infinitive:

as,
Legatus dicit (putat) Caesarem adesse. The lieutenant-general says (thinks) that Caesar is present.

We sometimes use the same construction in English; e.g., The lieutenant-general declares Caesar to be present. The difference is that English does not often use this construction; Latin always does.

Translate into Latin:

1. The scont announces that the Germans are crossing the Rhine.
2. Caesar perceives that the Germans are waiting for their cavalry.
3. A scout informs the Britons that the Romans are approaching the island.
4. According to Caesar, Britain was densely populated.¹
5. Caesar wrote² to the senate that Lahienus had conquered the Belgae.³
6. Divitiacus begged Caesar not to put⁴ his hrothier to death. He knew, he said,⁵ that these charges were true and that⁶ no one was more deserving of capital punishment.

*Use the words which you already know.

*This is equal to a verb of declaring because=declared by letter.

*After writing this sentence retranslate it into English and make sure that it cannot mean that the Belgae had conquered Labienus.

*Render by ne and Subjunctive.

*Omit. Put a colon or semi-colon at the end of the last sentence and go on with the Accusative and Infinitive. See the Latin Exercitae, page 79, Note 2; also Snpp. Ex. XVI., Note 2.

*And not=neque. And no one=nec quisquam.

LESSON II.

THE TENSE IN THE ACCUSATIVE AND INFINITIVE CONSTRUCTION.

1. (a) Use the Present Infinitive when the time is the same as that of the main verb.

(b) Use the Perfect Infinitive when the time is previous to that of the main verb.

2. Examples of (a):

He says (now) that Caesar is present (now).

He said (yesterday) that Caesar was present (yesterday).

The time expressed by "is present" in the first sentence is the same as the time expressed by the main verb (says). And the time expressed by "was present" in the second sentence is the same as the time expressed by the main verb (said). Therefore, use the Present Infinitive in both sentences: thus,

Dicit Caesarem adesse.

Dixit Caesarem adesse.

3. Examples of (b):

He says (now) that Caesar was present (yesterday).

He said (yesterday) that Caesar was (or had been) present (the day before yesterday).

The time expressed by "was present" in the first sentence is previous to the time expressed by the main verb (says), and the time expressed by "was" (or "had been") "present" in the second sentence is previous to the time expressed by the main verb (said). Therefore, use the Perfect Infinitive in both sentences: thus,

Dicit Caesarem adfuisse.

Dixit Caesarem adfuisse.

4. Use the Future Infinitive, of course, if the time is subsequent to that of the main verb: as,

Caesar dicit se venturum esse. Caesar says that he will come.

Caesar dixit se venturum esse. Caesar said that he would come.

N.B.—Notice that the reflexive se must be used when the subject of the Infinitive is the same as the subject of the main verb. If the subjects are different, use a demonstrative: as,

Caesar dixit cum venturum esse. Caesar said that he (meaning Labienus) would come.

Translate into Latin:

1. The scout announced that they had broken up their (movere) camp.
2. The Gauls said that they were friendly to the Romans.
3. They say that Caesar put the captives to death.
4. The non-arrival of the corn excited in the mind of Caesar a suspicion¹ that the Helvetii were playing him false.
5. The story goes² that Romulus held the sovereign power for thirty years.
6. The Germans had encamped on unfavourable ground, under the supposition that the Romans were still on the other bank of the Rhine.
7. Caesar wrote to Labienus that he would come to him at once.

¹Use the verb suspicio and for the rest depend upon your own vocabulary. Simplify the whole sentence.

²*Fama est.* A phrase with the same sense as a verb of speaking will of course be followed by the Accusative and Infinitive.

LESSON III.

THE ACCUSATIVE AND THE FUTURE INFINITIVE AFTER CERTAIN VERBS.—VERBS OF FEARING.

1. Verbs signifying to hope, promise, undertake, swear, and threaten are followed by the Accusative and the Future Infinitive when futurity is implied: as,
Jurat se Romanos non deserturum. He swears not to desert the Romans.

N.B.—Be careful, however, with the verb suscipio in the sense of "undertake." It may have a noun as object but not a noun clause. You may say: Opus suscepit, for "he undertook the task," but, "He undertook to do this" = Pollicitus est se hoc facturum.

2. After a verb of fearing, "lest" (or "that" meaning "lest"), is to be translated by ne, "that . . . not" or "lest . . . not" by ne non or ut. The verb is in the Subjunctive: as,

Timebant ne circumvenirentur. They feared that they would (or lest they should) be surrounded.

Timeo ne non (or ut) opus suscipias. I fear that you will not undertake the task.

N.B.—Observe that the Latin Present Subjunctive has here the force of a Future Tense.

Translate into Latin:

1. Labienus feared that the scout would not discover the enemy's camp.
2. Caesar feared the ships would not come.
3. Labienus was protecting the harbours lest the Gauls should seize the ships.
4. Caesar feared the Aedui would not send cavalry.
5. Caesar feared lest¹ Labienus should be conquered not by the enemy but by famine.
6. Hannibal swore to capture the city of Rome.
7. Because he feared a renewal of hostilities on the part of the Gauls, Caesar hastened² to the army.
8. He promised to send out the soldiers on a foraging expedition.³

¹Use ne...non here for "lest...not." You will then get the proper contrast between "not by the enemy" and "but by famine."

²*Properare* or contendere. If you use maturare you must have an Infinitive like ire or profcisci.

³The supine in um can translate purpose.

LESSON IV.

Ut AND Ne AFTER VERBS OF PERSUADING, ETC.

1. With verbs like "persuade," "warn," "advise," if you have the idea of urging or inducing somebody to do something, the subordinate clause is to be rendered by an ut clause (ne if negative): as,

Caesar Labieno persuasit ut sine mora ad se veniret.
Caesar persuaded Labienus to come to him at once.

2. If the idea of urging or inducing somebody to do something is not present, use the Acc. and Infin.; as,

Caesar Labieno persuasit hostes adesse. Caesar persuaded Labienus that the enemy were at hand.

3. The rule for the Tense of the Subjunctive in (1) is the same as that for clauses of purpose. After a Present or Future Tense use the Present Subjunctive; after a Past Tense use the Imperfect Subjunctive.

N.B.—The Historic Present and the English Perfect with "have" may be followed by either the Present or the Imperfect.

4. Jubeo and veto take the same construction as English, thus,

Jubeo (veto) eum abire. I order (forbid) him to go.

Translate into Latin:

1. The lieutenant-general persuades the slave to carry the news¹ to the islanders.
2. Caesar wrote² to his officers to keep the army within their lines.³
3. The consul advised his colleague to break⁴ up his camp without delay.
4. As⁵ their supply of ammuni-

tion⁵ ran short, the Gauls were unable to hold their position. 5. To render their own return impossible,⁶ the Helvetii set fire to their towns and villages. 6. Caesar said that they would never persuade him to make terms with an enemy under arms. 7. Caesar wrote to Labienus that his supply of ammunition had run short.⁷

'Res may denote anything which can be supplied from the context. If you use nuntiare the meaning of res will be clear.

'Caesar is getting his officers to do something by writing to them.

'Use your own vocabulary. 'Move.

'Say "on account of the lack of."

'Use posse with a negative.

*'Use desicere. You cannot do this sentence like 4, though you might turn 4 so that desicere could be used in it also.*

LESSON V.

Cum TEMPORAL, CAUSAL AND CONCESSIVE.

1. Cum meaning "since" or "although" always takes the Subjunctive.

2. In relating past events cum meaning "when" takes the Subjunctive, and the Tense should be Imperfect or Pluperfect according to the meaning: as,

Cum Caesar portum intraret (intravisset), nautae praedam in aquam ejecerunt. When Caesar was entering (entered or had entered) the harbour, the sailors threw the plunder overboard.

3. If, however, the "when" clause really contains the main idea, and the principal clause is the clause of time, cum is used with the Perfect Indicative; as,

Iam ver appetebat, cum Hannibal castra movit. Spring was already approaching when Hannibal broke up his camp.

This is equal to: "When spring was approaching," etc., and might be translated according to (2) above.

Cum iam ver appeteret, Hannibal castra movit.

N.B.—Notice that the cum-clause when it contains the main idea comes after the principal clause.
Translate into Latin:

1. In Caesar's absence¹ the army stormed the town.
2. Since the islanders were making preparations² for war, Caesar took possession of the town.
3. Now that³ he had conquered Gaul he resolved to cross the Rhine with a view⁴ to terrifying the Germans.
4. When it came to Caesar's ears that the Helvetii intended to march through the Province, he hastened from Italy into Gaul.
5. Saying⁴ this in a loud voice, he jumped overboard.⁵
6. Not many days had elapsed,⁵ when envoys came from Ariovistus.
7. When Caesar was giving an audience to the ambassadors of the Gauls, the Germans crossed⁶ the Rhine.
8. The ship was approaching the shore, when the standard-bearer jumped overboard.

¹Use a cum-clause for practice.

²*Bellum parare*—to prepare for war.

³Always look to the meaning and translate the idea, using if possible words which you already know.

⁴When he had said. ⁵*Intercedere*.

LESSON VI.

CLAUSES OF RESULT.

1. Compare the following sentences:—

(a) Caesar came quickly that he might surprise the enemy.

(b) Caesar came so quickly that he surprised the enemy.

The subordinate clause in (a) is a clause of purpose, but in (b) it is a clause of result.

2. A clause of result is translated by ut with the subjunctive; as,

Tam celeriter Caesar venit ut hostes oppimeret.
So quickly did Caesar come that he surprised the enemy.

3. When a clause of result is negative, use ut (not ne, as in a clause of purpose) and retain the same negative as in the English; thus,

Tam celeriter Caesar venit ut nemo eum videret.
Caesar came so quickly that nobody saw him.

N.B.—Do not employ the reflexive se in a clause of result to refer to the subject of the principal verb. In a similar clause expressing purpose, se would be put for eum; thus,

Caesar celeriter venit ne quis se videret. Caesar came quickly that nobody (lit. lest anybody) might see him.

Observe, also, that the negative purpose begins with ne (lest) and the English must be re-arranged to suit the sense; thus, that not, or in order that not=lest (ne).

that nobody, or in order that nobody=lest anybody (ne quis).

that nothing, or in order that nothing=lest anything (ne quid) that never, or in order that never=lest ever (ne umquam).

that nowhere, or in order that nowhere=lest anywhere (ne usquam).

4. The rule for the tense of the subjunctive in a clause of result is as follows:—

(a) After a Present or Future Tense use the Present or Perfect Subjunctive.

The English will make it clear whether to use the Present or the Perfect.

(b) After a Past Tense use the Imperfect Subjunctive.

Some very important exceptions to this rule will be found on page 85, but they are not necessary for the exercise which follows.

Translate into Latin:

1. Death has such¹ terrors for him that he remains at home.²
2. So much did he hate the din³ of the city that he remained in the country.
3. The general offered up a prayer⁴ to Juppiter for help. 4. The Remi persuaded⁵ their neighbors to enter upon hostilities again. 5. The Remi persuaded⁵ their neighbors that the Romans were getting ready for war. 6. There was some danger⁶ of the women meeting their death amidst the flying darts of the combatants.⁷ 7. They were so cowardly that they retreated and never⁸ fought again. 8. Such was the energy⁹ of the soldiers that the heavy transports equalled¹⁰ the men-of-war in speed. 9. The Roman nation is of such a character that it¹¹ cannot rest¹² under a defeat.¹³ 10. As a result of this¹⁴ Themistocles became famous.¹⁵ 11. Caesar drew up his army in such a way that no one could cross the river. 12. Caesar drew up his army close to the river that no one might be able to cross. 13. So great was the power of Rome at that time, both for offensive¹⁶ and defensive¹⁸ tactics, that the neighboring states did not venture¹⁷ on a declaration of war.

Talis=such, of such a character. Tantus=so great, of such a size.

Domi. An old Case called the Locative gave the idea of place where. In the first and second Declensione its form is that of the Gen. Sing. Some examples are: domi (at home), ruri (in the country), Romae (at Rome), Corinthi (at Corinth).

Strepitus. Precor.

"Ask yourself the question whether the Remi are inducing anybody to do anything. See Lesson IV.

Periculum erat has the same force as a verb of fearing.

Present Participle. "And never=nec umquam." Virtus.

Adequo. Say, "equalised the speed of," and it is better to make a person do a thing in Latin.

"The Relative is often substituted for a conjunction + a personal or demonstrative pronoun. Ut ea=quae. The same thing may be seen in a clause of purpose, e.g., Legatos misit qui (=ut si) pacem peterent. He sent ambassadore who (=in order that they) might seek peace.

Quiescere. "Say, "(when) defeated."

Quo factum est. "Inlustrare, but mind the Voice.

Robur=power of resistance, vires=power of attacking.

"The Imperfect Subjunctive is the regular past tense when the main verb is a past tense. It is not to be restricted to continuous or repeated action.

CLAUSES OF PURPOSE. VERBS OF ASKING, ETC.

1. The idea of purpose must never be expressed in Latin prose by the Infinitive, but by ut (neg. ne), with the Present or Imperfect Subjunctive. See the previous lesson and page 86. For other constructions see the Index.

2. Verbs of asking, advising, and commanding followed by an Infinitive in English give the idea of urging or inducing somebody to do something. For the Latin idiom see Lesson IV., §1 and §3.

Exceptions: Jubeo (I command), and veto (I forbid), take the Infinitive as in English: thus,

Jubeo (veto) eum abire. I order (forbid) him to go.
Translate into Latin:

1. The Gauls beg the senate to defend them from injury at the hands of Caesar. 2. Caesar ordered Labienus to hold the harbour for fear that he should be compelled¹ to remain in Britain. 3. Since they feared that the defence of the town was an impossibility² for them, owing to their lack of ammunition, the inhabitants could not be prevented by³ their chiefs from⁴ surrendering. 4. The Helvetii said that they were prevented by Dumnorix from⁴ sending the corn that day.⁵ 5. The senate issued an order to Caesar not⁶ to comply with the demands of the Gauls.

³The agent, or person, by whom a thing is done must have a or ab expressed.

⁴After a verb of hindering use ne or quo minus with subj.; thus, Galli nautas deterrebant ne (or quo minus) portum intrent. Ne (lest) or quo minus (by which the less) they might enter=from entering. If the verb of hindering is negative quin with the subj. may be used.

⁵Abl. without a prep.

⁶Do not use jubeo with a negative. Use veto or impero with ne.

LESSON VII.

THE PERFECT PARTICIPLE PASSIVE.

1. The Perfect Participle Passive is formed from the Supine by changing um into us. It agrees, like an adjective, in Gender, Number, and Case with the noun which it qualifies.

2. The following are some Perfect Participles Passive, with their meaning:

comparatus, -a, -um,	having been collected or procured
factus, -a, -um,	" " done or made
confectus, -a, -um,	" " completed
interfectus, -a, -um,	" " killed
vulneratus, -a, -um,	" " wounded
cognitus, -a, -um,	" " known or learnt
missus, -a, -um,	" " sent
emissus, -a, -um,	" " sent out
praemissus, -a, -um,	" " sent forward
commissus, -a, -um,	" " joined or begun (in reference to battle)
relictus, -a, -um,	" " left
expositus, -a, -um,	" " placed outside of
pulsus, -a, -um,	" " driven
repulsus, -a, -um,	" " driven back
expulsus, -a, -um,	" " driven out
repertus, -a, -um,	" " found
acceptus, -a, -um,	" " received

N. B.—The Perfect Participle Passive may be rendered “being collected,” “being done,” “being completed,” etc., or more simply still, “collected,”

"done," "completed." The last form is that usually given as the third principal part of the verb in English grammar.

3. If a noun is used along with the Perfect Participle Passive, and if that noun is not the subject or object of a verb, or the objective after a preposition, then both the noun and the participle stand in the Ablative Case: thus,

The plan having been discovered, Caesar hastened into Gaul. Cognito consilio Caesar in Galliam contendit.

Here the noun "plan" is not the subject or object of a verb, nor is it objective after a preposition, and the participle "having been discovered" is used in close connection with it. Both noun and participle are in the Ablative Case in Latin. This construction is called the Ablative Absolute.

VOCABULARY.

injicere	to throw into, cast upon
ejecte	to throw out
perpauci, -ae, -a	very few
conjuratio (f.)	league, conspiracy

Translate into idiomatic English:

1. Comparato frumento Caesar Rhenum transiit.
2. Facto proelio Germani ad Caesarem legatos de pace miserunt.
3. Germanico bello confecto Caesar Rhenum transire statuit.
4. Germani post tergum clamore auditio se ex castris ejecerunt.
5. Magno numero imperfecto, reliqui se in flumen praecipitaverunt.
6. Milites nostri, perpaucis vulneratis, se in castra receperunt.
7. Interim consilio Caesaris cognito, legati a multis Britanniae civitatibus ad eum veniunt. 8. Conjuratione facta, Britanni paulatim ex castris discedere coeperunt. 9. Commissario proelio nostrorum militum impetum hostes sustinere non potuerunt. 10. Laudatis militibus, legatos ad portum Itium conveniro jubet. 11. Navibus ad Britannicum bellum comparatis, Indutiomarum ad se cum ducentis obsidibns venire jussit. 12. Labieno in continenti relicto ut portum tueretur, Caesar ipse ad Britanniam proficiscitur. 13. Caesar expositis militibus de tertia vigilia ad hostes contendit. 14. Hostes ab equitibus repulsi se in silvas¹ abdiderunt. 15. Munito loco, Caesar custodias pro castris ponit. 16. Castris vallo fossaque munitis Caesar custodias in moenibus disponit.

¹The enemy were not in the woods; they went into the woods to hide, hence silvas is in Acc.

Translate into Latin, using the Ablative Absolute wherever possible:

- After the battle was begun² the enemy beat a retreat.
- Leaving the tenth legion³ on the continent, Caesar sets out for Britain.
- Having found a suitable place for a camp Caesar hastened against the enemy at the third watch.
- On defeating the enemy Caesar led his army back to the sea without delay.
- Having summoned the engineers he began to fortify the camp.
- Having fortified his position Caesar sent out the cavalry.
- Having explored the woods the cavalry brought back word that the enemy had departed. 8. On learning the plan of the Britons Caesar led his army into the territory of Cassivellaunus. 9. Having sent forward the cavalry Caesar ordered the legions to follow immediately. 10. After his territory had been devastated Cassivellaunus sent ambassadors to Caesar. 11. Caesar orders Cassivellaunus to send him hostages. 12. When he had received the hostages Caesar led his army back to the sea. 13. Seizing the ships of the Menapii the Germans crossed the Rhine. 14. Having taken the town by assault Caesar put the senate to the sword. 15. The Tencteri, being driven out of their territory by the Suebi, crossed the Rhine with a great multitude of men. 16. Exasperated by the obstinate defence the Romans spared neither age^s nor sex in the conquered town.

²Turn the clause thus, "The battle having been begun."

³Turn into, "The tenth legion being left."

"Hostages being received."

"Can the Abl. Abs. be used here? Absolut. means independent. "Tencteri" is not grammatically independent. It is the subject of the verb "crossed." Mind the sense."

LESSON VIII.

1. In the previous exercise it should be noticed that the participle in the Ablative Absolute was always Passive Voice. When the English was given in the Active, the phrase had always to be turned into the Passive before translating it into Latin. Thus in the third sentence of the last exercise, "having found a suitable place" was turned into "a suitable place having been found." It should now be observed that if the verb is intransitive it will be impossible to turn the participle into the Passive. Thus in the sentence, "Having come to the territory of the enemy, Caesar pitched his camp," the clause "having come to the territory of the enemy" cannot be turned into the Passive, because there is no Passive for the verb "to come," which is intransitive. It will, therefore, be impossible to translate "having come to the territory of the enemy" by the Ablative Absolute construction. Say, therefore:

When he had come to the territory of the enemy, Caesar pitched his camp. Caesar cum ad hostium fines venisset castra posuit.

REVIEW OF THE FIRST DECLENSION.

Ripa, bank (of river)

Nouns of the First Declension are Feminine except names of males, which are, of course, Masculine.

Translate into idiomatic English:

1. Caesar, cum suos urgeri vidisset, in primam aciem processit.
2. Caesar ubi suos urgeri vidit, manipulos laxare jussit.
3. Caesar, ubi suos urgeri vidit, in primam aciem processit, centurionibusque nominatim appellatis, signa inferre et manipulos laxare jussit. 4. LESSON IX.

THE PERFECT PARTICIPLE OF DEONENT VERBS.

1. Since Deponent verbs have a Passive form but an Active meaning, observe that the following Perfect Participles, being from Deponent verbs, have an Active meaning:

nanctus, having obtained hortatus, having exhorted cohortatus, having exhorted conatus, having attempted progressus, having advanced secutus, having followed veritus, having feared arbitratus, having thought

Having exhorted the soldiers, Caesar crossed the river. Cohortatus milites, Caesar flumen transiit.

Here the English is exactly the same as the Latin and need not be turned. It must be remembered, however, that this is the case only with deponent verbs. If the verb to exhort were not deponent, the phrase "having exhorted the soldiers" would have to be changed into "the soldiers having been exhorted."

Nouns ending in us and er of the Second Declension are Masculine, those in um are Neuter.

N. B.—Neuter nouns are always the same in the Nominative and Accusative, and in the Plural these Cases end in a.

³*eo*=there, when there is motion to; ibi=there, when there is no motion. ⁴*officium*.

LESSON X.

THE FUTURE INFINITIVE ACTIVE.

1. The Future Infinitive Active is formed from the Supine by changing um into urus and adding esse, which is the Present Infinitive of the verb "to be." The following are some examples:

nuntiaturus esse, will or would announce processurus esse, will or would advance reversurus esse, will or would return transiturus esse, will or would cross venturus esse, will or would come permissurus esse, will or would entrust futurus esse, will or would be neglecturus esse, will or would neglect

2. The Future Infinitive is used in the Accusative and the Infinitive construction whenever a future meaning is required. Thus:

Legati dixerunt se Caesari obsides datus esse.
 The ambassadors said that they would give hostages to Cæsar.

Observe that the termination us must be changed to agree with the subject se, which in this case is Accusative Plural.

REVIEW OF THIRD DECLENSION.

Pars, a part

Singular	Plural
Nom. pars	partes
Gen. partis	partium
Dat. parti	partibus
Acc. partem	partes
Abl. parte	partibus

Nouns of one syllable ending in s or x preceded by consonant have ium in the Genitive Plural.

Translate into idiomatic English:

1. Legati rem se suis nuntiaturos esse dixerunt. 2. Caesar se longius processurum esse negavit. 3. Legati dixerunt se post diem tertium ad Caesarem reversuros¹. 4. Mercatores Cassivellauno nuntiaverunt Caesarem in Britanniam esse transiturum. 5. Hostes suspicati nostros huc esse venturos in silvis constiterunt. 6. Indutiomarus dixit se ad eum in castra esse venturum. 7. Indutiomarus dicit se suas fortunas Caesari permissurum. 8. Britanni pollicentur se obsides ad Caesarem missuros. 9. Bello Helvetiorum confecto Galliae principes ad Caesarem gratulatum convenerunt. 10. Caesar sperabat se ad oram Britanniae ante primam lucem perventurum.

Translate into Latin:

1. Caesar hopes to reach² the river before night. 2. Arioistus promises to return after the third day.

"To reach," though present tense, has a future meaning. therefore the Future Infinitive must be used in Latin. All such sentences should be turned thus: Caesar hopes that he will reach the river before night. The construction is the Accusative and the Infinitive, and the Accusative of the pronoun must be expressed. Verbs signifying to hope, promise, undertake, swear and threaten are followed by the Accusative and the Future Infinitive when futurity is implied.

3. Hannibal swears to be always an enemy to the Roman people. 4. Hannibal swore to be an enemy to the Roman people as long as he lived. 5. Ariorvistus answered that he would come to Caesar with one hundred hostages. 6. Caesar answered that he would not overlook the injuries of the Aedui. 7. The messenger promises to announce the matter to Labienus. 8. The Gauls said that they would entrust their wives and children to Caesar. 9. So great was the number of the enemy that Caesar was not able to storm the town. 10. The enemy sent reinforcements that Caesar might not take the town by storm.

LESSON XI.

THE PRINCIPAL PARTS OF THE LATIN VERB.

The principal parts of the Latin verb are the Present Indicative, the Present Infinitive, the Perfect Indicative and the Supine. They are called the principal parts because all other parts of the verb are formed from them.

Examine the following:

Pres. Indic.	Pres. Infin.	Pf. Indic.	Supine
1st Conj. laudo	laudare	laudavi	laudatum
2nd Conj. moneo	monere	monui	monitum
3rd Conj. duco	ducere	duxii	ductum
4th Conj. inunio	munire	munivi	munitum

The Conjugation of the verb is determined by the ending of the Present Infinitive: thus,

First Conjugation ends in are.

Second Conjugation ends ēre (the e before re is long).

Third Conjugation ends in ēre (the e before re is short).

Fourth Conjugation ends in ire.

The Second Conjugation is also distinguished from the Third by the fact that in the Second Conjugation the o is preceded by e.

In giving the principal parts the Present and Perfect Indicative are always in the First Person. See any verb in your vocabulary.

The Tenses are arranged underneath the principal part from which they are formed. The student should now make out the table of the other three conjugations, taking moneo, duco and munio as examples.

VOCABULARY.

pelio, peliere, pepuli, puism	to drive
expello, expellere, expull, expulsum	to drive out mitto, mittere, misi, missum	to send

Translate into English:

Quod² cum Caesar cognovisset, magnis itineribus in Galliam exercitum duxit. Germani eius³ adventu⁴ subito perterriti statim ad eum legatos de pace miserunt.

¹quo, where. ²Which. ³eius, of him, or his.

⁴adventu, Ablative Singular of adventus, which is a noun of the Fourth Declension.

Translate into Latin:

1. That year the Suebi, the most warlike nation in Germany, drove the Usipetes out of their lands. Fearing that they would cross the Rhine; Caesar at once led his army from Italy into Gaul. On arriving there¹ he discovered that they had already reached the bank of the river and were attempting to cross. To prevent their accomplishing this² he sent forward the cavalry without delay to attack³ them (as they were⁴) encumbered⁵ in the water.

¹Put this word first.

²Say which (quod). Put this word first. Latin begins a new sentence with a word that carries the mind back to the previous sentence. "This," or better "which," refers to the attempt to cross the Rhine.

³Use the Supine. ⁴Omit. ⁵*impeditus*.

LESSON XI

THE PERFECT INDICATIVE PASSIVE.

The Perfect Indicative Passive is formed by adding est for the Singular and sunt for the Plural to the Perfect Participle Passive.

Learn by heart the following Perfects Indicative Passive:

Singular	Plural
necatus est, he was killed	necati sunt, they were killed
occisus est, he was killed	occisi sunt, they were killed missus est, he was sent dimissus est, he was sent away praemissus est, he was sent forward ductus est, he was led traductus est, he was led across expulsus est, he was driven out

The termination of the Perfect Participle must be changed to agree with the subject.

The queen was killed. Regina necata est.
 The queens were killed. Reginas necatae sunt.

Table of the Passive of laudare.

laudor (1st pers.)	laudari	laudatus sum (sum is the 1st pers. of est)
Indic.	{ Pres. laudatur Imperf. laudabatur	Perf. laudatus est
Subj.	{ Pres. laudetur Imperf. laudaretur	Plpf. laudatus esset

Translate into English:

1. Hostes, abjectis armis, terga verterunt magnusque eorum numerus est occisus.
2. Itaque dies circiter viginti in eo loco commoratus est,¹ quod Corus ventus navigationem impeditiebat.
3. Legati a multis Galliae civitatibus ad Caesarem de pace missi sunt.

10. Dicunt Commium a Caesare in Britanniam praemissum² esse.
11. Tanta tempestas subito coorta est (arose) ut naves cursum tenere non possent.
12. Germani celeritate Caesaris adventus³ perterriti statim ad eum legatos de pace misserunt. His⁴ Caesar imperavit ut statim in Germaniam reverterentur et in Ubiorum finibus con-

¹This is a Deponent verb (commorari, to delay), and therefore, though Passive in form, it is active in meaning.

²To form the Perfect Infinitive Passive put esse for est c.⁴ the Perfect Indicative.

³Genitive Case of adventus.

⁴These. Observe that this word is placed first as it carries the mind back to the Germans in the previous sentence.

siderent. Haec¹ legati suis renuntiaverunt. Interea² Caesar, cum vereretur ut Germani imperata sua facerent, bellum parare coepit.

¹These things. This word is placed first because it refers to the things commanded by Caesar in the previous sentence.
²interea is placed first because it too carries the mind back to the previous sentence. Interea = meanwhile, that is, while the ambassadors were away announcing Caesar's orders to their compatriots.

Translate into Latin:

1. The Britons were frightened by the shape of the Roman ships. 2. The tenth legion was sent out to forage (supine). 3. Our cavalry was thrown into confusion by the Gallic horse. 4. The legions were taken across into Britain without their baggage. 5. The scout brought back word that our cavalry had been thrown into confusion by the Gallic horse. 6. Caesar returned to Italy. 11. Having sent the cavalry ahead to prevent² the Germans from crossing,³ Caesar hastened with all his forces to the bank of the river. Alarmed by his sudden arrival, the Germans⁴ burnt⁵ their ships and fled to their own territory. They then⁶ began to devastate their fields, that the Roman army, through lack of corn, might not be able to remain.

¹Remember that cohortor is a Deponent verb and is not Passive in meaning. ²*prohibeo*. ³Say, "to cross."

⁴Begin the sentence with this word to show connection with previous sentence.

⁵Instead of two co-ordinate verbs, "burnt" and "fled," Latin prefers to have only one main verb. Say, therefore, "their ships having been burnt, fled."

⁶Instead of saying "then," be more explicit and say, "when they arrived there." This will give you the word there with which to begin the sentence, and thus show the connection.

LESSON XIII.

ADJECTIVES OF THE THIRD DECLENSION.

The Third Declension adjective takes the same termination as the noun of the Third Declension except that the Ablative Singular is usually i (instead of e) and the Genitive Plural ium (instead of um).

LESSON XV.

THE GERUND

The Gerund is formed from the Present Participle by changing s into di: thus,

Present Part.	Gerund
1st Conj. conjurans	conjurandi
2nd Conj. manens	manendi
3rd Conj. mittens	mittendi
4th Conj. muniens	municndi

The Gerund is a verbal noun equal to the English verbal noun in ing. It has no Nominative and no Plural and is declined according to the Second Declension: thus,

Nom. (wanting)
Gen. conjurandi
Dat. conjurando
Acc. conjurandum
Abl. conjurando

The Gerund translates the English verbal noun in ing when the latter is the object of a preposition: thus,
The reason of conspiring was this. Causa conjurandi fuit haec.

By conspiring the Gauls defeated the Romans.
Conjurando Galli Romanos superaverunt.

¹For the purpose of; used as a preposition and governing the Genitive, and when so used always follows the word which it governs.

²idoneus ad = suitable for. paratus ad = prepared for.

³ut here introduces a result. The clause might be translated—"nevertheless the result was that our men had the best of it in every part of the field."

nostri omnibus partibus superiores fuerint.⁴ 12. Ea,⁵ quae secuta est, hieme Usipetes Germani et item Tencteri magna cum multitudine hominum flu- men Rhenum transierunt, non longe a mari, que Rhenus influit. Causa transeundi⁶ fuit, quod ab Suebis complures annos exagitati bello premebantur, et agri cultura prohibebantur.

⁴See new tense in the table.

⁵Notice that Caesar begins with "in that winter which fol- lowed," because the word "followed" carries the mind back to the events previously related, thus indicating the connection as usual.

⁶*transeundi* is the connecting word here. The connecting word is not always the very first word. As long as it is embodied in the first phrase, the connection is sufficiently clear.

Translate into Latin:

1. Caesar gave the captives an opportunity of departing.
2. Caesar set out from Italy with all his forces for the purpose of waging war.¹
3. Caesar said that the Gauls were desirous² of making war.
4. Labienus sent word to Caesar that the ships were ready for sailing.
5. The cavalry of the enemy fought so (tam) fiercely that they threw³ (pf.) our men into confusion.
6. Caesar said that he would take⁴ a day for deliberating.
7. When Caesar was setting out for Italy, he sent Servius Galba into the territory of the Veragri with the tenth legion and part of the cavalry. The reason⁵ for sending⁶ him (eum) was this (haec).

³In a clause of result, if a decisive, vigorous or instantaneous act is described, the Perfect Subjunctive may be used instead of the Imperfect.

⁴*sumere.* ⁵What is your connecting word here?

⁶Use the Genitive case. Why?

LESSON XVI.

THE GERUNDIVE.

1. The Gerundive is a verbal adjective and is formed from the Gerund by changing the termination into us for the Masculine, a for the Feminine, um for the Neuter. Thus from the Gerund muniendi is formed the Gerundive muniendus, which is declined as follows:

	Masc.	Singular
	Fem.		Neut.
Nom.	muniendus	munienda	muniendum
Gen.	muniendi	muniendae	muniendi
Dat.	muniendo	muniendae	muniendo
Acc.	muniendum	muniendam	muniendum
Abl.	inuniendo	munienda	muniendo

	Masc.	Plural
	Fem.		Neut.
Nom.	muniendi	muniendac	munienda
Gen.	muniendorum	muniendarum	muniendorum
Dat.	muniendis	muniendis	muniendis
Acc.	muniendos	muniendas	munienda
Abl.	muniendis	muniendis	muniendis

2. The Gerundive, like the Gerund, translates the English verbal noun in ing, but the Gerundive is only to be used when the English verbal noun has an object after it: thus:

The reason for sending was this. Causa mittendi erat haec (gerund). But,

The reason for sending the legion was this. Causa legionis mittendae erat haec (gerundive).

Observe that the Gerundive and the object of the English verbal noun in ing must always be the same Gender, Number and Case, and the Case is always the Case which you would use for the English verbal noun in ing.

Another example:

The enemy crossed the river for the purpose of attacking the city. Hostes urbis oppugnandae causa flumen transierunt.

(a) The verbal noun (namely, "attacking") must be translated by the Gerundive (and not the Gerund), because it is followed by an object (namely, "city").

(b) Both "attacking" and "city" are to be in the same Gender, Number, and Case, when put into Latin.

(c) That Case is the Genitive because the preposition causa (for the purpose of) governs the Genitive, and the Number is Singular because "city" is Singular, and the Gender is Feminine because "city" is Feminine.

Another example:

The soldiers were ready for attacking the villages. Milites erant parati ad vicos oppugnandos.

(a) The English verbal noun (namely, "attacking") is translated by the Gerundive.

(b) Both "attacking" and "villages" are to be in the same Gender, Number, and Case when put into Latin, and

(c) The Case this time is Accusative because the preposition ad governs the Accusative, and the Number is Plural because "villages" is Plural, and the Gender is Masculine because "villages" is Masculine.

2. Caesar sent out the tenth legion to attack the town.²
3. Labienus stays in Gaul for the purpose of (ad) collecting ships.
4. The difficulty of fortifying the place was very great.
5. Caesar advanced into the front rank for the purpose of exhorting the soldiers.
6. Caesar left the camp to exhort the tenth legion.³
7. Labienus set out from the camp in pursuit of Dumnorix.
8. Orgetorix⁴ was by far the most influential⁵ man amongst the Helvetii. Induced by a desire for supreme power he formed a conspiracy with the nobility⁶ and persuaded the state to make war⁷ on the Romans.

¹Use ad (for the purpose of).

²Translate in two ways, using both ad and causa (for the purpose of).

³Translate in three ways (ad, causa, and ut).

⁴Arrange the sentence so as to have Orgetorix last; then begin the next sentence with "he" (is), and in this way the connection of the two sentences will be brought out.

⁵*potens.* ⁶What case and why?

⁷*inferre bellum*=to wage war. This phrase takes a Dative of the person on whom one wages war. Are you to use the Infinitive in Latin here?

LESSON XVII.

THE GERUNDIVE (continued).

1. Another use of the Gerundive is to translate the English "must" or "ought."

When thus used, it is joined to the verb "to be," and its meaning is always Passive, even with Deponent verbs: thus,

The soldiers must be recalled from the work: Milites ab opere revocandi sunt.

2. Observe that the English in the above sentence expresses present time. If the time is past, the English uses some such expression as:

The soldiers had to be recalled from the work.

The Latin expresses the past time here by simply changing sunt to erant: thus,

Milites ab opere revocand' erant.

3. If such a sentence as the above has to be put into the Accusative and Infinitive construction, the verb "to be" will, of course, be changed to the Infinitive Mood, milites would be Accusative, and revocandi would become revocandos to agree with it.

4. The person by whom a thing is to be done is expressed by the Dative instead of a with the Ablative.

Conjugation of Esse, to be

Translate into idiomatic English:

1. Legati ad Caesarem statim mittendi sunt. 2. Castra militibus sine mora munienda sunt. 3. Cartago delenda est. 4. Caesari omnia uno tempore erant agenda. 5. Vexillum proponendum erat. 6. Signum tuba dandum erat. 7. Acies instruenda erat. 8. Milites cohortandi erant. 9. Cato dicebat Carthaginem esse delendam. 10. Labienus dixit legatos ad se Ario visto mittendos esse. 11. Nuntii dieunt omnem esse in armis Galliam; Germanos Rhenum transiisse; auxilium statim esse mitten-dum. 12. Germanieo bello confeecto Caesar in Britaniam transire eonstituit, quod omnibus fere Gallicis bellis inde subministrata auxilia intellegebat. Itaque¹ ad insulam explorandam Gaium Volusenum eum navi longa praemittit. Ipse² eum omnibus copiis in Morinos contendit quod inde erat brevissi-mus in Britanniam trajectus. Huc³ naves undique ex finitimis regionibus jubet convenire.

¹This conjunction gives connection, but insulam also takes you back to Britanniam.

²*ipse* (he himself) shows connection here, because the last verb in the previous sentence has the same "he" (viz., Caesar) for its subject.

³*huc* (hither) shows the connection because it refers to the territory of the Morini mentioned in the previous sentence.

Translate into Latin:

1. The city must be attacked immediately. 2. The camp of the enemy must be attacked immediately,¹ said Labienus. 3. Caesar made up his mind that he² ought to cross³ the Rhine. 4. Our men did not ¹Begin thns, "Labienus said that the camp," etc.

²The Dative of se is sibi.

³If the English verb with "must" or "ought" is in the Active Voice, the sentence must be changed into the Passive before translating it into Latin, thus:

Caesar ought to send out the cavalry.

The cavalry ought to be sent out by Caesar (equitatus Caesari emittendus est) give the enemy an opportunity of jumping down from their chariots. 5. They said that the time for deliberating⁴ was short. 6. The villages of the Gauls must be burned and their fields laid waste. 7. Caesar said that Dumnorix must be coerced. 8. The camp must be moved at daybreak. 9. The Romans crossed the Rhine for the purpose of waging war with⁵ the Germans. 10. Then he persuades a Gaul with great rewards to carry a letter to Ciceron. He sends it⁶ written in Greek characters so that, if the letter should be intercepted,⁷ our plans may not be discovered by the enemy.

Caesar was not able to discover how great the island was.

"How great the island was," is a dependent question, and is translated into Latin thus:

Caesar reperire non poterat quanta esset insula.

A dependent question must begin with an interrogative, and the verb must always be Subjunctive Mood.

LESSON XIX.

THE RELATIVE PRONOUN.

qui, quae, quod, who, which, what

Singular
Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
Nom. qui	quae	quod
Gen. cuius	cuius	cuius
Dat. cui	cui	cui

Gen. quorum	quarum	quorum
Dat. quibus	quibus	quibus
Acc. quos	quas	quae
Abl. quibus	quibus	quibus

1. The relative pronoun agrees with its antecedent in Gender, Number, and Person, but not in Case. The Case of the relative depends on the construction of its own clause. Sometimes it is the subject of the verb, sometimes the object of the verb, and sometimes the object of a preposition: thus,

(a) Germani Menapios oppresserunt qui trans Rhenum in suos vicos remigraverant. The Germans surprised the Menapii who had moved back to their villages across the Rhine.

(b) Milites quos Caesar in castris reliquerat omnes interfici sunt. The soldiers whom Caesar had left in the camp were all slain.

(c) Agri, per quos exercitus Romanus iter faciebat, ab hostibus vastati erant. The fields, through which the Roman army was marching, had been devastated by the enemy.

(d) Legati, qui ad Caesarem venerant, ita dixerunt. The ambassadors who had come to Caesar spoke as follows.

2. In (a) the antecedent, Menapios, is Accusative, and the relative is Nominative, being the subject of remigraverant.

In (b) the antecedent, milites, is Nominative, while the relative is Accusative, governed by reliquerat.

In (c) the antecedent, agri, is Nominative, while the relative is Accusative governed by per.

In (d) the relative is Nominative, because it is the subject of venerant, not because the antecedent is Nominative.

Observe, however, that in every example the relative agrees with its antecedent in Gender, Number and Person.

Facere is a verb of the Third Conjugation, but it has several tenses like the Fourth, and in the Passive Voice the tenses in the first column are Active in form.

Translate into English, accounting for the Gender, Number and Case of each relative:

1. Reliqui, qui domi manserunt, agros colunt. 2. Equestribus proeliis saepe ex equis desiliunt ac pedibus proeliantur, equosque eodem remanere vestigio assuefecerunt, ad quos se celeriter, cum usus est, recipiunt. 3. Menapii tantae multitudinis adventu perterriti, ex iis (those) aedificiis, quae trans flumen habuerant, demigraverunt. 4. Germani in fines Condrusiorum, qui sunt Treverorum clientes, per venerant. 5. Ipse idoneam tempestatem nanctus paulo post mediam noctem naves solvit, quae omnes incolumes ad continentem pervenerunt. 10. At Q. Titurius et L. Cotta legati, qui in Menapiorum fines legiones duxerant, omnibus eorum agris vastatis, frumentis succisis, aedificiis incensis, quod Menapii se omnes in densissimas silvas abdiderant, se ad Caesarem receperunt.

Translate into Latin:

approach (adire & acc.) they hastened with all their forces against the camp of Caesar. 4. Leaving in the camp the two legions which he had last enrolled, Caesar led the remaining six against the enemy. 5. All who were able to bear arms were put to death. 6. He himself determined to pass the winter in the village of the Venagri which is called Octodurus. 7. The tenth legion, which Caesar had sent out to forage, returned at daybreak. 8. Brutus, who was in command of the fleet, did not know what to do.² 9. The Morini, against whom Caesar had sent out the cavalry, had hidden themselves by night in the woods. 10. On his arrival Caesar found his suspicions verified.³ 11. In the fall of the year Caesar returned to Italy to keep an eye on events at the Capitol.⁴

²Dependent question.

³Say, "found that what he suspected would happen had happened." ⁴Dependent question.

LESSON XX.

THE RELATIVE (continued).

1. After a verb of motion the relative may be used with the Subjunctive instead of ut to express purpose: thus,

Galli ad Caesarem miserunt legatos qui pacem peterent. The Gauls sent ambassadors to Caesar who were to ask for peace.

2. The relative has its verb in the Subjunctive Mood, if it depends on a clause which is in the Accusative and Infinitive construction: thus,

Dumnorix affirmavit Caesarem legatos, qui essent in castris, necaturum. Dumnorix asserted that Caesar intended to kill the ambassadors who were in the camp.

Table of the verb Fero.

fero,	ferre,	tuli,	latum

	ferebat	tulerim
	ferret	tulissem
	ferre	tulisse	laturus esse
	ferens		laturus, -a, -um ferendi

The Imperfect Subjunctive is most easily formed by adding t to the Present Infinitive.

Translate into English:

1. Germani responderunt in terris esse neminem;
quem non superare possent. 2. Caesar dixit nullos in Gallia vacare agros, qui dari tantae praesertim² multitudini sine injuria possent. 3. Cacsar nunti quos cum Caesar nuntios misisset, eos,⁴ qui sibi Gal liae ue bellum intulissent, sibi dederent, respond erunt Populi Romani imperium Rhenum finire.

¹ Put last in the clause for emphasis. ² Why this position?

³ To them. Latin often uses the relative at the beginning of a sentence when the English would have only a personal or demon strative pronoun. This is called the connective relative.

⁴ ut is often omitted.

Translate into Latin:

1. The scout brought back word that all who were able to bear arms had assembled into one place. 2.
Caesar sent forward scouts to investigate the matter.
3. Caesar sent forward scouts to choose a place for a camp.¹ 4. The enemy sent ambassadors to Caesar to ask for aid.¹ 5. The messenger said that the Menapii had departed from the villages which they had across the Rhine. 6. The scout reported that the enemy's cavalry which had gone across the Meuse to forage had not yet² returned. 7. The ambassadors said that the Roman soldiers had burnt all the villages which they were able to approach (adire). 8. There was a report that all who were able to bear arms had been put to death.

LESSON XXI.

PRAEFICIO, INFERO, AND IMPERO.

1. Praeficio (I place in command of) takes the Accusative of the person placed in command, and the Dative of the thing over which he is placed in command: thus,

Caesar Labienum oppido praeficit. Caesar places Labienus in command of the town.

2. Infero bellum (I make war upon) takes a Dative of the person upon whom war is made: thus,

Galli Populo Romano bellum intulerunt. The Gauls made war on the Roman people.

3. Impero (in the sense of "I demand") takes an Accusative of the thing demanded and a Dative of the person from whom the thing is demanded: thus,

Caesar obsides civitati imperat. Caesar demands hostages from the state.

LESSON XXII.

THE IMPERSONAL CONSTRUCTION.

1. In English, if a verb is intransitive it cannot be used in the Passive Voice, but in Latin an intransitive verb may be used in the Passive if it is used impersonally. Thus, instead of saying,

Milites acriter pugnaverunt, The soldiers fought fiercely, a common construction is,

A militibus acriter pugnatum est, It was fought fiercely by the soldiers.

2. Only those verbs which govern the Aecusative Case are transitive in Latin; therefore, if it is necessary to use the Passive of a verb that governs the Dative, the impersonal construction must be used: thus,

The ambassadors were persuaded to come,
must be turned into,

It was persuaded to the ambassadors to come. Persuasum est legatis ut venirent.

3. The following verbs govern the Dative and therefore must never be used in the Passive Voice except impersonally:

- (a) persuadeo persuadere to persuade
- (b) noceo nocere to injure
- (c) ignosco ignoscere to pardon
- (d) parco parcere to spare
- (e) impero imperare to command (a person)

Instead of saying:
 The ships are injured.
 The Gauls were pardoned.
 The Gauls were persuaded.

Say:

It is injured to the ships. Navibus nocetur.
 It was pardoned to the Gauls. Gallis ignotum est.
 It was persuaded to the Gauls. Gallis persuasum est.

LESSON XXIII.

1. It has been said that an intransitive verb, if used in the Passive Voice, must be used impersonally. It follows that the Gerundive of intransitive verbs must always be used impersonally, because the Gerundive is always Passive Voice.

1. Menapii tantae multitudinis adventu perterriti ex iis¹ aedificieis quae trans flumen habuerant, demigraverunt et cis Rhenum dispositis praesidiis Germanos transire prohibebant. Illi² omnia experti, cum propter custodias Menapiorum non transire possent, domum reverterunt. 2. Apud Helvetios longe nobilissimus fuit et ditissimus Orgetorix. Is,³ M. Messalla et M. Pisone consulibus, regni cupiditate inductus coniurationem nobilitatis fecit. 3. Caesar iis,⁴ quos ¹is, ea id, is generally the demonstrative used when a relative clause follows.

²ille, when used to introduce a period, indicates that the subject is different from the subject of the previous sentence. Menapii is the subject of the previous sentence, illi shows that 'the Germans' is the subject of this clause.

³Unlike ille, is does not indicate change of subject, but merely helps the connection by referring back to Orgetorix.

⁴Decline every pronoun in these three sentences and point out what duty they perform.

in castris retinuerat, discedendi potestatem fecit. Illi supplicia cruciatusque Gallorum veriti, quorum agros vexaverant, remanere se apud eum velle dixerunt. His⁵ Caesar libertatem concessit. 4. Caesar et Hannibal erant duo imperatores magni; hunc⁶ Romani oderant, illum⁶ admirati sunt.

⁵hic always refers to the nearest. In this case it refers to the subject of dixerunt, the word immediately preceding. hic is, therefore, often the right word with which to begin a sentence in order to show connection.

⁶When a contrast is to be brought out, hic always refers to the nearest, in this case Hannibal; ille to what is more remote, in this case Caesar. hic is therefore equal to the latter, and ille to the former.

Translate into Latin:

1. Cicero and Demosthenes were two great orators; the latter was a Greek, the former a Roman. 2. After their defeat¹ the enemy² at once dispatched envoys to Caesar to treat for peace. They³ promised to give hostages and to comply with his demands. This⁴ embassy was accompanied by Commius Atrebas, who had been sent in advance to Britain by Caesar. Although⁵ he came as an ambassador⁶ with orders from Caesar they had seized him as he landed on their shores,⁷ and had bound him with fetters, and now that they had fought and lost⁸ they had sent him⁹ back.

¹Say, "having been defeated."

²Begin with the subject and add "in the battle," to be precise.

³As there is no change in the subject, just go on with your verb in the Third Plural.

⁴Along with these ambassadors came.

⁵Begin with him to show connection, and use hic, the man just mentioned.

⁷Say simply, "having come out of the ship" (egredior).

⁸Say, "then the battle being fought, they sent him back." It is not necessary to say they lost the battle. This idea has been clearly brought out in the beginning of the passage.

⁹The him at the head of the sentence will do for all.

LESSON XXV.

CONSTRUCTION OF Cum.

1. Cum, meaning since or although, takes the Subjunctive without exception.

2. Cum, meaning when, generally takes the Subjunctive, if the Tense is Imperfect or Pluperfect, but if the action is described as happening an indefinite number of times in the past, cum is used with the Pluperfect Indicative, and the principal verb will then be Imperfect Indicative: thus,

(a) Cum urbem cepisset, mulieres liberosque trucidavit. When he took the city, he killed the women and children.

(b) Cum urbem ceperat, mulieres liberosque trucidabat. When he took a city, he used to kill the women and children.

In (a) the action of taking the city and killing the women and children happened only once, in (b) it happened an indefinite number of times.

Quod cum animadvertisset² Caesar, scaphas longarum navium item speculatoria navigia militibus compleri jussit, et, quos laborantes conspexerant,³ his subsidia submittebat.

¹Observe that the action described happened an indefinite number of times, and so we have the subordinate verb consperarent in the Pluperfect Indicative, while the main verbs are all in the Imperfect Indicative, namely, adoriebantur, circumsistebant and conjiciebant.

²Here the action is not described as happening often.

³Here again we have the Pluperfect Indicative in the subordinate clause and the Imperfect Indicative (submittebat) in the main clause, because again the action is represented as happening over and over again. Observe that the relative quos takes the place of cum, because "whomsoever he saw (from time to time) in difficulties, to these he kept sending reinforcements," is the same as "when he saw (from time to time) any in difficulties, to these he kept sending reinforcements."

Translate into Latin:

Caesar was unable to bring the war with the Veneti to a close,¹ for as fast as he captured their towns, they would² carry off all their property and retreat in their ships to the nearest promontory,³ and there they would again defend themselves with the same advantages of position as before.⁴ They kept up these manœuvres⁵ very easily during a great part of the summer, owing to the fact that⁶ our ships were ¹finire.

²"would" is here simply an idiomatic use of the word to express frequent action.

³promunturium. ⁴No need to express "as before."

⁵Say simply, "they kept doing (Imperf. of facio) these things," beginning the sentence, of course, with "these things" to show connection as usual.

⁶Translate the meaning of "owing to the fact that" by one simple conjunction.

⁷Plural of tempora will do.

⁸Use que for "and." When two clauses are joined by que they are of the same nature, and therefore there will be no need to express "because" again.

⁹Gerund of navigare.

¹⁰Say, "the tides (being) great, the harbours almost none" (Ablative Absolute).

LESSON XXVI.

CONSTRUCTION OF Dum AND Priusquam.

1. Dum (while) takes the Present Indicative when the meaning is that while one action was going on, another action took place or was taking place.

Dum ea Romani parant, jam Saguntum oppugnabatur. While the Romans were making these preparations, Saguntum was already being besieged.

2. Dum (until) takes the Subjunctive if a purpose is implied.

Dum naves convenient, expectavit. He waited until the ships should assemble.

Subjunctive with dum because he waited for a certain purpose, namely, in order to give the ships time to assemble.

3. Priusquam (before) takes the Subjunctive if there is an end (purpose) in view or an end prevented.

Priusquam consilium cognoscerent, exercitum traduxit. Before they could learn his intention, he led his army across.

Subjunctive with priusquam because his purpose was to keep them in the dark with regard to his plan until he led his army over.

4. If dum (until) and priusquam (before) do not signify a purpose, they will take the Indicative.

In proelio mansit dum pater interfactus est. He remained in the battle till his father was killed.

This does not mean that he remained in the battle for the purpose of seeing his father killed. If it did, dum would have the Subjunctive.

5. Priusquam pugnaretur, nox intervenit. Night came on before the battle was fought.

This means that the battle was not fought; i.e., the end (viz., the battle) was prevented.

N. B.—The Past Tense for a Subjunctive of purpose is the Imperfect.

Translate into English:

1. His interfectis navibusque eorum occupatis, priusquam ea pars Menapiorum, quae citra Rhenum erat, quid ageretur,¹ sentiret, flumen transierunt atque omnibus eorum aedificiis occupatis reliquam partem hiemis se eorum copiis aluerunt. 2. Ad haec cognoscenda, priusquam periculum faceret,² idoneum esse arbitratus C. Volusenum cum navi longa praemittit. 3. Dum in his locis Caesar navium parandarum causa moratur, ex magna parte Morinorum ad eum legati venerunt. 4. Dum Romani tempus terunt legationibus mittendis, Hannibal paucorum militibus dierum³ quietem dedit. 5. Caesar non expectandum⁴ sibi statuit, dum omnibus fortunis sociorum consumptis in Santones Helvetii pervenient.

⁴ What is the subject of this verb?

Translate into Latin:

1. Making a hasty march of eight miles he arrived at the camp of the Germans before they could receive intelligence of his movements. 2. Caesar de-terminated to wait till the soldiers, whom he had demanded from the province, got time to assemble.

 3. Caesar resolved to lead his army into Gaul before any more states should enter into the conspiracy.
 4. The enemy beat a retreat and did not cease their flight till they reached the Rhine. 5. Whilst he was making these preparations he sent Fabius into Spain.
 6. There is a river called¹ the Arar which flows through the territory of the Aedui and the Sequani, and empties² itself into the Rhine. Its³ current is so smooth that the eye cannot tell⁴ in which⁵ direction it flows.⁶

¹Omit.

²The sense will not be injured by omitting "and empties itself."

³No need for a new sentence. Continue the previous sentence thus: "With extraordinary smoothness (incredibili lenitate), so that (ita ut)," etc. Latin, as a rule, prefers one continuous sentence, rather than a number of short sentences.

⁴Translate the meaning thus: "It is not possible to be judged," etc.

⁵Use uter (which of two). The river must be flowing in one of two directions. ⁶Remember the Mood here.

LESSON XXVII.

THE CONDITIONAL SENTENCE.

1. Examine the following conditional sentences:

(a) If he comes (to-morrow), he will be put to death (to-morrow).

(b) If he should come (to-morrow), he would be put to death (to-morrow).

(c) If he were present (now), he would be put to death (now).

(d) If he had been present (yesterday), he would have been put to death (yesterday).

In (a) both clauses are future in meaning, therefore translate both clauses by the Future Indicative in Latin: thus, Si veniet, interficietur.

In (b) both clauses are again future in meaning, but the future is not so vividly expressed. Translate into Latin by the Present Subjunctive. Si veniat, interficiatur.

N. B.—We have already had the Present Subjunctive translating futurity after verbs of fearing and in clauses of purpose with ut. See Lessons III. and VI.

In (c) we are expressing something which is contrary to fact in present time. Translate by Imperfect Subjunctive in both clauses.

If he were present (but he is not), he would be put to death. Si adesset, interficeretur.

In (d) we are expressing something which is contrary to fact in past time. Translate by the Pluperfect Subjunctive.

If he had been present (but he was not), he would have been put to death. Si adfuisset, imperfectus esset.

2. If both clauses of the conditional sentence are neither future as in (a) and (b), nor contrary to fact as in (c) and (d), translate the English into Latin literally.

Examine the following conditional sentences, and observe that none of them can be referred to (a), (b), (c), or (d).

(e) Si tot exempla virtutis eum non movent, nihil umquam movebit. If so many examples of virtue do not influence him, nothing will ever influence him.

Observe that only one of the clauses is future, and that the Latin is literal.

(f) If he comes he ought to be put to death. Si veniet, interfici debet.

Again the translation is literal, when it is observed that "comes" means "shall come."

Translate into English:

1. Si hostes se dedant, Caesar oppidum conseruet.
2. Si hostes se dedidissent, Caesar oppidum conservasset.
3. Si Caesar adesset, hostes non tam fortes essent.
4. Si oppidani arma tradidissent, non interfici essent.
5. In omni Gallia hominum genera sunt duo; alterum Druidum, alterum equitum. Illi¹ rebus² divinis intersunt, sacrificia publica ac privata procurant, religiones interpretantur: ad eos³ magnus adolescentium numerus disciplinae causa concurrit, magnoque hi sunt apud eos honore. Nam fere de omnibus controversiis publicis privatisque constituunt, et, si⁴ quod est admissum facinus, si caedes facta, si de hereditate, si de finibus controversia est, iidem decernunt, praemia poenasque constituunt.

¹illi refers to the more remote, in this case the Druids.

²Dative plural of res. Compounds of sum govern the Dative.

³Notice all the connecting words in the passage: illi, eos, nam.

⁴To which class of conditional sentences does this belong?

Translate into Latin:

1. If Caesar had permitted him, Dumnorix would have remained in Gaul.
2. If Caesar should cross the Rhine, the Germans would take to flight.
3. If Caesar had crossed the Rhine, the Germans would have taken to flight.
4. If Caesar were present, the enemy would not await our attack.
5. If Caesar had been present in Gaul, the Germans would not have crossed the Rhine.
6. If Caesar has been created consul, I do not think that Crassus will remain in the city.
7. If the townsmen take up arms, they ought all to be put to death.
8. If Lycurgus should rise from the grave,¹ he would say this.
9. If Lycurgus were living he would say this.
10. The battle, had the Romans lost it, would have occasioned the annihilation of the Roman army.

¹*existere ab inferis*. Observe that a condition which is future must never be regarded as contrary to fact. What is future must be regarded as possible, no matter how unlikely it is.

LESSON XXVIII.

INDIRECT NARRATION.

(Oratio Obliqua.)

1. It has already been said that the Accusative and Infinitive construction is used after verbs of speaking: thus,

The Germans replied that they had come unwillingly. Germani responderunt se invitatos venisse.

This is called indirect narration. In direct narration the exact words of the speaker are quoted.

"We have come unwillingly," replied the Germans, is direct narration. Before translating into Latin we must turn this into,

The Germans replied that they had come unwillingly, always using the Accusative and Infinitive construction to translate the noun clause introduced by the conjunction "that."

2. It has also been said that if a relative clause depends on the Accusative and Infinitive construction it will have its verb in the Subjunctive: thus,

Dumnorix affirmavit Caesarem legatos, qui essent in castris, necaturum. Dumnorix asserted that Caesar would kill the ambassadors who were in the camp.

3. (a) Besides the relative clause, all other clauses which are subordinate to the clause in the Accusative and Infinitive construction will have their verb in the Subjunctive.

Dumnorix replied that he would not cross over to Britain because he feared the sea. Dumnorix respondit se non in Britanniam transiturum quod mare timeret.

(b) Caesar said that Dumnorix would pay the penalty if he came. Caesar dixit Dumnorigem, si veniret, poenam daturum.

N. B.—The only Moods regularly used in indirect narration are the Infinitive and the Subjunctive.

Translate into English:

1. Barbaris Caesar ita respondit: se¹, magis consuetudine sua, quam merito eorum, oppidum conservaturum, si priusquam murum aries attigisset, se dedissent; sed deditiois nullam esse conditionem, nisi armis traditis.² Se id,³ quod in Nerviis fecisset facturum, finitimisque imperaturum, ne quam amicis populi Romani injuriam inferrent.

¹Give the English both in the direct form and in the indirect. Begin the direct form thus: "In accordance with my usual clemency, rather than because of any merit of yours, I will spare your town, if, before the battering-ram shall have touched the wall, you (shall) have surrendered," etc., etc.

²An Ablative Absolute is not affected in any way by indirect narration.

³Direct = "I shall do that which I have done in the case of the Nervii and shall order your neighbours," etc., etc.

Translate into Latin:

1. Dumnorix replied that if Caesar permitted him he would come to him. 2. Caesar learnt from the Ubii that the Suebi, after they had heard that a bridge was being built, had called a council,¹ and had dispatched messengers in all directions, to order all who were able to bear arms to assemble in one place. 3. When Caesar was in Italy he received news² to the effect³ that all the Belgae were forming a league against the Roman people and were giving hostages to one another⁴ because they feared that, as all Gaul was brought to subjection,⁵ the Roman army would be led against them.

¹Abl. Abs. Latin prefers subordinate clauses to co-ordinate clauses. ²Use the impersonal construction.

³Omit "to the effect." ⁴"inter se."

⁵Abl. Abs. would be a neat construction here.

LESSON XXIX.

INDIRECT NARRATION (continued).

1. Two Moods only, as a rule, are found in the indirect narration, the Infinitivo and the Subjunctive. All those sentences which were principal statements in the direct narration have their verbs in the Infinitivo Mood, while questions, exhortations, commands, and subordinate clauses of all kinds have their verbs in the Subjunctive. Rhetorical questions (being questions in form only, and statements in reality) have the Infinitive in indirect narration, unless the question of the direct narration were Second Person, in which case the verb is in the Subjunctive. Of course, any question, no matter what the person was in the direct narration, will have the Subjunctive in indirect narration if it depends directly upon a verb of asking, because in that case it is an ordinary dependent question. See Lesson XVIII.

Translate into English:

1. Cicero ad haec unum modo respondit: non esse¹ consuetudinem populi Romani accipere ab hoste armato conditionem; si ab armis discedere velint,² se adjutore utantur,³ legatosque ad Cacsarem mittant;³

¹Principal statement, therefore Infinitive Mood.

²Subordinate clause, therefore Subjunctive Mood.

³Command, therefore Subjunctive Mood. The direct narration would be: "If you wish to lay down your arms, make use of me as your advocate and send ambassadors to Caesar."

sperare⁴ pro ejus justitia, quae petierint,⁵ impers.
turos.⁶

⁴Another principal statement, therefore Infinitive Mood, the Accusative (as) which goes with it being understood.

⁵Subordinate clause, therefore Subjunctive.

⁶Supply eos, making the Future Infinitive. The construction is then the Accusative and Infinitive, the Accusative eos (they) not being expressed. This Accusative and Infinitive depends on the verb sperare. "Cicero answered that he hoped that they would obtain what they asked." It is possible to have any number of sentences in the Accusative and Infinitive construction, provided that each clause has a verb of speaking followed by a statement. Thus, "The messenger said that Cicero said that he hoped that they," etc., etc.

Translate into Latin (indirect narration):

1. Cicero gave the following answer to the barbarians: It is not the custom¹ of the Roman people to make terms with an enemy in arms: lay down your arms² and send ambassadors to Caesar. If you do this at once,³ I know that Caesar will pardon you.⁴

¹Before attempting to translate, imagine "he said" to be placed before every sentence thus:

He said that it was not the custom, etc.

He said that they were to lay down their arms, etc.

He said that, if they did this, he knew that, etc.

Observe the change that takes place in the Tenses.

²The Tenses in indirect narration would naturally be Past Tenses, but, just as in English, the Historical Present is often used instead for vividness.

³Begin as usual with the word which will best show the connection.

⁴(He said) that "he knew that Caesar would pardon them." "That he knew" is the statement and therefore is Accusative and Infinitive, but the verb "know" is itself a verb which takes Accusative and Infinitive after it; therefore the clause beginning "that Caesar," etc., will also be in the Accusative and Infinitive construction. See last note of previous exercise.

LESSON XXX.

1. The Tense of the Infinitive Mood in indirect narration is the Tense which the speaker himself used. In other words, it is the Tenso used in the direct narration. In the sentence, Cicero said that it was not the custom of the Roman people, etc., Cicero's own words were, "It is not the custom," etc., therefore the verb "was" must be expressed by the Present Tense.

2. To get the proper Tenso for the Subjunctive Mood in indirect narration, use the Tense, not of the direct narration, but the Tense as it is in the indirect form: thus, Titurius dixit: Quod Gallia omnis cum Germanis consentiret, unam esse in celeritate positam salutem.

Titurius said that because all Gaul was conspiring with the Germans, their only safety was in dispatch.

Here the Imperfect consentiret is the natural tense for "was conspiring." The direct narration would be: Titurius said: "Because all Gaul is conspiring with the Germans our only safety is in dispatch." Now while the subordinate clause, "because all Gaul is conspiring," is to have its verb in the Past Tense (Impf.) of the Subjunctive Mood, the main statement, "our only safety is in dispatch" is to have its verb in the Present Infinitive according to the first rule of this lesson.

Translate into English:

1. Titurius dixit: snam sententiam in ultramone partem esse futam: si nihil esset durius.¹ nullo cum periculo ad proximam legionem perventuros: si Gallia omnis cum Germanis consentiret, unam esse in ce-

¹Comparative degree of durus.

leritate positam salutem. Cottae³ quidem atque eorum, qui dissentirent, consilium quem habere³ exitum?

³The literal translation of this in the direct narration would be: "What result has the plan of Cotta and of those who differ from me?" Notice that the speaker himself says "has" (Present Tense) and remember that in getting the Tense of the Infinitive, the same Tense as the speaker himself used is to be retained in the indirect narration.

³Infinitive, because it is a question in the Third Person, if turned into direct narration. See Exercise XXIX.

Translate into Latin:

1. Titurius spoke thus: My plan is the safest. Fortify¹ the camp with a rampart and a ditch and wait for the reinforcements which Caesar is sending to us. The Gauls will not attack us to-day, because the Germans have not yet arrived.²

¹The Imperfect Subjunctive is the usual Past Tense for the Subjunctive in the indirect narration. The Present may always be used for vividness, as in Exercise XXIX., but do not make a practice of using it.

²In order to get the right tense in the subordinate clause put the sentence indirectly thus: "(He said) that the Gauls would not attack them on that day, because the Germans had not yet arrived."

LESSON XXXI.

INDIRECT NARRATION (continued).

Pronouns and Adverbs.

1. In indirect narration all pronouns are Third Person, and adverbs and adverbial phrases are changed in the manner indicated in the following exercise.

Translate into English:

1. Haec cum animadvertisset, convocato consilio, omniumque ordinum ad id consilium adhibitis centurionibus, vehementer eos incusavit: Primum¹, quod aut quam in partem, aut quo consilio ducerentur,² sibi quaerendum aut cogitandum putarent.³ Arioistum, se consule, cupidissime populi Romani amicitiam appetisse.⁴ Cur hunc tam temere quisquam ab officio discessurum judicaret?⁵ Quod si furore atque amentia impulsus bellum intulisset, quid tandem vererentur?⁶ Aut cur de sua virtute aut de ipsius diligentia desperarent?⁷

¹The indirect narration begins here and continues to the end of the extract. The verb of speaking is often omitted. Understand "he said that he blamed them" because, etc. In what kind of clause do you expect to find the Subjunctive?

²Give the reason for the Subjunctive. The direct narration would be,

(I blame you) because you think, etc.

The indirect =

(He said that he blamed them) because they thought, etc. Notice the change from 2nd to 3rd Person.

³Always imagine "he said" before each new sentence: "(He said) that Arioistus, when he (Caesar) was consul, had eagerly sought the friendship of the Roman people." The direct narration would be: "Arioistus, when I was consul, eagerly sought the friendship of the Roman people." Notice the change from the 1st Person of the direct to the 3rd of the indirect narration.

⁴Although this question is Third Person in the direct narration, observe that it is here Subjunctive, not Infinitive, as might be expected. The reason is that this question had the Subjunctive in the direct narration. The question originally was: "Why should anybody suppose," not "Does anybody suppose?" Such questions are called deliberative questions, and they take the Subjunctive whether they are in direct or indirect narration.

⁵Why have these questions the Subjunctive?

Translate into Latin:

1. Caesar gave the following answer to the ambassadors: "I do not promise¹ to wait for the hostages, which you have promised² to send to me here. To-

¹(He said) that he did not promise, etc.

²Remember your construction after "promise," which is a verb of speaking—promised that they would send to him there.

morrow⁸ I shall march into your territory and pitch my camp in the vicinity of your town. Return, therefore, at once to your people and tell them what I say."

⁸(He said) that he would march into their territory on the next day, etc.

"(He said) that they were to return, etc. Remember that "return" is a command, not a statement.

LESSON XXXII..

INDIRECT NARRATION (continued).

1. It has been said in the previous exercise that pronouns in indirect narration are in the Third Person. One person is distinguished from another by using the reflexive pronoun sui and the reflexive adjective suum to refer to the person who is represented as speaking in the narrative. Other persons are represented by one of the demonstratives is, ille, or hic. If no ambiguity is possible, sui and suum may be used (are used by Caesar) to refer to the subject of their own clause. If ambiguity would arise from the use of sui, substitute the other reflexive ipse. N. B.—As a means of avoiding ambiguity a proper name is also used instead of any of the pronouns mentioned above.

Translate into English:

Ei legationi Ariovistus respondit: Si¹ quid ipsi² a Caesare opus esset, sese² ad eum² venturum fuisse: si quid ille² se velit, illum² ad se² venire oportere.

¹After translating literally turn the passage into the direct form and observe all the changes in Persons, Tenses and Moods. Begin thus: "If there was anything necessary to me from you, Caesar (or if I wanted anything from you, Caesar), I would have come to you: if you wish anything from me it behoves you to come to me."

²Observe that all the reflexives refer to the main speaker, Ariovistus, while the demonstratives, is and ille refer to Caesar.

Praeterea se neque sine exercitu in eas partes Galliae venire audere, quas Caesar³ possideret, neque exercitum sine magno commeatu atque molimento in unum locum contrahere posse. Sibi² autem mirum videri, quid in sua Gallia, quam bello vicisset, aut Caesari³ aut omnino populo Romano negotii esset.

²The proper name introduced occasionally instead of the pronoun.

Translate into Latin:

1. Arioistus¹ answered Caesar thus: "If I² do not dictate to you what you should do, it is not right that you³ should dictate to me.⁴ The Aedui are subject to me, since they have tried the fortune of war and have been defeated. You are doing me a great injury, because by your⁵ arrival you are reducing my revenues."

¹Rewrite the whole passage in indirect narration in English before attempting to translate. Begin thus: "Arioistus answered that if he did not dictate to him what he should do, it was not right," etc.

²Use ipse here because sui has no nominative.

³It would be quite right to put the proper name here as a means of keeping the persons distinct.

⁴vide.

⁵Do not be afraid to say mea adventus here because, although the reflexive properly refers to Arioistus, there is no question of anybody's arrival but Caesar's. This is just the case where the reflexive may be used to refer to the subject of its own clause in indirect narration.

LESSON XXXIII.

Conditional Sentences.

1. The "si clause" of a conditional sentence is called the protasis, and the main clause is called the apodosis. In indirect narration the apodosis, being a main statement, will always have the Infinitive Mood, and the protasis, being a subordinate clause, will always have the Subjunctive Mood.

2. The Tense of the Infinitive is determined, as has already been said, by using the Tense which the speaker himself used, but the following points must be observed:

(a) There is only one Future Infinitive, namely the participle in -rus + esse (or fuisse), and therefore this Infinitive has to stand for both the regular Future and the less vivid Future of the direct narration.

(b) In a contrary-to-fact clause (present or past) the Infinitive is the Participle in -rus + fuisse.

3. The following changes take place in the Tense and Mood of the protasis:

(a) The Mood is always Subjunctive.

(b) A good working rule for getting the Tense, not only for the protasis of a conditional clause but for all subordinate clauses in indirect narration, is to put the Tense of the direct narration one point back into the past. Thus:

A Present Indicative would become Imperfect Subjunctive.

A Perfect Indicative would become Pluperfect Subjunctive.

A Future Indicative would become Imperfect Subjunctive (because the Present Subjunctive ordinarily expresses futurity). Therefore, a Future-perfect Indicative would become Pluperfect Subjunctive.

N.B.—If the writer wishes to use vivid narration he will bring the Tenses back one point nearer the present, so that you will find the Present used for the Imperfect, and the Perfect used for the Pluperfect Subjunctive.

Translate into English:

1. Barbaris Caesar ita respondit: Se¹ magis consuetudine sua,¹ quam merito eorum,¹ civitatem con-

servaturum, si, priusquam murum aries attigisset,² se³ dedidissent; sed deditiois nullam esse conditionem, nisi armis traditis. Se⁴ id, quod in Nerviis fecisset,⁵ facturum finitimusque imperaturum, ne quam dediticiis⁶ populi Romani injuriam inferrent.

¹The Pluperfect Subjunctive here stands for the Future Perf. Indic. of the direct: "I shall spare your city, if you shall have surrendered before the battering-ram shall have touched the wall."

²To whom does this reflexive refer?

³The direct narration would be: "I shall do that which I did in the case of the Nervii," etc.

⁴Observe that the Tense "I did" goes back one point in the indirect: "(He said) that he would do that which he had done (Plpf.)." Observe also that "I shall do," the Tense of the main statement, remains in the Future Tense.

⁵What case and why? See Exercise XXI.

Translate into Latin:

To these demands¹ Caesar gave the following answer: "I² shall not attack your city to-day if you send me the hostages which I have demanded. If I had done what I did in the case of your neighbours, I³ should have taken your city by storm as soon as I arrived.⁴ Send, therefore, the hostages at once, and do not⁵ expose your women and children to the dangers of a siege.

¹The Neuter Gender of the demonstrative will express this, when it is known that the barbarians had been making certain demands in the previous sentence. Use ad for "to."

²Turn into the indirect before translating. (He said) that he would not attack their city on that day, if they sent him the hostages which he had demanded.

³In the main clause of the contrary-to-fact conditional sentence, remember that the Infinitive is the Participle in -rus and fuisse.

⁴Remember that the verbs of all subordinate clauses go one point back into the past.

⁵The negative in a command is always ne, and the conjunction "and" with ne is neve, not et ne.

LESSON XXXIV.

VIRTUAL ORATIO OBLIQUA.

1. Sometimes the form of a sentence is direct, although it is in reality indirect:

(a) Dumnorix a Caesare petivit ut in Gallia relinqueretur quod mare timeret. Dumnorix begged Caesar that he should be left in Gaul because (as he said) he was afraid of the sea.

Observe that quod (because) usually takes the Indicative Mood, but here the meaning is that Dumnorix said he feared the sea. The verb "feared" is therefore in the Subjunctive, because it is in a subordinate clause in what is really indirect narration.

(b) Magna proposit iis, qui occidissent, praemia. He offered great rewards to those who should kill him.

This is really indirect also, for it is equal to: He said that he would give great rewards to those who should kill him. Observe that the verb "should kill" is in a relative clause in what is really indirect narration, and therefore it is in the Subjunctive Mood. The Tense is Pluperfect because in the direct narration it would be Future-perfect: thus,

I shall give great rewards to those who kill (shall have killed) him.

N. B.—If the more vivid construction is desired, bring the Tenses one point nearer the present: thus,
Magna proponit iis, qui occiderint, praemia.

Here the ordinary Past Tense of the Indicative (Perfect) is brought to the Present, while the Pluperfect Subjunctive is brought to the Perfect.

Translate into English:

1. Ille omnibus primo precibus petere contendit ut in Gallia relinquatur, quod religionibus impediretur.¹ Posteaquam id obstinate sibi negari vidit, principes Galliae sevocare hortarique coepit uti in continent remanerent: id² esse consilium Caesaris ut, quos in conspectu Galliae interficere vereretur, hos omnes in Britanniam traductos necaret: fidem reliquis interponere, jusjurandum poscere, ut, quod esse ex usu Galliae intellexissent,³ communi consilio administrarent.

¹ Virtual indirect narration. "Because (as he said) he was deterred by religious scruples."

² The regular indirect narration begins here. The verb of speaking is often omitted—(saying) that this was Caesar's plan, namely that 'ut', etc.

³ What would be the English of this verb in Oratio Recta?

Translate into Latin:

These two great nations renewed the war with the greatest bitterness, the Romans¹ being indignant because a conquered nation² had attacked them without provocation,³ and the Carthaginians⁴ because their conquerors had ruled⁵ over them in too insolent a manner. The latter felt, too, that, if their great Hamilcar⁶ had not been killed at the beginning of the first Punic war, they would have swept the Roman race from the face of the earth.⁷

⁵ "Had ruled," and "had attacked" above both state what each nation said or thought, therefore these clauses are virtually in indirect narration.

⁶ Say, "Hamilcar, a very great general"

⁷ Say, "They would have reduced the race of the Romans almost to extermination (prope ad internicionem gentem Romanorum redigere).

LESSON XXXV

THE TENSES OF THE INDICATIVE.

1. The Present Indicative is used as in English, but it is also used:

(a) To express an action which has been begun in the past and is still going on in the present, as,
Jamdiu urbs obsidetur. The city has now been besieged for a long time.

(b) With dum (while) instead of a Past Tense in such sentences as:

Dum Romani ea parant, Saguntum captum est.
 Whilst the Romans were making these preparations, Saguntum was taken.

N. B.—The teacher may, if he thinks fit, make comparisons with such Present Tenses as, Caesar is coming, Caesar comes, Men desire liberty, The sun rises every day, etc.

2. The Imperfect Indicative is a past tense, and is used:

(a) To describe any action in past time which is regarded as not completed or not perfect. Thus, discebat = he was learning, he used to learn, he began to learn. In short, discebat has any meaning at all which describes the action of learning as past but not completed.

(b) To describe an action which had been begun in the past and was still going on at a certain point in the past.

Jamdiu urbs obsidebatur. The city had now been besieged for a long time.

Observe that this is but the past of 1 (a), with which compare.

3. The Perfect Indicative has two meanings:

(a) Explorator rem nuntiavit means either, The scout has announced the matter (present perfect), or, The scout announced the matter (historic perfect). The latter meaning is the ordinary meaning in narrating past events.

(b) The Perfect Indicative is also used in a subordinate clause with the Present Indicative in the main clause to describe an action which is happening an indefinite number of times.

Ubi (or cum) suos laborantes vidit, auxilia submittit. Whenever he sees his men in difficulties, he sends reinforcements.

4. The Pluperfect Indicative is used as in English, but it is also used idiomatically in a subordinate clause, with the Imperfect Indicative in the main clause, to describe an action which happened an indefinite number of times.

Ubi (or cum) suos laborantes viderat, auxilia submittebat. As often as he saw his men in difficulties, he sent reinforcements.

N. B.—This is simply the past of 3 (b).

5. The Future Indicative is used as in English, and it must always be used in those subordinate clauses where the English uses the present with a future meaning.

Si Dumnorix veniet, interficietur. If Dumnorix comes (shall come), he will be killed.

6. The Future-perfect Indicative describes an action which is not only future but also completed before another action begins. English is generally satisfied with the Present.

Dumnorix cum pervenerit, interficietur. When Dumnorix arrives (shall have arrived), he will be killed.

The action of arriving is future, but it is also to be completed before the act of killing is performed.

The Future and Future-perfect tenses of the four Conjugations are:

LESSON XXXVI.

SEQUENCE OF TENSES.

1. (a) When the principal verb refers to present or future time, the Dependent Subjunctive should be in the Present or Perfect Tense.

This is called Primary Sequence.

(b) When the principal verb refers to past time, the Dependent Subjunctive should be in the Imperfect or Pluperfect Tense.

This is called Historic Sequence.

Examples of Primary Sequence

2. Principal verb followed by Present or Perfect Tense.

(a) Rogo, rogabo, rogavero (I ask, shall ask, shall have asked), quid scribat (what he writes, is writing).

(b) Rogo, rogabo, rogavero (I ask, shall ask, shall have asked), quid scripserit (what he has written, wrote, was writing).

(c) Rogo, rogabo, rogavero (I ask, shall ask, shall have asked), quid scripturus sit (what he will write, is about to write).

Examples of Historic Sequence

3. Principal verb followed by Imperfect or Pluperfect Tense.

(a) Rogabam, rogavi, rogaveram (I was asking, asked, had asked), quid scribebat (what he was writing, wrote).

(b) Rogabam, rogavi, rogaveram (I was asking, asked, had asked), quid scriptus esset (what he had written).

(c) Rogabam, rogavi, rogaveram (I was asking, asked, had asked), quid scripturus esset (what he would write, was about to write).

4. The Tense "I have asked" is followed by either Primary or Historic Sequence. If the act is regarded as completed in past time, the Historic Sequence is natural, but if the act be regarded as just completed in the present, the Primary Sequence may be used.

5. Note that in 2 (c) sit is Present Tense, and in 3 (c) esset is Imperfect Tense, according to the rule laid down in 1, the Future Participle, scripturus, being used to bring out the future meaning.

6. After ut in clauses of result the rule for sequence of Tenses does not hold good in the following cases:

(a) When the principal verb refers to past time and the subordinate verb to present time: as,
Heri ita perterritus cst ut hodie domi mancat. He got such a fright yesterday that he is staying at home to-day.

(b) When the principal verb refers to past time and the subordinate verb describes an act which has begun in the past and has continued to the present (English Present-Perfect or Perfect with "have").

Tam multa mentitus est ut nemo ei tum crederet nec quisquam postea unquam crediderit. He told so many lies that nobody believed him at the time and nobody has ever put faith in him since.

Here crederet is the regular sequence, but in the last clause the sense requires crediderit in the Perfect Tense regardless of the regular sequence.

(c) The Perfect Subjunctive is also used after a past tense instead of the Imperfect when the writer wishes to emphasize an historical fact and one not closely dependent on the main verb: thus,

Hostes acriter cum equitat^u nostro confixerunt tamen ut nostri eos in silvas collesque compulerint. The enemy fought fiercely with our cavalry, nevertheless the result was that our men drove them into the woods and hills.

Here the result depends not so much on the action of the enemy, but rather on the usual superiority of the Roman soldier.

7. After ut (neg. ne) in clauses of purpose, only two tenses are admissible, the Present Subjunctive in Primary Sequence, and the Imperfect Subjunctive in Historic Sequence.

¹Historical Present.

Translate into Latin:

1. Baculus was exhausted¹ with many severe² wounds, so that he was not able to keep his feet³ any longer. 2. Caesar gave the order to open⁴ the ranks so that they might be able to use their swords. 3. Labienus asked when Caesar intended to come.⁵ 4. Labienus was left on the continent to find out what was going on in Gaul. 5. Who does not know in what honour music used to be held⁶ among the Greeks? 6. On that occasion Catiline showed how great the power of conscience is.⁷ 7. The enemy fought fiercely, nevertheless the result was that⁸ our men had the best of it in all parts of the field.⁹ 8. (Rewrite sentence 13 of the Latin exercise above without using historic present.)

¹confectus. ²Many and severe (gravis).
³*se sustinere*, to hold himself up.

⁴*laxare*. It is not necessary to say to whom Caesar gave the order. You may take it for granted that it was to his officers.

⁵Express by the Future Participle of venio and the proper Tense and Mood of the verb esse.

⁶This sounds like the Imperfect, and it would be Imperfect if it were Indicative, but being Subjunctive of a dependent question you must use the Perfect. Why? See consecution of Tenses. The statement in Latin would be: Magno in honore apud Gracos musica erat (Imperf.).

⁷Do not use the Present here. Why not? The power of con-science = conscientiae vis.

⁸*tamen ut* is sufficient for "nevertheless the result was that."

⁹Had the best of it = were superior.

⁹Omit "of the field."

LESSON XXXVII.

THE TENSES OF THE INFINITIVE.

1. The Tenses of the Infinitive are:

	Active	Passive
(a)	The Present oppugnare	oppugnari
(b)	The Perfect oppugnavisse	oppugnatus esse
(c)	The Future oppugnaturus esse	oppugnatum iri

N. B.—Oppugnatum is the Supine and is indeclinable.

Iri is the Present Infinitive Passive of ire (to go).

Besides the above, oppugnaturum fuisse is used in Oratio Obliqua in the apodosis of the contrary-to-fact construction. See Lesson XXXIII. for all Tenses of Infinitive in the Accusative and Infinitive construction.

2. (a) Some verbs have no Future Infinitive. With such verbs use fore or futurum esse and ut + the Subjunctive: as,

Dicit fore ut puer Latine loqui discat. He says that it will be (it will come to pass) that the boy may learn to speak Latin. (Latine is an adverb.)

If dicit be changed to dixit, discat will, of course, become disceret, thus:

Dixit futurum esse ut puer Latine loqui disceret. He said that it would be that the boy would learn to speak Latin.

(b) The fore ut construction is more usual when the voice is Passive.

"Dixit fore ut urbs oppugnaretur" is more usual than "Dixit urbem oppugnatum iri." He said that the city would be attacked.

3. The following verbs take the Present Infinitive where the English has the Perfect:

(a) Ire debet, he ought to go

Ire debuit, he ought to have gone

- (b) Eum ire oportet (lit., it behoves him to go),
he ought to go
Eum ire oportuit, he ought to have gone
- (c) Ire potest, he can go
Ire potuit, he could have gone (or, he was able to go)
- (d) Ei ire licet, he may go (lit., it is permitted to him to go)
Ei ire licuit, he might have gone (it was permitted to him to go)

The past time in Latin is brought out by the main verb, not by the dependent Infinitive. Wherever the English is capable of bringing out the past meaning in the main verb, it takes the same construction as the Latin and keeps the Infinitive in the Present Tense; thus,

He can go (now).

He was able to go (yesterday).

But if we say "could" for "was able," we must say "he could have gone (yesterday), because "could" is not necessarily past time in English, so that to bring out the past time it is necessary to put the Perfect Infinitive "have gone." Latin, however, always expresses the past time by the main verb: thus,

Ire potuit. He was able to go, or, he could have gone (yesterday.)

4. Write out the table of 3rd and 4th Conjugation Active and Passive, using the verbs, mitto, mittere, misi, missum (to send), and audio, audire, audivi, auditum (to hear). See Lessons XXIV. and XXV.

Translate into English:

1. Magnam in spem Caesar veniebat fore ut Ariovistus pertinacia desisteret. 2. Cum Caesar in Italia abesset, Sabinus castris exire non debuit. 3.
Barbaris Caesar ita respondit: Sibi nullam cum his amicitiam esse posse, si in Gallia remanerent; neque

verum esse, qui suos fines tueri non potuerint,¹ alienos occupare; neque ullos in Gallia vacare agros, qui dari tantae praesertim multitudini sine injuria possint; sed licere in Ubiorum finibus considere: hoc se Ubiis imperaturum.

¹Perfect Subjunctivo. This is used for vividness instead of the regular Pluperfect. Caesar begins this passage with the regular construction, as is seen by the verb reman-rent, but he here drops into the vivid construction (the Perfect Subjunctive being as a rule a Primary Tense). The literal translation is: "(He says) that it is not reasonable that those who have not been able to defend their own territory should get possession of," etc.

Translate into Latin:

1. Caesar hopes that Arioistus will desist from his obstinacy.
2. Brutus should not have engaged such a large number of the enemy in the absence of his commander-in-chief.
3. Dumnorix, fearing lest he should be deserted by all, sent ambassadors to Caesar.
4. If Caesar should come, the city would easily be captured.
5. Caesar said that he would return on the next day, unless he were prevented by the enemy.
6. (After translating sentence 3 of the Latin exercise into English, retranslate into Latin without using the vivid narration.)

LESSON XXXVIII.

THE NOMINATIVE CASE.

1. A noun, a pronoun (or an adjective or a participle used as a noun) stands in the Nominative Case if it is the subject of a verb in the Indicative or Subjunctive Mood: as,

Cum Caesar abisset, Labienus motum timebat. As Caesar was away, Labienus feared a disturbance.

N. B.—The subject of a verb in the Infinitive Mood is in the Accusative.

Caesar dixit Labienum motum timere. Caesar said that Labienus feared a rebellion.

2. The verb to be, to become, and verbs of being named, being made, being elected, being created, and all equivalent expressions, take the same Case after them as before them, no matter what that Case may be.

- (a) Caesar fuit magnus imperator.
- (b) Dico Coesarem esse magnum imperatorem.
- (c) Numa creatus est rex.
- (d) Dico Numam creatum esse regem.
- (e) Licet omnibus esse bonis.

Germani exercitus nostri adventu perterriti statim ad Caesarem legatos de pace miserunt. 4. Legatis tribunisque militum quos convocaverat dimisis, Caesar dato signo et sublatis ancoris circiter milia passuum septem ab eo loco progressus aperto ac plano litore rives constituit. 5. Hi loca capere, castra munire, commeatibus¹ nostros intercludere instituunt. Quod ubi Crassus animadvertisit, non cunctandum existimavit quin² pugna decertaret. 6. Hi ¹In a series of words or phrases the conjunction is often omitted altogether.

²*quin* (a conjunction, "but that") is always used with the Subjunctive Mood. It is used

(a) After a verb of doubting or hesitating with a negative, as here.
 (b) After a verb of hindering, with a negative. Catilina non deterreti potuit quin coniurationem facheret. Catiline could not be hindered from forming a conspiracy.

constanter omnes nuntiaverunt manus cogi, exercitumque in unum locum conduci.

Translate into Latin:

1. They were afraid, now that all Gaul had been brought to a state of peace,¹ that our army would be led against themselves.
2. The Aedui asserted that their children ought not to have been carried off² into slavery.
3. They said that their towns were being captured almost in sight of our army.
4. Ariovistus had been called a friend by the senate of Rome.
5. Caesar said that Ariovistus had been called a friend by the senate.
6. It is not permitted to Roman soldiers to be cowards.
7. It is unlawful for any man³ to lead an army against his country.⁴
8. Finding both wind and tide favourable, he weighed anchor and sailed forward⁵ ten miles from that place.

¹Abl. Abs. Use the Participle from pacare.

²*abducere*. "Say, "lawful for no one" (nemo).

³Think of the exact meaning. "Country" means so many things.

⁴Any verb of "going forward" will do, because we know he is in a ship.

LESSON XXXIX.

THE ACCUSATIVE CASE.

1. The direct object of a transitive verb is put in the Accusative Case: as, Caesar Gallos vicit. Caesar conquered the Gauls.

2. A verb which is intransitive may take an Accusative, if the substantive have a kindred meaning with the verb: as,

Hannibal mirum somnum somniavit. Hannibal dreamed a wonderful dream.

3. The following impersonal verbs of emotion, piget, pudet, paenitet, taedet, miseret, take an Accusative of the person who feels the emotion, and a Genitive of the thing which causes the emotion: as,

Eum sceleris paenitet. He repents of his crime (lit., It repents him of his crime).

4. (a) Verbs of making, choosing, electing, etc., govern two Accusatives.

Ciceronem populus Romunus consulem creavit. The Roman people created Cicero consul.

(b) In the Passive both Accusatives become Nominatives.

Cicero a populo Romano consul creatus est. Cicero was created consul by the Roman people.

N. B.—Cicero and consul refer to one and the same person and are therefore in the same case whether the verb is active or passive, but compare with 5.

5. (a) Verbs signifying to ask, teach, and conceal take two Accusatives: as, Populus Romanus Ciceronem sententiam rogavit. The Roman people asked Cicero his opinion.

N. B.—But this construction of rogo is only found (a) with Neuters of adjectives, pronouns, etc., e.g., hoc te rogo, and (b) with sententiam.

(b) In the Passive the person becomes the subject and the thing remains in the Accusative (called the Retained Accusative).

Cicero sententiam rogatus est. Cicero was asked his opinion.

N. B.—With quaero (I question), peto, postulo (and sometimes with posco and flagito), the person from whom you ask the thing is expressed by the preposition from (ab or ex) with the Ablative: as, Galli pacem ab Romanis petierunt. The Gauls begged peace from the Romans.

6. Duration of time and distance in space are expressed by the Accusative without a preposition: as,

(a) Caesar decem milia passuum processit. Caesar advanced ten miles.

(b) Decem annos Graeci Trojam obseederunt. For ten years the Greeks besieged Troy.

7. The names of towns, small islands and the words domus and rus stand in the Accusative without a preposition with the idea of "motion to": as,

(a) Caesar Romam proficiscitur. Caesar sets out for Rome.

(b) Nervii domum revertuntur. The Nervii return home.

N. B.—But if the motion does not continue right up to the place named, the preposition is expressed: as,
Cicero ad Capuam profectus est. Cicero set out for Capua.

As a matter of fact Cicero was not going to Capua, but to an encampment in front of Capua.

8. Prepositions as a rule govern the Accusative. Exceptions will be given later.

Table of 4th Declension

passus, a pace
Singular	Plural
Nom. passus	passus
Gen. passus	passuum
Dat. passui (u)	passibus
Acc. passum	passus
Abl. passu	passibus

Most nouns in the 4th Declension end in us and are Masculine, but manus (a hand, a handful of men, a band) and domus (a house) are Feminine. There are a few nouns in u, and they are Neuter.

Translate into English:

1. Eum stultitiae pudet.
2. Hac pugna pugnata Romam profectus est nullo resistente.
3. Tantum

terrorem injecti¹ exercitui¹ Romanorum, ut egr*o*¹i extra vallum nemo sit ausus.² 4. Aristides cognomine Justus appellatus est. 5. Caesarc consule, senatus Arioivistum amicum populi Romani appellavit. 6. Cato sententiam rogatus dixit delendam esse Carthaginem. 7 Labienus eastrā vallo decem pedes³ alto munivit. 8. Cacsari cum id muntiatum esset, eos per provinciam nostram iter facere conari, maturat ab urbe profleisci, et quam maximis potest itineribus in Galliam ulteriorem contendit, et ad⁴ Genuam pervenit. Provinciae toti quam maximum potest militum numerum imperat (erat omnino in Gallia ulteriore legio una): pontem, qui erat ad⁵ Genuam, jubet rescindi. Ubi de ejus adventu Helvetii certiores facti sunt,⁶ legatos ad eum mittunt.

² audeo, audere, ausus sum, is called a Semi-Deponent verb. It is partly Active and partly Passive in form and the meaning is to dare. What is the Conj.? Make out the whole table.

³ What case?

⁴ He goes only to the vicinity of Genova. Hence the proposition.

⁵ ad=at, close to. There is no "motion to" in the case.

⁶ certiores facti sunt. certus=certain. certior is the Comparative Degree, more certain. The phrase = "they were made more certain," a common Latin expression for "they were informed." The active is certiorem facere, "to make (any one) more certain."

Translate into Latin:

- They did not dare to remain, and the majority advised that they should return to their homes.
- Themistocles informed Xerxes that the bridge which he had made over the Hellespont, would be broken down, and he would be prevented from returning into Asia.
- Themistocles repented of his folly.
- When asked his opinion, Themistocles advised the citizens to build a hundred ships.
- They sent to Delphi to ask what they should do.
- When Hannibal was in exile in Bithynia, ambassadors from Prusias happened to be at Rome.¹ One evening,²

² The time of day does not matter; say, atque ibi, "and there," that is, in Rome at the dinner.

when they were dining with (apud) Flamininus, the consul, Hannibal's name came up³ in the course of the conversation,⁴ and one of the legates remarked that he was at the court (in regno) of Prusias. Next day Flamininus tells this piece of news⁵ to the senate. The senators⁶ thinking⁷ that so long as Hannibal was alive,⁸ they would always be exposed to his machinations,⁹ sent ambassadors to Bithynia, of whom Flamininus was one,¹⁰ to ask the king not to harbour¹¹ (a man who was)¹² their worst enemy.¹³

³Say simply, "mention of Hannibal having been made."

⁴Continue the same construction with which you began, "and there (it happened that), mention of Hannibal having been made, one of them said," etc. There is, of course, no need to express "it happened that," a second time. Make one continuous sentence from "when Hannibal" to "the court of Prusias."

⁵This piece of news = id, and put it first to show connection.

⁶The senators were called patres conscripti.

⁷Who thought, etc. Who = because they, requires the Sub-junctive Mood. Abl. Abs.

⁸Say, "they would never be free from (without, sine) treachery (insidiae)."¹⁰ Among them Flamininus.

¹¹Say, "not to keep (habere) with him."

¹²Omit. ¹³Superlative of inimicus.

LESSON XL.

THE GENITIVE CASE.

1. Verbs signifying to remember, remind, forget and pity govern the Genitive: as,

Reminisceretur veteris incommodi populi Romani.
Let him remember the old disaster to the Roman people.

2. The following adjectives govern the Genitive: cupidus (desirous of), avidus (greedy of), ignarus (ignorant of), peritus (skilled in), imperitus (unskilled in), insuetus (unaccustomed to), similis (like to, generally of likeness in character): as, Insuetus narigandi mare timebat. Being unaccustomed to sailing, he was afraid of the sea.

3. By far the most common use of the Genitive is when one substantive is used immediately after another for the purpose of defining it in some way. The two nouns are connected in English by some preposition, such as of, for, with, etc. Examples are:

(a) Patria Ciceronis, the native town of Cicero. Ciceronis indicates the possessor. Ciceronis is therefore called the Possessive Genitive.

(b) Bellum Germanorum, the war with the Germans. The Germans are the object of the action of making war. Germanorum is therefore called the Objective Genitive.

(c) The Genitive also denotes the whole of which a part is taken. Magna pars militum, a great part of the soldiers. Sapientissimi Graecorum, the wisest of the Greeks.

N. B.—In phrases like all of the soldiers, we must say omnes milites (all the soldiers), because no part is taken.

(d) The Genitive is also used with an adjective to describe a substantive in some way: as, Vir magnae virtutis, a man of great valour. This is called the Descriptive Genitive, or Genitive of Quality.

N. B.—The Descriptive Genitive must be qualified by an adjective. You must never say, vir virtutis, for, a man of valour. If a less emphatic expression than vir magnae virtutis is desired, say, vir fortis, a brave man.

(e) The Genitive is also added to a substantive to define its meaning more exactly: as, Arbor abietis, the fir tree.

N. B.—This Genitive of Definition, as it is called, is very common with Gerunds: as, Ars dicendi, the art of speaking.

(f) The Genitives tanti, quanti, magni, parvi, plu- ris, minoris, and nihil are used to express the price or value at which a thing is estimated: as,

Quanti docet? For how much does he teach?

If the thing is actually bought or sold, tanti, quanti, pluris, minoris, and maximi are still used, but otherwise price or value is to be expressed by the Ablative.

Quanti frumentum vendit? At what price is he selling corn?

Magno frumentum vendit. He is selling corn at a great price.

Auro corpus vendit. He is selling the body for gold.
(So, too, plurimo, parvo, minimo.)

(g) The names of towns and small islands of the 1st and 2nd Declensions stand in the Genitive (if Singular) to express the place where: as,

Romae vivit. He lives at Rome.

If Plural, or if 3rd Declension, use the Ablative without a preposition.

Athenis vivit. He lives at Athens.

Babylone vivit. He lives at Babylon.

In the same way are used domi (at home), humo (on the ground). Belli (in war), militiae (on military service), are also used in this way, usually when combined with domi; if not so combined, in bello, in militia are used.

Caesaris virtus et domi et militiae cognita est. Caesar's excellence was recognized both at home and in the field.

Hi fratres in bello occiderunt. These brothers fell in the war.

(h) The verb sum with a Genitive expresses mark, duty, custom, characteristic, etc.: as, Stulti est in errore perseverare. It is the mark of a fool to persevere in error.

The Neuter of the adjective may be used to express the same idea: as, Stultum est, etc. It is foolish, etc.

If the adjective has only one termination, the Genitive must be used: as, Sapientis est, etc. It is the mark of a wise man, etc.

Table of Domus, a house

Singular	Plural
Nom. domus	domus
Gen. domus	domuum
Dat. domui	domibus
Acc. domum	domos
Abl. domo	domibus

N. B.—The Ablative Singular and Accusative Plural of domus usually have the terminations of the 2nd Declension. Domi (also domui) means at home.

Translate into English:

1. Sueborum¹ gens est longe maxima et bellicosissima Germanorum omnium. Hi² centum pagos habere dicuntur, ex quibus quotannis singula milia armatorum bellandi causa ex finibus educunt. Reliqui,³ qui domi manserunt, se atque illos alunt. Hi rursus in vicem anno post in armis sunt, illi domi remanent. Sic neque agri cultura nec ratio atque usus belli intermittitur. Sed privati ac separati agri apud eos nihil est. 2. Erat una cum⁴ ceteris Dumnorix Aeduus, de quo ante dictum est.⁵ Hunc secum habere in primis constituerat, quod eum cupidum rerum⁶ novarum, cupidum imperii⁷, magni animi,⁷ magnae inter Gallos auctoritatis cognoverat. Ille⁸ omnibus primo precibus petere contendit, ut in Gallia relinqueretur; partim quod insuetus navigandi mare timeret; partim quod religionibus⁹ impeditur.

¹ Account for all the Genitives in both extracts.

² Would illi do instead of hi? See note on ille in extract 2.

³ Show how the connection is indicated between each sentence in both extracts. "una cum" = along with.

⁴ What is the subject?

⁵ rerum is Genitive Plural of res. res novae (new things) is an idiomatic expression for "change of government, or revolution."

⁶ Observe that imperi and animi are in the Genitive for quite different reasons.

Translate into Latin:

1. The Belgae, observing¹ the manner of our army's march during those days,² came to the Nervii by night.
2. The Germans had no time³ for concerting measures or seizing their arms.
3. Any man may err;⁴ nobody but a fool will persist in error.
4. Nothing is so⁵ characteristic of a narrow mind as to love riches.
5. With⁶ the light armed of the infantry and cavalry they joined battle with⁶ the enemy.
6. There is a fountain of sweet water, and⁷ its name is Arethusa.
7. When the war with the Helvetii was ended,⁸ ambassadors from almost all Gaul came to Caesar to congratulate⁹ him.
8. This state has a very great reputation¹⁰ for valour.
9. Caesar, having delayed for a few days in Asia, heard that Pompey had been seen in Cyprus.¹¹
10. Vercingetorix, on receiving news of Caesar's arrival,

¹Abl. Abs.

²Express simply by the Genitive of dies. You will have three different Genitivos. Arrange them with an eye to clearness. Observe that the phrase, "during those days," depends on "the manner," and should, therefore, be in the Genitive. If the idea of duration depended on a verb, the Accusative of duration of time would be used. See "for a few days" in sentence 9. A good working rule is: When one noun depends on another it is put in the Genitive, or one noun governs another in the Genitive.

N.B.—The English preposition connecting these nouns may be of, for, with, during, etc.

³Say, "Time was given to the Germans neither of concerting," etc., and observe that "of concerting" depends on the noun "time." To concert measures = consilium habere.

⁴Observe that "may" and "will" are used in an idiomatic sense. Say, "It is (the lot) of any (qui vis) man to err; it is the mark of nobody but (nisi) of a fool (insipiens) to," etc.

⁵So . . . as, tam . . . quam. Narrow = angustus.

⁶Do not be afraid to use cum in both senses. Cum, like the English with, means both along with and against when used with a verb of fighting.

⁷Closer connection would be, "to which the name is Arethusa."

⁸Abl. Abs. and observe that the phrases, "with the Helvetii," and "from almost all Gaul," depend on nouns. Supine.

⁹*opinio*. Observe that "for valour" depends on the noun "reputation."

¹⁰Cyprus was regarded by the Romans as a small island.

raised the siege¹² of Gergovia and set out to meet¹³ him.¹⁴ The latter¹⁵ had commeneed to besiege Noviodunum, a town of the Bituriges situated on his route. When¹⁶ ambassadors came to him to ask that he would pardon them and spare their lives, he orders them¹⁷ to give up their arms, to bring out their horses, and give him hostages.

¹²oppugnatione desistere.

¹³obviam prosciici + Dative = to set out to meet.

¹⁴It would be clearer to express the proper name again, especially as the next sentence is to begin with a pronoun.

¹⁵Use the correct pronoun to indicate a change of subject.

¹⁶Show the connection by inserting "from which town" at the beginning of this sentence.

¹⁷It will be easier to put the rest of this sentence in the Passive and leave out "them," "their" and "him."

LESSON XLI.

THE DATIVE CASE.

1. Verbs signifying to command, obey, serve, and resist, verbs and expressions of advantage and disadvantage, and compounds of sum govern the Dative Case; as,

Caesar Labieno scribit ut decimae legioni praesit.
Caesar writes (commands by letter) Labienus that he is to take command of the tenth legion.

2. Some adjectives govern the Dative, e.g., utilis, gratus, amicus, inimicus, proximus, idoneus, aptus, accommodatus, paratus, similis (of external resemblance), but many of these also take ad with the Aessive, especially in the sense of having an aptitude for: as,

(a) Locus castris idoneus erat. The place was suitable for a camp.

(b) Intellectum est nostros minus aptos esse ad hujus generis hostem. It was seen that our men were little suited for an enemy of this kind (had no aptitude for coping with an enemy of this kind).

3. The agent after the Gerundive is expressed by the Dative instead of a with the Ablative: as, Caesari omnia uno tempore erant agenda. Everything had to be done by Caesar at one time.

(b) If the verb from which the Gerundive comes governs the Dative, there will be two Datives: as, Senatui populo parendum est. The senate must be obeyed by the people.

(c) To avoid the use of two Datives where ambiguity would arise, use a with the Ablative for the agent, or let the agent be understood from the context, or use a different construction.

4. The Dative Case with the verb sum is used to indicate possession: as, Puer liber est. There is a book to the boy.

Or

Puer librum habet. The boy has a book.

Caesar dixit sibi nulla cum his amicitiam esse posse. Caesar said that there was able to be no friendship to him with them (i.e., that he could have no friendship with them).

5. Verbs compounded with ad, ante, circum, de, in, inter, ob, post, prae, and sub take a Dative of the remoter object: as,

Germanis metum injicere, to inspire the Germans with fear (lit., to throw in fear to the Germans).

But if the literal, physical meaning of the verb is meant, the preposition may be repeated before the noun: as,

Se in ignem injicere, to throw oneself into the fire.

6. The following idiomatic Datives (to which the name Predicative Dative is sometimes given) should be learned by heart:

auxilio esse, to be an assistance

curae esse, to be a subject for care dolori esse, to be a cause of grief

odio esse, to be hateful to, or to be hated by (used as the Passive of odi) ornamento esse, to be a distinction subsidio esse, to be a reinforcement cordi esse, to be dear (lit., to the heart) detrimento esse, to be a source of loss impedimento esse, to be a hindrance praesidio esse, to be a protection usui esse, to be of use, or useful.

This Predicative Dative (or Dative of Purpose, as it is often called) is mostly used with the verb esse, but it is also common with habere, dare, mittere, proficisci, venire, relinquere, and such like: as, Aduatuci auxilio Nerviis veniebant. The Aduatuci were coming to the assistance of the Nervii.

N. B.—Observe that the person to whom the thing is an assistance, a hindrance, a protection, etc., is also in the Dative case.

Table of Fifth Declension.

Res, ¹ a thing
Singular
Nom. res	res
Gen. rei	rerum
Dat. rei	rebus
Acc. rem	res
Abl. re	rebus

All nouns of the Fifth Declension are Feminine except dies and meridies, which are Masculine. Dies is Feminine in the Singular in the sense of a period of time, or date.

Translate into English:

1. Vinum ad se omnino importari non sinunt, quod ea re¹ ad laborem ferendum emollescere homines atque effeminari arbitrabantur. 2. LESSON XLII.

¹*res* is a thing in the broadest sense. It means anything at all which the context will permit, such as matter, circumstance, event, fact, deed, condition, case, news, manœuvre.

THE ABLATIVE CASE.

1. Review the following Ablatives which have already been treated:

(a) The Ablative with a or ab to express the agent.

(b) The Ablative with a or ab, e or ex, to indicate the person from whom a thing is asked.

(c) The Ablative with cum to express accompaniment.

(d) The Ablative without a preposition to express cause, manner, means, and instrument.

(e) The Ablative of price.

(f) The Ablative Absolute.

(g) The Ablative without a preposition to express a point of time.

(h) The Ablative without a preposition to express place where, with certain names of towns, etc.

2. The verbs utor, fruor, fungor, potior, and vescor govern the Ablative Case; but in the Gerundive construction they are treated as though they were transitive: as,

In spem potiundorum castrorum venerant. They had been entertaining hopes of taking possession of the camp (lit., they had come into the hope of, etc.).

(b) Verbs (e.g., egeo and careo) and adjectives expressing the idea of "lacking" govern the Ablative. Egeo also takes the Genitive.

3. The following adjectives are followed by the Ablative without a preposition: praeditus, contentus, dignus, indignus, fretus, and liber: as,

Dignus honore, worthy of honour.

Fretus virtute militum, relying on the valour of the soldiers.

Liber metu, free from fear.

4. The Ablative, like the Genitive, is used with an adjective to describe a noun: as,

Vir summa virtute, a man of the greatest valour.

There is little difference between the Genitive and the Ablative of description, but the Ablative and not the Genitive should be used when speaking of an external part of the body: as,

Viri capillo promisso, men with flowing hair.
But

Viri tantulae statura (or tantula statura), men of such very small stature.

Here the reference is to the whole body, not to a part of it.

N. B.—An adjective always accompanies the Genitive or Ablative of description. Of course, a Genitive which takes the place of an adjective will do as well: as, Clavi digiti pollicis crassitudine, nails of the thickness of a thumb.

5. The Ablative without a preposition is used to express the parentage from which one is descended: as, Aeneas dea natus est. Aeneas was born of a goddess. If the ancestry is remote, the preposition is expressed: as, Belgae orti sunt a Germanis. The Belgae were descended from the Germans.

6. The Ablative without a preposition expresses time within which: as,

Pons decem diebus aedificatus est. A bridge was built within ten days.

Inter (or intra) decem dies is also used.

7. The Ablative expresses by how much one thing exceeds another: as, Hibernia est dimidio minor quam Britannia. Ireland is less by a half than Britain.

So also multis annis post (many years after), multis annis ante (many years before). Literally translated, these phrases are "afterwards by many years," etc.

N.B.—Post and ante are adverbs here. If post and ante are used as prepositions, they are placed first and govern their own case: as, post multos annos, etc.

8. The Comparative Degree governs the Ablative: as,

(a) Puer est grandior patre. The boy is taller than his father.

(b) Novi neminem fortiorum Caesare. I know no one braver than Caesar.

Latin has also the word quam (than). If quam is used the two nouns compared are in the same Case: as,

(a) Puer est grandior quam pater.

(b) Novi neminem fortiorum quam Caesarem.

N. B.—The Ablative may be substituted for quam and the Nominative, or quam and the Accusative, but not for quam and any other Case: as,

Locus erat magis idoneus castris quam urbi. The place was more suitable for a camp than for a city.

In this sentence urbe for quam urbi is not allowable.

9. The Ablative without a preposition is used with names of towns, small islands, and the words domus and rus to express the place from which one goes or comes.

Roma venit. He comes from Rome.

10. The Ablative without a preposition specifies in what respect a statement is true: as, claudus altero pede (clamo in one foot), nulla re inferior (inferior in nothing). This Ablative is called the Ablative of Specification, or Ablative of Respect.

11. The Ablative is used with totus without a preposition in the sense of "throughout": as,

Caesar nuntios tota civitate Aeduorum dimittit.
Caesar dispatches messengers throughout the whole Aeduan state.

12. The Ablative without a preposition expresses the route by which: as, Porta Collina urbem intrat. He enters the city by the Colline gate.

13. The following are the common prepositions which govern the Ablative: a or ab, coram, cum, de, ex or e, prae, pro, sine, in, sub. In and sub take the Accusative when there is motion to or towards.

14. With regard to the expression or omission of the preposition, a good working rule is: Express the preposition in Latin wherever you have it in English, unless you have a definite rule for omitting it.

(a) Caesar cum Gallis pugnavit. Caesar fought with the Gauls.

(b) Legiones circum Aquileiam hiemabant. The legions were wintering around Aquileia.

Comparison of Adjectives

The Comparative Degree of an adjective is obtained by adding ior, and the Superlative by adding issimus to the Genitive of the Positive, minus the termination: as,

altus
audax

altior audacior

altissimus
audacissimus

The Comparative Degree is thus declined:

Gen.	altioris	altioris	altioris

LESSON XLIII.

THE POSITION OF WORDS, PHRASES, AND CLAUSES.

1. Attributes, whether adjectives, substantives in apposition, or oblique cases taking the place of adjectives, usually follow their substantives, but
2. Demonstratives, and adjectives of number and quantity (e.g., magnus), usually precede their substantives.
3. Rules 1 and 2 are often reversed for clearness, emphasis, or rhythm.
4. The preposition precedes its case.
5. Adverbs and adverbial phrases precede the verb or adjective which they modify.
6. Negatives precede what they negative, whether it be a word or a whole sentence. Do not say, non ferri potest, but ferri non potest.
7. Relative pronouns, interrogative pronouns, and adverbial conjunctions regularly stand at the head of their clauses.
8. In English the tendency is to bring together words which are closely connected in sense, but in Latin the tendency is to separate two words which are obviously in agreement, and to place between them all words, phrases and clauses which relate to them. In illustration, observe the following Latin sentence as it grows.

Caesar advanced. Caesar processit.

Here is our main subject in agreement with the main verb.

Caesar advanced into the front rank. Caesar in primam aciem processit.

Caesar and processit are the two words in agreement. They are separated, and in primam aciem is placed between.

Caesar, having set out from the exhortation of the tenth legion to the right wing, advanced into the front rank. Caesar ab decimae legionis cohortatione ad dextrum cornu profectus, in primam aciem processit.

Caesar and profectus are in agreement. They, too, are separated, and ab decimae legionis cohortatione ad dextrum cornu is placed between. Note also the phrase ab decimae legionis cohortatione. The preposition ab and its Case cohortatione are separated, and decimae legionis is inserted between.

Caesar, having set out from the exhortation of the tenth legion to the right wing, advanced into the front rank when he saw his men hard pressed. Caesar ab decimae legionis cohortatione ad dextrum cornu profectus, ubi suos urgeri vidit, in primam aciem processit.

The phrase "when he saw his men hard pressed" tells the time when Caesar advanced, and so it, too, is placed between Caesar and processit.

The following clause also tells what he saw before he advanced, so it, too, will be placed between Caesar and processit:

and when he saw that, the standards being collected into one place, the soldiers of the twelfth legion being all huddled together were a hindrance to themselves in the battle,

Inserting this new clause, we have:

Caesar ab decimae legionis cohortatione ad dextrum cornu profectus, ubi suos urgeri signisque in unum locum collatis duodecimae legionis confertos milites sibi ipsos ad pugnam esse impedimento vidi . . . in primam aciem processit.

Now, after all these things, Caesar saw

- (a) that all the centurions of the fourth cohort had been killed;
- (b) that the standard-bearer had been slain;
- (c) that the standard had been lost;
- (d) that almost all the centurions of the other cohorts had been either wounded or killed;
- (e) that among them P. Sextius Baculus, a very brave man, had been overcome with many severe wounds, so that he was not able to keep his feet.

It was because of all these things that Caesar advanced into the front rank himself. All these clauses are therefore placed between Caesar and processit. Expressing them by the Ablative Absolute, we now have:

Caesar ab decimae legionis cohortatione ad dextrum cornu profectus, ubi suos urgeri signisque in unum locum collatis duodecimae legionis confertos milites sibi ipsos ad pugnam esse impedimento vident, quartae cohortis omnibus centurionibus occisis, signiferoque interfecto, signo amissio, reliquarum cohortium omnibus fere centurionibus aut vulneratis aut occisis, in his primipilo Publio Sextio Baculo, fortissimo viro, multis gravibusque vulneribus confecto ut jam se sustinere non posset; . . . in primam aciem processit.

Further, before advancing into the front rank, Caesar saw

- (a) that the rest were more inactive,
- (b) and that some in the rear were deserting the battle and going off,
- (c) that the enemy never stopped coming up from the lower ground in front,
- (d) and that they were pressing on from both sides,
- (e) and that matters were at a crisis,
- (f) and that there were no reinforcements which could be sent up.

Inserting all these clauses as before, we now have:

Caesar ab decimae legionis cohortatione ad dextrum cornu profectus, ubi suos urgeri signisque in unum locum collatis duodecimae legionis confertos milites sibi ipsos ad pugnam esse impedimento vident, quartae cohortis omnibus centurionibus occisis signiferoque interfecto, signo amissio, reliquarum cohortium omnibus fere centurionibus aut vulneratis aut occisis, in his primipilo Publio Sextio Baculo, fortissimo viro, multis gravibusque vulneribus confecto ut jam se sustinere non posset; reliquos esse tardiores, et nonnullos ab novissimis deserto proelio excedere ac tela vitare, hostes neque a fronte ex inferiore loco subeuntes intermittere et ab utroque latere instare, et rem eas in angusto vident

Finally, before Caesar advanced into the front rank

- (a) he snatched a shield from a soldier in the rear,
- (b) because he himself had come there without a shield.

Inserting these clauses as before, and adding the clauses which tell what Caesar did after he advanced into the front rank, we have the following

MODEL SENTENCE:

Caesar ab decimae legionis cohortatione ad dextrum cornu prefectus, ubi suos urgeri signisque in unum locum collatis duodecimae legionis confertos milites sibi ipsos ad pugnam esse impedimento vidi, quartae cohortis omnibus centurionibus occisis signiferoque interfecto, signo amisso, reliquarum cohortium omnibus fere centurionibus aut vulneratis aut occisis, in his primipilo Publio Sextio Baculo, fortissimo viro, multis gravibusque vulneribus confecto ut jam se sustinere non possit; reliquos esse tardiores, et nonnullos ab novissimis deserto proelio excedere ac tela vitare, hostes neque a fronte ex inferiore loco subeuntes intermittere et ab utroque laterc instare, et rem esse in angusto vidi, neque ullum esse subsidium quod submitti posset, scuto ab novissimis uni militi detracto, quod ipse eo sine scuto venerat, in primam aciem processit centurionibusque nominatim appellatis reliquos cohortatus milites signa inferre et manipulos laxare jussit, quo facilius gladius uti possent.

Now take one of the subordinate clauses: hostes neque a fronte ex inferiore loco subeuntes intermittere.

Hostes is the subject of intermittere, and they are separated by the words referring to them.

Examine all the subordinate clauses in this way. Notice where the order above referred to is not carried out, and find the reasons. For example, in the clause, "quartae cohortis omnibus centurionibus occisis," quartae cohortis should be between the two Ablatives, centurionibus and occisis, but quartae cohortis is designedly placed first in order to mark the contrast with reli-quarum cohortium, which is also placed first in the next clause.

Eodem fere

²In this sentence we have several subordinate clauses of time before the subject, Baculus, is named. The reason is that Baculus is not intimately connected with any of them, and so they are all placed outside of, not between, Baculus and his verb accurrunt. Notice, on the other hand, that in the first three sentences, the subject Caesar is closely connected with the intervening clauses. In the first sentence it was Caesar that received the hostages, in the second it was Caesar who, etc.

tempore,³ Publius Crassus,⁴ cum in Aquitaniam pervenisset, quae pars, ut ante dictum est, et regionum latitudine, et multitudine hominum, ex tertia parte Galliae est aestimanda, cum intellegeret in his locis sibi bellum gerendum, ubi paucis ante annis Lucius Valerius Praeconinus, legatus, exercitu expulso, interfectus esset, atque unde Lucius Manilius, proconsul, impedimentis amissis profugisset, non mediocrem sibi diligentiam adhibendam intellegebat. 6. Atque,⁵ in ea re⁶ omnium nostrorum intentis animis, alia ex parte oppidi⁷ Adcantuannus,⁸ qui summam imperii tenebat, cum sexcentis devotis, quos illi soldarios⁹ appellant quorum haec est conditio, uti omnibus in

⁵A certain town, of which Adcantuannus was in command, had surrendered and the inhabitants were handing over their arms to the Roman soldiers.

⁶The phrase in ea re is placed early in the sentence to show the connection with what went before. See Note 5.

⁷The phrase, alia ex parte oppidi, is also introduced before the subject. If you did not place this phrase where it is, where would you place it? Besides, observe that the phrase is intimately connected in meaning with the previous clause. It was when the minds of our men were occupied with that matter (i.e., with receiving the arms) in one part of the town, that Adcantuannus attempted to make a sally from another part.

⁸The verb for Adcantuannus is impetravit, but the sentence is so long that Caesar introduces the subject again towards the end—rum his Adcantuannus. cum hi = cum sexcentis devotis, already mentioned. The gist of the whole sentence is as follows: Adcantuannus cum sexcentis devotis eruptionem facere conatus....repulsus in oppidum, tamen uti eadem deditiois conditione uteretur, ab Crasso impetravit. Adcantuannus, though he attempted to make a sally with six hundred devoted followers, and was driven back into the town, nevertheless obtained this indulgence from Crassus that he should have the advantage of the same terms of surrender (as the other inhabitants of the town).

vita commodis una cum his fruantur, quorum se amicitiae dediderint; si quid iis per vim accidat, aut eundem casum una ferant, aut sibi mortem conscient; neque adhuc hominum memoria repertus est quisquam,¹⁰ qui, eo interfecto, cuius se amicitiae devovisset, mortem recusaret eum iis Adcantuannus eruptionem facere conatus, clamore ab ea parte munitionis sublato, cum ad arma milites concurrissent vehementerque ibi pugnatum esset, repulsus in oppidum tamen, uti eadem deditiois conditione uteretur, ab Crasso impetravit.

¹⁰ Account for the unusual position of quisquam, and point out all the pairs of words as in Note 4. Observe that in clauses like ut omnibus . . . fruantur, where no subject is expressed, the pair is ut . . . fruantur, because we at once associate a Subjunctive with the conjunction which requires the Subjunctive.

Translate into Latin:

1. Caesar, after delaying¹ a few days in their² territory, burnt³ all their villages and buildings, cut down their corn, and retreated⁴ into the territory of the Ubii.
2. On discovering these things,⁵ the chiefs of Britain, who had come to Caesar after the battle, held a conference with one another and resolved to renew the war.
3. On discovering these things, the chiefs of Britain, who had come to Caesar after the battle, held a conference with one another, and, perceiving⁶ that

²*orum*. Where should it be placed?

³Notice the co-ordinate verbs, burnt, cut down, retreated. Latin prefers one main verb with the other clauses subordinate. Turn the clauses with "burnt" and "cut down" into the Ahd. Abs., and make "retreated" your main verb.

⁴*se recipere*.

⁵Begin with "these things" in order to mark the connection with what went before. Notice that you have two co-ordinate verbs, "held" and "resolved." Say, inter se collocuti=having talked among themselves. Your pairs will now be: The chiefs . . . resolved (last word in the whole sentence); the chiefs . . . having talked; who . . . had come.

⁶Perceiving and discovering. Say when they perceived and (when) they discovered.

cavalry, ships and corn were wanting to the Romans, and discovering the small number⁹ of our soldiers from the smallness of the camp,⁸ resolved to renew the war. 4. On discovering these things, the chiefs of Britain, who had come to Caesar after the battle, held a conference with one another, and, perceiving that cavalry, ships and corn were wanting to the Romans, and discovering the small number of our soldiers from the small extent of the camp (which⁹ was even more contracted than usual,¹⁰ because Caesar had taken over¹¹ the legions without baggage¹²) resolved to renew the war.

⁸Smallness = exiguitas. The new pairs will be: when (they) . . . perceived; and (when they) . . . discovered. The English "they" is expressed in the verb as usual, but you can imagine it to be after "when," where the subject would be if expressed. There is no need to repeat "when," because "discovered," being in the Imperfect Subjunctive like "perceived," it will be at once evident that "when" is understood.

¹⁰Remember that castra is Plural Neuter.

LESSON XLIV.

1. Most subordinate clauses come before the principal verb. See the model sentence in the previous exercise.
2. Final clauses frequently come after the principal verb. See last clause of the model sentence.
3. Indirect questions often come after the principal verb.
4. Clauses of result come after the principal verb.

5. The position of the following conjunctions should be noticed:

- (a) nam (for) always the first word.
- (b) namque (for) always the first word.
- (c) enim (for) after one, rarely after two words.
- (d) itaque (therefore) almost always first.
- (e) igitur (therefore) usually after one or two words.
- (f) etiam (even) immediately before the word it emphasizes; quoque and quidem immediately after.
- (g) tamen (nevertheless) first except for emphasis.
- (h) autem and vero (now, moreover, but) after one word or two, if the two are closely connected.

6. Except when there is a complete change in the subject matter, every Latin sentence should have at the beginning or near the beginning a word which will carry the mind back to the preceding sentence. This is done by such words as are detailed in 5 above, or by such words as:

- (a) interim, interea, meanwhile (i.e., while the events related in the previous sentence or sentences were going on).
- (b) hic, is, or ille, this or that (person or thing mentioned in the previous sentence).
- (c) qui, who or which (referring to somebody or something immediately preceding).
- (d) a noun or pronoun (if it is a noun or pronoun repeated from the preceding sentence).
- (e) a noun or pronoun in contrast with one in the preceding sentence.
- (f) a verb (if the subject of the verb is the same as the subject of the verb in the sentence immediately preceding).
- (g) an appropriate conjunction.
- (h) adverbs and adverbial phrases of time and place, e.g., tum, postero die, eo, ibi, huc, etc.

Hostes³ vero, notis omnibus vadis, ubi ex litore aliquos singulares ex navi egredientes conspexerant, incitatis equis impeditos adoriebantur: plures paucos circumstiebant: alii ab latere aperto in universos tela coniciebant. (The following notes refer to the connectives between the periods.)

¹*nostri* is implied in utrisque. ²*tamen*, 6 (g).

³*hostes* is in contrast with nostri, 6 (e). ⁴*vero*, 6 (h).

⁵*quod*, 6 (c). ⁶*nostri* is suggested in iis. ⁷*hoc*, 6 (b).

LESSON XLV.

1. Review the rules for the position of words, and the connection of clauses and periods.

2. It has been said that words in agreement are generally separated, but the relative should be placed as near as possible to the antecedent. Bring the antecedent, if necessary, towards the end of its own clause: as,

Ex magna parte Morinorum ad eum legati venerunt qui se excusarent. Legati would naturally stand at the beginning.

3. Indirect narration comes after the principal verb, because the verb of speaking is quite unimportant, and in fact is often omitted.

Translate into English:

Caesar cognito consilio eorum ad flumen Tamesim in fines Cassivellauni exercitum duxit; quod flumen¹ uno omnino loco pedibus, atque hoc aegre, transiri potest. Eo² cum venisset, animadvertisit ad alteram fluminis ripam magnas esse copias hostium instructas. Ripa³ autem erat acutis sudibus praefixis munita, ejusdemque generis sub aqua defixaes sudes flumine tegebantur. His⁴ rebus cognitis a captivis perfugisque Caesar praemisso equitatu confestim legiones subsequi jussit. Sed⁵ ea celeritate atque eo impetu milites ierunt, cum capite solo ex aqua extarent, ut hostes⁶ impetum legionum atque equitum sustinere non possent ripasque dimitterent ac se fugae mandarent.

ABSTRACT TERMS.

1. In English abstract terms are common. In Latin they are to be avoided except when the abstract quality itself is under discussion: as,

(a) Caesar takes possession of Rome. Caesar Roman occupat.

But

(b) Cicero wrote a treatise on friendship. Cicero de amicitia scripsit.

2. Abstract terms may often be avoided by expressing the meaning by a verb.

(a) He made these preparations—he prepared these things.

(b) He took his departure—he went away.

(c) The enemy beat a retreat—the enemy took themselves back, or turned their backs.

3. The dependent question gets rid of an abstract noun.

(a) He did not perceive the nature and extent of the danger—he did not perceive of what kind (qualis) and how great the danger was.

(b) His destination was a general secret=nobody knew where he was going.

Translate into English, using as many abstract terms as you can:

1. L. Domitio Ap. Claudio consulibus,¹ discedens² ab hibernis Caesar in Italiam, ut quotannis facere consuerat,³ legatis imperat,⁴ quos legionibus praefecerat,⁵ uti quam plurimas possent hieme naves aedificandas⁶ veteresque reficiendas⁷ curarent.⁸ 2. Caesar, etsi intellegebat qua de causa ea dicerentur, quaeque eum⁹ ab instituto consilio¹⁰ deterret, tamen, ne aestatem in Treveris consumere cogretur, omnibus ad Britannicum bellum rebus comparatis, Indutiomarum ad se cum ducentis obsidibus venire jussit.

¹consulship. ²departnre. ³custom.

⁴injunctions. ⁵in command. ⁶construction.

⁷repairing. ⁸Translate by see to, or urge on.

⁹cum = Indutiomarus.

¹⁰consilio = the plan of Indutiomarus, which was to hold out against the invasion of Caesar with a view to obtaining the chief power in his own state for himself. After some time, however, Indutiomarus found that all the chief men were deserting him, and so he thought it wise to send ambassadors to Caesar with many plausible excuses. ea = these plausible excuses (which have been mentioned in a previous chapter).

Translate into Latin, avoiding abstract terms wherever you can:

The enemy immediately made a hasty march to the river Axona, which,¹ as has already been said, flowed past the rear of our camp. Finding a ford,² they made an attempt to effect a crossing with part of their forces for the purpose of storming the fort of which Q. Titurius was in command.

¹Which has been said to be behind our camp.

²Make the connection plain by saying, "There a ford having been found." See Lesson XLIV. 6 (A).

LESSON XLVII.

THE IMPERATIVE MOOD. THE SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD IN THE PRINCIPAL SENTENCE.

1. The Imperative Mood is used only when a command is 2nd person and affirmative: as,

Desilite, inquit. "Jump down," said he. (Direct narration is used with inquit.)

2. If the command is 2nd person and negative, use noli (be unwilling) and the Infinitive: as, Noli putare, do not suppose; or ne and Present or Perfect Subjunctive, as Ne putas, or Ne putaveris.

3. All other commands and exhortations are to be expressed by the Present Subjunctive, whether they are negative or affirmative: as,

(a) Pro patria pugnemus. Let us fight for our native land.

(b) Aut bibat aut abeat. Let him drink or depart.

(c) Ne desperemus. Let us not despair.

The following table may be useful:

Commands and Exhortations.

1st and 3rd Persons

2nd Person

(a) Affirmative = Pres. Subj. (a) Affirmative = Imper.

(b) Negative = ne and Pres. Mood.

Subj.

(b) Negative = noli + Infin.

(or ne and Perf. or Pres. Subj.)

4. Wishes are expressed by utinam and the

(a) Present Subjunctive for a wish which may be realized: as,

Utinam id sit, quod spero. May my hope be realized.

(b) Imperfect Subjunctive for a vain wish in present time; as Utinam Caesar adesset. Would that Caesar were present (now).

Utinam Caesar adfuisset. Would that Caesar had been present (then).

The negative is ne or non.

5. The Subjunctive is used in questions of perplexity, where no answer is really expected:
- Quid faciam?* What am I to do?
 - Quid facerem?* What was I to do? What should I have done?

Delige centenos viros ex omni pedite¹ atque equite, cum quibus ad me vigilia prima venias;² nunc corpora curare tempus est. 3. Noli putare, Brutc, quemquam uberorem ad dicendum fuisse quam C. Gracchum. 4. Arioistus ita respondit: sc prius in Galliam venisse, quam populum Romanum. Nunquam ante hoc tempus exercitum populi Romani Galliae provincise fines egressum. Quid sibi vellet,³ cur in suas possessiones veniret?⁴ Provinciam suam hanc esse Galliam,⁴ sicut illam nostram.

¹*pedes* and eques are used even in the Sing. instead of peditatus and equitatus. So miles in the sense of soldiery, soldiers.

²Why Subj.?

³Account for this Subj.

⁴*Hanc Galliam*, this Gaul where they stood = this part of Gaul.

- (Turn sentences 2 and 3 of the Latin exercise into Oratio Obliqua.)
- (Turn passage 4 of the Latin exercise into Oratio Recta.)

LESSON XLVIII.

TRANSITIVE VERBS USED INTRANSITIVELY.

1. In English many verbs are used both transitively and intransitively: as,

- (a) The enemy is increasing (intransitive).
- (b) Caesar increases his army (transitive).

2. In Latin the same verb must not be used both transitively and intransitively as in English. The Latin for (a) and (b) is: (a) Hostes crescunt. (b) Caesar exercitum auget. Cresco is intransitive, and augeo is transitive.

3. But there are not always two verbs in Latin with the same meaning, the one transitive and the other intransitive. When it is necessary to get the intransitive meaning from a transitive verb, turn the verb into the Passive Voice, or add the Accusative of the reflexive pronoun: thus,

- (a) Caesar castra movet. Caesar moves his camp.
- (b) Tellus movetur (or movet se). The earth moves (lit., the earth is moved, or moves itself).

Translate into English:

1. Ad haec Caesar respondit: se, magis consuetudine sua, quam merito eorum, civitatem conservaturum, si, priusquam murum aries attigisset, se dedidissent.¹

2. Romani ponte Ticinum jungunt,² tutandique pontis causa castellum insuper imponunt. 3. Caesar eas cohortes cum exercitu suo conjunxit.³ 4. P. Crassum cum cohortibus legionariis duodecim et magno numero equitatus in Aquitaniam proficisci jubet ne ex his nationibus auxilia in Galliam mittantur, ac tantaes nationes conjungantur.⁴ 5. Cacsar cum septimam legionem, quae juxta constiterat, item urgeri ab hoste vidisset, tribunos militum monuit ut paulatim sesc legiones conjungerent.⁵ 6. Interim Trinobantes, prope firmissima earum regionum eivitas, legatos ad Caesarem mittunt pollicenturque sese⁶ ei dedituros atque imperata facturos.

¹*se dedidissent*. dedo is transitive and means I give up. si se dedidissent therefore = if they gave themselves up. This may be rendered in English by "if they surrendered," because "surrender" in English is used both transitively and intransitively. In Latin, however, you must say, "if they surrendered themselves," because dedo is transitive in Latin and must have an object.

²*jungo* is transitive, Ticinum being the object.

⁴Here the intransitive meaning is wanted, and so conjungantur is Passive Voice. In English we could say simply, "lest so great tribes should unite," but in Latin you must say either, (a) lest so great tribes be united, or (b) lest so great tribes unite themselves (se conjungant).

⁵"That the legions should gradually unite themselves." Instead of sese conjungerent, we might say conjungerentur.

⁶Notice that sese might be expected twice, once for the Accusative, subject of the Infinitive dedituros and again for the Accusative object of the Infinitive, thus : pollicenturque sese ei sese dedituros; and they promise that they (sese) will surrender themselves (sese again) to him. In all such sentences the reflexive is expressed once only. Which one do you think is omitted, subject or object?

Translate into Latin:

1. Next day they move their camp from that place.
2. Lictors, clear away¹ the crowd.
3. Before the enemy could move from the spot, Caesar crossed the river.
4. When the lictors approached, the rabble moved off.¹
5. Caesar ordered the inhabitants of the town to surrender their persons and their arms.
6. The Gauls immediately sent ambassadors to Cacsar to say that they had not entered into a league against Rome,² and that they had not³ united⁴ with the Germans.
7. Caesar sent word⁵ to the cohorts who had

²Express the meaning as usual.

⁴Should you express se twice in this sentence?

⁵This is equivalent to a command. Mind your construction.

crossed the river to effect a junction⁶ with the main body. 8. Caesar forbade the Gauls to join the Germans. 9. The mules,⁷ baggage and all,⁸ rolled⁹ down into the valley.

*Avoid the abstract noun by using a verb. umentum.

⁸Say, "along with their loads" (onus, -eris).

⁹*devolvo* is transitive.

LESSON XLIX.

SOME IDIOMS.

1. Curo with the Accusative and the Gerundive expresses the idea that somebody is superintending the doing of something: as,

Labienus naves aedificandas esse curat. Labienus sees to (superintends, or urges on) the construction of the ships (lit., takes care that the ships should be built).

2. The Gerundive is often added in a sort of explanatory way: as,

Omnis cetera praeda diripienda data est. All the rest of the booty was given to be plundered.

3. (a) A contrary-to-fact condition in past time is expressed by the Pluperfect Subjunctive followed by the Pluperfect Subjunctive: as, Nisi nox proelio intervenisset, nemo superfuisset. If night had not put a stop to the battle no one would have survived.

(b) If the above sentence comes under the influence of a verb of speaking, the main clause nemo superfuisset becomes, of course, Accusative and Infinitive (superfuisset taking the form superfuturum fuisse). See Lesson XXIII.

Dixit, nisi nox proelio intervenisset, neminem superfuturum fuisse. He said that unless night had put a stop to the battle, no one would have survived.

(c) If instead of a verb requiring the Accusative and Infinitive, a verb requiring the Subjunctive is prefixed, superfuisset becomes superfuturus fuerit: as,

Tanta erat caedes ut, nisi nox proelio intervenisset, nemo superfuturus fuerit. So great was the slaughter that, unless night had put a stop to the battle, no one would have survived.

N. B.—When the Passive is required, the Gerundive is used: as, Tanta erat caedes ut, nisi nox proelio intervenisset, nemo conservandus fuerit. So great was the slaughter that, unless night had put a stop to the battle, no one would have been saved.

4. The idea that something was very near happening is expressed thus:

Minimum (or haud multum) aberat quin consul interficeretur. The consul came within an ace of being killed, narrowly escaped death, was very nearly killed (lit., there was very little wanting but that the consul, etc.).

N. B.—In this construction abesse is always impersonal; it has the force of deesse, and it is followed by quin + Subjunctive.

5. Notice also the impersonal tantum abest, followed by two ut clauses.

Tantum abest ab eo ut malum mors sit, ut verear ne longius vivam. So far is death from being an evil that I fear lest I may live too long (lit., it is so far from this that death is an evil that I, etc.).

Translate into English:

1. Hoc proelio facto, reliquas copias Helvetiorum ut consequi posset, non tem in Arare faciendum curat atque ita exercitum traducit. 2. Reliquum exercitum Sabino et Cottae legatis in Menapios atque in eos pagos Morinorum, ab quibus ad eum legati non venerant, ducendum dedit. 3. Non dubium fuit quin, nisi firmata extrema agminis finissent, ingens in eo saltu accipienda clades fuerit. 4. Eo cum venisset, naves longas invenit instructas, neque multum abesse ab eo quin paucis diebus deduci possent.

Translate into Latin:

1. Caesar ordered the lieutenants whom he had placed in charge of the legions to see to the building of as many ships as possible in the winter, and to look after the repairing of the old ones.
2. Caesar gave three legions to Fabius to take into the territory of the Morini.
3. If the rear had not been strengthened the Romans would have sustained a great disaster.
4. He said that, if the rear had not been strengthened, the Romans would have sustained a great disaster.¹
5. There was no doubt but that, if the rear had not been strengthened, the Romans would have sustained a great disaster.
6. There was no doubt but that, if the rear had not been strengthened, the Romans would have been defeated.²
7. So far am I from doing him an injury³ that I intend⁴ to confer a favour upon him.

¹To sustain a disaster = cladem accipere.

²vincere. ³Avoid the abstract noun.

⁴Express by the Future Participle of the verb dare. Favour = beneficium.

LESSON L.

THE FIRST AND SECOND PERSON.

1. A verb agrees with the First Person rather than with the Second or Third, and with the Second rather than with the Third: as,

- (a) Ego et tu ire debemus. You and I ought to go.
- (b) Ego et Caesar ire debemus. Caesar and I ought to go.
- (c) Tu et Caesar ire debetis. You and Caesar ought to go.

The order is first, second, third. Do not put the First Person last, as in English.

2. Where there are several subjects the verb may be Plural as above. But the verb may agree with the subject nearest to it: as,

Neither you nor I was present. Neque ego neque tu aderamus, or Neque ego aderam neque tu.

3. Table of Ego (I) and Tu (thou).

Abl.	me	te	nobis

			vestrum or vestri
			vobis
			vos
			vobis

4. There is no third personal pronoun. Its place is supplied by the demonstratives, hic, ille, or is.

5. There is, however, a reflexive pronoun of the third person, viz.,

Singular and Plural, all genders
Nom.	wanting
Gen.	sui, of himself, (herself, itself, themselves)
Dat.	sibi

7. Terra marique bellum geremus. 8. Cum hostes

¹Personal pronouns must, of course, be expressed when there are more than one subject to the same verb. They are also expressed for contrast or emphasis.

SUPPLEMENTARY EXERCISES.

I. Use Indirect Narration:

I dare not go without an army into that part of Gaul which is in your hands, and I cannot mobilize my troops without a great deal of trouble. Besides¹, it is a matter of wonder² to me what business³ you have in my part of Gaul⁴ which I have conquered in war.

¹Put the subject in the principal clause and let it be understood in the subordinate clause.

²Get rid of the "and." Latin tends to use subordinate clauses with few principal clauses. See that you do not put "soldiers" in the Ablative Absolute, if you are going to make that word the object of "addressed."

The Suehi, who were commanded at this time by Vergorix, in order to test¹ the minds of the Acdui, sent ambassadors to Dumnorix, their king, with an offer² of peace if he was willing to buy it. Dumnorix scornfully rejected³ the offer,⁴ and in a voice loud enough⁵ to reach the ears of the ambassadors as they withdrew, he boastfully remarked⁶ to his friends that the Suebi were asking for peace through fear of war. When⁷ the embassy returned, the Suebi greeted its report with shouts of laughter,⁸ exclaiming on all sides that Dumnorix would soon find out whether they were consulting their own interests⁹ or his when¹⁰ they offered peace. IX.

The¹ date was now past² on which the beleaguered inhabitants of Alesia had expected aid from their friends. The corn was all consumed, and they had no knowledge of what was going on in the outside world. A council was therefore called for the purpose of considering their plans for the future. Various opinions were expressed. Some were in favour of surrender, others were for a sally while their strength lasted,³ but the motion of Critognatus is worthy of being placed on record⁴ on account of its extraordinary⁵ and diabolical⁶ cruelty. "I move," said he, "that we neither surrender nor make a sortie, but that we kill all those who are incapable of active service, and that we live on their bodies until the relieving force arrives."

¹The whole passage should be translated in three sentences, the first ending at "for the future," the second, at "cruelty." The last sentence may be given in direct narration.

²Use praeterire.

⁴singularis. ⁵nefarious. ⁶censeo.

X.

When the news of Caesar's approach reached Pompey's ears he abandoned¹ his intention² of going to Syria, and at once set sail for Egypt. Landing at Pelusium, he applied to Ptolemy for permission to take refuge in Alexandria. In public Ptolemy gave a favourable answer to Pompey's messengers, and invited him to the capital, but in secret he laid a plot against him. Achillas, captain of his guards, a man of unusual daring, and Lucius Septimius, a military tribune, who had once commanded a company under³ Pompey in his war with the pirates, were dispatched with orders to assassinate him. Pompey was easily induced to embark in a small boat⁴ with few attendants, and there Achillas⁵ and Septimius found the opportunity of putting their bloody design into execution.

navicula parvula.* The subject and the voice have been changed too often to make a good Latin sentence. It may be advisable to rewrite the whole passage, changing the subject and the voice only when necessary.

XI.

Alarmed¹ by the rapidity with which Caesar presented himself, the Germans immediately sent a delegation to see what could be done in the way of obtaining peace. Caesar's answer was an order to the effect that they must return into Germany and make their home in the territory of the Ubii. The ambassadors went back with their report. After² their departure, and without waiting to hear how his answer was received by the German people, Caesar began to make preparations for war, as he had grave doubts about their complying with his orders.

¹The teacher should frequently give passages of his own to be done into Latin by his pupils without help of any kind. Suitable material may be obtained by translating the Latin exercises into idiomatic English. Compare the above with page 25, sentence 12.

²Observe that from "After their departure" to "German people" is nothing but a very free rendering of interea. Notice also that the connecting word His is purposely omitted in the translation in order to test the pupil. This should always be done as far as is consistent with good English.

XII.

The bold youth was immediately surrounded by a mob of citizens, who¹ commanded him to disclose his identity, his destination, his business in the town, and his reason for climbing over the wall in the night-time instead² of coming through the gates. With the greatest coolness³ he⁴ replied that he could not answer so many questions at once, and that it was not the business of civilians⁵ to know his name or his intentions. Upon this⁶ he was dragged with much violence before⁷ the authorities and⁸ he was again questioned with regard to his purposes. As he still refused to give an account of himself,⁹ the magistrates concluded that he was a spy and⁸ gave orders for his immediate execution.

²Say, "not having entered (ingredior) through the gates."

³Say, "by no means terrified."

⁴Use the Relative and place it first, as usual. This will give the connection with the previous sentence.

⁵*Togatus.*
Observe that this is an expression of time, which is a common method of beginning a new sentence.

⁶Does it really mean that he was dragged before the authorities?

⁷Get rid of this conjunction according to the principle laid down in Supplementary Exercise V., Note 2.

⁸In consideration of what has gone before, "to give an account of himself" may be rendered simply by respondere.

XIII.

All the Hernicians who were captured in the battle Fabius sent to the senate at Rome. An¹ investigation was held for the purpose of finding out whether they had been compelled to fight against Rome on the side of the Samnites or whether they had done² so voluntarily. They were then distributed amongst the Latin states, there³ to be kept under guard,⁴ and instructions were given to the new consuls to refer the whole matter over again to the senate next year. The⁵ Hernicians were much aggrieved at this treatment.

¹Examine carefully the passage from "an Investigation" to "next year," and you will find that there are only two important historical facts, namely:

(a) They were distributed amongst the Latin States.

(b) The consuls were ordered to refer the whole matter. Begin, therefore, with "When it had been asked (quaero) whether," etc.

"This is obviously a mere repetition of the verb fight. Rearrange thus, "Whether they had fought against the Romans on the side of (pro) the Samnites from compulsion or of their own free will."

"Not needed. "Gerundive of custodio. See page 128, §2.

"Begin this sentence as usual with the word that refers you back to the previous one. There is no need to express the word "treat.nent."

XIV.

In the consulship of Cicero and Antony a conspiracy to overthrow the Roman government was set on foot by L. Sergius Catilina, a depraved aristocrat.¹ News of the plot came to Cicero's ears through the wife of one of the conspirators, whereupon he immediately called a meeting of the senate in the temple of Jupiter Stator and laid² the whole matter before the house. Catiline in alarm³ left the city and fled with a few friends to Etruria. He⁴ already had a fortified camp at Fæsulæ in charge of C. Manlius, whom he had instructed to send messengers throughout the length and breadth⁵ of Italy for the purpose of collecting the old soldiers of Sulla. Meanwhile the senate passed a decree to the effect that the consuls should take precautions to safeguard the state.⁶ A few of the conspirators in the city were immediately arrested and the question of their punishment was brought up in the senate.⁷ Two opinions were expressed.⁸ D. Silanus moved that sentence of death be passed upon the culprits. Caesar proposed in amendment their imprisonment and the confiscation of their property.⁹ Observing that the majority¹⁰ seemed to incline to¹¹ the opinion of Caesar, Cicero, in a speech known as The Fourth Oration Against Catiline, made a vigorous defence of the motion of Silanus.¹²

'Homo patrici generis sed ingenio pravo.

'Ad senatum rem referre. Make this the main idea with the other clauses subordinate.

"By which thing alarmed" will give connection.

The English takes it for granted that Fæulæ is in Etruria. Latin would state the fact specifically by saying "there at Fæulæ."

'Totus simply.

The usual formula was ne quid res publica detrimenti capiat.

It was asked in the Senate what it was pleasing to be done concerning.

'Proponere.

Better make one sentence from "A few of the conspirators" to "of their property," thue, "A few of the conspirators," etc. (abl. absol.), "when it was asked," etc., "were expressed" (principal verb) "one of Silanue, who thought (censere) that they should be condemned to death, the other of Caesar, who thought (existimare) that, their goode being confiscated (publicare), they should be cast into chains."

"Plures senatores.

"Inclinare ad.

"Vigorously commended the opinion (sententiam commendare) of Silanue in (by means of) a speech, etc.

XV.

In the course of the same summer, after the recovery¹ of Lesbos, the Athenians, under the command of Nicias, made an expedition² against the island of Minoa, which lies near Megara. The³ Megarians had constructed a fort there, and had turned⁴ the island into a military station. Nicias⁵ made no attack. His⁶ instructions from home⁷ were to starve the enemy into a surrender and not⁸ to storm the place, the idea⁹ being that if some day⁹ a treaty of peace were concluded and the Athenians agreed to give up all the places which they had taken by force of arms, the island of Minoa might be excepted on the ground that the Megarians had surrendered it of their own free will.

¹A common way of rendering an abstract noun is to use the Perfect Participle of a verb, e.g., ab urbe condita=from the foundation of the city.

²Translate quite simply.

³Consider in what relation this sentence stands to the preceding one and insert a connecting word. See page 119.

⁴This may be rendered by using utor with navalia, but mind the tense.

⁵Show the connection as usual.

⁶Be definite or omit altogether.

⁷Always put neque instead of et non, and neve or neu instead of et ne.

⁸*Eo consilio ut.* ⁹*Aliquando.*

XVI.

As soon as Agesilaus found¹ himself appointed to the post of commander-in-chief he advised Sparta to send him into Asia, with a view to making war on the king. In his opinion² an offensive³ war was preferable to a defensive⁴ one. A report had gone abroad⁴ that Artaxerxes was collecting fleets and land armies and⁵ that an invasion of Greece was the object of his preparations. Agesilaus gained his point,⁶ and such was his despatch that he arrived in Asia with his troops before the satraps of the king were cognizant of his departure⁷ from Greece. The result⁸ was an easy victory⁷ for the Lacedaemonians.

²At the end of the previous sentence you may put a comma and insert dicens or docens, or you may put a colon and let the verb of saying be understood.

³The idea may be rendered very simply in this passage by saying "it is better (satius) to fight in Asia than in Europe."

⁴Use exire, and remember to show your connection with the previous sentence.

XVII.

The Epidamnians,¹ finding that it was vain² to look to Corcyra for help, were in great perplexity³ as to their next move⁴ at such a crisis.⁵ Sending⁶ to Delphi, they enquired of the oracle whether they should surrender their city to the original founders⁷ of the colony, the Corinthians,⁸ and endeavour to obtain some assistance from them. The god replied that they should,⁹ and bade¹⁰ them offer the leadership of the combined forces¹¹ to the Corinthians. In accordance with this command¹² the Epidamnians went to Corinth, informed the Corinthians of the answer which the Oracle had given, and delivered up the city to them.¹³

¹*Epidamniit.*

²Say "that no help would be brought to them from the Corcyrasans (Corcyraei)."

³Uss a verb.

⁴Rsnder by means of a dependent qustion.

⁵*Discrimen.*

⁶The relation of this sentencs to ths foregoing is one of consequenscs. Bsgin therforens with qua re or soms introductory word or phrass with similiar meaning.

⁷*Deduco.*

⁸Better introduces ths Corinthians (Corinthii) hsforz describing them as founders.

⁹It will hs necessary for the Latin to say what thsy should do.

¹¹"Of the combined forces" can be undsrstood from ths context. Just say "take (adsumere) them (ths Corinthians) to themseives (as) leaders."

¹²Compare with Note 6 above. Better not havs so many co-ordinate clausz in this fast sentencs.

¹³The student shoud be asked to rswrits the above, using more complex periods. The first two sentences might be put together with "sent" as the principal verh, or ths second sentence might run into ths third by making "the god rspiled" ths main ssntence. It is always a question just how much complexity to introduce into your Latin sentence. It is safer for ths young student to avoid excessive compilication and to connect his psriods in the manner suggested on pags 119.

XVIII.

For these¹ reasons the Corinthians determined to make common ceuse² with the Epidamnians; accordingly³ all who would volunteer to settle in Epidamus were given permiseion to go and a garrison was sent⁴ for their protection. This¹ garrison, which⁵ was composed of Ambracian and Leucadian troops, proceeded by land⁶ to Appolonia, which was a colony of the Corinthians, fearing⁷ to go by sea lest the Corcyraeans should oppose their passage. Great⁸ was the annoyance of the Corcyraeans when they discovered that the settlers and the troops had entered Epidamus and that the colony had been given up to the Corinthians. They⁹ immediately set sail with twenty-five ships and laid siege to the town.

¹This word is sufficient to make the connection with what went before. See page 119.

³You can begin a new sentence with itaque, or you can make the first sentence a cum-clause and leave out the word "accordingly."

"Better turn into the Active Voice, and this will allow you to keep "Corinthians" for your subject. Get rid of "and" by saying "the permission (potestas) of going being given to all who were willing to betake themselves (se conferre) thither for the purpose of settling (habitare)."

"Better shift this clause back to the previous one, and you will then say simply "a garrison of Ambraciens and Leucadienae."

⁵Fearing lest they might be prevented (prohibeo with Infinitive) by the Corcyraeans from crossing the sea.

⁶For connection begin "Corcyraei vero." See page 119, §5 (h) and §6 (d). Or, if you are going to put a noun for "annoyance," begin "Corcyraeorum." etc. "Great was the annoyance," etc., could be rendered by using the phrase rem iniquo animo ferre.

⁷To be definite and also to give connection indicate by eo the place to which they are sailing. See page 119, §6 (h).

XIX.

To avoid¹ tiring his soldiers by a lengthy march, exhausted as they were with a long and indecisive² battle, Caesar on the next day³ kept his men within their lines. Meanwhile the enemy, having sent for reinforcements, were waiting for an attack on the part⁴ of our men, so that they had no appearance of desiring to fight. After mid-day, seeing that the strength and spirits of his men were now so much restored⁵ that they were not likely to shrink⁶ from any danger but on the contrary were standing prepared for battle, Caesar threw open⁷ two gates, made a sudden sortie, and surprised⁸ the enemy, who were taken unawares and never dreamt⁹ of such a manoeuvre. Great numbers¹⁰ were surrounded and slain, and so great was the slaughter that barely 500 escaped without being wounded,¹¹ and had not night intervened, death¹² would have overtaken these as well.

¹Ne. ²*Diutinus atque anceps.*

⁴Several words and phrases throughout this selection may be omitted altogether.

⁸"Surprise" in military sense = opprimere.

¹⁰*Numerus* is not to be used in the plural in this sense.

¹¹*Integer.*

¹²Avoid, if possible, making a thing perform an act. See the first note on page 135. Say, "not even these would have survived." For "would have" see the top of page 129. Do not be afraid of ne . . . quidem for not even in a clause beginning with ut.

XX.

In the following year Q. Fabius fought a pitched¹ battle with the army of the Samnites near the city of Allifae. The Romans had it all their own way.²

The enemy were routed and³ driven into their camp and⁴ they would not have kept possession of that,⁵ if⁶ the daylight had lasted but a little longer. It was invested, however,⁷ before nightfall and a watch kept⁸ to prevent⁹ anyone from slipping out.¹⁰ Next day, at the first glimmering of the dawn,¹¹ they¹² prepared to surrender. Those who were natives of Samnium agreed to come out if¹³ they were allowed a single garment apiece. They¹⁴ were all sent under the yoke. No stipulations were made¹⁵ for the allies of the Samnites and they were sold at auction¹⁶ to the number of seven thousand.

Justum.

"Say, "The result of the action was not at all (minime) doubtful." Res=the result of the action.

"Do not omit the "and" this time. When you have two participles like these, both agreeing with the same subject, you should connect them by a conjunction.

And . . . not=neque.

"As there is considerable emphasis on "that," it might be well to repeat castra. Latin repeats nouns more frequently than English.

"Say, "unless little of the day (paulum diei) had remained" (supersum) Tamen. "Say, "it was guarded" (custodio).

Ne. "Elabor.

"Say, "the light being scarcely yet (vixdum) established" (certus).

"This is not definite enough for Latin, as "they" have not been specifically mentioned in the previous sentence.

"Cum singulis vestimentis will do for the whole of this conditional clause.

"There are several short sentences here. Better retain them, as you are supposed to be stating a number of historical facts which are all important. This style of using short periods also gives liveliness to the narrative and seems suited to this passage.

"Say, "it was provided not at all" =nihil cautum est. You should bring out by position the contrast between what was done to the Samnites and what to their allies. Latin is more rhetorical, more pointed, than English in its use of contrast, balance of words, phrases, etc. See page 119. §6 (e).

Sub corona vено.

XXI.

Such was the manner in which¹ they took up their positions in line of battle, and the hopes of the generals on both sides were high. Neither² side had the advantage in point of numbers³ or in the character⁴ of its troops, but there was a very great disparity⁵ in the spirit of the soldiers. The⁶ Romans, though they were fighting far away from their country, had easily been persuaded⁷ by their leaders that⁸ it was for Italy and Rome they were fighting. Therefore, feeling that their return home depended on⁹ their valour, they had resolved to come off victorious or die in the attempt.¹⁰ The other army was much less resolute. The majority were Spaniards, who preferred defeat in Spain to a compulsory march into Italy as their reward for a victory.¹¹ And so at the first encounter, almost before¹² the javelins were discharged, the wings retreated, and when the Romans bore down upon their centre with great impetuosity, the whole army fled from the field.

You do not need a relative clause here. Position will give emphasis.

'Put in a word to express the relation with the previous sentence.

'Not plural in Latin.

'Genus. 'Use an adjective.

'Insert your connecting word, as suggested in 2 above. See page 119, §5 (a) and (c).

*'As persuadeo governs the Dative you cannot put it in the Passive Voice with "Romans" as the subject. Use it impersonally or turn it into the Active. Will you put an ut clause after persuadeo or Acc. with Infin.?*

"That it was for" is simply the English way of getting emphasis. Without emphasis the clause is "that they were fighting for." The position of the Latin words will give the emphasis on "for Italy and Rome."

*'Literally "was placed on" (ponere).*

'Simplify all this.

*"Say, "who preferred (malo) to be defeated in Spain than to be dragged (traho) victorious into Italy."*

"Say, "when scarcely."
