CITY'S WATER SUPPLY IMPERILLED BY BREAK

Geyser of Water Upheaves Great Blocks of Asphalt and Interrupts Traffic for Two Hours at Bathurst and London Streets.

Bathurst-street was suddenly flooded for a mile on Saturday. A big 36-inch water main, at the corner of London and Bathurst-streets, broke at halfpast eleven o'clock in the forenoon. His opening broadside directed against the president was so vindictive that it shocked many good clitzens not especially friendly to Tatt, and it was thought advisable to announce that the manuscript had never been seen by Col. Roosevelt.

Since then Dixon has challenged the supporters of the president to submit the presidential nomination to a nation-wide primary. A presidential preference primary can only

The other day the Taft people sent out over the Associated Press a rather cheap innuendo about the Roosevelt neadquarters being established in a building owned by Frank A. Munsey. The despatch went on to say that Munsey was on intimate terms with George W. We elected Taft four years ago out of the International Harvester Company Building in Chicago. Our head-quarters occupied the sixth floor of that building, and, so far as I know, no rent was paid for the personalities are wanted in this campaign we will give them more than they expect.

Great Britain Disappointed Not Hearing From Scott First But Praise Amundsen's Feat

and planted the Norwegian colors there was confirmed yesterday in despatches sent by him to Christiania. One of these despatches was addressed to King Haakon. The contents of it was not made known, but another said: "Pole reached. fourteen-seventeenth December."

The two dates were taken to mean that Amundan had reached the point he sought Dec. 14, and remained there four days, and those who know the explorer well, especially Prof. Mohn, the famous Norwegian meteorologist, expressed the belief that Amundsen during this period had made such observations and calculations as would render impossible a controversy similar to that which arose out of the Cookperty North Pole discovery.

On learning of the success of his subject, King Haakon sent a telegram of congratulation to Amundsen on behalf of himself and the Queen, and consented to the use of his name and that of his wife on the maps of the new territory of Norway in the Antarctic.

Capt. Amundsen and the Fram are still at Hobart, Tasmanis, but the explorer has telegramphed here that he would submit his charts and all information concerning the discovery of the South Pole as soon as possible.

The Norwegian public and scientists, and even the Royal Geographical Society of Great Britain hays accepted is inclined to await further news."

plorer has telegraphed here that he would submit his charts and all information concerning the discovery of the South Pole as soon as possible.

The Norwegian public and scientists, and even the Royal Geographical Society of Great Britain have accepted inqualifiedly the statement of Amundsen that he had gained the pole, and that he was the first man to do so. Some of the local geographers declared that it was possible that both Amundsen and Scott might have been within a mile of each other at the earth's axis, and yet not know of the presence of each other. When Amundsen was asked yesterday by a local newspaper correspondent at Hobart whether Scott reached the pole, the correspondent says the explorer declined to answer the question, yes or no. Englishmen the question, yes or no. Englishmen said:

The Daily Chronicle this morning publishes the first instalment of Capt. covery of the South Pole. The interest excited by the news of this great feat was sufficient to keep thousands of persons out of bed until copies of "The oally Chronicle" could be secured early this morning. There was no spirit apparent of distrust as to the accuracy of Capt. Amundsen's claim. In the clubs men familiar with the Antarctic regions pointed to his clear, connected "Assuming as highly probable that narrative and his exact description of both reached the South Pole, the proof of the truthfulness of his claim. Amundsen's full story of his stirring achievement leaves no room for doubt that he reached the South Pole on Dec. 14. He does not, however, make any reference to Scott, and the judgment of experts here as to the value of the Norwegian's expedition is suspended until the Tnglish explorer's story can be told, and the truth can be known whe who was there first. The Central News will have a copyright of Scott's story Mayor Hopewell Receives Comit comes, and meanwhile dsen's narrative, as published in The Daily Chronicle, will be mainly in-teresting as bearing upon the marches of two explorers for the same goal. central fact. Not even an inkling of the present whereabouts of Scott and his steamer, the Terra Nova has reached London, but the Englishman's agent in New Zealand is of the opinion that he is still engaged in exploring and scientific work, and that he probably may not be heard from for several weeks.

CTTAWA, March 9.-Hon. G E. Foser, Hon. W. T. White and Hon. J. D. Reid will represent the Canadian Government in the negotiations which are to begin here on March 27, looking to a treaty of reciprocity between Canada and the British West Indies.

Particular interest in the subject is displayed in the United States, which is chagrined at Canada's rejection of reciprocity with that country. The present plan is being watched, particularby by American produce interests, as likely to interfere with trade between the States and the West Indies. It is probably fear of imperiling the com-mercial relations with the American people that has caused Jamaica to de-cline to be a party to the negotiations.

THE PRIEST AND THE HOME Orange Sentinel Shows How Ne Temere Affects Protestants

The current issue of The Sentinel, referring to the statements made by Archbishop Bruchesi and others to the effect that the Ne Temere does not affect Protestants, makes reply by citing a few instances where Protestant homes were disrupted as a direct result of the Ne Temere. One a case of a wife-deserter, whose father-in-law saved her from being thrust into the street, and secured for her the care of her child. The cause of the break-up was the influence of a Roman Catholic priest over the weak husband. Another case cited by The Sentinel is that of a well-educated young woman, in an excellent position, who left to marry the man of her choice, about three years ago. He had frequently accompanied the girl to church, but did not tell her he was a Roman Catholic, and until they stood at the altar she thought him of Protestant faith. Then, not withstanding that he said he was a Roman Catholic, the license was produced and they were joined in marriage.

Rev. C. O. Johnston was the minister performing the ceremony, and the girl recently went to him and told him her pitiful tale. Her husband, under the influence of a priest, had one day declared to her that they were not married, and that he intended to leave her. She wished to know how her name would be declared in society, if she were a wife, or a widow. Mr. Johnston assured her she was his lawful wife by the authority of His Majesty King George.

"There is thus ample proof," says The Sentinel "that the Ne Temere does concern Protestants." "Protestantism should press this matter by petition and otherwise until the end is achieved, even the the British North American Act has to be amended."

NEW ARBITRATION IDEA TO STOP LABOR WARS

Three Courts Proposed by Miss Barnum, Whose Mission is to Bring Peace.

Tall and graceful, full of force and magnetism, the power that comes from an assured social position, and the courage born of long successful fighting in the cause of the working woman, Miss Gertrude Barnum is an ideal representative of the leisure woman who is prepared to share in the struggles of the woman who must go into the world and work for bread, not only for herself, but too often for others dependent on her. She, and every woman who touches the lives of working women know the insidious temptations, the constant danger that awaits the pretty or the underpaid woman. How often even work itself seems to depend on yielding to the importunities of the foreman? The working woman, if she stands alone, is in a most defenceless position, and deserves all the sympathy and support of every woman who is shaltered in a home. Miss Baruum has been traveling in the State of Ohio, interesting the consumers in supporting shops and facmethod of arbitration in dealing with their employes. With Miss Barnum trayels a young girl, who started to work in factories at 13 years of age. Miss Emily Krial has had all the bitter experiences, and can tell of the injustices and hardships, while Miss Barnum tells of constructive measures which will prevent the repetition of hardships in future. They speak before trades unions, woman's associations, socialists' clubs, church societies, and suffrage organization, wherever they can find a body of people willing to listen, and they tell of a successful experiment in substituting co-operation for strife. A plan of arbitration, which was tried in the State of New York, and at the end of a year both employes and employers held a banquet to express their delight at a plan which meant satisfaction to both parties.

The arbitration system calls for several courts, the first one of employes, elected by employes, and recognized by the manufacturers, deals with individual grievances. In a large majority of cases the wider experience of the court is able to satisfactorily remove the personal grievances, and restore a spirit of content. Any general cause of dissatisfaction to which a majority of content. Any general cause of dissatisfaction to which a majority of content. Opening of O. S. A.

A large crowd was present at the public library building on Friday night for the opening of the fortleth exhibition of the Ontario Society of Artists. His honor the Lieutenant-governor performed the opening ceremonies, and Mr. Wyly Grier also made a very appropriate speech. Lady Gibson, Miss Eugenia Gibson, and Major Shanly accompanied his honor, Lady Gibson in a handsome jet gown, and Miss Gibson in deep green velvet. The guests, numbering several hundred, were received by Mr. and Mrs. Wyly Grier and Mr. C. W. Jeffreys, Mrs. Grier looking pretty in pale blue satin veiled with white lace ,and carrying freezias. The three sketches by Princess Patricia were greatly admired. Among those present were: Mrs. Joseph Macdougall, Mr. and Mrs. Louden, Mr. and Mrs. Dillworth, Mr. and Mrs. McGillivray Knowles, Dr. Helen MacMurchy, Miss Marjorie MacMurchy, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Without any epoch-making canvas the fortieth annual exhibition of the Ontario Society of Artists reaches a high average of excellence. After all, this popular demand, at least as voiced by the conventional reviewer, for something entirely new and revolutionary every year presses rather hardly on the votaries of the brush and pehcil. No one expects that every year not one but many wielders of the quill No one expects that every year not one but many wielders of the quill will write and print poems and dramas surpassing any previous achievement. Yet it appears to be a settled conviction that at each succeeding exhibition of painting there must be a great, out-standing, record-breaking work that will at once place the country of its origin in the forefront of the artistic World.

Without further expatiating on this curious demand, which finds other expression in the persistent call for the immediate production of a Canadian immediate production of a Canadian school of painting, it can be said with confidence that Canada has no reason of art. This is a century—speaking from its present appearance—which marks the ebb of the creative period of the Victorian era. But that is no cause for despondence or justification of a depreciatory spirit. Much profit and delight can be found in the minor poets—indeed they are often more in-timate company for the ordinary run of humanity than are the supreme ex-ponents of its heights and depths. Portraiture is strong in this exhibi-tion. E. Wyly Grier is well represented by canvases, each of which reveals his appreciation of individuality, his power of characterization, his admirable handling and richly-toned color. 57, the portrait of Hon. Senator No. 57, the portrait of Hon. senator Jaffray, presented by the staff of The Globe, is a typical presentment of a strong personality, carrying conviction in its every line. Another strong and Mackay, and No. 59, portrait of Mr. W. R. Greggs, bears the same impress. No. 60, "Study of a Lady," is lighter in texture, but equally forceful. In Mr. Grier Canada has a portrait painter who ranks high in the qualities that have made this branch of the contract of the appealing at all times. Another artist who consistenly pursues an exalted level is G. A. Reid, whose principal contribution is a large decorative canvas, "The Coming of the White Men." The group of red men who are eagerly regarding the ships from unknown lands is thoroly expressive in posture and gesture and conveys the sense of wonder, curiosity and astonishment which they could not and astonishment which they could not but impart. Mr. Reid's other exhibits reveal his artistic feeling and appre-ciative harmonies of the color. Mrs Reid's study of still life, No. 148, is charminally painted, and her garden at Eastbury Manor, with its wealth of English downers its most attractive in English flowers, is most attractive in tint and atmosphere. Her "Fireside." No. 149, is a fine interior and appealing that Mr. Roosevelt thought he would not run at one time or another instead of facing the fact that he is running and running well. Teddy himself is master politician, which Mr. Taft is certainly not. The president's recent article on tariff-making, contributed to The Outlook would have made a firstclass message to congress, but it was not a message to the people. The New York American hits it off very well when it has "Uncle Trusty" thus addressing Mr. Taft:

"I'm afraid, William, that your remarks are too dry. If you think that tariff dope of yours is a bugle call you're making a sad mistake. Theodore is handing out something new and gingery every day. You'd better look out or you'll find yourself in the slag-pile.."

The various letters written by Mr. Roosevelt during the last twelve months respecting the presidential nomination respecting the presidential nomination throw no discredit upon him. He undoubtedly told "Jim Garfield and Billi Loeb" and a good many other people that he would take no part. He was emphatic in saying that he would not do anything for Taft, but intimated that he would do nothing against him. The conviction that he himself ought to be a candidate came slowly, and as late as January, 1912, when he wrote to Mr. Frank A. Munsey, he was still undecided. Running all thru the Munsey letter, however, is Mr. Roosevelt's deep conviction that the nation has arrived at a crisis with which he must deal if the people so ordain it. He glimpses his real danger—three American presidents were assassinated in less than forty years—but is ready to go forward if called on by the people. To ward if called on by the people. To quote:

"What I am interested in, remember, is not in the least holding the office, but doing a job that is actually worth doing; this is the position to the best of my belief I have always taken and always shall take. If the people should feel that I was the instrument to be used at this time, I should accept, even altho I knew that I should be broken and cast aside in the using; for often it is true that at a given moment there is one tool, one instrument, particularly available, and then that instrument must be used even tho to use it necessarily means to break it.

"The right motto for any man is "The right motto for any man is Spend and Be Spent," and if, in order to do a job worth doing from public standpoint, ife must pay with his own life, actual life on the field of battle or political little on the field of battle or political life in clude affairs, he must not grudge the payment. In short, I am not concerned with the welfare of any man in this matter, not with Mr. Taft's welfare, nor Mr. La Follette's, and, least of all, with my own; I am concerned only with the welfare of the people of the United States."

Postmasters have been fired for Roosevelt activities and some high federal offires are being hung up as prizes for votes in the national convention. The anti-Roosevelt people say that the colonel's candidacy has created no stampede. Their only fear is the possibility of a third ticket. As already pointed out, a triangular contest might result in no candidate getting a majority of the election into the house of representatives. In electing a president the house votes by states and neither party has a majority of the state delegations in congress because state delegations in congress because four state delegations are evenly divided between the Republicans and the Democrats. Would Bryan Accept?

It might seem a great come down for Mr. Bryan, thrice a candidate for president, to play second fiddle to Roosevelt, and to abandon the Democratic organand to abandon the Democratic organization with which he has been so long and honorably associated. There is every reason to believe, however, that Mr. Bryan would prefer the triumph of his policies to his own personal glorification. After all he was a Populist, not a Democrat, in the presidential election of 1892. He would unquestionably support Roosevelt as an independent candidate in preference to Governor Harmon or Mr. Underwood as a Democratic candidate. He is entirely out of the

Wilson Leads Easily. The Democrats do not seem to be saying a great deal just now. The popular interest is so fascinated by the Roosevelt-Taft duel that little is heard about the struggle for the Democratic nomination. Mr. Wilson seems to lead easily, with Harmon his most formidstrategic party advantage. They should therefore frame their tariff schedules in such a way that Republicans can have no reasonable excuse for opposition. This is the view of Governor Foss of Massachusetts, and it carries wise counsel. The tariff question has got beyond the reach of partisan play for party advantage. The people are tred of its theories and convinced of its effects in raising the costs of living and the costs of industry. They do not want more discussion and more investigation; they want results, they want some relief, and the party which works to bring that relief in the quickest way will work best for its own advantage.

However one may disagree with his Harmon or Mr. Underwood as a Demo-policy we still must admire the quiet, cratic candidate. He is entirely out of thoughtful man who rules the house of sympathy with the mass of eastern representatives by sheer force of brains Democrats, and is treated contemp- and character. Primary Idea Grows.

The primary idea is growing in favor rapidly. The Baltimore Sun (Dem.) urges the Maryland Legislature to pass a presidential preference primary law at once and says:-

Legislators have been "hearing from home." They find their constituents want a voice in the nomination of candidates for president. Democrats and Republicans alike protest against allowing a few politicians to name the delegates and deliver the state's vote in national conventions.

Governor Goldsborough has come out squarely for presidential primaries and declares "such a bill should be passed by the legislature." He is for Taft, but would not deny Roosevelt or La Follette supporters the right to vote for their choice.

The boys keep a-kickin' my dog aroun' I don't care if he is a houn', They gotta quit kickin' my dog aroun'.

"Every member of my party as well as the Democratic party," he says, "should be given a right to express his preference," County newspapers, Democratic and Republican, are calling for presidential primaries.

-The Democrats will make a serious blunder if they resist this general demand.

Democratic legislators have nothing to lose by passing this bill; they have everything to gain. Will they grant the demand of their constituents or will they allow a few bosses to name the delegates and deliver them to some candidate who may not be the choice of Maryland?

The following are a few of the specifics for which the Professor has never been challenged.

Tape Worms, Yerba Buena or Blood Purifier, Rheumaticide for Rheumatism, and a marvellous little remedy named Toothache Cure. When in his quaint manner the Professor appears in his Indian dress a stranger would undoubtedly think he was being addressed by a pure Indian chief, but this is not done by any means for deception, as at the close of his discourse he snatches off head dress, wig, etc., and appears in propria persona revealing the fair Angio-Saxon visage and the merry bine tyes twinkling from good nature and merriment.

The Professor is a close student of human nature, is well read, and at one time delivered a stirrign lecture in Massey Hall on "Natural"

Press of Thursday, April 20, 1911:

"A picturesque feature of the market of a lew years ago was the Indian medicine man, Mulveney. For years a Saturday night crowd came down town to the market so listen to Mulveney sing and play the banjo, to watch him extract teeth free of charge, and to buy his Indian remedies. He has not been in London except occasionally for a day or so in years, but he is still in the same business, and was at the last Winter Fair in Guelph, as active and busy as ever. Mulveney always said that he had been a cowboy, and he certainly wore his cowboy costume as if he was born to it. He kept a little shop at the north end of the bazaar, that has since been torn down, and one of the attractions for the curious and the small boy was a pile of teeth that must have numbered into the of human nature, is well read, and at one time delivered a stirrign lecture in Massey Hall on "Natural and Spiritual Life."

TAPE WORM. Tape worm is bred from a parasite. This parasite is a creature male and female in one. It is a pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are only connected tegether with slime. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each joint is an individual, having a sucker of mouth. The worm grows to be much longer than the bowels where it is located; and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when jut in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon and causes its victim to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physiciams are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the howels, consumption of the howels, appendicitis and other complaints, when Tape worm is bred from a parasite his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these death-dealing monsters in the world, which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not laware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the Professor has in his possession are enough to convince us of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are: ravanous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels, also a feeling as though something was crawling up the throat. The only certainty of having one in the system is when segments or joints are seen, which come away almost any time. They are flat and from % of an inch to I inch long, which have often been mistaken for pin worms by those who do not know the difference. There are many other feelings of distress, which would take too long to enumerate. Strange to say, some people of strong constitution have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world-famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One does nearly always effects a cure. Further information free, Send stamped envelope or call at 167 Dundas St. Prof. R. L. Mulveney.

20th he took the remedy and at 6 o'clock of the same day was relieved of thirteen tapeworms. This is the great thirteen tapeworms that the Professor has ever had brought to him in all his long experience, the largest number taken from one person at one time, previous to this being seven.

Successful Operation on Albert Roberts, Whose Burns Would Not Heal-Seven Have Donated Skin and More is Needed.

Yesterday The World unearthed indubitable evidence of graft in the city. The conditions were unusual in the extreme for this graft is what might be termed a benevolent skin game. The circumstances were these: Albert Roberts, an engineer living at 145 Duchess-street, was severely burned 22 weeks ngo. The flues of the boiler which he tended, burst and he was lurned nearly to the knees on both legs. These burns refused to heal. The skin would not cover the wounds and Mr. Roberts, not being able to grow skin of his own, was sorely in need of this commodity

A World man, being thoroly covered with skin, heard of Mr. Roberts' plight and decided to share up with the needy one. Accompanied by a doctor and a young lawyer, Mr. Gordon Balfour, with offices in the Continental Life Building, also covered with skin, The World man went to Mr. Roberts' little home. The dector, who having regard to the professional prejudice against advertising does not desire his name to be blazoned abroad, made ready his subjects. With a common or garden razor, he shaved, chipped, cut, separated or removed four chunks, pieces, petches or portions of skin from The World man and some chunks, hunks or parcels from the lawyer. The skin was taken from the arms of the donors and pressed upon the unhealed parts of the legs of the patient.

This is not all the skin that this man will need. The World is willing to supply him with more skin, but his doctor is anxious to obtain some from others as well. Already seven people have donated a portion of their hides toward the healing of Mr. Roberts' legs. The first to give was a woman who contributed a considerable portion of the covering of her hip..
When this was taken a local enesthetic was administered. Subsequently the surgeon discovered that skin so obtained does not graft as well as when taken without the anesthetic, since which time the subjects have given up their epidermis without the comfort or consolation of any pain killer. The loss of skin however does not entail and the doctor hopes that others may be moved to offer portions of their

There is humor everywhere and the mie side of even so grave a matter as this was made apparent when it ecame necessary to put Mr. Roberts of the grafting process. It took considerable chloroform to put the old man to sleep and the fumes filled the little room. Among the occupants was a mighty, talkative parrot with a red lead and green body. This bird was conced full of conversation and high spirits. Nevertheless the chloroform lay in a dead swoon, sleep or coma-from the effects of the fumes. There is also one other humorous feature. Upon The World man's arm from which the skin was taken there had for years appeared an undecorative decoration in the shape of a tattoo mark Tlaced there in the days of his youth and innecence in emulation of a seafaring ancestor. This will now, if the graft works, decorate the right shin of

CHINESE BUSINESS RULES.

Howard Elliott, president of the Northern Pacific, recently ran across the following Chinese busi-ness rules:

"Those who deal with merchants unfairly are to be beheaded." "Those who interrupt commerce are to be beheaded." "Those who attempt to close the markets are to be beheaded."

"Those who maintain the prosper-ity of commerce are to be awarded." Mr. Elliott made the following comments: "The Chinese seem to recognize that injustice, interruption of business and control of markets are undesirable things and that the expansion and growth of commerce is a good thing. They suggest pretty drastic remedies, which can hardly be followed out in the United States, and they suggest rewarding those who expand coinmerce, while here the tendency is to condemn them."

In that year there were added for the first time in recent fully one-third in raw cotton exports. Provisions dikewise are contributing much more largely to oversea freight in Prosperity in South America, Australia and trans-equatorial districts generally, including South Africa, will call for larger lumber tonnage from the United States and Canada. The indications are that the volume of freight for the next half-year, as shown by preliminary export returns, will be adequate to keep available tonnage busy even at the advanced rates.

THE STEEL STATEMENT.

NEW YORK, March 9 .- The Steel Corporation's unfilled orders as of Feb. January, 1911, to nearly 66,000,000 in 29 were 5,454,200 tons, against 5,379,721 January, 1912, goes with an increase of on Jan. 31, an increase of 74,749 tons.

ings with scarcely any recession in the big stocks. Steel and Union acted extremely well. Reading showed some nervousness, because of next week's negotiations between miners and operators, and perhaps because of failure to reach an understanding in England. German miners are expected to go out on Monday, and altogether we will have a highly interesting week. Against these labor troubles we may offset the quiet, but steady improvement in trade here. Steel and copper show no signs of weakening. The buying of copper shares to-day was very aggressive at times. At this level we think a trading position will pay best. Walt for weak spots before buying. The increase in unfilled steel orders was about what was predicted.

Stocks declined on the disappointing American statistics. American securities opened steady and then declined on realizing. The closing was easy with prices ranging from unchanged to one-half lower than yesterday's New York closing.

Toronto is the fastest growing city in Canada, only surpassed by three cities on the continent, namely New York, Chicago and Philadelphia. It takes a long time for some people to wake up to the fact that they are living in a city rapidly developing into one of the largest in America. Why invest your money in outside towns when at your very door there are opportunities presenting themselves at every turn? The vacant property we are offering today will be solid streets of houses within a very short time. To take care of the expected influx of people this year, it is estimated 10,000 houses will be required, and already there is a scarcity. The policy of building civic car lines is the most forward step the City Council has taken in years. Right in the heart of Toronto, one hundred acres of beautiful wooded land has remained untouched for years on account of the lack of transportation facilities. PARIS, March 8.—A well-known French boxer, named Raphael Belli, died to-day from the effects of sevuteral blows on the jaw received by him last night during a contest with an English boxer named Evernden.

There is just a chance that Vanvouver will see Eastern hockey played there this winter. The Ottawas have been in communication with the Patricks with a view to take the team out west for exhibition games, and, if the terms can be arranged, the locals will leave for the Coast after they have returned from their New York trip, some time at the end of March. The Ottawas want a guarantee of $7,000 to take the jaunt and they expect to have definite word from the B. C.

ON BRUNSWICK ALLEYS.

The T. Kinnear & Co., wholesale grocers, bowlers rolled a match game on the Brunswick Club alleys Friday night. Which resulted in C. Claridge's team defeating S. Judge's team by 39 pins on the total of three games.

The Central League, in pulling off a double-header last night on the Brunswick Club alleys, completed the last of their postponed games, which means that every game has been rolled. By the Fishing Club taking all three from Brunswick and the Night Hawks the same from Royal Greus. D Co., Fishing Club are winners of the second series and Night Hawks the first. This means a roll-off for the cup, which will take place this coming week. By putting in a 226 count in the first game D. Croft of Fishing Club slipped in ahead of F. Leslie of the Hawks for high average of the league. Croft was the best performer of the night, with 531. Martin was next and high on the Brunswick, with 574. N. Foster was the best performer for the Hawks with 542, and J. Whitbread led the Royal Grens. with 528. Following are the scores:

Yankee Grappel Russian Match Sees Changes as Ordered by Police.

CHICAGO, March 9.—All forms of toe-holds will be barred in a handicap wrestling match between Frank Gotch, champion of the world, and Ivan Romanoff of Russia, at the Chicago Athletic Association to-night. This action is in accordance with a recent statement of Chief of Police McWeany to the effect that the toe-hold should not be allowed in any wrestling match in Chicago.

Martin Delaney, physical director country the association, said: "The punishment which can be inflicted by the toe-hold is serious and it is generally conceded by those in a position to know, the game will be purged of its most offensive feature when authorities bar it from the mat."

Good Rolling in All Leagues Kent's Hang Up New Alley Record

First Series of Fivepin League Bowling Records of the Headpin.

There were sensations galore on the Toronto Bowling Club alleys during the past week, the Five Pin League winding up their first series in a blaze of glory with the Stanleys returned the winners by a nose finish over the Senators, while in the ten pin leagues new records were hung up that will take some beating to the end of the season. Much reversal of finishes. Much reversal of form was also noted amongst, the teams least expected of with the second division holders in many instances better in their position.

In the Business Men's League The News, who were tied with Eaton's a week ago, assumed the lead by winning all their three games with A. T. Reid & Co., while the Big Store crew will now have to be content in second place thru dropping two out of three games to Bob McKinney's St. Lawrence, Limsteds, who were in great form and rolled two of the biggest games of the season. It remained for Kent's Jewelry, Limited, however, to climax the week's rolling from a big scoring point of view, they putting up the record for total pins with a 2812 count, while their 998 count in the last game against their opponents. The Telegram, tied the latter for high games for the season. Another surprise in this league was the winning of three games in a row by "Owl" Shoes from the strong Jas. Langmuir Manufacturing Co. outfit and the "Owls," now in fourth place, are only one game down on Kents. ry, Limited, however, to climax the

In the Printers' League Toronto Typesetting again jumped to the front, having defeated Carswell Printing Co. in all three games, while The Star drop into second place thru losing the odd game to Eaton's Printers, but with Acton Publishing Co. yet to roll in this series and Eaton's and Saturday Night coming strong, it will be difficult as yet to get a line on the prospective winner of this the third and final series.
The feature of the week in this league was the two big games put up by Toronto Typesetting who counted 335 and onto Typesetting who counted 250 and 955, while one of their number, Foster, annexed high game for the season

In the Public Utility League Hydro-Electric No. 2 are still in the lead but City Engineers are steadily creening up and judging by the form alsolaved up and judging by the form displayed by them during the past week, will make the Hydros hustle to hang on to the top rung. Before another, two weeks rolls around Hydros No. 1, Post Office No. 1 and Hydros No. 3 are also coming strong, being only a few games down on Engineers, and with the unexpected liable to happen to the top notchers, one of the micest finishes of all leagues will then be in store for the Public Willity.

In the T. B. C. Five-Pin League the first series was finished Friday night with The finished Friday night Stanleys returned the w Millionaires losing out in all three games to Tea-Peas in the last scheduled event, some idea of the close race in this league can be gleaned from the standing which shows only a cregame difference between the first seven teams, while the Nesphytes, who were apparently outclassed and finished a bad last, were also outlucked in many games, but under new management, forgames, but under new management for the second series which starts Tuesday night, promise to be very much in the running to the end of the season.

It's now whispered that Manager "Phil" Wakefield will banquet his Stanleys for winning the first series in Toronto's first five-pin league. And there is not the least doubt but the boys would streetly appreciate it, "Remarked" BM Bathgate.

It was reported last week that "George" Martin set a 290 count on the Asylum alleys, but didn't mention with what kind of implement. Stanley Clifford Stone of the Nec-phytes is still wondering why we don't blame him for sailing. Three more guesses "Stoney" before they pull in the "sang plank."

The Athenaeum A League is getting well under way in the third and last series and by the way Joe West's College crew are traveling they intend to make it interesting for Jick Howard's crack Simcoes. The Collegians have a clean bill of health so far, having won nine straight games. The Sincoes have yet to lose a game, however. They have only played one match, having postponed two of their matches. The Athenaeums don't seem to be able to keep in the running at all this season, falling down carly in every series. Last week they dropped two to the reorganized Aberdeens. All the teams have been strengthened up for the final dash and the leaders are lable to get a joit from any of the last division teams.

The Athenateum Individual League The Athenateum Individual League will finish up their season this week when the few postponed games will be cleaned off the slate. This league has been the biggest kind of a success gight from the start. The players all took a keen interest in the matches and with practically all the high-class sowiers in the city taking part many fine exhibitions of how the game should be played have been given. In the A section Ed. Sutherland has first place practically cinched atthe Frank Johnston has a slight chance if he can win all his gremaining games. Bill Johnston has a slight chance if he can win all his gremaining games. Bill Karrys is applier, who could possibly finish first, altho is first make any difference to speatts where he winds up as he has the twing five dollar prize for Figh-average man copped out and that eliminates him from the standing altogether. In the Execution Alex, Johnston and Bill Stringer will fight it out for first and second with the odds in favan of Jahnston, as he wan five more games than Stringer. They have to anecteach other, yet, and providing Stringer can get away with Glen Armstrong, he may be take to beat Johston out. There will be one bundred deliars split up in prize money and will dollars split up in prize money and wi he handed out in this of lef: diigh average prize, twenty-five dollars; first prize, twenty-five, second prize, twenty; third, fiftsen; fourth, ten; fifth, five.

The first man in each section will roll off for first and second, the two finishing second will roll off for the fidend fourt, and the two finishing third will roll off for the fifth and last rize. The roll off will take place on Thursday, 21st, and will be decided by each man rolling fen games, five on each pair of alleys that the games were scheduled on. Scheduled on.

Jess Burkett Is Only Man Who Ever Batted .400 Two Years Running-Ty and Jackson May Do Likewise This Sea-

Only two ball players in the game carry the chance this season of tying Jess Burkett's record which stands as one of the greatest ever compiled. The record in question embraces the achievement of batting above .400 two seasons in succession. In 1895 Burkett, then with Cleveland, batted .433. The "crab "came back in 1896 with.410. Cobb last season hit .420 and Jackson .408. To tie Burkett's mark this pair must plke along with another .400 season in a day when only 10 per cent. of the tribe can attain .300. Ross Barnes batted .404 in 1872 and .453 the succeeding year; but Barnes failed to work in as many as seventy games either season ing year; but Barnes failed to work in as many as seventy games either season. Burkett figured in 132 games in 95 and 133 in '96, when he continued his wonderful streak.

For a run of 100 games or more Hugh Duffy's '94 record of .438 still stnads. Keeler comes next, with .432 in '97, and Burkett is third, with .423 in '95. Cobb is the first ball player in either circuit to hit above .400 since Nap Lajole totaled .422 in 1901 as a member of the slashing Philadelphia corps. If Cobb continues his gradual ascent he'll peel the skin off the ball in 1912. Tyrus Raymond batted .324 in 1908, .377 in 1909, .385 in 1910 and .420 in 1911.

How Team "Bonehead" Got Into Baseball

Eddle Ashenback, the well known minor league manager, who died recently, was the inventor of the expression "bonehead," which, with "concrete dome," "cement skull," solid lvory," has become a byword in baseball. When Ashenback was managing the Shreveport team of the Southern League several years ago, he had a good catcher, who could also hit some, but catcher, who could also hit some, but he had the very serious weakness of not being able to gauge a foul fly, no matter how easy it was. One day a batter raised a high foul directly over the plate, and the catcher, directly over the plate, and the catcher, misjudging it, was hit squarely on top of the head by the lescentia; spirar, which knocked off his mask and bounded away about thirty feet. That night Ashenback finished his supper early and was passing out of the dining-room when he happened to walk behind this catcher, who was devouring his evening meal with gusto and enthusiasm. Stopping at the table, Ed passed his hands over the backstop's head, feeling for the bump which he thought would surely be there on acthought would surely be there on acafternoon. But there was no cump to be felt. "No wonder," said Ash. "How could there be a bump? Your head is Raymond's Chance Raymond probably started with more than any young pitcher in all history. We saw him work his debut battle in the Southern league eight years ago.

Pitching for Atlanta, he was slated to step in that afternoon against the world's champion Boston team, led by Jimmy Collins. Mathewson, Walsh nor Johnson as they are to-day could have looked as impressive. The Bugs was lig and strong, with a flawless pitching motion that carried no touch of waste effort. MACK'S PLAYERS ASKED A LOT OF QUESTIONS

Harry Davis attributes much of the success of the Athletics to the fact that the young members of the team are great on asking questions, "I be-live," says Davis. "that Eddie Collins. Jack Barry, Frank Baker, and Jack McInnis, the Athletic infield asked more questions than any other four players in baseball. There was hardly ever a play they did not ask questions about. When and Why I Will Play Again

Much adoo has been made because I have decided to quite playing baseball. It has been told me that last season was one of my best seasons; that I fielded and batted "like a two-year-old." It has been said that I have retired because I wanted to quit "while I was

That isn't the case. While it is true that I was fortunate last season, the fact remains that my legs bothered me more than I care to admit; there wasn't a game in which I played that I didn't declare would be my last. I have been playing ball long enough; the time has come for me to quit—and I mean what I say when I say I won't

However, if the pennant should happen to be in sight and oue outfield was "shot to pieces," I would jump in and help out. Say, for instance, that my services were needed during the last couple of weeks; say the Pirates had a chance for the flag; say an outfielder or two was laid up or going bad—then I would be forced to play. And let me say that I will always be in condition to inject myself

During my career as manager, I have laid many old-timers on the shelf. I have gone to them and told them plainly that they had outlived their usefulness as members of the Pittsburg team. Last season I was two persons-I was Fred Clarke, the manager, and Fred Clarke, the player. Hence, when Fred Clarke, the manager decided that Fred Clarke, the player, had better quit he told him so. That's all there is to it .- Pittsburg Dispatch, Hummel and Nap Rucker are the Only Two of Old Guard of Ebbett's Squad-Erwin Mainstay Behind the Bat.

Around New York, and thruout the east generally, of late years Brooklyn's aschall club has always been regarded more or less in the light of a great jest. Yet a few moments of reflection will unearth the truth—that no club owner has worked harder to build up a capable baseball machine than has Charles H. Ebbets, the talkative owner of the Dodgers. It may be interesting, but nevertheless true, that but two men method the Superbas this spring were members of the club two seasons back. John Hummel and Nap Rucker are the veterans of the Dodgers, Both of them have served for Brooklyn for some considerable time longer than any of their companions. Yet reither has been in the service long around to his possibilities.

Rucker, in fact, is a colt, with the best part of his career before him. He has met with wonderful success as a pitcher with a club that always floated in the ruck during a campaign. With no encouragement toward his best effosts, he has every year stood near the top among National League pitchers. Many baseball sharps declare that he is the greatest southpaw in the game—not even excluding "Rube" Marquard. Certainly he is one of the best pitchers the game has Hummel is a cracking good fielder, fine hitter and an average baserunner. Last season he played second base. He is to be switched to the outfield the coming season if Jerry Downs delivers the goods at the keystone.

Charles H. Ebbets was very fortunate in his purchase and drafts for the playing season of 1910. He grabbed off Jake Daubert, the best first sacker in the circuit; Cy Barger, a very clever and effective pitcher; Catcher Erwin, his mainstay behind the bat now that Bill Bergen is on the decline; Knewer, most promising backstop. For 1911 the good luck clung to Ebbets. His net raked in eight stars of the first constella-tion. Among the lot were three toss ers, Burk, Ragan and Schardt: Outers, Burk, Ragan and Schardt: Out-fielders Clouson, Davidson and "Zack" Wheat, and Infielders Tooley and Stark. All of these youngsters felivered the goods during the past campaign. For 1912 Ebbets has a great collec-tion of new talent. Much of it has yet Pittsburg receiver, whose home i London, Ont .- Mooney claims he is

Ford Has Frank Baker's Goat in Proper Style

Of all the pitchers he has faced, Frank Baker of the Athletics says Russell Ford of the Highlanders is the hardest for him to hit. "I'm not afraid of many of them," said the manufacturer of home runs, "but Ford sure has my number."

Baker also, puts up a defense against the charge that he does not know how to play the third corner.

"I always try to make a base runner go on the outside," says Baker, "and naturally I would do as much blocking as possible. I don't see that I am any more awkward than any other man at playing third."
Baker's job is probably safe, just the same, for another year at least.

Trouble Detected Last Year.
A discordant note in the lullaby was detected last year when it became apparent that the legislation about the use of hopples on pacers was going to make trouble for a good many half-mile tracks. The anti-hopple rule pro-vided for the gradual abolition of "the straps," beginning with colt performers, the rule being so worded that by 1915 there would be no hoppled pacers competing on the tracks of either association.

The first important move was made when a number of half mile track managers, who adopted the fitle "The Ohio Fair Boys" for their organization, began an agitation for the retention of the hoppies. Not being able to accomplish anything with the American Association, they turned their attention to the National, and got all they wanted in the way of concessions. At plan a four-year-old pacer wearing hoppies is eligible to compete against any field of free legged pacers.

Half of Members Present.

The American Association thus far has stuck to its colors, but the vote in the congress held here last Tuesday showed that only about half the total membership of 1911 was represented. A large number of the unrepresented. A large number of the unrepresented tracks had served notice that unless the hoppie rule was modified to suit their ideas they would not renew their membership, and the chances are they will belong to the National Association this year.

HEN Alice made her famous expedition into Looking Glass Land, she entered no more tonsy turvy domain than is that region technically known as "Backstage." In this curious province anything pretty much of an upside down nature may and does happen. There you may find the comedian bathed in tears or the villain wreathed in smiles of pure good nature. The man who, when the curtain is up, is to be seen as a quiet cleric may be cussin the father of the girl he loves with a wild and beautiful abandon worthy of the blackest hearted burglar who ever stole across the floor to the shivers of shaky muste.

A few weeks ago a minstrel act and a dramatization of Dickens' "Christmas Carol" foregathered on the same bill at Shea's. The minstrel man "went on" just ahead of the Dickens sketch. There was the jigilety jig of a step dance from the orchestra while the minstrels pattered away right merrily. I stood in the wings and heard a shuffling behind me and to the left. I looked at the minstrels for storm clouds, for interruptions from benind are not popular with those who happen to be doing their little stunt. Apparently the wooden shoes of the dancers insured themselves and the audience from any knowledge of the interruption. I looked back to see what it might be and, honest injun, this is what I saw: Marley's Ghost was doing a "turkey trot." That's what he was at sure enough. There he was with his ghastly face bent, into what was a terrible smile, with his chain kilted over his arm and stepping eway like old Fezziwig in the Dickens tale.

The dancers out front stopped and the ghost's patter "backstage" also ceased and he conversed cheerfully with Tiny Tim who by all the rights and proprieties connected with so gentle a little soul should have been scared stiff at the mere mention of so grisly an acquaintance as a ghost. I interrupted the conversation and Tiny Tim who really was a very pleasant little lady strolled away.

Having seen how very material and unghostly a ghost could be I determined to dissipate this horror for all time

"Will you tell me what you had for dinner?" I asked.

The ghost grinned. He saw the joke right off the bat which is more than you might have been led to expect from him after hearing him throw the cold shivers into poor old Scrooge for fifteen minutes the night previous when he knew all the time that Scrooge was going to relent and loosen up something wonderful and when he knew, for that matter that he wasn't a miser at all but was really a very genial sort of actor man.

Anyway Marley's ghost , ned as much like a Cheshire cat as dismal make-up would let him and started in to tell what he had eaten for luncheon . It turned out that on that particular day his ghostly appetite had moved him to consume some soup, which he said he ate quietly enough, some fish, none of the bones of which had stuck in his throat and lastly, and here his grin became wider than ever, he had some rolly polly puddling. Some meal for a ghost, eh, what?

One thing was pretty true of Marley's ghost, the same "back-stage" as you saw him from the cudience. He was heartly sick of that chain for he has carried it about for years and all over a couple of continents and says that when you have held it up for fifteen minutes abusing poor old Scrooge all the while, you are just about ready to drop.

It is when Mr. Shakspere comes to town in the hands of his lesser apponents that the greatest grotesqueries and anachronisms occur. It is not with precedent that you may expect to find Richard III shooting crap with a stagehand between acts if it is an easy "set" while Juliet or Queen Elizabeth casually offers to "shoot two bits" as she rustles by in all her splendor.

Eva Tanguay, the greatest and craziest of all commediennes, has come off with the last words of "I don't Care" floating out from smiling lips only to burst into a flood of tears because someone had spoken above a whisper "backstage." If she really didn't care, all I have to say is that she was making a terrible fuss about it and I hope I am not around when she bumps into something unpleasant about which she really does give the smallest kind of a tinker's

When Fritzi Scheff was at the Royal Alexandra, Fritzi had some hunches about just what she wanted in the way of a dressing room. Fritzi carried about a bunch of yellow curtains for the inside of her dressing rooms and had an electric transparency of her own name to go over her dressing room door. Fritzi was long on lights anyway. Her contract called for the lights to be burning in all the dressing rooms from 8 a.m., till midnight.

When you have kicked around "backstage" for a while you come to know that the manufacture of playhouse laughter and playhouse laughter are both pretty serious business and that the veriest buffconery on the boards is carefully planned behind. Words are weighed and exchanged. Intonations are practised and varied until nonsense is talked in just the most effective way in the world.

They are a queer bunch any way you take them back in that world of unreality that is bounded on the front by the footlights and the curtain and at the rear by the stage door and a line of waiting Johnnies. They are glad about strange things and sad about even stranger ones. And still they are a very human, a very alive and lively outfit. They have been all over the country and have had a look at a lot of things but have not looked very long nor most of them very deep. They treat life very often just as they treat a town where they stay for just a week and often less than that. To them this world is something like a one night stand where they might as well get all the fun there is and blow along to Lord knows where.

Of course the great big serious folk of the stage are different. They have, so to say, a whole forty weeks interest in this terrestrial sphere; they have settled down to a season on Broadway in life and can really take up housekeeping or any other fad, hobby or avocation which may seem to them the most desirable.

But big and little, serious or frivolous they are intensely interesting to the outsider and their manners and conersation are well nigh as exotic as they appear in the shine

That Little North-West Corner.

In his "English Traits" published in 1856, Ralph Waldo Emerson found a part explanation of the then abounding vitality of the English people in the fact that the climate permitted of outdoor work every day in the year. A similar observation has provided the text for a remarkable article by P. H. W. Ross, which appeared in the February number of The Fortnightly Review. He finds in this an explanation of the circumstance, true enough when one considers it, that tucked away in the northwest of Europe are a group of countries that provide "all, certainly nearly all, that is 'worth while' on the larger of the earth's two great land-masses." That group includes the British Isles, France and Germany, Holland, Belgium, Denmark, Norway, Sweden and the Grand Duchy of Finland. Of these all except France and Finland are Teutonic or Scandinavian nations, the stocks conspicuous for their colonizing instinct. Certainly since the emergence of Europe from the darkness of the middle ages from these countries, including Celtic France has come all "that is 'worth while' to a Caucasian in the world of finance, of commerce, of 'affairs,' nearly all that is worth while in literature and art and quite one-half of the world of poetry and music." From them-particularly the British Isles-have sprung the science of government, the development of an orderly democracy and the capacity for dominion over less advanced races. As Mr. Ross says, there must be a reason for all this. It has not been due to chance or London, Paris and Berlin might have been in the Levant or elsewhere. But they are not.

That reason he finds in this, that the climatic and other influences in the northwest corner of Europe "are perfect for the development of the perfected human plant in so far as perfection is sought and found in that which we now call 'The Flower of Civilization." These peoples are powerful because they have more nearly mastered the art of self-control. This Mr. Ross holds is not due to language or to the nature of their forms of government, "but because cosmic influences have moulded the tendencies and dispositions of their lives and have guided their bent. As first of these influences he places the Gulf Stream and the other he states as the strategic position of the northwestern corner of the eastern hemisphere in relation to commerce with the other half of the world, to wit, the western hemisphere. At this point he brings in the United States definition of a "white man's country"-one where a Caucasian can work out of doors 365 days in the year. Whenever excessive cold compels practical hibernation in winter or excessive heat compels the employment of colored labor, down goes the standard of efficiency. Only where the white man can work out of doors every day will you find his maximum efficiency. This is the case with Paris but not with Madrid. "You can't," he proceeds "have magnolias, orange blossoms and a Chicago hustler all on the same tree-not until the hustler's dead, anyhow. People in semi-tropical zones don't 'do things,' they don't 'get there' to the extent that the north western people do.'

Having established his point regarding Northwestern Europe Mr. Ross holds that there is only one other region in the world that in its climatic and strategic conditions is its exact replica. Needless to say he finds it in Northwest America where the Japan current performs for its shores the same office that the Gulf Stream does for Northwestern Europe. Canada and the United States own the are turned toward two great systems of dealing wonderful new northwest of maximum possible efficiency. Mr. Ross says it is the only unfilled region in which humanity will develop into the same kind of mental, physical, commercial and governing creature that two thousand years of gradual evolution has produced in Northwestern Europe but with certain differences due to the far grander scenery of Northwest America. Men, he thinks, will become nobler. The sense of cramp and the meanness and disgusting selfishness ensuing therefrom so noticeable in Europe are, he affirms. at present quite absent in Northwestern America. Optimism concerning the future, in the opinion of Mr. Ross prevails in British Columbia, and in the States of Oregon and Washington. So with their cities-they are all of the same mind. He notes that Oregon is about the same size as France, Washington about the same as England, while British Columbia is approximately equal to Germany and into Alaska could be packed Holland, Belgium, Denmark, Norway, Sweden and part of the Grand Duchy of Finland. It is well sometimes to be reminded how the fractions of the Dominion this. and the Republic compare with the old historic nations of Europe that have bulked so largely in the annals of the centuries.

With the opening of the Panama Canal a new era will open up for the Northern Pacific States of America. Their ocean cities will be the chief gainers and their expansion will be proportionately great. Fortunately for itself British Columbia has thrown itself heartedly into the current of modern progress. Vancouver and many other cities in the Western Provinces of the Dominion have adopted a reformed taxation system which encourages legitimate enterprize and discourages the purely speculative holding of land. Its effect has already become evident in Vancouver, where the value of building permits for last year makes it an easy first in proportion to its population and aggregate assessment. Conservation of its vast natural resources and a policy of development that will prevent the abuses and evils from which the United States is suffering and which to a minor extent affect Eastern Canada, must easily give Canada's Pacific Province a commanding position in the northwestern region of America. -Thus will the foundation be laid for the evolution of that higher type of "mental, physical, commercial and governing creature" which Mr. Ross believes has been rendered possible by the grander environment. Nor is it unjustified to anticipate a time when that northwestern corner of America will take up the torch of science, literature and art and carry to still higher heights the long the empire, except the United Kingdom has detradition of the northwest corner of Europe, which has given so clared itself in favor of the principle, and Canada much that is worth while to the treasury of the world.

Dr. Hastings' Position

It's a hard thing to say how far the public health officer should go in his protection and promotion of the health of the community. Neither ne nor his omiciais must make themselves obnoxious, or even appear arbitrary, important as is the public duty they are called upon to perform. Individual liberty is something that must be ability for the mastery of intricate fiscal and trade respected as far as possible and domestic liberty to the utmost.

The one cardinal principle on which the health officer must work is the good of the community. People will often resent what they regard as interference. Patience and persuasion are then the only two qualities that can be brought to bear. So far Dr. Hastings has been praiseworthily energetic in his work, but he has a hard task before him and suavity in his officials is the one thing that will carry his undertaking to the nearest goal of success. On the whole the best reports have been heard, but there are grumblers. The hardest man to get to wash his face is the man who doesn't

In other words the industrious hard-working and long-suffering can be induced to clean up; the lazy, indifferent and neglectful may be spurred temporarily into action, but they lapse, and therein lies the medical health officer's greatest difficulty.

Not only the poor but the unhealthy and lazy we always have

NOTHING DOING.

Two Reforms In View.

Enough has been shown by the trend of the questions of the commissioners and their remarks in passing at the two public sittings of the commission of inquiry into conditions at the Mimico Industrial School to show that the institution as already conducted will not be continued. The commissioners have said and Supt. Ferrier himself has declared that the manacles must go.

But the promise of the cammission is wider and better than that. It has been abundantly shown that plans of the widest reconstruction are being considered and evolved. The public opinion brought to the surface by the publication of the facts shows that the people when they know ct them will not tolerate cruel or antiquated methods of dealing with froward children.

By his questions at the last sitting and his remarks, Dr. Bruce Smith showed that his eyes with such boys. One or these is the apprenticing system now in use in the State of Massachusetts where boys are taken from the environments which have warped their young minds and placed in healthy and happy homes to be constantly and consistently visited by a corps of trained probation officers.

The other plan is the vast widening of the industrial side of the school so that boys may be taught trades which will be of real worth to them instead of merely serving to keep their hands and minds from mischief while in the school. Questions to many boys who had passed thru the Mimico school showed that none of them is today following a trade learned at the school. Ine new plan contemplates a wider usefulness than Another thing which las been shown is that there are many moral and mentally deficient children in the Mimico institution as well as the cases outside for which no place with room to receive them is now provided. Whatever plan is adopted it is clearly shown that the commission will recommend that these be separated from the normal children.

Should the Massachusetts system be embraced for the normal children, the Mimico buildings will still be available for these others who must always be confined and under supervision.

Mr. Foster's Appointment.

Canada will be well and ably represented by Hon. Geo. E. Foster, upon the Royal Commission appointed to investigate and extend trade within the empire. The matter of trade preferences within the empire is not a political question in any of the self-governing colonies. Every state within

The Royal Commission will in any event sit for some years and it may well become a perman-a half brick thru the front window of the home of such a harmless old gentleman as Premier Asquith, or smiting the fair face of Mr. Winston Churchill with the butt of a riding whip, but those who deplore such methods might look around and suggest some other means of forcing a right that is clared itself in favor of the principle, and Canada has given earnest of her good intention by extending an unrequitted preference to the Mother country. True the Liberals by their recent reciprocity agreement dealt a blow at the principle, but their disastrous defeat at the polls last September will prevent their future Lostility.

It may be true that the Dominion Government of forty years ago contemplated the creation and maintenance of separate schools in the northwest. At that time it was supposed that the northwest would remain and increasingly become more for canada who has shown a marked taste and ability for the mastery of intricate fiscal and trade of Canada who has sent few immigrants to the western of the principle, and Canada who has shown a marked taste and ability for the mastery of intricate fiscal and trade of Canada who has sent few immigrants to the western of the principle, and the most.

and better music, than I ever did in my life before, and it has been interesting to me to realize how the taste for good music grows and can be cultivated, so that what was at first tedious and unattractive comes to possess the charm of a deep saying that is at in the organ loft and in this way became acquainted with the inner mysteries of the sanctuary at an early age time that has become clear. But there is a deeper charm in the music than in the saying or the problem for in music the senses and the mind are wedded together, and the soul takes part in the union. Music is the most occult of the arts, consequently it violin and the cornet. Of course occult of the arts, consequently it makes the profoundest appeal, and he who is least susceptible to musical inmakes the profoundest appeal, and he who is least susceptible to musical influences is farthest from a true appreciation of the divine harmony. Exceptions may be noted like Dean Stanley to whom music was merely a noise, but to be tone-deaf is much the same as to be color-blind. Pythagoras esteemed the Deity (the Logos) to be the centre of Unity and "Source of Harmony," and he required those who desired to study with him to have taken a preliminary courso in arithmetic, astronomy, geometry and music, which he held to be the four divisions of mathematics. The world, according to the ancient teachers, was called forthout of chaos by sound or harmony, and constructed according to the principles of musical proportion. Kepler and constructed according to the principles of musical proportion. Kepler propounded his laws governing the planetary relations and confirmed all that Pythagoras had taught. Kepler's ideas have not yet all been assimilated by men of science. If they had been we should not now have the anomaly of so-called men of science attributing to religion a phallic origin. Pythagoras takes his musical scale from the planetary distances, and the whole septenary tradition is intimately associated with this basic fact.

That woman suffrage is near in England is due to the leadership of women like Mrs. Pankhurst. That fearless champion has told us how difficult it was to get even a hearing from the government and that the militant tactics employed today were decided upon as a last resort.

No great reform was ever accomplished without agitation. Some doubt the wisdom of hurling a half brick thru the front window of the home of gest some other means of forcing a right that is acknowledged by a large proportion of the people to be the due of women. If the women of England ceased to employ militant methods the members of the government would cease to think about extending the franchise.

Handled Well.

Handled Well.

If the Borden Government does as well with every other problem as it has done with the Manitoba Boundary question there will be little room for complaint. The fact is no one does seriously complain of the Manitoba settlement. The whole territory of Keewatin does not contain enough children to fill one schoolhouse, and to attempt to impose an educational system upon the Province of Manitoba against her will or as the price for the territory to which she is justly entitled would suffer most.

I have heard more music this winter, harp and plane I heard a good deal of violin and the cornet. Of course there was the Moravian village band the head of the procession up the green hedged lane to the burying-ground where the brethren lie on one side of the grave-yard and the sisters on the other. I have never been at any fun-eral so impressive as the simple cere-monies of the Moravian Church, with the sonorous but mellow brass band playing the solemn hymns.

As a boy I sang contraits. I sang in a quartet in public when about twelve and shall never forget the sen-sation of certainty and hope that the Window-Smashing In London.

Window-smashing tactics of the suffragettes have again brought the propriety of giving votes to women into the foreground of discussion. The destruction of property of shopkeepers in the West fand of London looks to be a long way removed from the franchise issue, but the employment of such spectacular methods as were witnessed in London recently has done one thing, and that is proved that the women are in earnest. They are going to have the vote, that is sure.

And why not? Ask anyone on the street to combat seriously the arguments for woman suffrage, and in nine cases out of ten he will say: "Oh, the women should have the right to vote, but—" and he will tell you that the time is not yet, and anyway, if they did have the right they would not exercise it.

"With trumpets also and shawms" was no idle word with them. How many people knew what a shawm is? I used to think it was a sort of ram's thorn, but a shawm is really a reed instrument of the class from which our close and bassoon and to some extent the clarionet have been developed. Our German used to come up in the organ loft with his violin, his cornet and his clarionet, and play on one or another as his fancy might take him in obligatos to the hymns or canticles. Fasting confers benefits in general and in specific cases. When persons are in that condition for which you have a naive word of description, "logy," which means heavy and listless, fasting serves an excellent purpose. Usually the "logy" person has been overfed. Let him go back to nature for a lesson on how to cure himself of this disorder. When an animal has eaten too much it usually crawls away to some dark and quiet place and fasts. That is what the person who has overtaxed his digestion should do. At such times the animal drinks plentifully of water. So should the human being.

In general, the body is better of for an occasional relief to the digestive organs. But there are speeific instances of the fast being of great benefit. For instance, I know a woman whose beautiful figure was otherwise marred by an enlarged abdomen. When she came to me for advice I asked her to stand and to walk. I saw that she stood and walked well. Then I asked her to sit, and I saw that her habit of sitting was correct. She sat with her weight equally distributed and resting evenly on the balls of her feet. She sat somewhat, though not awkwardly, forward in her chair, so that her spine was straight. In mone of these postures was there any cause for the thrusting forward of the abdomen. Her corsets were good and new, neither too tight nor too loose. Believing that this puffy, uigar appearance was due to some form of indigestion, I suggested a short fast. I recommended fortyeight hours without food and with plentiful drinking of hot water, into each glassful of which was squeezed the juice of a lemon. She repeated this every week for five weeks, with no unpleasant results and with the flattening of the abdomen which she desired and which has greatly added to the loveliness of her figure. There is much in favor of the semi-fast, which is not so great a shock to the system. When persons have passed their thirty-fifth

BEING Saturday evening, and the races having taken place that afternoon, the trains were packed. In one compartment a little boy had been standing all the way, but before the journey had proceeded much farther Mrs. Jones kindly took him on her knee.

"But I thought you trembled a little as I kissed you," remarked Mrs. Jones, who was not even middle-aged yet. "And what's your name?"

"Tony," came the answer. "Then you're a very lovable little chap! And how old are you?" "Twenty-five, ma'am."

year it is wise to give no such shock to the system. Better be as considerate or our own bodies as we are of the feelings of our beloved friends. Begin gently any radical departure in the habits of the body. For this reason it is well to begin fasting by semi-fasting, or gradually diminishing the amount of food taken. A plan that seems to me worthy is to forego solid foods, and the first da, subsist on milks, gruel or soup. Of these the milk is better because more nourishing. Some persons don't like milk, but, it being the natural food, every one can train himself to like, or, at least, to awallow it. Some to whom milk is repellent prevent its unpleasant after effects by placing in each glass a pinch of bicarbonate of soda. I allow my appetite to govern the amount and the frequency of these meals of milk. I always remember Lat milk is food and so consider that I eat, rather than drink, it. Five minutes at least for a glass 1 always permit myself. Sometimes I take ten.

The stomach having been gently prepared for the change, it is ready by the second day for the water and lemon. The lemon juice not only makes the water more palatable, but it stimulates the liver, so clear-

When ready to break the fast i have found it well to accustom the stomach to the change back to food by sipping orange juice that has been pressed into a cup or glass, then to begin eating again by consuming a small, sweet orange. I returned to regular diet by the easy way of soups and grueis. My long-est fast was for four days, and I consider that one of two days too agents. A fairly good rule to follow is that whenever the tongue is coated the amount of food may be reduced, or we would do well to have no food for a short time. The coated tongue indicates that there is much dead, refuse matter, like the choking ashes in a furnace, obstructing N interesting plant called A "khat" has recently been obtained by the Government Plant Bureau from Aden, in Arabia. When its leaves are chewed they are said to affect one like a bottle of champagne, being most agreeably stimulating. Presumably it would grow very well in our southwestern country, but seeds of it will not be distributed until something more definite has been ascertained about the nature and action of the alkaloid which it contains.

Khat is a shrub grown commercially in only two localities in the world—on the west coast of Arabia, and near Harrar, in Abyssinia. It will thrive only in the mountains 3,500 to 5,000 feet above sea level; it will not live anywhere near sait water, and in cultivation it has to be fertilized with sheep or goat

The plant has thick, dark-green foliage, and is propagated from cuttings, yielding its first commercial crop of leaves the second year. When the Arab cultivator sees birds eating the leaves he knows that they are ripe and of good flavor for mar-ket. The leaves are used everywhere throughout Arabia. To the natives of that region life and hard work would be unendurable without khat, and there is no coole too poor to buy his daily portion of the plant. How the Tester Works

Where automobiles are manufactured, the residents daily, except Sunday, see scurrying around the city, rakish-looking, half finished automobiles that seem to do nothing but try and break automobile speed laws and go over inconceivable holes and places. "Crazy" street, or the road taken up for any cause, out hop the testers, riding under the burning words that come from the street inspectors and contractors, but they get the cars over the road.

When the motor is complete it gets the dynamotor test. Then comes the block test for 48 hours to work in the bearings, valves and plastors. Then the conceivable holes and places. The police keep their eyes on the boys and they often go to court. They are not supposed to do their hard stunts in crowded districts but their desire to make their machine do almost impossible things anywhere overcomes them and sometimes lands them before the stern justice, who sees the greatest chance in local publicity in handing out sentence to offending "autoists."

Out in Indianapolis the testers for the various factories try to out-doeach other in stunts. They have the two and one-half mile speedway on which to test their car, but as this is smooth running the boys use this speedway only to test out their cars for mileage and speed. It is on coal piles, over abrupt elevations, thru brooks and clay roads that the tester's road les.

The Demonstrating Car

You may shout about the showers. As a sign of juicy Spring; You may boast about the breezes,

And the little buds they bring; You may croak about the crocus, With its green and glossy stalk; But say! I know a sign of Spring That beats 'em in a walk.

It is smooth and slick and shiny, And it hums a gentle hum, It makes everybody rubber,

From Miss Millions to the bum. You meet with it on every street, You smell it near and far, And it fills our hearts with envy,

How soft and thick the cushions, And how round and fat each tire, And how Prince-like is the salesman,

'Tis-the demonstrating car.

And a most accomplished liar. He lures "the prospect" out to ride, In his delightful bubble. "Twill run for countless years," says he, And "never give no trouble."

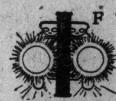

And so "the prospect" signs the check, And the salesman rakes it in, And sometimes "the prospect" gets a quince, With gears made out of tin.

But oftener, 'tis a steed of faith, Strong and of wondrous power, That wafts him over pigs and hens, At 'steenty miles per hour.

And thus the merry game goes on, You smell it near and far. All hail thee, Herald of the Spring, The demonstrating car. And so, as thru the mud and slush,

You splash a gallant track, We shout and yell because we know,

THEN you buy tires, look to the construction of your treads. To get a tread that grips the road is not enough.

Get one that is alive, one that will not shake the motor out of adjustment. See how the Goodyear Tread has added the clinging rubber blocks without deadening the tire. Deep blocks, cut diamond shape, with air spaces between them. The angles and edges hold in every direction. The blocks spread out and distribute the weight of the car over the whole tread.

The extra thickness reduces the danger of puncture 30%

But here is where the Goodyear differs from any other tread. It is perfectly resilient. The tire is just as springy as a plain tread tire and has the advantages of longer wear, fewer punctures, and freedom from skidding. Non-Skid-Treads are vulcanized on to No-Rim-Cut Tires. These tires cannot rim-cut, and 23% of wrecked

The scheme on which King George's children are educated includes careful instruction in all the typical open air sports and games. In cricket, riding, fencing, boxing, shooting and the like, the young Prince of Weles has been carefully and scientifically taught by past masters. A few years ago a ship was rigged in Virginia Waters, and here he and his younger brother with great thoroness were instructed in the management of sails and ropes, of handling an oar and steering a boat. Owners of Ford Cars Have Real Automobile Service

As Important As The Car, Is The Service That Goes With It

Over 4000 FORD dealers, each with a stock of parts are scattered all over Canada and America, waiting and ready to serve FORD users, no matter from what section of the country they come.

It is practically impossible to go fifty miles in any direction without finding one or more FORD dealers.

In most sections FORD dealers are found every twenty miles. You will probably never need their services, but it is a most comforting thing to know they are there, if you do need them.

Because, getting right down to brass tacks, there is only one kind of service worth the snap of your fingers when you are out on a tour and anything goes wrong. And that is—immediate service.

Only the FORD owner has the benefit of such service, and it is the greatest insurance policy you can have for motoring satisfaction.

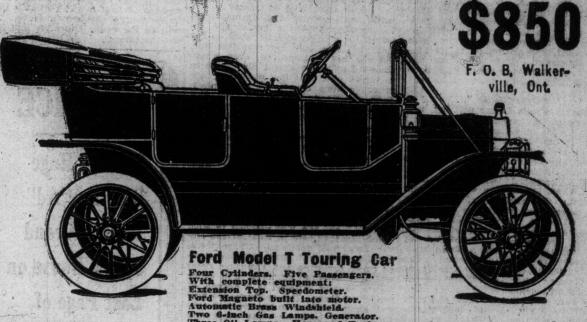

The very fact that every second car sold in Canada is a FORD Model T. shows the distinctive possibilities for rord service. A net-work of agencies covers all Provinces during all seasons. It is the most efficient sales organization known in the Automobile Industry, and no less notable in giving service to FORD owners.

*The FORD owner not only has the benefit of immediate relief, if a mishap occurs while on tour, but such a thing as being without the use of his car while the factory is making an adjustment is unknown to him.

Because adjustments are made by the FORD branch houses and dealers which are located in all the large cities in the country, but while the adjustment is being made, the FORD owner is driving his car, the same as ever, the extra part having been furnished by the nearest dealer or branch.

Mind you, no dealer can secure a FORD agency without keeping a stock of parts, and keeping that stock replenished. He must give service, or lose the most reliable automobile connection in the world. So it is by reason of the enforcement of this and other FORD rules that the FORD service means real service to the owner of a FORD Car.

You will do well to ponder over the benefit derived from this great FORD organization before deciding to buy other than a Model T. It makes every FORD owner's motor experience a delight.

herence of the plot, something rarely looked for in burlesque offerings.

The story is woven around two adventurers, who try all sorts of schemes to get closer acquainted with the products of the mint. The fellows in this particular case have been members of a theatrical troupe, which followed the fate of so many others and stranded. Unfortunately for our Thespians this happened in far off Mexico and the way home looked rather dismal if money refused to be on speaking terms with them. They finally conceived the idea of starting a small circus and were fertunate enough to obtain a loan of $500 from the sheriff of Vera Cruz. According to the laws of the country a jail somence is imposed on anyone, who does not return a cash loan at the specified time. The two schemers had to experience it owing to bad business in the circus venture.

Although corsets are rare in that country, the women there have beautiful figures that any American woman might well envy, and the Japanese men have strength and powers of endurance that are preverbial. After diligent inquiry about the cause of this, I became more than ever convinced that they were using there in Japan methods of fat reduction and fat prevention far in advance of anything known to medical science in this country. As the finding of such a method was a matter of life or death to me at that time, I consulted numerous authorities and set about asking questions of these works.

We are in the presence of a national revival which in its outward manifestations, its origins, and its results merits the closest attention of Europe and America, and particularly of the British people. PARIS, March 9.-A striking change in America and in England. The psychology of peoples plays so important a part in their history that mutual un-scandals, anti-patriotism, and internal disorder, have stirred the French nation to its very depths, and re-awakened the moral consciousness of France. It awoke last summer before the imminent peril of a war which France felt to be a war of aggression. The new spirit ran like a thrill throuout the entire nation. For the first time in ferty years the French nation looked war squarely in the face, without qualms, without brag. The old French elasticity and self-confidence returned inner dissensions, sabotage, strikes, melted like morning mists before the midday sun, and France appeared calm and cool, and courageous and ready.

A Lasting Spirit.

The new spirit endures. The whole course of events in France during the past six months has clearly proved that this is not a passing phase, but justifies the hope, which all friends of France will cherish, that the nation has found itself again. Thruout the Morocco crisis of the past summer the French people left the government a free hand, only giving it on every possible occasion the proof that they were prepared for any sacrifice to maintain France's boyner intset. The man in the street and the midinette alike transferred their hero worship from the La-thams and the Paulhams to the army airmen, and the successful debuts of the aeroplane at the French manoeuvres evoked an extraordinary outburst of patriotic enthusiasm. The new spirit was spreading. While the reorganization of the army proceeded steadily and its progress was the subject of high praise from the oreign officers at the grand man-euvres, the advent of M. Delcasse to the admiralty last spring showed that France had at last awakened to the lamentable state of her navy. A fine start had been made by Admiral Boue de Lapeyrere, and working on the foun-dation the ex-foreign minister made astonishing progress, when, at the be-ginning of July Germany executed the coup of Agadir. Germany found the whole French nation ranged behind the government.

The pulse becomes weaker; excitement or extra exertion causes throbbing in throat and temples; the breath is short and gaspy. When these symptoms come to the man or woman who is too fat, steps should be taken to remove the ex-cess fat, not only from the sufficated heart, but from other parts of the body where it makes its unwelcome appearance. Many so-called fat reducers are dangerous to the fatty heart, placing upon it an added burden by stimulating its action. There is but one sure, harmless fat reducer known, the now famous Marmola Prescription of a Detroit physician, and its more convenient form, Marmola Prescription Tablets. On returning from a recent trip Dr. F. Turner, the physician, scientist and traveler, who has won fame and world-wide remown through his writings and scientific researches, accorded an interview to press representatives who were astounded by his loss of more than a 100 pounds of excessive fat since they last saw him. They found it difficult indeed, to recognize in the stender, muscusar and perfectly proportioned form of Dr. Turner to day, the same man whom only a few months ago they knew as a semi-invalid, so enormously fat that he could hardly walk.

When questioned concerning his health and the remarkable change in his appearance, Dr. Turner said that netter lillness, medicines, starvation, dieting, hor strenuous exercise had caused him to lose so much excess weight. In fact he said that fatty degeneration had eaten into his vital organs to such an extent that it would have been foolhardy to even attempt the usual methods of reduction, and he was forced to seek other means of escape from his former terrible condition.

On being questioned further the Dootor sadd: "When I hearn to feel to the first of the condition."

This is what occurred. The man at the desk saw the woman coming. He noted, the fire in her eye, the sound of battle in her voice, and he took down a heavy volume from the shelf behind him, and pushed it slowly across to her as she came up fairly bristling with fight:

"Write it down there," he said.

"Write what?" her voice was sharp.

"Your complaint," he said politely.

"Everybody who has any fault to find with the management of this store is respectfully requested to register her ticks in this book." He could see her rage oozing out, and curiosity taking its place, so he went on. "Every morning the managers of the different departments look over the entries of the preceding day. This dog hunting business is getting to be a public brutality which in a day can undo the teaching in the schools of kindness to animals, and the work of all the Humane Societies put together. It is time that some voice be raised in depreciation of this campaign of destruction carried on in the public streets. Not long since a paper in an Ontarlo town referred jokingly to this matter of shooting down stray dogs. Speaking of a certain "crack shot" who is beginning to "complain about the supply not equalling the demand," it goes on to remark that the "hunters say there is not much sport in shooting a tled animal," and continuing, opines that it has been proposed as soon as warmer weather brings the dogs out again that "a rig and driver be provided for the dog hunter. Drives will be taken about the city, the hunter armed to the teeth, no stops made, and all dogs running at large will be popped. man, ner anger beginning to sprint as she took up the pen. "Where do I write? Here?"

"Yes, right there," said the man. The woman halted, nibbled at the pen, thought a while, then said—

"This is a queer idea,"

"You said just now it was a bright one, and it may be queer," said the man, "but it is a mighty good idea, it is a great labor-saver. Without that book we would have to hire half a dozen extra employes."

Still, the woman hesitated. Then—

"What shall I write?" she asked. "You complaint, of course."

She wrote steadily for two minutes. "Now please sign your right name and address so that you can be produced as a witness if necessary."

The woman stared, then drew the pen deliberately thru a dozen or more lines of cramped writing.

"I don't believe I have anything to complain about," she said. Her creeks were red as she walked away. The man Icked after her and chuckled; "They always fall for it." he said to the magazine department girl, wno stood nearest him. "They ain't gct no courage when it comes to the real thing. And, thems the ones that's asking for the vote."

And the magazine department girl, being a spineless sort of person, whose youthful desires embodied in supposed to be educative, shocked and surprised that a paper like the supposed to be educative, should allow in its columns the flippant article entitled 'Shooting Goes On.' Le Gallenne says Mrs. Grundy is on her deathbed. Ibsen, Maeterlinck and Mr. Bernard Shaw are responsible. But I think the larger credit for this happy event should go to Nietzche. Too long has old Dame Grundy hoodwinked the world. Yet I doubt her death First.

"Our first recollection of Mr. Sprott was in the days of our boyhood. He came to our home and our church. It was a warm summer's day when he was preaching for our minister. A large congregation had assembled, and the church windows were open, letting into the crowded building the fresh air and the grateful odor of new-made hay. Ascending the narrow stafrs that led up to the bowl of an old wine-glass style of pulpit, to his dismay he found that he could not enter it in the usual way. He was too corpulent for its narrow door, and placing a hand on either side, lifting himself over the aperture, he said in a perfectly audible whisper. This pulpit door was made for speerits. Theu having rapidly conducted the preliminary exercises, he opened the Bible and looking out at the open window, his first words were: Te have a fine place here; ye're no like the thousands that

But I've always considered myself blessed because I was fortunate to get a few good friends and keep them. That is about the best thing in life-to have a few good friends and keep them."

Birthday Honor To W. D. Howells

On Friday last William Dean Howells celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday, and, to do fitting honor to the occasion, the firm which has been largely instrumental in placing his literary output before the public-Messrs Harper Bros., arranged a dinner which was, by reason of the distinction of those bidden to it, something of an event. Previously to this esoteric symposium only three similar gatherings have been held, respectively in honor of Longfellow, Samuel Clemens ("Mark Twain") and Alden. Of the quartett which is made complete by the addition of the name of Howell, his is, probably very many will think, by no means the least.

Oriole, it is the same "The Oriole," he wrote:

Dr. F. H. Torrington Retires from Oratorio

On Tuesday and Wednesday evenings this week Dr. Torrington will give his final oratorio performances at the Massey Hall. For the past thirty-four years Dr. Torrington has been the representative head of oratorio productions in Toronto, which practically means Canada, and his retirement from the field will leave a blank which it will be hard to fill. No living musiciclan has done so much for the advancement of the cause, and love of the art as can be credited to him, and every music-lover should turn out to patronize these concerts in order to show their appreciation and admiration of the great work. The oratorios chosen are the "Messiah" and "Elijah," the two usually representative compositions, and they will be sung by a chorus of over two hundred members, assisted by the full strength of the Toronto by the full strength of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. The quartet of so'oists will consist of Miss Ælieen Millett, Franklin, Pa., soprano; Miss Rosalie Wirhtlin, New York, contraito; Mr. Evan Williams, New York, tenor; Mr. Frederic Martin, New York, basso; all thoroly equipped singers. While the sale of seats has been large there are a number of good locations still to be

Mr. Nikisch has since that time stood before every celebrated orc'iestra in Europe.

The history of the London Symphony Orchestra dates from 1894, when, under the leadership of Henry J. Wood, the orchestra was formed for the purpose of establishing promenade concerts at Queen's Hall, London. The organization as first formed continued until 1904, when about fifty mambers withdrew in order to establish the London Symphony Orchestra upon a co-press. Franklin Riker, tenor, gave a delightful song recital in the Belasco Theatre,
New York, last Tuesday afternoon, before a good-sized audience. Mr. Riker's selection of the lovely Handel "WaftHer Angels," showed excellent judgment, and was beautifully sung. In

The Program co page circular giving full particulars of the concert in this city on April 25, and showing plan of Massey Hall with meeting with tremendous success in the Western and Southern States. The following excerpt is from the Minneapolis News: "One of the biggest things of the whole music season, was the first hearing here of the favorite Haydn violencelle concerts that in Province violoncello concerto, that in D major.

Long years many local 'cello enthusiasts have waited for this great event, and they were more than repaid for their patience by the sterling performance of this classic by Boris Hambourg and the orchestra. With no taint of mere display, this accomplished 'cellist brought out all the quaint old melody, pure addraments and free play of musical imagination in the three cadenzas which make this concerto one of the best classics for this noble instrument. The only pity about the flying visit of such an artist is that flying visit of such an artist is that he cannot stay long enough to play in weekly installments a half dozen of cital next Thursday evening at the the standard 'cello concertos."

Miss Winifred Hicks-Lyne has resigned as soloist at the Metropolitan Church, and after April 1 will take the position at St. James Square Presbyterian Church made vacant by resignation of Miss May Hinckley.

This is as it should be, but we wish that the idea might be carried further. There is nothing in the life of a great city so helpless and unprotected as a male shopper in a department store. As an illustration of great devotion to truth, a would-be M.P. was telling his auditors that he "underwent a severe thrashing when a boy, for telling the truth," when a gruff voice called out from the audience: "I guess it cured yer, guv'nor!"

Presence of mind recently saved an actor his gold watch and chain. While crossing a bridge in a thick night mist a suspicious-looking man suddenly loomed up out of the obscurity.

"Can you tell me the time, guv'nor?" he gruffly inquired.

"You are too late, my dear sir," replied the actor suavely. "A gentleman who passed a minute ago stole my watch!"

The judge looked hard at the rather florid client.

A certain lawyer has a tongue that frequently travels faster than his brain when he makes a speech.

In a recent case, in which he was defending a man charged with theft, he brought down the court, jury, and spectators by saying excitedly:

You have also heard the testimony of the prisoner's own boy in corroboration of what I have stated, and now, gentlemen of the jury, let me remind you of that old Scriptural saying that 'fools and children speak the truth.' England's Win from Australia.

When one calls to mind the easy victories of the first English cricketing teams to visit Australia, and the remarkable progress the colonials made subsequently, one rather wonders at the exultation of the English papers over the pronounced triumph recently achieved. But they are as pleased as any father could be over his first baby. It is creditable to England of course to have won, but the reception of the victory is very much like the teacher exulting over the defeat of his own pupils by himself. As sample of the expression of joy is here given from The London Sporting Life: "Hurrah! It is with feelings of intense relief that most of us welcome England's victory in the fourth test match, which carries with it the 'rubber,' the recovery of the 'ashes,' proof that there is life in the old dog yet, and other sources of gratification. "Presbyterians and Methodists, Friends and Congregationalists, appeal to us to avert the dreaded disaster of home rule; and we make no, or at least only a faint-hearted reply.

"But our sympathy with them and our concern for them are only kept under because we are in a dilemma, and we do not know how to speak at once truthfully and consolingly. We thoroly understand their dread of a parliament in Dublim, which must be essentially Catholic. The reaffirmation of the Apostolicae Sidis suggests that any member of that parliament voting for a measure which may be injurious to Rome, which gives to Protestantism testant brethren in Ireland, the week how only too well what a Catholic parliament may mean, and see with perfect clearness how difficult will be the path of the smaller and poorer country, thrown on its own resources, and financially dependent, at least for a time, on the larger and wealthier partiner. Our attitude is rather flat justice is the primary consideration, "If we surrender this principle because our hearts melt towards our brethren, we should feel that we were unworthy of our past, and should not render them a lasting or valuable service. We should be yielding to a weak partiality. We should be in the position of a magistrate who, in leniency to his own son, violated the law.

National Weifare First, "It has always been our principle to support home rule for Ireland, tho we know only too well what a Catholic parliament may mean, and see with perfect clearness how difficult will be to support home rule for Ireland, tho we know difficult will be to support home rule for Ireland, tho we know difficult will be support on th

The history of a thousand years has taught us that, when the Roman Church can control a government, it employs the government to repress or to crush heretics, and Protestants are the worst of heretics.

Not indifferent.

"It must not be supposed that we are indifferent to the natural fears of our brethren in Ireland. Many of us feel that, if we were shere, we should feel and speak as they do. Certainly, if there were the prospect of a Catholic garliament in England we should be overwhelmed with the same apprehensions that afflict them. But just because we are not so directly affected it is possible that we may help them to take a calmer and more hopeful view. Our dilemms is this—that, while we feel intensely and passionately with our coreligionists in Ireland, and fully apprehend the reason of their alarm and protest, we are convinced that politi-

LONDON, March 3.—Dr. R. F. Horton, the eminent Nonconformist divine, recently discussed with me the question of whether home rule in Ireland will mean Rome rule, and the duty of English Nonconformists in such a case. Put briefly, Dr. Horton admits that there is great danger of a persecution of Protestants under a home rule parliament; but says that nevertheless it is the duty of Nonconformists to support home rule as an act of justice, even "tho the heavens should fall." The revernd doctor also made the fatuous suggestion that in the event of these fears of oppression being realised weakness.

"We may be right or wrong, but we are of opinion that no country can be governed without the assent and good-will of the people. For a generation the Irish members have sat at Westmin. We see, by the principles of the Irish people to the present constitution. We see, by the principles of self-government in which we as Free Churchmen have been reared, that there is no evasion of the plain duty; we must grant to the Irish the mode of government which they can loyally and heartily accept. The presence of nine ty, or even of sixty, members of parliament at Westminster hostile to our country, in tacit revoit against its best interests, is a perilous and intolerable weakness.

This tract of land, is termed the Panhandle of Alaska. It is 536 miles long, 8 to 35 miles wide, and shuts off Yukon Territory and the morthern half of British Columbia from free access to the Pacific, just as the Sonora Desert shuts off Arizona from the Gulf of Arizona.

Magdalena Bay in Lower California would be a valuable protective harbor for warships, and as Robert Stein puts it: "If our Pacific coast were ever attacked by a hostile fleet, there would always be the danger that the fleet might selze the defenseless Magdalena Bay, and use it as a base of operations against us, just as it would use the Hawaiian Islands if they were still unannexed in the Gulf of Arizona.

In "Celtanglia," the federation of English-speaking people, the United States would bear to Canada the same relation that Australia does now. Closer union is not needed. And when the national bond broken in 1776 has been restored, the people of the United States will quickly perceive that all Alaska as a matter of equity and convenience, should belong to Canada.

She had traveled many miles during the hours of flight, above the broken waste of forest and water. Only once had she diverted from her course and that was when a wild dove showed for an instant, a grey speck, on her left and many feet below her, as it darted across the purpling mists of a little lake bathed in the sunset glow.

She had closed her wings and fallen swift as a bullet, earthward, righting herself as the grey speck grew up as tho to pass her by. There had been a plaintive note of anguish, a flutter of feathers, and she had swooped slowly away, the grey dove dropping from her talons.

mometer marked-for them-one hundred and one degrees of heat. The room was darkened till it was only just possible to distinguish the tips of the cards and the very white faces of the players. A tattered, rotten punkah of whitewashed calico was pudding the hot air and whining dolefully at each stroke. Outside lay the gloom of a November day in London. There was neither sky, sun nor horizon-nothing but a brown purple haze of heat. It was as the the earth were dying of apoplexy.

From time to time clouds of tawny dust rose from the ground without wind or warning, flung themselves, tableclothwise, among the tops of the parched trees, and came down again. Then a whirling dust devil would scutter across the plain for a couple of miles, break and fall outward, the there was nothing to check its flight save a long low line of piled railway sleepers white with the dust, a cluster of huts made of mud, condemned rails and canvas, and the one squate four-roomed bungalow that belonged to the assistant engineer in charge of a section of the Guadhari State Line, then under construction.

The four, stripped to the thinnest of sleeping suits, played whist crossly, with wrangling as to leads and returns. It was not the best kind of whist, but they had taken some trouble to arrive to it. Mottram, of the Indian Survey, had ridden thirty and railed one hundred miles from his fonely post in the desert since the night before; Lowndes of the Civil Service, on special duty in the political department, had come as far to escape for an instant the miserable intrigues of an impoverished native State whose king alternately fawned and blustered for more money from the pitiful revenues contributed by hard-wrung peasants and despairing camel breeders; Spurstow, the doctor of the line, had left a cholera-stricken camp of coolles to look after itself for forty-eight hours while he associated with white men once more; Hummil, the assistant engineer, was the host. He stood fast and received his friends thus every Sunday if they could come in. When one of them failed to appear he would send a telegram to his address in order that he might know whether the defaulter were dead or alive. There are very many places in the East where it is not good or kind to let your acquaintances drop out of sight even for one short week. The players wede not conscious of any special regard for each other. They squabbled whenever they met; but they ardently desired to meet, as men without water desire to drink. They were lonely folk, who understood the dread meaning of loneliness. They were all under thirty years of age-which is too soon for any man to possess that knowledge. "Pusener?" said Spurstow, after the second rubber, mopping his forehead. "Beer's out, I'm sorry to say, and there's hardly enough soda water for to-night," said Hummill. "Got anything fresh?" said Lowndes.

"Last week's Gazette of India, and a outting from a home paper. My father sent it out. It's rather amusing." "One of those vestrymen that call 'emselves M. P.'s again, is it?"

said Spurstow, who read his newspapers when he could get them. Then Lowndes, meditatively: "I'd give-I'd give three months" pay to have that gentleman spend one month with me and see how the free and independent native prince works things. Old Timbersides"-this was his flippant title for an honored and decorated feudatory prince-"has been wearing my life out this week past for money. By love, his latest performance was to send me one of his women as a bribe!"

"Good for you! Did you accept it?" said Mottram.

"No. I rather wish I had now. She was a pretty little person. and she yarned away to me about the horrible destitution among the king's women-folk. The darlings haven't l for nearly a month, and the old man wants to buy a new drag from Calcutta-solid silver railings and silver lamps, and trifles of that kind. I've tried to make him understand that he has played the deuce with the revenues for the last twenty years and must go slow. He can't see it."

"But he has the ancestral treasure-vaults to draw on. There must be three millions at least in jewels and com under his palace," said Hummil.

"Hummil's the lucky man," said Lowndes, flinging himself into a long chair. "He has an actual roof-torn as to the ceiling cloth, but still a roof-over his head. He sees one train daily. He can get beer and soda water and ice 'em when God is good. He has books, pictures,"-they were torn from the Graphic-"and the society of the excellent sub-contractor Jevins, besides the pleasure of receiving us weekly."

Hummil smiled grimly. "Yes, I'm a lucky man, I suppose. Jevins is luckier." "How? Not"___

"Yes. Went out. Last Monday."

"By his own hand?" said Spurstow quickly, hinting the suspicton that was in everybody's mind. There was no cholera near Hummii's section. Even fever gives a man at least a week's grace, and sudden death generally implied self-slaughter. "I judge no man this weather," said Hummil. "He had a touch of the sun, I fancy; for last week, after you fellows had left, he came into the veranda and told me that he was going home to see his wife, in Market Street, Liverpool, that evening.

"I got the apothecary in to look at him, and we tried to make him lie down. After an hour or two he rubbed his eyes and said he believed he had had a fit-hoped he hadn't said anything rude. Jevins had a great idea of bettering himself socially. He was very "Well?"

"Well?"

"Then he went to his own bungalow and began cleaning a rifle. He told the servant that he was going to shoot buck in the morning. Naturally, he fumbled with the trigger and shot himself thru the head—accidentally. The apothecary sent in a report to my chief-and Jevins is buried somewhere out there. I'd have wired to you, Spurstow, if you could have done anything."

"You're a queer chap," said Mottram. "If you'd killed the man yourself you couldn't have been more quiet about the business."

ness."

"Good Lord! What does it matter," said Hummil calmly. "I've got to do a lot of his overseeing work in addition to my own. I'm the only person that suffers. Jevins is out of it—by pure accident, of course, but out of it. The apothecary was going to write a long screed on suicide. Trust a babu to drivel when he gets the chance."

ohance."

"Why didn't you let it go in as suicide?" said Lowndes.

"No direct proof. A man hasn't many prvileges in this country, but he might at least be allowed to mishandle his own rifle.

Besides, some day I may need a man to smother up an accident myself. Live and live. Die and let die."

"You take a pill." said Spurstow, who had been watching Hummil's white face narrowly. "Take a pill, and don't be an ass. That sort of talk is skittles. Anyhow, suicide is shirking your what was going to happen next that I'd stay on and watch."

"How lost that curiosity," said Hummill. "Liver out of order?" said Lowndes feelingly.

"No, can't sleep, That's worse."

"By Jove, it is!" said Mottram. "I'm that way every now and then, and the fit has to wear itself out. What do you take for it?"

"Nothing. What's the use? I haven't had ten minutes' sleep since Friday morning."

"Poor chap! Spurstow, you ought to a tend to this," said Mottram. "Now you mention it, your eyes are rather gummy and swollen."

swollen."
Spurstow, still watching Hummil, laug 'lightly. "I'll patch him up, later on. Is it too hot, do you the k, to go for a ride?"
"Where to?" said Lowndes wearily. "We fall have to go away at eight, and there'll be riding enough for us then. I have to go away when I have to use him as a necessity. On, heavens! what is there to do?"

there to do?"
"Begin whist again at chick points (a chick is supposed to be eight shillings) and a gold mohur on the rub," said Spurstow promptly, "Poker. A month's pay all around for the pool—no limit, and fifty-rupee raise. Somebody would be broken before we got up," fifty-rupee raise. Someody would be broken before we got up, said Lowndes.

"Can't say that it would give me any pleasure to break any man in this company," said Mottram. "There isn't enough excitement in it, and it's foolish." He crossed over to the worn and battered little camp plano—wreckage of a married household that had once held the bunaglow—and opened the case.

"It's used up ilong ago," said Hummil. "The servants have picked it to pieces."

The plano was indeed hopelessly out of order, but Mottram managed to bring the rebellious notes into a sort of agreement, and there rose from the ragged keyboard something that might once have been the ghost of a popular music-hall song. The men in the long chairs turned with evident interest as Mottram banged the more lustily.

Very simple indeed were the tunes to which Mottram's art and the limitations of the plano could give effect, but the men listened with pleasure, and in the pauses talked all together of what they had seen or heard when they were last at home. A dense dust-storm sprang up outside and swept roaring over the house, enveloping it in the choking darkness of midnight, but Mottram continued unineeding, and the crazy tinkle reached the ears of the listeners above the flapping of the tattered ceiling cloth.

In the silence after the storm he glided from the more directly personal songs of Scotland, half-humming them as he played, into the Evening Hymn.

"Sunday," said he, nodding his head.

"Go on, Don't apologize for it," said Spurstow.

Hummil laughed long and riotously. "Play it, by all means.

You're full of surprises to-day. I didn't know you had such a gift of finished sarcasm. How does that thing go?"

Mottram took up the tune.

"Bah! What an old hypocrite you are!"

"Don't be an ass," said Lowndes. "You are at full liberty to make fun of anything else you like, but leave that hymn alone. It's associated in my mind with the most sacred recollections."

"Summer evenings in the country—stained-glass windows, light going out, and you and she jamming your heads logether over one hymn book," said Mottram.

"Yes, and a fat old recketsfar hitting you is the

"Yes, and a fat old cockchafer hitting you in the eye when you walked home. Smell of hay, and a moon as big as a bandbox, sitting on the top of a haycock; bats—roses—milk and midges," said Lowndes.

said Lowndes.

"Also mothers. I can just recollect my mother singing me to sleep with that when I was a little chap," said Spurstow.

The darkness had fallen on the room. They could hear Hummil squirming in his chair.

"Consequently," said he, testily, "you sing it when you are seven fathoms deep in hell! It's an insult to the intelligence of the Deity to pretend we're anything but tortured rebels."

"Take two pills," said Spurstow; "that's tortured liver."

"The unusually placed Hummil is in a vile bad temper. I'm sorry for his coomes to-morrow," said Lowndes, as the servants brought in the lights and prepared the table for dinner.

As they were settling into their places about the miserable goat chops and the smoked taploca pudding, Spurstow took occasion to whisper to Mottram, "Well done, David!"

"Look after Saul, them," was the reply.

"What are you two whispering about?" said Hummil suspiciously.

"Only saying that you are a mighty poor host. This fowl can't be out," returned Spurstow with a sweet smile. "Call this a dinner?"

"I can't help it. You don't expect a banquet, do you?"

"Through that meal Hummil tried laboriously to insuft directly and pointedly all his guests in succession, and at each insuft Spurstow kicked the aggrieved persons under the table; but he dared not exchange a glance of intelligence with either of them. Hummil's face was white and pinched, while his eyes were unaturally large. No one dreamed for a moment of resenting his savage personalities, but as soon as the meal was over they made haste to get away. made haste to get away.
"Don't go. You're just getting amusing, you fellows. I hope

"He's holding himself as tightly as ever he can," thought Spurstow. "What in the world is the matter with him? Hummil!"

"Yes," in a thick, constrained voice.
"Can't you get to sleep?"
"No."
"Head hot? Throat feeling bulgy, or how?"
"Neither, thanks. I don't sleep much, you know."
"Feel pretty bad?"

"Pretty bad, thanks. There is a tom-tom outside, isn't there? I thought it was my head at first. Oh, Spurstow, for pity's sake, give me something that will put me asleep—sound sleep—if it's only for six hours!" He sprang up, trembling from head to foot. "I haven't been able to sleep naturally for days, and I can't stand it."
"Poor old chap!"

"That's no use. Give me something to make me sleep. I tell you I'm nearly mad. I don't know what I say half my time. For three weeks I've had to think and spell out every word that has come thru my lips before I dared say it. Isn't that enough to drive a man mad? I can't see things correctly now, and I've lost my sense of touch. My skin aches—my skin aches! Make me sleep sound. It isn't enough merely to let me dream. Let me sleep!" "All right, old man, all right. Go slow; you aren't half as bad

The floodgates of reserve once broken, Hummil was clinging to him like a frightened child. "You're pinching my arm to pieces."

I'll break your neck if you don't do something for me. No, I didn't mean that. Don't be angry, old fellow." He wiped the sweat off himself as he fought to regain composure. "I'm a bit restless and off my oats, and perhaps you could recommend some sort of sleeping mixture—bromide of potassium."

"Bromide of skittles! Why didn't you tell me this before? Let go of my arm and I'll see if there's anything in my clearet case to suit your complaint." Spurstow hunted among his day clothes, turned up the lamp, opened a little cigaret case and advanced on the expectant Hummil with the daintiest of fairy squirts.

"The flast appeal of civilization," said he, "and a thing I hat to "The fast appeal of civilization," said he. "and a thing I hate to use. Hold out your arm. Well, your sleeplessness hasn't ruined your muscle, and what a thick hide it is! Might as well inject a buffalo subcutaneously. Now, in a few minutes the morphia will begin to work. Lie down and wait."

A smile of unalloyed and idiotic delight began to creep over Hummil's face. "I think," he whispered, "I think I'm going off now. Gad! it's positively heavenly! Spurstow, you must give me that "Not for a good deal," said Spurstow to the unconscious form. "And now, my friend, sleeplessness of your kind being very apt to take the liberty of spiking your guns."

"Yes, sometimes. Not when I am frightened. Then I want to "Yes, sometimes. Not when I am frightened. Then I want to run. Don't you?"

"Allways. Before I give you your second dose try to tell me exactly what your trouble is."

Hummil spoke in broken whispers for nearly ten minutes, whilst Spurstow looked into the pupils of his eyes and passed his hand before them once or twice.

At the end of the narrative the silver cigaret case was produced, and the last words that Hummil said as he fell back for the second time were: "Put me quite to sleep, for if I'm caught I die."

"Yes, yes; we all do that sooner or later—thank Hessen. "Yes, yes; we all do that sooner or later—thank Heaven, who has set a term to our miseries," said Spurstow, settling the cushions under the head. "It occurs to me that unless I drink something I shall go out before my time. I've stopped sweating, and I wear a seventeen-inch collar." He brewed himself scalding hot tea, which is an excellent remedy against heat apoplexy if you take three or four cups of it in time. Then he watched the sleeper. "A blind face that cried and can't wipe its eyes; a blind face that chases him down/corridors! H'm! Decidedly, Hummil ought to go on leave as soon as possible; and, sane or otherwise he undowbtedly did rowel himself most cruelly. Well, Heaven send us understanding!"

At midday Hummil rose, with an evil taste in his mouth, but an unclouded eye and a joyful heart.
"I was pretty bad last night, wasn't I?" said he.
"I have seen healthler men. You must have had a touch of the sun. Look here, if I write you a swinging medical certificate, will you apply for leave on the spot?"

Why not? You want it?" "Yes; but I can hold on till the weather's a little cooler."
"Why should you, if you can get relieved on the spot?"
"Burkett is the only man who could be sent, and he's a born

"Oh, never mind about the line. You aren't so important as all that. Wire for leave, if necessary."

Hummil looked very uncomfortable.

"I can hold on till the rains," he said evasively.

"You can't. Wire to headquarters for Burkett."

"I won't. If you want to know why, particularly, Burkett is married and his wife's just had a kid; and she's up at Simla, in the cool, and Burkett has a very nice billet that takes him into Simla from Saturday to Monday. That little woman isn't at all well. If Burkett was transferred she'd try to follow him. If sne left the baby behind she'd fret herself to death. If she came—and Burkett's one of those selfish little beasts who are always taking about a wife's place being with her husband—she'd die. It's murder to bring a woman here just now. Burkett hasn't the physique of a rat. If he came here he'd go out; and I know she hasn't any money, and I'm pretty sure she'd go out, too. I'm salted in a sort of way and I'm not married. Wait till the rains, and then Burkett can get thin down here. It'll do him heaps of good."

and then Burkett can get thin down here. It'll do him heaps of good."

"Do you mean to say that you intend to face what you have faced till the rains break?"

"Oh, it won't be so bad, now you've shown me a way out of it. I can always wire to you. Besides, now I've once got into the way of sleeping, it'll be all right. Anyhow, I shan't put in for leave. That's the long and the short of it."

"My great Scott! I thought all that sort of thing was dead and done with.

"Bosh! You'd do the same yourself. I feel a new man, thanks to the cigaret case. You're going over to camp now, aren't your "Yes, but I'll try to look you up every other day, if I can."

"Tim not bad enough for that. I don't want you to bother. Give the coolles gin and ketchup."

"Then you feel all right?"

"Fit to fight for my life, but not to stand out in the sun taking to you. Go along, old man, and bless you!"

Hummil turned on his heel to face the echoing desolation of his bungalow, and the first thing he saw standing in the veranda was the figure of himself. He had met a similar apparition once before, when he was suffering from overwork and the strain of the hot weather.

"This is bad—already!" he said, rubbing his eves, "If the things" fore, when he was suffering from overwork and the strain of the fore, when he was suffering from overwork and the strain of the hot weather.

"This is bad—already!" he said, rubbing his eyes. "If the thing alides away from me all in one piece, like a ghost, I shall know it is only my eyes and stomach that are out of order. If he walks may head is going."

He approached the figure, which naturally kept at an unvarying distance from him, as it is the use of all spectres that are born of overwork. It slid thru the house and dissolved into swimming specks within the eyeball as soon as it reached the burning light of the garden. Hummil went about his business till even. When he came in to dinner he found himself sitting at the table. The vision rose and walked out hastly. Except that it cast he shadow, it was in all respects real.

No living man knows what that week held for Hummil. An increase of the epidemic kept Spurstow un camp among the coolies, and all he could do was to telegraph to Mottram, bidding him to go to the bungalow to sleep there. But Mottram was firty miles away from the nearest telegraph, and knew nothing of anything save the needs of the survey till he met, early on Sunday morning, Lowndes and Spurstow heading towards Hummil's for the weekly gathering.

"Things in a dead man's eye."

"For goodness' sake, leave that horror alone!" said Lownder.

"I've seen a native die of dure fright when a tiger chivled him."

"The deuce you do! "I'm going to try to see." And the doctor retreated into the bathroom with a camera. After some minute he emerged very white indeed.

"Have you got a picture?" said Mottram. "What ever does the corn up the films. There was nothing there. It was impossible, of course, you needn't look. Mottram, "That," said Lowndes, very distinctly, watching the man's hand trying to relight the pipe, "is a lie."

Mottram laughed uneasily. "Spurstow's right," he said, were let's try to be rational."

"She was a pretty little person, and she yarned away to me about the horrible destitution among the king's women-folk."

I haven't said anything that annoyed you. You're such touchy devils." Then, changing the note into one of almost abject enteraty, Hummil added, "I say, you surely aren't going?" "That's no excuse. Spurstow was hacking my shins all the time, so I kept a hand on myself. Else I should have"

"No, you wouldn't. You'd have done as Hummy did about Jevins; judge no man this weather. By Jove—the buckle of my bridle is hot in my hand! Trot out a bit, and 'ware rat holes."

Ten minutes' trotting jerked out of Lowndes one very sage remark when he pulled up, sweating from every pore.

"Good thing Spurstow's with him to-night."

"Ye-es. Good man, Spurstow. Our roads turn here. See you again next Sunday, if the sun doesn't bowl me over."

In the assistant engineer's bungalow Spurstow and Hummil smoked the pipe of silence together, each narrowly watching the its arrangements are simple. A servant cleared away the diningtape strung on a light wood frame, flung a square of cool Calcutta punkah so that their fringe should just sweep clear of the sleeper's "Pack your pillows," said the doctor sharply, as he saw Hummil The night-light was trimmed; the shadows of the punkah wavthe soft whine of the rope thru the wall had followed. It started for what had saying a together was trimmed; the sweat poured from Spurstow's ward again with a savage jerk, and a pin came out of the towels. Spurstow brucker sound the guivering eyellds.

He padded into Hummil's saddle room in his bare feet and uncased a twelve-bore rifle, an express and a revolver. These little precautions will at least give you time to turn. You and as he rose from his knees the thick, muffied voice of Hummil cried in the doorway, "You fool!"

Such tones they use who speak in the fucid intervals of delirium to their friends a little before they die.

Spurstow started, dropping the pistol. Hummil stood in the doorway, rocking with helpiess laughter.

"That was awil'y good of you, I'm sure," very slowly, feeling for his words. "I don't intend to go out by my own hand at present. I say, Spurstow that stuff work work. What shall I do?" And panic terror stood in his eyes.

"Ide down and give it a change. Lie down at once."

"I daren't. It will only take me half way again, and I shan't be able to get away this time. Do you know, it was all I could do to come out just now? Generally I am as quick as lightning. but you had clogged my feet. I was nearly caught."

"As a sponge wipes a slate clean, so some power unknown to Spurstow had wiped out of Hummil's face all that stamped it for the face of a man, and he stood at the doorway in the expression of his lost innocence. He had slept back into terrified childhood.

"Is he going to die on the spot?" thought Spurstow. Then, aloud, "All right, my son. Come fack to bed and tell me all about it. You couldn't sleep, but what was all the expre
