Some Interesting Facts About Carpets..

E cannot say positively that we are not from time to time undersold in the Carpet business, in fact we have had people come to our store and say that they sould buy as good a Carpet some place else for less money. We investigate such cares often, and find that it is a similar style of Carpet, but in no way compared with what we were offering. We think the secret of our success in this department can be attributed to the fact that only the reliable and well tried makes find their way to our shelves. Jno. Crossley & Son's Carpets are known the world over for their elegant patterns and fine wearing qualities. You can buy these Carpets here for the same price as you will pay elsewhere for the unknown, unreliable kinds.

Men's and Women's Winter Underwear

mmmmm There is opportunity for much dicipline in the selling of Underwear. It is frequently made to look well, though it does not wear well. KINGSTON'S BRIBE

Gove ment Buys the Locomotive Works There

And is Starting Work in Them To-day -A Costly Piece of Corruption.

Montreal, Nov. 7.—On the eve of election the Government has made a coup with which it is hoped to capture Kingston. The Kingston locomotive works, which have been closed for many months, and which formerly employed 400 hands, have been purchased from the Bank of Montreal for $75,000. Hon, Wm. Harty has been in town for several days negotiating the deal, and several days ago offered $65,000 for the works. The bank refused to sell for a cent less than $75,000, and that cash down. Mr. Harty waited until yesterday afternoon, and finally agreed to pay the amount, and did so. Immediately afterwards he went to the long-distance telephone and notified Kingston. He gave instructions to have the fires started. He stated that he had an order from Mr. Blair for twenty locomotives. The Liberals think this will be enough to buy Kingston.

Liberals think this will be enough to buy Kingston.

It remains for the electors of Canada to show whether they can be bribed with their own money or not. The Kingston works would not have been compelled to shut down had Mr. Blair given the concern orders between elections. He then gave the order to American locomotive works.

The gubernatorial tickets have apparently followed the national , and elected in New York, and Yates in Illinois.

NEW YORK'S SURPRISE.

The election returns received up to idnight, while very incomplete from many states, show pretty definitely that the election has been a landslide for McKimiey, and that his plurality will be larger than in 1896. New York on which the Democrats placed such great hope, went for McKinley by 150,000; while the city was conceded to Bryan early in the evening, and the returns thus far show that he carried the city by about 25,000; his gain there was not nearly enough to offset the vote given McKinley throughout the state. The election was quiet in the city and state. Odell has been elected governor over Stanchfield by at least 35,000.

In Illimois, where Bryan was expected to show up strong, McKinley made a surprising run, heating out the Democratic candidate, according to an estimate, based on about half the returns, by about 20,000. McKinley also has a big majority in Cook County. Alsehuler, Democratic candidate congovernor, is ahead of Yates, Rejustive the slight about 11 to 11 but the slight plurality does not incate any decisive result. In Ste inson's home precinct in Blooming on, McKinley was given 306 votes and Bry-

The returns from Indiana are very meagre, but they indicate that while the Democrats have made gains the state has gone for McKimley. Ohio's yote has gone largely for McKinley, but the returns are slow, and his plurality cannot be estimated. Cincinnati has given him a plurality of 15,000. AT BRYAN'S OWN HOME.

Nebraska, Bryan's home state, it is believed, will go for McKinley by 4,000. In Bryan's own precinct in Lincoln, McKinley was given over 100 more votes than the Democratic can-Kentucky, according to slight re-Massachussetts has gone for McKinley by a good margin, although Bryan carried the city of Boston.

Returns from the western states are very meagre. Those thus far received show McKinley slightly ahead in California, Washington and Oregon. Some of the statements by different leaders are as follows: { \(\lambda \) \(\lambda national committee—I cannot predict the result. The returns are so insufficient as to preclude all possibility of good guess. The figures from New York indicate that the Republicans have carried the state, and I see that they are claiming Maryland and Ohio. The former claim may be right, but I am unable to say as to Ohio, for the reason that we do not yet know how the vote stands. The full returns will be late in coming in and they may make some surprising changes from present apparent stand.

National Committeeman Joseph Manley—The reports at headquarters show that President McKinley is reelected by an electoral vote larger than he received in 1896. New England, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, West Virginia, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, North Dakots, and South Dakota, are all in the Republican column.

Treasurer Cornelius N. Bliss of the national Republican committee—Mc-Kinley and Roosevelt are unquestionably elected by a much larger electoral vote than McKinley received four years ago. New York will give at least 125,000 plurality for the national ticket, Illinois 100,000. New Jersey over 40,000, and Maryland from 8,000 to 10,000. Odell's election as governor is 10,000. The Standard says: "There can be no reasonable doubt that President McKinley has been re-elected. The isolated case of tumult should serve only to emphasize the admirable spirit and common citizenship with which the people of the republic play their part in the engrossing struggle for masters. It is significant that racial animosity was the cause of the conflicts."

The Standard goes on to express the frankest satisfaction over the success of Mr. McKinley; adding:—"This success insures the continuance of stability in money matters and no change in the foreign policy of the United States. The triumph of Mr. Bryan would have been felt everywhere as heralding a sharp reversal of the policy, fear of which has made the United States a powerful member of the family of nations. THE RAPID RISE OF CHAS. M. HAY

Sauthern Pacific financiers have at length found a president for their corporation. Charles M. Hays, general manager of the Grand Trunk railway, is their choice, and will be formally elected to succeed the late C. P. Huntington by the board of directors this

Like his predecessor, Hays has risen to this important post through his own capacity and grit. The former came into the world the son of an itinerant tinker, and from farm hand and country pediar became the railroad king of the new world. The latter, an lilinois boy, has fought his way upward in railroad service from a place at $4 week to the head of a great system, at a salary equal to that of the president of the United States. And Hays is a young man

He leaves a most prominent position in the railway world of Ganada to aecept Huntington's vacant chair. As general manager of the Grand Trunk his duties have been those that fall on the shoulders of the president in the service of American roads. Hays lives in Montreal. May 16, 1856, Charles M. Hayes was born in Rock Island, Ill. When only 17 years old, he entered the services of the Atlantic and Pacific Railway Co. as a brakeman, it is said. Four months after getting this employment he was invested with a small clerkship in the office of the general superintendent of the road.

Young Hays may have spent spare moments in dreams of a glorious career, but he certainly spent his working hours in doing real work. He applied himself with all his energy to learning what he could about the railway business. When he had barely attained his majority he was made secretary to the general manager of the Missouri Pacific. April 1, 1884, he left the Missouri Pacific to become secretary to the general manager of the old Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific road, and a year and a half later, when only in his thirtieth year, he found himself the assistant general manager of the road. Hays built up a name for himself as one of the most energetic railroad men of the country. It was announced in the fall of 1895 that he was to become general manager of the Grand Trunk at a salary of $10,000 a year.

THE RACE OF RACES.

In a speech before the Statistical Society of Manchester, England, Sir Robert Giffen, who breathes figures and lives by them, formulated an interesting theory of the future of the great races which are now competing for the possession of the earth. He was very much struck by the fact that the European nations and those founded by European races, like the United States, had advanced in population during the century now closing from about 170,000,000 to something like 500 000,000, while the yellow and other races had stood comparatively still. He ascribed to the United States about 80,000,000; to Russia about 135,000,-000; to Germany, about 55,000,000; to the United Kingdom and the self-governing colonies of Canada and Australia, and the white population of South Africa, 55,000,000; to Austria-Hungary, 45,000,000; to France, 40,-000,000; to Italy, 32,000,000; to Spain and Portugal, 25,000,000; to the Scandinavian countries, 10,000,000; to Holland and Belgium, 10,000,000; and to other European countries, 20,000,000. The wealth of the white races had increased even more rapidly. At the beginning of the century it could not be reckoned at more than five billions of pounds sterling, while to-day it amounts to many tens of thousands of

The advance, both in population and billions. wealth, has been marked by great unevenness as between the different nations. A hundred years ago the united population of Great Britain and Ireland and the United States did not exceed 20,000,000; to-day it reaches 130,-000,000, an increase of more than 500 per cent. Russia and Germany had also advanced enormously, especially Russia. France and the French race had hardly doubled, while the other Latin countries had made little advance. But, it was the aggregate increase of the European races as a whole, compared with the comparatively stationary position of the colored races, that struck Sir Robert Giffen as having peculiar significance. Should the rate of increase be sustained during the twentieth century, and he sees no reason why it should not, the European races will have attained an aggregate in another hundred years of something between 1,500 and 2000 millions. "The black and yellow races still remaining comparatively stationary, as far as one could sez, this would make a greatly changel world. What would be the 400,000,-000 of Chinese compared to the 1,500 or 2,000 millions of the European races The yellow peril, for instance, of which we have heard so much, would have vanished, because the yellow races themselves would be so much outnumbered."

Some newspapers will keep fighting the election campaign for a month yet. The Planet is not one of them. It will now devote itself to news, and incidentally it wishes to remind the business public that it is still the leading advertising medium west of Toronto.

The reception to the returned To ronto volunteers must have reminded them of a South African battlefield. The casualties numbered two killed and two injured. | Eliza Ma gee, aged 70, was knocked down by a buggy, and instantly killed; Jennie Theckel, aged 18, was struck on the head by a falling board and her skull was fractured. She d'ed later. Ged. Shaughnessy fell from the roof of the armory and had both legs broken and was injured internally. He will die. Charles Taylor, assistant chef of the Queen's hotel, had his hand completely blown off by a giant firecracker.

A PRISONER OF WAR.

Minneapolis Man Has Been on Parole Thirty-five Years. The civil war was over long ago, in spite of the friendship between the north and the south the prisoners of war have not been all released. There still lives in Minneapolis one man who has been on parole for the past 35 years and who is still a prisoner of war as much as when he first reported to the prevost at Fort Snelling. many years ago, as far as release is concerned. Colonel Platt B. Walker, one of the old citizens of Minneapolis, came to this part of the country as a prisoner of war, with orders to report to the provost at Fort Snelling, says the Minneapolis Tribune. "I was one of the last Confederate officers to give up my toad sticker." says Mr. Walker, speaking of his experience. "When there was that wonderful gathering of armies in the corner of Texas, Louis and Arkansas, was among the troops. We had been driven back step by step from Missouri, and there on that memorable morning the whole army was to elect whether they were to surrender and go home or stay and oe driven back until we joined Maximilian in Mexico. It was wonderful sight to see, the separation. On the hills at one side gathered those who were to surrender, on the other those who were off for Mexico. I was among the latter.

"We went along through Texas until about 20 miles from the Rio Grande, when I was overcome from a wound and I never knew anything for 28 days. "I awoke to find myself in a shanty, where I had been cared for, and there one morning, through a pillar of dust that approached through the chapar ral. Captain Glenn and a detachment of Ohio cavalry captured me. I was sent from there in a broken down rattletrap of a stage 30 miles, and finally I went to Rock Island in the prison there and finally to Fort Snelling. 1 didn't know whether I was to be hung or imprisoned for life, but when I arrived the officer shook me by the hand and turned me loose on parole, and I was issued three rations for eight months.

"I staid here, of course, because was a prisoner, and I never got any further orders. I gave my parole, and lakept it. That's all there is to it. I am here yet, but I guess they have forgotten all about me and the parole gave.'

How Russia Corners Sugar. Each year the minister of finance fixes the amount of sugar which shall be produced in the empire and sets the price at which it shall be sold. The average domestic consumption is about 1,000,000,000 pounds. This is announce ed as the legal limit of production which shall be put upon the market during the year. In addition to this it is allowed to manufacture 180,000,000 pounds more, which is placed in storage. The 1.000,000,000 pounds, as it is sold, pays an excise tax of 21/2 cents a

If at any time, through increased demand, sugar becomes worth more than the price fixed by the government, the 180,000,000 pounds in reserve is allow ed to reach the market free of exci duty. If this does not supply the market at the legal price, the government itself will buy from foreign countries enough sugar to supply the need for a bear influence upon the price. This has been done by Russia twice during the past ten years. This system, of course, precludes any export business in sugar, but the Russian government does not believe that the exporting of sugar from Russia can be made profitable or advisable, so it does not encourage It.

What Kansas City (Kan.) Wants. A tannery, shoe factory, bristle brush factory, paper mill, cellulose factory condensed milk factory and a modern hotel are some of the things that Kansas City, Kan., wants built in that town and for which its people are holding out to the investors of capital the most liberal inducements. The mercantile club has sent 10,000 circulars broadcast over the country calling attention to the needs of the city at the mouth of the Kaw and extending a welcome to the holders of money to come and investigate the inducements that are offered for the investment of capital in her institutions. There are in Kansas City, Kan., many acres of vacant land suitable for factory sites that is nearer the manufacturing center than any other property that is available, and the cheapness of it is the most inviting thing that is held out to the people who are seeking a place to put their money. Within the next four years Kansas City, Kan., hopes to cover these idle acres with a forest of smokestacks and to add more greatness to the greatest city in Kansas.

Two Forms of Tin. Readers who are not familiar with recent work in physical chemistry, says Science, may be interested to earn that many solid substances are now known to have two or more forms or phases. For instance, it has very recently been ascertained that metallic tin may exist, either as a gray crystalline powder or in the well known form under which it possesses both luster and ductility. At a particular temper-ature both forms may coexist; above that temperature only the ordinary form is stable and below that temperature only the powdery form.

Money Weight. Money is measured by troy weight, in which 24 grains make a pennyweight, 20 pennyweights one ounce and 12 ounces one pound. The silver dollar weighs 412½ grains, and $1,000, as near as it can be expressed intelligently in print, weighs 71.614 pounds, or a fraction over 71½ pounds. In avoirdupois the same would weigh 58.928 or nearly 50 pounds.

A GIGANTIC WORK.

THE UNDERGROUND RAILROAD IN NEW YORK.

This is the Main Artery-Enormous Ob

The work of constructing the great underground railroad for New York city will soon be well under way. The contract has been let for $35,000,000, and sub-contracts will soon be award-Work will be commenced at many points along the line, and 10,000 men will be employed for three years. Great as the undertaking is, in reality it marks only the beginning of a gigantic system of improved transit which New York city is bound to attain. It will be the main artery of the system, but its branches will reach out in all directions, binding together closer than ever the several boroughs of the city and making quick interchange of traffic possible.

While tunneling will enter largely into the construction of the Rapid Transit Railroad, it is not correct to term the entire enterprise a tunnel. It will be a subway, not a tunnel. Throughout the greater part of the right of way the excavations will be made from the surface down, what is called technically "cut and cover work." In other words, the contractors will have to rip up the streets incidental to more than one-half of their undertaking. Generally speaking, the roof of the subway will be as near the surface as possible, the road beds following closely to street grade to avoid cutting deeper than would be required otherwise. It will be cut and cover work from the lower terminus of the line at the post office loop to Thirty-second street. There the line dips under Murray Hill through solid rock, involving tunneling for eight blocks to Fortieth street. From Fortieth street to Broadway and 108th street it will be cut and cover, and from the last named point to 121st streef, under Broadway, the tunnelers will make the route. There are a few other short stretches in the West Side line where some tunnel work will be required, notably at Fort George.

East Side Line. The East Side line turns from the main line at 103d street, its tracks running down a gradual depression to 104th street, where they turn east under the tracks of the West Side line. Thence their course will be under Central Park, all tunnel work, to Lenox avenue and 110th street. From there to the Harlem river at 143d street the contractors will work in the open. The tunnel under the Harlem will be cut in accordance with the provisions of the law covering that point, which require that the roof of the tunnel shall be twenty-one feet below low-water mark. The cut and cover process con-tinues on the other side of the river to 149th street, past Third avenue and in-to Westchester avenue, where the line emerges and runs over elevated structures to Bronx Park. Viaducts, or elevated structures, will also be used at several points of the West Side line. The most prominent of these will span the steep grades of Broadway, converging at 125th street. The general idea for the subway is to prepare it with a concrete floor with steel columns at the sides and centre every five feet, the roof girders resting on them and the spaces between and behind them in the walls filled with concrete and brick. The roof is to be built of concrete, with arches between and in varying thickness, according to the conditions, above the beams. In all cases the roof and sides will be water-proofed, and wherever water is found in the ground the concrete floor will have a waterproof layer to insure a perfectly dry structure. Many difficulties will have to be overcome to attain that result, but all have been taken into consideration and have been provided for by Chief Engineer Parsons.

It will be impossible for Mr. Mc-Donald to sublet the work on a basi of bare money values, contracted for in advance. In a tremendous under-taking of this kind changes of plans ere certain as unexpected obstacles arise. On a cold basis of dollars and cents such obstacles would lead to frequent friction and delay. Therefore, the great contractor will deal only the experience needed, but the capital to carry out their contracts as well, come what will.

In some places the constructors of the underground line will have to work in water. At Canal street, for nstance, the depth of the water in the proposed ditch would be ten feet. Other obstacles will be encountered when the great hole is dug for the double-decked terminal loop in front of the post office. The lower floor will be forty feet below the street surface, and it is probable that extensive piling will be needed to provide the proper best known and most experienced en-gineers and contractors, said: 'The easiest part of the work will be the tunneling through the .ock in the several sections specified. The men employed in that work find no conflicting interests to obstruct their speedy progress. It is practically all blasting. In cutting the tunnels for the new subway, the engineers in charge will start the work in two ways. One is from portals cut into hillsides at the desired levels, and the other is from shafts sunk from the surface of the higher grades. In both cases the method of blasting will be the same. Having determined the dimensions of the hole to be cut, which in this case will be thirty feet wide and twenty feet high, a gallery or heading at the top is prepared by the blasters from which to operate with drills on the greater mass. The headings will be about seven feet high and eight to ten feet wide, and will be carried ahead about 100 feet of where the excavation is being made the full size of the tun-

THE CHAPMAN DAME PLANET

"To start a heading a V-shaped cut is first made by drilling six holes with two sets of drills about three feet apart, and placed at such angles that the holes cut meet at a triangle point. They are charged with high explosives and discharged simultaneously, forc-ing out the shattered rock and leaving the V-shaped cut, three to four feet deep, in the rock. Then two rows of holes, four each, are drilled straight into the rock at either side of the heading. These are charged and ex-ploded, the blast squaring off the en-tire cut to the depth of the V-shaped cut first made. The whole operation is repeated until that particular section of tunnel is completed Bench and Heading. "Once the heading has reached the proper length, another gang, larger in numbers than the first, occupies the cleared floor space of the heading. They drill downward at all angles to the limits of the prescribed mer ments. In the meantime the workers at the heading are cutting it further into the mass, so that the work on the bench, as the full clearing is called technically, and the work on the heading proceeds continuously and simultaneously. Thus the progress is rapid, an advance of 125 lineal feet a month being the average. The shattered fragments are removed by cars promptly after each blast to the portal or shaft, as the case may be, and carted away for other uses. It is a sin-gular thing that in blasting the inner end of the charge never shatters the rock to the full depth. It is like powder in a gun in that respect. For that reason the cuts are always about two feet short of the length of charged Blasters have given this unexploded bit the technical name 'gun' because of the similarity.

The Greatest Difficulty. "The greatest difficulties to be overcome in carrying out the contract will be found in the open or cut and cover work in places where surface traffic is congested and where large buildings are close by, if the ground happens to be bad. In such cases provision will have to be made for the accommo tion of the traffic and the protection of the buildings. This will be true par-ticularly in Park row, Forty-second street, Broadway and several other points. There are two ways by which these troubles may be alleviated. One is to work only one-half the width of any such thoroughfare at a time, leav ing the other half for the use of traf-In upper Broadway the contrac tors may brace the trolley structure up on supports while cutting out their fifty-foot subway beneath, or they may move the tracks and all their belongings to the extreme sides of the roadway. The latter plan is undoubtedly the better, because it would leave the work clear, and working directly under the powerful electric current used for propelling the cars would subject the men to constant danger. All these considerations are understood thoroughly by the men at the helm, and the work will go on with the least possible friction. There is more good ground to work in than

"In digging up the streets, the pavement, soil and refuse will have to be removed immediately by cart or car for final disposition. In almost every instance the workmen will uncover sewers, water and gas pipes, electric wire conduits of many kinds and sim-ilar ducts that have been placed under the street surface from time to time. All these will be in the way of the workmen.

Different Conduits. "The pipes and conduits involve dif-ferent conditions. They are near the surface, as a rule, and cannot be disturbed. They will have to be propped up or suspended from crossbars or beams by chains while the rapid transit men are at work. It's Your Nerves.

It's the Condition of Your Nerves That Either Makes Your Life a Round of Pleasure or a Useless Burden.

To many women life is one round of sickness, weakness and ill health. To attempt even the lightest household duties fatigues them. Many of the symptoms accompanying this state of decline are: a feeling of tiredness waking, faintness, dizziness, sinking feeling, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath, loss of appetite, cold hands and feet, headache, dark circles under the eyes, pain in the back and side and all other accompaniments of a run down and weakene decastitution.

All these symptoms and conditions are simply the result of a poor qual-ity and defective circulation of the blood, with a wasting away of the

The Art Seems New to be Almost at Its Height.

Being photographed nowadays is an alaborate process. Herefore, when a woman wanted her photograph taken, she went to the studio and arranged about the size of the picture and the rumber she wented. She gave a ressuring touch to her hair, sat down before the camera, turned her head a little to the right or to the left, as the srist desired, and, clamped on either smple, gazed fixedly, instpidly or etherwise, at a spot on the wall. Now the subject's "possibilities" are studied in detail. Nothing is left to accident. The fashionable woman carries her various gowns to the studio with her, and tries them on, each in turn, that the artist may decide which suits her best. She pays $50 for the photographs. Her hair is arranged. photographs. Her hair is arranged by skillful hands in different ways. that a style of colffure may be cho which will be appropriate, not only to the contour of her face and head to the contour of her face and head, but to the environments of the picture. The subject's hands and neck, to see whether a severe high costume or an evening gown shall be used. The tepics of backgrounds and accessories are discussed. All of these tinted carbon photographs are taken full length. Maybe the subject will pose as a dame of the first empire, with skimpy satin gown, elaborate coffure, feweled girdle, fan and vinaigrette. Perhaps she stands half turned about with her back to the spectator, and with her back to the spectator, and her pure profile deftly brought out on a dark velvet curtain. All women would not look charming in such a position. The artist knows whom to position. The artist knows whom to shoose, and the subject will wonder at her own beauty when she sees the picture. A willful, coquettish girl is posed as a modern Priscilla. The quaint spinning wheel and high backed chair, the small-paned window at the back of the colonial room, form a should be seen that the second of the colonial room, form a cade gown and beaming face. The scant, puffed sleeves, set on the rounded arms, the curve of the wrist. the hand that grasps the wheel is like the hand that grasps the wheel is like a rare old painting, and the undulating outlines of the figure are suggested, not revealed, by the prim folds of the flowered silk frock. These latterday photographs are like paintings, and are likely never to grow old fashiomed. They have the charm that distinguished the portrait painters of the old English school; a charm that custom will not stale. They will not become out of date and grotesque, life the photographs of twenty years ago, the photographs of twenty years ago, found in family albums. In those days woman was hired to put the lights

THE VOTING TO-DAY.

every vote count. The contest was sharp and keen, but for the most part good-natured. When a Liberal rig quietly smile and vice versa. A slight indication of how readily the electors were marking their ballots may be gleaned from the work done at Older-from the time of opening 29 votes had been cast, and J. L. Weir, who has scrutingered there for the Liberals for many an election, said that he never saw them come so lively. Enquiry at the other polling sub-divisions re-vealed the same eagerness to vote.

HOW GILLETTE GOT STARTED.

Early Days of the Famous Actor and "When Gillette had graduated from the public school and from the high school at Hartford," says Richard Duff in Ainslee's, "his family wished to send him to Yale. But Gillette looked on his future

" 'I had got the fever to go away from home and swim out, he said, in alluding to this period. 'I suppose everybody gets it some time. Of course I thought I should go on the stage, although I did not see my way clear just then. My father let me have my way. He liked oratory work mach and grocks well when he need. very much and spoke well when he needed to, though he was rather a silent man. "I remember the day he drove me down to the station. He had taken two of my brothers on the same errand before me. One went to California and died there. The other was killed in the war. "William," he said, "you're the third son I've driven to the train like this.
The others have never come home. I trust you will prove an exception."

"I went to St. Louis—just as far as my money would take me—and I got my first job because I told the man I didn't want any salary, only the job." of my brothers on the same errand want any salary, only the job."

"That's the way Mark Twain secured "That's the way Mark Twain secured his first job as a compositor. It seems to be a good way—if you don't hold the job too long. Gillette had this view, and he did his best meanwhile to work his way behind the scenes. There was no opportunity in St. Louis, he soon found, and he drifted away till he reached New Orleans. After he had persistently annoyed the manager of the stock company at the St. Charles theater he was allowed to play utility parts and supes. lowed to play utility parts and supes. The manager saw no way out of it except by resigning.

"My greatest disadvantage in those days was my height. I was so tall be side the average actor they couldn't place me. I got frightfully discouraged after me. I got frightfully discouraged after awhile, and I wrote a vaudeville sketch for myself in the belief that I would have to quit the legitimate. The very first part I played was an Indian. It was in a play Oliver Doud Byron brought to the St. Charles. Two years later in Cincinnati, when I was in Macauley's stock company, he came there in the stock company, he came there in the same play. Some other infernally tall man had the Indian then. I chaffed Byron about his playing the same old part while I had made some progress in wo years.

"But directly after I left New Orleans I came to New York and got "foreman of the jury" in John T. Raymond's run of "Colonel Seilers" at the Park the ater. The part consisted of the lines, "We have" and "Not guilty." I said them a whole season and got $10 a week for doing it. At the same time I was taking a scientific course at the University of New York.' The next season Gillette did much better. He got the district attorney in the Union Square run of 'Colonel Sellers.' The part gave him opportunities by which he profited. People began to know he was on the stage. After that he went to the Globe theater in Boston, where he played purposens small roles. where he played numerous small roles and character 'bits.' He spent his spare and character bits. He spent his spart time in taking a special course at the Institute of Technology. His next jumg was to Macauley's stock company at Cin-cinnati, and here after two years of drudgery he got that chance for which every actor and astress not yet arrived hopes and prays for with every breath drawn. It is to have a full house, a fat part and to grip both. Every eye in the and gesture. Every ear is strained to catch your lines. Every line you say takes, and when the scene comes—the great scene that is yours—you hold them in your power, fascinated. Then you free them to clap, to stamp, to shout, to whistle maniacally, which is their gratitude for the anguish you have laid on their hearts. Gillette's moment came entirely by accident.

"'Macauley himself played the part. he said, referring to that night, but he fell ill, and it was given to me. The play was from the French and I believe was called "The Mother's Secret." The piece called "The Mother's Secret. The picts was being done at the same time at the Union Square in New York. The part was a good one and just in my line. The people seemed to like the way I did it, and from the after developments it looked as though I had made my first real much as I had expected. You see, I had been working all that season on my first play, "The Professor," and it was finished just about the same time. I did not track do anything for the next two years. try to do anything for the next two years except to get "The Professor" put on. And I had plenty to do, I assure you. Finally "The Professor" was produced at the Madison Square theater June 1, 1882. It ran for six months." It ran for six months."

Proof positive is arrived at in various ways. One method is pleasantly described by a foreign correspondent of The Ar

Not far from the barbor of Naples we sighted a rocky islet apparently about two miles offshore. An elderly man ap-proached me on deck and said politely:

"Do you know whether this is Mount Vesuvius or not?"
I replied with equal politeriess, "I don't know what it is, but I do know that it is not Vesuvius."
"But," said he with an air of triumph, "if you don't know what it is, how do you know that it isn't Vesuvius?" "Because," I replied, pinning him with my glittering eye, "because Vesuvius is inland and this is outland; because this rock is three miles round and Vesuvius is about 30 miles round; because this is an island and Vesuvius is not, and because Vesuvius is a volcano and this is not." The elderly man sniffed and withdrew.

A few weeks ago a young lad presented himself at the shop of a local butcher and when the burly proprietor appeared gave a small order.

"You don't buy so much meat now as you used to," remarked the butcher.

"No," responded the lad, "and it's because father has become a vegetarian."

"Well, my lad," came the grave restart "ever give your dad warning from tort, "you give your dad warning from me that, as a rule, wegitarians come to s wiolent end. Take a bullock—'e's a wegi tarian. Wot's the result? Why, 'e's cut off sudden in 'is wery prime."—London Standard.

"I wonder your lordship remains."

The earl shrugged his shoulders

"It is not so easy leaving it as you think, Mr. Ormiston; but I am to turn my back to it to-morrow for a brief period. You are aware, I suppose that the court leaves before pose, that the court leaves before daybreak for Oxford?"

"I believe I have heard something of it-how long to remain?" Till Charles takes it into his head

'No, my lord, I think she is not I left her, safe and secure." "Who is she, Ormiston?" coaxed the earl, laughingly. 'Pshaw, man! don't make a mountain out of a mole-hill. Tell me her name." "Her name is Leoline."

"I beg your pardon, my lord, I said no such thing. I told you she had escaped from her friends, which was strictly true."
"Then how the demon had you the impudence to come up and carry her off in that style? I certainly had a

I should think you ought to know her name, since you and he are noted for being the modern Damon and Probably I should, my lord, only Pythias.

Sir Norman, unfortunately, does not know himself."
The earl's countenance looked so utterly blank at this announcement that Ormiston was forced to throw in a word of explanation.

"I mean, my lord, that he has fallen in love with her, and, judging from appearances, I should say his flame is not altogether hopeless, although they have met to-night the first time."

"A rapid passion. Where have you left her, Ormiston?" "In her own house, my lord," Ormiston replied, smiling quietly to

"And you left her there alone?"
exclaimed the earl, half starting up, as if about to order the boatman to row back to the landing.

Ormiston looked at his excited face with a glance of quiet malice. 'No, my lord, not quite; Sir Norman Kingsley was with her."

"Oh!" said the earl, falling back with a look of chagrin. "Then he will probably find out her name before he comes away. I wonder you could give her up so easily to him, after all your trouble.'

"Smitten, my lord?" inquired Ormiston, maliciously.

"Hopelessly!" replied the earl with a deep sigh. She was a per-fect little beauty; and if I can find her, I warn Sir Norman Kingsley to take care. I have already sent Hubert out in search of her; and by the way," said the earl, with a sudden increase of animation, "what a wonderful resemtlance she bears to Hubert-I could almost swear they were one and the same."

The earl sank back into his former nonchalant position, and fell for a moment or two into deep musing and then, as if the whole thing had struck him in a new and ludicrous light, he broke out into an immoderate fit of laughter. Ormiston looked at him curiously.

"It is my turn to ask questions, Who is Count L'Esmy lord.

"I know of no such person, Ormiston. I was thinking of something else. Was it Leoline who told you that was her lover's name?" "No; I heard it by mere accident from another person. I am sure if

The barge touched the stairs and Ormiston sprang out, with a "Good-night" to the earl. The rain was falling now in torrents, and he ran upstairs and darted into the archway of the bridge, to seek the shelter. Someone else had come there before him, in search of the same thing, for he saw two figures with-

Ormiston had heard that voice before; it was associated in his mind with a slouched hat and a shadowy cloak; and by the fast-fading flicker of the firelight, he saw both were here. The speaker was Count L'Es-

"I presume so. I have heard nothing to the contrary."

"She may be now. Sir Norman Kingsley was with her when I left her," said Ormiston, administering the fact with infinite relish.

UNDER SIXTY FEET OF ICE.

BY M. QUAD.

COPYRIGHT, 1900, BY C. B. LEWIS. * Cherry island lies 1,400 miles directly north of Sweden and is the dividing line between the Greenland and the Barents' seas. A line drawn from east to west would strike Nova Zembla on the one end and Hudson's Land on the other. There are about 60 days in the year when the island enjoys the heat and the verdure of summer, but during the remainder there are such cold and bleakness and loneliness as man can find nowhere else outside of the north pole itself. In the deep, dark ravines the earth has never thawed since frozen tens of thousands of years ago, and on the north side are blocks of ice which were cast up there when the Creator was seeking to bring order out of chaos. In the year 1860 an English scientific society atted out what was known as the Cherry island expedition. It was purely in the interest of natural history. Certain fish and birds which had become extinct in the south were still to be found up there, according to the reports of whalers, and that was the object in fitting out the brig Albatross for a voyage from London. Aside from a strong handed crew, three professors and four or five students accompanied the expedition, and after a voyage almost without event we reached Cherry island soon after the beginning of its brief summer. The last 200 miles of our run was made through field ice, with giant icebergs to be seen on every hand, and we found a great length of shore piled high with blocks of ice from 5 to 25 feet thick. It was a three days' job to warp the brig rato a safe anchorage on the south side of the island, and when we had her secure most of the people went ashore to live for a time in tents. Notwithstanding the sunshine and verdure, there was a loneliness about the place to make one afraid. We had expected to find polar bears and rabbits in plenty, but there was not a bit of animal life, excepting a few stray seals, to be encountered. Birds there were in plenty, however, and of the species desired, while fish of all sorts were to be had for the casting of a hook. Each professor had his work cut out for him, and I was attached to Professor John Saunders of the Royal museum as a belper. He was after birds and their eggs, and when we had been on the island a week I helped him to capture a specimen of the great auk, which species was supposed to have been extinct for a quarter of a century past. But three of these birds were seen during our stay of 40 days, and we took one away with us into a captivity which lasted for ten years. It was said that the capture of this bird alone was worth more to natural history than the cost of the expedition.

The Island, which is of volcanic origin, is a mere jumble of rocks. It is 11 miles long by 5 in breadth and at the time of our visit had no tree higher than ten feet. These grew between bowlders and on the slopes, with patches of coarse grass all about, but there was not a level spot half an acre in extent on the whole island. It was intersected in every direction by ravines, some shallow and some of awful depth, and during a storm, when the surf was bringing in great blocks of ice and heaving them upon the rocks. there were rumblings and echoes in those dark ravines to make a man pale with fear. We had been on the island about 30 days and had pretty thoroughly explored it when Professor Saunders and my humble self met with an accident one day which led to a most strange discovery. We had set off together on a hunt after birds' eggs, and in walking along a slope we struck & spot overgrown with a short green weed. As we walked over this bed we suddenly found ourselves slipping. There was water under it, and the whole mass gave way and sent us sliding into a ravine. We went slipping, sliding, clutching and bumping a full 50 feet before we brought up, but nelther of us was burt beyond a few bruises. Owing to the wet grass we could not clamber out at that spot and so continued on down the ravine. Having presently come upon a few bones, which the professor pronounced as belonging to a polar bear, we decided to follow the ravine to its mouth It led almost north and south. It was dry now, but there were times when it must have been filled with water from bank to bank. It was a tollsome journey we made, but it ended at last at a wall of ice within half a mile of the surf. At that point the depth of the ravine was about 100 feet, and, though the sun was shining above, it was like evening down there. A few yards before we were brought to a standstill we found the body of a man lying against the wall of rock on the right hand side and ten feet above our heads. It was caught and held fast on a point of rock. We were both a good deal startled by the grewsome sight, and had it been a portant work as scavengers.

sailor with me I know I should have taken to my beels. "We have a mystery here, and must solve it," said the professor as he recovered from his surprise. "Let us get the body down and make an investiga-

It was neither a body nor a skeleton The cold had preserved the flesh to a certain extent, but the action of the water running down the ravine had also worn it away. The face was well preserved, and the hair was as firm as in life. It was the remains of a man who had weighed perhaps 160 pounds, but I had no difficulty in detaching it from the rock and lowering it down. What remained of the clothing proved that the man had either been a fisherman or a sailor, but his nationality could only be guessed at. "At some time or other," said the professor as he looked about, "this ravine has been a creek of considerable size flowing down to the sea. This man came up the creek from the beach, but we now find a wall of ice blocking it up. The ice has formed since he came. There should be a boat frozen up in the wall between us and the We had nothing to make a torch of, and, retracing our steps to a point where we could climb out of the ravine, we left the mystery to be solved another day. There was much discussion around the campfires that evening, and early next morning we set out to see if the ravine had once upon a time opened to the sea. We found that it had. Its mouth had been in a small bay, but a storm had filled it with bowlders and dammed back the waters flowing down. Between the sea and the spot where we found the body the ice was from 50 to 70 feet thick. If the sun melted it for a few feet in the summer, the rains and snows of winter speedily replaced what had been lost. We found this ice as clear as glass and as hard as iron, but powder was brought from the brig, and holes were drilled, and in a couple of days we had blasted out great rift to half its depth. Everybody had a suspicion of what was frozen in down there, but yet the discovery gave us a shock. When but 30 feet of ice lay between us and the bottom of the ravine we could see through it well enough to make out the hull of a ship standing on an even keel. It was the hull of a brig, with masts gone, but otherwise intact. We could even make out the ropes which had been frozen stiff as iron while they streamed along her decks, but there were no bodies of dead men in To blast out the remaining sight. depths of ice and clear the ravine was a task requiring more aid than we could spare and more powder than we had aboard. We had to be content with what we could see.

Years before-perhaps half a century -a merchant vessel had made that little bay in distress. Wave and tide had carried her up to the creek, and wave and tide had blocked her exit. Then she began to freeze in. No man can say how long it took for the ice to bury her until it was a solid mass 60 feet above her decks, but decades must have passed. If one of her crew got away up to the ravine why not all of And yet no other body or re mains were to be found on the island. This man, who may have been the captain, probably started out by himself to see if there was a chance of escape, but in making his way up the ravine he perished of cold and hunger. There was scarce a hope for the others. If they left the hulk they were forced to return to it for shelter and food. There came a day when food and fuel were exhausted, when avalanches of snow covered the decks and the cold of winter froze the marrow of their bones and they hid away in forecastle and cabin and died with open eyes staring into the darkness. Upon our return to London the case was reported and made much of in the papers, but no government or individual has ever gone farther than we did. A hulk lies there full of dead men-a hulk which sailed the waters of the frozen seas half a century ago, and there it will lie until time is no more and chaos reigns again. It might be blasted out, but of what use? The solving of one mystery of the sea more or less would count for but little.

The Proper Way to Eat.

At a recent meeting of medical mer Dr F. A. Burrall spoke of the amount of mischief done by the very common habit of eating the meals rapidly, according to the farmer's motto of "Quick to eat and quick to work." Therough mastication was of the utmost importance, and of course this presupposed a proper condition of the teeth. Gastric digestion was often weakened and much distress was caused by the ingestion of too much fluid with the food, particularly at the beginning of a meal. Another factor in causing dyspepsia was the habit of eating food in silence or without that mirth and good fellowship so necessary to insure a nervous condition to the normal action of the digestive organs. These little details might seem trite and unimportant, but it was the duty of the careful physiclan to instruct his patients in regard to them. The long continued and free use of digestive agents served to make the digestive organs lazy and inactive. -Medical Record.

THE LAPLACEAN NEBULA.

Hundred and Ninety-one Mill Times Thinner Than "Thin Air."

The famous nebular hypothesis of Laplace, namely that in its primeval condition the so ar system was a globular, rotating mass of gaseous inconveniently high matter at an inconveniently high temperature, and that out of this mass, as it contracted from loss of heat, was slowly evolved the existing planetary system, with its central sun, has lately been attacked by eminent physicists from a number points of vantage. Its case is beginning to look desperate.

First, Helmholtz pointed out—and his views were accepted by the present Lord Kelvin and other eminent physicists—that a mass of gases, such as was supposed, instead of losing heat as it contracted, would grow hotter. Then came the testimony of the spectroscope that, while the actual nebulae found scattered over the heavens owe their faint glow to lustic was a relatively minous gases, they are at a relatively low temperature, and not at all such bodies as were imagined by Laplace. Out of this spectroscopic evidence has come the "meteoritic hypothesis" of Lockyer, according to which the primordial condition of the heavenly bodies was not a hot gas, but an in finitude of discrete, solid particles of matter absolutely without heat.

Professor T. C. Chamberlin of the University of Chicago has lately, to to the Laplace theory, and has found or thinks he has found a number of substantial reasons are instituted. substantial reasons against its valid-ity. Recently Professor Chamberlin and his colaborator, Dr. F. R. Moulton, published in Science a short paper in which they have summarized the conclusions at which they have thus far arrived in this investigation The paper is hardly condensable as a whole into a short space, but one fact, which is mentioned incidentally, may be selected, both as a striking fact in itself and as illustrative of one of the difficulties involved in the the Laplacean hypothesis, namely, excessive tenuity of the supposed nebula. The mass, or to use a more familiar term, the weight of all the matter now constituting the sun and the planets with their satellites is known, and since, according to the hypothesis, the original nebula had had precisely this mass, it can easily be calculated what must have been average density when it filled a globular space having a diameter equa to that of the orbit of the outermost planet, Neptune. The calculation shows that this average density would be one 191,000 millionths of that of water. That is to say, this nebulous matter would be so rarefied that a globular mass of it 700 in diameter would weigh less than one ounce. Air at sea-level atmospheric pressure has one-thousandth the density of water. A globe of air of that size would weigh about 5,000

To the unscientific reader this sin gle fact will tell more against the nebular theory than all other objections put together, for we are required to conceive of a gaseous globe of this excessive average tenuity and, of course, vastly more tenuous in its outer than its inner portion rotating as a rigid sphere.

An Irish Cup of Tea. Irish servants, with all their faults, have many virtues, and the Irish cup of tea is not a bad exponent of the national character as we see it displayed in our kitchen-generous to lavishness, careless to slopiness, and quick-tempered as warm-hearted. A writer in Harper's Bazar says: Coming in tired from a long walk, I went to my room to lie down, and on my way left a message for Mary: "Tell Mary to make me a cup of tea strong, and bring it up-stairs. In the course of time there appeared at my door Mary's round, smiling

"It's an Irish cup of tea I'm bring ing you, ma'am," she said.
"It's a cup flowin' into the saucer

"I laughed as I took the "Irish cup of tea," and Mary stood beside me, smiling while I drank it.
So that's the kind of cup of tea you get at home, Mary, is it-the tea running into the saucer?"

"Oh, yes, ma'am," she said. When ye give a cup of tea to a friend, ye're not givin' plenty unless it's flowin' into the saucer. We'd not be insultin' a friend wid-a cup that wasn't full. At home it's mane ye are if ye don't fill the cup

There is a pretty bit of Irish poetry in this. "A flowin' cup over for a friend."

The Greatest Heat of the Century.

M. Roger, director of the meteoro logical station at Chateaudun, neal Paris, says in a recent number of La Nature, in the course of an article entitled "The Greatest Heat of the Century," that the highest tempera-ture ever recorded near Paris was observed at his station on July 27 served at his station on July 27 of this year, it being 103.6 degrees in the screen. The nearest temperature to this, in the vicinity of Paris, recorded during the last 100 years, was noted at the Montsouris Observatory on the 20th of July of this year, when the mercury stood at 101.5 degrees. At Poitiers in July, 1870, a temperature of 106.2 degrees was recorded. Among the highest temperatures known in or near London are tures known in or near London are 95.2 degrees at Camden Town on July 16 last and 97.2 degrees at Greenwich in July, 1881.

So benign was the religious sys-tem of the Indian that each department of the animal kingdom was provided with a little divinity to look after its affairs. Thus the Spirit of the Great Swan looked after all swans, the Spirit of the Great Turtle controlled all turtledom, and so on through the list, every kind of an animal having its own protecting an animal naving its own protecting spirit to guard its interests and punish its enemies. These divinities—who were under the control of the Great Spirit—felt a great interest in the human race, and any one of them might become the protecting genius of any particular man. Mrs. Joe Sims

The book agent is a student of human nature. He attacks man at his weakest points. What is calculated to minister to a man's vanity more than to have a gentleman, well groomed and of pleasing address, approach and offer to sell him some literary production? The fact that the book agent is there presupposes that the man is a lover of literature, that he has feisure to read books and that he has money to spend for them. The joke about the book agent being unwelcome will have to be relegated along with the mother-in-law joke. The facts will not sustain it. The book agent approaches a man, presents himself and proceeds to business. "I am introducing a new work, Mr. Jones, something that I know you will appreciate." Is Jones going to throw a man out of the third story window who thinks he will appreciate a new book? Not much.

The agent continues; "Mr. Brown suggested that you might like to look it over. He takes a set in half morocco." The fact that Brown thinks it will interest him pleases Jones still more. He The school board met last evening The meeting opened with only Conservatives present, which fact Trustes McCorvie called attention to. The members who made up the quorum were Chairman Wilson, John McCorvie, J. E. Johnston, W. E. Campbell, W. N. Morley and Dr. Bray. Trustees Robertson and Thompson came in later. The passing of the salaries and the re-engaging of the teachers was about all that occupied the attention of the board.

Mr. Johnston moved that a resolution of condolence be passed and a copy sent to the parents of the late Miss Richards, who so faithfully served the board. Mr. McCorvie seconded the motion and it carried unanimously.

A communication was received from the secretary of the St. Thomas board enclosing a resolution passed by that Board. The resolution asked that the minister of education be requested to establish a supplemental examination at Christmas for pupils who had written on the midsummer entrance examination and failed, the few to be $2 or as much more as will cover the expenses of such supple mental examinations. As the number writing would be limited, it was sug gested that the examinations be held only at the county towns. The resolution was referred to the finance ommittes.

The teachers were all re-engaged for the ensuing year. Miss Kate Garrett was appointed permanently to the McKebugh school staff.

Miss Eva Schwemler, of the Central school kindergarten staff, was given an increise in salarly of $5 per month.

In re-engaging the teachers of the Central, Dr. Bray moved that all the teachers be re-engaged, that Miss McKellar's salary be increased $25 and Kellar's salary be increased $25 and Mr. Plewes be hired for next year at a salary of $300. The motion carried.

Miss Gertie Holmes and Miss Edith Tackaberry will each receive an in-crease of $25 next year if they pass the Normal school examination.

J. E. Johnston, for the finance com-mittee, reported recommending the payment of the following accounts: Central school—R. Cooper, supplies, $3.35; J. Tilt, repairs, $1.85; salaries, $342.05; extras, $5; janitor, $35.41. Total, $387.662

Men's Fashionable Overcoats

The overcoat, a good heavy one at that is no mere adjunct to dress anywhere in Canada.

Might as well have one that will keep you on good terms with yourself-one of our new fashionable beavers, cheviots, naps or curls, straight from our own factory, with a reputation and our guarantee behind it, and the last after thought in style and long service ahead of it.

OUR FINEST LINES

Men's Fly Front Overcoats, made from extra fine quality of black and blue beaver, raised seams, farmer's satin linings, silk velvet collars, extra well made, and up-to-date in every particular, size 34 to 44............$10.00

We know that, with the man who seeks style and fit, price is not the first consideration but he don't feel bad to get both at a factory price, and he knows that poor goods are never in style no matter the style or fit.
