The Passing of Summer.

"Summer is dead"—it was the wind that spoke in the bronze mantle of the sombre pine—
"The suns' wash marks a scarlet sign;
The ferns rush signals in the stream and lake;
Sounded a requiem in glided brake.
Where water birds a lonely note repeat:
The sky is veiled in tears; each gray condense,
Respects the stricken branch the leaves for ake."

"I laugh with roddy Autumn in the woods;
I knock his points in the golden light;
But when his hours have passed and even night
Comes rushing down, I wait with those forlorn
The dying leaves, the lone flowers, pale and torn,
The multitudes confronting death or flight."

An Unofficial Strike.

Dennis Murphy banged his dinner-bucket down on the kitchen table.
"The strike is on," he said. And he looked hard at Maggie, his wife, for she had a most unreasonable habit of saying disagreeable things when the sun were overhead, and the rent was overdue, and there was no money to satisfy the demands of butcher and grocer.
But then Maggie was a woman and could hardly be expected to appreciate the manifest advantages of belonging to the union. She scowled fiercely over the sum of money that Dennis turned into the union's treasury every pay day, and in moments of extreme irritation she had even been known to calculate the pounds of meat and potatoes the money would buy. And she had hinted more than once that, but for the union, she could live like a lady and hold up her head with the best of them. As it was she took in washing to fill up the gap in the weekly income.

"An' what's the trouble now?" she asked with considerable asperity.
Dennis shuffled uneasily.

"We want an eight hour day," he mumbled. Maggie ironed a towel with short, vicious strokes of her fat fingers, and Dennis wished that the silver-tongued agitator who had ordered the strike could be there to convince her of the justness of their cause. She was so obviously in a bad humor and not inclined to listen to reason.

"An' is it eight hours you want?" she cried, emphasizing her words with thumps of her iron. "Eight hours for a strappin' big man like ye are. An' them unions has too many grievances altogether that they have. Which was not at all a nice speech for the wife of a loyal union man to make."

"Eight hours' work is enough for any man," Dennis protested.

"An' for any woman? How about the woman, just answer me that, Dennis Murphy?"

And Dennis thoughtlessly conceded that a woman should not work longer than eight hours a day. Whereat Maggie smiled a calm, wise smile that should have warned him of trouble ahead.

"An' what'll we live on the time the strike's on?" It was a question Maggie had often asked in the eight years of her married life, and she well knew Dennis' answer for it never varied.

"Sure, an' ye won't mind takin' in a bit of extra washin', Maggie darlin', just to help 'em along till I do be earnin' money agin'."

Maggie thought she minded very much indeed, but she held her peace. And the next morning Dennis noted with great satisfaction that the wash boiler stood on the back of the stove and Maggie seemed to be making preparations for a large day's work.

"Sure, and I'll not begin till ye're out of the house, Dennis," she said. "The steam do be oppressant."

And Dennis, as he went off to discuss matters with his fellow strikers, reflected that it all other wives accepted the situation in as proper a spirit as Maggie did the strike was likely to be a huge success.

Maggie marshalled Mollie and young Dennis and the baby into the kitchen.

"The strike is on," she announced, "an' it's a bath ye'll be after."

"I had ezactly nearly all over the body," writes Mr. John Gordon Campbell, former Holland Green Lumber Co. Suburb, Ont., "head, neck and wrists were blistered and itching with it. I could find absolutely no cure until I obtained Dr. Chase's Ointment. After using this ointment I was almost instantly relieved and soon completely cured."

"I had been in the excruciating pain of giving up work. Could not shave. I was so bad that he had to take me out of camp in a wagon and send for a new foreman. I cannot recommend this ointment too highly."

As a means of soothing raw, burning, irritated skin no treatment can be compared to Dr. Chase's Ointment. It often heals in a single night. You can see for yourself each day the good it is doing. Sample box free, 30 cts. a box, sent in dollars or Edmonson, Beiss & Co., Toronto.

and the children gasped for 'strike' understood, but to their unaccustomed ears 'bath' had a most terrifying sound. And their mother's preparations filled their small souls with dread, for she had filled the big wash tub with water, hot and cold, and she had violent hands upon her offspring and stripped them of their clothes.

"An' it's drowned we'll be," Mollie cried in terror, as she began to comb her mother's intentions concerning them.

"Sure," said Maggie in deep disgust. "It's ignorant little brats ye are."

There are people as takes one every day.

And from sheer inability to answer a straightforward statement the children were quiet while their mother soaked and rubbed and scrubbed and for lack of a bath towel, stood there to dry before the kitchen stove. And she combed their hair, not in the shabby, every day way, but with a thoroughness that brought tears to their eyes. Then, wonderful to relate, she sewed the rent in Mollie's frock and darned the knees of Dennis' stockings and replaced missing buttons.

"Now, be off wid ye," she said, "for once ye'll be to school lookin', as ye should."

Then she yanked up the baby from the kitchen floor. "Ye'll not play in the coal-scuttle this day," she said with emphasis, and she put a clean, starched dress on the protesting child and put him in a big clothes basket, with an empty spoon for a plaything.

She looked at the clock and her sides shook with silent laughter. "Eight hours for work," she said, "an' two of them gone already. I'll have to hurry a bit or I won't get through, and it's against the rules of the union to work overtime."

Late in the afternoon Dennis betook himself homeward. His house had a strangely unfamiliar look, for there were no clothes drying in the back yard and Maggie was not on the mat of the back porch beading over the wash tub.

Dennis opened the door with a strange staking at his heart; he feared Maggie must be sick. Within the door he turned brightly and the floor and table were scrubbed to the last degree of whiteness, but Maggie was nowhere visible. He tiptoed slyly through the bedroom which was in a state of immaculate neatness, and on the threshold of the little parlor he paused, his mouth falling open in astonishment. For Maggie sat in the rocking chair and her usually busy hands were folded idly in her lap. A bit of bright colored ribbon was twisted in her hair and, in her freshly ironed blue dress and starched white apron she presented so festive an appearance that involuntarily Dennis cast his eye over the room in search of the company he felt sure must be somewhere concealed. But he saw only Mollie and young Dennis, seated in immaculate good behavior and sitting quietly on the hard little sofa with the baby between them.

"Maggie greeted him beautifully.

"Sure, and I'm on strike, meself," she explained. "It's eight hours a day I want, an' I'll do no more washin', leavin' your own and the bits of things for the children."

Dennis slumped weakly into a chair. "It's not eight hours' work ye've done this day, Maggie Murphy," he protested.

"Indeed, then, an' it is," Maggie insisted. "I cooked yer breakfast, Dennis, and I gave the children a bath—ye've never after calling that work, Maggie darlin'. Dennis objected in a tone of deep disgust.

"Indeed, an' it was hard work," Maggie protested, and the three on the sofa nodded a vigorous assent.

Dennis abandoned the argument. "I'm either wonderin' where's the money to come from while the strike's on," he said, gloomily. Maggie looked placidly, and smoothed out the creases in her apron.

"There's enough money put by to last out the week," she said. "An' be like by that time the strike will be off."

But Dennis knew that she referred to the official strike, and his heart was heavy within him.

Three days and the official strike was still on; the unofficial one ditto.

"Sure an' it's a grand thing to only work eight hours a day," Maggie said. "I don't blame ye for strikin', Dennis, an' with the washin' of my hands I feel that aye and rested like. And I've plenty of time to see to the children. They do be the cleanest in the block these days."

But Dennis scowled fiercely, for the question of money was becoming a serious one and the strike wore upon his nerves.

"Nine hours' work ain't too much for a man," he muttered "an' ten, either." And Maggie knew she had the next day Dennis became diplomatic. "It does me heart good to see ye these days, Maggie darlin', for ye're lookin' so fine and rosy like. But I'm wonderin' how'll it be with the money's all gone and ye'll have to stop strikin', yer good looks will be leavin' ye then, Maggie darlin'."

"Sure, and me good looks is all owing to the rest I'm after havin', Maggie replied with spirit. "An' if I must give up the food that I'm strikin' or the rest that I'm havin', it's the food I'll be after going without, Dennis Murphy."

And Dennis realized that the unofficial strike had come to stay.

At supper the next day Maggie served generous helpings of savory steaks.

"Sure an' ye must eat all ye can," she said, "for now the money do be all gone an' there's nothin' left for the mornin' but some bread an' cold potatoes."

"An' it's the hard hearted woman ye are, Maggie Murphy, to sit by an' see yer children go hungry when ye might aye be earnin' money by takin' in a bit washin'."

"Sure, an' ye're yer children, too, Dennis Murphy," Maggie flung back. "An' it's yer place to be earnin' money. I'll cook for them an' wash their bits clothes an' look after them good an' faithful, but not a finger will I lift again to earn money."

And that night Dennis went heavy hearted to bed, for he knew the unofficial strike had won.

"Hurry up wid me breakfast, Maggie darlin'," he said the next morning. "I'm after goin' back to work this mornin'."

"An' it's the lowerin' to a man's dignity to be ordered around by them unions. I'll not be standin' it no more."

"Ye're a fine man, Dennis, that ye are, an' it's meself that's proud of ye this day," Maggie said. And Dennis felt that he had chosen well.

A Wonderful Discovery.
An eminent scientist, the other day, gave his opinion that the most wonderful discovery of recent years was the discovery of Zam-Buk. Just think! As soon as a single thin layer of Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or a sore, such injury is insured against blood-poison! Not one species of microbe has been found that Zam-Buk does not kill!

Then again: As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a sore, or a cut, or to skin disease it stops the smarting. That is why children are such friends of Zam-Buk. They care nothing for the science of the thing. All they know is that Zam-Buk stops their pain. Mothers should never forget this.

Again: As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or to a diseased surface, the cells beneath the skin's surface are so stimulated that new healthy tissue is quickly formed. This forming of fresh healthy tissue from below is Zam-Buk's secret of healing. The tissue thus formed is worked up to the surface and literally casts off the diseased tissue above it. This is why Zam-Buk cures are permanent.

Only the other day Mr. Marsh, of 101 Delorimier Ave., Montreal, called upon the Zam-Buk Company and told them that for over twenty-five years he had been a martyr to eczema. His hands were at one time so covered with sores that he had to sleep in gloves. Four years ago Zam-Buk was introduced to him, and in a few months it cured him. To-day—over three years after his cure of a disease he had for twenty-five years—he is still cured, and has had no trace of The Art of Enjoying Oneself.

I hope you will enjoy yourself. The words are in incessant use just now, and as they echo in the ears the wonder arises sometimes how, the wish is fulfilled. For holiday makers do not seem conspicuously employed in the enjoyment of self. They seem mostly busy trying to enjoy new sights or rapid movement, or the sight of other people's clothes, or the conversation of their companions.

These things are all very different from enjoying themselves, which is at once a more delectable and far more difficult achievement. There can be no better time to lay hold on the great secret of life, the art of enjoying self, than the holiday season. It is the one art which is independent of circumstances and certain of attainment by all who set themselves to win it. Holiday surroundings may be disappointing, the outlook may be dull compared with the plans of others, but if the aim be harmony with self the holiday will be a success, and will plant in the mind a little root of contentment which will bloom till holidays come again.

How can we enjoy self when self is so often unworthy? By cultivating pursuits for solitary moments to which the thoughts may turn with expectation of pleasure. By storing up sweet and wholesome memories, by filling the mind with rich store from books and observation of daily life, by banishing stidily and with never ceasing determination all that speaks of regret, self-accusation and unkindness. The moralists are fond of telling us that every unkind word or impure thought makes an impress and leads us whither we would not be.

To often they omit the more cheering reflection that every effort directed against unhappy thoughts, bitterness or gloom, is as the letting in of sunshine, and has its part in the conversion of the mind into a garden of delights. Such efforts strengthen with wonderful rapidity. We are born to rejoice, as planets struggle to the light, and the forces impelling to hope. It is these which matter; the rest is an ugly dream from which we can waken if we will—Great Thoughts.

He resigned on Thursday of last week, and Hon. J. K. Fleming was called to the premiership. The government under Mr. Fleming's leadership is substantially the same as that led by Mr. Hazen, with some changes in portfolios and the addition of a new member, Hon. J. A. Murray.

The fuel saving and fire control device are used only on the Gurney Foundry Co's, Ranges. See the ad of Illsley & Harvey Co., Ltd.

Rev. A. D. MacKinnon, pastor of the St. Andrew's and St. Matthew's Presbyterian congregations, at Waterville and Lakeville, presented his resignation last Sunday, to take effect Oct. 23th. He has accepted a manumission call from the Presbyterian church at Mattapan, Mass. Mr. MacKinnon has ministered to these congregations for four years, with much acceptance and his departure is greatly regretted not only by his own church, but by the people of both communities where his labors were highly appreciated.

WOLFVILLE.

Important Change.

I wish to announce that I have sold my business—Wolfville Decorating Company—to Mr. F. O. Godfrey. Mr. Godfrey will assume all liabilities and collect all accounts due the Company. I thank the public for their patronage during the last seven years and ask them to keep on doing it to Fred. Respectfully yours, B. G. Blahop.

Unique Gathering of the Men of the Churches.

A unique gathering of the men of the churches of Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island will be held in Halifax on Nov. 22nd, 23rd and 24th, in the town of a great Men's Missionary Convention, taken part in by all Protestant Christians. It is hoped that every congregation in the Convention territory will be represented by its minister and laymen. The speakers will include Sir Andrew Fraser, for thirty-five years Governor of Bengal, J. Campbell White, the eloquent general secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement in the United States, and leading representatives of all the great church missionary boards. Laymen wishing to enrol as commissioners can obtain more information by asking their ministers, or by writing to the Secretary of the Convention, Rev. C. W. Vernon, 34 Barrington Street, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

A movement for provincial prohibition was inaugurated on Tuesday evening at a meeting of the St. John branch of the New Brunswick Temperance Federation. A committee was appointed to map out plans and devise means of uniting the forces of temperance in all the counties of the province.

Personal Mention.

(Contributions to this department will be gladly received.) Mrs. F. P. Rockwell is spending a month in Halifax, where she is a guest at the Queen Hotel.

Dr. Moran Hemmeon, of Seattle, Wash., has been visiting his parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. B. Hemmeon, this town.

Mrs. (Rev.) J. W. Prestwood has been attending the annual meeting of the Provincial W.C.T.U. at Yarmouth this week.

Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Rand returned on Monday from a pleasant trip of a few weeks to Boston, New York and other cities.

Mr. Morley Hemmeon, who spent the summer at his old home in Wolfville, is now principal of the public schools at Battledore, Sask.

Mr. Stanley Gillmore, who left Wolfville last fall, is now engaged in business with his brother, Mr. Reginald Gillmore, at Vancouver, B. C.

Mr. R. E. Banks, foreman of THE ACADIAN's mechanical department, accompanied by Mrs. Banks, spent Sunday at the latter's old home at Waterville.

Mrs. R. H. Tweedell, of Brookline, Mass., who has been spending some weeks in town, visiting her daughter, Mrs. Alex. Sutherland, returned home Wednesday.

Mr. Kennerly Ranson, of the S. & L. railway, arrived in Wolfville on Monday, and is making a short visit at the home of J. R. Christie. He will return home with Mrs. Ranson and daughter.

Mr. A. L. Davison, M. P., of Middleton, accompanied by Mrs. Davison and Master Herbert, spent Sunday in town. They went to Halifax on Monday morning, returning home on Tuesday morning.

Rev. L. F. Wallace has resigned the pastorate of the Paradise and Clarence, N. S., churches to accept the position of state missionary in Massachusetts. He will go to his new work about the last of this month.

Mrs. J. L. Franklin left on Friday last for Easton, Pa., where she will visit at the home of her son, Mr. Emerson Franklin. She was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. E. H. Johnson, who will spend a few weeks at the home of her brother.

Mrs. (Dr.) Robinson, of Auburndale, Mass., who has been spending the past three weeks in Wolfville, the guest of her friend, Mrs. B. O. Davison, left on Wednesday morning to return home. Mrs. Robinson is a charming lady who has made many friends during her brief sojourn in our town, and she will be gladly welcomed should she again favor Wolfville with a visit.

College Notes.

In the Engineering department there are over 40 enrolled.

The Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. reception takes place this evening in College Hall.

The football team is hard at work under the direction of Capt. Pines and will give a good account of itself when opportunity offers.

The two new men on the faculty, Prof. Spilde and Prof. Thompson, are doing good work and winning the confidence and esteem of all.

The registration of students is not yet completed but the number in attendance will, it is expected, exceed that of last year, which was 230.

The attendance at the Seminary and Academy is as large as last year, and from the applications at hand will be considerably increased. Both buildings are full.

The Freshman class already numbered 53, as against 70 last year. The Senior class registers 46 and promises to exceed the record class of '01, which graduated 43.

Saturday 4:30 p. m.—The Modern Missionary Church. 7:00 p. m.—The Appeal of the Missionary Career.

Oct. 30 4:30 p. m.—The Divine Freedom in a Bond. 7:00 p. m.—Transfigured Life Callings.

The public is cordially invited to attend the evening services.

What is Your Family Worth?

If your family is worth the best you can afford in house and food and clothes, it is not worth the best reading as well! And the best reading—best for boys and girls, best for men and women—is to be found in The Youth's Companion.

Of stories alone the Companion will print nearly 300 in 1912. With all the rest of the paper thrown in, and counting the glorious long serial stories, they cost the subscriber less than a cent apiece. Moreover, you will look long before you will find stories so varied and interesting; stories of coolness in the face of peril, strange adventures with creatures of the forest and the sea; moving stories of life's obscure heroisms; stories brassy with good-natured humor, quaint and curious character sketches.

Now is the time to subscribe, for the new subscriber in Canada will receive free from the time his $2.00 is received all the issues for the remaining weeks of 1911, containing the opening chapters of Ralph D. Paine's great serial story of the Boxer Rebellion, 'The Cross and the Dragon.' And there is the gift of The Companion Calendar for 1912. On the New England Coast, lithographed in twelve colors and gold. Only $2.00 now to Canadian subscribers, but on Jan. 1st, 1912 the subscription price will be advanced to $2.25.

The People's Forum.

To the Editor of THE ACADIAN. MA EDITOR.—Just a few words in reference to Temperance. When I was in your town on Saturday night, Oct. 14th, I saw several people under the influence of liquor and some were fighting on the street. Upon inquiry I found that the police had locked up two men which did not seem to stop the others from making a disturbance. Being in Wolfville on Monday, Oct. 16th, I made some enquiries as to where the liquor came from. I asked the chairman of the License Committee where all the liquor came from and he said that he knew but declined to tell, but on further enquiry I found that there were a lot of prescriptions given by the doctors amounting to twenty, and to my surprise one of the oldest doctors gave seventeen of that number.

Now, citizens, do you expect to have a town quiet at night with such work going on? Just think, seventeen prescriptions given by one doctor. Why, you had better have a bar-room in your town. I think it is about time your License Committee got to work and stopped this way of getting liquor, if a doctor gives prescriptions to people who are not sick, which I know they did, for a man was sick he could not fight on the street as some of them did on Saturday night. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for this space, I remain, TEMPERANCE.
