Stella Mordaunt: —OR—
The Cruise of the "Kingfisher."

CHAPTER XXXIX.
"Rayne—Rath Rayne."
Mr. Bulpit murmured it several times.
"I've a kind of notion that I've heard it before; but I may be mistaken. It is a strange story—well-nigh incredible, as you say. And you and he are millionaires, Mr. Edward?"
"About that," replied Edward, moodily. "But money will not help either of us, as I said. What a crowd! Whoa! whoa!"

He had to check the horses, for the High Street was thronged with people, standing and moving about with the air of curiosity which proclaims that something far and away beyond the ordinary is happening. The mob parted, and made a lane for them to pass through, but pressed after them; and Edward pulled up the steaming horses at the court-house door.

For nearly four hours the excitement had been fermenting, and a spirit of feverish unrest had agitated Market Ration; it reached a head as the crowd fought its way into the pokey and inconvenient court, which was too small to hold a tenth of the people clamouring for admission.

CHAPTER XL.
To Ralph the hours passed in a kind of demonic dance, treading on his guilty soul "with burning feet." Everybody about him was thinking and talking of nothing but the murder in the wood, and he had to listen and join in the conversation with an assumption of grave regret, and yet with that ease which belongs to a clear conscience. He kept to his den as much as he could the day before the examination, and scores of times he found himself wandering to the seaside in search of the drunkard's consolation; but he had to restrain himself. He knew that a chance word might betray him, and he could not trust himself when the drink was in him.

This effort at self-restraint increased the horror and dread of his situation, and once or twice he felt as if he were breaking down under the awful weight which pressed upon him; but he encouraged himself by mentally going over the evidence against the suspected man, and assuring himself that it was more than sufficient to convict him.
In the course of the day he walked over to Hatherley, but he did not see Mary. She was too ill to leave her room. Ralph was relieved by her enforced absence, for he shrank from meeting her. He could play his part fairly well before her father and the rest, but he was conscious of a vague dread of Mary's clear eyes.

"What is the matter? Has she seen a doctor?" he asked.

Lord Hatherley shook his head and sighed.

"No. I begged her to let me send for him; but she will not do so; and yet she seems quite prostrated."

"It may be only a cold," said Ralph, absently. "Has—has she heard about this murder?" he asked, his eyes wandering from Lord Hatherley's face and looking beyond him shiftingly.

"No—oh, no!" replied Lord Hatherley. "I have given strict orders that no one is to mention it to her. It would only make her worse."

"Quite right," assented Ralph. "Keep it from her as long as you can! It's almost a good thing she can't leave her room, or she'd be pestered to death with this business, like the rest of us. I'm sure I'm sick of the subject! Every man and woman I've met has talked of nothing else."

"That is not surprising," said Lord Hatherley, with a sigh. "No such terrible crime has been perpetrated in this county since I can remember, and it is only natural that it should haunt one's mind to the exclusion of other things."

"I have refused to talk about it," said Ralph, with a fine air of impartiality. "I—I suppose I shall have to sit on the bench to-morrow; I should like to get off it, if I could; and I'm rather seedy."

"You are not looking at all well," said Lord Hatherley, regarding Ralph's pale and haggard face and its still blood-shot eyes, with their dull marks beneath them; "but I think you ought to sit, if you can. We should all like to avoid so painful a duty, of course; but, after all, it is a duty, and we cannot shirk it."

"Just so," said Ralph, reluctantly. "We'll go together; I'll drive over for you. Has—has anything further been discovered?"

"No," replied Lord Hatherley. "Green, the detective, from Watlington, is here, I am told. He is a very clever man, and, no doubt, will make an exhaustive investigation. I hear that he is going to examine the wood—the spot where the murder was committed—this morning."

"Why is he doing that?" asked Ralph, sharply, and with a twitch of the pale and swollen lips. "There is nothing more to be discovered there, I should think."

Lord Hatherley shook his head. "One would think not; but Green is a man of great experience and knows his business."

"He'll find the evidence against this fellow quite sufficient," remarked Ralph, rising and moving to the window, and back again, restlessly and uncertainly. "We shall have no difficulty in committing the prisoner for trial."

Lord Hatherley frowned. He had sat upon the bench for many years, and had always endeavoured to administer justice fairly and impartially. "I cannot say," he said. "I always carefully guard against forming an opinion until I have heard the evidence in court."

"Just so—just so!" assented Ralph, hurriedly. "Of course the fellow will get justice. Well, I'll call for you to-morrow morning. Give—give my love to Mary, and tell her how sorry I am that she is ill, and how—how much I miss not seeing her."

A CUP OF COFFEE
may mean almost anything—Good, Bad or Indifferent.
But a cup of SEAL BRAND COFFEE MEANS JUST ONE THING—the most delicious beverage ever poured into a coffee cup.
CHASE & SANBORN MONTREAL

On his way back to the Hall he met a quiet-looking man, who was pacing thoughtfully across the avenue; he stopped and raised his hat to Ralph, and Ralph's heart rose to his mouth; for he guessed who the man was.

"My name is Green, my lord," said the detective. "I'm about to examine the ground round the scene of the murder."

"Certainly—certainly!" responded Ralph, promptly. "Terrible business, Mr. Green—terrible! I need scarcely say that if I can render you any assistance, if there is anything anyone at the Hall can do, we are, all of us, at your disposal."

"Thank you, my lord," said Mr. Green.

"I should like to ask you if you have discovered anything fresh; but I shall be on the bench to-morrow, and I don't like to discuss the matter with anyone."

"Quite right and proper feeling, my lord," said Mr. Green. "No, my lord, there is nothing fresh—as yet."

Ralph nodded, and walked on with an impassive face; but the cool, grave "as yet" haunted him.

Was it possible for this sleuth-hound—who looked like a banker's clerk—to discover any clue which should lead him to suspect?

With a shudder, he went straight to his den, and sinking into a chair, wiped the sweat from his brow as he pictured the silent, self-contained man peering and poking about the horrid spot which never for a moment faded from Ralph's mental vision.

He took a sleeping draught that night, and fell into the heavy slumber which a soporific produces, and he woke the next morning with so parched a tongue and such ragged nerves, that he found it absolutely necessary to take some brandy before his pretence of a breakfast.

As his hand shook too much to permit him to drive, he ordered the close carriage.

Lord Hatherley and he drove through the crowd to the court-house just before Edward and Mr. Bulpit, and they went by the side door to the magistrate's room. There was a very full bench, and the small room was inconveniently crowded.

"This is an awful business, Hatherley," said Lord Parodel. "How do you do, Ration? Most unfortunate that it should have occurred in your park," he added, as he looked at Ralph's haggard face.

"Oh, yes; very unfortunate, of course," assented Ralph. "Can't get it off my mind!"

Sir Gilbert came up to greet them. "I shall not sit to-day," he said, gravely. "The prisoner is a friend and partner of my son's, and I think it better to take no part in the examination."

Lord Hatherley, who was the chairman, inclined his head.

"You know best, Bryan," he said. "Is Edward here?"
"He has gone for Mr. Bulpit, who will conduct the defence," replied Sir Gilbert.

Ralph turned quickly. "Old Bulpit!" he said, with an attempt at a sneer. "What does he know of criminal law? It would have been better for him to keep clear of this, I should have thought."

His fellow-magistrates regarded him with faint surprise; but no one said anything, and Ralph, seeing that he had created an unpleasant impression, hurried on.

"Tremendous lot of people here. Morbid curiosity in the lower orders, eh?"

"Yes; but natural enough. The poor woman had been performing in the town, and was a favourite, and the murder"—Lord Parodel corrected himself quickly—"the affair is so horrible that it is bound to cause a great deal of excitement. I'm told that there are special reporters down for the London papers."

The magistrate's clerk came in to arrange the order of business; for there was the usual number of small and unimportant cases, and then the magistrates filed into the court and took their seats on the bench.

The place was crammed, and the buzz of conversation was with difficulty suppressed by the clerk and the usher's peremptory:

"Silence!"

When the cases of petty larceny and "drunks and disorderlies" were gone into and the small fines imposed, or discharges pronounced, Mr. Bulpit and Edward remained in one of the outer corridors, saying the last few words in comparative quietude.

"I should like to have seen the prisoner—your friend—before the examination; but it cannot be helped. I shall have plenty of opportunity afterwards. He will be sure to be re-nanded or committed."

"I'm afraid so," Edward agreed, with a sigh. "Are all the magistrates here?"

"All except Lisle—and here he is—just driven up."

Lisle got out of his dog-cart, and entered the corridor a moment later. "Bryan!" he exclaimed, in evident agitation. "What on earth is this I hear? I have only just come back from town. It can't be true?"

"That my friend Rayne is charged with murder? Yes, it is. You have heard the account?"

"Yes. It is impossible, incredulous!" said Lisle, quickly. "I haven't been able to understand all the details; but I'll answer for it—Oh, I'm not going to sit on the bench, Mr. Bulpit; so you need not look so shocked. I'm here as a witness, if necessary."

"A witness?" said Bulpit. "Yes, this gentleman who is accused of this awful and brutal murder saved my life the other night, and I say that he is incapable of such a crime as this."

Edward seized his hand and wrung it. "Thanks, Lisle!" he said. "I don't know what you are alluding to—oh, I'm not surprised at my ignorance. Rayne is the last man to talk of his own good deeds; but you have come to the right conclusion."

Dry Irritating Hack Of Bronchitis Instantly Relieved By "Catarrhozone"

No Failure, Cure in Every Case Treated by Catarrhozone.

Catarrhozone can't fail to cure Bronchitis; its so healing, soothing and balsamic that every trace of the disease flies before it. When you inhale the pure pliny vapor of Catarrhozone, you send healing medication to the spots that are diseased and sore.

Isn't it rational to apply medicine where the disease exists? Certainly! and that's why Catarrhozone is so successful; it goes where the trouble really is, gets where a spray or ointment can't penetrate. For the relief and complete cure of bronchitis, asthma, catarrh, throat trouble, we guarantee Catarrhozone in every case. You don't take medicine—you don't take drowsy drugs—just breathe the balsamic essence of Catarrhozone; it does the rest safely and surely.

"For three years I was seriously bothered by a bronchial cough. At night I would awaken with a dry irritable feeling in my throat. I couldn't cough up anything, but very soon coughed my throat into quite an inflamed condition. Once I got Catarrhozone Inhaler I was all right. I took it to bed, and if an attack awakened me a few minutes use of the Inhaler gave me relief. Catarrhozone has cured me and I strongly urge everyone with a weak throat to use it regularly."

Methodist Conference.

MONDAY, June 28.
Afternoon Session.—Session opened with usual devotional exercises. Minutes of previous session read and confirmed.

The Conference then received a deputation from the Lord's Day Alliance consisting of Canon Bolt, Rev. J. Sutherland and Mr. Stirling. Canon Bolt addressed the Conference upon the issue of the Lord's Day. War has made many changes, said the learned Canon, and many of our preconceived notions must change. No age or church has the entire truth, and while holding firm to principles we all make for contributions. Concerning the Lord's Day he said we do not observe the Jewish Sabbath but the day which our Lord honored when he rose from the dead, but the same principles govern us. Man needs a day for spiritual culture. He needs the day for physical rest and recuperation.

Rev. Mr. Sutherland said it is not in the outskirts chiefly but in the city that the Lord's Day is being desecrated. Something must be done. A Sabbath day of rest is essential to the welfare of a community.

Mr. Stirling in a few remarks supported the statement made by the other members of the deputation. The Conference then received a deputation from the W. C. T. U. consisting of the following ladies:—Mrs. Benedict, President; Mrs. Penman, Vice-President; Mrs. Pippy, Evangelistic Supt.; Mrs. Mitchell, Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. Milley, Treasurer; Mrs. Hunter, Mrs. Grimes, Mrs. Soper, Mrs. Vey, U. G. Secretary. The General Superintendent called upon Dr. Moore to answer the questions of the deputation.

The Conference then resumed order of business and several reports were presented and passed.

EVENING SESSION.

A large number gathered in the Conference Church to witness the setting aside for the Christian Ministry the following candidates: Geo. Mercer, who has completed his theological course at Wesleyan College, Montreal; Fred. G. Purchase, of Victoria University, Toronto; and A. Wilkinson, of Mount Allison University, Sackville.

The Rostrum was occupied by the following clergymen:—Dr. Chown, General Supt.; Rev. Chas. Howse, President of Conference; Dr. Curtis, Revs. F. R. Matthews, ex-President; J. R. Saint, T. B. Darby.

According to the well-honored custom the candidates were in turn called upon to give the story of their conversation and of the call to the Christian ministry.

Geo. L. Mercer remembered distinctly when he gave himself to God. By the influence of a good home and relatives who were in the ministry he was led to consider the work of the ministry as a life vocation. After spending the usual probationary time on circuit he went to college and having passed the college examinations for the Methodist ministry he now offers himself to the Christian ministry.

John A. Wilkinson was led to God by those forces which were brought to bear upon his life.

(1) A godly mother. She gave him as an offering to the Lord; (2) A good home; (3) The Sunday School. He having proved the necessary requirements for the Christian ministry now offers himself to the Church willing to work in any place where she should place him.

John A. Wilkinson. It was always his privilege to live in a godly home under Christian influences. While in a missionary meeting he was led to consecrate himself to God. When opportunity offered he came as a candidate to the Newfoundland Conference. Having been accepted, he laboured for three years on circuit and then proceeded to Mount Allison University from which college he now came with his certificate and unreservedly offers himself to the Methodist Church.

The congregation then sang "Lord of the Harvest Field," after which the President proceeded to read the solemn ritual for the ordaining of men to the Christian ministry. In the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost the above men were solemnly set apart for the work of the ministry and were given copies of the Holy Scriptures together with authority to preach and administer the sacraments in the congregation of the people.

Dr. Chown delivered the charge. He felt like complimenting Methodist upon the type of young men she was receiving into her ranks as ministers. He also congratulated and in part exhorted the young men who were entering upon the ministry at a time of great crisis and movements in the religious world. The Doctor emphasized the importance of leading men to seek and see Jesus and to find him as a personal Saviour. He gave the following advice:—

(1) Learn to love study—study social conditions. Keep in touch with the thought and life of to-day. Endeavour to get verdicts from your people for the Lord Jesus. You are a fraud unless you can secure your verdict, do business for God, save souls;

(2) Be in love with your work. Be alert and active in every part of your being. In this day a Minister must love his work and use all his energy in the service of the Master.

The meeting was brought to a close by the singing of the Doxology and National Anthem. Dr. Chown delivering the Benediction.

TUESDAY, June 29.
Morning Session.—9:30-10 were taken up with Committees.
Conference assembled at 10 o'clock. After the usual devotional exercises the minutes of previous session were read and confirmed.
The time of the Morning Session was taken up with routine work. Reports from the Missionary, Examining Committees were presented and passed. The Conference then received the Report of the Laymen Association. Dr. Bland addressed the Conference at the noon hour as usual.

Laying the Foundation Stone.

At 3 p.m. this afternoon, the Rev. Dr. Chown, General Superintendent of the Methodist Church, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Moore, lays the foundation stone of the new Cochrane Street Church. The foundation stone of the church which was destroyed by fire on January 18th, 1914, was laid by the late Rev. Job Shenston. Among those who signed the roll in September, 1889 are the following who survive to-day: Hon. James Angel, Hon. H. J. B. Woods, J. E. P. Peters, Esq., and Wm. J. Herder, Esq. This roll, together with the coins and other records of that day will be placed in the new foundation stone with the records and newspapers of to-day.

Last evening's football match between the St. Bon's and C. E. I-Feildians, resulted in a victory for the latter by 2 goals to 1. The winning team had the best of the game. In the first period they scored once through Winter off a pass from Adams. Shortly after the opening of the second half Bugden registered No. 2 for his side. During the latter part of the game the St. Bon's showed up better and succeeded in getting one goal.

SEE AMERICA FIRST—THE UPPER MISSISSIPPI.

By GEORGE FITCH

Author of "At Good Old Slwash"

The American traveller who has grown tired of throttling dollars as they rush by and who does not care to trust himself to an ocean liner infested by submarines and sea-sickness, can do no better than to install himself upon the loading deck of a Mississippi River steamer if he can find one, and go to St. Paul.

This is not an exciting trip and cannot be described with bated breath to crowds of eager listeners many years afterwards. But as a toner down of jangled nerves and a sedative for runaway ambition, as well as a cure for bored eyes, it cannot be equalled.

The Mississippi approaches St. Paul from St. Louis by flowing north, south, east and west with great industry, thus forming a series of loops, curves, convolutions and contortions, lined on both sides with scenery which would cost a large fortune to duplicate. Great bluffs rear their precipitous forms athwart the landscape, on every hand, apparently trying to surround the steamer with 700-foot fortifications. But just as the nervous passenger is about to signal for an aeroplane, the river slips around a corner and fifteen new reels of superior views are unrolled before him, causing him to miss his dinner while watching the channel contort between the headlands.

The government has taken the Upper Mississippi firmly in hand and has compelled it to flow in an orderly manner, for 500 miles between wing dams and other engineering corsets. This provides plenty of water to float on but not enough to leap up into the hurricane deck and flow down the chimneys in case of trouble.

Beautiful and picturesque towns dot the upper rivers, and the citizen who is fond of foreign travel can step off at any place, and secure the thrill of the same by asking the honest Norwegian bystander a question and getting two quarts of superfluous "Ja" by way of an answer.

The Peace of the Years.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

The young girls' fiery heart thinks they must be sank down on the bench beside me and sighed, a deep fluttering sigh, full of the sweet melancholy peculiar to youth. "What's the matter?"

She indicated with her tennis racket an elderly woman who had just passed us, leaning heavily on her daughter's arm.

"Just look," she said. "And someone told me that when she was a girl she was the best horsewoman in the state. Oh, dear, it frightens me when I think how terrible it must be to be old and not be able to play tennis or swim or dance or ride or flirt, or—anything. Why she must just ache with longing to do things, and all she can do is crawl along in the sun like that."

"Don't you think perhaps the longing has passed with the power?" I asked.

"That's Different."

Her bright eyes narrowed and grew misty with thought. "Oh," she said, "that's different."

It is indeed different—very different. Age with its own impotence plus the yearning of youth for doing and daring, for loving and living would be a tragic state. But I don't believe age is like that. "Oh," she said, "that's different."

WASTED MEN.

WILLY MASON

Old Europe now has tasted the grim results of war; her sons, forever wasted, are lying near and far; the night dew's cold, but colder the wasted men who moulder by every tree and boulder, on every knoll and tor. Still Europe goes on killing her sons, with Bedlam mirth, as though a bogus shilling were all the lads are worth; her red repast she munches, her brave young men she crunches, as though they grew in bunches, from out a fecund earth. Old Death, the grisly reaper, is king beyond the seas; he says, "Young men are cheaper than things that grow on trees; know all men by these presents, boys cheaper are than peasants, and in the blood of peasants I'm wading to my knees." Does any one remember why nations went to war, last August of September—what are they fighting for? A ten cent duke was smitten, and all the kings flea-bitten, reared up and yelled, "Tis written that blood must flow, be gone!" No cause could be tremendous enough to justify that agony tremendous out where the dead men lie; but, saith the grisly reaper, "The blood is flowing deeper, and human lives grow cheaper—come forth, young men, and die!"

Some Literary Fops.

Disraeli Was Marked Out From All His Kind—Statesman and Novelist Was One of the Greatest Dandies in London and Bulwer Lytton Was a Tremendous Swell — Goldsmith and Dickens, Also Affected Fine Clothes—Some Dowdy Writers.

When Lord Beaconsfield first entered Parliament he was known as a brilliant young novelist, and one of the greatest dandies about town. He was an associate of Count D'Orsay, whom the present generation has seen on the stage in "The Last of the Dandies," splendidly portrayed by Sir Herbert Tree, that master of make-up. But there was a certain eastern and barbaric splendor about Benjamin Disraeli which marked him out from every other dandy.

It was hoped that when he entered Parliament he would dress more in accordance with that grave assembly, but it was a vain hope. What with plum-colored coats, ruby waistcoats and green trousers, not to mention his taste in cravats, he scandalized the House, and it is not to be doubted that the hoots which greeted his maiden speech were more directed to his taste than his talk. Nevertheless this incurable dandy lived to represent his country at Berlin, and to talk to Bismark with authority. But he never ceased to the day of his death to be a dandy.

Another literary dandy was Bulwer Lytton, afterwards the first Lord Lytton, the author of "The Last Days of Pompeii," "Eugene Aram," and many other novels which enjoyed a very wide popularity in their day but show few signs of lasting. He was a tremendous swell, with wonderful dundreary whiskers, and still more wonderful curls, all over his head. He always dressed in the very height of fashion, and, next to D'Orsay, was generally regarded as leading the style for men. But he was not outrageous, like Disraeli, and dressed in much better taste as the time understood that very changeable world.

Oliver Goldsmith, when he got a little money, generally spent it upon one of three things, either upon a bottle of wine, a new plum-colored coat, or upon the first poor beggar he met. Boswell records, with his usual spite when talking about Oliver, that on a certain occasion he strutted about, "bragging of his dress," and when they laughed at him he said, "Well, let me tell you, when my tailor brought home my plum-colored coat, he said, 'Sir, I have a favor to beg of you.' When anybody asks you who made your clothes, be pleased to mention John Piley, at the Harrow, in Water Lane," to which Johnson made the retort, in his usual drastic style, "Why, sir, that was because he knew the strange color would attract crowds to gaze at it, and thus they might hear of him, and see how well he could make a coat even of so absurd a color."

Dickens was always a bit of a dandy, and it cannot be said that his taste was invariably perfect. For instance, he used to wear a bright green waistcoat, a color of which he was very fond, to the accompaniment of a vivid scarlet tie. There was a good deal of the showman about Dickens. He actually turned up at the studio of W. P. Fitch, the artist, who painted the well-known picture "Derby Day," now in the Tate Gallery, in a sky-blue overcoat with red cuffs.

Acid Stomachs Are Dangerous.

Nine-tenths of All Stomach Troubles Said to Be Due to Acidity. A Physician's Advice on Cause and Cure.

A famous physician whose successful researches into the cause and cure of stomach and intestinal diseases have earned for him an international reputation, said in the course of a recent lecture that nearly all intestinal troubles, as well as many diseases of the vital organs, were directly traceable to a deranged condition of the stomach which in turn was due nine times out of ten to excessive acidity, commonly termed sour stomach or heartburn, which not only irritated and inflamed the delicate lining of the stomach, but also set up gastritis and stomach ulcers. It is interesting to note that he condemns the use of patent medicines as well as of medical treatment for the stomach, stating that he and his colleagues have secured remarkable results by the use of ordinary bisurated magnesia, which, by neutralizing the acidity of the food, removes the source of the trouble. He contends that it is as foolish to treat the stomach itself as it would be for a man who stepping on a tack to rub his foot with the foot without first removing the tack. Remove the tack and the foot will heal itself—neutralize the acid, and the stomach troubles will disappear. Irritating medicines and medical treatments are useless, so long as the contents of the stomach remain acid; remove the acidity, and there will be no need for medicine—the inflamed lining of the stomach will then heal itself. Sufferers from acidity, sour stomach or heartburn should get a small bottle of bisurated magnesia from their druggist, and take a teaspoonful in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after meals, repeating in fifteen minutes, if necessary, this being the dose which the doctor has found most efficacious in all cases.

In his later days he was very fond of velvet coats. Even in evening dress he could never be content with the usual simplicity. Even more fearful and wonderful was Dumas' appearance at a certain ambassadorial reception. The author of "Monte Christo" turned up in a shirt on which were depicted a number of little red demons disporting themselves amid flames of yellow fire.

After the reception he wrote to a friend, "My costume was a great success, everyone thronged round and made much of me." But Dumas was a mulatto, and that fact accounts for much in the way of "fancy dress." But authors have been more remarkable for slovenliness than dandyism and extra neatness. It is probable that at one and the same moment of the last century the clothes of Alfred Tennyson, Edward Fitzgerald, Thomas Carlyle, and Robert Louis Stevenson would not have fetched 10s. from a second-hand clothes dealer, and he would probably have refused to carry Fitzgerald's away even as a gift.

The American Ambassador and the German Republic

The American Ambassador at Berlin has informed his Government in Washington that the German Republic to the last American Note on the subject of the Lusitania and the sinking of American ships is likely to be favorable. Such an expression of opinion from the American Ambassador at the German capital should be highly gratifying to the American Government. But when the information is given that the submarine warfare against certain ships is to go on, it is hard to reconcile it with the optimistic expression. For instance, will America consider a proposition favorable which would permit German submarines to destroy contraband ships by Americans while on board British ships? Such destruction would be a violation of the International rule which calls for contraband to be brought to port, condemned by a Prize Court before the owners lose their property. A similar difficulty arises in the proposed exemption of ships primarily carrying passengers who is to be the judge of what is outside the exemption? The commander of a submarine is to be the judge, this violates International law. Again, there is the case of neutral ship carrying contraband. The proposition would allow the sinking of a ship like the Prinz Eitel-Eber with its cargo by a submarine which is many miles from the American coast. Can such a proposition be received with favor by the American Government? We confess we are sceptical about the German reply being received favorably, if any such proposition is made. We cannot reconcile the belief of the Ambassador with any such positions.

Lt. Morhill Promoted

G. T. R. Signal Engineer Gets Talley.

Word has been received in London of the promotion of Lieutenant Ashaw Morhill, to a captaincy in the Royal Engineers. Capt. Morhill was signal engineer with the C. F. Railway, left with the Canadian Engineers with the first contingent. The same advice also went to that he had been mentioned for military cross for his work on the Ypres canal. Capt. Morhill is a veteran of the South African War, also served through a native uprising following the campaign. (The Mr. Morhill referred to was for many years in charge of Reid Nfld. The American Ambassador and the German Reply.

The American Ambassador at Berlin has informed his Government at Washington that the German Reply to the last American Note on the torpedoing of the Lusitania and the sinking of American ships is likely to be favorable. Such an expression of belief from the American Ambassador at the German capital should be hopeful. But when the information given that the submarine warfare against certain ships is to go on, it is hard to reconcile it with the optimism expressed. For instance, will America consider a proposition favorable which would permit German submarines to destroy contraband owned by Americans while on board a British ship? Such destruction would be a violation of the International rule which calls for contraband goods to be brought to port, condemned by a Prize Court before the owners lose their property. A similar difficulty arises in the proposed exemption of ships primarily carrying passengers. Who is to be the judge of what ship is outside the exemption? The commander of a submarine on the lookout to make an attack or a Prize Court. The latter is negated at once, because it is not practicable for a submarine to escort a captured ship to a German port, and to attempt to carry out such a policy would be tantamount to abandoning submarine warfare on commercial ships, and this is outside the proposition. If the commander of the submarine is to be the judge, this violates International law. Again, there is the case of a neutral ship carrying contraband. The proposition would allow of the sinking of a ship like the Frye and its cargo by a submarine, which Germany admits she cannot do lawfully by a cruiser like the Prinz Eitel. How can such a proposition be regarded with favor by the American Government? We confess we are sceptical about the German reply being received favorably, if any such propositions, as the despatch indicates are in it. We cannot reconcile the belief of the Ambassador with any such propositions.

Lt. Morhill Promoted.

G. T. R. Signal Engineer Gets Captaincy.

Word has been received in Montreal of the promotion of Lieut. R. Lashaw Morhill, to a captaincy in the Royal Engineers. Capt. Morhill, who was signal engineer with the Grand Trunk Railway, left with the Canadian Engineers with the first contingent. The same advice also stated that he had been mentioned for the military cross for his work on the Ypres canal. Capt. Morhill is a veteran of the South African War and also served through a native uprising following that campaign.

[The Mr. Morhill referred to above was for many years in charge of the Reid Nrd. Co.'s Sub-Station, in this city.—Ed.]

THE COWARD AND THE MAN.

Is a most interesting and inspiring production by the famous Kalem Co., and when shown yesterday at the popular "British" it evoked much favorable criticism. In conjunction with the beautiful two reel feature "A Song in the Dark" and such splendid specimens of the photographer's skill as "The Hopi Raider" and the two extremely funny comedies "A Bargain Auto" and "He Changed His Mind" the entire entertainment was up to the usual high class "British" standard and was much enjoyed.

AT THE CRESCENT.

The Crescent Picture Palace has another of its big shows on to-day; five full reels of pictures produced by the Vitagraph, Kalem, Selig and Es-saney Photo Play Companies, featuring such stars as Kathleen, Williams, Margaret Gibson, Charles Cleary and other leading artistes of these reputable companies. "A Woman Laughs" is a great Selig 2-reel drama; "The Verdict" is an illustrated poem; "His Kid Sister" is a lively Western drama and "The Fable of the Long Range Lover" is one of George Ades' famous fables in slang. This is a dandy programme with good music and singing.

"OURS" IN THE WEST END.

There was a good big house last night at Rossley's West End Theatre as so many were anxious to see the first and second contingent pictures once more, as this will be their only chance to see their friends. The two little singers were delightful in their new novelty song in beautiful costumes and were loudly applauded. The other pictures were all good subjects. Mr. Rossley will attend to the comfort of his patrons. The West End Theatre will close until September to allow the Rossleys a rest after a hard worked season. Mrs. Rossley will get together material for the East End Theatre for the West End show, if you want a good night's enjoyment.

Salvage Notes.

Magistrate Miffen and Constable Tucker were here for three days on their half yearly visit, and his workshop apparently had not many leisure hours, court being held two out of his three days stay, but most of the cases were from the vicinities.

The week past had been a busy one in educational matters, being examination week, and it is hoped those from this centre will obtain a good percentage of marks when the results are published.

Owing to adverse weather not much was done the past week by traps here averaging from 2 to 5 qts., and hook and liners half to two brls.

Miss Macdonald went by Dundee Sailed on a visit to friends and Greenpond, where we trust she will have a pleasant and an enjoyable time during her stay to the old town.—COR.

Saw British Patrol Sink Submarine.

Port Arthur, Ont., June 25.—W. Douglas, of Port Arthur, has received a letter from his mother at Aberdeen, Scotland, in which she describes the sinking of a German submarine by a British patrol ship. She witnessed the landing of the German sailors who were made prisoners. The fight took place near the Bullers of Buchan, a few miles off Peterhead, between a British warship and one of the latest types of German submarines about two weeks ago. Persons on the shore saw the submarine manoeuvring, and a few minutes later a British warship came around the Cape. The warship sighted the submarine and thrilling scenes were witnessed by the fisherfolk. The British boat charged full speed at the submarine, but the latter deftly evaded the first charge. The warship outmanoeuvred the submarine and, placing the latter between the shore and itself, it charged again. The crew of the submarine were on deck, manning a gun, but before they had time to use it the warship ran down upon them and sunk the vessel. Several Germans were lost, but the majority were saved, including the captain, who, however, when being taken aboard the British boat, shot himself. The other members of the crew were landed at Peterhead. The Germans were mobbed by the citizens of Peterhead, who had prepared a head of eggs and potatoes for their reception. The police, however, found a place of safety for the Germans, who were later taken to Edinburgh Castle to be placed in the compound, where they were guarded by members of the famous Black Watch Regiment.

Obituary.

REV. WM. STACEY.

Having reached the allotted span of three-score years and ten, Rev. William Stacey passed away at Clevedon, near Bristol, England. He was a native of St. John's and a man of remarkable ability. He was known to be a great musician. He labored in Canada and England. He represented the Mayor of Bristol at the Guy celebration a few years ago, and delivered a memorable speech during the Cupids functions. He was a devoted man and esteemed by those who knew him.

McMardo's Store News.

TUESDAY, June 29, '15.

We have just opened a stock of Perfumes without Spirit (Colognols, the original make), which have become so popular in St. John's, consisting of two favorite odors, Violette and Lily of the Valley. It is no longer necessary to commend these exquisite extracts—they are easily first in strength and in deliciousness of odor among perfumes, and surpass all others in strength. Dainty little bottles in white cases, $1.25 each.

Ess Viotto—by the same makers—is a new thing. Frankly, we think it the choicest thing of the kind, and a really delightful toilet water. Elegant bottle, $2 each.

SUSPECT ARRESTED.—The police have arrested on suspicion, a young woman, aged 21 years, belonging to Turk's Gut, near Avondale, charged with attempting to wreck a train by placing a piece of track, 10 feet in length, on the rails near Woodford's. She was arraigned before Mr. Hutchings, J.P., to-day, and remanded for 8 days.

FIGURES DO LIE.

Prices are only Relative

REGAL ENGINES are the highest priced engines, yet they are the cheapest.

They are the highest priced engines because they cost more to build.

They are the cheapest engines, because they will last twice as long as any other engine.

They are also the cheapest engines because they save your time, and "Time is money."

If you shut your eyes to this real bargain in engines, you will be the sorriest fisherman who ever signed an order.

You will lose more money than you can afford to lose, and your oil bills will be twice as large.

REGAL ENGINES use less oil, have more power, run with less trouble and give more genuine satisfaction than any other engine on the market.

We are, in the near future, going to ask all cash for REGAL ENGINES, so buy one before we make this change, as we intend to make them the "Hall Mark" engines of Newfoundland.

We ship REGAL ENGINES complete with full book of instructions, and when once installed in your boat, any child can run one.

REGAL ENGINES are higher priced than other engines, but are the cheapest in the long run, because they run the longest.
